'We didn't think it was real'

In what authorities label a "suicide mission" at a Denver area high school, 25 people may have been slain Tuesday.

By Robert Weller
Associated Press

LITTLETON, Colo. — Two students in black trench coats swept through their suburban high school with guns and explosives in a horrifying suicide attack Tuesday that may have left 25 people dead. Several students said the killers were gunning for minorities and athletes.

It was by far the bloodiest in a string of school shootings that have rocked U.S. communities over the past few years.

"One of them opened his cape and had a shotgun. Finally I started figuring out these guys shot to kill, for no reason," said a student, Nick Claus. The gunman "didn't say anything. When he looked at me, the guy's eyes were just dead."

The gunmen — both juniors at Columbine High School in this Denver suburb — were found dead in the school library with self-inflicted gunshot wounds and what appeared to be bombs around their bodies, sheriff's spokesman Steve Davis said.

"It appears to be a suicide mission," Sheriff John Stone said.

Students said the gunmen, whose names were not released, apparently belonged to a clique of

Allies blast Serb atrocities

While pounding away from the air, NATO assails Serb attacks on Kosovars, reporting systematic terrorism.

By George Jahn
Associated Press

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — NATO jets struck a Belgrade high-rise building holding the offices of Slobodan Milosevic's ruling party early today, and the alliance accused Serb forces of flushing out Kosovars hiding in the province's hills.

The attack touched off a huge fire in the building in New Belgrade, across the Sava River from the heart of the capital. There was no immediate word on casualties, but local media said up to 50 people might have been inside.

U.S. helicopters and troops were headed toward Albania in a new phase aimed at boosting the alliance's ability to attack Yugoslav ground forces and stop their campaign to rid Kosovo of its Kosovar majority.

NATO spokesman Jamie Shea said Serb military and paramilitary forces were shelling hills where Kosovars had fled, marching the refugees on roads and putting them on trains to the border, then closing the frontier to them.

"What we are seeing as we study these movements of people is a kind of safari operation ongoing by the Serb security forces against the Kosovar Albanians," Shea said.

He told reporters at NATO headquarters in Brussels, Belgium, that the alliance was investigating reports of 700 Kosovar boys as young as 14 being used either as "human shields or as blood banks for Serb casualties."

Refugees also said as many as 700 men were used as human shields last week near the town of Oraovac. There was no independent confirmation of the report.

The accusations came as the alliance continued its four-week assault on Yugoslavia, hammering targets in a dozen towns and cities Tuesday and early today.

Firefighters rushed to the scene of the New Belgrade attack to battle flames leaping from the upper floors.

Media reports said at least three missiles struck the 20-story structure which houses several offices owned by the Yugoslav President's Socialist party.

Stars For UI student, 10 long, agonizing minutes

A recent graduate of Columbine High School was in shock as he waited for word about his sister, who attends Columbine High.

By Steven Cook
The Daily Iowan

For 10 long minutes Tuesday, UI freshman Don Jackson didn't know if his sister was dead or alive.

The 1998 graduate of Columbine High School, Littleton, Colo., frantically tried to contact relatives to learn if his 17-year-old sister, a junior at the school, had escaped a shooting rampage.

"I didn't know what was going on," Jackson said of the 10 minutes. "I was hoping. My heart was beating fast — I was really worried."

He finally got through to one of his mother's co-workers, who informed him that his sister, Lindsay, was unharmed; she had left the campus for lunch. Had she stayed, she would have been in the cafeteria when the gunmen opened fire, Jackson said.

As many as 25 people at the high school may have been killed by two gunmen, who opened fire in the school's cafeteria and library. Two suspects in the shootings were found dead inside the library.

"She was lucky," Jackson said of his sister. "Some other people weren't so lucky."

Residents and natives of the Denver suburb — including some UI students — were left wondering how the shooting could have hit their hometown.

Among those injured was Lindsay Jackson's prom date. He was shot three

He spoke with his sister briefly Tuesday afternoon, he said. She couldn't talk long because she was on her way to the hospital; she was crying while they spoke.

Woman speaks on horror of daughter's rape, suicide

The speech new about 1,000 people the Union Tuesday night.

By Zack Kucharski
The Daily Iowan

The pages of her daughter's journal have influenced Andrea Cooper to travel to college campuses to educate students about date rape and depression.

On Tuesday, about 1,000 people — mostly fraternity and sorority members — attended her speech, "Kristin's Story: Coming out of the Dark," which was sponsored by the Panhellenic and Interfraternity councils.

The journal alludes to Kristin Cooper's rape and ensuing depression. The sophomore at Baker University in Kansas was allegedly raped by a close friend. She committed suicide on Dec. 31, 1995.

The journal, filled with poems, lyrics and memories, now lies in a drawer of her parents' bedroom dresser. It serves as both a painful reminder and a motivation to educate others.

Andrea Cooper has visited about 20 universities since beginning to tell her daughter's story last fall; she said talking to students is a form of healing, as well as learning.

"Each time you tell the story, you deal a little bit of healing," she said. "If the story gets even one victim to go to counseling, it is worth it."

Andrea Cooper hopes her speaking out will make people more aware of the frequency of date rape, seek help and look for ways to provide support.

On New Year's Eve, 1995, Andrea Cooper and her husband, Mike, returned home from a dinner party and found their daughter's car in the driveway.

"When we walked in the front, everything appeared normal," Andrea Cooper said. "There was very loud music in the family room, and I saw her (Kristin Cooper) there and thought she was passed out in front of the speakers."

The Coopers then discovered that their daughter had shot herself; her journal was lying next to her, and the gun was between her legs.

"She had broken up with her boyfriend, but she put on a mask like everything was fine," Andrea Cooper said. "I thought she would have told us because we were very close, but now I know she had some secrets."

Kristin Cooper's boyfriend reportedly broke off their relationship after she told him about the rape.

The Coopers later learned of several Cigarette billboards up in smoke

RICHMOND, Va. — Cigarette billboards are coming down this week as part of the national settlement with the tobacco industry.

Under the $206 billion agreement between the tobacco industry and 46 states, all cigarette billboards must be removed by Friday. The agreement allows states to take over billboard leases that had been held by tobacco companies and put anti-smoking ads on them at the companies' expense until the leases expire. PAGE 7A

THE LEDGE

EVEN MORE DEEP THOUGHTS BY ADAM SANDLER

Once, when I was in Hawaii, on Kauai, I met a mysterious old stranger. He said he was about to die and wanted to tell someone about the treasure. I said, "OK, as long as it's not a long story. Some of us have a plane to catch, you know." He started telling his story, about the treasure and his life and all, and I thought, "This story isn't too long." But then, he kept going and I started thinking, "Uh-oh, this story is getting long." But then, the story was over, and I said to myself, "You know, that story wasn't too long after all." I forget what the story was about, but there was a good movie on the plane. It was a little long, though.

The face of a child can say it all, especially the mouth part of the face. I can still recall old Mr. Barnslow getting into every morning and nailing a fresh load of tadpoles to that old board of his. Then he'd spin it round and round, like a wheel of fortune, and no matter where it stopped he'd yell out, "Tadpole! Tadpole is a winner!" We all thought he was crazy. But then we all had some growing up to do.

I wish I had a kryptonite cross, because then you could keep both Superman AND Dracula away.

Whenever someone asks me what it means to love, I spin around and pin the guy's arm around his back. NOW who's the one asking the questions?

RFK Jr. hits the bottle for environment

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — As a pitchman for bottled water, Robert F. Kennedy Jr. makes a pretty good environmental lawyer. Kennedy, a defender of New York City's reservoirs, is launching a bottled water called Keeper Springs Mountain Spring Water. The idea, Kennedy says, is to capture some of the $4 billion now spent annually on bottled water and channel the money into preserving public water supplies. Keeper Springs goes on sale Tuesday in New York. Kennedy will earn no salary; all profits will go to clean-water campaigns.

Ethnic cleansing can't be ignored, Powell says

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Retired Gen. Colin Powell says the killing and ethnic cleansing in Kosovo are too horrific for the United States to ignore. "All of us tonight are worried about a place called Kosovo, where young Americans are once again in battle years after the Cold War ended," Powell said Monday. "You can debate the strategy, but nonetheless, we find ourselves in a war." Powell, calling himself simply a soldier after a highly decorated 35-year Army career, chose not to question the military strategies.

Alumni reunion dates scheduled
The UI Alumni Association is inviting UI classes of 1959, 1954, 1949 and prior to its Spring Reunion Weekend 1999 on June 10-13 at the UI campus. Alumni will have the opportunity to attend a variety of events, including a golf tournament, an all-class banquet, a big band dance and campus tours. A highlight of the reunion is the Distinguished Alumni Award ceremony June 12, which honors recipients including former Iowa Gov. Terry Branstad. Former Iowa Hawkeye football Coach Hayden Fry will be honored for faculty/staff achievement. Also included in the scheduled events is "Medicine for the Mind" on June 10, which will explore the latest medical technologies in 3D computer-aided diagnosis and therapy. Alumni will also receive hands-on computer experience accessing health-related Web sites. On June 11, the Iowa Voyagers will present "Tour 2000," a sneak peak into upcoming destinations and tour programs, including the fast-growing Alumni Campus Abroad program. Coinciding with the Spring Reunion is the Iowa Arts Festival, a free four-day event on the Pentacrest that includes live music, art displays, crafts and dance ensembles. The UI Colleges of Business, Education, Engineering, Law, Liberal Arts, Medicine, Nursing and Pharmacy are also sponsoring alumni dinners and activities. Festivities conclude on June 13 at the Farewell Brunch in the Union.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Don't take to heart criticism made by those you love. They just want you to be and do the best you can. Your emotions will be difficult to control.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Dealing with institutions or government agencies will be annoying. Make changes to your home. Some family members may not like your ideas.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Social events that involve clients will not be to your advantage. Don't cause friction or voice your opinion at work. Look at your bank balance before you spend money on unnecessary items.
CANCER (June 21-July 22): You shouldn't be too quick to make decisions concerning the family estate. You will ruffle feathers if you make changes without getting approval from the rest of your relatives first.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Travel for business or pleasure. You will encounter interesting individuals who will stimulate you both mentally and physically. Follow your heart and you will make lasting connections.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You'll be a spendthrift. Purchases made today will not be satisfactory. One-sided infatuations are likely. You'll feel foolish if you let others know how you feel.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You're so vain, you probably think this horoscope is about you. Start paying more attention to your mate's needs before he or she starts looking for another mate.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Work and money will be your prime concern. Your reluctance to admit defeat will enable you to complete the most impossible task. Be careful; someone may be trying to steal your ideas.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Get involved in sports activities with friends. You can learn a lot about yourself in competitive situations. Your honesty and fair play will be admired by everyone you encounter.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Don't let your emotions interfere with your professional integrity. Someone you are curious about may let you down or criticize your ways. Do your own thing.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You need to do things because you want to do them. Don't let your partner put restrictions on you. Consider why you are in your present relationship.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You'll be talked into giving others your money if you aren't careful. Children or friends who have a sob story to tell must be kept at arm's length. Give advice, not cash.

UI honors leaders at Finkbine dinner

Several UI students, faculty and alumni win leadership awards Tuesday.

By Anita Chlipala The Daily Iowan

UI students, faculty and alumni were honored for their leadership efforts and contributions to the university during the 82nd anniversary of the Finkbine dinner Tuesday night.

