Two Writers' Workshop grads win Pulitzers

The awards, won by John Strand and Michael Cunningham, add to the Workshop's luster.

By Zack Kucharski
 The Daily Iowan

Two graduates of the UI Writers' Workshop were awarded Pulitzer Prizes Monday for their works in poetry and fiction.

John Strand, a 1962 graduate and a former UI faculty member, was honored for his most recent volume of poetry, "Blizzard of One."

Michael Cunningham, a 1980 graduate, won for his novel, "The Hours." The novel draws on the life and work of Virginia Woolf to tell the story of a group of contemporary characters who struggle with the conflicting claims of love and inheritance, hope and despair.

John Leggett, who headed the workshop when Cunningham was a student, was somewhat surprised to learn about Cunningham's win.

"He was unusually successful for a student when I met him," said Leggett, a director of the workshop for 18 years. "He has always been very talented and articulate. I knew that he was really becoming famous in the literary world, but the thought (about him winning the Pulitzer) never crossed my mind."

Leggett now lives in California and hosts an annual writers' conference in Napa Valley, which attracts many prominent writers, including Cunningham.

"(Cunningham) is very flamboyant and extremely energetic. He is not only an excellent author but also a teacher," he said. "People listen and learn from what he says."

Strand's winning work was the ninth book of poetry in his lengthy career, which includes serving as the U.S. poet laureate in 1990. He currently teaches in the Committee on Social Thought at the University of Chicago.

Serb passenger train bombed - 10 killed

In the face of the continuing air war, Yugoslavia seeks an alliance with Russia.

By George Jahn
 Associated Press

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — A wave of NATO attacks late Monday targeted Yugoslav fuel depots and heavy industry, and an allied hit was blamed for turning a Yugoslav passenger train into a heap of burning wreckage. Serb officials said at least 10 people aboard the train were killed and 16 injured. Even as the alliance expressed regret over loss of civilian life, NATO foreign ministers — meeting for the first time since the nearly three-week-long air campaign began — vowed to press ahead, saying the Kosovo crisis "represents a fundamental challenge to the values of democracy, human rights and the rule of law."

Delta Tau Delta alums rally around the house

After the fraternity's fall from grace, UI alumni hope to revive the chapter's reputation.

By Quinn O'Keefe
 The Daily Iowan

UI Delta Tau Delta alumni from across the nation are calling Iowa City for information about the defunct local chapter in which they used to live, and many hope to revive its reputation and campus presence.

Mike Manfull, former chapter adviser, said he has been receiving phone calls from alumni concerned about the status and future of the chapter.

"It is almost if it were a week before your 20th high school reunion, and you receive a letter that your high school has burnt down — you would want to know what happened and what you could do to help," he said.

Manfull graduated from the UI in 1983; he became active with the fraternity again in August 1998, when he moved back to Iowa City. He said he understands why other alumni would want to help the chapter get reinstated.

"It is self-evident why I and other alumni would want to help the chapter, especially now," he said. "I got a lot out of being a Delt member, and I think it was an important enough part of my life to become

The TAX MAN cometh

The deadline looms for those who have procrastinated on their tax returns.

By Crissy McMartin
 The Daily Iowan

With only two days remaining until the nation's most dreaded deadline, local organizations said they are wrapping up the tax season by helping procrastinators get their taxes done by April 15.

Diana Lewis, district manager at H&R Block, 1745 Boyrum St., said this week is among the firm's busiest.

"People put it off, because they've got this deadline mentality," Lewis said. "Obviously, anyone who has a balance due doesn't like to pay it until the last minute."

For those who have yet to file, Lewis recommends filing electronically, which can be done on a computer through an online filing com-

Totally nude jogger streaks through Greek Sing ceremony

A streaker flashes hundreds on the Pentacrest and is pulled over by police minutes later.

By Crissy McMartin
 The Daily Iowan

Opening festivities for Greek Week were interrupted Monday evening when a streaker sprinted across the Pentacrest amid cheers during the Greek Sing ceremony.

Witnesses said the streaker emerged from Macbride Hall wearing only a white T-shirt on his head and crossed in front of the crowd to an awaiting green pickup truck on Iowa Ave.

UI sophomore Matt Bara, a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon who said he was the getaway driver and co-planner of the streak, would not identify the streaker but divulged several behind-the-scenes details.

"He hid in Macbride Hall, where he took off all his clothes," Bara said. "He came out, circled around a few times so everyone could see him, ran to the truck, and jumped in. We got about 20 feet before I ran through a red light and got pulled over."

UI Public Safety Lt. Lucy Wiederholt said a Public Safety officer who happened to be on the scene stopped the vehicle for making an improper turn. Bara was issued a verbal warning, but the streaker was not charged.

"Technically, streaking does not fit the state code for indecent exposure,"

Wiederholt said. "If he had been intoxicated, perhaps he could have been charged."

The Iowa state Code for Indecent Exposure states that people who expose their genitalia must do so to sexually arouse themselves and with the knowledge that the act is offensive to the viewer.

Bara said he was surprised and happy that he and his friend got off so easily.

"The officer was laughing when he pulled me over — my friend still had his pants around his legs when he came up to the window," Bara said. "My previous encounters with law

Clinton backs air war

BARKSDALE AIR FORCE BASE, La. — Despite growing support in Congress for using ground troops, President Clinton expressed resolve Monday to win the air war against Yugoslavia and said President Slobodan Milosevic "should be under no illusions that we will end it with weariness."

DEEP THOUGHTS BY ADAM SANDLER

• As we were driving, we saw a sign that said, "Watch for Rocks." Martha said it should read "Watch for Pretty Rocks." I told her she should write in her suggestion to the highway department, but she started saying it was a joke — just to get out of writing a simple letter! And I thought I was lazy!

• Anytime I see something screech across a room and latch onto someone's neck, and the guy screams and tries to get it off, I have to laugh, because what is that thing?

Duluth lukewarm to Dylan show

DULUTH, Minn. (AP) — Tickets to Bob Dylan's upcoming concert in the city where he was born aren't exactly moving like a rolling stone.

Last October's concert by the 1960s folk-rock poet at the Duluth Entertainment Convention Center arena was his first major gig ever in his hometown. Fans snapped up tickets in less than five hours.

This time, promoters put 25,000 tickets for Dylan's July 3 concert with Paul Simon on sale at 9 a.m. Saturday, and sold 5,000 in the first 25 minutes. But a half-hour later, the arena's lobby was nearly empty.

La James students interpret art into avant-garde

Kathleen Edwards, UI Museum of Art curator of Prints, Drawings and Photographs, was surprised and delighted when she found a display of mannequin heads dressed in elaborately styled wigs arranged in a semi-circle on the museum floor.

The display was the result of a La James College of Hairstyling course, "Interpretation of Art into Hair." The course, which is part of La James' advanced design curriculum, required its students to go to the UI Museum of Art, find a piece of artwork that moved them, and, after studying the artwork for its symmetry and color texture, interpret it into a hairstyle.

Irish leader Hume cancels UI talk

Peace talks force Nobel Peace Laureate John Hume to cancel a lecture at the UI.

By Steven Cook
The Daily Iowan

Delicate Northern Ireland peace negotiations have pulled Nobel Peace Laureate John Hume back to Ulster, forcing him to cancel his lecture at the UI, organizers announced Monday.

Hume is expected to reschedule his visit for either this fall or next spring, said Burns Weston, principal organizer of the "Global Focus: Human Rights '98" lecture series. His lecture, "Peace in Justice in Northern Ireland," had been scheduled for Friday at 8 p.m. in the Union.

Last year's Nobel Peace Prize was split by Hume, the leader of the predominantly Catholic Social Democratic Labour Party, and David Trimble, leader of the Protestant Ulster Unionists. The prize recognized their work in brokering the 1998 Good Friday Accords.

The accords included provisions on creating a new Protestant-Catholic government for Northern Ireland; that government has yet to be formed.

Forming the new government has pulled Hume back to Northern Ireland, UI political science Professor Gerhard Loewenberg said.

"This is not a good moment for John Hume to come and talk," he said. "They're in the middle of some very delicate negotiations to keep the peace process going."

One of Loewenberg's former Ph.D. students at the UI, Marjorie "Mo" Mowlam, is Britain's secretary of State for Northern Ireland; she spoke at the UI last fall.

The accords called for disarming the Catholics and Protestants and building the new government, Loewenberg said. However, they do not say which comes first. Irish Protestants want the Catholic IRA to disarm before joining the new government.

The new negotiations and the delay in Hume's visit are not surprising, Loewenberg said; the further negotiations have been pending for some time.

This was Hume's second scheduled trip to lecture at the UI; his first was canceled due to Nobel demands.

If Hume does return, Loewenberg said, he'll come with more inside information on the peace process.

"He'll be an excellent speaker at the end of the process, not in the middle of the process," he said.

Hume would have been the fourth Nobel Peace Prize winner to speak as part of the UI's "Global Focus" lecture series this year. Elie Wiesel, the 1986 recipient, and 1992 winner Rigoberta Menchú Tum both spoke at the UI last fall; 1996 recipient Jose Ramos-Horta spoke last week.

Man sues for alleged botched surgery

A Solon man filed a suit Monday against Mercy Medical Center and two other local clinics in connection with nasal surgery he underwent in 1997.

Francis L. Christman named Mercy, Otological Medical Services, Town Square E-N-T Services of Coralville and one of its physicians, Douglas E. Dawson, in his suit.

The suit alleges that Dawson performed two nasal operations on Christman between May and June 1997 to relieve headaches and a nasal drip.

Christman alleges that he was examined in October 1998 by Mayo Clinic physician David Sherris because his symptoms had worsened. Sherris told Christman that errors had been made in his care by Dawson, according to court documents.

Christman is asking for monetary compensation for medical expenses, pain and emotional suffering, loss of earning capacity and disfigurement allegedly caused by the surgery.

Christman was unavailable for comment. Mercy officials were not aware of the suit.

Weston: Kosovo is 'tragedy,' not 'crisis'

Nearly 100 people showed up Monday for a presentation on the "crisis" in Kosovo by UI international law Professor Burns Weston in the Levitt Auditorium of the Boyd Law Building.

But "crisis" is not the term that should be used to describe the current situation in Kosovo, Weston said.

"I think it's wrong to describe what's going on as a crisis," he said. "It would be better to describe this as a tragedy."

And, Weston said, the tragedy is the result of one primary cause: Yugoslav President Slobodan Milosevic.

"This is a problem created by a man whose lust for power is greater than his intimidation of military force," Weston said.

Although he has opposed war and the use of force in the conduct of foreign affairs, he said, the turmoil in Kosovo has forced him to reconsider his position.

"I do (support NATO), however, with a very heavy and a very mixed heart," Weston said. "I really shudder at what the world would look like if the United States did not stand up to the likes of Slobodan Milosevic."

Illinois woman sues UIHC for malpractice

An Illinois woman is suing the UI Hospitals and Clinics and three of its physicians for malpractice in treating her for breast cancer, according to court documents filed on April 9.

Beatrice Harvey of Whiteside County, Ill., alleges that UIHC physicians Daniel Berg, Marie Sandoval and Gerald Clamon caused her cancer to return by not continuing to prescribe the preventative drug Tamoxifen.

Harvey underwent surgery in 1988 to remove a cancerous tumor from her breast. In 1993, she came under the care of UIHC, according to court documents.

The suit also alleges that Clamon was openly hostile toward Harvey when she questioned him about a lump in her breast. The suit states that Clamon said "she was crazy, and that she had 'cancer-phobia,' and that she needed the help of a psychiatrist, not an oncologist."

Harvey currently has stage IV breast cancer and is not expected to recover, according to the suit.

UIHC would not comment on the allegations. Harvey was not available for comment.

Ped Mall gets face-lift as city's spring cleaning commences

The cleanup coincides with the Phase II of the city's Downtown Streetscape Plan.

By Rebecca Anderson
The Daily Iowan

Iowa City's downtown began its annual spring cleaning Monday amid a new phase of a massive construction plan.

City employees will work throughout the week on the Spring Cleanup Project to put back the shine on everything from tree grates to flower beds, said Dale Helling, assistant city manager.

"The downtown gets to looking pretty dirty after the winter," Helling said. "We're making a concerted effort to clean the thing up."

In addition, Phase II of the Downtown Streetscape Plan began Monday. City workers finished replacing a water main after working on it for the last few months.

Like the first phase, which took place on Dubuque Street between Washington Street and Blimpie Subs & Salads, 118 S. Dubuque St., the second phase includes the replacement of light fixtures, planters and benches on College Street, said Rob Winstead, the city's senior engineer.

Workers will also begin installing a new downtown fountain, making Phase II the largest of the three-phase plan. The city

"I think the Ped Mall was looking a little ratty. Anything in the right direction, like the construction, is a good move."

