Faculty group squabbles over attendance

■ Before a frustrated discussion, the group votes to raise the minimum GPA needed for good academic standing.

By Carrie Johnston The Daily Iowan

Just before a frustrated discussion about scarce attendance at its meetings, the College of Liberal Arts Faculty Assembly passed a proposal Wednesday that will raise the grade point required to maintain academic "good standing" by 0.15 in the fall of 2000. Only 16 of the 90 elected members in the Faculty Assembly were present to vote for the new policy; typically, bers abstained from Wednesday's vote.

"I find it troubling that we are deciding serious educational policies with minimal attendance," said Gregg Oden, a computer science professor and vice chairman of the Faculty Assembly. "There was a recent meeting in which the vote was 6-4. We need to encourage people to attend."

The group, which in the past has voted against a Review Days Policy, to eliminate the social science and histoapproximately 30 show up. Some mem- ry CLEP tests and to enforce an enrollment cap in the Sports, Health, Leisure and Physical Studies Program, may implement an attendance policy that will notify departments when their representatives don't come to the meetings.

If the meetings were interesting, people would come, said Deirdre McCloskey, an assembly member and economics professor. Issues such as Wednesday's GPA vote are not important enough, she said.

"There are too many faculty meetings as it is," she said. "Faculty are responsible for too much time. We should raise the bar on the importance of issues we discuss and shorten the meetings."

The new grade policy will become effective for all UI freshmen and sophomores in the fall of 2000. The current minimums, 1.7 for freshmen (29 or fewer earned credit hours) and 1.85 for sophomores (30-59 hours), will both be raised by 0.15, becoming 1.85 and 2.0 respectively. Students with 60 or more credit hours are already required to maintain a 2.0 minimum and will not be affected. A 2.0 GPA is mandatory to complete a degree at the UI.

After earning as many as 60 hours, raising a GPA by 0.15 is not a small task, which is why the committee voted for the new standard, said Fred Antczak, Educational Policy Committee chairman and the associate dean of Academic Programs.

- Marisa Sullivan, on why she should be an MTV VJ

By Steven Cook The Daily Iowan

For four days this week, UI sophomore Marisa Sullivan was the star she had always dreamed of being.

Her star faded, however, as she failed to make it to the final round in MTV's Wanna be a VJ Too contest.

Though she lost in her bid to be an MTV VJ, the 19-year-old business major said she was astounded at the response she received. She was recognized on the streets of New York while a semi-finalist in the contest, she said, and she even signed several autographs.

"I'm usually the one languishing in the background, scrounging for the limelight," she said Wednesday night from her Manhattan hotel. "Everyone knew that I was with MTV. That was the best part."

Sullivan spent Wednesday afternoon on national TV, competing with 11 other semi-finalists for a spot in the finals. She made it through the first cuts of the show but was not one of the final five chosen to move on.

More than 6,000 prospective VJs tried out for the spot. Sullivan was announced as a finalist Sunday.

At the beginning of Wednesday's show, each of the 12 contestants got 30 seconds to explain why he or she should be a VJ. After each Wanna-be VJ pleaded his or her case, four contestants were then eliminated.

Sporting a red star on her cheek and wearing pants that VJ Dave Holmes referred to as "kissy pants," Sullivan pleaded her case by declaring she was going to make the viewers say "unnngh.

"I'm going to be the most passionate VJ you will ever experience here at MTV," she said. "We need my dynamic theatrics here. We need my vivaciousness. We need a fun-loving, meat-andpotatoes kind of girl."

The eight remaining contestants were then asked a question by MTV VJ Carson Daly. Sullivan drew a quéstion about which musician's life would See VJ, Page 5A

Though the Union Bar was filled to the extreme, Liz Phair still cooked ex-MC Vanilla Ice like a pound of bacon in ticket sales.

SCOPE estimated that 1,300 to 1,400 fans paid $18 to see rocker Liz Phair perform in the Union Main Lounge Wednesday night. Phair is on tour promoting her new album, WhiteChocolateSpaceEgg.

A few blocks away, approximately 700 Vanilla Ice fans shelled out $15 and waited through an hour-long delay to see Vanilla Ice perform his new act at the Union Bar, 121 E. College St. At times, the concert got out of control, make fun of s forcing musicians to stop playing.

The battle of the bands forced Iowa City concert-goers to choose between Phair, a modern-rock artist, and Vanilla Ice, an early-'90s hip hop bestseller.

"I thought about seeing Vanilla Ice for sheer camp value, but I'd rather see Liz Phair," UI senior Eric Williams said.

But Phair organizers said they didn't see much of a problem with both concerts being the same evening.

"I don't think Vanilla Ice attracts the same crowd," SCOPE Director Ryan Barker said.

Despite the unlikelihood of anyone's having an attraction to both acts, some music lovers hoped to make it to both shows. But coming so late in the semester, money was an issue for those thinking of attempting a concert two-fer.

"I can't justify paying $15 to go ake fun of some guy," UI junior See CONCERTS, Page 5A

A UI alumna and native Serbian says she's worried about how her country and her people are being portrayed during NATO's extended bombings of Yugoslavia.

not to judge her people too quickly. "You should desperately ask for the ultimate truth right now," she said. "You deserve the truth. Every country has good and bad people." As she watches the bombings on BELGRADE, Yugoslavia Yugoslavia accused NATO jets of blasting apart a convoy of refugees under Serb police escort Wednesday. The alliance said its pilots fired on military vehicles only, and the Pentagon suggested that Serbs may have been responsible for the carnage.

Video of the scene taken under Serb control showed bloody bodies scattered along a roadway, with damaged farm vehicles and bombed-out buildings nearby. People in rough peasant clothing loaded the dead and wounded into cars or wheelbarrows to transport them. A young boy sobbed bitterly.

The civilian bloodshed came as

NATO warplanes zeroed in on Serb targets throughout Kosovo, hammering ground forces in an effort to limit troop movement and force Yugoslav President Slobodan Milosevic to accept a peace deal for the province.

NATO targeted military barracks, transmitters carrying the state-run television program and a series of bridges late Wednesday and early today in attacks that reportedly injured three people, the state-run Tanjug news agency said.

Earlier Wednesday, the European Union voiced support for a U.N. plan that calls on Milosevic to end his crackdown in Kosovo, while Germany called for a 24-hour halt in bombings to allow Serb forces to withdraw from

Career adviser wins Washington Center Award

David Fitzgerald, a senior career adviser in Career Development Services at the UI, recently received the 1999 Liaison of the Year Award from the Washington Center for Internships and Academic Seminars.

Fitzgerald was recognized for his efforts to coordinate internships in Washington, D.C., for UI students and his professional involvement with Washington Center programs. He serves on the center's Liaison Advisory Board, a group of university representatives who provide input on the center's operations and programs.

Fitzgerald has worked in Career Development Services for 11 years and has been a liaison with the center for eight years. The UI has had a relationship with the center for approximately 20 years, and approximately 450 of its students have been placed in for-credit internship programs at governmental agencies, congressional offices, law firms, non-profit agencies and news

"Dave has been a very important factor in the advancement of this program through his efforts to make UI students and faculty aware of these internships. It's a well-deserved honor," said Phillip E. Jones, UI vice president for Student Services and dean

The center honored Fitzgerald at its 1999 Honor Roll Scholarship Awards on March 24 in Washington, where leading internship programs, agency supervisors and academic lecturers were recognize

Founded in 1975, the center has provided more than 24,000 students with a comprehensive, participatory learning experience in Washington. ■ Keita Kashiwagi, biding his time until medical school, has been named the top student employee.