UI President Mary Sue Coleman said. "It marks the pinnacle of student, faculty and alumni achievement."

UI alumna Lilia Abron, a 1972 graduate and one of six recipients of the Hancher-Finkbine Medallions, was the first black woman in the United States to receive a doctorate in chemical engineering.

She stressed the importance of the roles students should take as leaders.

"Use your education and leadership skills for the improvement of all mankind for the eradication of poverty, hopelessness, helplessness and despair," Abron said.

"Imagine the problems we can solve when our weakest members are as strong in life as we are."

The other Hancher-Finkbine Medallions were awarded to UI senior Amanda Ennis, UI senior Kristen Kaye Lee, UI Ph.D. student Annette Churee Dietz, UI third-year law student Jennifer Horan and UI English and English education Professor James Marshall.

Also, UI English Associate Professor Mary Lou Emery won the M. L. Huit Faculty Award; UI engineering Associate Professor Sharif Rahman won the James N. Murray Faculty Award; and UI graduate student Ned Bertz won the Philip Hubbard Human Rights Award.

UI seniors Amy Herrig and Matt Reischl won Robert Ray

Speaker warns against genetic food

An environmental activist warned about the dangers of "Frankenfoods" and genetic engineering.

By Mike Standaert The Daily Iowan

Like Dolly the Sheep, who was cloned through genetic engineering, humans may be guinea pigs in another genetic experiment, Jeffrey Smith said before about 20 people Tuesday night.

Smith, a former U.S. Senate candidate for the Natural Law Party, lectured at the Union as part of Earth Week about genetically engineered foods and how they may harm our health and environment.

During the lecture — which was sponsored by the UI Environmental Coalition and titled "The Dangers of Frankenfoods ..." — Smith spoke out against the tampering with the genetic tissue of plants and animals.

"They are taking a pig gene and splicing it into a tomato," he said, "creating a whole new species that has never existed."

Besides creating a new species,

Smith

this process has outraged practitioners of strict religious diets, Smith said.

He said 60-70 percent of the food on American grocery shelves contain genetically engineered components.

A possible side-effect of such manipulation could be the cross pollination of genetically engineered plants to neighboring plants of close species relation, which could cause unpredictable results, Smith said.

"Once this is out there, you can't really stop it," he said. "What we are trying to do now is slow it down before it gets out of our control. This could change the entire make-up of an eco-system."

Many of the audience members who turned out voiced their concern over this issue.

"This highly concerns me," said Iowa City resident April Dirks. "I try to eat organic foods because of this ... It also surprises me that our government hasn't done more about this."

Seth Nieman, president of the environmental coalition, said he has long been concerned about this issue but is now starting to realize how important it truly is.

"I have been committed to buying organic foods for a long time," he said. "But now it is becoming more of a health concern for me because this stuff is everywhere."

New UI business institute to go global

The regents are expected to approve the business school's institute for International Business today.

By Rebecca Anderson and Shirin Sadeghi The Daily Iowan

Administrators in the UI Tippie School of Business say a new international institute will help bring global economic perspectives to Iowa.

"Business is international now," said UI economics Professor William Albrecht, who would head the proposed Institute for International Business. "We want to make sure our classes are reflective of that."

The Iowa state Board of Regents is expected to approve the institute for the business school at its meeting in Vinton, Iowa, today.

Currently, the business school offers several classes geared toward international business and an International Business certificate.

The institute will be the first of its kind on campus. It will promote study-abroad programs for business students and faculty and serve as a centralized place for the study of global economics. However, it will not offer students any new courses or new majors.

"There are so many international corporations and global businesses that knowing about other cultures and ways that other countries do business is really important," said Tiffany Smith, a UI senior who is receiving her International Business certificate.

Catherine Cole, an associate professor of marketing, has used her experiences abroad to "globalize" her Principles of Marketing lectures.

"I think a lot of business students are so busy taking classes that they don't have the time to travel," she said. "I guess it's better that, if you can't travel, you have a professor who's seen the world."

The business people with whom Cole worked in Portugal were finishing their high-speed highway system, which would go on to change the way products are distributed across the country. Cole's description of her experience helped her students understand how American consumers overlook the distribution of the products they use in everyday life.

The international experience has also been helpful for Albrecht; his associations with business people in Brazil, Chile and Argentina have helped him gain a wider perspective on his subject.

"It's different from just reading about it," he said. "We've all brought back something useful for the classroom."

The money for the institute's programs will come from fund raising, research grants and program fees within the business school. The regents are not providing any money to the institute; business school administrators say student fees will not be hiked to pay for it.

STATE BRIEFS

Surfing for sex offenders in Iowa

DES MOINES (AP) — A list of Iowa's most dangerous sex offenders will be a click away on the Internet under a measure heading to the governor.

The Senate approved a measure, 48-0, Tuesday that calls for state money to post moderate- to high-risk sexual offenders on the Internet. The House has already approved the measure.

"It's a proven strategy that makes that sex offender accountable, and it is discouraging them from offending again," said Sen. Jeff Angelo, R-Creston.

The measure updates the law passed last year that created the Sex Abuse Registry.

It defines three categories of sex offender — low-, moderate- and high-risk — and defines what type of notifications can be done for each. Currently, how the public is notified varies across the state.

Under the new law, a low-risk offender, for example, would simply be on a list at the sheriff's office, while local authorities can notify the media and post a name and picture on the Internet for a moderate-risk offender. In addition to the above, authorities can hold meetings to notify the public of high-risk offenders.

"Information is power," Angelo said. "I feel most offenders slip into communities unnoticed, where they gain the trust of their victims."

outrage called the "Trench Coat Mafia," the members of which wore long black coats, boasted of owning guns and disliked blacks, Latinos and football players.

Davis said the motive for the attack was unknown and that school officials had had no reports of trouble from the students.

The sheriff said 25 people may have been killed, students and teachers alike. But by early evening, officers had yet to remove any bodies because of the danger of explosives and the need to preserve evidence. FBI agents and police SWAT teams slowly made their way through the building.

"It's just going to take us some time because of how many rooms we have bodies in," Davis said.

At least 23 people were hospitalized, most of them with gunshot wounds. One girl suffered nine shrapnel wounds. At least 11 were in critical or serious condition; one was in guarded condition.

The attack began at 12:30 p.m. CDT. The killers, wearing fatigues and trench coats, started firing in the parking lot and then entered the school. They shot as they walked into the cafeteria, then walked upstairs to the library and continued firing with what were thought to be semiautomatic weapons and a shotgun.

Bullets ricocheted off lockers as students sprinted for the exits.

"At first we thought it was fireworks; then we saw them shooting," said Jake Apocaca, 16. "He saw us, and then he started shooting at us. Then a guy in a white T-shirt threw two hand grenades on the roof. We hit the ground and then we started running."

Wade Frank, an 18-year-old senior, said he saw one of the killers shoot someone point-blank in the back with a 2-foot gun, possibly a sawed-off shotgun. "He was just casually walking," Frank said. "He wasn't in any hurry."

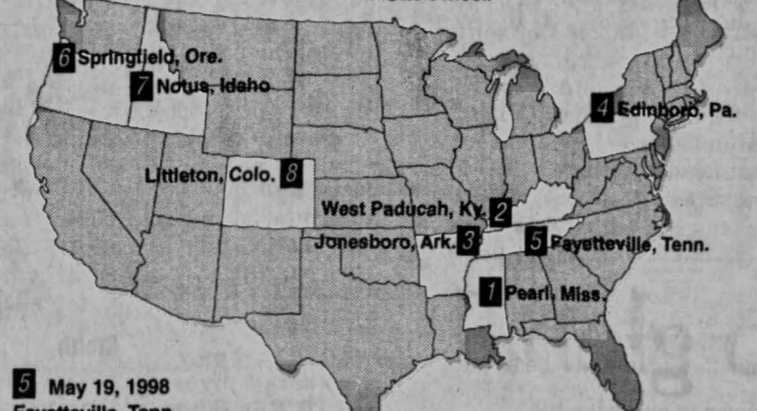

Dozens of students hid in classrooms before escaping with the help of police in an armored car. Others were trapped for hours while SWAT teams searched for the gunmen.

At one point, a bloodied young man dangled from a second-floor tionally, she isn't doing so well," Jackson said.

His mother, Donna, is "holding up pretty well — it's a tough situation." He said he knows several of those injured in the attack. Names of those killed were not released Tuesday night, but, Jackson said, he is certain he knows some of them.

News of the shooting reached UI senior and Littleton native Matthew Johnson via the television.

"I came home and saw familiar sights on the TV; I couldn't believe it," Johnson said. "They said 20 some people were dead — this is my home."

He attended Littleton High School, which is five miles from Columbine High School, from 1990-94. His sister, Christina, is a senior at Littleton High.

He said he called his parents immediately after learning of the shootings. They were in a similar state of shock. "I couldn't say anything — and neither could they."

"What could be so wrong with a teen-ager that he could do something like this?" Johnson said.

UI graduate student Kedron Bardwell attended a private school in Denver but lived in Littleton. Several of his high school friends attended Columbine.

"It's incredible. I can't believe it," he said. "I never thought something like that would happen in Littleton. It's a nice town."

Bardwell, a political science teaching assistant, said he canceled his Tuesday afternoon American Politics section halfway through class.

"I didn't have a whole lot to say," he said. "I was a little scatterbrained; I was caught up in the day's events."

Jackson, a UI gymnast, said he hopes to find a ride back to Littleton this weekend but plans to return to the UI to finish the semester.

"I felt like I should have been doing something, but there was nothing for me to do," he said. "I felt like I should have been there."

window, his right arm limp; he was helped down by two SWAT team members. His condition was not immediately known.

A young man was led away from the school in handcuffs more than four hours after the attack. Davis said the young man was believed to be a friend of the gunmen but did not take part in the attack.

Davis said explosives were found in two cars in the school parking lot, and bomb squad officers were disarming them. Also, the homes of the two gunmen were being searched.

Wes Lammers, 17, was among several students who said the gunmen were targeting minorities and athletes at the 1,800-student high school.

"They're really dark people," Lammers said. "There were a lot of jokes that one day they might snap or something."

Sean Kelly, 16, said several members of the Trench Coat Mafia had a video-production class and made a video about guns they had. He also said several members recently bragged about getting new guns and that he heard members making derogatory remarks about blacks and Latinos.

Since 1997, a series of school shootings around the country have led to demands for stricter laws, tighter security and closer monitoring of troubled students. Two people were killed in an attack in Pearl, Miss., three in West Paducah, Ky., five in Jonesboro, Ark., and two in Springfield, Ore.

In Washington, President Clinton said, "Perhaps now America will wake up to the dimensions of this challenge, if it could happen in a place such as Littleton."

CITY BRIEFS

Out, out, non-brief light, residents say

■ Some East Side locals are complaining about light pollution from City High's tennis courts.

By Steven Cook
The Daily Iowan

Lori Benz told the Iowa City City Council Tuesday that she no longer needs her own lights to illuminate her porch at night — the lights at City High School do that for her. Benz and other residents near the school's tennis courts say a new lighting system for the courts floods their properties with far too much light.

Benz and her neighbor, David Woodruff, asked the council to include public areas in a new lighting ordinance that would prevent light fixtures from exceeding 25 feet in height near residential zones. City High's lights, which were turned on recently, are 50 feet tall.

A public hearing on the lighting ordinance was held at the council's formal meeting Tuesday night.

