Blaze devastates residents, workers

■ More than 100 out-of-work employees are looking at an uncertain future after the March 26 fire.

> By Steven Cook The Daily Iowan

It wasn't just Mondo's Sports Cafe that went up in smoke on March 26, it was a family broken up as well, a Mondo's employee said on March 27.

"Everyone knew each other and liked each other," said Chris Sisco, who worked as a Mondo's shift manager. "That's the sad part - we won't be together. It's not just a restaurant; it's as though someone died."

Sisco, who graduated from the UI in December, returned to his former work place on March 27 with co-worker Bill Sparbie, a cook.

March 26 was Sisco's first day off "in a long time. And the thing is, I didn't want a day off. I loved coming in and seeing everybody."

After a few minutes of viewing the burned-out pile of rubble where he had worked, Sparbie, a UI senior, left saying he couldn't handle the sight anymore.

The early morning blaze destroyed Mondo's, 212 S. Clinton St., and Iowa Haircutting Co., 210 S. Clinton St. Twelve apartments were also destroyed; no one was hurt in the fire.

'My whole life was in that apartment,' resident says

Residents of the Mondo's building struggle to carry on with their lives.

> By Steven Cook The Daily Iowan

Asteady stream of dump trucks this weekend hauled away what remained of a 116-year-old downtown building, two Iowa City businesses and what some UI students had called home. "We lost everything we have," said Alyssa DeFrang, a UI alumna who lived in one of the 12 apartments in the building, while waiting with friends at the Iowa City Fire Station on March 26.

"My whole life was in that apartment." DeFrang and her roommate, UI senior Courtney Vander Hart, escaped the fire but believed it to be a false alarm. All they had left were the clothes they were wearing. Their story is not unique; 19 other residents — many of them UI students - have been left homeless by the blaze at Mondo's Sports Cafe, 212 S. Clinton St. on March 26. Most lost everything, while some grabbed a few important items before exiting the building.

UI sophomore Cat Mullen also lost everything except the clothes she had on. The coat she grabbed on the way out wasn't even hers, she said. Pictures and gifts from her boyfriend were lost in the fire.

Mullen has no renters' insurance. She said she believes that her parents' insurance covers her for just 10 percent of her loss.

"My friends — they've been awe-some," she said. "They've been buying me clothes and seriously taking care of me. Sometimes when they see a look on my face, they come and give me a hug."

The Red Cross estimates it is giving at least $25,000 worth of assistance to provide the fire victims with their immediate needs.

UI sophomore Scott Mathieson and his roommate, UI sophomore Mike Meyer, had lived in their apartment for three months.

Meyer said he plans to stay at a friend's house for the remainder of the semester. Mathieson said he plans to move into his fraternity house, Beta Theta Pi, within two weeks. Both the students' parents came to town this weekend to help them shop for necessities. When the fire started, Mathieson grabbed his laptop computer and a photo album, but Meyer lost everything.

"I was shocked. I didn't understand how much stuff I actually had until I thought about it later," Meyer said. "But, pictures and other stuff are irreplaceable.' Some of the students said they were disappointed with the response from the UI to the fire.

"There was no one there from the university," Mullen said Sunday of her experience after the blaze. "Saturday, the Red Cross gave us books, not the university."

She said that, while many of the residents waited at the fire station on See RESIDENTS, Page 7A

Police I.D. victim, arrest man

Authorities say the two breaks over the weekend may help solve the double killing on South Van Buren Street.

> By Zack Kucharski The Daily Iowan

Iowa City police are confident that two major breaks over the weekend in the South Van Buren Street double homicide investigation will "provide the other half of the puzzle.

On March 26, officers arrested John Lee Memmer at the UI Field House at approximately 4:30 p.m. for a probation violation. Memmer was seen with one of the victims, Laura Watson-Dalton, 29, on March 17, two days before investigators found her body in an apartment at 427 S. Van Buren St. On March 25, police released Memmer's photo to the media in their search for him.

The second development came on March 27, when investigators identified Maria Therese Lehner, 27, of Belton, Mo., as the other victim. Investigators said there are still no known connections between the victims or Memmer.

On Sunday, Lehner's family faced the difficult task of looking for answers. "Everybody is really shocked," said Jeff Sullivan, a cousin of the victim. "She was really liked by everybody. She had a lot of friends. She was fun to be around. This is just very hard to Lehner, who was known as "Bubba" by friends and family, worked as an environmental scientist, Sullivan said.

As part of her job, Lehner often traveled alone by car to Army Reserve bases in Kansas, Missouri and Iowa, he added.

Lehner arrived in Iowa City and checked into a hotel on March 18 for a meeting with the local Army Reserve scheduled for the next day.

She spoke with family members "once or twice a week"; the last time was on March 16, Sullivan said.

"She was always in touch with her mother or sister," he said. "Maria came home whenever she could just to visit with her family." Family and co-workers reported Lehner as missing to Belton authorities on March 24 after she failed to return several phone messages. Using the missing person report, Iowa City police contacted Lehner's family members in Wisconsin on March 26 to confirm her identity.

Racing time, NATO cranks up attacks

■ Thousands of refugees flee "systematic brutality" on the part of the Serbs.

By George Jahn Associated Press

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia - Ordering up more firepower, NATO raced Sunday to smash Serb military units and head off what it called "genocide" against Kosovo Albanians.

Thousands of ethnic Albanian refugees, accusing Serbs of systematic brutality, fled to neighboring Albania and Macedonia. Officials in both countries pleaded for international help to prevent a humanitarian crisis, and Albania called for NATO ground troops to enter Kosovo - something NATO says it has no plans to do.

Violence in Kosovo has escalated sharply since foreign observers left the province and NATO began its air strikes against Yugoslavia, which is dominated by Serbs. NATO spokesman Jamie Shea said in Brussels that the air strikes were no excuse for Serbs to slaughter Kosovo Albanians.

"Genocide is starting," German Defense Minister Rudolf Scharping said in a television interview with ZDF.

For its part, Yugoslavia's governmentcontrolled news media said Sunday that Serb security forces and civilians were under attack by Kosovo Albanians.

Bratislava Morina, Serbia's commissioner for refugees, denied that Serbs were behind the exodus, saying ethnic Albanians were leaving because of the NATO attacks. Ethnic Albanians far outnumber Serbs in Kosovo, which is Yugoslavia's dominant republic.

There is no humanitarian catastrophe in Kosovo whatsoever," she said on state-run Serbian television. Those manipulations with the number of refugees, carried out by foreign agencies and media, are used to intensify (NATO) attacks on Yugoslavia."

NATO promised to broaden attacks on Serb ground forces in Kosovo, despite the downing of a U.S. Stealth fighter-bomber on March 27.

March 27 began the fifth straight night of air strikes, with approximately 50 warplanes taking off from the NATO air base in Aviano, Italy. The Pentagon said the attacking planes included six of the F-117A warplanes.

Downed jet elates Serbs

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — Hundreds of jubilant Serbs made their way to a wheat field Sunday to rummage through the wreckage of a high-tech U.S. fighter jet and celebrate what they saw as a victory over NATO.

"Long live our side," crowed an eldery peasant woman, swinging a brandy bottle as she stood next to the wing section of the F-117A Stealth fighter.

