Film splits from comm studies

The film studies and production tracks will join comparative literature.

By Carrie Johnston
The Daily Iowan

They say breaking up is hard to do, and both students and faculty in the Communication Studies Department are coming to grips with their own "sensitive" split. The UI film studies and production tracks, formerly included in the Communication Studies Department, will be making the move to the Program in Comparative Literature in an effort to offer an emphasis on the arts rather than on communications. Officials in the department say the break-up has led to confusion among students and problems concerning resources and budgeting. "It is a very sensitive matter," said Randy Hirokawa, chair of the Communications Studies Department. "An outside evaluation committee felt that the interest of film studies had more in common with the intellectual interests of comparative literature." Starting next semester, students who want to produce and study film and have not declared a major can major in comparative literature with a concentration in film. All students who are currently communication studies majors with a concentration in film and production will be able to complete their degrees in that department. Hirokawa guesses that around 100 to 150 students will make the move to comparative literature over the next few years, but that the creation of a new major — cinema and film studies — is still in limbo and would have to be approved by the Board of Regents. Courses in film studies, production, and comparative literature courses are available under both communication studies and comparative literature majors in the Schedule of Courses for Fall '99. As skies clear, allies step up raids

Yugoslavian military has been hardest hit; hundreds of thousands of Kosovar refugees continue to suffer.

By George Jahn
Associated Press

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — Aided by clearing skies, NATO struck fuel depots, bridges and army barracks throughout Yugoslavia Monday, saying it was taking particular aim at Serbian ground forces accused of terrorizing Kosovars in Kosovo. Yugoslav President Slobodan Milosevic brushed off the continued barrage, defiantly promising to rebuild the bomb-damaged structures and denouncing NATO "aggressors" and "criminals." Yugoslav officials said five people were killed and at least 30 injured in an attack on a southern Serb town of Aleksinac. That report of casualties couldn't be confirmed independently but an Associated Press photographer at the scene saw two victims of the bombing. State-run Serbian television showed footage of what looked like a residential area that was destroyed in center of Aleksinac, a former mining town. President Clinton promised an "undiminished, unceasing and unrelenting" air campaign. He said it would no longer be enough for Milosevic to just stop the killing. He said "a Kosovo denied its freedom and devoid of its people is not acceptable," adding, "Our plan is to persist until we prevail." As night fell, air raid sirens sounded again in Belgrade, heralding the 13th straight night of NATO bombardment. The state-run Tanjug news agency said several missiles blasted a military barracks in Prizren, Kosovo's second largest city, in the fourth attack there since the NATO air campaign began on March 24. Tanjug also said NATO jets fired missiles early today at a communications relay station near Kosovo's provincial capital of Pristina. Two strong detonations were heard late Monday in the northern city of Novi Sad, the state news agency Tanjug said, and Serbian television showed pictures of a huge fireball. The private news agency Beta quoted Novi Sad's mayor, Caslav Popovic, as saying the power station at the city oil refinery had been hit. NATO also targeted a fuel depot near Sombor, 12 miles south of the Hungarian border, and the coal mining center of Aleksinac, south of Belgrade, television reported. Tanjug said 10 people were injured in the Aleksinac attack. Kursumlija, a drab industrial town on the road linking northeastern Kosovo with the military headquarters at Nis, was also hit, Serb television said. The air strikes aimed to cut the Yugoslav military's lines of supply and transport — roads, bridges, airports, fuel depots and command centers. NATO officials said better weather Monday allowed them to increase the number of bombing missions. The better weather was little comfort for the tens of thousands of Kosovar refugees who continued to pour out of Kosovo in a wave of displacement not seen in Europe in a half-century. The U.N. refugee agency said the number of Kosovars reaching neighboring states had reached nearly 400,000. Conditions remained dire at a makeshift refugee camp at Blace, Macedonia, on the border with Kosovo, where thousands were living in shelters of plastic and blankets in a muddy, fetid no-man's land.

Man pleads guilty in slaying of gay student

Russell Henderson Monday received two life sentences in the murder and kidnapping of Matthew Shepard.

By Robert W. Black
Associated Press

LARAMIE, Wyo. — One of two young men charged in the slaying of gay college student Matthew Shepard pleaded guilty Monday and was sentenced to two consecutive life terms in prison. Russell Henderson, 21, a high school dropout and roofer, pleaded guilty to felony murder and kidnapping, thus avoiding a trial and the possibility of the death penalty. Authorities said Henderson and Aaron McKinney, 21, posed as homosexuals and lured the 5-foot-2, 105-pound Shepard out of a bar last October, kidnapped and pistol-whipped him and left him tied to a fence in the cold. The 21-year-old University of Wyoming student died five days later at a hospital. Henderson said he drove the truck and helped tie Shepard to the fence, but blamed McKinney for the beating. He said he tried to stop the beating, but McKinney struck him when he spoke up. "Matthew looked really bad, so I told (McKinney) to stop; he's had enough," Henderson said. Henderson then apologized to Shepard's parents, Judy and Dennis: "I'm very sorry for what I did, and I'm ready to pay my debt for what I did." Judge Jeffrey A. Donnell dismissed his apology. "This court does not believe you feel any remorse," Donnell said when he sentenced him. "The pain you have caused here, Mr. Henderson, will never go away. Never." Henderson had been charged

Grad student Laurence Pacquette presents his research in Laser Techniques for Elemental Analysis at the UI Student Research Forum Monday in the Union.

Inquiring minds who wanted to know about intravascular ultrasound or neuroblastoma were given the opportunity to be enlightened at a research forum at the Union Monday. Both undergraduate and graduate student researchers presented their findings at the first-ever UI Student Research Forum. The event, organized by the UI Graduate Student Senate, was held in the R. Wayne Richey Ballroom. "We wanted to give people practice in putting presentations together, answering questions in a friendly atmosphere," said Janelle Torres y Torres, a member of the senate. The 35 presenters came from a myriad of academic fields, ranging from industrial engineering to communication studies. "I'm so stuck in the engineering world that I'm not familiar with the other disciplines," UI graduate student Steven Mitchell said. "You learn a lot about how to bring it down to someone's level." This also gave the presenters a chance to learn more about other areas, UI graduate student Melissa Faths said. "We usually only present with other medicinal-chemistry scholars, and here we get to see other fields," she said. "I had one undergrad come up and say, 'I didn't know there was a BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — Kids shriek when the witch appears and applaud for the good fairy. In a bomb shelter on the outskirts of Belgrade, parents are glad for the distraction this puppet show provides. It keeps young ones from asking about the "whistling" noise outside — the sound of air-raid sirens. Since NATO air strikes on Yugoslavia began two weeks ago, approximately half of Belgrade's 2 million people usually opt to spend their nights in bomb shelters. The air strikes are almost always between dusk and dawn.

Right off the bat, baseball showed signs that 1999 might be a repeat of a most remarkable season. Even before Mark McGwire and Sammy Sosa took their first swings, fans had plenty to marvel at Monday. Kevin Brown was knocked out in his matchup with Randy Johnson at Dodger Stadium. Brown, baseball's first $100 million man, gave up three home runs for the Dodgers. Johnson, who signed for $52.4 million, was so-so for the Diamondbacks. And, just like last year, there were home runs. Lots of them. PAGE 14

Sterling to join 'Austin Powers' cast again

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Comedian Mindy Sterling will reprise her role as Frau Farbissina in the second "Austin Powers" installment, "The Spy Who Shagged Me." She appeared in the first "Austin Powers" after its creator and star, Mike Myers, said he liked her skills at improvisation. Both Sterling and Myers worked for the cable show "Instant Comedy with The Groundlings."

Sterling

"Mike is very generous about letting you do things to add to the scene and the character," Sterling said Sunday. "He's very playful and he can go on forever because he's got so much confidence and passion."

Sterling plays Frau, a sidekick of Austin Powers' nemesis Dr. Evil. "The Spy Who Shagged Me" is scheduled to be released this summer.

Meanwhile, she will also appear as an acting coach in "Drop Dead Gorgeous," a mock documentary about the life of beauty pageant contestants and their families.

BOSTON (AP) — Deborah Cox says she's enjoying life on the top of the U.S. charts as Canada's first R&B star — but don't call her a diva.

"I'm not," she told the Boston Globe in Sunday's edition. "I'm really a settled, down-to-earth person. I treat people the way I like to be treated and that's just with respect. I've always been very down-to-earth and not fazed by the music business..."

Cox, of Toronto, made history this year with the longest-running No. 1 R&B hit of all time — 14 weeks topping the charts with "Nobody's Supposed to Be Here." She'll be heading out on tour with R. Kelly this spring.

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — "Field of Dreams" star Kevin Costner realized one of his biggest dreams — playing in a big league baseball game.

He also realized one of his biggest fears — making an error Sunday to lose the game. Costner dropped a ball in the sixth inning, allowing the winning run to score as the Anaheim Angels defeated his alma mater, Cal State Fullerton, 2-1 in the Angels' exhibition finale.

Costner was hitless in three times at bat. But he made two tough plays at shortstop, and even pitched two-thirds of an inning, striking out rookie Jeb Daugherty and retiring Angels manager Terry Collins on a ground ball in the eighth.

Xena, Seven of Nine popular with lesbians

NEW YORK (AP) — Xena and Seven of Nine are two completely different television characters on two completely different shows. But they apparently share a common fan base: lesbians.

Lucy Lawless, who plays the title character on "Xena, Princess Warrior," says lesbians gave the show its initial buzz.

"The lesbians were our first fans, especially the lesbian community in New York City. They really gave Xena a groove," Lawless tells the April 10 edition of TV Guide.

Jeri Ryan, who plays the half-human, half-Borg Seven of Nine on "Star Trek: Voyager," says there was a petition drive on the Internet to turn Seven into a lesbian.

"Then somebody issues a fake press release announcing it was going to happen. Then all the fans got disappointed when it didn't. Well, not everyone. I don't know that mainstream America is ready for it. But who knows?" Ryan said.

History Professor wins first Radcliffe award

Linda Kerber, a UI professor of history, is the first recipient of the first Radcliffe Award for Distinguished Academic Scholarship, given by the Radcliffe College Board of Trustees. She will be honored at a ceremony in Cambridge, Mass., on April 11.

The award in the broad areas of knowledge related to women, gender and society was established this year to recognize outstanding scholarship in an intellectual domain where, historically, Radcliffe has made significant advances.

Radcliffe officials said the award "reflects the values embodied in Radcliffe's mission and its commitment to support and enhance the variety of ways in which women contribute to society."