The ordinance would prevent new lights in parking lots from exceeding the 25-foot height limit and require stronger lights to carry a directional shield.

The ordinance covers only private land, so Benz and Woodruff asked for it to be extended to public land.

"This is a positive first step in containing light trespass, but an additional step is needed so all residents can enjoy the ordinance," Benz said.

The city contributed $10,000 to the Iowa City Community School District to help erect the lights last fall. The money allows Iowa City residents to use the tennis courts.

Woodruff asked the council to tone down the lights so that he can live comfortably in his home.

"If I want to sit in my backyard and enjoy the sunset, I cannot even do that. All spring, summer and fall — every night, the lights will be on," he said.

Woodruff said he is forced to put several layers of drapes over his windows to prevent the light from coming in.

Councilors empathized with the residents.

"This is an intolerable situation, and we'll do everything we legally can to correct it. This just cannot be allowed to exist," Councilor Dee Norton said.

A joint meeting between the council and the School Board is scheduled for Thursday. Councilors said they will ask the district to reduce the amount of light on the courts.

English-only measure barely defeated in House

■ By a 48-51 vote, legislators opposed making English Iowa's official language.

By Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — The Iowa House narrowly went on record against declaring English the state's official language Tuesday, as critics disparaged that "mean-spirited claptrap."

Supporters said the bill sends an important signal of cultural unity and is designed to assist immigrants making the transition into this country.

Critics said it's thinly veiled racism that sends a subtle message that those of different cultures aren't welcome in the state's largely white culture.

"It simply says we're all in this together, and we need to communicate in a single language," said Rep. Mike Cormack, R-Fort Dodge.

"This may be seen as tough, but I think of it as tough love."

"It's the symbol that counts, its the message that counts," said Rep. Ed Fallon, D-Des Moines.

"This sends a terrible message." The House voted 48-51 against declaring English as the state's official language, as lawmakers debated a larger measure dealing with immigration issues.

Critics had attached scores of amendments to the immigration measure, but Cormack included one that flatly declared English the official language. It was rejected by three votes.

Floor leaders said that was a test vote that showed the concept lacked votes needed for approval.

They approved the scaled-back measure on a 92-4 vote, approving only a new immigrant center.

That measure was headed back to the Senate and an uncertain future as lawmakers struggle to end this year's session by next week.

"I think it is very doubtful that we'll take the bill up," said Senate Majority Leader Stewart Iverson, R-Dows.

It's the second time the issue has foundered in the Legislature, and the fight drew some of the most emotional arguments of the year.

Critics said the English-only measure isn't needed, because immigrants take as their first goal learning the language.

education about date rape and depression are important for students, and the way that Andrea Cooper presents her story adds even more power.

Another Lucas student files lawsuit

A fourth Lucas Elementary School student filed suit against the Iowa City Community School District Monday in connection with photos allegedly taken by former school volunteer Roland Thomson.

"John Poe" and his mother, "Mary Poe," filed a motion to proceed anonymously in the suit because it "would cause extreme embarrassment, humiliation and mental and emotional suffering" to have their real names released.

The suit alleges that Thomson photographed and touched "John Poe" in an "improper, offensive and assaultive manner."

The suit cites Thomson and his wife, Shirley, who was a teacher at Lucas Elementary, as well as Principal Brian Lehmann and former Superintendent Barbara Grohe, according to court records.

Roland Thomson faces criminal charges in the Johnson County Court of child endangerment, indecent conduct and assault as well as federal charges of possession of child pornography. Shirley Thomson and Lehmann are charged with child endangerment.

For NATO confab, protocol is king

The delicate diplomacy of keeping 42 world leaders content is a nightmare of logistics.

By Deb Riechmann Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Details, details. For the State Department's Office of Protocol, taking proper care of the leaders of 42 foreign countries at this week's NATO summit is a logistical nightmare of motorcades, seating assignments, flags and music.

The biggest headaches — who should sit next to President Clinton at dinner? (Still unclear.) And how to hang the flags? (Alphabetically.)

"We're going to try to stay calm; it works better that way," said Chief of Protocol Mary Mel French, her laugh masking the hours of frenzied planning her office is doing for Washington's largest-ever gathering of heads of state.

French's staff must make sure that the limousines run on time, that guests are properly attired, that cultural barriers are bridged and that visitors are not offended.

They know, for instance, that the flags of the 19 NATO countries are displayed alphabetically — according to the English language — with NATO's in the middle.

They know that NATO newcomer Vaclav Havel, president of the Czech Republic since 1989, ranks No. 1 on the seating hierarchy for one dinner the White House is holding for members of the alliance. German Chancellor Gerhard Schröder, his country's leader for just six months, ranks last.

But even that doesn't clear up who will sit next to Clinton. That also depends on how the tables are arranged, whether there will be other special guests and if seating is arranged male/female.

And the ranking will be different at a second White House dinner, for both NATO members and the 25 Eastern and Central European countries that are NATO partners.

"That changes the protocol order," French said.

It sounds complicated, yet protocol makes seating at official dinners manageable, says Selwa "Lucky" Roosevelt, chief of protocol from 1982 to 1989, under President Reagan.

"If somebody says 'Why does the person from that unimportant little country of Lower Slobovia get to sit next to the president, and my country doesn't?' You can say 'We just followed protocol,'" Roosevelt said. "That gives you an out. Everybody observes the same protocol."

Cancer rates drop, following smoking decline

A report says the rate of new cancer cases is dropping eight times faster for men.

By Lauran Neergaard Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Fewer Americans are stricken with cancer every year, thanks largely to drops in smoking, scientists announced Tuesday.

The news is better for men: Although they still suffer more cancer than women do, the rate of new cancer cases is dropping eight times faster for men than for women, says an annual report on cancer by the American Cancer Society and government scientists.

Overall, cancer incidence has dropped 2.2 percent a year since 1992, says the new report, published in this week's Journal of the National Cancer Institute, which analyzed cancer trends through 1996.

Scientists warned Tuesday that tobacco use could reverse the progress. Lung cancer remains the nation's top cancer killer, and recent declines in lung cancer among men who quit smoking in the 1970s and '80s helped fuel the overall declines in cancer incidence and mortality. But high teen smoking and new popularity for cigars have experts fearing a rebound.

"Unless we invest now in anti-tobacco efforts aimed at our youngest citizens, we will waste the progress we have achieved so far," said Donna Shalala, secretary of Health and Human Services.

Indeed, cigarette smoking by high school students rose a disturbing 32 percent during the 1990s, the report said. And cigar smoking — which a second study published Tuesday in the cancer journal concluded is as cancer-causing as cigarettes — has reversed a 20-year decline, rising by 50 percent in the last four years.

"We need to turn that around, or we'll have another lung cancer epidemic," said Phyllis Wingo of the American Cancer Society, who led Tuesday's study.

Wingo used death certificates and huge government health databases to determine the rates of new cancer cases and cancer deaths through 1996, the latest data available. Cancer incidence increased slowly from the 1970s through 1992 — but since then has steadily dropped, about 2.2 percent a year through 1996, the report said. It's falling faster for men, 4.1 percent a year, compared with less than a 0.5 percent drop each year for women.

Cancer death rates also are dropping more for men, 1 percent a year, compared with 0.4 percent a year for women.

GOP pushes Pell Grant increase

Republican lawmakers are at odds with the White House, which wants to increase funding for other programs.

By Anjetta McQueen Associated Press

WASHINGTON — House Republicans, setting the stage for his year's financing battle over education, called for at least a $1 billion increase in federal grants to low-income college students.

Rep. Bill Goodling, chairman of the Education and Workforce Committee, said Tuesday he would ask Congress to increase the grants when it considers spending bills later this year. Members of the GOP leadership support the plan, which they insist would not exceed the caps put on spending this year, Goodling said.

Specifically, the Republicans find several higher education groups want to add $400 to the maximum amount — now $3,125 — that a low-income student can get under the Pell Grant, annual federal scholarships that are awarded to needy students. The GOP wants to increase spending in other federal student-aid programs.

The Clinton administration's plan for fiscal year 2000 would add $125 to the grant maximum.

"The president once again has listened to the pollsters," said

Goodling, who contends that Clinton favors his newer proposed programs over "tried and true" programs such as the Pell Grants. "He is meeting his political needs, not the real needs of students and educators."

The Clinton plan's significant increases, of 50 percent or more, were mostly for teacher-training, aid to Hispanic-serving colleges and GEAR UP, a college preparation program.

The administration has accused the GOP of pitting higher education against programs for children.

The GOP plan "ignores the importance of preparing students for college," said Education Secretary Richard W. Riley.

Jay Diskey, GOP spokesman for the Education Committee, said the Republicans' higher education plan doesn't ask for any cuts in other programs, including such Clinton priorities as new teachers for class-size reduction, school construction and after-school classes.

Crafting the spending bill, which includes a wide range of programs and must fall within the budget, will not be easy, said David Kohn, spokesman for Rep. John Porter, R-Ill., who oversees the panel on education, health and labor spending.

"In general terms, Mr. Porter would agree with Mr. Goodling that support for higher education is the major priority for that bill," Kohn said.

Unlike previous refugee crises in Africa, Europeans see themselves in the desperate plight of the Kosovars.

KUKES, Albania — No one likes to say it for fear of seeming insensitive, but the feeling is clear among many outsiders here who have come to help — the horror is even greater because the victims are European.

Humanitarian workers are surprised by the level of interest back home.

"When I talked to my friends and family about places like Goma (in Congo) or Somalia, they expressed polite interest and then got the usual glaze in their eyes," said Connell Foley, a consultant for Concern.

"But with this," he continued, "they can't hear enough."

Mary Njoroge, a Kenyan working with United Nations relief efforts, said although there is less death and disease than has been seen in Africa, human suffering is not a matter for comparisons.

She calls it understandable that Europeans and Americans react strongly to a situation to which they can identify. In fact, she added, "I'm surprised that Europeans are not doing more for these people."

Although emergency food rations are arriving for the 600,000 Kosovar refugees in Albania, Macedonia and Montenegro, many are still desperately short of shelter and other basic necessities.

U.S. trade deficit hits record high

A poor global economy and a high demand for imports have led the United States to a $19.4 billion deficit.

By Martin Crutsinger
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — America's trade deficit surged to another record as aftershocks from the global financial crisis cut further into the ability of American manufacturers and farmers to sell overseas.

The trade deficit widened to $19.4 billion in February. That was a 15.6 percent increase from the previous record, January's imbalance of $16.8 billion.

Seeking to counter complaints that he has not done enough to deal with the surging trade deficit, President Clinton called on the international community to redouble its efforts to overhaul the global financial architecture to "tame the cycles of boom and bust" and prevent future Asian-style currency crises.

Clinton told a White House gathering Tuesday that Treasury Secretary Robert Rubin will be putting forward new ideas on crisis management at upcoming meetings of the 182-nation International Monetary Fund.

"This is not a moment for complacency. It is a moment to act to prevent financial crisis from reaching catastrophic stages in the future," Clinton said.

Congressional and labor union critics of Clinton's free trade policies said the dramatic widening of the deficit in the year's first two months pointed to a need for policies to protect American jobs.

Clinton, however, insisted in his brief remarks that the U.S. economy is continuing to perform strongly as a result of his policies, in spite of the rising trade deficit.

But critics pointed to the 380,000 jobs lost in the past year at U.S. manufacturing plants forced to cut back production because of slumping exports, and they warned that Clinton's current policies must be changed.