The downed U.S. fighter jet, near the village of Budjanovac, was one of the first events Serbs could interpret as a sign of success against the NATO bombardment, which began on March 24. PAGE 8A

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) - After starting the season by beating three-time defending champion Tennessee, Purdue

It happened because seniors Ukari Figgs and Stephanie White-McCarty, who had gone through so many tough times early in their career, refused to get down after the first half. PAGE 1B

Help Me,

My problem is a very personal one: it is about my anatomy and girls. I am 22 years old, and I have a very large penis. My problem comes when I'm get-

I understand, we all know how that can be. The big problem isn't your big anatomy but the people who have a big

When you find yourself in a committed and intimate relationship where things progress at a very slow and natural pace, something like this isn't such a big obstacle to overcome. We all have things about our bodies that make us a little self-conscious (or a lot), but loving partners don't run

Assuming you don't do adult films, the worst case scenario is that your large anatomy prevents you from having sex with a large number of casual partners. I've never seen it, but I can assure you it's not that big of a problem.

Dear Harlan.

Recently, my boyfriend and I broke up after being together for two years. I didn't really want to break up, especially when he admitted that he still loves me.

The problem is that we have quite a few mutual friends who are getting into this and trying to offer me advice on how to move on and forget about him. After two years, this is easier said than done. I'm having a difficult time getting over him. What should I do?

- Getting past the past

Dear Getting past,

It's nice to have friends who want to offer you advice and not your ex-boyfriend a date. It's a grieving period. Two years is a long time filled with many tender memories. Give yourself a little time to get upset and come to terms with

If your friends want to offer advice, just pretend to listen and say, "Thank you." And if a friend offers you a shoulder to cry on and you want to cry, take it. Be happy to be sad and know that you're moving forward.

■ Through an Iowa City program, people can save on their grocery bills in exchange for community service.

With boxes or laundry baskets, participants of the Self-Help and Resource Exchange line up to get what they've worked for all month

The exchange is a non-profit organization designed to promote volunteering in communities by offering monthly discount food packages to its volunteers.

Ray Hosek, co-director of the organization, said that, although the program is for people from all walks of life, it can especially benefit students.

"For a very little amount of money, they can get two or even three times the amount of food they'd normally get at a grocery store," he said. "It's a bargain."

For $14, or the same amount in food stamps, a person can get a variety of meat, fruits, vegetables and canned goods. The discount is offered in exchange for minimal weekly volunteering.

"It's kind of like a grab bag of what you're going to get," said Bill Randleman, an organizer for the program. "But it's generally food everybody likes."

The value of the food is usually

The program even customizes itself for vegetarians and also designates themes for some months.

"In January, we had a Super Bowl package, and at Thanksgiving and Christmas, we have holiday packages," Hosek said. "But the standard package is always available."

In exchange for the discount, two hours of community work of the volunteer's choice is required each month. The volunteer must get a signature on his or her grocery receipt from the person for whom the work was done.

"We're very easygoing," Randle-man said. "It's not like we're going to call people and check.'

Jayne Anderson, a volunteer at the organization, said the program is a great benefit to her.

"It's less money spent on grocery shopping," she said. "You can get some of the basics here.

UI senior Michael Orthel also said he's able to save some money this way. "It was a good way to cut the grocery bill," he said. "I figured it

English-only law draws critique lish the official language of the

A speaker presenting the pros and cons of lowa's "English only" legislation says the law must be used wisely.

> By Anita Chlipala The Daily Iowan

Iowa's "English Only" legislation is necessary in some circumstances, said John Trasviña of the Office of Immigration-Related Unfair Employment Practices.

But the bill to make English the state's official language - which the Iowa Senate has passed and on which the House Government Committee is deliberating - could also threaten the rights of immigrants and people who speak English as a second language.

"Language is so important to an individual's culture, to his or her religion, to his or her character and to his or her whole community,' Trasviña said. "So we should be very careful about trying to obliterate people's language.'

Trasviña's presentation, titled

"English Only," was part of a series of lectures at the conference "Strengthening and Valuing Latina/o Communities in Iowa," which was held in the Pappajohn Business Administration Building on Judgment must be used wisely for certain situations in which the law can prove to be a benefit, Trasviña said.

Sometimes English-only rules in the workplace are entirely appropriate and useful, but there has to be a business necessity for them," he said.

Trasviña used air-traffic controllers as an example of an appropriate application of the legislation.

"You would want your air traffic controllers to be proficient in English and not speak accented English," he said. "They speak over the air all the time and have to be understood.'

The conference stressed culture as a strength used to improve services to the Latino community.

Many in attendance were against the attempt to make Eng-

Violence erupts after MSU loss

■ Coach Tom Izzo called the disturbance "totally embarrassing."

By Kathy Barks Hoffman Associated Press

EAST LANSING, Mich. - The broken glass was swept up and the burnt cars were all gone Sunday as Michigan State University and East Lansing dealt with the aftermath of a violent disturbance by thousands following the school's basketball game with Duke.

The disturbance after Michigan State's loss in the Final Four left eight cars torched, 24 windows broken in downtown businesses and 24 people arrested — so far. Of the 24 students arrested as of Sunday, 11 were Michigan State students, East Lansing police Capt. Louis Muhn said. Michigan State basketball Coach Tom Izzo had planned to send his team back to East Lansing Sunday. But the team stayed in Florida because its plane had mechanical problems.

Izzo said the rampage that occurred after the Spartans' first appearance in the Final Four in 20 years ruined his night.

"It's totally embarrassing and ridiculous. That upset me more than anything," Izzo said Sunday at the team hotel in Sand Key, off the coast of Clearwater Beach, Fla. The first bottles were thrown at police officers and the first fire reported shortly after 10 p.m. on March 27, before the game even ended. "These students would have rioted if our debate team made it to the Final Four," said Terry Denbow, Michigan State vice president of university relations.

Approximately 230 police officers, including mounted patrols, were on the scene on March 27 and into early Sunday morning. Some 300 canisters of tear gas were used to dispel groups of students that threatened police or firefighters.

NATION BRIEF

2 van crash survivors show improvement; 3 others still serious

WISCONSIN (AP) - The conditions of two survivors hurt in a van crash that killed seven people improved over the weekend, while three others injured in the accident remained in critical or serious condition.

The 14 young people in the van that rolled over March 25 on Interstate 90 in Janesville were part of a group traveling Wisconsin, selling magazine subscriptions door-todoor. They were returning to their hotel in Janesville when the accident happened.

Monica Forgues, 15, of Madison, Wis., had her condition changed Sunday from critical to serious, said Janet Truitt, a nursing supervisor at Saint Anthony Medical Center

Another woman, Staci Beck, 22, of Ft. Collins, Colo., was upgraded to fair condition, said Lisa Green, a nursing supervisor at Mercy Hospital in Janesville.

Sean Kelly, 20, whose hometown wasn't immediately available, and Nicole McDougal, 16, of Fitchburg, remained in critical condition Sunday, while Craig Fechter, of Belvue, Kan., was in serious condition.