— Colleen Coover, a Daydreams employee will also work on the area between the Holiday Inn, 210 S. Dubuque St., and Blimpie.

"We think it will be a nice improvement," Winstead said. "We had a very positive response after construction was completed on Phase I."

The second phase is expected to cost $2.5 million; it will last until October.

Despite the large amount of construction on most of College Street, the Daydreams comic book store, 114 E. College St., said business has been steady.

"I think the Ped Mall was looking a little ratty," said Colleen Coover, a Daydreams employee. "Anything in the right direction, like the construction, is a good move."

Traveling musician Mike Walker said Phase I made people want to "hang out" downtown more often.

"The stone doesn't really absorb the stink and smell from foods and drinks like the wood did," Walker said. "This is a pretty clean area now."

Technographics owner John Gross, who recently moved his store into the space formerly occupied by Moda Americana, 125 S. Dubuque St., said the construction will be a definite improvement.

"We're very excited about it," Gross said. "It's a temporary inconvenience, but it will help downtown when it's over."

The Spring Cleanup Project began last year, when city members decided an April makeover would give the city a jump-start on the cleaning that usually occurs in the summer.

Helling said he hopes community members take note of the city's efforts.

"I hope it inspires people to keep it that way," he said.

Judge slaps Clinton with contempt ruling

The judge in the Paula Jones lawsuit says the president provided false testimony.

By Peggy Harris
Associated Press

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — A federal judge found President Clinton in contempt of court Monday for giving "intentionally false" testimony about his relationship with Monica Lewinsky, imposing a historic judicial rebuke on a chief executive who survived congressional impeachment just two months ago.

Historians said they believed Clinton was the first president to face such a penalty, a lasting stigma that could also force him to pay tens of thousands of dollars more to Paula Jones beyond the $850,000 he paid to settle her sexual harassment claims.

U.S. District Judge Susan Webster Wright imposed a civil rather than a criminal penalty for Clinton's testimony in the Jones case, ordering him to pay Jones "any reasonable expenses including attorneys' fees caused by his willful failure to obey this court's discovery orders."

The judge also ordered the president to pay $1,202 as reimbursement for the judge's travel in the case, and set in motion a legal process that could strip Clinton of his Arkansas law license.

"The record demonstrates by clear and convincing evidence that the president responded to plaintiff's questions by giving false, misleading and evasive answers that were designed to obstruct the judicial process," Wright wrote.

Wright said she would delay enforcement for 30 days to give Clinton an opportunity to ask for a hearing or to appeal. One option is for him to use his legal defense fund, which has raised $4.5 million, to pay the sanction.

John Whitehead, one of Jones' lawyers, said the legal expenses could be "tens of thousands of dollars."

for the award," said Jorie Graham, head of the poetry section of the Writers' Workshop. "In addition to his writing, he is one of the great translators of South American and European poems, and he also helps to discover many young writers."

Strand will be a UI visiting faculty member during the spring 2000 semester. He has given many readings in Iowa City.

He has been the recipient of a great deal of national recognition, including two Fulbright awards and fellowships from the National Endowment for the Arts and the Rockefeller Foundation.

Alice Notley, a 1970 workshop alumna, was also a finalist for the Pulitzer Prize in poetry for "The Descent of Alette." Notley is a radical experimental style poet.

Graduates from the workshop have won four of the last five poetry Pulitzers, including Philip Levine in 1995, Jorie Graham in 1996 and Charles Wright in 1998.

The 1999 Pulitzer prizes bring to 26 the total number of literary Pulitzers won by UI faculty or students.

The current director of the workshop, Frank Conroy, said he is more gratified than surprised at the Pulitzer announcements.

"This year's recipients were here in 1962 and 1980, and this is 1999," he said. "Serious people have tried to get here for a very long time. Iowa has had a long history of attracting serious people who become successful authors, and that history still continues."

Deadline for filing income taxes looms

pany or a tax professional.

"E-filing" is fast and allows a person to automatically subtract any money owed from either a checking or savings account or to pay the amount by credit card.

Another high-tech method of filing is by touch-tone phone, using the TeleFile document sent out in the mail at the beginning of tax season.

UI senior Todd Taber said he plans to use a more old-fashioned approach when sending in his return: the U.S. Postal Service. Taber has been doing his returns himself since he was a freshman and said he plans to get this year's paperwork in the mail sometime today.

"It took me a long time to gather all the forms together," Taber said of his belated start.

Rick Leyendeck, the officer in charge at the Iowa City Post Office, expects many others to be doing the same. To accommodate the rush of last-minute filers, the final pick-up time for mailboxes at the post office will be extended from 5:45 p.m. to midnight Thursday.

"I think people wait to do it as a statement to the IRS," Leyendeck said. "They're going to hold on to that money until the last possible minute."

For students who are concerned about the cost of filing their tax returns but would still like a helping hand, Volunteer Income Tax Assistants is a free service for people who are single and have an annual income of less than $15,000 or are married and make less than $20,000. People who are self-employed or have sold securities are ineligible.

More than 60 student volunteers from the accounting fraternity Beta Alpha Psi participate in the program, which will hold six meetings this week at the Iowa City Public Library and the Coralville Library.

Amy An, the volunteer program's faculty adviser, said most of its clients are international students and Iowa City residents. Conspicuously absent are students, An said, because the majority of students have their parents do their taxes.

An said she didn't expect a big rush during the final week of tax season.

"People are learning that you don't leave things until the last minute," she said. "I came in during the last week last year and the students were just sitting around. That's the way it should be."

If the deadline is missed, the IRS charges a monthly penalty of 5 percent of the total money owed, up to 25 percent.

If no money is owed, there is no penalty but the IRS will hold on to the refund.

Though it's still not too late to file for a four-month extension, An warns that any money owed is still due by April 15.

"The hardest part is coming in and facing it," Lewis said. "Usually, (people) feel better once they're done."

Though he waited until the last week to file, Taber said April 15 is not a stressful date for him. "My birthday is on tax day, so I never forget," he said.

Alumni hope to help chapter recover involved, even now after all these years."

Bill Kusy, a Delta Tau Delta alumnus who graduated from the UI in 1984, said that, though he regrets its happening, the fraternity's international office must have had a good reason for removing the charter. Kusy has not been very active with the chapter since he graduated, but, he said, now is a good time to get involved.

"In the long run, I think that this is something that will be beneficial to the chapter as a whole," he said. "In any way, shape or form, I will be willing to help the chapter get back on its feet."

Other alumni agree that reinstating the chapter has become a personal priority.

Tom Cunningham, a 1983 UI graduate and Delta Tau Delta alumnus, said he is taking action by recruiting other alumni in efforts to prevent the international office from selling the chapter house.

By keeping the house under fraternity ownership, the chapter will have a better chance of being reinstated sooner, he said.

"I'm in the process of trying to recruit a number of alumni to form a functioning house corporation to ensure keeping the property for the chapter," he said. "Keeping the house is a great concern, and we have to look critically at what can be done and who has the time and resources to do it."

Kevin Sentry, who was chapter president in 1981, agreed that keeping the house is an important part of keeping the fraternity alive. He said it will be strange if he returns to Iowa City to see the house he lived in no longer the Delta Tau Delta house.

"It is a great interest of ours to keep the legacy of our house on campus alive," said Sentry. "Will we be able to stay involved as long as we would like to? Probably not. But I feel motivated because I have a nephew who will attend the UI in the fall, and he won't know what it is like to be a Delt."

ing another night of air strikes. A few hours later, Yugoslav anti-aircraft defense systems fired at NATO planes flying over Belgrade, state news reported.

Detonations were heard at an oil refinery in Pancevo, just across the Danube River from Belgrade. NATO bombed the same refinery Sunday.

Near Kosovo's provincial capital, Pristina, the local crisis center said six NATO missiles hit an oil depot and a plastics factory early today, the state-run news agency Tanjug reported. More than 15 missiles rained down on the capital, it said.

Fire lit the night sky in Smederevoan late Monday, after NATO missiles targeted the region, Tanjug said. An oil depot outside Sombor and Ladjevci airport was also attacked, local media reported. NATO bombs also hit a military barracks in a Belgrade suburb, Studio B radio reported.

No further information was immediately available.

Yugoslavia's Parliament voted Monday to join an alliance with Russia and Belarus — an apparent move to try to draw Russia into the conflict, although Russia has said it will not get involved militarily.

Russia favors incorporating Yugoslavia into an alliance that already includes it and Belarus, but officials said the membership wouldn't be instantaneous and military aid wouldn't be automatically granted.

NEW YORK — The Associated Press, the New York Times and the Wall Street Journal each won two Pulitzers Monday, and the Washington Post was awarded the 1999 prize for public service.

The AP won the two photography awards, the first time staff members of the same organization have swept the photo categories. In 1974, the AP won both photo Pulitzers, one for a picture by a staff member and the other by a free-lancer whose work the AP distributed.

The prize for commentary went to Maureen Dowd of the Times for columns on President Clinton's affair with Monica Lewinsky. The Times staff, notably Jeff Gerth, won for national reporting for a series that disclosed the sale of American technology to China despite national security risks.

To paraphrase Monica Lewinsky's favorite poet, T.S. Eliot, April is the coolest month," Dowd said. "My reaction is I'm just so grateful to President Clinton that he never spoke the words, 'Young lady, pull down that jacket and get back to the typing pool.'"

"I couldn't be more thrilled. It was a team effort in covering the meltdown in Russia, of which I was a small part."

The Wall Street Journal won for international reporting for coverage of the Russian financial crisis. The Journal's Angelo Henderson won the feature writing category for his portrait of a druggist driven to violence by his encounters with armed robbers.

"I couldn't be more thrilled," said Bob Davis, a member of the Journal's international reporting team. "It was a team effort in covering the meltdown in Russia, of which I was a small part."

The AP won the spot news photography award for a portfolio on the embassy bombings in Kenya and Tanzania. It won for feature photography for a collection of photographs of the events surrounding Clinton's affair with Lewinsky and his impeachment. The AP has won nine Pulitzers in the past nine years, including eight for photography.

"We couldn't be happier or more proud," said Louis D. Boccardi, AP president and chief executive officer.

"It's overwhelming. It's just a tremendous tribute to the staff," said Vin Alabiso, AP vice president and executive photo editor. "We are definitely getting out the champagne!"

The Post won the public service award for a series on reckless gunplay by city police officers.

The prize for explanatory reporting went to Richard Read of the Oregonian of Portland for showing the impact of the Asian economic crisis on a local French fries exporter. When word reached the Oregonian newsroom that business reporter Richard Read had won for the four-part series titled "The French Fry Connection," a brass band played and the 350 staffers washed down hundreds of orders of McDonald's fries with champagne.

"It's a riot in here right now," Executive Editor Peter Bhatia said.

The prize for criticism went to Blair Kamin of the Chicago Tribune for his coverage of architecture, including a series on the development of Chicago's lakefront. His work originally was entered in that category but was moved by jurors to beat reporting and then moved back to criticism by the Pulitzer board.

Coleman remains upbeat on alcohol, Greek issues

With Mary Sue Coleman

The UI president discusses alcohol violations and issues facing faculty.

By Carrie Johnston
The Daily Iowan

DI: What do you think about the national chapter of Delta Tau Delta pulling its charter from the UI?

Coleman: Well, I'm really sad about it. I think that this local group has really put a black mark on fraternities, and it hasn't been good publicity for this university. I am sad that people don't take more responsibility for their personal behavior.

DI: Do you think Delta Tau Delta's actions represent how well the Greek system is sticking to its self-imposed "dry" proclamation? Do you see a trend starting?

Coleman: I hope not. I have been very impressed over the last year with the leadership of the Interfraternity Council. I think people are working very hard. I know there is some disagreement within the ranks; I think they've been pretty courageous to try to stand up for what they think is right. And I hope they'll continue, because I think they are on the right path.

DI: Recently members of the UI women's gymnastics team were banned from competing because of a team alcohol violation. Do you feel Coach Diane DeMarco handled the situation correctly?

Coleman: On one hand, I would like to believe that, when people decide to follow a certain code, they'll do it. On the other hand, this was not the situation. In the end, everything that I heard about it — though I was never involved — was that people were able to talk about the issues, and I am glad that that happened.

DI: Is this a fair representation of the alcohol policy of the entire UI Athletics Department, or is it different from team to team?

Coleman: I think each team establishes its own policies. What this may have stimulated, though, is the notion that everyone needs to get together and talk about it and see what we can do to highlight the dangers of alcohol and also making rules that people can live with. If nothing else, I hope we learned from this experience.

DI: What was your reaction to a recent Faculty Senate Ad Hoc Committee report that described a large increase in the gap between faculty and administration salaries and raises?