Recent mob violence worries Japanese

The Yakuza — underworld figures — were reportedly behind the shootings of three shopkeepers in Osaka in the past month.

By Eric Talmadge
Associated Press

OSAKA, Japan — When members of Japan's biggest underworld gang moved into the working-class neighborhood of Konohana two years ago, they got a very public show of resistance.

Residents turned out by the hundreds for anti-mob rallies, parades and concerts. Stickers with anti-mob slogans, sold to raise the legal fees needed to try to evict the gangsters, went up in more than 10,000 windows.

But following the shootings of three local shopkeepers in the past month, residents are fearful — and the stickers are nowhere to be found.

The shootings underscore what many fear is a trend toward increasing violence and unpredictability among Japan's Yakuza, as Japan's underworld figures are known.

In the most recent attack, a gunman wearing a surgical mask opened fire on a barber while he was cutting a customer's hair. Three shots were fired, and the barber was hit in the shoulder. He remains hospitalized but is in stable condition.

The shooting followed a similar attack on a local jeweler, who was shot in the chest two days earlier, and on the owner of a dry-cleaning shop late last month.

"I'm so afraid I can't sleep at night," said Akiko Sakai, the barber's mother. "We never did anything wrong. I never imagined this could happen here."

None of the shooting victims was a leader of the anti-mob movement, and police stress they have yet to determine a motive or charge anyone with the shootings.

A billboard of the Marlboro Man, left, was a prominent feature near the score board in center field at The Diamond, the home field of the Richmond Braves International League baseball team, in Richmond, Va., shown in this 1995b file photo. On April 14, 1999, all that remained was the board's supporting structure, right.

Some wonder if removing cigarette billboards is just blowing smoke.

By Larry O'Dell

RICHMOND, Va. — In the Marlboro Man's hometown and across the land, cigarette billboards that were once a "celebrated" part of the American landscape are coming down this week as part of the national settlement with the tobacco industry.

In many places, the rugged cowboy with the cigarette dangling from the corner of his mouth will yield to images of children delivering anti-smoking messages.

Under the $206 billion agreement between the tobacco industry and 46 states over the costs of treating smoking-related illnesses, all cigarette billboards must be removed by Friday. The agreement allows states to take over billboard leases that had been held by tobacco companies and put anti-smoking ads on them at the companies' expense until the leases expire.

Penny for my thoughts on the new quarters?

UNCLE Sam has been at it again. Not satisfied with the reformation of America's $50 and $20 bills, the U.S. Treasury has given the 25-cent piece a facelift as well. I had heard the buzz a while ago, before any 1999 quarters were issued, and was anxious to see what these coins were going to look like.

What I did know was that different variations of the quarter would be produced, each with its own state theme. There would be a New York quarter, an Illinois quarter, a Florida quarter, and ... well, you get the picture. Given my fascination with serious issues such as state symbols and the aesthetics of U.S. currency, the prospect of an updated coin that also included state logos was almost more than I could handle.

Nevertheless, I was able to keep my composure when I caught a glimpse of the first of these freshly minted quarters. It had all the dignity of the quarters that have come before it, but this one said "Delaware" on the tail side, and, instead of the traditional eagle, it depicted a man with a tri-pointed hat on horseback. A reference to the Revolutionary War, I assume, unless that is how people in Delaware get around these days.

My curiosity stoked, I was now anxious to see what other variations I would come across. Unfortunately, such encounters would become rare. After a while, I had enough Delaware quarters to perhaps purchase a soda, but that was the only state coin I had seen, with Pennsylvania being an exception. Common sense told me that it might take a while before all 50 states would be circulating through the vending machines of America.

Lacking the patience to wait this long, I began some extensive research on the matter, which yielded some fascinating results. Rhode Island, I learned, would be represented not by any national landmark or public figure, but by a large "R".

If only the quarter were large enough to include a map depicting the state's location, Rhode Island would be well on its way to national acclaim. The Michigan quarter has been designed in a similar manner as the Delaware coin, except that the patriot on horseback will be replaced with a state militia member in a pickup truck.

Does anybody remember the "Ghostbusters" logo, with its circle and slash transposed over a grinning ghost? The California quarter will have a comparable design, with the ghost replaced by a Mexican immigrant, who has been denied state services such as education and health care because of his origin. Then there is Nevada, the home of glitzy Las Vegas. No major changes here, except that this quarter will abandon the traditional "In God We Trust" inscription and replace it with the more appropriate "In Wayne Newton We Trust".

The Nebraska coin, meanwhile, will be made significantly larger than the other quarters, but will have nothing but blank, open space on the back. This nondescript, yet nostalgic, coin will remind everyone of exciting car trips through the endless expanse of Nebraska.

Up next is Tennessee, the birthplace of Elvis and the home of Graceland. What could be more fitting than to have the King of Rock 'n' Roll on the back of this coin? A great concept, but unfortunately the U.S. Treasury decided to go with the "late" Elvis, meaning that this quarter will be about the same size as Nebraska's.

What will be on the back of Iowa's quarter? A Powerball ticket, of course. It narrowly edged out the corn stalk and the hog. Of course, many other changes are in store for the quarters of all 50 states, ensuring an exciting year for coin collectors and everybody who participates in the exchange of money for goods and services.

I, for one, am looking forward to seeing the rest of these new quarters, as I am sure that it will make trips to the vending machine, along with coin flips, much more interesting.

"I call heads!"
"I've got Elvis!"
What a day that will be. Indeed, this is a new era for U. S. currency, and I'm glad to be a part of it. Now, if they could just rework those 20s a little bit ...

Demas' column a rant, neglects real issue

To the Editor:
Susan Demas' recent column was an interesting commentary on the rudeness of U.S. citizens ("English-only laws only add to Americans' arrogance," DI/April 1). She does a fine job of pointing out her fellow Americans' arrogance and rudeness while guests of other nations.

Demas is very correct in stating that it is "not terribly difficult to manage with only a rudimentary knowledge of the native tongue and a modicum of politeness." Unfortunately, I was not expecting to read an article about rude Americans. The headline had led me to believe I was reading a column regarding the proposal to make English the official language of Iowa.

After sharing with us her frustration over her fellow travelers' rudeness, Demas finally begins to discuss the English-only law by stating that she "wasn't shocked to hear of the xenophobic English-only law in Iowa." She then points out, "Americans expect and demand people around the globe to know our language, so it was only a matter of time before we came up with official laws within our own country."

Demas makes a valid point that many Americans expect to be spoken to in their native tongue when visiting countries with a national language other than English. Sadly, she misses the fact that the Iowa "English-only" law has very little to do with Americans in foreign countries but much to do with the citizens of Iowa.

Demas does eventually point out several important issues regarding the "assault on multiculturalism," including the "America First" curriculum in Florida and Proposition 187 in California. Demas also comments on our schools not educating students about the accomplishments of women, minorities and the poor. These are valid points, and they should be addressed at greater length. It's sad that these arguments were lost among her rant regarding Americans using our military power to make English "the official language of the world and of the new millennium."

The English-only bill is an issue that requires serious thought and debate among Iowans, as it will affect all of us in different ways. It's unfortunate that Demas chose to share her frustration with rude American travelers under the guise of discussing Iowa's proposed English-only law.

Kevorkian was making political statements

To the Editor:
I write to respond to Hannah Fons' recent column in which she celebrates the sentencing of Jack Kevorkian ("Looking forward to long life, respecting the right to die," DI/April 5). From what I read, it appears to me that she does not support a person's right to freedom of speech. In this case, she criticizes Kevorkian's statements during his recent murder trial, calling them antics and part of a media circus instead of the sincere political speech that they were.

What Fons fails to see is that Kevorkian was only utilizing his First Amendment right to freedom of speech by unapologetically speaking up and acting against a law that he did not believe in. She paints Kevorkian as a death-happy fame-seeker who "(re)lishes the media circus that has gathered around him." I see differently.

I see in Kevorkian a man who is willing to stand up for what he believes is a fundamental right when not many others will. I am in no way saying that he is a national hero, but he should be applauded for sticking up for himself and voicing his discontent when he thinks he is being wronged. The issue has moved far beyond euthanasia and into a debate over a person's right to challenge laws that he or she feels are unjust. It is a shame Fons could not look beneath the surface of this issue to see the more important issue of free speech that lies beneath.

For students' sake, implement reciprocity

To the Editor:
The large sums of money non-residents fork over to the UI are absurd. Many prospective students may even be discouraged by the cost. The large numbers of students in Iowa and Illinois paying out-of-state tuition calls for a plan of action. The two states need to work together and create a reciprocity agreement.

The states of Wisconsin and Minnesota already have a reciprocity agreement. For example, under the agreement, a Minnesota resident can attend a state school in Wisconsin for a price close or equal to the in-state fee. This opens up the opportunity for students to attend an out-of-state university for a reasonable cost.

The UI actively recruits students from the Chicago area. In an orientation meeting, a UI spokesperson reeled off that one-third of the students at the UI are from Illinois. These recruits from Illinois are paying $9,788, while the residents of Iowa pay $2,868. Similarly, residents in Illinois at the University of Illinois pay $4,340, while out-of-state tuition is $10,276. The cost differences between a resident and non-resident are more than double the amount.

Although it costs more to go to school out of state, the students are treated the same. Paying more does not necessarily mean you get more. Because the benefits are the same, it is horrible to be punished for living one state over. A reciprocity agreement would significantly lower the out-of-state costs to a more appropriate and affordable level.

A reciprocity agreement would also create more academic opportunities. Iowa and Illinois both have many reputable universities. Taking away the barrier of out-of-state tuition would allow students to have a greater choice in the colleges they attend. In high school, I remember many students did not even look outside of state due to cost issues. It would be wonderful to see the states of Illinois and Iowa work together to create a friendlier academic environment.

It is time to take away the penalties placed on those who choose to go to school in Iowa or Illinois. The state should take the hint from Wisconsin and Minnesota and work for the residents by providing as many academic opportunities as possible. This could be a wonderful opportunity for the UI to step up in its academics and provide for the majority of the student body.

What's wrong with Union Pizza Hut?

To the Editor:
I am writing in response to a recent guest opinion from Ben Lewis ("Why make IMU deal?" DI/March 24). I must say I totally disagree with his views on adding a Pizza Hut at the Union Station.

Now to me, it doesn't seem as if Ben looks on both sides of this situation. He mentions that "a public institution is no place to be signing food contracts that limit student choices." I disagree with this comment. The Union Station still provides the students with a variety of alternate meals.

Ben goes on to mention that the students need to stand up and do something about long-term decisions that will affect their eating habits. I believe that most students like the idea of having a Pizza Hut here. Whenever I'm at the Union, there are many people eating food from the Pizza Hut.

To me, it seems as though Ben Lewis is ignoring the opinion of the majority when he goes against the Pizza Hut at the Union. I believe it was a great idea, and the Union should continue to add popular food chains with a DQ or a Baskin Robbins.

Faculty Assembly should care

The College of Liberal Arts Faculty Assembly should be applauded for last week's decision to raise the minimum GPA needed for "good academic standing." Under the plan, freshmen will be required to maintain at least a 1.85 GPA and sophomores a 2.00 GPA.

This small step forward might lead you to believe that UI faculty members are concerned about students and academic standards. However, at last week's vote, only 16 of the 90 elected members were present. Gregg Oden, a computer science professor and vice chairman of the assembly, said at the last meeting, "I find it troubling that we are deciding serious educational policies with minimal attendance. There was a recent meeting in which the vote was 6 to 4."