Linda Maxson, dean of the UI College of Liberal Arts, said it is fitting for Kerber to be the inaugural recipient of this award. "Linda Kerber is known nationally and internationally for her pioneering scholarship in the area of women's history," Maxson said. "She has set a high standard for scholars who will come after her. I am proud of her scholarly accomplishments and the recognition she has brought the UI, the College of Liberal Arts, and the department of history."

Kerber is a historian of women's rights and women's roles in American history, and a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences as well as the Society of American Historians.

As former president of the Organization of American Historians, Kerber has played an important role in gaining recognition for women historians and women's history within the discipline.

A former Guggenheim fellow and National Endowment for the Humanities fellow, she has written several books, including "Toward an Intellectual History of Women," (1997) and "No Constitutional Right to be Ladies: Women and the Obligations of Citizenship," (1998).

The Business and Arts Placement Office is to be more for business students, some say.

Placement office tries to broaden services

The Business and Liberal Arts Placement Office seems to be more for business students, some say.

By Julia Di Gangi
The Daily Iowan

With graduation looming fewer than six weeks away, the UI Business and Liberal Arts Placement Office should be a hotbed of activity, but it says students aren't taking much advantage of it.

The office, which guides students in their job hunt, reports that few liberal arts graduating seniors — 23 percent — take advantage of its services annually. On the other hand, half of all graduating business students use the office.

The problem lies mostly with the scant communication between the office and much of the campus, said Laurie Dufoe, associate director of the office.

"When we hear students say, 'Geez, we didn't even know you were there,' it is a little disheartening," she said.

The office is trying to improve communication with faculty of the College of Liberal Arts so that their students can be better informed about its services and resources. Dufoe said she hopes relations with the various liberal arts departments will also increase students' awareness and knowledge about the office.

But some graduating seniors, such as English major Kelly Donahue, say that, because of the office's shortcomings, they have been searching for a job independently.

"They say they help all majors, but they can't do a thing for an English major," she said. "Their career fair was a joke. All the places wanted business majors."

Because the office works with nearly every business and liberal arts discipline, students may be able to find more individualized information in the job programs offered by their major.

Students in the Department of History, for example, tend to utilize the department's advisers for job placement rather than services such as the office, said Shelton Stromquist, the history department's chairman.

"If they're interested in history-related jobs, they're going to use our department — no question," Stromquist said. "We know the kinds of research materials to direct them in the right direction."

Donahue also said that the differences between business and liberal arts disciplines make getting a job through the office difficult.

"There's no way you can blend the two," she said. "If I wanted to work in the business world, I would have been a business major."

Another reason few liberal arts students go to the office, located in Room 24, Phillips Hall, is because the faculty of the Tippie School of Business has a closer relationship with it. By helping the office collect data and inform students about the available services, business students are better informed, Dufoe said.

"Business students are in a building where they all go to class and liberal arts students are all over," she said. "There's not one centered point to get job-related information."

Also, the office doesn't provide services for graduate school, which is something a lot of liberal arts students seek, said Deanna Hurst, director of the office.

STATE BRIEF

Three dead in apparent murder-suicide

WEST DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — A gun-wielding man entered the home of his estranged wife and shot her and her mother to death before killing himself, authorities said.

West Des Moines police said Francis Michael Donahue, 41, killed Pamela Donahue, 46, and Helen Rasmussen, 67, before turning the gun on himself Sunday evening.

According to Lt. Scott Wiegert, the incident began at 5:11 p.m. when police received a 911 call from a boy at the residence.

"The juvenile said his father was ... threatening to shoot someone," Wiegert said.

A neighbor called police a short time later to report shots fired.

Authorities rushed to the scene and heavily-armed officers, fearing a hostage situation, surrounded the house and cleared nearby streets.

The officers waited about an hour before going into the house.

Once inside, they found a 3-year-old girl alive. After taking her outside, the officers found the bodies of the adults.

The Donahue's three sons, ages 12, 11 and 10, had escaped from the home shortly after the 911 call.

Neighbors said the Donahues had been going through a divorce.

Historian to speak on death penalty and racism

Bill McFeely opposes the death penalty, in part on racial grounds.

By Anita Chilipala
The Daily Iowan

Pulitzer Prize winner and well-known historian Bill McFeely is set to speak about how race factors in to both the law and community history in two different lectures at the UI.

McFeely, a former professor of history at the University of Georgia, is scheduled to read from his soon-to-be-published book, "Proximity to Death: Lawyers, Clients, Jurors and the Death Penalty," today at 4:30 p.m. in Room 302, Schaeffer Hall.

"In this country, there is a tremendous enthusiasm for the death penalty," McFeely said. "The people opposed to it are very much in the minority."

McFeely's opposition to the death penalty includes a strong opposition to the tendency of race's playing a role in the number of executions.

"I would be opposed to the death penalty even if you can get the race issue out of the question," he said. "But race is in the question. There's no doubt about that."

From 1930 to 1998, 4,361 persons were executed in the United States, according to a study done by the University of Alaska; of those, 2,246 of those executed were black, 2,064 were white, and 51 were of other races.

McFeely based his book on cases from his home state of Georgia, where 23 people were executed in 1998 alone, 12 of them black.

"Georgia is active in its use of the death penalty," said UI law Professor David Baldus. "It has a strong history of racism in general, but especially racism relating to the death penalty."

Georgia's history of racism is apparent in another McFeely book, "Sapelo's People: A Long Walk into Freedom." The book, published in 1994, is about a community of 67 African-Americans on Sapelo Island, located in the Sea Islands off the coast of Georgia.

McFeely is scheduled to discuss his experiences on Sapelo Island in a lecture Wednesday at noon in Room 202, Jefferson Building.

Working on and off for more than four years on the island, McFeely attempted to track the history of the small community. He discovered that all of the island's inhabitants are descendants of slaves who lived on the island more than 130 years ago.

"It's a rare treat for a historian to write about slaves by name," he said. During the Civil War, the slaves had been taken off the island and placed in Georgia. Three hundred of the people had been forced to leave, but 120 came back.

"Their sense of continuity is amazing," he said. "It's different from anything anywhere."

McFeely said that, with this book, he did something historians don't usually do.

"I wrote it in first-person singular; I put myself into the story," he said. "They're fascinating people, and it seemed more honest not to be the omniscient, detached observer."

The events are sponsored by the Department of History and the College of Law.

Baseball is selling out

Last week, the Sports Business Journal reported major league baseball is "planning to allow" teams to sell advertisements about an inch to an inch-and-a-half square on sleeves of jerseys, perhaps as early as this season.

From nearly every point of view, any such undertaking would be a huge mistake.

With the resurgence of baseball's popularity after last season's home-run race and the New York Yankees' domination, corporate America has opened its eyes to baseball and the possibility of advertising patches on players' sleeves.

Although such patches couldn't be seen by those fans in the stands, they could be visible in television close-ups and photographs. And with average ticket prices for a major league game rising 9.7 percent this season, it looks as if more people will be watching their favorite team — and their favorite team's favorite advertisements — from their favorite seat in their house.

If this were to happen, it would be yet another example of how commercialism is eroding baseball's integrity. Although commercialism has been a part of baseball since the time of Babe Ruth, it has usually stayed outside the diamond.

But slowly and surely, commercial publicity has seeped into the game itself, with advertisements already on backstops and outfield walls. What is next, baseball uniforms like NASCAR racers?

Increased commercialism in baseball creates haves and have-nots. Teams in big markets, such as the New York Yankees and Los Angeles Dodgers, reap incredible economic benefits, while small-market teams, such as the Montreal Expos, see little benefit, if any.

The more economic flexibility a team has, the better players it can sign. The better players it can sign, the better the team and the more revenue it can make. This cycle almost ensures lasting success, as the Atlanta Braves has enjoyed.

The difference in income and wins between the large and small markets has become ridiculously noticeable. As far as the advertisements on uniforms, it is a dream to believe the small-market teams will reap as many economic benefits as the large-market teams.

Advertising on baseball uniforms is a disgusting thought. However small the advertisements may be, they couldn't be leading to a more horrible wrong.

McGwire's off-field act is heroic

YESTERDAY the St. Louis Cardinals opened the baseball season, and with that, an American hero reported back to work.

His name is Mark McGwire, and to the world he is regarded as a hero for eclipsing Roger Maris' fabled single-season home-run record. McGwire, however, should not be viewed as a hero for his athletic prowess.

To do so would be to equate hitting home runs in a baseball game with nobility and beneficence — the true hallmarks of a hero. Rather, McGwire is a hero for what he has done away from the game of baseball. My family became a witness to that when, on Christmas Eve, McGwire visited my ailing cousin, Scotty, in his hospital room.

The following story is about Scotty and his battle with leukemia.

That battle, sadly, eventually took his life, but with the help of McGwire leukemia never took his hope.

Scotty was diagnosed as having leukemia when he was just 9 years old. Understandably, his parents were initially devastated that their only child might soon die. However, after years of hospital trips for spinal taps and blood screens, Scotty had seemed to have side-stepped the tragic effects of leukemia. His health progressed and soon he was strong enough to go outside and do the one thing he dreamed of doing while in the hospital — playing catch with his friends.

Scotty's health, however, was short lived. Scotty had had a relapse of his cancer. The phrase "tomorrow is promised to no one" soon came to be a painful reminder of how precious life can be to Scotty and our family as a whole. He continued to fight through his leukemia, but tragically as this last New Year was welcomed in, Scotty bid his family goodbye. He was 15.

The point of this story, however, is not about the tragic death of a child. Rather, it is about what happened shortly before his death. On Christmas Eve, Scotty's health was poor, and I am sure his distraught feeling was compounded by his physical inability to enjoy what should be the most festive time of the year.

However, Christmas is a time of miracles, and on Christmas Eve, Scotty received a very special miracle indeed.

You see, Scotty received an unsolicited visitor on that day, a visitor whom one could only describe as heaven sent.

That is so because I imagine that if Scotty could have wished for one visitor in the world to see him on Christmas Eve, it would have been McGwire. Thus, it can only be described as a miracle that on Christmas Eve, Scotty's wish was granted.

To Scotty, McGwire's visit helped make all the difference. With that one visit, McGwire was able to replenish in him all of the hope and joy that cancer and chemotherapy had attempted to destroy.

McGwire, for his unsolicited benevolence, is indeed a hero. It is just too bad that the rest of society does not know that the heroic status of McGwire has absolutely nothing to do with baseball or home runs.

Unfortunately, our society too often limits its definition of a hero to professional athletes. Mere games, however, do not produce heroes, but rather they only produce stars or celebrities. The fundamental difference is that the light of a star fades away with the night sky, but the memory of a hero never leaves our hearts.