The Daily Iowan

When Keita Kashiwagi graduated with a B.A. in biology from the UI in 1997, tutoring UI undergraduates wasn't exactly what he expected to be doing two years later.

But when his acceptance to the UI College of Medicine fell through, he had to find something else to do.

So Kashiwagi turned to tutoring for the UI's Special Support Services as a source of income while he waited for another shot at med school. Now, after a year on the job, he has been named the UI's Student Employee of the Year.

Kashiwagi will receive his award today from Phillip Jones, vice president for Student Services and dean of students, in the New Dimensions in Learning office in Calvin Hall.

Last semester, Kashiwagi took a full schedule of classes. This spring, he is enrolled in only one course, tutoring 20 hours per week for Special Support Services and five more hours on his own.

Kashiwagi is responsible for 10-12 students, compared with three

Even though tutoring was not his original plan, Kashiwagi said, it is still very rewarding.

He also said he has enjoyed the relationships he has with his students, many of whom have requested him for future tutoring assignments.

"I like to keep the sessions informal, because it makes them like me more," he said. "From experience, when I hate a teacher, I don't learn from him or her."

One of Kashiwagi's students, UI junior Janelle Keil, said her tutor is clearly not one of those teachers she hates.

"He's got a lot of enthusiasm," she said. "You can tell he really likes the subject, and so he really gets into it."

Kashiwagi said that enthusiasm is something that sets tutors apart from regular students who get

A new program in the College of Engineering aims to offer students studying water management more opportunities for learning than merely studying the Iowa River.

A new program sends students to study in such places

as India, China and Taiwan.

Engineering students

study water worldwide

The program, called International Perspectives, sends students to study water-resource planning worldwide. It is the brainchild of Mechanical Engineering Professor V.C. Patel, who says the best way to learn about alternate water management techniques is through direct experience.

"The world is so interconnected that, if you are to plan or understand any international project, you must go to the source," Patel said. "It is important for students to realize that designing a dam in Nicaragua is quite different from a dam in Bolivia."

In January, the first International Perspectives trip sent a group of 13 students to India for three weeks. Future programs include Taiwan and Japan later this spring and China in the fall of 2000.

Patel said students don't come home merely with new scientific knowledge, they also learn how to apply engineering concepts while taking into account cultural, historical and geographical factors.

The ability to understand how other countries manage their resources is one of the keys to being a successful engineer in a competitive international market, said Kevin Nielsen, a UI engineering graduate student who participated in the trip to India.

"India was of particular interest to me from an engineering perspective," Nielsen said. "Waterresources management is extremely challenging in India, because it is a country with a high population and limited resources."

Nielsen, who is also planning to go to China — another country with a high population and limited resources — said the trip to India was a very intense study experience and ultimately beneficial to his career.

"Most people in the engineering college are not thinking along the lines of international work," Nielsen said. "Maybe some will start thinking about it with this as an opportunity."

Y2K test causes brief outage

Y2K tests at an energy company prompted a 15-minute power outage on parts of the campus Wednesday afternoon, UI officials said.

UI workers switched the UI's energy supply from its MidAmerican Energy supplier over to the UI's generators at approximately 1:15 p.m. MidAmerican Energy was testing its systems to ensure they will continue to work on Jan. 1, 2000.

When the switch was made at 1:30 p.m., fans controlling the Ul's boiler generators stopped, causing a power failure in several UI buildings, said Steve Parrott, associate director of University Relations.

Affected buildings included several on the East Side of campus, and Rienow, Slater and Quadrangle Residence Halls, the Pharmacy Building, the Boyd Law Building and the Hydraulics Lab on the west side.

Local doctor faces a new lawsuit lowa City physician Douglas E. Dawson, who was named in a malpractice suit Monday, was cited in a second suit Tuesday, according to Johnson County court records.

The second plaintiff, Susan Bauman of lowa City, alleges that Dawson performed two separate ear surgeries on her without her prior consent in April and May of 1997.

The suit also alleges that Dawson failed to treat complications of the second surgery, a left ear ossiculoplasty.

Bauman and her husband, Barry, are asking for compensation of medical expenses, lost wages and pain and suffering.

In the suit Monday, Francis L. Christman, of Solon, alleged that Dawson committed malpractice in two nasal surgeries in 1997. The alleged malpractice occurred about the same time as Bauman's surgeries.

Otologic Medical Services is named as a defendant in both suits. Mercy Medical Center and Town Square ENT Services of Coralville are also named in the Christman suit.

Dawson is currently practicing at Otologic, but was employed at Town Square ENT at some point during Christman's treatment.

Officials at Otologic would not comment on the suits.

Bauman's attorney, Nestor Lobodiak, was unavailable for comment.

500,000 tragic stories later

The refugees' stories get uglier and uglier as they recount the same tale: death, destruction and systematic theft by the Serbs.

> By Mort Rosenbaum Associated Press

KUKES, Albania - By now, after a half-million ghastly stories, the ugly picture is getting steadily uglier: It is one of Serb terror and murder ripping deep Albanian roots from Kosovo soil.

As NATO pursues its relentless campaign in the air, Serbs probe the Albanian border and pepper a no-man's land with mines to show they are masters on the ground.

"They are now everywhere," wailed Zade Haridinaj, among at least 2,000 refugees who crossed Wednesday from Drenica, a last redoubt of the Kosovo Liberation Army. Her group hid in the mountains for a month before riding a tractor convoy to Albania.

"The last thing we saw was Serbs beating our men to death, maybe 300 or 400 of them, including boys over 14," she said. Another 4,000 refugees, mostly women, were following on foot, she said. Even with tractors, the trip took three days. Five children died of exposure in her cluster of tractors.

Her 84-year-old mother-in-law, Hafize Haridinaj, described how Serb paramilitary units shot to death 150 men suspected of KLA ties on March 27 in the nearby village of Izmic. Zade said her brother was among them.

Many in the group said Serbs placed their tanks and artillery near refugee convoys, apparently especially the Albanians, to be employed. When they return, they won't have a place to work," she said. An especially poignant moment for Perovic occurred Monday, when a NATO missile hit a passenger train, killing 10 civilians. Despite NATO's claim that the bombing of Yugoslavia was meant to save the Kosovars, Perovic said she believes NATO's actions have only worsened the crisis.

"The people are refugees because of the bombing. If they moved because of the Serbs, they wouldn't have moved into Montenegro," she said. But law Professor Burns Weston, who delivered a Global Focus lecture this week concerning the Kosovo situation, said Perovic's portrayal of events isn't altogether accurate. "There were lots of Kosovars who fled Kosovo long before the bombing began," he said. "The explosive refugee outpouring is a consequence of the hostilities that were started, not by NATO, but by Milosevic driving them out deliberately."

Nevertheless, Perovic said, she worries that people aren't getting the full story of the conflict in Kosovo.

"This is the war of the West to have control of the East - especially the Balkans," she said. Starting with the restructuring of Poland in 1980, to the division of Czechoslovakia, to the fall of the Soviet empire, Perovic believes Yugoslavia is another obstacle in the West's path of power.

"The one who stood against these changes was Milosevic," Perovic said. "If (those who elected him) feel he's doing a bad job, they will be the ones to remove him."