Meanwhile, the driver, Jeremy Holmes, of Clinton, lowa, was being held Sunday in the Rock County jail on $47,500 bail. He faces seven counts of negligent vehicular homicide and five counts of causing great bodily harm. A court hearing was scheduled for Wednesday.

100 years relayed in 12 hours

ABC's "The Century" is a 12-hour documentary that tells stories about the past.

> By Lynn Elber Associated Press

LOS ANGELES - It sounds like a pink-elephant trick, but the creators of ABC's "The Century" want us to banish any thoughts of a history lesson in approaching their 12hour documentary.

History can be perceived as musty, dull, personally unrewarding (as in "What's in it for me?"). "Something that you really don't want to spend TELEVISION much time "The Century" studying unless you're When: Beginning in the eighth today at 8 p.m. grade and Where: On ABC you've got an exam coming up," is how Tom Yellin, executive producer of "The Century," defines

So the program takes an approach guided by storytelling, not chronology, said Yellin. "The Century," narrated and reported by ABC anchorman Peter Jennings, airs in six two-hour blocks beginning at 8 p.m. CST today and continuing Thursday and Saturday, and on April 5, 8 and 10.

"The past is rich with stories that are, in and of themselves, fascinating," Yellin said. "We have this ridiculous fantasy that if people can just sample these stories,

Unless you're 3 years old, you've lived in this century, and there are things that we are reporting on that are your life, one way or another.

- Tom Yellin, executive producer of "The Century" they'll stay with them. We viewed them as drama and journalism. "History is not a word we spend a lot of time using." Despite its title, "The Century" is not all-encompassing. The key was a decision to avoid a laundry list of every 20th-century milestone, Yellin said. "The key thing in our approach is we're telling 12 specific stories, 12 of the most interesting and, we feel, more important stories of the century — but certainly not THE 12."

The series opens today with "Heaven and Earth," which devotes its first hour to Charles Lindbergh's stirring trans-Atlantic flight and the second hour to the space program that culminated with Neil Armstrong's moon walk. Subsequent episodes, each airing

8-10 p.m. CST, are:

· "Ultimate Power" Thursday. The rise of Adolf Hitler is charted from 1924 to 1934, when he went from a prisoner jailed for treason to German ruler. The second hour examines, against the backdrop of war, the race to develop the atom

• "No Man's Land" Saturday. Bloody, brutal World War I, when the allies fought to make the world "safe for democracy," is examined in the first hour. Then comes the Vietnam War, and a look at the limits of American power.

 "Memphis Dreams" on April 5. The tale of Elvis Presley, the symbol of the new, transforming power of music, youth and technology, is followed by a far different Memphis story: the final days of Martin Luther King and the civil rights struggle that led to his death.

 "Coming Apart" on April 8. President Franklin D. Roosevelt restructures the basic workings of America as the Depression threatens the survival of capitalism and democracy. The Cold War and Hollywood's propaganda power star in part two.

 "The Evolution of Revolution" on April 10. A distant revolution engulfs America in this retelling of the Iran hostage crisis. The series concludes with perspectives from leading thinkers on the 20th century and the future.

Yellin, who was assigned to the ABC documentary last summer, believes it is a project that matters.

"Unless you're 3 years old, you've lived in this century, and there are things that we are reporting on that are your life, one way or another," he said.

NEW YORK (AP) - Rapper ODB was back in jail March 26.

Days after being released from jail on drug charges, the Wu-Tang Clan rapper, whose real name is Russell Jones, was arrested and accused of driving with a suspended license.

Detective Joseph Pentangelo said police stopped Jones for driving a car without a license plate along Harlem's 125th Street about 7:30 p.m.

When they checked his driver's license number, police discovered the license had been suspended — for the sixth time — and that Jones was wanted on an outstanding warrant for failing to pay child support.

His lawyer, Peter Frankel, said Jones will plead not guilty.

Jones, 30, has a growing rap sheet. On March 24 he pleaded not guilty in Los Angeles to a charge that he violated a new California law banning violent felons from wearing body armor. He was convicted of second-degree assault in New York in 1993.

He also faces trial in two other Los Angeles cases — one for allegedly threatening to kill the mother of his 1-year-old child, and another for allegedly making death threats to guards at a nightclub.

He also has been accused of shoplifting in

U.S. foreign policy lacks focus

Kosovo has been under siege the past few days. Approximately 15,000 ethnic Albanians are being forced to march to Serbian military sites to serve as a "human shield" against NATO bombings. Now that peace talks have failed, NATO can easily justify the necessity of its military offensive, and more troops are being deployed to the area.

Struggles such as those in Rwanda, Chechnya, Bosnia and Kosovo have been categorized and stereotyped as post-Cold War "ethnic conflicts." However, by defining ethnicity-based violence in these ways, we ignore how racism and other forms of hatred are as present in times of peace as in times of war. The way this terminology is used also separates the events of Kosovo from those of the Holocaust and the recent hate crimes in America — when in fact they are all related.

Ethnic conflicts are unusual in that they are as often played out with propaganda and policy as they are with weapons. Yet, we deal with issues of hatred and nationalism by using old Star Wars tactics - last-minute weapons and troops - rather than by using our political power over the long term to push governments and ethnic groups to end human-rights abuses and find non-violent

For example, it may be true that, at this point in time, NATO has no other effective course of action in Kosovo than military involvement. But the entire international community surely had many other options 10 years ago, when the rights of ethnic Albanians were first being violated. Why should the negotiations of the past month be able to succeed when hatred has been tolerated, justified and allowed to ferment within the local culture for 10 years?

Our solutions to ethnic conflict have been about saving oil resources and making ourselves look like heroes. But heroes not only end conflict, they prevent it in the long run. Yet, without creating a solid post-Cold War foreign policy with defined priorities and a systemic approach to dealing with "ethnic conflict" over the long term, we will end up right back where we started.

When peace arrives in Kosovo, our heads will go back into the sand.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

UISG official upset at DI for funding coverage

To the Editor:

Over the years, many Daily Iowan writers have come and gone. Even with the turnover experienced in the DI offices, the editors of the paper have obtained at least one constant — a disregard for accurately portraying the UI Student Government and its programs.

On several occasions this year alone, DI reporters have come to the UISG offices in search of material on the budgeting-and-allocation process. On at least three occasions, Byron Racki, the financial officer, has spent considerable time detailing this process. Yet, the resulting DI reports would suggest that no interview had ever occurred. Instead of providing useful information on a funding process that affects every UI student, those reporters have squandere these opportunities.

The most recent such examples are evidenced by a Viewpoints column by Lance Hamby and a news article by John G. Russell. The writers followed up interviews with Racki by respectively providing self-serving and grossly inaccurate depictions of the UI budgeting process.

Following a discussion with Racki about the details of the funding process - what the Student Assembly Budgeting and Auditing Committee does, what the budgeting guidelines are and how they are devised, how much money the auditing committee allocates and to whom - Hamby selected five relatively obscure general student organizations (of which there are 375 and counting) to question their value. Hamby could have written about the funding process. He did not.

Russell, too, spoke at considerable length with Racki about the funding process. Yet his article reads more like a conversation with the A. Craig Baird Debate Club than anything reflecting the content of the discussion he had with Racki. For the second time in as many semesters, the debate club has cajoled a DI reporter into implying that the funding process does not work well because the debate club does not receive every penny it requests.