Coleman: My contention is that we both have the same salary pool and we both obey the rules; I think we've done that very well. The peer data show that the administrators' salaries that were reported to the committee are at the bottom of the Big Ten. I have to worry about competitive pressures just as the faculty do. So I am going to adhere to the salary policy that is set by the regents.

DI: Questions were raised after Professor Jay Holstein was pulled off the popular Judeo-Christian Tradition course. Although it was a departmental decision, could you briefly explain why you think this happened?

Coleman: I don't know the reasons per se; departments decide how they are going to assign teaching duties.

... I have a lot of respect for people in that department, and I think that they do a good job and that a lot of faculty do a good job. This issue will be resolved, I am sure.

DI: Could you describe the letter you sent him and then the letter you received in response, to clear up any misunderstandings?

Coleman: The only letter that I sent him that I could find was a letter thanking him for being on our Speakers Bureau. I sent everybody a letter. That's all I have to say about that. He's a good teacher. I don't know that he sent me a letter back in response to the Speakers Bureau note. The president of the university doesn't get involved with assigning faculty to their positions; that's not what I do. And I shouldn't do it.

McDougal beats Starr charges

Whitewater figure Susan McDougal was acquitted on one count, and a mistrial was declared on two other charges.

By Peggy Harris
Associated Press

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — Susan McDougal thwarted Kenneth Starr once again Monday, as a jury acquitted her of obstructing the independent counsel's Whitewater inquiry and deadlocked on two other charges, causing a mistrial.

"I'm still a little numb," a jubilant McDougal said outside the courthouse. "I've been indicted since 1993, and this is the first day I haven't been indicted in years."

President Clinton was "pleased to learn" that his former Whitewater business partner was acquitted of obstruction of justice, said White House Press Secretary Joe Lockhart. "He wishes all the best for her and her family."

McDougal's legal troubles may not be over, however. Prosecutor Mark Barrett said Starr anticipated making a decision this week on whether to seek a retrial of the two criminal-contempt charges stemming from her refusal to answer grand-jury questions in 1996 and 1998.

"This is a notorious case of someone basically being warned time and again and simply not answering questions," said Barrett. "I make no apologies for bringing this case."

The jury deadlocked 7-5 in favor of acquittal on the contempt counts. Barrett said prosecutors would ask the court for permission to interview jurors about their reasoning. One juror told reporters that McDougal's state of mind — she said she feared prosecutors — was the key to the case.

The five-week trial featured an unusual lineup of witnesses: three grand jurors, three Whitewater prosecutors, another woman charged with obstructing Starr's investigation and videotaped testimony from Hillary Rodham Clinton.

McDougal took the witness stand in her own defense, answering some of the same questions she refused to address in front of the grand jurors.

McDougal's lawyers attempted to put Starr's tactics on trial, arguing that her refusal to give grand-jury testimony was based on justifiable fear that she would be charged with perjury unless she falsely implicated the president and first lady in wrongdoing.

McDougal said her defense attorneys proved that Starr "was not seeking the truth."

Mondo's fire probe stalled by unsafe wall

Investigators' work has stalled.

By John G. Russell
The Daily Iowan

Before investigators can determine the cause of the March 26 fire at Mondo's Sports Cafe, the south wall of the Savings and Loan Building must be torn down and rebuilt.

The building, 103 E. College St., was declared to be structurally unstable by the City of Iowa City after its south wall was damaged in the fire. Both the building and the former site of Mondo's, 212 S. Clinton St., have been barricaded since the fire.

McComas-Lacina Construction, 1310 Highland Court, plans to tear down the wall later this week in an effort to make the fire scene safe for investigators.

"It's just not a safe area to be until they can get someone in there to secure that wall," Fire Marshal Roger Jensen said.

The construction company first plans to remove the top half of the wall, which will make the area safe for investigators to enter. The basement, where the fire is believed to have started, is the area to be searched; it should be secure by the end of next week, said Mike Hahn, a project manager for McComas-Lacina.

Jensen said that, once fire investigators have access to the site, their work should only take about a day.

When investigators have finished, the remainder of the wall will be torn down and the wall will be rebuilt. The project is expected to take six weeks, but businesses located in the building will start moving back within a month, Hahn said.

"It's just an old-fashioned four-layer brick wall," he said. "The floor joists of the Mondo's building burned and sagged down and popped up the wall."

While workers are tearing down the top of the wall, Hahn said, they will have to be careful not to disturb the basement of Mondo's.

"We'll be working in there, but we'll be staying away from areas where the fire marshal wants to investigate," he said.

The March 26 fire destroyed Mondo's, the Iowa Haircutting Company, 210 S. Clinton St., and 12 apartments. The Bread Garden, 224 S. Clinton St., and Givannis, 109 E. College St., were also damaged. A fire wall prevented the Savings and Loan Building from burning.

The building houses MidAmerican Securities, Getman Campus Optical, River Products, Steve Price Dentistry, Dean Oakes Numismatist Office, Associated Press offices and several law offices.

MidAmerican Securities was able to relocate its offices to 118 S. Clinton St., but Senior Vice President Ross DeValois said the move has really made things difficult.

"When you've been doing the same thing in the same place for 10 years, you're definitely inconvenienced," he said.

DeValois would not estimate how soon the firm would be moving back.

"It's difficult to give an exact date and then have it be wrong," he said. "They have to get the wall down and then get it back up, so they can get the power going before anyone moves in."

There is such a thing as a free lunch, after all

A Mexican restaurant offers a lifetime of free lunches to those sporting a tattoo of its logo.

By David Klignan
Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Some people will do anything for a free burrito.

A Mexican restaurant offered a lifetime of free lunches to anyone willing to get a tattoo of its logo, Jimmy the Corn Man, a sombrero-wearing mariachi boy riding a blazing cornucopia. Just show the cashier the tattoo — any size, on any part of the body — and get a free meal.

Since word of the promotion got out six months ago, 39 people have braved the tattoo needle for a permanent coupon at Casa Sanchez.

"Some people do it for the love of the art. I'm doing it for the beer and the taco," said starving art student Thomas Judd, 31, pacing nervously Monday before getting the tattoo — his first — on his right calf.

A much-tattooed Guido Brenner has a coaster-size Corn Man emblazoned under his right armpit, the only open space he had left.

"Actually everybody's dug it, even my mom," he said. "She looked at me kind of funny, and then I took her there for lunch. She was like, 'Wow, this restaurant is really good.'"

Marty Sanchez, whose grandfather founded Casa Sanchez in 1927, came up with the idea while testing a color computer printer. She taped a sign to the window with the restaurant's logo that read, "Tattoo me on yourself and get free lunch for life."

Her sister and brothers thought the idea was strange and kept taking the sign down. She kept putting it back up. Two nightclub employees who learned the promotion was no joke took the plunge and spread the word.

Ribcages, calves, legs, arms and even buttocks have been prime sites for the logo.

"One guy said, 'I want to get it on my stomach because that's where my food is going to go,'" said Barnaby Williams, the owner of Mom's Body Shop who created about 30 of the Casa Sanchez tattoos. "I think people have gotten much stupider tattoos for much stupider reasons."

An $80 tattoo pays for itself after about a dozen lunches (a $4.50 super burrito with sour cream, cheese and guacamole, and a $1.75 Mexican beer). And given the restaurant's long history and success (its chips and salsa are considered among the city's best), few are worried that they will ever lose their free lunch.

The family estimates it gives away only two meals a week, and the tattooed who do come back feel a bit guilty.

"They get embarrassed about the not paying, so they always leave big tips," Sanchez said.

Heckling the Delta jokers

Questions from the March of Dimes about fundraising, a mountain of debt and violations of alcohol and drug policies may be behind the Delta Tau Delta fraternity's loss of its charter.

Beyond breaking rules, the fraternity has committed an even more evil crime: the blatant disregard for the history, pride and respect the fraternity has earned for more than 100 years.

Last Tuesday, the fraternity had their international charter revoked. By that night, the fraternity showed Iowa City the classless and irresponsible behavior that evidently led to its demise.

According to the fraternity's international office, the charter was yanked for "flagrant" drug and alcohol violations. According to actions by the house after the announcement, all accusations seem to point at the truth.

On Tuesday night, at least one member of the Delta Tau Delta house sent a press release to The Daily Iowan stating they "have been known for substance and alcohol usage, sexual misconduct, animal abuse as well as various other criminal behaviors ... and despite our vehement denials, all allegations are true."

Chapter President Nathan Allick, said the release, which he said he wasn't responsible for, was to be taken as a joke. According to common sense, a joke was inappropriate and, if anything, demonstrates the joke that became the Delta Tau Delta house.

By Wednesday evening, the residents of the fraternity-turned-apartment-house displayed their true colors. With chairs and beer bottles cluttering the lawn on Clinton Street, and the old fraternity letters torn off the house, the former members were celebrating. Unfortunately, there was nothing to celebrate.

By Thursday, the residents of the house had hung a sign. It read, "119 years and we finally got it right." If violating rules is right, it would be scary to think what the members thought was wrong. And if things were so wrong, why did they willfully join in the first place? And don't they have any respect for the past 119 years of alums who created and built their house?

The Delta Tau Delta house and members are having their hands slapped. Maybe they should be spanked instead. For the Greek community, accusations like those against the Delta Tau Delta house can only further damage an already weak reputation. For the UI, the accusations can only hurt its image. Inappropriate actions by the members is a significant offense to the UI and the entire Greek system. Unfortunately, the students involved don't seem to understand this.

For a week now, the students living in the former Delta Tau Delta house have been acting selfishly and immaturely, seemingly similar to the acts that landed them a revocation of their charter. But maybe the joke is on all us — for having ever believed in and supported Delta Tau Delta.

Giving people what they want

If Iowa City residents and students are lucky, they might someday see the Old Capitol Mall completely filled with stores and running like a well-oiled machine. But considering the rate at which the sale of the mall has moved, that might be an unlikely sight. Let's hope not.

Finally, the Old Capitol Mall has been sold! After almost a year on the market, the mall has been purchased by Madison Realty Group Inc., a Pittsburgh-based company that plans to bring businesses into the vacant spaces.

Everyone in the community seems to be expressing a desire that the new owner fill the empty stores with greater speed than it took for the sale to be completed. Currently, 62 percent of the mall is occupied by stores or restaurants, leaving more than one-third of the mall vacant and ripe for change.

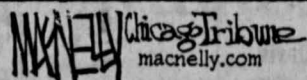

Businesses would be crazy not to place their stores in a centrally located spot on a university campus. No plans to put new stores into the mall have been released and the leasing agent for the new owners was unavailable for comment. Let's just hope prospective store owners recognize this built-in market so the downtown scene can once again be the lively center it was.

Time is money, and enough of both has been wasted on just selling the Old Capitol Mall. The community demands and deserves more quality choices in this downtown mall, and fast. The town doesn't want just any business, but certain types. The public has been voicing a desire for a McDonald's, men's clothing stores and more women's shoe stores.