Weston said Yugoslavia wouldn't have its current problems if it would simply "join the West and the democratization of the 21st century," as several nations in Eastern Europe have done. He added that Milosevic's record shows the Yugoslav president is "a thug and a butcher."

Yelena Perhunkova, a UI graduate student originally from Russia, has also been paying close attention to the conflict.

"I'm really scared of the possibility of war between the United States and Russia," Perhunkova said.

Weston said he believes the Russians have legitimate concerns about how Yugoslavia's problems could soon become their own.

"I believe that within the next 10-20 years, that country will eventually be broken up, too," he said.

Quayle officially tosses his 'potatoe' in the ring

HUNTINGTON, Ind. (AP)— Former Vice President Dan Quayle, trying to refurbish his image and jump-start his GOP presidential campaign, declared his candidacy Wednesday by pledging to rebuild American values after "a dishonest decade of Bill Clinton and Al Gore."

Seeking office for the first time since he and President Bush succumbed to Clinton and Gore in 1992, the former Indiana senator sought to push beyond a history of political gaffes and controversies. "Murphy Brown is gone, and I'm still here fighting for the American family," he said.

Quayle's use of the TV sitcom in the BRAINTREE, Mass. - In an nstant, Maria Grasso went from aby sitter for a millionaire to milnaire baby sitter.

The 54-year-old Chilean immigrant came forward Wednesday to aim the $197 million Big Game ackpot, the world's biggest lottery prize ever won by one person. She eat odds of 76 million-1.

"I couldn't believe it," she said. "I haven't had time to think clearly." She decided to take the money in a lump sum of $104 million $70.2 million after taxes - instead of in 26 annual installments.

Radical treatment may face new controversy

WASHINGTON - Cancer researchers and patients are expecting longawaited studies on bone-marrow transplants in treating advanced breast cancer to have inconclusive results, and thus, are bracing for new controversy over whether women should undergo the costly and difficult treatment.

Even before the data are released today, they are working to ensure that insurance companies will continue to pay for the treatment.

"The real dilemma we're in is, what happens now," said Dr. Harmon Eyre of the American Cancer Society. "We think it's important that women still have the procedure covered until we have absolutely definitive studies."

Important education issues surface following letter debate

The recent flap stemming from a letter written by popular and outspoken UI School of Religion Professor Jay Holstein is an example of how not to communicate with bosses to air grievances.

Writing a letter and sending it to people who will not or cannot make changes will not get grievances redressed. Playing the flap out in the pages of The Daily Iowan does not help, either.

If all Holstein wanted was chalk and a smaller class size, the UI should have made such arrangements. His classes mean bales of money for the school, and attract students in search of general education credits from outside the reli-

What this controversy did do is raise some important issues that affect all departments at the UI.

· Is bigger better? The recent push by Gov. Tom Vilsack to reduce class size in elementary schools could apply to the university. Increased student-teacher contact makes for a more enriching learning experience. Taking a class with hundreds of other students may be a economic boon for the university, but it comes at the expense of learning. As Holstein said, "All students are important, and they deserve their money's worth." Watching a professor "perform" in front of 600 students may be entertaining but is not always an enriching learning experience.

• Feedback. Procedures must be in place to prevent such rifts in the future. Firing a letter off to the boss listing demands and ultimatums is not always the best avenue to air a grievance. Students are asked repeatedly each semester by many different groups to rate the quality of classes and suggest possible improvements. Faculty have the opportunity to do this as well and must use these formal methods.

 Communication. Holstein's letter was apparently enough to prompt Linda Maxson, dean of the College of Liberal Arts, to make the faculty change that removed him from some general education classes - without contacting him in person or otherwise. This shows a communication breakdown at high university levels. Following up the letter, in person or otherwise, seems a logical and obvi-

Holstein got part of his wish. He will not teach in Macbride Auditorium next semester. Students will benefit from another interesting and energetic semester of Holstein's teaching. The UI received some feedback regarding important fac-

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Columnist catnaps through most pertinent part of story

To the Editor:

Like most garden-variety ideologues, The Daily lowan columnist Lee Strang has what one might call a narcoleptic relationship with facts: He is awake for a few but slumbers in the presence of a great many others. This is, of course, a highly convenient affliction when arguing against the need for hate-crimes legislation. ("Persecuting, er, prosecuting those with moral beliefs," DI/April 13.)

It allows him, for instance, to doze off when police departments around the country report that attacks against gays and lesbians have been on the rise these last few years, precipitously in places.

He is free to sleep the sleep of babes as the rest of us read about Abner Louima, the Haitian man whose police torturers would apparently have received no more than a departmental reprimand were it not for a hate crime statute on race "that allowed federal prosecutors to intervene.

And he is able to sink into the reverie of dreams, perhaps of his own persecution, as another gay man is beaten and decides never to report the crime because he is closeted and ashamed of what has been done to him.

Hate-crimes legislation is not perfect. It raises difficult questions, in the abstract, about punishing motivation. But then that is nothing new to the criminal justice system. Intent has long been a criterion in the sentencing for murder.

As with his article on affirmative action, Strang clings to the trappings of legal formalism - the notion of the justice system as a principle-generating machine rather than a human, fallible institution — but unfortunately, his analysis doesn't bear the lightest scrutiny.

My modest proposal is that the DI might, while still preserving the diversity of viewpoints Strang calls for, save whatever nominal fee he is paid by having the Heritage Foundation and the American Family Association simply fax their public-relations materials directly to your editorial office.

Why pay the middle man? We would, of course, be denied the felicity of Strang's prose. But then, as he would doubtless agree, economic efficiency has its consequences.

Know your way around small claims court

Everyone is wronged every once in a while. Sometimes these wrongs cost money. If the amount of damage is under $4,000, then you are qualified to approach small claims court.

The first thing to consider is that small claims court is informal compared with other courts. It is possible that a person who doesn't understand the phrase "res ipsa loquitor" could still succeed in small claims. The magistrates in Johnson County, for example, are used to students coming in with their claims; they have varying styles, but all will be helpful in allowing you to get your side of the story out.

The first step to get the ball rolling is to file a complaint. For this, you will need your name and address along with the name and address of the person you are complaining about. You should have $30 or a check made out to the Johnson County Clerk of Court for $30. You must also have a good idea of how much you are asking for. Once you have gathered this information, you can file a complaint at the Johnson County Courthouse, 417 S. Clinton St., by going to the "small claims" area of the Clerk of Court desk and asking for a blank complaint. If you have questions about filling out this form, you can ask the clerk.

Once you have filed a complaint, you must serve your adversary with an "Original Notice" along with a copy of the complaint that has been filed. This is done through one of two methods.

First, you can have them served through a certified letter, which costs $5.52 per defendant. But some people are savvy - or have just been sued a lot — so they will not accept a certified letter. You can have the sheriff serve these people. For this service, you must present a check for $30. The price of the service is then based on a complicated formula involving the sheriff's time and the amount of miles the sheriff traveled. Whatever money is not used in service is given back to you at the conclusion.

Once the other party has received notice of the action, it will have 20 days to answer to the complaint. In this response, the other party can also make what are called "counter claims." For example, if you were suing to get your damage deposit back from your landlord, the landlord might take this opportunity to make a counter claim that you actually did a lot more damage than your deposit covered and that he or she would like another $1,000 to cover the head-sized holes someone put in the wall at your last party.