In his lengthy discussion with Racki, Russell was informed that the auditing committee operates under standards that are clearly spelled out and distributed to each campus organization every year. He might also have inferred that the UISG members are, at a minimum, very similar in age to those on the debate club, with the additional input of graduate students and administrators.

Russell chose to devote nearly half of his article to the laments of an organization that consistently demonstrates that its singular concern is receiving its requested funding. Russell wrote an article in which he accepted the claims of a single group as the basis for his article. I suspect that reporters who are interested in accurate reporting follow a process more akin to verifying

If Hamby and Russell are interested in writing balanced columns and articles, respectively, with accurate information that would undoubtedly serve the interests of the students, they clearly understand from past experience that the UISG offices are open. What they need to do is figure out how to connect the information they receive with the need of students to hear what is important rather than what is inaccurate or trivial. As the primary source of students' information on campus events, the DI owes UI students this minimum courtesy.

> Geoff Larson UISG public relations executive

See Dave run — for president EVERAL months ago, I asked the question: Who should be our next president?

Should we elect yet another member of what future historians, looking back on late 20th-century American political leadership, will refer to as "The Long String of Bozos"? Or should we have the courage and wisdom to boldly change course and place the future of our great nation - and, yes, the world into the capable, experienced hands of a professional humor columnist?

Imagine how shocked and surprised I was when many of you wrote to me, sometimes in crayon, and said: "Our next president should be YOU, Dave! You have the vision! You have the leadership! You have the large quantity of bumper stickers left over from your historic 1996 campaign (official slogan 'It's Time We Demanded Less')!"

Many of you even went so far as to send in contributions. Granted, a lot of these were in the form of expired pizza coupons, but some of them were actual U.S. currency, or realistic photocopies thereof. I asked my staff, Judi Smith, for a report on my current campaign treasury, which, in accordance with federal election laws, is kept in a box that originally contained a Nerf Ping-Pong set. I'm proud to report that we currently have either $78.32 or $98.32, depending on the legal status of a $20 bill that, in the words of my staff, "looks real, but who knows.

You can call me a modest yet courageous man of the people if you want, but when I think of ordinary citizens taking the time to send in their hard-earned money for my campaign, my reaction, in all humility and gratitude, is: "That is nowhere NEAR enough." Because to run the kind of quality campaign that I would want - the kind that features large rental jets I'm going to need at least $40

How will I get that kind of money? I'll tell you how I WON'T get it: I won't go to the "fat cat" special-interest lobbyists who give you a donation and then expect you to give them a quid pro quo when you get into the Oval Office. Why do I say this? Because I have no idea what "quid pro quo" means. It sounds like a sex act. And I believe the president of this great nation has NO BUSI-NESS doing that kind of thing with lobbyists. That's why we have interns!

No, seriously, I believe it's a disgrace for the president to have sex with ANYBODY in the Oval Office. If somebody suggests it, the president should have the integrity to answer: "Not here! This is a sacred shrine of the republic! Let's go out on the lawn!

But getting back to my point: You may rest assured that I am NOT going to raise money by selling my soul to the special interests. Instead, I'm going to raise money by selling nuclear secrets to China. Apparently the Chinese pay top dollar for information, and I happen to have come into possession — please do not ask how - of a high-tech computer item called the "Microsoft Bookshelf 95 CD-ROM" containing billions of tiny things of information, including many explicit facts about nuclear energy.

Here's a sample: "Nuclear fission was discovered in 1938 by Otto Hahn and Fritz Strassman, and was explained in 1939 by Lise Meitner and Otto Frisch." So apparently, one of the keys to nuclear energy is that at least one person involved has to be named "Otto." This may explain why the Chinese are having so much trouble with it.

I have a LOT more nuclear information where that came from, and if you highlevel Chinese leaders out there are interested in obtaining it, please have your agents get in touch with me and identify themselves via the following code phrase: "Dave, here's a suitcase full of money. Let me stress that I have not yet decided whether I'm willing to be president. But I have, in the tradition of American politics, appointed an Exploratory Committee to explore this question. The committee consists of these distinguished Americans: Heloise, who writes "Hints from Heloise" and with whom I have exchanged several nice letters; Robert Goulet, who for some reason, probably mistaken identity, sends me a Christmas card every year; the Delaware Destroyers, who also send me a Christmas card and are the backup band for George Thorogood, who sings "Bad to the Bone"; Adam Duritz, who is the lead singer for Counting Crows and with whom I have no connection except that my staffer, a total slut, is hoping she gets to talk to him; and Stanley Krugman, who is my dentist and has for many years advised me on issues relating to my gums. I have sent these people a letter asking for their honest opinions as to whether I should seek the presidency. When I get their responses, I will carefully weigh each response individually, except the Delaware Destroyers, whom I will weigh as a group. Then, after throwing away the responses I disagree with, I will announce my decision to you, the American people. Let us all hope that I do the right thing. But let us not hold

Hoping racism isn't to blame for inaction in Rwanda

ELL, we finally did it. After months and months of fruitless, back-and-forth negotiations and spluttering threats, we (or maybe more specifically, NATO) are bombing the ever-loving shit out of Yugoslavia.

It was a long time coming, of course. It's not like we'd just up and decimate a small nation because of banana tariffs or something. That's Great Britain's job.

No, there are forces afoot in the Kopaoniks lately that have gotten all of us enlightened, Western allies in a righteous swivet. Namely, a fellah named Slobodan (!) has taken it upon himself to not only put the smack down on an uppity bunch of eth-nic-Albanian rebels, he's decided to go one better and wipe out the mothers, the children, the grandfathers and probably the house pets of those rebels, too.

Mass graves and the smoking remains of peaceful, pastoral villages really don't fly too well this side of the pond, so - naturalwe're sending squadrons of warplanes to rain death from above on Slobodan (!)

and his swarthy Kopaonikian cronies.

But you know, though as a proud American citizen - and citizen of the world! - I can hardly conscience the "ethnic cleansing" going on in the Balkans, something's been nagging at me regarding the whole thing. Something involving a mid-sized nation in central Africa and a couple hundred thousand dead bodies dumped in pits, floating down rivers and piled three deep in remote chapels in the jungle. Unchecked Rwandan Genocide, your table is now ready.

For a couple years now, our government and the governments of every other Western European nation have known about the bloody civil war going on between the Hutus and the Tutsis in Rwanda and about the atrocities committed on both sides of the conflict. Bill Clinton and Tony Blair and all their high-rollin' buddies knew when the bullets ran out in Rwanda, that the Hutus started butchering the Tutsis with machetes and hatchets. They all knew about the radio broadcasts urging the Hutus to hunt down every remaining Tutsi in the country and kill them - and their children - to prevent the proliferation of vermin.

The rivers in Rwanda have literally run red with the blood of innocent (and to be fair, some not-so-innocent) people for months upon months, and yet the United States and the United Nations could not even be moved to comment on the slaughter until just recently. No aid, no U.N. peacekeeping mission, no intervention - and the dull crunch of blade through limb continued, far into the hot jungle night.