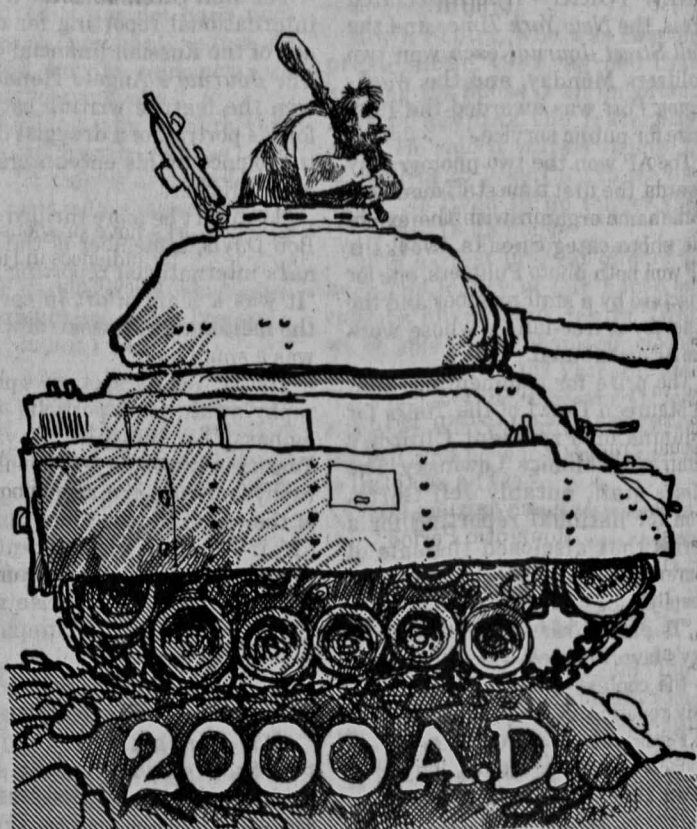

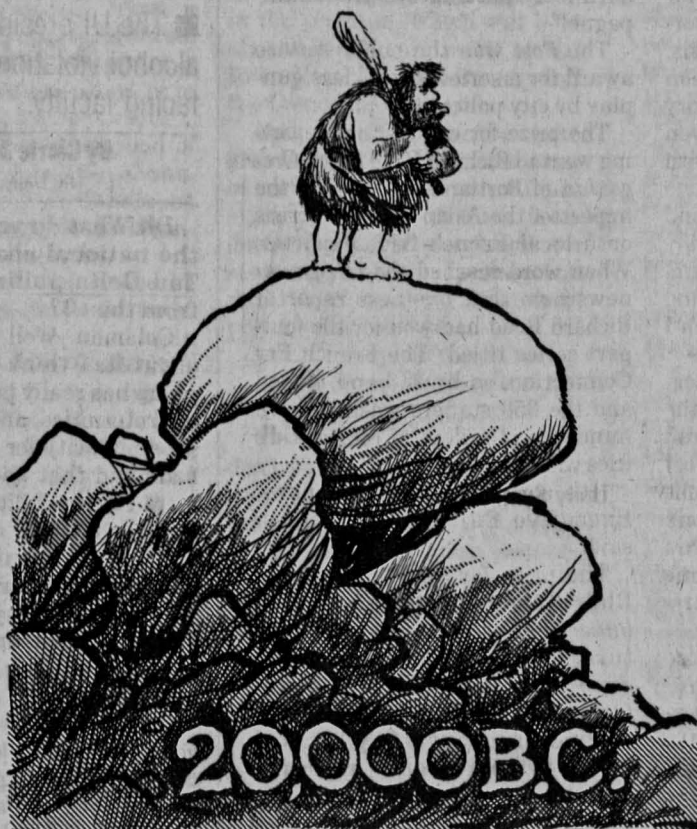

It's about time the Old Capitol Mall was purchased. Now let's swiftly fill all the vacant spots and allow the mall to have the most amount of diverse stores as possible.

Preferably sometime soon.

A Short History of the Balkans:

Making sense of the madness

IF we could construe a compendium of the mistakes made about the millennium, it would contain some caustic door hinges, maybe a war over bananas and oranges.

A pinch of Dalí's temporal ice, so we could step in the same river twice. Like Columbus, we'd think in solitary a cappella and say we did it all for a queen named Isabella. Millennium madness marches on. And madness is the correct word. It's a safe bet that, come about Thanksgiving or so, when we've already heard the word "millennium" approximately 4 billion times, one of us will hear it for the 4 billionth and first time, haul out an Uzi, and, shouting "Hasta la millennium, baby," go completely postal.

And then, after the trial of the millennium — which will make the Circus OJ-inus seem like the model of media self-restraint and taste — the Uzi-toter will be found not guilty for reasons of justifiable millennial-icide. The joke is, the millennium isn't even coming next Jan. 1. Anyone who can count to 10 knows this, of course. And once you can count to 10, 100 shouldn't be that much of a stretch — and from there, you can probably pull yourself up by your extrapolatory bootstraps all the way to 1000.

Of course, if you try to explain this to most Americans, you get rewarded with extraordinarily blank looks. You start talking arithmetic to Americans, and it's as if you were speaking French or German, one of those exotic, mysterious languages from far-away places where they don't have toilet paper or Play Stations and their idea of football means the players actually have to put their feet on the ball.

I've lived in France and Germany. I hate to be the bearer of bad news, but they have toilet paper. They have Play Stations. And their idea of football is the most popular sport in the world. Maybe in the whole galaxy, given that we haven't yet discovered intelligent life anywhere else. Of course, you could make a strong argument that we haven't discovered it here yet, either. Though, personally, I'm still rooting for the dolphins.

Nowhere is the search for intelligent life less rewarding than when you bump up against the millennium. Not that we're doing that just yet. Just last week, I was trying to explain the concept to a fellow who allowed that he had heard there was "some debate" about the matter. No. There's no debate. Try it again; count to 10. Then ...

But Americans are never so blissful as when they can wallow delightedly in ignorance, and thus we have Millennium Madness. We have cars for the new millennium. We have T-shirts and shoes and software for the new millennium. Soon, we'll have the Smiley Face and the Porta-Potty for the new millennium.

any resemblance to real life. In which case, they probably also believe that you can be kissed by a princess, turn into a frog, and sing the Budweiser national anthem on national TV. Riveting music, that.

The latest push on the millennium front happened last Friday, when thousands of couples dropped a bundle on flowers, chocolates, hotel suites, champagne, quasi-French dinners and other various accoutrements in order to dance the two-backed tango in hopes of having a baby on Jan. 1, 2000 — the first baby of the new millennium is what they were hoping for. Presumably, the baby will be named Millie Or Miles.

They're off by a year. But this is what happens in a society run by marketing campaigns, a culture in which people get their basic information from TV. You'd have as good a chance of being informed by peering at soggy tea leaves.

No matter. It's a brave new whirl, and we're marching to millennium. Even if we don't know when.

Like Columbus, we'd think in solitary a cappella, and say we did it all for a kid named Isabella.

Persecuting, er, prosecuting those with moral beliefs

ANY crime — whether it's motivated by hatred of a person's sexual orientation, sex or disability or not — is despicable. But this does not mean such criminals are more or less deserving of punishment. It means only that crime is itself reprehensible — no matter what the motivation or who the victim.

Our illustrious president recently voiced his support of expanding "hate crimes" protection to sexual orientation, sex and disability. There is, however, something implicitly wrong with equating punishment with the motive of a crime. Crime, whatever the motivation, is deserving of punishment, no matter what politically sensitive group the victim is identified with.

"Hate crime" legislation is part of a larger politicization of crime in which the punishment meted out depends not on the crime committed but upon the motivation behind the act. The "hate crimes" bill is a symbol of the desire to criminalize ideas that are unpopular in a secular age. Whereas once crime was regarded as a moral transgression against the individual and society, today criminal prosecution, it is said, should depend upon the motivation behind the crime.

If the motivation is not "politically correct" then the criminal is especially deserving of retribution. But if the criminal is motivated by a reaction to racial prejudice, poverty or other liberal-approved ideas, then the criminal is much less culpable. This ideology is represented by former Attorney General Ramsey Clark, who felt that society, not necessarily criminals, are responsible for the criminal acts because of economic conditions.

It is a short fall indeed from the emphasis on a crime's motivation to the criminalization of certain ideas or expression.

Possibly the most controversial — and potentially dangerous — part of the Clinton administration's plan is its definition of a hate crime. Not only would physical acts of violence be classified as a hate crime, but so would words or acts "perceived as inciting acts of violence as evidence of a hate crime." This confused definition of "hate crimes" is much like the FBI's definition, which includes "intimidation" without physical contact as a "hate crime." It seems one could be a "hate criminal" by doing nothing more than expressing disapproval of the homosexual agenda.

Could one be a criminal for being a so-called "purveyor of hate," as those who oppose the homosexual agenda are slanderously labeled? It is not surprising that the proposed legislation would provide special federal protection to demographic groups that tend to vote for liberal candidates.

Senate File 1529, the proposed legislation to extend "hate crime" protection, is promoted by the homosexual lobbying organization, Human Rights Campaign, which cites being an "outspoken opponent of gay rights" as evidence of a hate crime. What qualifies as a "hate crime" is when one advocates pro-family or religious views. It seems that when one stands in opposition to what is "politically correct," one is giving evidence of a hate crime.

Under this rationale, Sen. Trent Lott was inciting hate and not expressing his deeply held religious beliefs when he courageously stated that homosexual acts are a sin. Let us look at the response Lott received and then decide who is the real purveyor of hate: "Senator Lott has a ... hateful response to what is a naturally ... occurring aspect of humanity; Senator Lott's backward and hate-filled thinking; [more] hate rhetoric from anti-gay extremists; Trent Lott's bigoted beliefs; [his] hate mongering is a moral outrage; [he] compels America to act that homophobia out in the form of violent acts against gay ... people."

All the preceding quotes are from homosexual advocacy groups, and all contain a hatred for Lott and his biblically based views. These groups all happened to neglect what Lott said in that same breath: "You should still love that person."

What the president and his cohorts wish to do is to suppress ideas that conflict with their political agenda through the politicization of crime.

We hear so much about "hate crimes" as if there is a torrent of hostility rising up and engulfing all who are homosexual. This simply isn't true.

The president claims that there is a

LEE STRANG

"significant problem" with "hate crimes" on college campuses. FBI statistics show that there were no bias-motivated crimes at the UI in 1997. This is surprising, not because there is so much hate, but because of the broad definition of what constitutes a "hate crime." Nationwide, 39 percent of "hate crimes" against homosexuals were so-called "intimidation crimes." Seemingly, if one expresses anything but approval for the "homosexual lifestyle," in any way intimidating another, you have committed a "hate crime." Frightening indeed.

Crimes against another are equally detestable, no matter what group the victim or the criminal belongs to. The politicization of crime is an attempt to suppress viewpoints that do not conform to the liberal agenda and has the potential of suppressing people who profess ideas that are not "politically correct." All crimes are motivated by malevolence and it is unjust to judge which penalty is appropriate by the demographics of the victim or criminal.

Lee Strang is a DI columnist.

The UI art history department will sponsor a lecture by Jacques de Caso tonight at 7:30 in the UI Museum of Art in conjunction with the exhibit "The Drawing Speaks: Works by Theophile Bra."

In the lecture, titled "Romanticism and its Discontents: The Case of Theophile Bra," de Caso will discuss the works of Theophile Bra that were discovered by de Caso in 1975 in Douai, France.

"(Theophile Bra) is a totally unknown and highly original French artist of the Romantic Period," de Caso said.

Bra's sketches show the passion of a man that was caught in the grips of severe psychological collapse, he said.

"The spirit of his visionary drawings prefigures that of many early 20th-century artistic experiments and achievements," de Caso said.

"Bra's drawings are totally unlike that of any other artist of the time. In fact, they resemble drawings and

These works have previously only been viewed by audiences in Houston, Texas and Berkeley, Calif.

The exhibit features 50 drawings and sketches done by Bra in iron gall ink on woven paper.

Johnson went on to admit that "having this exhibit here in our university museum is a great coup."

"This lecture is a rare opportunity for anyone interested in avant-garde art and word and image. De Caso is an internationally famous authority on 19th-century French painting and sculpture; he even wrote the catalogue for this exhibit which he founded and curated," she said.

Book weaves Eliot's poetry with madness

Author Martha Cooley will read from her book tonight at Prairie Lights.

By Tyler Steward
The Daily Iowan

Martha Cooley opens her new book, "The Archivist," with this thought: "With a little effort, anything can be shown to connect with anything else: Existence is infinitely cross-referenced."

What follows is a story about the ways in which the poetry of T.S. Eliot serves as a sort of conduit for this cross-referencing. Eliot's life and the lives of the book's main characters intersect through the medium of the poetry, its many meanings resonating differently for each individual.

"The poetry itself is kind of a character, a presence in the story," Cooley said in a telephone interview with The Daily Iowan.

Cooley first envisioned the story after reading an article about the Hale bequest, a collection of letters written by Eliot to a woman, Emily Hale, during the time his wife, Vivienne, was committed to an asylum. Though the letters are actually archived at Princeton University, in Cooley's story they are located in an unnamed university library, where a solitary archivist named Matthias minds them.

Though the terms of the bequest stipulate that the letters remain sealed until 2020, a young graduate student named Roberta Spire visits Matthias with a request to see them. She suspects the letters contain evidence of romance between Eliot and Hale, but seeks them for more personal reasons.

"What Roberta is interested in is not some hot romance between Hale and Eliot," Cooley said. "What was central to her was the issue of conversion."

In the spirit of the book's opening line, conversion here has more than one face. Eliot converted from Unitarianism to Anglicanism during the time he wrote the letters; Roberta seeks to better understand her own experience as the daughter of assimilated Jews.

And Matthias is forced to revisit his wife Judith's descent into madness and eventually death, brought about in part by her inability to accept what she perceives as the hypocrisy of Christians and American Jews during the years of the Holocaust.

Judith's journal, which chronicles her experiences in a mental asylum from 1959 to her death in 1965, comprises the second part of the book.

"It came as sort of a shock to me," Cooley said of the need to include Judith's journal in the book. She felt it necessary, she said, to offer an interpretation of Judith's madness distinct from that of Matthias, who narrates the rest of the book.

Cooley said the emergence of Judith's perspective compelled her to consider what effect concurrent world events would have had upon Judith's state of mind. Her period of commitment at the asylum coincides with the building of the Berlin wall, the Kennedy assassination and the trial of Nazi war criminal Adolf Eichmann. Cooley said the incidence of so many significant events was not contrived, but grew naturally out of the narrative.