If the other party does not answer within 20 days, you might be able to get a default judgment. This means that you won. However, collecting on this judgment is a whole other matter.

LEGAL NOTICE

This article is not meant as legal advice. Consult an attorney for advice on your legal questions or situations.

Most times the other party will file an answer with the court. When the answer is filed, the court will set a date for your small claims hearing. The amount of time before your hearing varies quite a bit. You and the other party will receive information on the date and time of the hearing. It is now time to get your stuff together and prepare.

Depending on the day, when you arrive at court for your hearing there may be no other case or there may be 20. At the beginning, the magistrate will call each case up and ask the person if he or she is interested in mediation. This is an opportunity for both la I spent most of sides to meet with a neutral party to try to to different parts come to some sort of agreement. We can't put off the fight for universal human rights OMEN'S rights are human rights, so the seemingly intuitive slogan goes. If only it were true in Afghanistan.

When the ultra-fundamentalist Taliban seized power in 1996, the United Nations, -United States and other Western nations heralded the regime for bringing peace to most of its nation.

The government was erroneously labeled as a group of "gentle young scholars," as "Talib" means "student." In reality, the Taliban was and remains a bloodthirsty military junta that continues to wage war in northern Afghanistan.

Although some of the civil war has come to an end with the Taliban's reign, a new battle has emerged: a war on women.

Before the Taliban takeover, women comprised 70 percent of teachers, 50 percent of civil government workers and 40 percent of doctors in the capital of Kabul. Particularly in urban areas, women were part of a rich tradition of employment outside the home and of education.

But that came to an abrupt end in 1996. A series of gender-apartheid laws decreed that girls could no longer attend school and women couldn't work. Afghan women point out that these practices contradict the Islamic religion, which allows women to work, pursue an education, earn and control their own money and participate in public life.

Women and girls in Afghanistan are essentially under house arrest, as they are only allowed to go outside for a few government-sanctioned activities. They cannot even look outside because windows must be made out of opaque glass. The government has recently passed laws making the practice of caging birds and other pets illegal.

Thus, women are treated with less humanity and dignity than animals.

When women do venture out in the outside world, they must be accompanied by a male chaperone from their intimate family. They cannot speak to or touch men whom they are not related to. Afghan law requires females to wear a burqa, a garment which covers every inch of their bodies and restricts their vision. Many women have been killed in traffic accidents as a result, but the reactionary Taliban has said that these cases should be a lesson that "women [belong] in the home or in the grave."

Burqas are also extremely expensive, costing three to five months' salary. For many women it is impossible to leave their homes at all, even in the case of a medical emergency. Women and girls are also forbidden from receiving care from male doctors. Since women can no longer practice medicine, thousands of women and girls have become severely ill or have died from lack of care.

More than 120 groups around the world, including the European Parliament, Amnesty International and the Feminist Majority, have united against the Taliban's war on women. The groups work with organizations within the country and have provided aid to both women and men, but the government has recently cracked down. The 55-nation Organization of the Islamic Conference has also refused to admit the Taliban because its policies are not consistent with Muslim ideals.

But there is an even darker side to the Taliban system of gender apartheid - that of violence. Women are stoned to death for adultery. If women walk or talk as loudly as men or let an ankle show, they risk being beaten, raped, whipped, mutilated or murdered by armed guards while fearful citizens look on. They have no legal recourse or rights.

U.N. reports reveal that abductions and gang rapes are a frequent practice, and mass graves of dismembered women were discovered more than a year ago. As long as the Taliban remains in power, these atrocities will continue indefinitely

Yet the United Nations itself has done little to end these horrors

When negotiating peace in 1996, U.N. envoy Mahmood Mestiri publicly admitted that he never intended to address the Taliban's human-rights violations, because relations are "a complicated business and bringing women into the equation would only further confuse the issue.'

Although both the United States and the United Nations haven't recognized the Taliban, their leaders have done little to help Afghanistan besides providing lip service. Both President Bill Clinton and Secretary of State Madeleine Albright have called the "despicable" but have never suggested deploy ing troops as they have done in Kosovo. Perhaps their reluc tance stems from how many of the Taliban's officials were trained by the C.I.A. and because of U.S. business interests in the region. Powerful oil companies such as UNOCAL, which want to build a multi-billion-dollar pipeline through Afghanistan, have given the Taliban their vocal support.

And maybe it's because women's rights still aren't considered human rights. Viola tions against women remain unchecked around the world: In China, infanticide is routinely practiced against baby girls; in Jordan, women are killed for being raped and in the U.S., poor women of color have endured forced sterilization for decades.

Meanwhile, the blood of women still flows down Afghanistan's streets. How long must we wait until women are finally considered human?

IFE'S not fair. Everyone knows that. During the past two months, the UI community has had to face this unfair world, as students are suffering the consequences of their zeal for alcohol.

While alcohol abuse has been a hot topic at the UI for a while, several recent incidents suggest stuents are not only having difficulty ndling their liquor. They're also aving trouble accepting the consences for their actions

These alcohol-related incidents ave marred the UI campus and mished its image. The UI is not lone, though. National surveys, ews headlines and studies about cohol abuse on campus have put iversities across the country inder the microscope. The public, ed to believe that all college stu-

has delivered. Thwarted alcohol policies and the ensuing "brewhahas" have forced the resignation of the women's gymnastics coach, Diane DeMarco, caused the temporary suspension of several gymnasts and, most recently, led to the loss of Delta Tau Delta's charter. Sure, life's unfair, but not to the people who broke the rules and did not get away with it.

If you feel the punishments doled out to the gymnasts and fraternity members are unfair, that's fine. If not, that's fine, too.

What's not fine is whom we point fingers at. DeMarco? The Delta Tau Delta international office? Wrong.

The blame lies with the students who broke the rules - rules they knew, rules they agreed to honor. Those who knew they would be unable to meet the no-alcohol policies should not have made a pact they could not honor.

DeMarco's decision — to not turn a blind eye and make good on her end of the bargain, to not tolerate athletes' association with alcohol during the season - took guts, and she can be proud of her convictions. (The gymnasts' punishment is another story.)

frustrations of the effort to break the stereotype of the drunken college student.

The grace of the gymnasts who served their punishments is a step in the right direction. Even if the punishments were unequal and harsher than expected, the gymnasts paid their dues. Too bad people are more likely to remember the negative news than the positive news about what college students do.

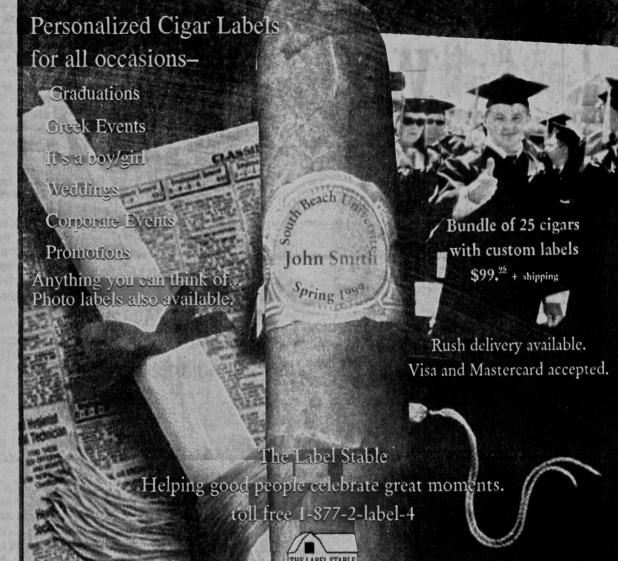

Banners and a drunken fest at the Delta Tau Delta house made for the least graceful exit for the Delts. Instead of being remembered positively and building on a 119-year legacy, the Delts said to everyone that college students are all drunkards, as suspected. The Delts will be remembered for their last hurrah, broken chairs, police, noise complaints and all.