The reasons behind the low attendance?

Deirdre McCloskey, a professor of economics, said that "there are too many faculty meetings as it is. Faculty are responsible for too much time. We should raise the bar on the importance of issues we discuss and shorten the meetings."

If academic standards for students are not an important issue, then what is? And just because an issue is of great importance to students does not mean it is therefore unimportant to faculty.

It stands to reason that higher academic standards will attract better students. Better students will make teaching easier and more rewarding for faculty. A more rewarding teaching experience will attract better professors. Better professors will demand smarter students. And so the cycle goes.

But this cycle will not begin until professors take action by demanding that students work harder and do better in class. To suggest that the issues Faculty Assembly addresses, issues that affect many UI students, are unimportant is offensive.

Maybe we should increase attendance at Faculty Assembly meetings by using the same tactics that student groups do:
Maybe we should lure assembly members with shorter meetings, offer free T-shirts, hand out finger foods and provide live entertainment to keep things "interesting" enough. Or maybe we simply need to create a system to report absent faculty to their respective departments — and then replace them.

A painful past clouded by silence and romance

■ Memoir chronicles a WW II romance stretching from Siberia across Europe.

By Tyler Steward
 The Daily Iowan

When she was a girl, Helen Fremont often heard the story of her parents' star-crossed romance. Their courtship, which began in Poland before World War II, was interrupted when her mother fled to Italy and her father was deported to a Siberian concentration camp, each a result, they said, of the persecution of Polish-Catholics. After the war, her father walked across Europe to find his love.

"Even when I was small I dreamed of writing my parents' story, even though at that point I only knew about the romance," Fremont said in a telephone interview with The Daily Iowan.

names of their family members. The response confirmed their suspicions.

"I got all these pages of material from the Holocaust memorial," Fremont said. "That's when I was seized by the urge to find out what I could."

Fremont and her sister told their parents of their discovery, after which the true story emerged. Their father, for example, finished medical school amid increasingly violent anti-Semitism. Their mother's family was Orthodox.

"She decided that every century has its own holocaust, and sooner or later she felt there would be another," she said.

Despite the upsetting nature of the discovery, Fremont said she feels a sense of completeness previously lacking.

"I feel that there seems to be a solid fabric between my parents and me and the past," she said.

From television mockery to promoting media literacy

■ PATV's new crop of public programming will premiere tonight.

By Jim Mack
 The Daily Iowan

Out with the old and in with the new — Public Access Television (PATV) has six new shows beginning tonight at 5:30.

PATV's programming is broken up into seasons. The new season began on April 17 and will run until July 23. Tonight will feature the programs "Television Victim," "Scenes from a Workshop," "Tell Me a Poem," "Back to the Future: WWII," "Real News" and "Pilot."

Scott Faine, PATV programming coordinator, is pleased with the station's present state.

"I'm always happy when we get new shows," he said. "When we moved, things sort of slowed down a little bit."

PATV was originally located in the Iowa City Public Library, but lack of space forced the station to relocate to 623 S. Dubuque St. this past August.

Activity has increased since the initial move, Faine said.

"I'm excited because just a few weeks ago we had five new series start up, he said. "Since I've been

"Most of the people around here just get five channels, and it's just toilet trash. You can't deal with it after a while."

— Chris O'Neill, producer of "Real News"

working here that's the most series to start up in a one or two week period."

At 5:30, "Television Victim" airs as the first episode in a series provided by PATV for promoting media literacy. At 6 is "Scenes from a Workshop," a compilation of footage generated by new producers trained in PATV's various workshops. At 6:30 is "Tell Me a Poem," produced by the International Writing Program (IWP) and featuring a panel discussion of poetry. At 8:15 the Johnson County Historical Society presents "Back to the Future: WWII." A student-made show, "Pilot," will begin at 9:30. At 10, "Real News," a comical rendition of TV news, will close the debut night out.

PATV offers an alternative to the programming normal television is associated with.

"If you're sick of watching middle-aged anchors deliver sound bites, you should watch our show," said Chris O'Neill, a "Real News" producer. O'Neill, along with producers Andy Robertson, Josh Cragun and Jim Zimmerman, conjured up their show in an effort to comically insult television with humor-laced sketches of television mockery emphasizing news broadcasts. "Most of the people around here just get five channels, and it's just toilet trash. You can't deal with it after a while," O'Neill said.

Comedy won't be the only form of entertainment on PATV this evening. The IWP's "Tell Me a Poem" is one of a 12-part series that discusses various forms of writing and literature.

"Our programs range from three to five members such as poets, essayists, novelists and even journalists on the panels," said Lemuel Torrevillas, audiovisual coordinator for the IWP.

The fruits of television education will also come to bloom in this debut grouping with "Scenes from a Workshop." There are various workshops that can be taken at PATV to further education in television production.

PATV, cable channel 2, is free and open to the public for season-long or one-time showings. There are two kinds of programming, locally produced programs, which are filmed and broadcast using the station's equipment, and provided programs, which are filmed elsewhere but broadcast at PATV, provided permission is obtained.

Content is virtually unrestricted on PATV and normally there aren't any problems.

"Producers are pretty good about knowing when their shows should be on the air," Faine said. "If a producer thinks that people will be offended by the content they usually request to play it later at night."

Censorship of PATV became a heated issue this past June when Iowa City Councilor Mike O'Donnell reportedly called the programming "trash," after he viewed a segment with young boys coming out of a shower room.

"The show played only once. After that people were talking about it, but no one had really seen it," PATV office coordinator Kristen Baumliér said. "It's an on-going dialogue about how we work. At PATV we don't make or sponsor all the shows."

The program was deemed acceptable by Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White.

In accordance with federal, state and local law, a program may not include material with gambling, obscenity, solicitation, advertising, products and services, commercial identification, misrepresentation and illegalities.

"If we did censor, we wouldn't be public access," Baumliér said. "PATV is basically educating people about the responsibility of television. It's a reflection of our local community and all the different voices that are in it."

DRAKE RELAYS

Janvrin going for 10th title in decathlon

DES MOINES (AP) — Kip Janvrin just can't say no to the Drake Relays. Janvrin, who already has won the decathlon nine times at Drake, will try for his 10th title in the 1999 competition today and Thursday.

The Panora native won seven of the 10 events last year in cruising to the victory with 8,038 points. He holds a U.S. record with 21 decathlons of at least 8,000 points.

Janvrin, 33, finished fourth at the U.S. outdoor championships in 1998 with 8,081 points and was ranked fifth nationally for the year.

He has won the Drake decathlon each of the last four years and was inducted into the Drake Relays Athletes Hall of Fame in 1996. With his nine titles, Janvrin is the Relays' career victory leader.

Other competitors will include Alex Sprague of Bowling Green, the third-place finisher at the Sea Rays Relays with 7,329 points, and Indiana State's Doug Hill, who was fourth at that meet. Hill was third at the Missouri Valley Conference outdoor meet last year.

Elliott Young of Southern Illinois, the runner-up at the 1997 MVC meet, also should be among the leaders. He missed the outdoor season last year because of an injury.

Arkansas State's Shunda Smith and Wichita State's Mellanee Welty head the field for the heptathlon.

Smith won the 1998 Sun Belt championship with a league record 5,377 points, while Welty was the Missouri Valley Conference champion last year.

Wings begin quest for elusive third title

Defending champion Detroit will have plenty of competition in the Western Conference playoffs.

By Ken Rappoport
Associated Press

There's a reason Detroit is known as "Hockeytown" — an illustrious history that includes nine Stanley Cups and such players as Gordie Howe and Terry Sawchuk.

One thing the Red Wings have yet to accomplish: winning three straight championships.

They'll begin that mission when they open the playoffs tonight against the Anaheim Mighty Ducks in one of four first-round games.

"We're deeper than we ever have been in past years in every position," goaltender Chris Osgood said. "(But) if you don't play well, you're going to get knocked out."

In other first-round games tonight, it's Edmonton at Dallas, San Jose at Colorado and Buffalo at Ottawa. The playoffs continue Thursday with Pittsburgh at New Jersey, Philadelphia at Toronto, Boston at Carolina and St. Louis at Phoenix.

The Red Wings won't have an easy time getting back to the finals. Two of the best teams in the NHL are in the Western Conference — the league-leading Dallas Stars and Colorado Avalanche, who had a great second half.

"If you look at every (team) out there in the West, it's going to be a battle," defenseman Larry Murphy said. "You can't take anything for granted."

The Red Wings' first-round opponents present a major obstacle. The Mighty Ducks feature two 100-point scorers on their top line, league-leading scorer Teemu Selanne and Paul Kariya.

"We've got to slow them down," center Kris Draper said. "Our job is to go out and play as physical on those guys as we can."

Nor are the Stars taking the Oilers for granted — particularly after what happened two years ago, when Edmonton knocked them out of the playoffs in the first round.

"We learned a lot from that thing

IOWA MEN'S BASKETBALL: ALFORD'S FIRST MONTH ON THE JOB

So much to do, so little time

Mason City H.S. freshman commits to Hawkeyes after weekend visit

By Megan Manfull
The Daily Iowan

Iowa's most-coveted ninth-grade basketball player is ready to start choosing sides, but he wants to wait a few more days before he tells people about it.

Nerves are setting in for Mason City sophomore-to-be Jeff Horner as he prepares to announce his intention to attend Iowa. Horner has been offered scholarships by both the Hawkeyes and Iowa State, and has mulled the decision in recent weeks.

Newspaper reports Tuesday quoted anonymous sources as saying the 15-year-old committed to Iowa after a campus visit last weekend. Tuesday, Iowa point guard and Mason City native Dean Oliver confirmed that the Hawkeyes had won the intrastate battle for Horner.

Horner will hold a press conference at Mason City High School on Saturday at 9:30 a.m.

"I always thought he would commit to Iowa," Oliver said. "I wanted to see him last weekend when he was here on his visit, but after I got back from supper, he was gone. I guess he just came down, committed and left."

However the visit went, Horner liked Alford and that's all that mattered. According to Bob Horner — Jeff's father and high school coach — Alford and Iowa State coach Larry Eustachy were notified of his son's choice Sunday.

However, the family is not making an official statement on the decision

Range's problems, recruiting keeps Alford's staff busy

By James Kramer
The Daily Iowan

Making the transition from high school classrooms to college lecture halls has been a struggle for Iowa basketball player Joey Range, and his future with the Hawkeyes is in jeopardy because of it.

Tuesday, Iowa coach Steve Alford said Range is currently not an active member of the team. That means the freshman from Galesburg, Ill., will not participate in team workouts until he improves his academic situation.

"There are policies that need to be addressed — going to class, doing the job academically, showing up for mandatory team meetings," Alford said. "All these things, maybe more than on occasion, (Range) has struggled with."

Alford made the comments during a press conference in which he addressed his first month on the job with the Hawkeyes. Range, a 6-foot-5 forward, is not suspended, Alford said, but is currently only a "student," as opposed to being a "student-athlete."

Alford was not specific when asked to assess the likelihood of Range being on the team next season. By the end of April, Alford said, "a lot of things will come out as far as who's here and who's not here."

Range's teammates say they don't know many specifics concerning Range's academic progress.