So. I sure as hell hope that all the good men and women who are so sure that bombing Yugoslavia into oblivion is a good idea have an equally good explanation why nobody raised a finger to stop the genocide in Rwanda. I mean, I'm a privileged, white college-chick living fairly large here in Mid-America, and I just KNOW my fellow privileged, white folks wouldn't turn a blind eye to wholesale murder and mass dismemberment just because the people getting killed and cut apart are poor and black. Surely not. That would be obscene.

But hey - this is America. We're nothing if not obscene. Sometimes it serves us in good stead - it makes us fun at parties and amuses the French. But if the United States is going to step forward, full of bluster and bravado and let itself be named Defender of Justice and All That is Good and Holy, then it had better be ready and willing to do just that .

Evil has many faces and takes many forms. A mass grave is a mass grave, whether it's dug in the Balkans or in the jungle. We can't pick and choose whom we defend just because they may or may not bear passing resemblance to ourselves or have some useful means of compensating us for our trouble. It's not exactly legitimate to ignore places such as Rwanda just because the average good, ol' boy can't find

In a sense, I understand the action being taken in Yugoslavia. It's practically Europe's backyard and is thus something of an immediate threat to many people. Slobodan (!) looks to be a confirmed asshole who's got it in for the Albanians and won't quit 'til they're all dead or fled. I get it.

You won't see me outside the Capitol with a placard and bullhorn, chanting about love and understanding. You will however hear me muttering about the bullshit politics that have no problem with turning Pristina, Yugoslavia, into a hellish inferno in the name of justice but can't be bothered to send some expensive warplanes and welltrained farm boys into the heart of Africa to stop ax-wielding psycho thugs from killing

But I dunno. Maybe it's just me.

Public Safety responded to the call and found Memmer in a Field House locker room, Parrott said.

When they approached him and asked for identification, Memmer said he was the one police were looking for and allowed the officers to check his gym bag, authorities said. No weapons were found, officers said.

The officers then took Memmer outside, where he was arrested by Iowa City police.

Police are not releasing any information about what involvement — if any — Memmer has in the investigation of the slayings.

Memmer, who is being represented by public defender ball with him on the Sunday before Edward Leff, made an initial appearance in court on March 27. Leff declined to comment on the appearance.

Johnson County District Judge Stephen Gerard ordered Memmer to be held on $1 million bond. He had been arrested on a warrant charging that he had not fulfilled proabtion requirements and had not paid fines. The charges involve a third-degree burglary in Marshalltown in 1997 and are not related to the homicide investigation, authorities said.

Because Memmer does not have a permanent address, officials said, they believe that he may try to flee the area if released.

Memmer will appear in court again this morning for a probation-revocation hearing.

Jim Mondanaro, who owns Mondo's, Givannis and the Bread Garden, said Sunday he expects Givannis to reopen in three to five months, after renovations of the kitchen. The Bread Garden is expected to reopen in one to two months, Mondanaro said.

"Mondo's is a total loss," said Mike Brannin, general manager of the three businesses. "We're very shocked. Out of five restaurants we have in the area, three are down ... It's tough."

Brannin estimated that 100 employees worked at the estab-The Fieldhouse Restaurant & Bar, blaze originated in the basement of the structure. Authorities do not know exactly when the blaze began. "We're watching every scoop, making sure not to destroy evidence," Jensen said. Firefighters are looking for signs of how the fire started, including examining heat-generating appliances and burn patterns on walls and floors. Jensen said he has no reason to believe the fire was intentional.

Marc Moen, one of the building's owners, said the basement was used for storage and for the building's boiler. He said he had no idea what could have sparked the blaze. Sisco said the last employees left Mondo's at about 2 a.m. on March 26. Moen, who also owns the adjacent MidAmerica Securities building, said losses from the Mondo's building would reach well over $1 million.

Firefighters were able to stop the blaze at a concrete and brick firewall between the Iowa Haircutting Co. and the MidAmerica building.

Offices along the firewall sustained smoke and water damage, Moen said; the basement of the building had three feet of standing water. Workers were busy over the weekend, cleaning smoke and water damage in the building, he said.

Mondanaro said if he can find a suitable downtown spot, Mondo's should be up and running in a new location by September. But if he has to wait for the building to be rebuilt, it could take a year; he should make a decision on what will be done by the end of the week, he said.

Moen said he hopes to rebuild the 15,000 square-foot building within six months.

He was at the scene on March 27, speaking with investigators about his insurance claim.

"I'm just very glad no one was injured," he said while watching clean-up crews dig out the structure's remains. "It's a shame to lose the building, but the fact that no one was injured is the most important part." As the backhoes worked over the weekend, much of the debris they were removing was unrecognizable. But among the charred wood and twisted metal, one could occasionally see something identifiable a mattress spring, an ironing board, a shirt.

On the north wall of what had been the Iowa Haircutting Co., shampoo bottles, mirrors and a display board holding the store's pricing information were visible.

Store stylist Serenity Bailey returned on March 27 to retrieve the display board, which escaped the fire with only some dirt on its front.

"This is all that's left," she said, motioning to the plaque in her hand. "I worked there six months; that's not long, but I'm going to miss it."

The eight employees of Iowa Haircutting Co. have been relocated to two other stores in the area, the store's owner, Lloyd Murphy, said. Over the weekend, every level of the Old Capitol Mall parking ramp was lined with people wanting a better look at the site of the fire. Ashes spotted the city, landing as far away as the English-Philosophy Building.

Sightseers — many with cameras - filed down Clinton Street over the weekend, recounting stories of the haircut they had received at the Iowa Haircutting Co. or the dinners they had eaten at Mondo's.

"Fi-del! Fi-del!" the 50,000 fans chanted at Estadio Latinoamericano at the sight of their president. "Cu-ba! Cu-ba!"

The Orioles gathered around the 73-year-old leader to shake hands, curious to see how he looked up close in his combat fatigues. Manager Ray Miller talked to Castro through an interpreter.

In some states, half the people leaving the welfare rolls do so because of the strict new rules.

> By Laura Meckler Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Tens of thousands of Americans have lost welfare benefits, not because they are working and escaping poverty, but because they have broken tough new rules.

From state to state, the power to punish is being wielded quite differently. A 50-state Associated Press survey found that in some states it rarely is used, but in others, it accounts for half the people who are leaving welfare.

"It was never like that before," said Sharon Pedersen of Denison, Iowa, who was dropped from welfare last month.

Meanwhile, the time limits expected to end government aid for millions of poor people have had little effect in the 13 states in which the clock has run out.

Time limits and penalties, together with work requirements, were the pillars of the 1996 welfare overhaul. Under the old system, Americans got help as long as they were poor enough, and states were

Since 1994, the number of Americans on welfare has dropped 44 percent, due partly to the strong economy but also to states' aggressive punishments.

In Kentucky, 58 percent of the people who leave welfare are pushed off because they do not follow rules. In California and Illinois, nearly half those leaving welfare are being punished; that comes to tens of thousands each

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia -Hundreds of jubilant Serbs made their way to a wheat field Sunday to rummage through the wreckage of a high-tech U.S. fighter jet and celebrate what they saw as a victory over NATO.

"Long live our side," crowed a kerchiefed, elderly peasant woman, swinging a brandy bottle as she stood next to the wing section of the F-117A Stealth fighter.