McGwire proved that you do not have to be a sports star to be a hero. Rather, being a hero can simply mean making a difference in society or someone else's life. This point is reflected in the following poem by George Eliot:

*If you sit down at set of sun /
And count the acts that you have done, /
And, counting, find /
One self-denying deed, one word /
That eased the heart of him who heard, /
One glance most kind /
That fell like sunshine where it went /
Then you may count that day well spent. /*

*But if, through all the livelong day, /
You've cheered no heart, by yea or nay /
If, through it all /
You've nothing done that you can trace /
That brought the sunshine to one face /
No act most small /
That helped some soul and nothing cost /
Then count that day as worse than lost. /*

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Individuals, not government responsible for child care

Recently, a group of graduate students has been making a lot of noise about the child-care situation in Iowa City. I am skeptical about their motives. Milton Friedman, the economist, said the government solution to a problem is usually as bad as the problem. If the purpose of the Good Friday "protest" about child care and the continuous campaign to make people more aware of the situation is to bring parents together to try to work out a solution such as a baby-sitting co-op or the like, then I'm enthused. Good idea. But if the purpose is to cajole the UI into providing free child care whenever and wherever the parents want it, then I object.

I realize that children are a tremendous responsibility. Note that the responsibility does not partially belong to the government and does not partially belong to your employer: A child is the sole responsibility of the parent. Why do you think child care is a problem in Iowa City?

I have a radical thought: The pay for child-care workers is low, and for that and other reasons, there is a shortage of qualified workers. Since graduate students are not the wealthiest citizens in society, they can't afford the necessary (and even then, perhaps not sufficient) money so that their child may be taken care of at odd hours, or consistently, or whatever.

It looks like what this group of activists wants is the UI's assistance in what could be a very expensive proposition. Since taxpayers fund the UI, ultimately this will mean greater taxes and a bigger government bureaucracy to handle the new program.

Tempting though it may be to heap the responsibility onto someone else's shoulders (and difficult though it may be to say no to such a proposition), people who are resourceful enough to earn their way into graduate programs at the UI certainly can find a solution to this problem that won't hurt the taxpayers and encourage bigger government.

You can paint me as anti-child if you want to; those who want government funds most are usually the most defensive about not getting them and, therefore, most eager to go on the attack. But take a step back, forget political correctness for a moment and ask this: Who should be responsible for your child?

World confronts the once and future Never Again

IT'S an odd time to be a lefty sort of person — left in the political sense, not as in the hand you use to brush your teeth and other quasi-important stuff. Odd because, for once — and probably for the first time since World War II — the United States is engaging in military action that you can support. It's a bizarre feeling.

For most of the Cold War, America used its force almost always on the wrong side. The highlights are many and generally insidious: Greece in the late '40s; Guatemala and Iran in the '50s; Vietnam in the '40s and the '50s and the '60s and the '70s — almost four decades of idiocy; Cambodia, Laos, Chile; the list always seemed endless.

There never seemed to be a far-off corner of the planet into which the United States couldn't project its corporate capitalism — and usually projected it with a maximum of force and a minimum of sense. If you, as I did, grew up under the spectre of Vietnam, you were immediately suspicious of American foreign policy. It was always misguided; it was always short-sighted; and it was always wrong.

So it's amazing to see the United States be right, for a change. And there can be no doubt whether the United States managed to wind up on the right side this time. One glance at the torrents of refugees streaming out of Kosovo is enough to persuade you of that.

Another thing strikes you immediately: The United States has no corporate interests in the Balkans. At least none that you can see. Probably in 10 or 20 years, this will change; America has this tendency to insert Coca-Cola and Pepsi and McDonald's and Burger King into every square centimeter of the globe, and the Balkans will be no different. But, for the moment, the U.S. intentions seem to be clean.

Whatever else, it's clear that Slobodan Milosevic and the Serbs must be stopped. The ethnic engineering that Milosevic and his military are engaged in simply cannot be tolerated by anyone who professes to be human. It is unmistakably wrong.

The Serbs call Kosovo the "heart of Serbia," but this claim is highly specious at best. They hearken back to the Battle of Kosovo Polje — June 15, 1389, just in case you're keeping track — calling it the defense of Europe against the Ottoman hordes. What the Serbs fail to acknowledge about the battle is that the Albanians — the people they are now demonizing as the Islamic usurpers — fought on their side against the Ottomans.

But this is typical of the particularly virulent type of nationalism that the Serbs have been espousing since the middle of the 19th century — and since Milosevic began his clamber to power in 1987.

In a series of speeches, beginning on April 24, 1987, Milosevic has continually played the ultra-nationalist card, specifically targeting Kosovo and the Kosovars. His words are chillingly reminiscent of some speeches made in Bavarian beer halls in the '20s.

That some American (and Western) leftists have protested the bombing against Serbia is puzzling. You have to wonder how in the world they could align themselves with somebody who is decidedly to the right of the Klu Klux Klan.

Three hundred-fifty thousand Kosovar refugees should be enough to persuade them, you'd think. Ethnic engineering on such a massive scale should send frozen waves down their spines, you'd think. If they had spines. If you were a thinking person.

Sixty years ago, the world could have stopped a tinhorn ultra-nationalist when he was making rabid pitbull speeches in Bavarian Biergartens. After that conflagration, the world said, Never again. Never again is now.

NEW YORK — As a young artist, he awoke one morning with an urge to paint but no money for a canvas. Solution: He appropriated his own pillow and quilt, caking them with paint, toothpaste and fingernail polish, then mounting this concoction on a frame. "Bed" set off fireworks in the art world.

TELEVISION
Robert Rauschenberg: Inventive Genius
When: Wednesday, April 7, at 9 p.m.
Where: On PBS

Robert Rauschenberg begins the new "American Masters" exploration into this man of dazzling culpability. It airs Wednesday at 9 p.m. CST on PBS.

"Robert Rauschenberg: Inventive Genius" tracks the unlikely success of a boy with a gift for drawing and, unbeknownst to anyone, dyslexia. This was in the gritty oil-refinery town of Port Arthur, Texas, where he considered being a preacher — except preachers weren't allowed to dance.

By the early 1950s, the grateful expatriate would find his way to New York, just in time for an artistic revolution. Encountering the radical new movement of abstract expressionism, Rauschenberg became an eager participant. But all by himself he was also a movement, defined by whatever crossed his mind.

A cunning scavenger, he crafted sculptures from junk he found on New York sidewalks — perhaps most notably a stuffed angora goat he girdled with a tire. A pioneer of performance art, he danced with the avant-garde Merce Cunningham troupe after equipping the company with parachutes and roller skates.

He fashioned images clipped from magazines and newspapers into rapturous collages. He designed a record album for the rock group Talking Heads.

Rauschenberg has famously said that he operates in the gap between art and life. At the same time, he does his best to fill another gap.

"I think humor is an adhesive that joins tragedy and happiness together," he explains, then makes a pleased self-appraisal: "I'm still sticky!" At that, he laughs his Rauschenberg laugh, a full-throated chortle overwhelming and infectious. Like his art.

Rauschenberg spends much of his time and does much of his work at his 37-acre compound on Captiva Island, Fla. But on a recent afternoon, he has welcomed me to his Greenwich Village home, a five-story former church, where we chat in his kitchen.

We last spoke in the mid-1970s. By then well into middle age, he noted that "maturity is usually associated with reducing your life to a state of controlled boredom. So most people assume that one is supposed to out-grow things like spontaneity and wild thoughts."

It's as obvious now as it was then: Rauschenberg isn't buying. On the contrary, the older he grows, the more plentiful his wild and whimsical thoughts.

"I know a lot of painters who say they just don't have any ideas. I can't imagine it!" he marvels. "Other people think of ideas as if they're some kind of object. Like a chair.

"But you don't NEED a chair. You can stand up!"

More contraceptive choices are 'in the pipeline'

■ European methods of female contraception are coming to the U.S.

By Lauran Neergaard
 Associated Press

WASHINGTON — In Germany, women can use a handheld computer to determine when sex most risks pregnancy: It flashes red if the woman should avoid intercourse, green if there's little chance she's fertile that day.

Canadian women can slip in a little contraceptive sponge before sex. European women have access to a hormone-releasing IUD that prevents pregnancy for five years, dramatically lowers menstrual blood loss and even is touted to shrink fibroids.

Don't look for such options in a U.S. pharmacy yet, but they may be coming in a few years.

Critics say the United States has been left behind as other countries embrace new contraceptives that provide women more choices in birth control. More than half a dozen new options deemed important by family planning experts sell abroad but not here. The last unique contraceptive to win U.S. approval was the female condom in 1993. In fact, sterilization is the leading American birth control.

"The idea that the United States could be so many years behind other countries is pretty astonishing," said Dr. Felicia Stewart, a contraception expert at the Kaiser Family Foundation.

Deterrents include lingering bad PR from failed contraceptives such as the 1970s Dalkon Shield as well as anti-abortion politics. Experts also point to lawsuits such as those filed by 50,000 users of Norplant, six hormone capsules implanted into the arm for five years. The suits claim manufacturer Wyeth-Ayerst didn't adequately warn about side effects from headaches to ovarian cysts and the implanted capsules are hard to remove. Although thousands of lawsuits have been dismissed, and the only one yet to reach a jury ended in Norplant's favor, sales plummeted during the wrangling.

But "the long, long drought" is easing, said Dr. Michael Burnhill of Planned Parenthood, pointing to U.S. studies of European-sold contraceptives. "There is stuff in the pipeline now," and Americans should have more choices within a few years, he said.

First, the Today sponge is making a comeback. Although various contraceptive sponges sell abroad, Americans have had none since Today quit selling in 1995 because its maker broke U.S. manufacturing rules. New Jersey's Allendale Pharmaceuticals has bought Today from the previous maker and plans to begin selling by fall.

Also on the horizon:

• Unipath Diagnostics Co. has begun U.S. trials of the Persona handheld computer, which calculates pregnancy risks depending on the day of a woman's menstrual cycle. Studies in Europe suggest that with strict use, it's about 94 percent effective. Stewart calls it "a pretty accurate and precise little device" but warns it may require "an iron will" because the days women are most likely to get pregnant often are when they're most interested in sex.

Unipath recently won U.S. approval for a different computer, the ClearPlan Easy, to help women trying to have babies discover their most fertile days. It costs about $200.

• IUDs, which sit in the uterus to block conception, are the world's most popular birth-control device. But Americans were largely scared off by the Dalkon Shield, blamed for painful infections, miscarriages and some deaths before it was banned in 1975. Modern IUDs, including two U.S.-sold versions, have proved to be safe, but scientists hope newer versions sold in Europe, Mirena and the Flexi-T, will attract more Americans.

UNFORTUNATELY, THIS IS WHERE PEOPLE ARE PUTTING TOO MANY RETIREMENT DOLLARS.