"I think right now, all he's trying to do is just catch up on his work," said

See RANGE/RECRUITING, Page 2B

Players learn quickly what Alford wants

It didn't take Iowa basketball player Rod Thompson very long to learn that Steve Alford was dead serious about the level of passion, commitment and hard work he expects from his players.

In fact, just one physically draining practice was enough to cause a weary Thompson to bury his head in a bucket and vomit due to total exhaustion.

Though Thompson rolls his eyes and denies the incident happened, Alford assures it most certainly did.

"He worked extremely hard that day, and by the end of the workout, he was throwing up in the bucket," Alford said. "At the conclusion, I called him over and told him that we were changing his nickname, so we refer to him as 'Bucket' now."

All this took place in April, a month when Hawkeye basketball is typically the last thing on anybody's mind and everybody's attention is turned to spring football.

But the excitement that has been generated since the hiring of Alford — stemmed by the ESPN television appearances at the Final Four, the rumors of Luke Recker's transfer, and the signing of a star recruit — has trickled all the way down to the current players.

At his introductory news conference a little less than a month ago, Alford — like many new coaches looking for some quick PR — preached about challenging his players "spiritually, socially, academically and athletically."

As the team has found out, this was no empty promise. Alford was sincere.

Four days a week, the team gath-

Sam's the dad, but Steve's the boss

Sam Alford said he came to Iowa City to make sure his grandkids had a babysitter. But based on his coaching résumé, the father of Iowa's new head coach will make his presence felt on the bench as an assistant.

There's no question that the relationship between Sam and Steve Alford is unique. Not only did Sam raise and coach one of the greatest high school and collegiate basketball players ever in son Steve, but since 1994, Sam has worked for his son as an assistant coach at Southwest Missouri State and now, Iowa.

Though some would think Sam was merely hired out of nepotism, his reputation begs to differ. In basketball-crazy New Castle, Ind. — home of the nation's largest high school gym and the Hoosier Basketball Hall of Fame — Sam Alford coached prep basketball for 30 years, winning over 450 games and earning Indiana Coach of the Year honors three times.

His experience in coaching is tough to beat, so at 56 years old, he's followed his son to Iowa City for what will probably be his last run in coaching. Tuesday, DI co-sports editor Wayne Drehs spoke with Sam Alford about his unique relationship with his son and his future with the Hawkeyes.

DI: When could you tell that Steve had a special talent and love for the game of basketball?

SA: From day one, he had excellent hand-eye coordination and was really good with balls. He loved and was infatuated with balls — tennis balls, Ping Pong balls, basketballs, baseballs. And he played all sorts of imaginary games on his own.

And he started sitting with me on my bench when he was three years old, home and away, so that all started at a very young age.

Coach Alford brings father with him to Iowa City

Q AND A

DI: Is it strange that at this point in your career, your son is basically your boss?

SA: No, it's been very good. Steve was a very good basketball player, so it was a situation where I've learned from him and hopefully, he's learned a few things from me. Every day is fun to come to work, he's a very demanding boss, but he makes it enjoyable and knows what he is doing.

DI: How does your coaching style compare to Steve's?

SA: He is much more in control than I was when I coached. As I look back on my career now, I was probably too vocal. Steve's a little more under control, knowing what's going on and how to handle things.

DI: As you sit on the bench and watch Steve coach a game, there must be a tremendous sense of pride. Do you have time to reflect and appreciate these moments?

SA: There is definitely a sense of pride. There are times that I get ready to tell him something we need to do and he'll say it before I get it out of my mouth, so there are a lot of things where we think along the same lines. It's very special.

DI: A lot has been said in the past about the difficulty of winning a national championship in a low-population state like Iowa. Given your background from small-town Indiana, what are your thoughts on this?

SA: It may not be as easy as some places, but I think that's kind of a cop-out. You build your program and get your best players in the state and then you have to look outside of your state. Look at the people that win, take Connecticut this year, and look and see how many people are from the state of Connecticut on the team. You just have to go out and build a good recruiting base.

DI: There is a lot of excitement around Iowa City since the hiring of your son and a lot of fans have very high expectations. What do you think are fair expectations?

SA: I think it's going to take a couple years to get our feet on the ground and then only the sky's the limit. I think Tom Davis and his staff did an excellent job of making Iowa a very competitive program that was in the Top 25 year in and year out. I think what Steve would like to do is make it a Top 10 program year in and year out and that's a very do-able situation.

DI: How do you assess Steve at this point of his coaching career?

SA: I don't think he's even come close to peaking. As a coach, you learn a lot from your mistakes, you learn a lot from your success.

ers at Carver-Hawkeye Arena for mini-practices. Though NCAA rules only permit workouts with four players at a time, Alford and his assistants are there, running drills, correcting flaws and instilling that special passion in every player.

None of the players are complaining. In fact, many of the Hawkeyes actually look forward to the extra sessions and the opportunity to familiarize themselves with the new staff while improving their skills.

The excitement is partly due to the way Alford has gone about implementing his expectations. He doesn't demand that players work hard because he says so. He doesn't require them to be good students and citizens because that's what he wants. Instead, he tries to educate each player so they come to those conclusions themselves. Essentially, his players work hard because they want to, not because he tells them to.

"He gets you to want to do all the work," Thompson said. "Just in a little scrimmage, there is more intensity and we are all more demanding of ourselves."

Perhaps nowhere is this more the case than with Thompson, a player who basically threw in the towel under former coach Tom Davis after not receiving the playing time and attention he felt he deserved.

Rumors circulated all season about Thompson's dismay and his wishes to transfer. From the coach's point of view, Thompson was simply not putting forth the effort.

Now, everything's changed. Thompson is flying around the court and busting his butt in practice. Alford sees the sophomore-to-be as a key component to next year's team.

"He's been super in the workouts," Alford said. "Guys like that, who might have not gotten that much of a chance last year, are going to need to step up."

Players who don't meet Alford's expectations — possibly even athletic young talents like freshman Joey Range — won't wear the black and gold under Alford.

Range has found that Alford is just as serious about activities off the court as he is about those on. Range's inability to keep up with his work in the classroom has led Alford to remove the word "athlete" from Range's label as a student-athlete. Though he refused to comment specifically Tuesday, Alford hinted there are serious doubts concerning Range's return to the team next fall.

"It all stems from what the letters I-O-W-A mean when you put that uniform on," Alford said. "As far as I'm concerned, you put that uniform on everywhere you go. People are always talking about how proud they are to be a Hawkeye, and that's the sort of pride I want our players to have."

You rarely hear about players at championship programs like North Carolina or Duke struggle with problems off the court. That's because their coaches understand the importance of good character, as does Alford.

Just ask Rod Thompson or Joey Range.

freshman Rod Thompson, who played with Range at Galesburg H.S. "Sometimes, as a freshman, you just fall behind. I think that's what happened to him."

Iowa signed a top junior college guard/forward, Rob Griffin, two weeks ago and has two more scholarships to give. That number would increase if Range or any other current Hawkeyes do not return.

"I hope there will still be some additions to the team," Alford said. "When you have additions, sometimes you'll also have subtractions."

Alford said he cannot and would not withhold a scholarship renewal based on a player's skills or playing style.

"Nobody's gonna be dropped from the picture just because they can't play," he said.

The new coaching staff has spent most of the last few weeks recruiting around the country. Under NCAA "quiet period" rules, Alford and his assistants — Sam Alford, Rich Walker and Greg Lansing — can no longer leave campus to speak with recruits until July 8.

Players, on the other hand, can continue to visit campuses, which would allow Wichita State transfer Maurice Evans and Indiana transfer Luke Recker to speak with Alford's staff. Both players have Iowa on their short lists of possible schools.

Alford cannot speak publicly about transfers or recruits until they sign letters of intent, but he was asked "hypothetically" how he would feel about a talented player from Indiana coming to Iowa.

"Hypothetically, I'd probably be pretty excited," said Alford, an Indiana native who has known Recker for several years. "If he can flat-out shoot it, I would probably be a little biased towards him."

Wherever they decide to transfer, Evans and Recker would have to sit out next year. Iowa's major concern for next season is the team's lack of height, and Alford said the Hawkeyes may have to find ways to overcome that weakness.

"At this time of year, there aren't a lot of big-sized people out there (to recruit)," he said. "If you go back to assuming, we're gonna be a little undersized in year one. I'm not gonna correct that in a nine-day period."

When Alford hasn't been occupied with recruiting, he's kept busy with the team's current players. The staff is trying to evaluate the strengths and weaknesses of the returnees by having mini-workouts twice a week at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

"It's really just implementing our styles and personalities," Alford said of the workouts' purpose. "When we bring them back in the fall, I don't want that to be a transition period."

The out-of-season practices can be held until school ends in mid-May. Only four players can participate on the court at once.

Mason City prep phenom commits to men's basketball team

yet. Jeff's sisters are coming to Mason City this weekend and he will make the announcement with his entire family in attendance.

"We'd like to do it sooner, but my second grandchild is being baptized here on Sunday and Jeff is going to be the godfather," Bob Horner said. "We wanted to have the press conference when everyone would be around."

When Horner announces his choice, he will become the youngest prep player ever to commit to one of Iowa's state schools. Oliver and Ricky Davis, of Davenport, were sophomores in high school when they committed to Iowa in 1994. Horner will not start college until the 2002-03 school year.

"I thought he might want to follow in my footsteps," Oliver said. "But it looks like he's trying to make his own and clear my footsteps. I think all of my records at Mason City are in jeopardy, and now my ones at Iowa are not going to be safe."

Horner, a 6-foot-2 guard, was Mason City's star last season, averaging 19 points, seven assists and 5.5 rebounds. Following his freshman campaign, Horner was contacted by Arizona, Syracuse, Louisville and Minnesota. He didn't show much interest in any of them, though, because of his desire to stay in Iowa.

"Jeff made up his mind he did not want to leave the state," Bob Horner said. "And with Iowa not having a coach, that's when Iowa State came in."

"But people need to realize, with Dean being so close to Jeff and knowing (assistant coach) Rich Walker, we were kept up on what was going on at Iowa. Rich had a good relationship with Jeff, then when Coach Alford and his dad came in, they did a great job catching up."

Players cannot sign binding letters of intent until their senior year. Horner's announcement will be a verbal commitment, but his father said there is no chance his son will change his mind.

During Alford's press conference at Carver-Hawkeye Arena on Tuesday, he was not able to talk about specific recruits, but did share his feelings on the concept of offering a scholarship to someone as young as Horner.

"If we can find individuals that are extremely talented and have great potential down the road, if that can be determined by the ninth-grade year, we'll do it," Alford said. "If you have the passion and talent, we want to get those kids committed as early as we can."

that happened two years ago," Dallas coach Ken Hitchcock said.

"We know not to overlook anybody. We learned our lesson."

Besides, finishing with the best record in the NHL guarantees nothing. Ask the Red Wings, who won a record 62 games in the 1995-96 season, yet were knocked out of the playoffs.

In the 30 years since expansion, less than half the teams that had the highest point total in the regular season managed to win the Cup. The last was the New York Rangers in 1994.

"Being the No. 1 seed is a burden you have to accept," Hitchcock said. "You know that going in."

Creightons silences Hawkeyes' bats

Iowa collected only six hits in two games against non-conference Creighton.

By Tony Wirt
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa Hawkeyes didn't get many hits in Tuesday's softball doubleheader against Creighton, but in the second game, they made the ones they got count.