Thanks for the memories.

If the UI community is going to make itself shine and dispel the myth that alcohol and college are synonymous, it's going to take more DeMarcos and other leaders who are willing to enforce the alcohol policies they make.

UI should talk up need for renter's insurance

The UI has expressed concern for the 40 students recently left homeless following three Iowa City fires. But that concern has barely begun to help the students.

I have seen the concern the UI has expressed for its students in distress. I believe the UI has a responsibility to heighten the awareness of all students living in dorms, apartments and houses of the need for insurance. I am a student currently living in a residence hall. and I was unaware about the UI's insurance policy not covering my belongings in case of a fire in the residence halls. During summer orientation, incoming students are informed of the UI's insurance policies, but I do not remember insurance coverage being discussed.

At this time, quite a bit of information is presented, and insurance seems to be lost in the shuffle. Therefore, I believe insurance coverage should be emphasized more in the future.

Finally, I feel that the UI should also implement a policy to ensure that students suffering from unusual circumstances, such as those produced by the recent fires; receive appropriate attention from all of their professors and involved faculty.

This policy would help them cope with the loss of their academic notes, books and materials, as well as their personal belongings. Extended deadlines, loaned textbooks, revised tests and possible oral examinations are a few examples that might be included in this proposal.

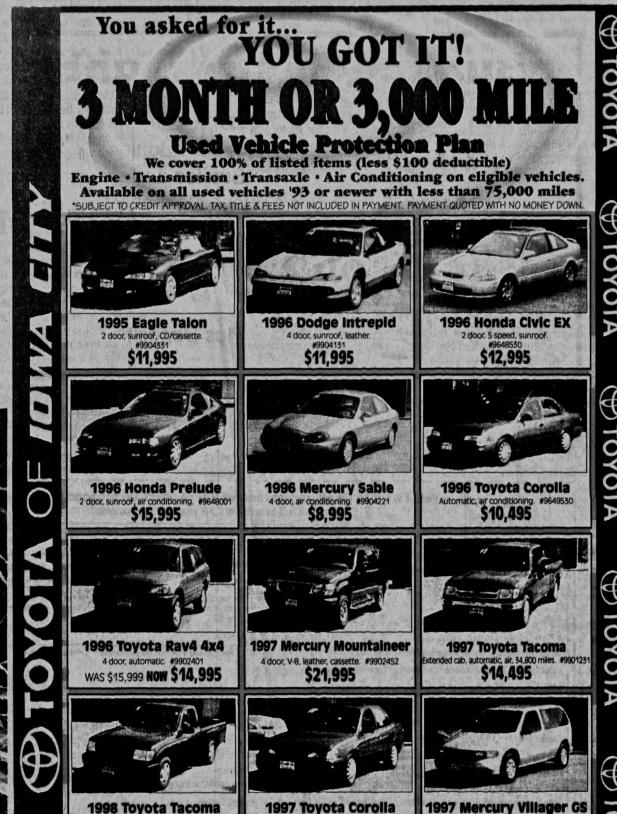

The Red Cross, Hy-Vee and other local businesses and organizations have done a phenomenal job in assisting students with the personal aspects of their losses due to the fires. Now that the community has shown support, the UI should do its part to assist its students.

UI SPORTS BRIEF

Houston

Swimming team awaits coaching announcement

The long wait for the lowa men's swimming team will come to a close this week when the men's athletics department is expected to nnounce its choice for who will lead the program into the next century.

Many of the returning players want the "interim" taken off of current coach John Davey's official title, and for him to remain as coach. Davey took over shortly after former coach Glenn Patton resigned Sept. 10.

"Everyone wants John to stay, we all like him," sophomore Jay Glenn said. "It's been difficult for the upperclassmen, and it's going to be even more difficult for them if John isn't there."

Associate Athletics Director Larry Bruner said the five-person committee that interviewed the finalists was looking for certain characteristics. Bruner also said the decision has been made as to who the head coach is, and that the announcement is pending the approval from the UI Affirmative Action Office, which is required for all new hires at the UI.

"Affirmative action takes a few days," Bruner said. "We'll know sometime Thursday or Friday." - Todd Hefferman

"Every muscle in my body was flexed and I was all swollen up like (pro wrestler) Goldberg," Holman said. "I even felt it in my jaw.

Though it was never medically proven, Holman believes the athletic performance supplement creatine played a big part in the scary experience. The supplement, which retains water in the body, may have contributed to his severe dehydration.

Before two-a-day practices were over, Holman made two scary trips to the hospital, during which IVs of saline were administered to help his body regain

"I think creatine could have had something to do with the cramping," Holman said. "Since then, I stopped taking creatine and have been drinking more water and I haven't had a cramp since.

Holman's experience isn't unusual. With increasing pressure to perform at a high level, many athletes are resorting to creatine to maximize their performances. Opinions on the supplement are mixed, with both sides saying more research needs to be done on the relatively new substance before any concrete conclusions can be established.

"Any sportsman or sportswoman who is using it is taking a risk," former Iowa wrestling coach Dan Gable said.

Background

Though creatine was discovered back in the 1830s, it wasn't viewed as beneficial for athletes until 1961, when Dr. Nikolai Volkov, a biochemist and sports nutritionist for the Soviet Olympic team, accurately predicted the value of the supplement for the Russians.

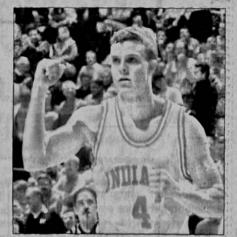

Not until the 1970s, though, did the suplement gain popularity in the U.S. Since then, it has exploded. According to a 1997 report in USA Today, domestic sales of the supplement were in the $100 million range and expected to grow at a 25-percent annual clip.

The supplement became popular among

■ Luke Recker, Indiana's leading scorer, announced Wednesday he was leaving the Hoosiers.

By James Kramer The Daily Iowan

If the rumors are true, new Iowa men's basketball coach Steve Alford could be close to snatching one of his former coach's top players.

Indiana junior-to-be guard Luke Recker, the Hoosiers' leading scorer. last season with 16.1 points per game, announced Tuesday his decision to leave Bob Knight's team. He said he did not know where he would transfer, but there is speculation that Recker wants to come to Iowa to play for Alford, a two-time All-American with the Hoosiers.

CNN/SI reported that a source within the Indiana program said Recker would probably go to Iowa. He would have to sit out a year, then would have two years of eligibility

Recker's telephone number in Bloomington, Ind., is unlisted, and his parents could not be reached for comment. His father, Clair, lives in nearby Washington, Iowa, but was staying at a hotel in Auburn, Ind., Wednesday night. Recker's mother lives in Auburn, where the player Alford's secretary referred tele-

Inconsistency delivers lowa a split at home

By Tony Wirt The Daily Iowan

Once again, inconsistency ruled the Iowa softball team.

After taking the first game of its Wednesday doubleheader with the Illinois State Redbirds, 4-3, things fell apart for the Hawkeyes who dropped the second game 2-0.