Every year, a lot of people make a huge mistake on their taxes. They wind up sending Uncle Sam money they could be saving for retirement.

Fortunately, that's a mistake you can avoid with SRAs—tax-deferred annuities from TIAA-CREF. SRAs not only ease your current tax bite, they offer an easy way to build retirement income—especially for the "extras" that your pension and Social Security benefits may not cover. Because your contributions are made in pretax dollars, you pay less in taxes now. And since earnings on your SRAs are tax deferred, your money works even harder for you.

Today, we offer other before- and after-tax financial solutions, including IRAs and mutual funds. They're backed by the same investment expertise, low expenses, and personal service that have made TIAA-CREF the choice of America's educational and research community.

Why write off the chance for a more rewarding retirement? Stop by your benefits office or call us at 1 800 842-2776 and find out how TIAA-CREF SRAs can help you enjoy happier returns.

Scientists link drug, heart disease

Experiments on mice with a Harvard-developed drug indicates that it could slow down hardening of the arteries.

By Daniel Q. Haney
Associated Press

BOSTON — The experimental drug that caused a sensation when it was found to wipe out cancer in mice by choking off the tumors' blood supply is also showing promise against heart disease.

The treatment involves the Harvard-developed drug, endostatin, which has been shown to be remarkably potent against cancer but has not been tested yet on people.

Now, the same team that discovered endostatin has found that — in mice, at least — the drug may also greatly slow the development of atherosclerosis, or hardening of the arteries. Atherosclerosis is a buildup of fatty deposits.

The research raises the possibility that a new category of drugs, the blood-vessel inhibitors, may be useful weapons against both heart disease and cancer, the two most important diseases of the industrialized world.

A team led by Dr. Judah Folkman of Harvard Medical School and Children's Hospital in Boston report the development in today's issue of Circulation, the American Heart Association journal.

Folkman pioneered the study of angiogenesis, the growth of new blood vessels. Endostatin is a natural protein that blocks blood-vessel formation. Without a blood supply, cancer in lab animals often stops growing and disappears.

Heart disease also involves unwanted tissue growth — the accumulation of cholesterol, blood cells and smooth muscle cells in lumps known as plaque. Plaque growing in the heart arteries is the chief cause of heart attacks and angina pain.

Experts have long noticed that plaque often has its own network of tiny blood vessels called capillaries.

"By blocking them, perhaps we can alter the progression of the disease," said Dr. Karen Moulton, who conducted the experiment in Folkman's lab.

In the 16-week experiment involving 73 mice, the researchers tested endostatin on animals that were fed a high-cholesterol diet. They found that those on the drug

“By blocking them, perhaps we can alter the progression of the disease.”

— Dr. Karen Moulton, who conducted the experiment averaged 85 percent less plaque buildup in their hearts' aortas than did untreated animals.

"It's a very exciting concept," said Dr. Stephen Epstein of Washington Hospital Center in Washington. "If the data can be validated by other labs, it represents a whole new paradigm for strategies to prevent atherosclerosis and its complications."

However, Epstein acknowledged that the discovery also presents "a very important conundrum," because drugs that promote blood vessel growth, rather than block it, are already one of the hottest areas of heart disease research.

Epstein and others are testing the use of growth proteins that trigger the body to sprout new blood vessels. When injected into the heart, these proteins induce the growth of a new blood supply. This nourishes heart muscle that is starved by clogged arteries.

Some human testing suggests this treatment can relieve the effects of atherosclerosis. But Epstein said the latest work raises the possibility that it could also make the underlying disease worse by promoting the growth of plaque.

Court expands car-search rules

Police officials hail the Supreme Court's ruling, but defense lawyers criticize it.

By Richard Carelli
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Passengers' personal belongings are fair game when police officers search a car for criminal evidence against the driver, the Supreme Court ruled Monday.

The 6-3 decision reinstated a Wyoming drug conviction and expanded the already considerable police power to stop and search vehicles without a court warrant. Police officials praised the ruling, but defense lawyers condemned it.

"Officers must be free of unreasonable, confusing and unworkable restrictions on what may be searched," said Robert Scully of the National Association of Police Organizations. He thanked the court for "giving officers the tools they need to do their jobs."

But Lisa Kemler of the National Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers called the decision "an abomination," adding: "You get in a car and, as a passenger, you basically have no rights. Almost anything goes, as long as police can come up with some reason to say they expected to find evidence of a crime."

Andrew Fine of the Legal Aid Society in New York said the ruling wrongly "introduces an element of guilt by association."

The Constitution's Fourth Amendment, which protects against unreasonable police searches and seizures, generally requires police to obtain court warrants. Since 1925, the Supreme Court has carved out numerous exceptions when police targets are in vehicles.

In a key 1996 ruling, the justices said police can stop motorists for routine traffic violations, such as a faulty brake light, even if the officers really want to search for illegal drugs. Monday's ruling means officers who participate in such stops can search all containers in the car if something gives them reason to believe they will find drugs.

The court's latest ruling on privacy rights stems from a routine traffic stop, a situation that arises countless times daily across the nation.

A car driven by David Young was stopped for speeding on Interstate 25 in Natrona County, Wyo., in the early morning hours of July 23, 1995. After a Highway Patrol officer saw a hypodermic syringe in Young's pocket, Young acknowledged that he had used it to take drugs.

During the ensuing search, two other officers asked the car's two female passengers to get out of the car. One of them, Sandra Houghton, left her purse on the car's back seat. Inside it, police found drug paraphernalia and liquid methamphetamine.

She was convicted on a felony charge but appealed.

The Wyoming Supreme Court threw out her conviction last year, ruling that police were justified only in searching the car for drugs Young may have had with him — and therefore could not search Houghton's purse.

Writing for the nation's highest court, Justice Antonin Scalia said the Wyoming court was wrong.

"Effective law enforcement would be appreciably impaired without the ability to search a passenger's personal belongings when there is reason to believe contraband or evidence of criminal wrongdoing is hidden in the car," Scalia said.

"The sensible rule ... is that such a package may be searched, whether or not its owner is present as a passenger or otherwise, because it may contain the contraband that the officer has reason to believe is in the car."

Scalia added that car passengers

"will often be engaged in a common enterprise with the driver and have the same interest in concealing the fruits or the evidence of their wrongdoing."

The decision, however, did not give police the authority to pat down or search the pockets of a passenger when looking for evidence linked to the driver. Such tactics were banned by a 1948 Supreme Court ruling.

Robert Pinsky gets third term as poet laureate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Robert Pinsky, who emphasizes that poetry should be an integral part of everyday life, was given an unprecedented third term Monday as America's poet laureate.

Pinsky, 58, is the country's ninth poet laureate since Congress created the title in 1985. Named to the one-year post in 1997, Pinsky, who also teaches creative writing at Boston University, has been especially active, appearing in public and on TV, in emphasizing poetry's role in everyday activities.

He will preside Wednesday at two readings at the Library of Congress for youngsters of school age and one for prominent Washingtonians.

Pinsky has been pushing a project in which President Clinton, other prominent people and ordinary Americans are asked to read favorite poems aloud, making 1,000 audio and 200 video recordings. They will be deposited in the Library of Congress to record how Americans felt about poetry in the late 90s.

Last month, Pinsky convinced Seattle Fire Chief James E. Sewell to read his favorite. He said it was Robert Frost's poem that begins: "Some say the world will end in fire, Some say in ice."

Next April, Pinsky will take part in a conference on "Poetry and the American People," celebrating the library's 200th anniversary.

Wynette's daughters file $50 million lawsuit

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Three of Tammy Wynette's daughters Monday filed a $50 million lawsuit blaming the country star's death on negligence by her husband and her doctor.

Daughters Tina Jones, Jackie Daly and Georgette Smith said Wynette died because Dr. Wallis Marsh of Pittsburgh did not monitor her condition closely and overprescribed medication.

They also said Wynette's fifth husband, George Richey, did not seek medical care for her after being urged to do so by Marsh on the day of her death.

Marsh "inappropriately treated her in a number of different ways," said Ed Yarbrough, an attorney for the daughters. "It became clear that her husband was very much a party to that."

The "Stand by Your Man" singer died on April 6, 1998, at her Nashville home at age 55. Her body was found by Richey, and Marsh flew from Pittsburgh to sign the death certificate. He listed the cause of death as a blood clot in the lungs.

Skywalk proposed for new ramp

The city is looking into building a skywalk in order to alleviate space problems at the Senior Center.

By Steven Cook
The Daily Iowan

A skywalk between the Iowa City Senior Center and the proposed Iowa Avenue parking ramp will be added as an option to the new downtown parking facility plans, the Iowa City City Council agreed Monday night.

The decision came after a request by Terri Miller, the Senior Center Commission chairwoman, to delay judgment on the center's request for space in the proposed ramp for Senior Center activities.

The proposed parking ramp would be built along Iowa Avenue from Linn to Gilbert streets, directly north of the Senior Center, 28 S. Linn St. The ramp would contain 567 parking spaces and 26,300 square feet of commercial space.

The project has yet to be approved by the council, but $700,000 is being spent to design the structure. The entire project is expected to cost $12 million.

The Senior Center Commission has asked the council for 7,700 square feet of commercial space on the second floor of the ramp to help alleviate present and future space needs at the center.

With the second floor space, the commission also asked for the skywalk to provide access to the ramp space.

Some councilors expressed concern over the cost of such a skywalk, which Jeff Davidson, the city assistant director of Planning and Community Development, estimated to be $150,000.

The ramp will now be designed with the skywalk as an option. Once bids come in, the council will decide whether to include the skywalk.

The delay in decision on the request for space is due to questions over whether the center could pay for the space, Miller said. The center is working out other agreements that could affect that ability, she said.

She also said the center could request first-floor space as well. She said she was informed Monday that the first floor has 20-foot ceilings, which could accommodate the center's 65-piece band.

Construction on the west end of the ramp is slated to begin at the end of May. Construction on the east end would begin in October. The ramp is expected to be completed by spring 2000.

degrees in comparative literature would still meet in the Becker Communication Studies Building.

"Both departments will be creating new majors, but there is still a lot of anxiety, particularly on the part of the students," said Kathleen Farrell, director of undergraduate studies for the Department of Communication Studies.

One graduate student, Chris Babey, who is also a TA in film studies, said the move will be positive even if it is happening amidst some controversy.

"The move is necessary for the survival of the department, and is positive because it will keep current faculty and gain new faculty," he said. "I certainly feel positive about the move, but others do not. The entire process has caused a lot of conflict, and no one really knows what is going on."

who recently became a communication studies major, said the move is causing a lot of confusion among undergraduates.