SAN JOSE, Calif. — Purdue started the season with an eye-opening victory and ended it with its biggest one Purdue, which beat defending three-time national champion Tennessee in its season opener, finished by winning its first title Sunday night with a 62-45 victory over Duke.

The championship game wasn't always pretty and it even got a little scary when All-American Stephanie White-McCarty left writhing in pain with a sprained ankle and the game still hanging in balance.

But the top-ranked Boilermakers (34-1), bouncing back from the worst half ever in an NCAA championship game, didn't buckle and finished with 32 straight victories.

"I cannot think of a better moment in my life than right now," Purdue coach Carolyn Peck said. "When the buzzer sounded, I immediately thought of those two seniors when they were in my office right after I was named head coach and them saying to me, 'Coach, we can do this.'

Purdue became a champion because those two seniors, Ukari Figgs and White-McCarty, who had gone through so many tough times early in their career, refused to get down after the team's terrible opening half.

They were the driving force in a 12-1 second half run that pulled the Boilermakers from behind and put them ahead to stay.

Figgs, scoreless in an 0-for-7 first half, had six points in the run and finished with 18 to earn the award as the outstanding player in the Final Four. White-McCarty had one basket and helped keep the team together with her poise before leaving with her

"I know I let my team down in the first half," Figgs said. "I wasn't aggressive enough driving to the basket. I settled for too many outside shots and they weren't falling for me. I had 20 minutes to be a winner or a loser, and

A collective gasp came from the crowd at the start of the Big Ten Men's Gymnastics Championships Friday night at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

Iowa junior Todd Strada won the allaround competition and was named the conference's gymnast of the year.

"We had the highest score of the year, but it was not our best meet," Strada said.

"There were a few screw-ups and the loss of we only have three great guys on that event. Shane was in the back of our minds throughout the meet."

Strada was referring to an important incident that took place during the first rotation when freshman standout Shane deFreitas was finished with his vault.

After completing his vault, deFreitas fell to the ground and grabbed his ankle. After being helped off the floor by trainers, Iowa saw its prospects for a national title flash before its eyes as deFreitas left the arena sporting a pair of new crutches.

"He sprained his ankle pretty bad and it blew up like a balloon afterwards," Iowa head coach Tom Dunn said. "His injury hurt us the most on rings, because realistically,

We will need him back for nationals.'

For Michigan head coach Kurt Golder, the win was bittersweet. After serving as assistant coach to Dunn for four years, Golder was stunned to win his first Big Ten championship on his old stomping grounds.

Saturday night, Golder was named Big Ten Coach of the Year. "I don't know if words can describe this win. It does not even feel like the competition is over yet, because we were so tense played," Iowa coach Gayle Blevins said. "It's disappointing to come home and play .500 ball, and it's obvious that we have some things to work on." In the championship game, the Huskies came on strong early and kept the pressure on throughout the game.

The Huskies jumped all over starting pitcher Kristi Hanks, who gave up three runs on three base hits in the first inning. Hanks was replaced by junior Kelly Zeilstra, who finished out the game

"They jumped on us early, and we had to play from behind," Blevins said. "That puts you in a different kind of ballgame from the beginning. They just controlled the momentum against us."

The Huskies tacked on three runs by the fifth, giving them a 6-0 lead over Iowa. In the bottom of the fifth, the Hawkeyes used two hits and a two-run single by Lisa Rasche to mount a rally, but it wasn't enough.

In the first game of the tournament, the Hawkeyes wasted a great performance by Zeilstra by committing four errors in the first four innings, allowing the Huskies to build a 3-0 lead.

Iowa battled back to tie the game at three, but Northern Illinois won the game in the ninth with an RBI single from Jill Carpenter.

Despite taking the loss, Zeilstra notched a season-high 11 strikeouts and gave up only one earned "You can't ask more of (Zeilstra)," Blevins said. "I think there were only two well-hit balls, and everything else was balls we should have made plays on. If we would have played any type of an early game, we'd have won.'

In the next game, against Wisconsin-Green Bay, Hanks also turned in a solid performance, but this time the Hawkeyes delivered a 5-1 win over the Phoenix.

Hanks fanned 11 batters, including seven straight at one point.

"I just had the momentum, so I kept going," Hanks said. "I didn't want to even pause between pitches and I tried not to think. Thinking too much messes me up."

In Iowa's other contest of the tournament, senior Tammy Utley moved into third place on the alltime home run list at Iowa (13) and led the Hawkeyes to a 4-2 win. DI sportswriter Tony Wirt can be reached at n't been enough in the '90s," Calhoun said.

Ever since the brackets were announced two weeks ago, Connecticut has been looking ahead to the game most people saw as the tournament's best all along.

"We've played this game in our minds and now we get to a chance to do it," Huskies center Jake Voskuhl said.

Duke comes in off a 68-62 victory over second-ranked Michigan State in the semifinals, a tough game in which the Blue Devils scored their fewest points this sea-

"We came out of that game in good health and it certainly was a very physical game," said Krzyzewski, who decided not to have the team practice Sunday. Instead, the team just went over some scouting material. Win or lose, the Blue Devils will end their season on the same floor they did last year.

They lost to eventual national champion Kentucky in the South Regional final at Tropicana Field after leading by 17 points in the Duke's Trajan Langdon said that loss has provided some motivation, but he added that not a whole is needed. "In UConn being the only other team ranked number one in the nation and a lot of people saying that's the best team, it's a great way to finish the year," he said.

Duke, which leads the nation in scoring at 92.3 per game, is also No. 1 in margin of victory (25.4), just off its NCAA tournament aver-"Duke's not a difficult team to prepare for," Calhoun said, "they're a difficult team to play." The fact that Duke is the heavy favorite doesn't seem to matter to Connecticut, which beat Ohio State 64-58 in the semifinals.

"At 33-2, we've been a pretty good team ourselves. We have been brilliant at times. We have been pragmatic at times. We have survived at times," Calhoun said.

"Very few teams have been afforded the opportunity to have the kind of season Duke has had," he said. "Be that as it may, the game comes down to 40 minutes Monday night, not what some folks think it should be, would be, could be. It comes down to two teams that won 70 basketball games this approve of his player's reaction to those calls. After the default was announced, Kigongo threw his racket and shirt across an adjacent court and stormed out of the building.

Disputed calls, bodies skidding across the court to prevent an opponent's point and teammates mobbing each other after a singles match victory showed the intensity in the Iowa men's tennis team's match Sunday.

The default put Iowa ahead, 5-1. The Hawkeyes started the day by winning the doubles point, and senior Ulf Jentler and sophomore Jason Dunn beat the No. 16 doubles team in the nation, 8-6.

Iowa secured the match in the No. 3 singles position with Jentler coming away with a 3-6, 6-2, 6-4 victory over Ivica Primorac.

"Even though I lost the first set, I was confident," Jentler said. "It was a good win because we didn't know how the other (singles) matches would come out."

Iowa won four of six singles matches against the Spartans. Against the Wolverines, the exact opposite was true. The Hawkeyes lost four of six singles matches.

Iowa freshman Petar Mandic said the team had a chance to regroup after its loss to Michigan.