Congress rumbling about ground war in Kosovo

President Clinton, bucking the pressure for ground troops, vows to win the air war.

By Terence Hunt
Associated Press

BARKSDALE AIR FORCE BASE, La. — Despite growing support in Congress for using ground troops, President Clinton expressed resolve Monday to win the air war against Yugoslavia and said President Slobodan Milosevic "should be under no illusions that we will end it from weariness."

At this home for B-52 bombers and A-10 attack planes, Clinton met with crews who have flown strikes against Yugoslavia and will be heading back overseas soon.

"We are determined to continue on this mission, and we will prevail because of you and people like you," the president said in a speech near the flight line. He said the United States and its allies "would like to nip this conflict in the bud before it destabilizes all of Europe."

Clinton told the military personnel and their families that Secretary of State Madeleine Albright was meeting with NATO ministers in Brussels, Belgium, to reaffirm "our common commitment to do what is necessary to prevail."

But the administration continued to resist sending ground forces while saying NATO has that option if the need arises.

"We do not believe it is necessary," Defense Secretary William Cohen said. "The president has indicated he has no plans or intent to use ground troops."

The United States has assigned 500 planes to the air operations over Yugoslavia, part of an allied force of close to 700 planes.

As the bombing entered its 20th day, Cohen said, "President Clinton knew — all of us knew — that this struggle was not going to be quick or easy or neat. But we understood that we're going to prevail."

After a four-hour visit, Clinton returned to Washington for an evening meeting with the five top leaders of Congress, back in town after a two-week Easter recess.

Today, 50 to 60 House and Senate members will go to the White House to talk with the president.

The administration is expected to ask Congress this week for money to pay for U.S. participation in the NATO campaign, administration and congressional officials said. They said the administration was considering requesting $2.5 billion to $3 billion.

Republicans and Democrats alike are becoming increasingly restive and hawkish on Kosovo, probably reflecting a shift in public opinion polls in favor of introducing ground troops.

Particularly, more and more key members of both parties are criticizing Clinton's decision to count solely on air power to win the conflict.

"You don't want to preclude a legitimate option," said Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., back from a weekend tour of a refugee camp in Macedonia.

Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., one of the most outspoken critics of the administration's planning, is pressuring the Senate to take up a resolution this week to authorize the president to use "whatever force is necessary" to resolve the conflict.

Holiday hooliganism worries Thailand

The rowdy celebration of traditional festivals is being blamed on the media and consumerism.

By Robert Horn
Associated Press

BANGKOK, Thailand — Sanan Kachornprasart's pants were on fire, and Thailand's interior minister didn't think it was a laughing matter.

Neither did the police, who were frantically dousing his trousers with water as they traveled by Bangkok's Chao Phraya River in a patrol boat.

Hundreds of people lining a bridge above, however, thought it was hysterical.

They had set Sanan's suit ablaze by raining fireworks on the boats below as their way of enjoying Loy Krathong, a holiday traditionally celebrated by floating flowers and candles down the river as an offering for a better future.

Fortunately for Sanan, all that was singed was his suit — and his dignity.

As the powerful head of Thailand's vast civil service, he had hoped to crack down on this type of violence and drunken mayhem, which many Thais complain has become the norm during holidays.

And if Loy Krathong in November was bad, mid-April brings the worst of all: Songkran.

Known by various names in the Southeast Asian countries where it is celebrated, Songkran celebrates the Buddhist New Year. The three-day festival, culminating Thursday, falls during the hottest month of the year in Thailand, Laos, Burma and Cambodia.

In all these countries, sprinkling a bit of water on elders as a show of respect and purity is the customary ritual. Splashing water on unsuspecting friends or passers-by is also a common indulgence for fun and to relieve the heat.

But now, gangs of youths roam the streets of Bangkok in pickup trucks with buckets of water from the city's notoriously polluted canals, hurling it at people.

Rung Ruamchit, a maid, left the capital to visit her family in the provinces. "If I had to stay in Bangkok, I would leave the house," Rung said.

Local hospitals say they are treating more people for eye infections from the polluted water each year. And ophthalmologists have warned that popular high-powered water rifles are strong enough to damage the eyes and cause blindness.

Other revelers load pails with ice or paint and dump them on cars from bridges. Police have said this contributes to the soaring number of Songkran road accidents.

It's particularly dangerous for those on motorcycles, a common way of getting around the traffic-snarled city.

Suchat Wonganan, a columnist for the Nation newspaper, recalled seeing a man and woman on a motorcycle crash and die after being hit with water.

The increasing rowdiness has caused observers to wonder what is happening to the Thais, who see themselves as a gentle, considerate people.

Magician, aping his hero, Houdini, survives buried-alive feat

David Blaine was buried alive for seven days in a clear coffin below a 3-ton tank of water.

By Malene Jensen
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Seven days after he entered a transparent coffin set 6 feet into the ground, magician David Blaine was helped out Monday looking fit but slightly wobbly.

Hundreds of spectators cheered when the 3-ton tank of water that covered his see-through coffin was lifted, and Blaine sat up and smiled.

"I saw something very prophetic ... a vision of every race, every religion, every age group banding together, and that made all this worthwhile," he told the crowd. The shirtless, tattooed magician donned sunglasses and stepped unsteadily out of the coffin, aided by security people, and was taken to a doctor for a checkup.

The coffin had given him only about 6 inches of head room and 2 inches on each side.

Blaine has insisted that the subterranean sojourn was not a publicity stunt — he has a television special scheduled for Wednesday on ABC — but a test of will. His hero, Harry Houdini, planned a similar feat but died in 1926 before he could perform it.

Two guards from Sunrise Security Services Inc., hired by the event's promoter, had been at the site 24 hours a day. "I attest to the fact that Mr. Blaine has not left the premises for the past seven days," company President William T. MacLellan said today.

Air was pumped into the coffin, but Blaine said he was given no food and received only 3 to 4 tablespoons of water a day through an intra-venous tube. A plastic container and tube handled toilet necessities.

In case of emergency, there was a panic button in the coffin, a crane to quickly remove the water tank, and round-the-clock medical personnel.

Thousands of people had visited the grave on Manhattan's upper West Side, waving and staring through the water in the tank at Blaine in his Plexiglas coffin. Spokesman Pat Smith estimated that some 75,000 people had visited the site.

"I couldn't stop thinking about it, being confined to such a small space," said Tavia Trusch, 42, a dance teacher from Queens who was back Sunday for a second visit with her 3-year-old son.

Firefighter braves wind, blaze to pluck worker off burning crane

An Atlanta firefighter dangled from a helicopter to rescue a stranded construction worker.

By Shelley Hill
Associated Press

ATLANTA — A firefighter dangling perilously from a helicopter cable rescued a construction worker who was trapped atop a burning crane Monday for more than an hour as a fire raged below him.

Spectators applauded as the man was wheeled to an ambulance after the dramatic rescue, shown on live television.

Boyd Clines, the pilot of the state-owned helicopter normally used for fighting forest fires, said the flight was very turbulent because of the flames and wind.

He said he didn't know the firefighter's name. "But he's the real hero, because he put his life on the line to hang below this helicopter and get the man off the crane," he told WSB-TV.

"I'm just glad we made it in time," he said.

The fire had engulfed an old mill that was being converted to loft apartments in east Atlanta and spread to at least two nearby houses.

There was no immediate word on how it started or what the man was doing on the crane when it broke out at about 2:30 p.m. The crane towered well above the five-story building.

The worker, who was not identified, had crawled to the end of the crane's horizontal arm to get away from the black smoke and flames rising from the large, red brick building. He seemed calm and alert as he lay on his stomach waiting to be rescued, the crane swaying in winds that gusted above 20 mph.

Smoke and flame could be seen at the center of the crane, about 20 feet from where he was.

Flames were licking at the cable as the firefighter grabbed the crane and climbed aboard, scrambling to the end where the man was waiting anxiously.

Strapping the man to his chest, the firefighter held on tightly as both were lowered by the helicopter to some nearby grass.

The man walked to a stretcher under his own power. Firefighters and paramedics surrounded him.

At least one other person was believed to have been injured in the fire.

The mill, located between Oakland Cemetery and the King Center on the city's East Side, has been undergoing renovation for several years and was unoccupied. It was built in the 1880s and was in use until 1977.

The building partially collapsed as the flames consumed it. The crane remained standing in the smoke that billowed from the rubble after the rescue.

Wichita State's Evans pondering transfer to Iowa

Wichita State men's basketball player Maurice Evans has announced he will leave the Shockers, and Iowa is one of the teams on his list of prospective schools.

Wichita State's sports information department said Evans had not released a statement as of Monday, and is still weighing his options.

Evans finished his sophomore season at Wichita State averaging 22.6 points per game, ranking him ninth in the nation in scoring. The 6-foot-5 guard averaged 4.6 rebounds per game and shot 46 percent from the field.

He helped lead the Shockers to a 13-17 record overall and 6-12 in the Missouri Valley Conference. Evans earned second-team all-conference honors.

Lee announces signing of 6-foot-3 center/forward

Iowa women's basketball coach Angie Lee announced Monday the signing of Tracy Lynn Schrupp to a national letter of intent.

Schrupp, a 6-foot-3 center/forward from Gillette, Wyo., led her team in scoring with a 13.3 average last season. She also averaged 7.0 rebounds per game.

Schrupp led her team to a 24-3 overall record and a second-place finish in Class 4A. She earned all-state and all-conference honors.

"Tracy has long arms and runs the floor extremely well, which will make her a great defensive player," Lee said. "She has a lot of skills that Amy Herrig had."

The Hawkeyes are looking to replace the 6-4 Herrig, who led the team in scoring and rebounding last year as a senior. Iowa is expected to announce more signings within the next two weeks.

Longtime Iowa assistant baseball coach Ken Charipar, shown here coaching third base in a 1993 game, is currently at the UIHC battling cancer of the esophagus.

Grace under fire

The Iowa baseball team hopes for the return of coach Ken Charipar, who is battling cancer

"We just feel that our dad has been a strong person and always a fighter. He looked at life through sports, to come out on top. And that's what he's doing right now."

— Brian Charipar, son of Iowa assistant baseball coach Ken Charipar

By Greg Wallace
The Daily Iowan

When asked what losing Ken Charipar would mean to the Iowa baseball program, Brian Mitchell pauses.

"I don't know," he says. "I don't even care to talk about it. It's, you know, I don't know ... sorry."

Mitchell trails off sadly, his mind clearly on his fallen coach and mentor, the 68-year-old Charipar. Charipar, an Iowa assistant coach for 13 years, was diagnosed with cancer of the esophagus in January, and is in the fight of his life to defeat the disease.

Mitchell is Iowa's all-time home run leader and an All-Big Ten second baseman. But he didn't get there on natural talent alone. He got help along the way, and for two years, Charipar was his infield coach.

Before and after practice, they would work on Mitchell's game, hitting and fielding, for hours at a time. Charipar helped mold Mitchell into the player he is today.

Mitchell's no softy, and he's no stranger to tragedy. His mother, Diane Mitchell, died in 1996 in an auto accident on the way to see Brian's brother, Mark, a Hawkeye football player, play in the Alamo Bowl. Clearly, Mitchell's reaction to Charipar's illness is telling.

Charipar

Charipar is not around this season's Iowa baseball team much — at least not physically. He's in the intensive care unit of the UI Hospitals and Clinics, recovering from surgery to treat the cancer. It's apparent, though, that Charipar is in the back of everyone's mind.

"He's here, even when he's not," fellow assistant Elvis Dominguez says. "He's always with us."

Charipar already had a condition called Barrett's Esophagus, where acid from the stomach enters the esophagus. During a checkup in January, doctors found a tumor near the area where the esophagus connects with the stomach.

On March 31, doctors performed surgery on Charipar in an attempt to treat the cancer. The surgery was a success, according to Charipar's son, Brian. Doctors think they removed all of the cancer.

Charipar's eight children and his wife, Patricia, are spending 12 hours a day at his bedside. Charipar's condition has improved over the last week from critical to serious and stable, according to his son Brian, a former Iowa baseball player from 1979-82.

"We just feel that our dad has been a strong person and always a fighter," Brian said. "He looked at life through sports, to come out on top. And that's what he's doing right now."

Charipar was unable to be interviewed for this story due to his illness, but the testimony

Gymnasts look ahead to NCAAs and 2000 season

A handful of Iowa gymnasts will compete in the upcoming NCAA Championships, but the Hawkeyes will have to wait till the 2000 season for a team title.

By Robert Yarborough
The Daily Iowan

The thrill of victory and the agony of defeat. It's a worn-out sports expression, yet one that defines the past two seasons for the Iowa men's gymnastics team.