"Some of the changes that are taking place I won't have to mess with because I am a declared major and I will be grandfathered out, and hopefully my classes will carry over," he said. "I think they are humoring us and saying it will work just so we don't riot."

A major reason for the move was so the students could benefit from a degree that flowed together intellectually, said Lauren Rabinovitz, professor of American studies.

"The faculty are concerned that the students know their options, and the last thing we want is for the students to feel trapped or caught," she said. "The vibes in the hall probably haven't been the greatest because it is hard to break things up without problems, but I know the graduate students are unanimously excited."

Rabinovitz also said that there have been difficulties in coordinating classes because the faculty of the film and production classes have different ideas and goals than other communication studies faculty.

"There have been some real problems, and we haven't shared the same solutions," she said. "Some people have worse feelings about it than others, but all of the faculty in film studies and production were unanimous in wanting the move."

Rabinovitz maintains that there was no pressure on any of the faculty to move, and that all five members who are moving wanted to. The film studies and production staff regard themselves as a unit, and it is crucial for them to stay together, she said.

"It seemed time to locate those students who wanted to make films," said UI film studies Professor Dudley Andrew. "It will give students more options in how they study cinema, and gain more identity for those students studying film."

division of medicinal and natural products chemistry, so already this has helped someone."

Raising awareness of what different students are researching is the primary goal of the conference, said senate President Kyle Mann. Though many disciplines hold their own research forums, such as the College of Medicine, this is the only UI research event open to all areas of study.

Forum participants who chose a display presentation rather than an oral session stood by their projects to answer questions.

"I was listening to something I have no knowledge about, and it sounded fascinating," said Jacob Odgaard, assistant dean of the College of Engineering.

Though the event drew a diverse group, some presenters felt that certain areas were underrepresented. Of the 35 research presentations at the event, 25 were from the sciences, primarily engineering and chemistry.

Sara Semonis, a graduate student in dance, said she hoped that her presentation would encourage others in her area to present in the future.

"I was the only fine-arts presenter, unfortunately," she said. "I think people have questions about what dancers do and why they come to college to do it."

"I was listening to something I have no knowledge about, and it sounded fascinating."

— Jacob Odgaard, assistant dean, College of Engineering

Approximately 150 attendees saw the presentations. The event was sponsored by UI Student Government, the Graduate College and the Office of the Vice President for Research.

"We'd like to make it an annual event," Mann said. "Based on this year's attendance, it has potential to grow."

with first-degree murder, kidnapping and aggravated robbery in the beating death of Shepard.

The crime led to demands for stronger hate-crime laws around the country.

McKinney will be tried in August on first-degree murder, kidnapping and aggravated robbery charges. He could be sentenced to death.

There had been speculation that if Henderson entered a plea, he would end up testifying against his friend and co-defendant.

"If it's a plea bargain, the defense has to give something to the prosecution, such as his testimony against McKinney," said legal analyst Andrew Cohen. Prosecutor Cal Rerucha opened jury selection by telling the prospective jurors that Shepard was "not the same as you and I" but that every individual should be treated equally under the Constitution.

But Henderson's attorney, Wyatt Skaggs, said his client merely watched while the other man delivered the fatal blows to Shepard. He also said the slaying was not premeditated.

Henderson's girlfriend is awaiting sentencing after pleading guilty on Dec. 23, 1998, to accessory after the fact to murder. McKinney's girlfriend goes on trial in May on an accessory charge.

The case has prompted activists to take action on both sides of the gay rights issue.

Early today, a dozen young people dressed as angels, with white sheets for wings, tried to block from view an anti-gay group demonstrating outside the courthouse.

The angels stood silently, but inside their human wall approximately a dozen anti-gay demonstrators from Kansas shouted slogans and waved signs, including one that said "God Hates Fags."

"These ... creatures are sending this nation to hell in a handbasket," said the Rev. Fred Phelps of Westboro Baptist Church.

Phelps and members of his Westboro Baptist Church also picketed Shepard's funeral in Casper with anti-gay signs.

NATION BRIEFS

Witness: I tried to allay McDougal's fears

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — The final witness in Susan McDougal's trial testified Monday that Kenneth Starr's office, in an effort to get McDougal to talk, offered to let someone else decide whether she should be charged with perjury.

Former Starr prosecutor Ray Jahn said that McDougal was told in 1996 that if there came a point at which there was a question about whether she'd committed perjury, the matter would be turned over to an independent prosecutor.

The offer didn't do any good, Jahn testified in the fifth week of McDougal's criminal contempt and obstruction trial.

McDougal went to jail rather than talk with Starr's investigators, saying she was afraid she'd be charged with perjury unless she told Starr's office a story that implicated the president and first lady in wrongdoing.

Jahn, who won convictions against McDougal, her ex-husband, Jim, and then-Gov. Jim Guy Tucker in a 1996 Whitewater trial, gave a point-by-point rebuttal to McDougal's sworn testimony that prosecutors tried to get her to tell lies about the Clintons.

Closing arguments are set for Wednesday.

Man who spread AIDS virus sentenced

MAYVILLE, N.Y. (AP) — A man accused of infecting at least 13 young women with the AIDS virus through unprotected sex was sentenced Monday to four to 12 years in prison.

Nushawn Williams, 22, struck a plea bargain after only two victims agreed to testify. Some of the other women never came forward.

Investigators said Williams traded drugs for sex with young women and teens he approached in schools and parks.

The case spread fear across rural western New York when it became public in October 1997. State confidentiality laws prevent people who are HIV-positive from being identified. But prosecutors persuaded a judge to disclose Williams' identity and allow for his photo to be distributed.

Williams, who is already serving a prison sentence for selling crack, pleaded guilty to statutory rape for having sex with a 13-year-old girl. He also pleaded guilty to reckless endangerment for having unprotected sex with another teen-ager. She later contracted the AIDS virus.

Williams claimed he didn't believe the public health nurse who told him he was HIV-positive, so he continued having unprotected sex.

"He's not an evil person," defense attorney Richard Slater said. "He's been painted as an evil person. He feels badly that he's ill. He expressed to me the concern he may not live out his sentence."

Belgrade puppets vs. bombs

■ In basement shelters, the witch and the fairy try to shield kids from their fears.

By George Jahn
Associated Press

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — Kids shriek when the witch appears and applaud for the good fairy. In a bomb shelter on the outskirts of Belgrade, parents are glad for the distraction this puppet show provides.

It keeps young ones from asking about the "whistling" noise outside — the sound of air-raid sirens.

Since NATO air strikes on Yugoslavia began two weeks ago, approximately half of Belgrade's 2 million people — especially families with children — usually opt to spend their nights in bomb shelters. The air strikes are almost always between dusk and dawn.

This shelter in the basement of an apartment building on Narodnih Heroja Street — National Heroes' Street — is a white-painted basement used in happier times for classes in modern dance.

The puppet performers, Amela Vucetovic and Zorana Milosakovic, make-up in enthusiasm what they lack in props. Their backdrop is a simple cloth screen. They have only two puppets: the witch and the fairy.

Sometimes they are accompanied by a tape deck, but they sing a cappella when the stereo isn't working. When the women sing and dance, the children join in, waving arms and jumping to their feet atop the benches.

Adults cannot share the light-hearted mood.

"What is being done to us is a great evil — we are innocent victims of a huge injustice," said Ksenia Cvetic, placing brownies on a plate and pouring orangeade for the children before a performance of "Hansel and Gretel in Dreamland."

Like most people in Belgrade, she sees no reason why the sufferings of the southern province of Kosovo should prompt NATO action against Yugoslavia. The alliance says the air strikes are aimed at Yugoslav military targets and meant to halt a campaign of atrocities against the ethnic Albanians.

With their rapt audience looking on, Vucetovic and Milosakovic ask the kids to wish — hard — to transform the "stinky old witch" into a fairy who grants only good wishes. The ending is happy: It works.

What's the moral of the story? "Love conquers all, and all kids should have lots of love for everyone," declares Nikola Kostic, 7, at the end of a rollicking 90 minutes.

Libya hands over Lockerbie suspects

■ The move prompts the United Nations to end seven years of sanctions against Moammar Gadhafi's nation.

By Anthony Deutsch
Associated Press

CAMP ZEIST, Netherlands — The United Nations suspended sanctions against Libya Monday after Moammar Gadhafi surrendered two suspected Libyan intelligence agents for trial in the 1988 bombing of a Pan Am jet.

The handover — hailed by Clinton administration officials as a victory against terrorism — ended seven years of punishing sanctions against Libya and began what could be a lengthy trial process in the Netherlands.

"Now, at last, the road to justice has begun," President Clinton said in a statement.

The two Libyans were being held at this former U.S. air base, awaiting arraignment under Scottish law on charges of planting the suitcase bomb that blew up Flight 103 over Lockerbie, Scotland, killing 270 people, among whom were 189 Americans.

Suspects Abdel Basset Ali al-Megrahi and Lamem Khalifa Fhimah, accompanied by U.N. representative Hans Corell, landed at a military airport Monday near The Hague. They were swiftly extradited to British custody in the Netherlands.

Before leaving the Libyan capital of Tripoli, the suspects said they hoped to return to their families after being found innocent.

Fhimah, 42, flashed the victory sign and told Arab diplomats: "We hope to see you upon our return."

Relatives of the victims killed in the bombing had mixed emotions — elation that the suspects were finally going to be tried, and fear that the trial would never touch Gadhafi, the man they felt was behind the crash.

"If trying these two is the ultimate goal of this trial, then it's a travesty," said George Williams, president of Victims of Pan Am Flight 103, which represents 160 American families who lost relatives aboard the plane.

"We look for the truth wherever it may lead, and we firmly believe that this will go all the way to the top of the Libyan government," he said by telephone from his home in Joppa, Md.

In Britain, Jane Swire, whose daughter Flora was aboard the jumbo jet, told Sky Television: "At least this is a good message for the world — people who are accused of wicked crimes such as this are brought to justice."

Muslim-Christian tensions erupt in Nazareth

■ Violence forces church closings, and Muslims demand the resignation of mayor in a town once known for tolerance.

By Dina Kraft
Associated Press

NAZARETH, Israel — Muslims demanded the resignation of Nazareth's Christian mayor Monday, a day after sectarian clashes in the town of Jesus' boyhood disrupted its long-standing record of religious tolerance.

And in a rare joint statement, the highest representatives of Christian denominations in Israel said they would close churches in Nazareth today and Wednesday to protest attacks against Christians.

"This measure might be repeated, and even extended, should division continue to be provoked among the population of Nazareth by allowing the sentiment of extremists to be aroused and offenses to be committed against Christians," said the statement.

Signed by the patriarchs of Jerusalem and other church leaders, the statement also called on both sides to refrain from further violence and hostility.