"We've been struggling in doubleheaders," freshman pitcher Kristi Hanks said. "We've been able to go out and win the first one, then it seems like we are satisfied. We need to come out and get that second one."

In game one, Iowa used seven singles in the first four innings to build a 4-0 lead while Hanks was cruising on the mound. The Santa Fe native held the Redbirds scoreless until the top of BURLINGTON — Iowa pitcher Jim Magrane is not much of a history buff, but he might become one after his superb performance Wednesday night.

Magrane struck out 17 batters in Iowa's 13-7 victory over Western Illinois, tying a 63-year-old Hawkeye record set by Eugene Hinrichs, which was also tallied against Western Illinois.

With the exception of the first three innings, Magrane had near complete mastery over the Leatherneck batters in 7% innings at Community Field.

Seven of Magrane's 17 strikeouts caught Western Illinois batters looking. He struck out the side four times. and fanned every Leatherneck batter at least once.

Former defensive end-turned-linebacker Ryan Loftin said in the 5-2 defense, his job was containment, and now he has to deal more with zones and tight end coverage. He said last year he rushed the quarterback about 50 percent of the time, and this year, it will be considerably less than that.

football game and stop an offense," Loftin said. "This is just another." One player that has fit into the new scheme well has been junior college transfer Derrick Davison. The 6-foot-2, 235-pound Davison was recruited as a free safety coming out of North Dakota College of Science, but has moved to linebacker, where he is battling senior Travis Senters for the starting job. He said the position change will not be too difficult.

"I think a true athlete can adjust to anything," said Davison, who is nursing a broken hand. "I am used to making defensive calls at free safety, so the only other difference is that it is a lot more physical."

The new defense has brought about a shift in the depth chart, as well. Loftin, who started all 11 games last year, is not listed on the two-deep and Senters is listed below Davison.

"The new system has brought a renewed interest in moving up on the depth chart," Loftin said.

In the secondary, three starters return, including strong safety Matt Bowen, who had a team-leading 92 tackles last year. Sophomore Matt Stockdale is the leading candidate to take over for Thigpen at free safety.

Stockdale could be challenged by converted running back Doug Miller. Ferentz said Miller was moved from running back and looked strong in a scrimmage over Easter weekend. "If he can challenge for a starting position, we will keep him,"

Ferentz said. "If not, we will move him back."

Knee injuries are still hindering Clark and Rollins - so much, in fact, that their seasons may be lost. Ferentz said Clark was "touch and go" for the season and Rollins was rehabilitating his knee.

"It's going to be wait-and-see," Ferentz said of Rollins. "If we can get five plays out of him per game, I'd be happy, just to get that senior leadership and contribution. Right now, we can't count on that one, either." DI sportswriter Mike Kelly can be reached at

At Iowa, approximately 80 percent of the football team uses creatine during offseason training. The supplement is also used by the Iowa baseball players and track athletes. The cost to supply the football

out the day to avoid one of creatine's team breaks down to approximately 12 cents per day for each athlete, and 60 cents per week. For many of Iowa's athletes, creatine is a way to get an edge in their own workout routines. Taken daily, the supplement can affect an athlete's performance. Creatine is offered to Hawkeye football players on a voluntary basis. There is no pressure to consume the supplement, and it is not a requirement. Twice a week, the players pick up the supplement

"I came in at 165 pounds and went to 195 in about four to five months while staying on the creatine consistently," Humes said. "I've had more pop in my bat, gained arm strength and added more lower-body strength that has helped me behind the plate.

"I think it is good stuff, and it has worked well for me." Track athlete Tim Dodge uses creatine to help his speed in the 400-meter dash.

"I take a little lighter dosage so that my muscles don't tighten up,' Dodge said. Not all athletes have considered using the supplement, however, for one reason or another. Iowa field hockey player Aly Freet said none of her teammates use creatine. "It has never really been brought up," Freet said. "I've never thought of using it."

NEW YORK - The Cleveland Browns might be a new franchise, but they know how to play the draft game: When in doubt, peddle disinformation.

So while they say they've narrowed their choice with the No. 1 pick in Saturday's draft to Tim Couch and Akili Smith and running back Ricky Williams, they won't tip their hand.

Let's tip it for them (no guarantees, no money back):

1. They won't take Williams, because the shelf life of a good NFL running back isn't as long as they'll need to get to the Super Bowl.

2. They probably won't trade the pick unless they get something like all of New Orleans' No. 1 picks for the

3. Ty Detmer, one of many ex-49ers on Carmen Policy and Dwight Clark's roster, is an adequate QB for a team without Super Bowl aspirations and the kind of guy who can help bring along a youngster. Smith or Couch?

Chris Palmer, the Browns' coach, has been saying nice things about Smith and not so nice things about Couch, and Policy is tight with Smith's agent, Leigh Steinberg.

8. ARIZONA - They need an offensive line, but the Cardinals have a second first-rounder. TORRY HOLT, WR, North Caroli-

13. PITTSBURGH - Signing Wayne Gandy was supposed to stabilize the offensive line. Then Justin first-round Buckeye, CB ANTOINE WINFIELD, a little guy who can cover.

24. MIAMI - Jimmy Johnson got a lot from a Syracuse fullback nicknamed "Moose." ROB KON-RAD, FB, Syracuse, can run better.

25. GREEN BAY - A lot of needs for a team a year removed from its second straight Super Bowl. TROY EDWARDS, WR, Louisiana Tech, for Brett Favre's arsenal.

26. JACKSONVILLE - DEEfence, DEE-fence. PATRICK KER-NEY, de, Virgina.

27. SAN FRANCISCO - If only someone had said "Jake Plummer" instead of "Jim Druckenmiller" two years ago. Might trade down for him or take SHAUN KING, QB, Tulane a right-handed Steve Young? with this pick.

28. NEW ENGLAND - They want JAMES JOHNSON, RB, Mississippi State. They can get him here or lower.

29. MINNESOTA — They get lucky with FERNANDO BRYANT, CB, Alabama.

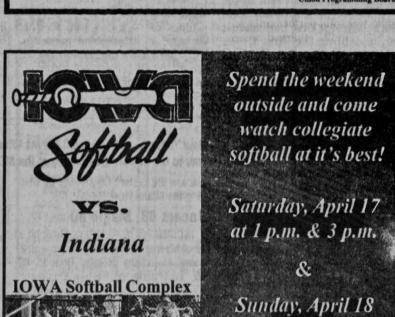

30. ATLANTA - Despite its Super Bowl trip, this is NOT the team that has everything. KEVIN JOHNSON, WR, Syracuse.

31. DENVER - A new right tackle, JON JANSEN, OT, Michigan, to replace Harry Swayne, who left for Baltimore.

76ers keep hopes alive for playoffs

PHILADELPHIA (AP) - The Philadelphia 76ers ran into a team whose playoff hopes are sinking -faster than their own.

With a scintillating 29-8 run in the second half that may have saved their season, the Sixers handed the Toronto Raptors their fifth straight loss with a 96-78 victory Wednesday night.

NBA scoring leader Allen Iverson snapped out of a shooting slump to score 20 points as Philadelphia snapped a two-game losing streak that included a horrendous 91-72 loss to the Knicks on Tuesday.