Michigan was our first Big Ten match and we were kind of nervous. There was a lot of pressure," Mandic said. "Sunday was much better. A lot of guys were more focused. We learned a lot from yesterday."

Although the scores do not show it, Houghton said Michigan State was the stronger of the two teams this weekend.

"The results were opposite," Houghton said, "But I am not at all disappointed with a split with our injury situation."

Redshirt freshman Tom Buetikofer reinjured his back Friday and had to sit out the weekend's matches. The Hawkeyes moved up one position to fill in, and senior Ben Bamsey played No. 6 singles against Michigan, losing 6-2, 6-2.

Girts Auskaps returned to the singles lineup against Michigan State in the No. 6 position and came away with a 6-4, 7-6 victory. Auskaps had sat out all of the spring season due to a lowerback injury, and it was his first singles match since the fall.

The No. 38 Iowa women's tennis am failed to live up to its expectations this weekend, starting its oad trip with a 5-2 loss against higan on Saturday.

The Hawkeyes defeated Michi-State, 5-2, on Sunday to linish theweekend 1-1. Iowa now holds a 9-5 record on the season and a 2-2 Big Ten record.

The problem with Michigan was that we expected it to be easy after receiving our new ranking," coach Paul Wardlaw said. "We didn't respond to the pressure. We never have had to face being the favorite and the pressure that is associated with it. It was one of the first times about the one-meter that I kind of lost focus," Chrisander said. "I missed a dive on the threemeter, but I was so happy about making All-American that I wasn't very disappointed."

Iowa alum Randy Ableman ('83) became the first coach to lead 30 All-Americans when Miami (Fla.) senior Rio Ramirez won the one-meter title. Ableman has now coached eight straight NCAA champions in nine seasons with Miami, 11 overall.

In the three-meter competition, Chrisander finished 21st with 482.30 points, nearly thirty points higher than his ninth-place finish at the Big Ten Championships on Feb. 26. Last season, Chrisander finished 25th at the NCAAs in the three-meter.

Even though Ableman's divers edged Chrisander at the NCAAs this season, Chrisander had the last laugh in Iowa City. Earlier this year at the Iowa Invitational, Ableman's pool record of 605.40 for 11 dives on the three-meter board became one of two pool records to be broken by Chrisander. He also broke Tete Gil's 1996 pool record on the one-meter board. DI sportswriter Todd Hefferman can be Junior M.C. Mullen took the individual title as lowa finished second at Myrtle Beach.

M.C. Mullen won her first collegiate golf tournament Sunday at the 36-hole Taylor Made Myrtle Beach Classic, helping the Iowa women's golf team to its best finish so far this spring.

The Hawkeyes placed second with a team score of 630, seven strokes behind tourna-Mullen's all-time 18-hole low is 71. Northwestern's Karen England and Minnesota's Kristi Weichert finished in a tie for second with a score of 154.

Behind the Golden Gophers and the Hawkeyes in third was Northwestern, followed by College of Charleston and UNC-Wilmington rounded out the top five out of the 10-team event.

Mullen wasn't the only Iowa player to shoot well last weekend. Junior Kelli Carney shot a 158, good for a share of 10th. Sophomores Spero and Katherine Mowat also did well, shooting 161 and 168, respectively.

Men's opener disappointing

HAVANA - The ball snapped into Will Clark's glove for the final out and the pumped-up Cuban crowd knew exactly what it meant. Juego completado. Game over.

Cuba's president and No. 1 baseball fan, Fidel

Time to shake hands.

The Cuban all-star team didn't beat the Orioles on Sunday, but they sure came close - losing 3-2 in 11 innings but proving again they have some of the best players in the world.

Harold Baines, only 6 days old when major league teams last played in Cuba in 1959, singled in the tiebreaking run in the 11th inning after Baltimore wasted a 2-0 lead.

Three holes earlier, he learned his father Bob had won a Senior Tour event and they had a chance to become the first father-son combination to win tour-sanctioned events on the same day. A victory would finally make Duval No. 1 in the world ranking, even sweeter coming at the tournament he grew up watching but never dreamed he would win.

1 ranking by finishing sixth, made a bogey on the last hole for a 75 to finish at 3-over 291, tied for 10th. He had been No. 1 for 65 weeks, including the last 41 in a row.

'To win a big one like this, he deserves to be No. 1 in the world," Duval becomes just the third player to ascend to No. 1 without having won a major. Ian Woosnam and Fred Couples was No. 1 right before each won the Masters.

"Why don't you give him the green jacket," a fan cried out during the trophy presentation on the 18th green.

Duval has never cared for the world ranking, and that didn't change with his name on the top of the list. "It's nice to be ranked No. 1, but it's not a concern of mine," he said. Duval's 10th victory in his last 33 tournaments did not come easily, nor was it expected. The Stadium Course was set up like a major, with the nasty rough of a U.S. Open and supersonic greens like Augusta National, even though they put additional water on them overnight.

"I have been watching this tournament for 15 years," Duval said. "I don't know if I ever thought I was going to win here. I thought it was going to be a very, very difficult thing to do. He was tied for the lead at 2-under and in a fairway bunker, blocked by a tree and 101 yards from the green on the par-5 ninth.

He could play safe and sideways, or go at the green.

'I just said, 'It's time to play golf," Duval said. The shot barely cleared an opening in the trees and found another greenside bunker. Duval calmly stepped up and holed the shot to take the lead for good.

Three holes later, he knocked in a 15-foot putt from off the green to get to 4-under. When Scott Hoch failed to save par up ahead on the 13th, Duval had a three-stroke lead.

Years of hard work pay off for UConn's Calhoun

■ The UConn head coach will appear in the NCAA title game after years of frustration.

By Ken Berger Associated Press

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. - Thirteen years ago, a man named Jim Calhoun showed up at Connecticut and promised to build a national college basketball power.

His New England accent was thick, his speech confident, his smile engaging. His love of coaching, set aflame by the compassion his high school coach showed at the bedside of Calhoun's dying father, burns brighter than ever.

Calhoun, whose name symbolizes UConn's rise to elite status — in the company of North Carolina, Kentucky, Kansas and, yes, Duke - is one step away from his ultimate goal. The dream is still alive. The 56year-old Calhoun goes for his first national championship tonight when the Huskies play Duke.

'My obligation was to come to Connecticut in 1986 and do the best I possibly could," said Calhoun, who coached Northeastern for 14 years before taking over the Huskies. "We think we've done almost the best we possibly can. The best would be winning the national championship.'

When Calhoun arrived, UConn's basketball program was entirely a regional phenomenon. The Huskies were happy to beat Holy Cross or Lehigh.

Many of his current players were in junior high when UConn had its breakthrough season in 1989-90, going 31-6 and making the NCAA tournament for the first time since 1979. Back then, the Huskies weren't mentioned in the same breath with the giants of the sport. "When I was first coming in, it was UNLV, Duke and those guys, Jake Voskuhl said. "I guess UNLV hasn't carried over as much with Jerry Tarkanian leaving and all the stuff happening there. You still have your teams, Duke and North Carolina. Those have been the teams that, year in and year out, have always done well. And Kansas.