Nazareth has long prided itself on its religious tolerance, but growing tensions in recent months between Muslims and Christians exploded on Easter Sunday over plans for a site for pilgrims.

A dozen people were injured, 30 cars were damaged, and 11 people were arrested during the confrontations.

As calls to prayer sounded over mosque loudspeakers, 300 Muslim demonstrators waved green flags of the Islamic movement, vowing to build a large mosque on the site, which they claim as their own.

The government wants to build a plaza for the pilgrims at the site near the Church of the Annunciation, where Roman Catholic tradition says the Angel Gabriel first appeared before Mary, the mother of Jesus, and told her she was pregnant.

Pilgrims who made their way to the church Monday passed through a tense corridor in which Muslims were demonstrating. Some 150 Israeli police stood nearby in riot gear. The downtown area was deserted, as shopkeepers complied with a strike called by the Islamic movement.

Members of the local Christian minority, which once dominated this mostly Arab town of 60,000 in northern Israel, said they are increasingly concerned for their safety.

Ex-Northwestern QB placed on probation

Brian Ballarini told the court the gambling scandal has dragged "my parents' good name through the mud."

By Mike Robinson
Associated Press

CHICAGO — Former Northwestern quarterback Brian Ballarini was placed on probation for three years Monday for his role as a bookie in a sports gambling scandal that swept the campus.

"It hurts me, but it's dragging my parents' good name through the mud," he told the court, stopping twice to compose himself.

He pleaded guilty in August to transmitting gambling information over the telephone in the mid-1990s. Prosecutors said that once he was caught, Ballarini cooperated with their gambling investigation.

They nevertheless recommended one month behind bars plus probation for the 25-year-old former player, saying examples were needed to deter others.

Defense attorney Dan Webb told U.S. District Judge Ann Williams that other students had played more serious roles in the scandal, which reached into the school's football and basketball programs. He said Ballarini had never gambled in his life until he got to Northwestern. Webb blamed the school for letting a serious campus gambling problem fester unchecked.

Webb also noted that Ballarini wore a wire to help prosecutors crack down on Northwestern gambling and had twice appeared before a grand jury.

"He made a serious mistake in judgment, but he deserves one more chance in life," Webb said, urging Williams not to jail Ballarini.

Webb said Ballarini is "financially very astute and would like to get involved in the securities industry or something like that." However, he said his client is broke and having trouble getting a job. He said Ballarini still owes $15,000 from his gambling days.

Williams ordered Ballarini to submit to three months of electronic monitoring and get mental health counseling as part of his probation term.

She also ordered him to continue with his NCAA program to discourage campus gambling and perform 200 hours of community service.

Ballarini has lectured on campuses about the dangers of gambling and had made a videotape for the NCAA anti-gambling program.

Crew-cut rough, Duval hot topics at Augusta

By Doug Ferguson
Associated Press

AUGUSTA, Ga. — Too bad Monday was only a practice round at the Masters. David Duval took the day off.

While most everyone else was getting a look at the new rough and the two new tee boxes at Augusta National, Duval arrived at the clubhouse with little fanfare, seated backward in the back of a golf cart. That seemed only appropriate.

During the first three months of the season, Duval has left everyone in his wake.

"I wish he would play a little less, so maybe I might win one," Justin Leonard said. "What he's done is incredible. If there was somebody whose respect he didn't have before this year, I think he's gained it."

"Duval's latest conquest was Sunday in the BellSouth Classic, where he went from two strokes down to a two-stroke victory over the last four holes in which the full measure of his game was on display — brilliant chipping, solid putting, long drives and remarkable calm.

"He's definitely got something going on in his head that most people don't have," said Mark Calcavecchia. "That could be the peaceful feeling he's talking about, the thing where you hit it, find it and hit it again. He knows he's good enough that he can keep plugging away."

It was his fourth victory this year, and second time he had won back-to-back. No one else has won more than once this year.

Calcavecchia watched it all unfold on the television in Augusta's clubhouse, where he stopped for lunch before playing nine holes in fading sunlight.

"Is he going to win every tournament?" Calcavecchia said. "Four wins in the '90s is good, let alone four wins in 3 1/2 months. That's unbelievable. He's got to be the man to beat. I can't imagine he's going to suffer any kind of let-down."

That proved to be a popular sentiment on Monday. The Duval Express was as hot a topic Monday as the crew-cut rough that frames the fairways and the 17th tee box that has been moved back 25 yards, finally making the best players in the world realize why President Eisenhower wanted to chop down the pine tree that looms over the left side of the fairway.

Winning four tournaments in a year is heady stuff. Since 1980, only Nick Price in 1994 has won more often in a full season. Duval still has about 16 events left this year, including the four majors.

"He's been hotter than a firecracker," said Fuzzy Zoeller. "He has a lot of talent, and it was just a matter of time before it started happening."

With his victory in The Players Championship two weeks ago, Duval rose to No. 1 in the world rankings, ending Tiger Woods' reign at 41 weeks. He still lacks a major championship, and being the heavy favorite at Augusta doesn't always guarantee a green jacket.

SPORTS BRIEFS

Waterloo West star Smith honored by Parade

WATERLOO, Iowa (AP) — Nina Smith of Waterloo West High School has been named national player of the year by Parade magazine.

It is the first time a player from Iowa has earned the award in the 23 years that the magazine has recognized the nation's top girls' players.

"It's something I really wanted to accomplish," said Smith, who will play for Wisconsin next year. "With all the great players in the country, to get a national award like that is really a great honor."

The 6-foot-4 center averaged 26 points, 12 rebounds and four blocked shots this season as she led Waterloo West to the Class 4A championship game, where the Wahawks lost 43-37 to Ankeny.

Smith scored 22 points and 12 rebounds in that contest.

Smith finished her career with 19 school records, including career points (1,994) and rebounds (1,027).

ferences.

Sound familiar?

Once again, the Philadelphia 76ers star and his coach came out of it with nice things to say about each other but gave no indication their rocky relationship will change.

Iverson, still out with a severely bruised thigh, did not practice and is not expected to play tonight against Milwaukee.

Bickerstaff gets the boot

WASHINGTON — Under Bernie Bickerstaff, the Washington Wizards became a tentative, under-achieving team that froze in the fourth quarter, with little hustle for the big rebound or loose ball.

In danger of missing the playoffs for the 10th time in 11 years and struggling at 13-19, the Wizards fired Bickerstaff on Monday and replaced him with assistant Jim Bredwell.

"I felt this team wasn't moving in the direction that we anticipated," said general manager Wes Unseld, whose friendship with Bickerstaff dates to the 1970s. "This is one of the toughest decisions that I've had to make, but it was my feeling that a change was necessary at this time."

Purdue names women's basketball coach

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. — Kristy Sims-Curry already feels some jitters.

An assistant at Louisiana Tech the past three years, Sims-Curry will make her debut next season as the coach of Purdue's defending NCAA women's champion Boilermakers.

"Sure it's a little bit scary," she said Monday. "It's my first head coaching job. But I tell you what, the position we were in at Louisiana Tech, each and every year was a little scary at times because we expected to be the best and expected to be at the top."

Mizzou impresses Snyder

COLUMBIA, Mo. — Duke assistant Quin Snyder says he is impressed with what he has heard about Missouri's program, but won't say much about his meeting last week with Missouri athletic director Mike Alden.

Alden, who is looking for a replacement for Norm Stewart, met with Snyder in Detroit on Friday. Stewart retired Thursday after coaching the Tigers for 32 years.

Hall of Famer Wynn dies

CLEVELAND — Hall of Fame pitcher Early Wynn, a 300-game winner and one of the fiercest competitors of his time, died Sunday in Florida at an assisted living center. He was 79.

He had suffered a heart attack and a stroke in recent years, his daughter, Sherry Van Tilburg of Venice, Fla., told The Plain Dealer. There was no word on when he died.

Wynn pitched from 1939 to 1963, winning 20 games or more for the Cleveland Indians four times and once for the Chicago White Sox in the 1950s.

He was 23-11 in 1954, when the Indians won the American League pennant.

DePaul star Richardson to stay in school

CHICAGO — Quentin Richardson turned to his inner circle for the most important advice of his young basketball career. His family told him they could get by without the big money he might earn in the NBA, and DePaul's freshman star decided to stay in school.

At least for one more year.

"It was basically a decision on whether I needed to be able to take care of my family. I needed them were we hurting that bad? My father, my sister and my step mom all said, 'No, they would be fine, it could wait,'" Richardson said Monday at a news conference.

Vikings agree to terms with George

EDEN PRAIRIE, Minn. — The Minnesota Vikings, who were led to the NFC championship game last season by Randall Cunningham, are taking a chance on another quarterback with something to prove.

The Vikings announced Monday they have reached a contract agreement with Jeff George to serve as Cunningham's backup.

Terms weren't announced, but the Star Tribune of Minneapolis and the Saint Paul Pioneer Press reported George, the starter for Oakland the last two seasons, would get $400,000 under a one-year contract.

Capriati wins in Florida

AMELIA ISLAND, Fla. — Jennifer Capriati defeated Sylvia Plischke 7-5, 6-3 Monday in the first round of the Bausch & Lomb Championships, setting up a possible meeting with one of the game's hottest stars, ninth-seeded Anna Kournikova.