The Hawkeyes' two errors wasted a solid effort by freshman pitcher Kristi Hanks in the first game, giving the Bluejays a 2-0 win.

Iowa turned things around in the second game, taking a 3-1 victory. The Hawkeyes had four hits in the opener, and just two in the game two victory.

"We struggled offensively, but we did have some well-hit balls in the first game — but right at someone," Iowa coach Gayle Blevins said. "In the second game, there were more positives."

Going into the sixth inning of game two, the Hawkeyes were facing a 1-0 deficit and hadn't had a baserunner. Then Hanks earned a walk, pinch runner Erin Doud moved to second on a sacrifice bunt by Katy Jendrzejewski and scored the tying run on a double by Shawnte Vallejo.

Then came Megan Atkins, who delivered a clutch two-run blast over the left field wall that put the Hawkeyes ahead for good.

"I'd been struggling with the bat, so this will really help," Atkins said. "The coaches have me using a timing swing now, and I like it a lot. It has been a good adjustment for me."

Sophomore Megan Petersen delivered another strong performance on the mound, giving up only three hits while striking out four. Junior Kelly Zeilstra took over in the ninth to notch her first save.

"This was a good, solid performance for me," Petersen said. "I was glad Kelly was able to come in and finish it off. I think we complement each other well."

In the first game, Hanks pitched seven strong innings, striking out five and not allowing an earned run in the loss. The Bluejays used two Iowa errors in the sixth to take their 2-0 lead, which they never relinquished.

"I thought Hanks threw a good game," Blevins said. "Unfortunately, we made a few mistakes that cost us. Errors become even bigger when you aren't scoring runs."

The Hawkeyes will return to Big Ten action today in a doubleheader against Northwestern. The first pitch is set for 2 p.m.

Bonds out at least two and a half months with arm injury

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Barry Bonds is out for at least 2 1/2 months after surgery on his throwing arm Tuesday — the first significant injury to an All-Star player who rarely missed a game during his 12-year career.

The San Francisco Giants left fielder had surgery at Recovery Inn in Menlo Park to repair a triceps tendon and a bone spur in his left elbow. He was placed on the 15-day disabled list for only the second time.

The operation was performed by San Jose, Calif. team physician Dr. Arthur Ting. Giants physician Dr. Bill Montgomery, who observed the procedure, said Bonds was placed in an elbow splint and will be fitted with a brace this week.

For now, the Giants, one of the National League's best hitting teams, will now be without their best hitter for a minimum of 10 weeks.

Bonds, an eight-time All-Star and seven-time Gold Glove winner, was batting .366 with 12 RBIs and four home runs. "It's probably one of the largest challenges I've faced since I've been manager here," manager Dusty Baker said.

Giants trainer Mark Letendre said the expected recovery period was based on several factors, including Bonds' past ability to heal quickly from injury.

"We're hopeful it will be on the shorter end of 10 weeks rather than the longer end," he said.

Stan Conte, the Giants' assistant athletic trainer who also observed the surgery, said the bone spur and damaged tendon tissue were right on top of each other.

"The tissue looked better than we feared, but not as good as we hoped," he said.

The first inkling of a problem came Friday during batting practice in Phoenix. Bonds told Baker his left elbow was bothering him.

Baker dismissed speculation that the injury occurred during or just after a bench-clearing brawl Friday night against the Arizona Diamondbacks. "That's crazy," Baker said.

Hawks look to rebound against Bradley

By Greg Wallace
The Daily Iowan

With the Big Ten season at its midway point, the Iowa baseball team is in a big hole.

The Hawkeyes are in last place in the conference with a 4-12 record. To have any shot at making the Big Ten tournament, for which the top four teams qualify, they need to win each of their three remaining Big Ten series, beginning with a four-game home set against Illinois this weekend.

It will be a long road for the Hawkeyes, but every journey has to start somewhere. Iowa will begin its climb with a non-conference doubleheader today at home against Bradley. The Hawkeyes want to use success against the Braves to light a spark for the series against the Illini.

Today's doubleheader will consist of two seven-inning games, beginning at 1 p.m. at Iowa Field.

"Things haven't been going our way," center fielder Brian Burks said. "We're looking to play some good baseball and get some momentum going into this weekend against Illinois."

Burks is currently riding a six-game hitting streak and is hitting .381, good for second on the team behind Toby Humes (.385).

Iowa coach Scott Broghamer hopes his team can build on Sunday's 10-9 comeback win over Purdue. The Hawkeyes scored four runs in the eighth inning to snap a seven-game conference losing skid. Broghamer feels that game gave his team the boost it needed.

"Without a doubt," Broghamer said. "It comes back to show you we can score a lot of runs. We just need to get pitching, and we need to realize that when we get to those last few innings, we can win, and we can be a good baseball team."

Brian Mitchell's availability for today will be a game-time decision. The senior second baseman re-injured his left hamstring last Friday against Purdue.

"We'll make a decision at 12:59," Broghamer said.

Iowa will start Wes Obermueller and Steve Rasmussen against the Braves. Rasmussen flirted with a no-hitter in his last start against Purdue, holding the Boilers hitless for 5 1/3 innings of a seven-inning game before losing, 3-1.

Bradley holds a record of 15-21 after a split of a weekend series with Indiana State. The Braves are led by first baseman Nelson Correa, who is hitting .382 with nine home runs. The Hawkeyes won two of three games against Bradley last year.

Trio of Hawks picked as free agents

The NFL hopes of Matt Hughes, Trevor Bollers, and Chris Knipper are still alive.

By Greg Wallace
The Daily Iowan

Sure, Matt Hughes, Trevor Bollers and Chris Knipper weren't selected in last weekend's NFL draft. But that doesn't mean they're not worthy of a chance to achieve their goals.

The trio of former Hawkeyes signed free-agent contracts with NFL teams this week, giving them at least a fighting chance to make an NFL roster come September.

Hughes, a linebacker, signed with the San Francisco 49ers, fullback Bollers was picked up by the Jacksonville Jaguars and offensive tackle Knipper inked a deal with the San Diego Chargers.

"I hoped to get drafted, but coming out of high school, I never thought I'd have this opportunity," Hughes said. "So it's a dream come true."

Of the three, Bollers' and Hughes' chances of making an NFL roster appear to be most promising. Jacksonville has only one player on its roster, Daimon Shelton, who could be called a fullback.

As for Hughes, San Francisco has no backups at two of its three linebacker slots.

"They want some young guys to come in so they (the 49ers) can take them under their wings and develop them into future starters," Hughes said.

Hughes had the second-most tackles for Iowa in 1998, with 89, and was also honorable mention All-Big Ten.

Bollers was used mostly as a blocking fullback, gaining 44 yards on 16 carries in 1998. He was also selected second overall in last week's Canadian Football League draft by the Edmonton Eskimos.

The signing of Knipper is particularly interesting since he has never played a down competitively at tackle. Knipper played three years for Iowa as a tight end, and was slated to move to the offensive line in 1998, but he missed the entire season due to academic problems and injuries.

Rockies postpone game in wake of shootings

DENVER — A fatal shooting at a Denver-area high school caused the postponement of Tuesday night's game between the Colorado Rockies and the Montreal Expos.

The game will be made up as part of a split doubleheader when the Expos return to Colorado for a three-game series Aug. 13-15, but the exact date was not set.

Rockies owner Jerry McMorris talked to commissioner Bud Selig before deciding to postpone the game as details emerged about the shooting at Columbine High School in suburban Littleton.

"It's not right for us to play," McMorris said. "We're not going to play. Our players don't want to play, and nobody in the organization wants to play. Our hearts and prayers go out to the families in that community."

Brian Bohanon (2-0), Tuesday's scheduled starter for Colorado, will pitch Wednesday. Montreal will skip Mike Thurman (0-1) in the rotation and stick with Wednesday's scheduled starter Dustin Hermanson. (2-0).

Mets 3, Reds 2

CINCINNATI — Bobby Bonilla's first homer for the Mets broke a seventh-inning tie and New York's bullpen held on for a victory Marge Schott, who agreed to sell her controlling interest in the Reds to three limited partners before the game, did not show up at the stadium. Her seat behind the dugout was empty as the Reds fell to 1-6 at home this season.

Bonilla, obtained from Los Angeles last December for Mel Rojas, homered right on a full-count pitch from Pete Harnisch (1-2) leading off the seventh to put the Mets ahead 2-1.

Associated Press/Todd Ponath

St. Louis' Eric Davis hits a two-run double during the first inning against the Milwaukee Brewers Tuesday in Milwaukee.

Yankees 4, Rangers 0

NEW YORK — Nearly seven months later, the Texas Rangers still can't hit New York pitching.

David Cone allowed three hits in eight innings and Paul O'Neill hit two home runs to lead New York to a 4-0 victory Tuesday night, snapping a four-game losing skid.

O'Neill broke out of an 0-for-15 slump with a two-run homer in the first and a solo shot in the third for the Yankees, who got their first shutout win of the year avoided their first five-game slide since September 1997.

Devil Rays 5, Orioles 3

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Scott Erickson was chased after just five outs and Tampa Bay beat Baltimore to send the Orioles to their fourth straight loss.

At 3-10, the Orioles are off to their worst start since their lost 21 straight at the start of the 1988 season. It's the second-worst start in team history.

Indians 5, Athletics 1

CLEVELAND — Bartolo Colon and three relievers combined on a three-hitter and Jim Thome homered off Kenny Rogers as Cleveland got their 10th win.

Colon (3-0) gave up three hits and struck out six in six innings as Cleveland won for the 10th time in 11 games to match their 10-2 start of last season. Steve Reed, Mark Langston, and Paul Shuey held the As without a hit over the final three innings.

Blue Jays 5, Angels 1

TORONTO — Tony Fernandez hit a three-run double and Kelvin Escobar pitched 6 1-3 strong innings, leading the Toronto Blue Jays over the Anaheim Angels 5-1 Tuesday night for their sixth straight win.

The Angels, who learned Monday they will be without center fielder Jim Edmonds for about four months due to a severely injured right shoulder, have lost three straight.

Red Sox 1, Tigers 0

DETROIT — Pedro Martinez struck out 10 in 7 2-3 innings and Troy O'Leary homered as the Boston Red Sox beat the Detroit Tigers 1-0 Tuesday night to win for just the third time in their last seven games.

Martinez (3-1) allowed three hits and walked three, and Rheal Cormier and Derek Lowe followed with perfect relief. Cormier and Lowe combined to strike out the side in the ninth, with Lowe getting two outs for his first save of the season.

Cardinals 8, Brewers 3

MILWAUKEE — Mark McGwire left in the fifth inning with a tight left hamstring, and the St. Louis Cardinals beat the Milwaukee Brewers 8-3 Tuesday night as Eric Davis drove in two runs before getting hurt.

McGwire, who has five home runs, was 0-for-2 with a walk when he left in the fifth on a damp night with a 47-degree temperature at gametime.

COLLEGE BASKETBALL

Administrators knew of Minnesota's problems

■ A former counseling director alleged Clem Haskins had to have known his athletes were cheating.

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The former director of the University of Minnesota's academic counseling unit said four administrators knew of academic problems in the men's basketball program.

Elayne Donahue, who retired last year after 15 years, on Monday named McKinley Boston, the former men's athletic director who now is vice president of student development and athletics; former Vice Presidents Anne Hopkins and Jim Infante; and former President Nils Hasselmo.