And UConn. For Calhoun's Huskies, nothing less than a national title will do. He is a victim of his own success, a man expected to erase all the terrible memories of NCAA tournament

"We've had terrific kids who've played for us," said Calhoun, fond of recalling players like Ray Allen and Donyell Marshall, who toiled without the reward of a Final Four.

"Not one of those kids ever let me down, frustrated me. They brought me a great deal of happiness, and our program, our state and university a great deal of success. We were criticized for mere excellence.'

Calhoun built some great teams in the '90s, dominating the Big East even more than Georgetown did a decade ago. UConn has won a record six straight Big East regular season titles and three conference tournament championships in four years.

But the Huskies fell one game short of the Final Four in 1990, 1995 and 1998, losing to Duke on Christian Laettner's buzzer-beater at the Meadowlands the first time.

"Ever since I've been here, he has had his eyes on the Final Four and possibly the national championship," point guard Khalid El-Amin said. "Last year we fell a game short of the Final Four, and this year ever since Aug. 19 he's been pushing us and motivating us every practice to get better at something.

Ed Reinke/Associated Press Connecticut's Jim Calhoun directs his team from the sideline during their NCAA Final Four victory over Ohio State on Saturday.

"Now that we're here, we're going to try to make the most of it." As he stands on the precipice of the true greatness he seeks, Calhoun seems like a man who was always destined to coach. Not so. "I played basketball in college and thought I was a much better player than what I was," said Calhoun, who grew up in the Boston area. "I didn't ever think I was going to coach. The moment I walked into a gym - I was 22 years old and put a whistle on my neck - I saw I could combine things I loved.

"I could compete and I could give something to the kids."

Calhoun's coach at Braintree (Mass.) High School, Fred Herget, taught him that coaches don't always have to be heartless intimidators.

"When my dad died when I was 15, the only person sitting in my home that day, looking after my family, was my high school coach," Calhoun said.

He has carried a small photo of his first granddaughter in his breast pocket throughout the NCAA tournament. Mental snapshots of what the national championship game would be like have flickered in his mind for years.

WOMEN'S FINAL FOUR

Figgs snags spotlight from White-McCarty

By Anne Peterson Associated Press

SAN JOSE, Calif. - Purdue's Ukari Figgs wasn't about to let it end this way. After failing to score a point in the first half, she came out in the second to make sure the Boilermakers got their national championship.

"I knew I had 20 minutes to be a winner or a loser," Figgs said after an 18-point second-half performance. "I don't like being a loser."

Figgs has played most of her collegiate career in the shadow of fellow guard and Indiana star Stephanie White-McCarty. She certainly continued that in the first half against Duke on Sunday night.

The senior guard went 0-for-7 from the floor and the shortcoming reflected on her entire team. The Boilermakers trailed 22-17 at the half.

She scored her first basket 17 seconds into the second half. Less than a minute later, she scored again, bringing Purdue within 22-21. The Boilermakers wrestled for the lead, but didn't take it until Figgs' driving layup at 12:57 made it 32-30.

Along with that go-ahead basket, Figgs had eight points as Purdue went on a 12-4 run to extend the lead to 42-34. The Boilermakers easily led the rest

When Figgs finally caught fire, White-McCarty casually held out her hand as she passed by her best friend during a lull in play. Figgs hit it, and each smiled. The Boilermakers were making their big move.

Figgs and White-McCarty capped their college careers with a 62-45 victory over Duke for the national title.

"I thought earlier in the first half she was looking for a shot a little bit, but she was going to figure the game out," Duke coach

Purdue's Stephanie White-McCarty, second from left, draws a foul during the NCAA women's championship game Sunday. White-McCarty and teammate Ukari Figgs were the driving forces behind Purdue's victory.

Gail Goestenkors said of Figgs. tenure at Purdue for both Figgs "She used her quickness, her speed, her athleticism and really got to the basket."

White-McCarty and Figgs form what has been called the best women's backcourt in the country. Figgs quietly and competently played her game, while White-McCarty grabbed a lot of the attention in her home state leading many of their teammates to call Figgs Purdue's unsung hero.

Figgs proved her worth during the Final Four. Against Louisiana Tech in the semifinals, Figgs scored 24 points, 18 in the first half. She also had 10 rebounds and went 5-of-7 on 3-pointers.

The Final Four and the eventual national championship were the culmination of a turbulent and White-McCarty.

Both started as high school standouts. White-McCarty reached megastar status in the small town of West Lebanon, and was named Miss Basketball in Indiana. Figgs was Miss Basketball in Kentucky.

Both chose Purdue, but after their freshman year, coach Lin Dunn was fired. Then sophomore-year coach Nell Fortner left to coach the U.S. Women's National Team.

Some players, including Duke's Nicole Erickson and Michele VanGorp, gave up on Purdue and transferred.

Figgs and White-McCarty stayed, and it paid off when Purdue assistant Carolyn Peck was named coach.

COLLEGE BASKETBALL BRIEFS

Report: Lansing hired

lowa basketball coach Steve Alford has reportedly filled another one of his assistant coaching vacancies.

Indiana State assistant Greg Lansing will join Alford's father, Sam, as an Iowa assistant next season, according to a report in Saturday's confirmed the hiring to the Gazette.

Lansing was at ISU for four seasons. Prior to coaching under Royce Waltman at the Terre Haute, Ind., school, he was a prep coach at Roosevelt High School in Des Moines. His parents and sister live in West Des Moines.

Sunday, Lansing's father said he could not comment on his statements made earlier in the week. Dave Lansing said Alford wanted to make an announcement early this week.

Brand, Holdsclaw earn Naismith honors

ATLANTA (AP) - Sophomore Elton Brand of Duke and senior Chamique Holdsclaw of Tennessee were chosen for the Naismith Player of the Year awards Sunday by the Atlanta Tipoff Club.

The club also selected Mike Krsyzewski of Duke and Carolyn Peck of Purdue its coaches of the year.

White-McCarty honored

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — Stephanie White-McCarty, who led Purdue to the No. 1 ranking and a spot in the national championship game, was announced Sunday as the 1999 recipient of the Wade Trophy.

The award, named for women's basketball pioneer Margaret Wade, has been presented since 1978 to the nation's top player.

I wanted to go out a winner."

After its big run, Purdue made enough baskets and defensive stands down the stretch to keep Duke (29-7) at bay, even as White-McCarty sat out the final 4:01 after spraining her left ankle. "I told Stephanie that I was pulling for her, that we had been through this before, and we'll take care of business for her," Figgs said.

The loss ended an improbable run through the tournament by Duke, as well as any hope of a unique "double" for the Blue Devils' basketball program. The Duke men are favored in Monday night's men's championship game with Connecticut.

The Duke women had earned their first Final Four trip by ending Tennessee's hopes for a fourth straight title, beating the Lady Vols in the East regional finals. But the Blue Devils' 45 points Sunday night were a season low and they shot only 32.7 percent. "Things that work usually didn't work tonight," Duke's Georgia Schweitzer said. "You're going to have these nights. It's just unfortunate it had to happen tonight." The championship was all the sweeter for White-McCarty and Figgs because of what they had endured early in their careers. They played for three coaches in their first three seasons at Purdue and saw their team ripped apart when coach Lin Dunn was fired following their freshman year in 1996.