At this time last season, Iowa was breathing a sigh of relief after narrowly defeating Penn State for third place at the East Regionals and qualifying for the NCAA Championships.

During last weekend's East Regionals, the Hawkeyes were the odd team out, as Penn State claimed the third spot headed into this year's Championships. Only three teams from the regional advance to nationals.

Iowa ended a streak of six straight NCAA Championships appearances after finishing fifth in Champaign, Ill.

"Because of our preseason No. 1 ranking, we knew early that teams were going to be gunning for us throughout the season," senior co-captain Adrian Johnston said.

After the competition, coach Tom Dunn assessed his team's performance just two weeks after posting a season-high 229.475 total at the Big Ten Championships.

"The guys came out and made mistakes on the first two events of the competition," Dunn said. "The scoring was a bit odd at times, but that did not make a difference. We were giving points away and other teams simply capitalized."

Top prep not swayed by coaching uncertainty

Ian Renner-Arjes, the most decorated prep swimmer in Iowa history, is anxious to compete for the Hawkeyes next year.

By Todd Hefferman
The Daily Iowan

Last fall, Iowa recruit Ian Renner-Arjes made the biggest — and strangest — decision of his eight-year swimming career.

He chose to pursue his college and possibly Olympic career at the UI, shunning powerhouses Minnesota and Nebraska, without even knowing who the Hawkeyes head coach was going to be.

"I prefer (interim coach John) Davey to be up there," Renner-Arjes said. "But going up there, I really don't have a choice. I really don't know who the coach is going to be."

Davey and assistant Marc Long are the leading candidates, but are competing with more than a dozen other applicants.

The position opened when 23-year coach Glenn Patton resigned on Sept. 10 of last year. Last week, the UI department of athletics and a few returning swimmers interviewed candidates for the position. A decision is expected soon.

UI associate Director of Athletics Larry Bruner originally said a decision would be made on or before April 14, but later said the announcement would come after the selection had gone through the UI's affirmative action process.

Renner-Arjes, a Bettendorf, Iowa, native, said he decided on Iowa because it was somewhat close to home, he already knew some of the players, including high school teammate John Lonergan, and was impressed with the facilities.

Earlier this year, Renner-Arjes became the most decorated Iowa high school swimmer in history at the Iowa State Championships. Renner-Arjes won his 10th career state title as the anchor of the 400-yard freestyle relay team and helped Bettendorf to its first team championship since 1986.

It's not surprising that he came from behind to win that relay. He also won the 200 freestyle relay in the same fashion.

"I like going into an area where I'm behind in everything," Renner-Arjes said, "and then working my way up to catch up with everybody."

He also became the second person

Olazabal no longer forgotten Spaniard

After a brilliant back nine in the final round of the Masters, Jose Maria Olazabal became the toast of Spain.

By Doug Ferguson
Associated Press

AUGUSTA, Ga. — Until he slipped on the same green jacket he wore five years ago, Jose Maria Olazabal had become the forgotten Spaniard, caught between the past and the future.

Fading into the twilight was Seve Ballesteros and his five major championships, two of them at Augusta National, where he conquered the treacherous greens with a majestic short game.

The 63rd Masters was the debut of the heir apparent to Ballesteros — Sergio Garcia, a cocky kid who won the British Amateur last summer at 18 and became the first European to take low amateur honors at the Masters.

Olazabal was lucky to be playing again. He spent 18 months out of golf with a lower back problem that left him unable to walk. He returned in 1997 and won the Turespana Masters, but made the Ryder Cup only as a captain's pick.

He returned to the forefront Sunday with a dynamic display of pressure golf on the back nine of Augusta, and suddenly he was the toast of Spain.

Ballesteros, who missed the cut and returned home, sent his congratulations by fax and released a statement.

"He won with authority from beginning to the end," Ballesteros said. "This triumph will compensate him, in part, for some of the bad moments that destiny wanted him to face with courage."

King Juan Carlos and Prime Minister Jose Maria Aznar also offered congratulations.

"Victory of faith," the Spanish sports newspaper Marca wrote.

The newspaper El Pais added: "Spanish golf is at the top again."

Trailing Greg Norman for as long as it took him to line up a 20-foot birdie putt on the 13th, Olazabal put three strokes between them over the next three holes and won by two strokes over Davis Love III.

Olazabal became the only player to win two Masters in the 1990s, and the 11th European to win in 20 years.

"This one, I'm pretty sure I'm going to enjoy much more than the one I had before, for several reasons," Olazabal said, tugging at the lapel of his green jacket.

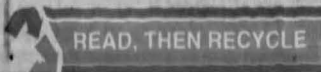

"The most important one is the

Hawkeye recruit the 'ultimate competitor'

in Iowa history to win the state title in the same event four consecutive years (200 freestyle).
As the most esteemed swimmer to ever come out of Iowa, the 6-foot-4, 230-pound Renner-Arjes is expected to contribute in a big way for Iowa.
"He'll help us right away — in everything," Davey said. "There's obviously a lot of events he could swim, and by (next year's) Big Tens, we'll have it narrowed down to two or three. But he's got some work to do."

Renner-Arjes won state titles in four different events. Aside from his four 200 freestyle titles, he won a pair of 100 butterfly titles, two 400 freestyle relays, a 200 freestyle relay and a 100 freestyle.
Renner-Arjes is the ultimate competitor. His size gives him a menacing presence, but his sheer desire has separated him from the field. Before a race, Renner-Arjes drops to one knee and prays that God give him strength, and has also been known to say some other things.
"I once started reciting the 23rd Psalm, for no reason at all," Renner-Arjes said. "Right before a race, when I got up on the block, I started saying, 'As I walk through the shadow of death.' It was crazy. The guy next to me kind of looked at me funny after I was finished."

Renner-Arjes has used that same determination in other adventures, too. He went cliff-diving in Arizona, and once fell off a jet ski in Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.
His bedroom is stuffed with medals, plaques and certificates chronicling his achievements. There are also two model trucks made out of Legos and several movie posters.
"I'm a sci-fi freak," Renner-Arjes said.
His bedroom is so packed that Renner-Arjes keeps several medals tucked away in two Christmas tins in the upper-left hand corner of his bedroom shelves.

When not working out with the Bettendorf Swim Club, a U.S. Swimming club team that he participates with in the high school off-season, he fiddles with his Compaq computer and his PlayStation or Nintendo 64.
When it's time to get serious, though, don't count on Renner-Arjes not bringing his A game.
"If I'm going to get beat, I'm going to get beat," Renner-Arjes said. "But it's not going to be easy."

Catholic faith helps family cope with coach's illness

als of his friends, his players and his family paint a picture of a man who truly has an optimistic approach for life, family and baseball. As former Iowa coach Duane Banks puts it, Charipar is "a tremendous, amazing person."
Charipar's personality is so magnetic, he won the assistant coaching job from a hospital bed 13 years ago.
"Kenny was running a plumbing business, and had gotten out of it, and had heart surgery," Banks recalled. "My wife and I went to visit him in the hospital, and I told my wife when we left, 'Man, we really have to do something for that guy.' He was too good of a person not to be involved, and we got him involved in our program. It's been a plus for everyone involved."
A Lifelong Passion
"It's a beautiful day out here, isn't it?" Charipar's daughter, Lisa Boddicker, said on a sunny day recently at Iowa Field. "My dad would love to be out here. This is what he lives for — baseball."
Charipar has been involved in baseball for over 50 years. An assistant coaching job for a man Charipar's age isn't exactly typical, but for him, it wasn't about the prestige. It was about the game, and about the young players he could mold.

"We all know that he didn't have to be here," Mitchell said. "He did it because he wanted to do it, and he wanted to see kids get better. That's pretty special, to see a guy give back like that."
"With his son-in-law (former major league pitcher Mike Boddicker) being in the World Series, and being around baseball, Ken's seen it all," Iowa equipment manager Greg Morris said. "He's coached young kids, high school kids and college kids, and he knows the game of baseball inside and out."
The Eternal Optimist
Everyone who knows Charipar says he never has a bad day. For years, Charipar was a steady influence for both players and coaches on the team.
"I've never really seen him get mad," Morris said. "When you deal with young kids, day in and day out, the fact that I've never seen him get mad is remarkable."
"We might get beat, 15-0, and he'd find something good to say about it," Banks said. "He always finds something good to say about the day. That's a unique gift, when you can wake up every morning and know it's going to be a good day."
Players and coaches both describe him as a motivator and an extremely energetic person.
"He's the most fired-up guy there is," junior Wes Obermueller said. "He brings a positive attitude and it rubs off on everybody else. There's never a negative moment with him."

"He's 68 going on 38," Banks said. "He has so much energy — he is a tireless person."
People close to Charipar describe him as a father figure, but also just one of the guys.
"There's times where kids our age are trying to do stuff, and he'll just try to act like one of us, like pulling up his socks, and just being a goofball," Obermueller said. "Everybody loves him to death."
Family First
Having a family member diagnosed with cancer is never easy, but the Charipars seem to be handling it remarkably well. How do they do it?
The answer can be found on a chain around Lisa Boddicker's neck — a crucifix. Charipar, his wife and eight children are devout Catholics.
"We have a strong faith," Brian Charipar said. "We're all very much supporting each other. We believe that there's a reason for everything, and our faith helps us through this."
His friends agree.
"Whenever we went on the road together, we always went to church," Morris says. "No matter where we were, Timbuktu or St. Louis, we never missed."

Charipar has always been a religious man, and his passion for baseball never took a toll on his love and concern for his wife and children.
"First and foremost, he's a family man," Iowa trainer Boyd Murray said. "That's his main priority and it always has been."
A Speedy Recovery
Volunteer assistant coach Brett Lagerblade is filling in for Charipar this season, but the Hawkeyes hope to have their veteran coach back in 2000.
One thing is certain: If Charipar is able, his coaching position will be waiting for him.
"My best intentions are that he's going to be back, and that he's going to beat this thing," current Iowa coach Scott Broghamer said.
On filling Charipar's position, Broghamer said, "That's a bridge I'm not going to cross until I absolutely have to."
Banks retired after the 1997 season, but remains close to the program. He hopes there are a few more seasons in Charipar's future.
"When I hired him, I told him I'd either give him 20 years, or take 20 years away from him," Banks said.

All of Spain celebrates Olazabal's Masters victory problems I went through to be here," he said. "And also because it's my second major. I won my first one ... you might say, 'OK, it might have been a lucky week.' But when you win two — especially the way I did it — it means a lot more to me."

The way Olazabal won is the

how the Masters is almost always decided.
He knew that after his 66 in the second round gave him the lead going into the weekend. He knew after he made three straight bogeys early in the final round that knocked him out of the lead.
He walked down the steep slope toward the sixth tee, turned to caddy Brenden McCartain and said, "We still can make a few pars, make a birdie or two, and I think we have a chance to win the tournament."

Despite all the alterations at Augusta, one thing never changes — the Masters doesn't begin until the 10th tee, as the sun begins to drop behind the Georgia pines.
Olazabal played those final nine holes better than anyone. He became only the fourth champion since 1981 to go without a bogey on the back nine.

"The winner is not going to be the one who makes the most birdies, but the one who makes the fewest mistakes," Colin Montgomerie predicted after the first round, alluding to the rough, the extra length on the 17th hole and the newly raised green on No. 11.
Olazabal did a little of both. Augusta required no less.

pieces, and the core of the team will return in 2000. Next season could be Iowa's best shot at a national title in the next few years.
The recruiting class of 1996, which includes team leaders Todd Strada and Anthony Petrocchi, has one more year to obtain glory. Brian Hamilton, Barry Wilken and Doug Jacobson round out an outstanding class of seniors-to-be.
"It would be sad if we qualified as a team to nationals in our first two years here and that was it,"

Strada said. "We should be back next year."
During the Big Ten Championships, coaches discussed the possibility of moving Iowa and Minnesota to the West Region.
The recent elimination of men's gymnastics at the University of New Mexico earlier this month leaves only seven teams in the West Region, compared to the 17 that compete in the East.
"Qualification would be much easier if we moved to the West, but that is not assured," Dunn said. "The elimination of some teams in the West will further deplete it in the upcoming years."

As a team, the season is over, but the year has not been a complete loss for some individual Iowa gymnasts.
Strada will compete for the title of NCAA all-around champion, while Hamilton returns to nationals after missing last season with a torn ACL. Other qualifiers include Kevin Agnew, Lou Datilio and Shane deFreitas.
Hamilton was an All-American in 1997 on the floor exercise and will again compete in that event, as well as the high bar, at the NCAA Championships.

"The all-around title has been a goal of mine all season," Strada said. "The team title was the main goal this year, but (individual success) would be a nice way for some guys to finish the season."
Dunn is using this experience as motivation for next season.
"The guys know what it feels like now to miss out on a chance to show that they are the best, so this has not been all bad," Dunn said. "I am sure there will be no problems with motivation next year, because they will not want to feel like this again."