Kournikova, Venus Williams, Lindsay Davenport, Monica Seles and defending champion Mary Pierce were among those who had Monday off.

for security because we didn't want to get kicked out of the tournament. I don't think they arrested him; I think they just booted him off the premises. Iowa traditionally sends a full team to the Midlands, along with members of the Hawkeye Wrestling Club. It is unknown whether any other Hawkeyes were videotaped. "I just couldn't believe it when I first heard about it," former Iowa coach Dan Gable said. "But then, when I thought about it, I realized it was par for the course, especially with the ability to get things out to the public. It's just an easy way to make money." Whether or not any legal action can be taken against those producing the tapes remains unknown. The Tribune reported that the FBI is currently consulting with the U.S. Attorney's office to determine if the incidents are prosecutable. "They're looking into it and they've turned everything over to the FBI, but I don't know what they are going to do with it," said Zalesky, who like the other Hawkeyes involved, has not yet been contacted by the FBI. "It's hard to prosecute these cases because it's so hard to find out where this stuff came from." In addition, the NCAA cannot act on the charges because it doesn't have any set legislation against the filming, but individual civil suits are a possibility. None of the Hawkeyes involved have considered that avenue, though. Since the incident, security has been tightened at the Midlands as well as other major meets to prevent a repeat incident. Despite this, the problem resurfaced this year, when another man was caught with a video camera at the Midlands. The man was escorted out of the building, but returned without his camera after buying a ticket, the Tribune reported. The Midlands tournament isn't the only place where this appears to be happening. Tapes were also found at the University of Memphis, according to the Tribune. "I figure it's something that happens a lot, not just in wrestling, but in a lot of places people don't know about," Zalesky said. "You've just got to be wary of it." At international tournaments, wrestlers are now required to weigh in with their singlets on, and the NCAA may soon follow with similar legislation to prevent similar situations. "Because of this, (the NCAA) will probably have to go to wearing briefs during weigh-ins," Gable said. "That won't affect weigh-ins much — it's only an ounce. I think it's more appropriate anyway. I always felt a little uncomfortable with all those naked guys walking around at weigh-ins." "It was something that nobody really thought about before. Now that it's made the news, maybe there will be a few changes." Brands — like Gable and Zalesky — does not appear to be overly distressed by the incidents in 1995. Still, he wishes they could have been avoided. "I don't appreciate people filming me when I'm naked, especially some perv," Brands said. DI sports writer Tony Wirt can be reached at awirt@blue.weeg.uiowa.edu ranking UI officials all say they found replacements of exceptional quality. Their financial packages reflect that, if nothing else. Show me the money Ferentz will earn a base salary of $180,000, compared to the $172,741 Fry made in his final season. Meanwhile, Alford has a base salary of $150,000, about $10,000 more than Davis earned in his final season. Moreover, Ferentz's assistant coaches collectively will earn 12 percent more than Fry's final staff. The head coaches' big money comes from other non-university sources, though. TV, radio, camp and shoe deals will net Ferentz and Alford a lot more cash. For instance, in FY1998, Davis earned $45,000 from his summer camps, $45,000 from his radio show, $75,000 from his TV show and $120,000 from his contract with Nike. Fry earned $85,000 from his TV show, $65,000 from his radio show and $50,000 from Reebok. He reported no earnings from his camps. If Ferentz and Alford reach certain academic and athletic goals (such as winning a Big Ten title, an NCAA title, etc.), the numbers could become staggering. "We will sit down and try to determine what are achievable incentives," Bowsby said. "Some perhaps of a little higher level of aspiration, then perhaps some pie-in-the-sky' aspirations, too. "I think that's what a good incentive package ought to do." A Rose Bowl berth for Ferentz or a Final Four appearance by Alford, coupled with exceptional graduation rates, could raise their total packages to the $800,000-$900,000 range. However, Rhodes projects Alford's final cut to be around $600,000 per year, and the same could probably be said about Ferentz. In addition, Bowsby received a substantial pay increase last summer. He now makes about $300,000 annually after the UI countered an offer made by Duke University last spring. "We really wanted to keep him," Rhodes said. "I really feel he is the best athletics director in the country." Bowsby has faced an incredible amount of criticism in recent months, first for failing to lure UI alum Bob Stoops to coach football for the Hawkeyes, then for the way he handled Davis' final season as basketball coach. Since Alford's hiring, however, the cheap shots have become fewer in number. "I don't think there should be accusations of bad faith," Rhodes said. "Nobody's trying to sabotage the athletics department." The criticism Bowsby endured was accompanied by speculation that some donors would stop contributing. According to Rhodes and UI Foundation official Mark Jennings, that hasn't happened. Finding additional revenues remains a problem that needs to be solved. The UI has taken steps to remedy the situation, and Rhodes and Jennings feel the school is on the right track. Digging for gold The athletics department has many areas from which it draws revenue. Ticket sales, television and radio contracts, donations and Big Ten conference revenue-sharing deals all help to cover expenses. The UI recently decided to increase ticket prices for football and men's basketball by $2. Admission to Kinnick Stadium will now cost $28, while games at Carver-Hawkeye Arena will carry a $19 price tag. But gate revenues are only part of the picture. Two years ago, the UI sold exclusive radio rights to Learfield Communications, which resulted in more money for the university. Also, TV deals continue to become more lucrative. CBS pays hundreds of millions of dollars for NCAA basketball tournament rights, and ABC does the same for the Bowl Championship Series. Moreover, the UI will benefit from the success of Big Ten schools in football and men's basketball. The conference divides up the riches derived from bowl game berths and NCAA tournament bids. To say the least, this has been a good year for the Big Ten in both sports. Finally, the UI Foundation continues to solicit donations from faithful Hawkeye fans. Jennings said donations are up this year, despite talk that they would decrease.

Outside sources supplement coaches' base salaries

COACHING SALARIES

"A lot of the people doing the grumbling were not particularly our supporters," Jennings said. "They may be fans, but not supporters financially." Jennings said the I-Club, the athletics wing of the UI Foundation, brings in about $6,000,000 per year. That amount has risen dramatically in the last 20 years. Before Fry came in 1978, annual donations were approximately $500,000. Jennings and three other full-time employees (Andy Piro, Matt Henderson and Jana Egeland) raise money for the athletics department. Egeland focuses on women's sports. Most of the grand total comes from individual donors, rather than from corporations. "Our contributors are very faithful and very loyal," Rhodes said. Jennings said the I-Club does not feel more pressure to raise money due to the rising salaries. He noted that the base salaries of the coaches have not gone up that much, and most of the big money comes from other sources. "It doesn't affect our jobs in any way," he said. And if the new coaches earn the extra incentive dollars, Jennings said the UI will have the money. Everybody likes to support a winner. "I guarantee you, if we go to the Rose Bowl or win the NCAA title, we won't have to worry about paying those guys, because the extra money will come." Moehler comes within eight outs of a no-hitter in 1999 I am more ready because a lot of people are expecting me and Mark to come back and do the same way," Sosa said after a workout. "I have to say that he's ready and I'm ready." Belle was ready, too. Playing his first game for the Orioles, the star who figures to challenge for the home-run lead this year in cozy Camden Yards hit a three-run homer that highlighted a 10-7 win over Tampa Bay. Belle's teammates and the crowd of 46,733 gave him a standing ovation, and the surly slugger responded with a rare curtain call. Belle also had an RBI single, more than enough to offset Canseco's 398th lifetime homer. The Orioles won despite losing Ripken, who left in the third inning because of a stiff lower back. Ripken, who voluntarily ended his record streak of 2,632 straight games last year, was listed as day-to-day. Before the game, the Orioles unveiled a large, orange "7" in the third-base coaching box to honor Cal Ripken Sr., who died March 24 of lung cancer at 63. Cal Jr. did not get any hits, leaving him 122 short of 3,000. But Wade Boggs singled twice for the Devil Rays, giving him 76 short of the milestone. Mondesi delivered the biggest hits. His three-run homer with two outs in the bottom of the ninth tied it, and his two-run homer in the 11th lifted Los Angeles over

Arizona 8-6. Moehler, meanwhile, was the day's pitching star — rather than Brown or Johnson. There was no evidence that umpires were calling higher strikes, as the commissioner's office ordered them to do. Moehler came within eight outs of joining Bob Feller as the only pitchers to throw no-hitters on opening day as Detroit defeated Texas 11-5. Juan Gonzalez broke up Moehler's bid with a one-out single in the seventh. "Sure, I was thinking about it," Moehler said. His performance was far better than anything from the day's two marquee matchups — Johnson vs. Brown at Dodger Stadium or Curt Schilling vs. Tom Glavine at Turner Field. Brown, baseball's first $100 million man, gave up three home runs for the Dodgers. Johnson, who signed for $52.4 million, was 80-80 for the Diamondbacks. At Atlanta, neither Schilling nor Glavine was especially sharp as Philadelphia beat the Braves 7-4. The Kansas City Royals once again proved that nothing counts until opening day. After posting baseball's best exhibition record at 22-9, they lost 5-3 to Boston. The Florida Marlins, however, got off to a fine start. Worst in the majors last year with 108 losses, they beat the New York Mets 6-2. "We're going to have a lot of fun this year," new Marlins owner John Henry said.

MAJOR LEAGUE BASEBALL ROUNDUP

Mondesi bails out Dodgers

Michael Caulfield/Associated Press Los Angeles' Raul Mondesi celebrates after hitting his game-winning home run in the 11th inning against Arizona on Monday.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Baseball's first $100 million man wasn't worth it in his Los Angeles Dodgers' debut.

Raul Mondesi, fortunately, was right on the money and bailed out Kevin Brown, who flopped in his marquee matchup with Randy Johnson.

Mondesi tied the game with a three-run homer with two outs in the ninth, then hit a two-run homer in the 11th off John Frascatore to give him six RBIs as the Dodgers beat the Arizona Diamondbacks 8-6 in Monday's season opener.

Brown allowed five runs and 10 hits in 5 1/3 innings.

Giants 11, Reds 8 CINCINNATI — Charlie Hayes, who took over at third base when Bill Mueller was hurt, hit a three-run homer in the eighth inning to lead San Francisco.

Cincinnati overcame a four-run deficit with homers by Mike Cameron, Mark Sweeney and Sean Casey, pulling ahead 8-6 with a six-run sixth inning. An error by Hayes helped fuel the comeback.

Phillies 7, Braves 4 ATLANTA — Marlon Anderson drove in three runs to give Curt Schilling and Philadelphia the win.

Schilling allowed five hits and all four runs in six innings, but picked up the win when Anderson came through in the seventh with a two-run single against Tom Glavine, coming off a 20-win season that earned his second Cy Young.

Marlins 6, Mets 2 MIAMI — Alex Fernandez, making his first start since shoulder surgery 18 months ago, outpitched former teammate Al Leiter to lead Florida.

NBA ROUNDUP Reserve forward Roshown McLeod added 13 points and Dikembe Mutombo had 11 points and 14 rebounds as Atlanta won for the eighth time in 10 games.

Magic 106, Celtics 99 ORLANDO, Fla. — Darrell Armstrong matched a career high with 28 points and Penny Hardaway led a decisive 18-4 run for Orlando.

Armstrong, starting for the third straight game in place of the injured Nick Anderson, scored 19 in the second quarter. Hardaway had seven of his 24 in the spurt Orlando put together after falling behind early in the fourth quarter.

Wolves 100, Mavericks 93 MINNEAPOLIS — Despite adding starting point guard Tarell Brandon to a growing injured list, the Minnesota Timberwolves hung on to beat the Dallas Mavericks 100-93 on Monday.

Kevin Garnett and Sam Mitchell scored 18 points each and Tom Hammond added 14. The Wolves ended their six-game homestand with their fifth win.

Pacers 88, Pistons 86 AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Antonio Davis had key plays on both ends of the court in the final two minutes to help the Indiana Pacers pull out a 88-86 victory over Detroit.

Spurs 93, Warriors 86 SAN ANTONIO — Tim Duncan and David Robinson scored 25 points apiece to lead the San Antonio Spurs, who have won 17 of their last 19, to a 93-86 victory over the Golden State Warriors on Monday.