The Sixers, who entered the game tied with Cleveland for the eighth and final playoff spot in the East, appeared as dead as any team in the race in the first half against Toronto, defiling the First Union Center with their worst shooting 'half of the season (22 percent).

Hawks 77, Celtics 70

BOSTON - Dikembe Mutombo scored 16 points and grabbed 17 rebounds and Chris Crawford added 17 points as the Atlanta Hawks snapped a four-game losing streak with a 77-70 victory over the Boston Celtics on Wednesday night.

Wizards 95, Knicks 89, OT

WASHINGTON — Tracy Murray hit a 22-footer with 1:04 left in overtime to break the last tie and the Washington Wizards snapped the New York Knicks' three-game winning streak with a 95-89 victory Wednesday night.

Hornets 83, Pistons 79

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — The Charlotte Hornets won their fifth in a row Wednesday night, blowing an early 17point lead before David Wesley helped close the game with an 11-3 run for an 83-79 victory over the Detroit Pistons.

Bucks 98, Heat 86

BUFFALO, N.Y. — Scott Niedermayer scored the winning goal 2:23 into the third period as the New Jersey Devils beat the Buffalo Sabres, 2-1, on Wednesday night, setting an NHL record for road wins in a season.

The Devils improved their road record to 27-10-3. The win surpassed the record held by the 1976-77 Montreal Canadiens. They have two more games remaining, including the season finale at Magrane downplayed his success because of a rocky start. In the first three innings, he was hit hard, giving up four runs on seven hits.

"I've learned that this game can humble you pretty quick,"

But after that, he had his game on auto pilot until the eighth inning.

Iowa coach Scott Broghamer gave Magrane an opportunity to break the record, but he was unable to do so after three batters and was pulled. The coach's decision didn't upset Magrane at all.

"No big deal," Magrane said. "My pitch count was high. I had to get out of there."

The Hawkeyes were a little slow getting the bats going, not scoring until the fourth inning.

Home runs from freshmen Brian Burks and Brad Carlson accounted for a five-run fourth.

Gretzky looks within for the big decision

RYE, N.Y. (AP) — His coach, his teammates, his fans and even his wife have urged him to extend his glorious hockey career one more year.

But Wayne Gretzky alone understands what must be done, and his decision on retirement will come by the time the New York Rangers end

"I need to do what's best for myself. ... Nobody else has any bearing on this at this point in time," he said Wednesday.

Speaking after practice in a chilly room of whitewashed concrete block above the practice rink, the 38-year-old hockey great said he will decide by Sunday - "not today or tomorrow" - whether to end his 20-year career in the NHL. "I'm not trying to be an idiot about this," he said. "It's just a lifetime decision. Once it's done, it's done, 100 percent, whether I come back or I don't."

Senator turns over fight evidence to DA

ALBANY, N.Y. - A state Senate committee has turned over evidence of potential criminality in the judging of the Evander Holyfield-Lennox Lewis fight to Manhattan District Attorney Robert Morgenthau, its chairman said

"We found some rather suspicious and peculiar developments of a potentially criminal nature which we frankly turned over to the New York (County) district attorney," state Sen. Roy Goodman said Wednesday.

But now, 15 days after a national basketball title, there's a damper on the good times at Connecticut with the arrest of star point guard Khalid El-Amin on marijuana charges.

"It was a shame. I just think a lot of kids look up to these players," UConn junior Christa Veleas said.

"I felt bad for him because it's going to cause him some serious problems," junior Scott Sturman added. "And I'm not even a fan of basket-

Two homers by Hill lift Cubs to victory

CHICAGO (AP) — He's a muscu-lar outfielder with the Chicago Cubs and is one of baseball's leading home run hitters.

Sammy Sosa, of course Nope. It's Glenallen Hill - and he's not even an every-day player.

"Sammy is not the Chicago Cubs. We've got 25 guys capable of doing a job and it's our responsibility to take some of the pressure off of Sammy," Hill said Wednesday after hitting his third and fourth homers to pace a 5-4 victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

Sosa appeared to snap out of a season-long hitting slump with two doubles and a walk, but Hill supplied the power as the Cubs ended a four-game losing streak behind quick-working Jon Lieber.

Hill would normally have been on the bench against right-hander Pete Harnisch but started because Henry Rodriguez was out for a third straight game with a strained side.

Cardinals 9, Pirates 5

PITTSBURGH — Darren Bragg hit his first two NL homers and the St. Louis Cardinals squandered a four-run lead before rallying with the help of some sloppy Pittsburgh defense to beat the Pirates 9-5 Wednesday night.

-Manny Aybar (1-0) bailed out an inef-fective Kent Mercker with three scoreless relief innings and the Cardinals won their second in a row, even though Mark McGwire was 0-for-4 with two strikeouts and a walk.

Mets 4, Marlins 1

NEW YORK — John Franco became the second pitcher to reach 400 career saves, and Orel Hershiser got his first win with New York as the Mets beat the Florida Marlins, 4-1, Wednesday night and extended their winning streak to five.

Franco, 38, got his third save of season. The only reliever with more saves than Franco is Lee Smith, who retired with 478.

Expos 15, Brewers 1 MONTREAL — Chris Widger homered twice and drove in a career-high six runs, going 4-for-5 as the Montreal Expos routed the Milwaukee Brewers and Jim Abbott, 15-1, Wednesday night. -Miguel Batista (2-0) pitched a six-hitter for his first career complete game, helping the Expos stop a four-game losing streak. Batista lowered his ERA to 1.10, and went 2-for-4 at the plate. Just last Thursday, he got his first major league hit in his 42nd career at-bat.

Braves 10, Phillies 4

PHILADELPHIA - Chipper Jones, Javy Lopez and Gerald Williams homered to lead the Atlanta Braves over the Philadelphia Phillies, 10-4, Wednesday night for their third consecutive win.

Ryan Klesko went 4-for-4 to tie his career high for hits and had two RBIs as the Braves beat the Phillies for the ninth time in their last 11 meetings.

Jones, in a 7-for-34 slump with just one RBI in the season's first eight games, drove in two runs with the homer and double. gravita sall in hoc want

Chicago's Glenallen HIII is congratulated by teammate Sammy Sosa as Cincinnati catcher Eddie Taubensee watches after the pair scored on Hill's second home run Wednesday. Brian Jordan drove in a pair of runs and is 9-for-20 with eight RBIs against the Phillies this season.

American League

Tigers 7, Twins 1

DETROIT — Jeff Weaver pitched five shutout innings in his major league debut and the Detroit Tigers snapped a sixgame losing streak by beating the Minnesota Twins 7-1 Wednesday night.

Bobby Higginson homered and Tony Clark and Damion Easley each drove in two runs as Detroit, already shut out three times this season and batting only .197 coming into the game, rocked two Twins pitchers for 13 hits. The Tigers won for the first time since beating Texas 11-5 in their season opener.

Indians 11, Royals 4 CLEVELAND — Sandy Alomar hit his first homer since last August and Manny Ramirez hit a three-run shot in Cleveland's nine-run sixth inning as the Indians extended their winning streak to seven Wednesday night with an 11-4 win over the Kansas City Royals. Cleveland, which bunched all 14 of its hits in a three-inning span starting in the fourth, hasn't lost since opening day. And with another game left against Kansas City and three more over the weekend against Minnesota, it's going to take a superb pitching effort to stop the Indians.