Home cookin' doesn't help Cubs

Sammy Sosa and the Chicago Cubs continued to struggle Monday, losing their home opener to Cincinnati, 7-2.

By Rick Gano
Associated Press

CHICAGO — Back home at Wrigley Field, where his every move, gesture and smile is greeted with cheers and chants of his name, Sammy Sosa wanted desperately to please, to give everyone who came what they wanted to see.

Instead, his struggles at the plate continued. Not only didn't he homer, he managed just one hit — a measly dribbler in the infield — as the Chicago Cubs lost their home opener to the Cincinnati Reds, 7-2.

The Reds had no power problems. Mike Cameron, who never fulfilled his potential on the other side of Chicago with the White Sox, hit two of Cincinnati's four homers as the Reds gave the Cubs a fourth straight loss.

"I wish I could have a hit or homer every time," said Sosa, who went 1-for-4, dropping him to 3-for-25 on the season with one homer.

"Now the pitchers don't want to give me anything to hit. I got to be patient and relaxed, keep rolling. We're struggling, but it's still early. A lot of people cheered me and they know I'm in a slump and that we can play better."

Sosa came to bat with two on and no outs in the eighth against reliever Scott Sullivan with the Cubs trailing, 5-2. He flied out to shallow right, ending his frustrating day before a spirited crowd of 30,092.

"I'm not swinging the way I'm supposed to be. I've been chasing bad pitches," Sosa said. "I've got to come and find out what's the matter."

Steve Avery (1-1) got his first NL victory since 1996, and Barry Larkin and Eddie Taubensee also homered for the Reds.

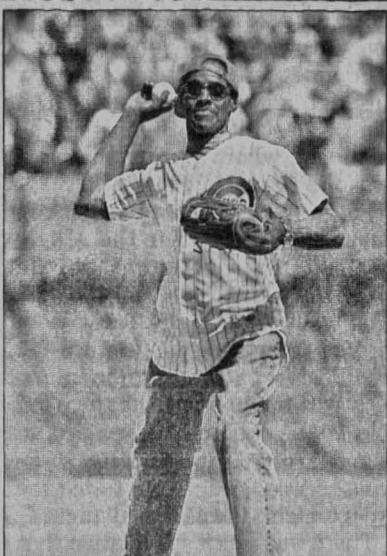

"I had a tough time here in Chicago last year. I put entirely too much pressure on myself," said Cameron, who was traded away in the offseason by the White Sox. "I had to believe in myself before anybody else could. This was one of the best feelings I've ever had."

The Cubs' depleted pitching staff got another scare when Kevin Tapani (1-1), a 19-game winner last season, had to leave after three innings with tightness in his right shoulder. He didn't know after the game if he would miss his next start.

The Cubs already are without NL Rookie of the Year Kerry Wood, who will miss the season following elbow surgery, and reliever Terry Adams is also on the DL with an elbow sprain.

Tapani initially hurt the shoulder while batting last week in Houston and didn't want to take a chance this early in the season. He'll rest a couple of days, do some exercises and take medication.

"It just grabbed on me," Tapani said. "It's a little sore. It's muscle-type stuff and I need to build up my strength. I'm not looking at it as a major thing. I just can't let it alter the way I throw."

Avery, who took a no-hitter into the seventh inning of his first start against the Giants before losing, allowed three hits in seven innings with five walks and five strikeouts.

"I took a little while to get going with the cold," Avery said of the sunny, 49-degree day.

"I know how to change speeds now and eventually with my fast-ball coming around, I will get more strikeouts. Once I get rid of the little blips like walks, things will be where I want."

Larkin hit a two-run homer in the third, his third of the year, off Tapani.

The Cubs made it 2-1 in the bottom of the third on Lance Johnson's two-out single that scored Mickey Morandini, who got a double when Cameron lost his fly ball in the sun.

Taubensee hit his second homer off in the seventh off Terry Mulholland. Cameron hit a solo home run in the eighth off Matt Karchner, and had a two-run homer off Rod Beck in the ninth.

Sosa, greeted with loud ovations during pre-game practice, in player introductions and during each at-bat, was called out on strikes in the second. In the fourth, he hit a dribbler between Avery and first, reaching on an infield hit.

Sosa flied out in the sixth. Glennallen Hill singled home the Cubs' second run in the eighth off Sullivan.

Notes: Walter Payton, the leading rusher in NFL history, threw out the first pitch. Payton, who has a rare liver disease and needs a transplant, took off his jacket to reveal a Cubs jersey and turned his hat around backwards before firing a strike to Sosa. ... Late Hall of Fame broadcasters Harry Caray and Jack Brickhouse were honored. Caray with a statue outside the right field wall and Brickhouse with his familiar "Hey Hey" on the two foul poles. ... Workers on the roof also unfurled flags honoring Wood and Sosa. ... Cubs left fielder Henry Rodriguez sat out for the second straight game with a sore muscle on his side.

MAJOR LEAGUE BASEBALL ROUNDUP

Padres wreck Rockies' opener

DENVER (AP) — Jim Leyritz, whose flair for the dramatic home run was previously limited to the postseason, has begun launching some timely regular-season shots as well.

Leyritz hit a three-run homer off Dave Veres in the 11th inning Monday, and the San Diego Padres wrecked Colorado's home opener by beating the Rockies 8-5 before a crowd of 48,073.

It was Leyritz's second game-winning homer against Colorado in less than a week. His pinch-hit solo homer in the bottom of the ninth gave the Padres a 2-1 win last Wednesday.

"I think I bear down a little more in the clutch," Leyritz said. "Tony (Gwynn) came through with a big hit that gave me the opportunity to come up there. The first couple of pitches I was guessing, but he made a mistake and I hit it."

After Veres (0-1) struck out the first two batters of the 11th, Gwynn singled for his third hit. Wally Joyner doubled, with Gwynn stopping at third.

Mets 8, Marlins 1

NEW YORK — Bobby Jones made New York Mets fans forget all those injuries.

Jones hit his first career home run and beat Florida for the fourth straight time, pitching the streaking Mets over the Marlins in their home opener.

Jones connected in the fifth inning off Livan Hernandez (0-2) for his first homer in 297 career at-bats, a drive to left field that broke a 1-all tie.

Braves 8, Phillies 6

PHILADELPHIA — Maybe the Atlanta Braves found a new closer of sorts. Javy Lopez.

The Atlanta catcher capped a late-inning home run derby with a tiebreaking, two-run shot off Ken Ryan in the eighth as the Braves spoiled Philadelphia's home opener.

Lopez's first homer of the year came after Atlanta reliever Mike Cather blew a two-run lead in the seventh by giving up solo homers to Alex Arias and Scott Rolien.

The Braves are desperately looking for a closer after Kerry Ligtenberg's injury and Mark Wohlers' failed comeback from control woes.

Padres 8, Rockies 5

DENVER — Jim Leyritz hit a three-run homer off Dave Veres in the 11th inning, and the San Diego Padres wrecked Colorado's home opener by beating the Rockies.

After Veres (0-1) struck out the first two batters of the 11th, Tony Gwynn singled for his third hit. Wally Joyner doubled and Leyritz followed with a 437-foot homer into the second deck in right-center field.

Chris Gomez's two-run single in the eighth capped a three-run rally that drew the Padres into a 5-5 tie.

American League

Twins 1, Tigers 0

DETROIT — Todd Walker spoiled the final home opener at Tiger Stadium with a home run in the 12th inning Monday, giving the Minnesota Twins a 1-0 victory over Detroit.

Tiger Stadium opened in 1912, and never before had a home opener at the ballpark been scoreless going into extra innings.

The crowd of 47,449 was the biggest on opening day since 50,314 watched in 1994, before the seating capacity was changed.

Indians 5, Royals 2

CLEVELAND — Travis Fryman hit a three-run homer in the 10th inning off rookie Jose Santiago to give Cleveland its sixth straight win, beating Kansas City on opening day at Jacobs Field.

It was the second straight year the Indians had won their first home game with a three-run shot in the 10th. Last season, Jim Thome connected off Anaheim's Troy Percival.

Thome walked with one out, and Wil Cordero followed with a single. Fryman then hit the first pitch from Santiago (0-1) over the wall in right-center.

Angels 13, Rangers 5

ARLINGTON, Texas — Troy Glaus and Tim Salmon each went 4-for-5 and combined for five of Anaheim's club-record 10 doubles as the Angels beat Texas.

Glaus set a career high for hits and tied a club record with three doubles. He also scored twice and drove in three runs.

Salmon, whose .396 average against Texas is the highest of any opponent in team history, tied his career best with five RBIs. He also made a nice catch in right field that took away a potential home run from Juan Gonzalez.

Blue Jays 7, Devil Rays 1

TORONTO — David Wells pitched five shutout innings before being hit in the leg by a hard grounder and Tony Fernandez went 4-for-4 as the Toronto Blue Jays beat Tampa Bay in their home opener Monday night.

Jose Canseco, who hit 46 home runs for Toronto last year and then signed with the Devil Rays, launched a 459-foot homer into SkyDome's fifth deck in the ninth inning. It was his 399th career homer.

Making his first start in Toronto since being acquired in February in the Roger Clemens trade.

Sprinter Butts to compete

DES MOINES, Ia. — Reynolds, a two-time world-record holder, will compete in the Drake Relays.

Reynolds' time of 43:14.4 set in Zurich, Switzerland, on Aug. 17, 1998, stands as the world record.

He will compete in Des Moines as part of the Drake Relays on the afternoon of April 24, the 90th Drake Relays.

"I'm really excited about the Drake Relays," Reynolds said. "I've got a lot of electricity in me. I feel I'm going to run fast."

Chief Wahoo burn coffin

CLEVELAND — Des Moines, Iowa, burned a coffin of Chief Wahoo on Monday.

The coffin was burned by the Cleveland Indians' mascot, Chief Wahoo, in a protest against the mascot's racist caricature of an American Indian.

"Say goodbye to the big-toothed Wahoo," protesters chanted. "We're sorry, Chief Wahoo, but you're not welcome here."

The demonstrators were protesting against the city's racial police officers, and against the Washington Redskins.

Sprinter Butch Reynolds to compete at Drake

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Butch Reynolds, a two-time Olympic medalist and the world-record holder in the 400 meters, will compete in the Drake Relays for the first time since 1992.

Reynolds' time of 43.29 seconds, which he ran at the Weltklasse meet in Zurich, Switzerland, on Aug. 17, 1996, stands as the world record.

He will compete in Des Moines as part of a special 400 meter relay on April 24, the second day of the 90th Drake Relays.

"I'm really excited about coming back to the Drake Relays," Reynolds said. "There's a lot of electricity in the meet unlike any other in the U.S. I feel I'm in great shape and really ready to run fast."

Chief Wahoo protesters burn coffin

CLEVELAND — Demonstrators at Jacobs Field on Monday burned a wooden sculpture of Chief Wahoo in a coffin, demanding that the Cleveland Indians get rid of their mascot.

About 40 people protested before the home opener against Kansas City to denounce the mascot as a racist caricature of American Indians.

"Say goodbye to this big-toothed Wahoo," protester Michael Haney said as flames consumed the carving.

The demonstrators were buoyed by a new lawsuit against the city of Cleveland and several police officers, and by a federal ruling against the Washington Redskins.

Legislation would KO felons as promoters

ALBANY, N.Y. — A lawmaker wants to stop anyone with a felony conviction — and that includes Don King — from promoting boxing matches in New York state.

Slate Sen. Dean Skelos of Long Island filed the bill in response to the disputed heavyweight title fight between Evander Holyfield and Lennox Lewis on March 13 at Madison Square Garden.

"It is not aimed primarily at (King)," he said. "It is aimed at cleaning up fighting, period. ... We are trying, whether you like fighting or don't like fighting, to restore it to where it was respected a number of years ago."

Added Skelos' director of legislation, Tracy Lloyd: "If it involves Don King, fine. If it involves others, fine, too."

Chili Davis, Mondesi players of the week

NEW YORK — New York Yankees designated hitter Chili Davis was picked Monday as the AL player of the week and Los Angeles outfielder Raul Mondesi won the NL honor.

Davis, injured for most of last year, hit .500 (10-for-20) with three homers, including a grand slam, and seven RBIs in the first week of the season. He scored seven runs, drew five walks and also stole a base.

Mondesi hit four homers and drove in 10 runs. All of his homers either tied the game or put the Dodgers ahead. Mondesi hit .381 (8-for-21) and scored five runs.

Utah's Malone suspended

NEW YORK — Karl Malone of the Utah Jazz will miss one game and lose $4,000 for throwing a punch and Anthony Johnson of the Atlanta Hawks will sit out a game and pay $5,000 for throwing a elbow.