"What I tried to get across to the investigators is that it was an institutional problem," she said. "Coach Clem Haskins filled the space he was given, and he was given a lot of space."

Jan Gangelhoff, a former office manager in the academic counseling unit, said she did more than 400 pieces of course work for at least 20 players from 1993 to 1998.

When Donahue was asked whether she believed those four administrators knew of academic cheating, she said, "If you're asking did those people know Jan Gangelhoff was writing term papers, I would doubt it. But I have no way of knowing."

Donahue made her comments after presenting investigators with her report that alleges men's basketball players received preferential treatment, including grade-fixing, by some faculty members.

Donahue gave her report to the media last week because she said she thought the allegations would not be investigated thoroughly if they were not made public first. She said after her interview that she believed her concerns were heard.

Donahue and the investigators also discussed Haskins' role in the academic careers of his athletes and any knowledge he might have had that Gangelhoff was doing work for players.

"I believe he had total control," she said. "He was advocating certain tutors that he wanted his athletes to work with and others he didn't. He had to have knowledge of their work to do that."

Haskins has denied any allegations of wrongdoing.

Earlier on Monday, Gangelhoff's attorney, Jim Lord, gave reporters a men's athletic department analysis of individual players' grades, an act that violates state data privacy laws, before scurrying to collect every copy. Lord also represents Donahue.

NBA ROUNDUP

Spurs have little trouble disposing Jazz in Salt Lake

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Tim Duncan had 36 points, 10 rebounds and seven blocked shots as the San Antonio Spurs beat the Utah Jazz 83-67 Tuesday night.

The loss snapped Utah's 11-game winning streak and pulled the Spurs within three games of the Jazz's league-best record. San Antonio also clinched a playoff spot in the Western Conference.

The Jazz lost for the first time in April and for just the second time at home this season. The Spurs, the NBA's hottest team since March 1, won for the 23rd time in their last 27 games.

With his dominating performance, Duncan more than covered for a foul-plagued game from his Twin Towers partner, David Robinson. Duncan had 14 points in the third quarter as the Spurs built a sizeable lead over the out-of-sync Jazz, who shot just 35.4 percent in the game.

Hawks 103, Raptors 81

TORONTO — Chris Crawford had a career-high 18 points as the Hawks won their third straight game.

Mookie Blaylock led a Hawks' long-distance shooting show with four 3-pointers on five attempts, and had 16 points overall as Atlanta shot 9-for-18 from 3-point territory.

Steve Smith had 14 points, while Grant Long had 12 rebounds and 11 points as Atlanta improved to 14-1 against Toronto. All five starters scored in double digits, while reserve Tyrone Corbin had 13, with nine coming on 3-pointers.

Rookie Vince Carter led the Raptors with 16 points in only 29 minutes of playing time.

Mavericks 104, Suns 100

DALLAS — Michael Finley scored a season-high 36 points, including the go-ahead jumper with 6.5 seconds left, as the injury-depleted Mavericks ended Phoenix's three-game winning streak.

With the game tied at 100, Finley worked the clock inside seven seconds and hit a 17-footer to bring back the Mavericks from an 18-point third-quarter deficit.

Erick Strickland deflected the ensuing inbound pass by Phoenix's Jason Kidd, Dallas' Chris Anstey collected the loose ball with 3.6 seconds left and Finley made two free throws with 2.6 to play.

Kidd and Clifford Robinson had 17 points each for the Suns, who had their nine-game winning streak against the Mavericks snapped. Danny Manning added 16 points, Tom Gugliotta had 15 and Rex Chapman 13 as the Suns lost momentum in their bid to strengthen their hold on a Western Conference playoff spot. The Mavericks were without injured starters Gary Trent (sore hamstring) and Steve Nash (back spasms).

Bucks 95, Magic 83

MILWAUKEE — Ray Allen and Glenn Robinson each scored 18 points and Milwaukee scored the game's last 12 points. With Milwaukee ahead 85-83, Allen made a 3-pointer over two Orlando defenders with 1:26 to play. Darrell Armstrong was then called for an offensive foul driving against Michael Curry, Orlando, which has lost two games in a row and four straight on the road, failed to score in the last 2:36.

Orioles place Clark on 15-day DL

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — One day after Cal Ripken went on the disabled list for the first time in his career, he was joined by Will Clark.

Clark, whose fractured left thumb in expected to keep him out of Baltimore's lineup for four weeks, was injured Sunday when he was struck by a sharp grounder off the bat of Toronto's Willie Green.

The Orioles placed him on the 15-day disabled list Tuesday, retroactive to Monday, when the first baseman was examined in Baltimore by Dr. Hugh Baugher.

Ripken was placed on the disabled list Monday with nerve irritation in his lower back.

Clark, who signed with the Orioles as a free agent in December, was hitting .370 with three homers and seven RBIs.

Infielder Jessie Garcia was recalled from Triple-A Rochester. The Orioles said a second player will be added to the active roster in the next day or two.

Watts sentenced drunken-driving
SOMERSET, Ky. (AP) — Ball player Jason Watts was sentenced to 10 years in prison for the maximum 10 years related truck crash that killed another young man.
Watts, who turned 22 on Tuesday, was sentenced to 10 years in prison for the maximum 10 years related truck crash that killed another young man.
Watts' shoulders slumped when the judge sentenced him, and given a chance to plead guilty to reduce his sentence, he refused to start serving time immediately.
Watts' attorneys said they would appeal the sentence.
NFL eyes Coliseum
Los Angeles
LOS ANGELES (AP) — NFL's first $1 billion deal, the league wants to move the Los Angeles Coliseum.
NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue said the league would like to see the 19-year-old stadium is the league's choice for its 32nd franchise.
Yet to be determined who will own the team, developer Ed Roski and New Coliseum Partners, Hollywood deal-maker Michael Ovitz, who endorsed the Coliseum as his proposal for a new stadium.
Tagliabue did not rule out other options.
At a Coliseum news conference, Tagliabue said the league is also holding an auction for the stadium, and instead will sell the stadium.

Watts sentenced for fatal drunken-driving crash

SOMERSET, Ky. (AP) — Former Kentucky football player Jason Watts was sentenced Tuesday to the maximum 10 years in prison for an alcohol-related truck crash that killed a teammate and another young man.

Watts, who turned 22 Monday, has been in the Pulaski County Detention Center since March 31, when he pleaded guilty to reckless driving and volunteered to start serving time immediately.

Watts' shoulders slumped when the judge sentenced him, and given a chance to address the court, Watts choked back tears as he said, "I want to say I'm sorry to all the people I let down."

NFL eyes Coliseum for new Los Angeles team

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In what could be the NFL's first $1 billion deal for a stadium and franchise, the league wants to put a team back in the Los Angeles Coliseum.

NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue made it official Tuesday that the 76-year-old stadium is the league's choice for its 32nd franchise.

Yet to be determined is who will own the team — developer Ed Roski and his New Coliseum Partners, or Hollywood deal-maker Michael Ovitz, who endorsed the Coliseum last week after abandoning his proposal for a new stadium in suburban Carson.

Tagliabue did not rule out other potential ownership groups emerging.

At a Coliseum news conference, the commissioner also said the league's team owners decided against holding an auction for the expansion franchise, and instead will set a price.

Bengals cut O'Donnell in favor of rookie Smith

CINCINNATI — The Neil O'Donnell era in Cincinnati lasted only one rocky season.

The Bengals released O'Donnell on Monday, nine months after they signed him to a four-year, $17 million contract. They've decided to go in another direction at quarterback with first-round draft choice Akili Smith.

Cincinnati strongly pursued O'Donnell, 32, as a free agent last summer, hoping he would solve their decade-long problems at quarterback. He led the Bengals to two of their three victories, but struggled to move the offense consistently.

Vikings' Thomas faces June arraignment

ST. PAUL, Minn. — Minnesota Vikings safety Orlando Thomas, charged with assaulting his wife, is expected to be arraigned in Louisiana on June 24.

He was arrested Friday night after his wife, Demetra, called the sheriff's office in Acadia Parish, La., and said she had been assaulted. She was treated at a hospital and released.

The domestic violence charge carries a $500 fine and a six-month jail term. The charge means Thomas must comply with the NFL's violent crime policy, which includes mandatory evaluation and counseling.

The 26-year-old player was born in Crowley, La., and owns a home in the town, which is 140 miles west of New Orleans.

NHL pressures Pittsburgh to resolve money woes

PITTSBURGH — The NHL is expected to back Mario Lemieux's ownership bid for the bankrupt Pittsburgh Penguins and hinted it could revoke the team's franchise if he does not gain control.

The NHL plans to file legal documents Friday supporting the Lemieux group and offering to work with him to get the Penguins out of bankruptcy, league and legal sources close to the proceedings told The Associated Press.

The NHL wants the matter settled by June at the latest, they said.

The league is eager for a new owner — Lemieux — and a reorganization plan to be in place by then so budgets for the 1999-2000 season can be made, players can be signed and season tickets can be sold.

For that reason, the league is discouraging Florida investment banker Chip Gesner from submitting a bid, one that might further slow the process, the sources said.

"A lot of people could buy the Penguins, but one person can save them: Mario Lemieux," Penguins spokesman Tom McMillan said Tuesday.

Agassi, Becker withdraw

MONTE CARLO, Monaco — Andre Agassi and Boris Becker withdrew from the Monte Carlo Open today, Agassi because of a shoulder injury and Becker because of his father's death.

Agassi, the No. 7 seed, will be replaced in the draw by 27-year-old Italian Vincenzo Santopadre.

Agassi was due to play Frenchman Arnaud Di Pasquale in the second round on Wednesday.

Becker withdrew when he learned his father, Karl-Heinz Becker, had died of stomach cancer. "I am very, very sad," Becker said. "I admired my father and I owe him a lot. In this difficult situation I have to and want to be close to my family. Especially my mother needs me."

Becker, who plays a limited schedule, beat Cedric Pioline in the first round Monday. He was to have played Jerome Golmard of France in the second round.

Hayes suspended for four games after brawl

NEW YORK — San Francisco Giants third baseman Charlie Hayes was suspended for four games today by the National League for charging Arizona's Todd Stottlemyre last week and instigating a brawl.

Hayes and Stottlemyre were also fined $2,000 each by NL president Len Coleman. Hayes decided not to appeal the penalty, and started serving the penalty Tuesday night.

Hayes charged the mound from second base in the sixth inning at Phoenix last Friday night.

"I didn't land a punch, but I did try to hurt him," Hayes said after the game. "He can say 'Hi' to me, and I'll try to slap him. I just don't like him."

Marge Schott agrees to sell control of Reds

CINCINNATI — Marge Schott agreed Tuesday to sell control of the Cincinnati Reds for $67 million, leaving her one step away from the end of her tumultuous 15-year reign.

The other major league owners have to approve the sale to Cincinnati financier Carl Lindner and two of the other limited partners, a process that usually takes 6-15 months but is expected to move quickly, perhaps with a vote as soon as June.

Baseball had ordered her to sell her controlling interest in the Reds and end a tenure that included one suspension for inflammatory remarks and other disciplinary measures, such as giving up day-to-day decision-making.

Lindner would become the team's controlling partner. Limited partners George Strike and William Reik also would be part of the new ownership group.

"Carl Lindner, George Strike and Bill Reik have been excellent limited partners in the current partnership," NL president Len Coleman said. "I think with their leadership, once the background work is done, the fans in Cincinnati will be blessed with a bright future for baseball."