Blue Jays 7, Devil Rays 6 (11)

TORONTO - Jose Cruz Jr. hit a gamewinning single in the 11th inning as the Toronto Blue Jays overcame Jose Canseco's 400th career home run and beat the Tampa Bay Devil Rays, 7-6, Wednesday night.

Canseco became the 28th player in major league history to reach the 400homer mark when he lined Kelvim Escobar's pitch 368 feet over the left-field wall in the third inning. Born in Cuba, Canseco is the first player born outside the United States to hit 400 homers.

Shannon Stewart scored the winning run in the 11th. He singled off Albie Lopez (0-1), stole second and beat Randy Winn's throw to the plate after Cruz's single.

Yankees 14, Orioles 7 NEW YORK - Another ugly game, another New York Yankees win. Chuck Knoblauch had five hits, including a leadoff homer, and the New York Yankees took advantage of shoddy play by Baltimore to win their seventh straight, beating the Orioles, 14-7, Wednesday night to take sole possession of the AL East lead for the first time this

An ugly relief performance by Hideki Irabu almost cost the Yankees their ninth straight home win against Baltimore. Irabu gave up five runs in one-third of an inning in his first appearance at Yankee Stadium this season. Irabu, dropped from the rotation after failing to cover first base twice in one week during spring training and called a "fat ... toad" by owner George Steinbrenner, was booed loudly as he left the field following Harold Baines' three-run homer that made it 8-7. After his homer off Scott Erickson (0-2). Knoblauch added singles in the second, fourth, fifth and seventh innings.

the '90s and the fear of committing to someone."

Robert, who has just turned 35, is beginning to experience the enigmas of a long-term relationship. The play allows the audience to enter Robert's psyche through vivid and often exaggerated re-enactments of past events. It's these events that aid in the construction of his ideas about commitment.

Earth Music is based on a simple idea that emerged in response to Earth Day.

"We were looking for something to do for Earth Week," said Seth Nieman, president of the UI Environmental Coalition. "We thought that free music outside was the best way to celebrate." The festival was designed to bring attention to the earth and, if possible, raise some money for it along the way. "Last year, we had a lot of local sponsors, but this year that didn't happen," said Nieman.

The festival still has a positive vibe going despite the lack of monetary interest.

ARTS BRIEF

That's why they call them 'adds'

NEW YORK (AP) Keep those remotes handy — the amount of ads cluttering up prime-time television is soaring.

An average hour of prime-time TV contained 15 minutes, 44 seconds of advertising last November, a jump of 25 seconds over the year before, according to a study released Sunday. It was the most ad time ever recorded since two trade groups began measuring in 1989.

At 16:27, ABC had the most "clutter" during an average prime-time hour among the top four networks. Fox had been the network leader in ad time since 1989. Both ABC and NBC pack in nearly five minutes more of ads and promotions into a prime-time hour than they did a decade ago, the report said.

The advertising community is concerned that the commercials will have less of an impact on viewers because there are too many of them, said Stuart Gray, senior vice president of audience research for the ad-buying firm BBD&O. "I don't really think that people are going to stop watching television because there are too many commercials," he said. "I think it will have the effect of causing viewers to use the remote even more than they are using it now." Daytime network television is even more cluttered. The networks added 11 seconds of commercial time last year to crack the ly brewed musicality and mingles with it his vocals, creating a concoction guaranteed to splash some hits.

"Won't Last Long" and "About To Give Out" are beautifully arranged to sound like the Petty everyone is accustomed to. And then, on the other side, there's the Petty you seldom hear with the softer, room-temperature jams such as "Room At the Top" and "Counting on You."

An all-around great album. Nothing special, nothing extreme - just Tom Petty and the Heartbreakers like you wanted to hear it.

WU-CHRONICLES

Wu-Tang Clan Just like bees on honey, Wu-Tang swarms again! Big deal. The only thing it's good for now is to play when you're really drunk and reminiscing about high school.

Don't get me wrong — I'll be loyal to Enter the Wu-Tang for life, but everything since then has been a little shaky. The Wu dropped its latest, Wu-Chronicles, which, if you did your homework, is nothing other than a compilation of previously released tracks, excluding "Latunza Hit" and "'96 Recreation." A majority are cuts featuring Wu-Tang Clan members with various other artists, such as Notorious B.I.G., Mobb Deep and Tha Alkaholiks.

If you're a Wu fan, you probably have most of these tracks on records you already own. Wu-Chronicles is basically a convenience album, which isn't a bad idea, but not necessarily a good one either.

The Wu bumps a sound that was really catchy at first. But did you ever notice that as smooth as it sounds, it's always one repetitive beat line with monotonous see-saw raps? I think that's why it got so popular - because it's so easy to sing along with and its bam-bam beats sound good on your car's stereo.

Anyway, I'll talk about the two new tracks. Actually, I won't — they sound just like the rest. Man, I think these guys are just lazy. They need something fresh, pronto. It's the same beat every time! Just listen bam-bam-hit, bam-bam-hit. They just add some different background tune. They could probably use the same rap for every Wu-Tang forever ... or maybe just for a little while longer.

"Marsalis is one of the few people who seems to be proficient in both classical and contemporary jazz," he said. "(Marsalis') interest is making sure that jazz from the Louis Armstrong and Duke Ellington era stays healthy worldwide, and we don't lose that tradition."

Jones thinks that, because Marsalis tends to focus on performing more traditional jazz than contemporary music, ticket holders to tonight's show should expect what he calls the "standards."

"The (orchestra) is going back to doing a lot of the more familiar works, like from the Ellington era, rather than modern, experimental jazz," he said.

The performance will mark the fourth time the Lincoln Center orchestra has performed at Hancher and the third time Marsalis has conducted there. Hancher Director Wally Chappell said Hancher has a long-running relationship with the group and that he is thrilled to have it return to the Hancher stage.

"Let's just say it's the best at its music. The (orchestra) has always been a very tight group, and the

"Robert is almost an avoidant type of individual," Hansen said. "He's emotionally distant and involved in relationships that aren't so healthy. Many of us probably have friends like him and can relate.

"I'm impressed by the way this play is written, and the richness and the complexity characters possess," he said.

The music of "Company," performed by a jazz ensemble, enhances the emotions of each character. Songs include "Being Alive," "Another Hundred Peo-ple" and "The Ladies Who Lunch."

"The music comments on the action and serves for some exposition," Larabee said. "The production uses a broad blend of ballads and styles. There's lots of jazz and some classic Broadway sounds, too."

In collaboration with George Furth and Harold Prince, Sondheim created "Company!" in 1970. The original production ran on Broadway for nearly 700 performances. In 1995 Sondheim and Furth created a "Company!" revival in order to synch with morecontemporary tastes. American Theater Magazine listed "Company!" as David Osterberg, a former UI professor and senatorial candidate in the 1998 election, will talk about renewable resources in Iowa in Room 166 on April 21 at 7:30 p.m.

On Earth Day, the festival will conclude with a drum circle on the Pentacrest lawn. Those who want to participate are encouraged to bring their own drums. There will also be some drums available for use.

Plans for anything other than informational aid are on hold. Donation booths and tables will be available. The festival planners do not expect to make a lot of money - if they do, however, they will use it locally.

"We have a few avenues, but right now we need to break even first," said Nieman, who expressed an interest in starting a tree-planting campaign.

"The concert and the drum circle is just a way to raise awareness that Earth Day is out there and you can make a difference. We hope to unite the people in the celebration of our earth," Nieman said.