The suspension and fines were announced Monday by the NBA, as was a $7,500 fine to Atlanta's Dikembe Mutombo for elbowing.

Malone was penalized for throwing a punch at Othella Harrington of Houston on Sunday, while Johnson's penalty resulted from elbowing Bob Sura of Cleveland, also on Sunday.

Like old times, Agassi beats Becker

HONG KONG — Finally, Andre Agassi won a tournament — in a match that seemed a throwback to old times.

In their first meeting since the 1995 U.S. Open, Agassi beat Boris Becker 6-7 (4-7), 6-4, 6-4 Monday in the rain-delayed final of the Salem Open for his first title of the year.

"I'm really pleased," said Agassi, the third seed. "We both played really well today. The thing about Boris is that you can't let your guard down at any time."

A strained shoulder may prevent Agassi from playing the Japan Open, which started later Monday. Becker also was scheduled to play in that event.

"If I'm not feeling OK, I'm prepared to miss the tournament," Agassi said after winning his first title in Asia.

Court grants ex-wife share of Bonds' earnings

SAN FRANCISCO — A state appeals court overturned Barry Bonds' prenuptial agreement with his ex-wife today and granted her half of his baseball earnings during their nearly seven-year marriage.

Bonds and his first wife, Sun, signed an agreement the day before their wedding in February 1988 in which they relinquished the right to community property and agreed to keep future earnings separate. The effect was to deny her a 50 percent share of his salary, which was $8 million a year when they divorced in December 1994.

But the 1st District Court of Appeal ruled today the agreement was invalid because Mrs. Bonds didn't have her own lawyer, was not told by Bonds' attorneys why she needed a lawyer, and was warned by Bonds' agent that there would be no wedding unless she signed.

Masters audience improves from last year

NEW YORK — Even without the anticipated Tiger Woods-David Duval matchup, more people watched this year's Masters than in 1998.

CBS' final round coverage posted a 10.7 overnight rating and 21 share, an increase of 8 percent from a 9.9/27 in 1998.

It was the second-highest rated final day of the decade, trailing only Woods' record-setting performance in 1997.

Coach reprimanded for telling players to "take out" opponent

OVERLAND PARK, Kan. — Texas A&M women's soccer coach G. Guerrieri was reprimanded Monday by the NCAA for encouraging players to "take out" Nebraska players during the second round of the NCAA tournament.

Guerrieri was reprimanded by the NCAA Division I Women's Soccer Committee for inappropriate comments and behavior toward officials.

The committee said Guerrieri encouraged his players to hurt other players because of his opinion that fouls were not being called.

Report: Steinbrenner mulls staying at Yankee Stadium

NEW YORK — After years of complaints and threats, George Steinbrenner now says the New York Yankees might stay right where they are — at Yankee Stadium.

With the team's lease expiring in 2002, the team's principal owner said in Crain's New York Business magazine today that he may exercise an option and remain in the Bronx.

"We have some options on that lease. ... We can extend it at least five years," Steinbrenner said.

Steinbrenner has repeatedly delayed a decision on whether the World Series champions would remain at their hallowed ballpark, move to the West Side of Manhattan or to New Jersey.

Report: Angelos eyes Redskins again

BALTIMORE — Baltimore Orioles owner Peter Angelos is considering a new bid of at least $625 million to buy the Washington Redskins, The Washington Post reported today.

"We are reviewing the matter," Angelos told the newspaper. "We'll make a decision shortly."

Angelos could not be reached for comment today.

The NFL has put off a decision on the sale of the Redskins after team owners were unwilling to support a winning bid selected by the estate of late Redskins Owner Jack Kent Cooke.

Source: Brand to leave Duke for NBA Draft

The junior center would be the first Duke player to leave school early for the NBA, if the report is accurate.

By David Droschak
Associated Press

DURHAM, N.C. — Elton Brand, the consensus national player of the year, will announce Wednesday that he will forgo his final two years at Duke and enter the NBA draft, The Associated Press has learned.

A source close to Brand, speaking on the condition of anonymity, confirmed Monday that the 6-foot-8, 270-pound sophomore center would become the first Duke player to leave school early for a chance to play in the NBA.

Brand

The school had said earlier Monday that Brand and associate head basketball coach Johnny Dawkins would hold a news conference Wednesday at the school to announce the decision.

Brand, who averaged 17.8 points and 9.8 rebounds last season, was the first sophomore to win the John R. Wooden Award, presented by the Los Angeles Athletic Club, and he was also honored this season by The AP, the Atlanta Tipoff Club and the United States Basketball Writers Association as national player of the year.

The student newspaper at Duke, the Chronicle, also reported Monday that sophomore point guard William Avery had decided to forgo the rest of his eligibility and apply for the draft.

"Nobody has told me it is true," sports information director Mike Cragg said.

The Chronicle, citing unnamed sources close to the basketball team, said Avery had decided to leave school.

Attempts Monday to reach Brand, Avery and Dawkins were unsuccessful.

Another source said freshman Corey Maggette remains undecided about his future. The Chronicle said.

Avery has met with coach Mike Krzyzewski, who is recovering from hip replacement surgery. The Chronicle reported. The newspaper said Krzyzewski is unaware of Avery's final decision.

The potential loss of Brand and Avery, coupled with the graduation of seniors Trajan Langdon and Taymon Domzalski, would cost Duke much of the core of the 37-2 team that reached the NCAA championship, where the Blue Devils lost to Connecticut.

However, the program has received national letters of intent from four high school seniors who were selected to McDonald's All-America team.

Players who have announced their intention to leave school early include junior guard Steve Francis of Maryland and junior forward Albert White of Missouri.

Underclassmen have until May 15 to announce their intentions.

Wohlers rejects demotion

■ Troubled Atlanta closer Mark Wohlers rejected his demotion to AAA Monday.

ATLANTA (AP) — Atlanta reliever Mark Wohlers, whose attempt to regain his control has suffered a setback this season, is refusing to accept assignment to the Braves' farm club in Richmond.

The decision apparently ends Wohlers' career with the Braves, for whom he saved 97 games from 1995-97, including the final game of the 1995 World Series.

Wohlers looked like he might make a comeback in spring training but flopped in two relief appearances in Atlanta's first four games. The Braves decided Friday — after a

Wohlers

Thursday outing against the Phillies in which Wohlers threw only one strike in 10 pitches — to send him to the minors.

"In spring training, he threw the ball like he did when he was at the top of his game. It was just vintage Wohlers," general manager John Schuerholz said Monday. "We were hopeful of seeing that happen up here, but it didn't and we just couldn't wait any longer."

Wohlers could not be reached for comment Monday. His agent, Seth Levinson of New York, did not return phone calls.

Schuerholz said Wohlers had seemed eager to accept the assignment when informed of it Friday by manager Bobby Cox and Schuerholz.

But the general manager said he wasn't completely surprised when Wohlers changed his mind Sunday.

"While he first indicated he was very optimistic and interested in accepting the assignment, he obviously decided, either on his own or after talking to someone, that he was not going to accept the assignment," Schuerholz said. "That's his right under the Basic Agreement. I'm disappointed that the whole process didn't work, for Mark's sake and the team's sake. It would have been the perfect ending."

Wohlers could have accepted the assignment, refused it or declared for free agency. Since he refused it, the Braves are still responsible for his $5.2 million salary unless they trade him by April 22. They will release him if a deal can't be worked out.

"There's been enough interest shown that I think a trade is possible," Schuerholz said.

He would not say which teams had shown interest.

The Atlanta Journal-Constitution reported that the Pittsburgh Pirates and the Arizona Diamondbacks, both of whom would pay a portion of Wohlers' salary, were among those looking at the reliever.

Marlins GM trying again to build a winner

By Steven Wine
Associated Press

MIAMI — He was there before the beginning. When Dave Dombrowski joined the Florida Marlins in 1991, their first game was still 18 months away.

Dombrowski has since worked for two owners and hired four managers. He traded for Gary Sheffield, then traded him away five years later. He watched Charlie Hough throw the first pitch in franchise history, and he watched Alex Fernandez throw the first pitch on opening day last week.

In the Marlins' short, tumultuous history, Dombrowski has been part of every chapter. He built a World Series championship team from scratch in record time, then dismantled it on orders from the owner.

Now he's trying to build a winner again.

"We have our work cut out for us," Dombrowski says with a smile.

Not one starter from the 1997 World Series team remains in the lineup. Manager Jim Leyland, owner Wayne Huizenga and even Muscle Boy are gone, and many were surprised when Dombrowski decided to stay.

He passed up a chance last September to join the Los Angeles Dodgers and instead signed a five-year, $5 million contract to remain with the Marlins. The deal made Dombrowski the best-paid general manager in baseball.

But while the paycheck is nice, the payroll is a problem. The Marlins are spending only $19 million on player salaries this year, compared with $79 million by the Dodgers.

"We're never going to be in a market that allows a $100 million payroll," Dombrowski says. "Would I like to have the Dodgers' money to spend? Sure."

But Dombrowski concluded that he bleeds Marlin teal rather than Dodger blue. Instead of guiding the Dodgers' spending spree this past winter, he chose to remain with a Florida franchise that has financial problems, few stars, an inadequate ballpark and little fan support.

"I really didn't want to leave," he says. "There's a part of me that feels like I'm a Marlin."

Even before new owner John Henry completed his purchase of the team this winter, he persuaded Dombrowski to stay. The Marlins subsequently were able to keep most of their staff in scouting and player development, a group that built one of the best farm systems in baseball.

"Dave was really the glue of this organization," Henry says. "No one in the front office had a contract at that point. If Dave had left, I believe very few of our baseball people would have stayed. We would have been decimated."

"The reaction throughout the organization when he re-signed indicated to me that was the best move the owner could make."

Because of the perception that Huizenga bought the World Series title, Dombrowski received little credit for building a champion. Then Huizenga ordered the payroll slashed, and Dombrowski was forced to trade Sheffield, Kevin Brown, Al Leiter, Robb Nen, Bobby Bonilla and Charles Johnson, among others.

Quarterbacks the talk in NFL draft hype

■ The 1999 NFL draft is considered by many the best draft for quarterbacks since the legendary 1983 class.

By Dave Goldberg
Associated Press

NEW YORK — So much for the "best available athletes," the players every coach says he'll draft regardless of position.

When the NFL draft begins Saturday, those players — Ricky Williams, Champ Bailey, Chris Clayborne, Torry Holt and Jevon Kearse — will wait while Tim Couch, Akili Smith, Donovan McNabb and Daunte Culpepper are chosen.

That's because Couch and his co-stars are quarterbacks, and this is the best draft for QBs since 1983, when six went in the first round. Two of those six, John Elway and Dan Marino, are sure Hall of Famers, and a third, Jim Kelly, has a good shot.

On the other hand ...

"You're not going to look five years from now and say, 'Boy, all these guys are great.' Down the road it might be just two of them," said Indianapolis Colts coach Jim Mora, who made a good choice last season by drafting Peyton Manning over Ryan Leaf at No. 1.

History says Mora's right. Of the three other first-round QBs in '83, Ken O'Brien and Tony Eason, had ordinary careers, and Todd Blackledge, the second quarterback taken (after Elway), was a bust.

So while Williams, who set an NCAA rushing record at Texas and won the Heisman Trophy, is an obvious No. 1, he'll probably have to wait a few minutes at the draft, just as friend and new Hall of Famer Eric Dickerson did when he was taken No. 2 behind Elway in '83.

This year's draft could also be socially historic.

The probable first-round quarterbacks are Couch of Kentucky, Smith of Oregon, McNabb of Syracuse, Culpepper of Central Florida and Cade McNown of UCLA. Smith, Culpepper and McNabb are black, as is another possible first rounder, Shaun King of Tulane.

For whatever reason, only three black quarterbacks have been taken in the first round — Doug Williams in 1978, Andre Ware in 1990 and Steve McNair in 1995. Warren Moon, third behind Marino and Elway in career yards passing, went undrafted in 1978 and had to go to Canada to prove himself.

While times have changed, so have styles. Of the top group, only Couch is the prototypical dropback passer NFL scouts have liked for so long.

If Couch, Smith and McNabb go 1-2-3 to Cleveland, Philadelphia and Cincinnati, the teams behind them benefit. Indianapolis, for example, picks fourth.

The Colts, who have Manning, need defense, like Bailey, the Georgia cornerback; Kearse, the Florida linebacker, and Clayborne, the Southern Cal linebacker.

They also could take Williams and trade Marshall Faulk for more picks.

The expansion Browns get the first pick and have narrowed it down to Couch, Smith or Williams. Figure Couch or Smith — coach Chris Palmer is a quarterback guru and it's easier to build around a QB.