San Antonio also received 13 points from Sean Elliott. Robinson also pulled down 16 rebounds, while Duncan grabbed 11. Golden State was led by John Stark's 18 points, while Chris Mills scored 13 and Antawn Jamison added 11.

NHL ROUNDUP Dafeo gets another shutout

BOSTON (AP) — Byron Dafeo got his second straight shutout and NHL-leading 10th of the season as the Boston Bruins continued rolling toward the playoffs with a 3-0 win over the Montreal Canadiens on Monday night.

Dafeo extended his shutout string to 160 minutes, 11 seconds since allowing a goal with 11 seconds left in the first period of last Thursday's 3-2 win in Montreal. He followed that with a 3-0 win Saturday over Philadelphia, then stopped 25 shots on Monday.

Sabres 3, Penguins 1 BUFFALO, N.Y. — The Buffalo Sabres, struggling to hold on to the No. 7 playoff spot in the Eastern Conference after leading their division late in December, defeated the stumbling Pittsburgh Penguins.

Dixon Ward and Jason Woolley scored and Richard Smelik added an empty-netter with 25 seconds left for Buffalo, which was anchored by goaltender Dominik Hasek's 25 saves.

Senators 4, Lightning 4 TAMPA, Fla. — Magnus Arvedson had a short-handed goal as the Ottawa Senators ended their road unbeaten streak to seven games with a tie against the Tampa Bay Lightning.

The Senators are 5-0-2 in the last seven games away from the Corel Centre. Ottawa is also unbeaten in six games overall (3-0-3) and holds a three-point lead over New Jersey for the best record in the Eastern Conference.

Maple Leafs 2, Blues 2 TORONTO — Mats Sundin and Bryan Berard scored 2-1 apart early in the third period to give the Toronto Maple Leafs a tie with the St. Louis Blues.

St. Louis center Jamal Mayers had the best opportunity to score late in the game and overtime, but was stymied by goalie Curtis Joseph from point-blank range on both occasions.

Rangers 5, Flyers 1 PHILADELPHIA — Chris Tamer scored his first goal in more than two years and Mike Richter stopped 36 shots as the New York Rangers beat the injury-riddled Philadelphia Flyers.

Wayne Gretzky had a pair of assists for the Rangers, who snapped a two-game losing streak to keep their faint playoff hopes alive. With five games to go, the Rangers remained nine points behind Buffalo for the eighth and final playoff spot in the Eastern Conference.

Capitals 3, Panthers 0 SUNRISE, Fla. — In a matchup of two injury-depleted teams clinging to fading playoff hopes, Brian Bellows scored a power-play goal and Olaf Kolzig notched his fourth shutout of the season as the Washington Capitals defeated the Florida Panthers.

Adam Oates had two assists for Washington, while Sergei Gonchar added a goal and an assist in the third period. James Black scored an empty-net goal with 2:05 remaining to secure Washington's second win in its last seven games, both coming against the reeling Panthers, who are 2-8-1 in their last 11 games.

Wings 3, Ducks 2 DETROIT — Detroit extended its winning streak to a season-high seven games and goaltender Bill Ranford remained unbeaten since coming over in a March 23 trade as the Red Wings beat the Anaheim Mighty Ducks.

Nicklas Lidstrom, Brendan Shanahan and Steve Yzerman scored for Detroit. Tomas Sandstrom and Matt Cullen scored for the Mighty Ducks.

Alford's coaching staff complete

Iowa men's basketball coach Steve Alford has named former Northern Iowa player Brian Jones as an administrative assistant.

Jones, a Rock Island, Ill., native, previously served on Alford's staff at Southwest Missouri State. Before SMS, Jones was an assistant at Nebraska-Omaha.

The 27-year-old Jones played professionally in Australia and Portugal following his college career. He joins a staff that includes assistants coaches Sam Alford, Rich Walker and Greg Lansing.

Tennis team to host Cyclones today

The Iowa women's tennis team has added a match to its schedule. The Hawkeyes will host Iowa State today at 3:30 p.m. at the Rec Building.

The team wanted to get some competition before hosting Wisconsin and Minnesota this weekend.

"It'll be good for us to play to get ready for the weekend," senior Erin Wolverton said. "We haven't played in a week."

Iowa plays the Badgers on Friday at 2 p.m., then faces off with the Gophers on Saturday at 10 a.m.

Wrestlers aware of videos in locker rooms

■ Jim Zalesky and Daryl Weber were two of the wrestlers videotaped naked at the 1995 Midlands Open.

By Tony Wirt
The Daily Iowan

Iowa head wrestling coach Jim Zalesky and strength coach Daryl Weber were among the wrestlers videotaped by a hidden camera in locker rooms at the 1995 Midlands Open in Evanston, Ill.

The footage is being marketed over the Internet and by mail as part of "hidden camera" pornographic material. A report in Sunday's Chicago Tribune said the FBI is investigating whether the tapes violate privacy, eavesdropping or interstate pornographic distribution laws.

Zalesky said Monday he saw some of the footage a couple years ago. At the time, Zalesky was competing for the Hawkeye Wrestling Club, and was shown in the locker room nude.

"I'm used to getting naked in front of a bunch of guys, so it doesn't really bother me one way or another," Zalesky said.

Current assistant coach Terry Brands attended the 1995 Midlands, and he and Weber discovered a man taping in the weigh-in area before turning him over to security.

"We saw a guy holding a black camera bag with a hole cut out of it," Brands said. "He was directing the camera at Weber and some other guys, so we got a little hostile with him and called the security guard. They ran him out of there, and I don't know what happened after that."

"We just held him there and called

Alford amazes coach with first recruit

By James Kramer
The Daily Iowan

Steve Alford has landed his first recruit as Iowa's men's basketball coach, and it appears to be a good one.

Rob Griffin, a 6-foot-6, 220-pound forward from Southeastern Community College in Burlington, Iowa, has chosen Iowa over Auburn, Missouri and Michigan State.

Griffin averaged 22.2 points per game for the Blackhawks, who lost to eventual national champion Indian Hills (Iowa) in postseason regional play. His scoring average ranked eighth among Division I junior college players.

Griffin is listed as a forward, but Alford may choose to use him on the perimeter. Iowa could use some help at the shooting-guard position, and Griffin netted 76 3-pointers in 32 games last season.

SCC coach Joe O'Brien was out of town, and Griffin could not be reached for comment. But Indian Hills coach Mike Capaccio said

Griffin is an exceptional recruit, especially considering the short amount of time Alford had to spend with him.

"He's tough," Capaccio said. "You guys will love him up there. That amazes me how (Alford and his staff) got that done."

Griffin, a native of Detroit, is expected to sign a national letter of intent Wednesday, the first day of the late signing period. The final day to sign letters of intent is May 15.

Alford has at least two more scholarships to work with, and possibly more if any current players leave the team or are not retained by Alford. Division I teams can give out a total of 13 scholarships.

Alford traveled to Indian Hills last week to speak with 6-7 forward Shon Coleman, but Capaccio said Coleman is probably leaning toward "schools out East." They include South Carolina and Massachusetts.

"It's been hard for Iowa, with Alford coming in late," Capaccio said.

Kentucky coach Tubby Smith paid Coleman a visit Sunday, which "threw the young man's mind in a twist," Capaccio said. Coleman, a North Carolina native, averaged 15.6 ppg last season.

The Hawkeyes also could use another big man or two to help Jacob Jaacks and Guy Rucker. Rucker's future is uncertain, however. He needs to complete his undergraduate degree this summer to be eligible next season.

MAJOR LEAGUE BASEBALL

Season starts with a bang

■ A number of home runs, Cal Ripken's injury and a near no-hitter by Brian Moehler highlighted Monday's openers.

By Ben Walker
Associated Press

Right off the bat, Mark McGwire and baseball showed signs that 1999 might be a repeat of a most remarkable season.

McGwire hit home run No. 1 on opening day, just like he did last year on his way to a record-breaking 70. Big Mac thrilled a sellout crowd at Busch Stadium — and no doubt, a whole nation looking on — when he connected Monday night in the fifth inning for the St. Louis Cardinals against Milwaukee.

About a half-hour later, Ken Griffey Jr. also went deep. He did it for the Seattle Mariners in front of the career home run king, Hank Aaron, who threw out the first ball at the Kingdome.

Yet even before McGwire and Griffey homered, fans had plenty to marvel about.

Cal Ripken, of all people, hurt himself and had to leave the game. Kevin Brown, the $105 million man, was knocked out in his matchup with Randy Johnson. Detroit's Brian Moehler took a no-hit bid into the seventh inning.

And, just like last year, there were home runs. Lots of them.

Albert Belle broke loose for Baltimore. Raul Mondesi went wild for Los Angeles. Jose Canseco connected for Tampa Bay. Bernard Gilkey hit two off Brown. Juan Encarnacion wasted no time — he homered for the Tigers on the first pitch of the afternoon at Texas.

After an opening day appetizer Sunday night in Mexico between Colorado and San Diego, baseball began in earnest Monday with 11 more openers.

"I call this my holy day," Orioles fan Robin Steel said at Camden Yards. "That's what it is for those of us who worship in the church of baseball."

The morning began with the traditional opening-day parade in Cincinnati. Later, ailing Andres Galarraga threw out the first ball at Atlanta, via TV hook-up from his home. At night, Roger Clemens made his debut for the World Series champion New York Yankees at Oakland.

Sammy Sosa, who hit 66 last year, and the Chicago Cubs open Tuesday night at Houston.

"Last year I was ready, but I think

Rising salaries don't concern UI athletics department

■ UI officials say they are prepared to meet the growing budget demands of the athletics department.

By James Kramer
The Daily Iowan

Believe it or not, UI athletics officials say they're not overly concerned by the rising costs of running the department.

This might come as a surprise to those who saw Iowa men's athletics director Bob Bowlsby earn a substantial pay increase last summer, then watched as football coach Kirk Ferentz and basketball coach Steve Alford received potentially enormous financial packages.

Still, the officials say, the escalating salary levels are to be expected. Schools have to up the ante in order to keep up with the Joneses, so to speak.

"It's not uncommon for someone new to get more money (than his or her predecessor)," UI Vice President of University Relations Ann Rhodes said.

"It's not necessarily fair, but I knew recent hires around the country were exceeding what we were paying."

The UI is unique in that it was forced to hire new coaches in the two highest-profile sports — football and men's basketball. When Hayden Fry left after 20 years as football coach, the school had to increase the pay level for that position to attract quality candidates.

Similarly, when Tom Davis was forced out after 13 years as men's basketball coach, the UI had to readjust that position's financial package.

"We knew there would be changes," Rhodes said. "They weren't unplanned, and we knew the market
