Yugoslavia frees three U.S. Army soldiers

■ After more than a month of captivity, their release was arranged by Jesse Jackson.

By George Boehmer
Associated Press

RAMSTEIN, Germany — Three U.S. servicemen walked jubilantly into Croatia Sunday, celebrating their freedom after more than a month as prisoners of war in Yugoslavia and chanting in unison, "Free at last."

The Rev. Jesse Jackson, who persuaded Yugoslav officials to free the soldiers, hoped President Clinton would reciprocate by offering a respite from air strikes, now in their sixth week. NATO refused to reward the gesture and alliance pounded Yugoslavia with new attacks.

The alliance's intense attacks Sunday included more than 600 sorties over a 24-hour period. NATO also acknowledged that it was responsible for the strike on a bus north of the Kosovo capital, Pristina, on May 1 that Yugoslav officials said killed 47 people.

The soldiers were flown from Croatia to a U.S. military base in Ramstein in southwest Germany, where they were greeted with salutes from their Army buddies and wild cheers from a flag-waving crowd.

Their arrival capped an emotional, daylong journey by land and air from Yugoslavia's capital with Jackson, who had appealed to Yugoslav President Slobodan Milosevic to release them.

But Clinton administration officials kept a hardline stance. "This gesture ... of goodwill cannot obliterate or overcome the stench of evil and death that has been inflicted in those killing fields in Kosovo," Defense Secretary William Cohen said on NBC's "Meet the Press."

Cohen and other U.S. officials sounded a tough line, suggesting Milosevic had simply engaged in a "PR stunt" in releasing the American prisoners. But the administration was coming under pressure from a variety of sources to seek a diplomatic end to the crisis — from Jackson to two top Republican leaders in Congress.

Delt blast boasts 16 kegs

■ Fraternity officials say they will check the house for damage and that the residents may be evicted.

By Rebecca Anderson
The Daily Iowan

Fears that members of the former UI Delta Tau Delta fraternity would have a final blowout party of the semester were confirmed early Sunday.

More than 450 people and 16 kegs brought Iowa City police to the former fraternity house, 322 N. Clinton St., at 2:25 a.m. Sunday, said Steven W. Soper, a former member of the fraternity.

Officers charged Soper, 19, and Jeffrey R. Lietz, 19, both of 322 N. Clinton St., and Brian J. Murphey, 20, 934 Iowa Ave., with keeping a disorderly house.

The international Delta Tau Delta office revoked the chapter's charter on April 6, citing alcohol and drug violations. The office will allow the approximately 25 residents to remain in the house until May 16.

According to police reports, officers responded to a complaint of loud music and voices coming from the house. Reports also show the origin of the complaint came from the house.

Members of the former Delta Tau Delta house would not comment on the origin of the complaint.

At the house, officers witnessed "audible voices outside of the building" and more than 50 people in the house drinking, said police Lt. Matt Johnson.

A crowd of more than 600 was on hand to witness the annual night of rhythm and dance.

The Zeta Phi Beta and Sigma Gamma Rho sororities danced in the glow of black lights and the Kappa Alpha Psi fraternity asked pretty please with a cherry on top.

But at the end of the night, the winning routines at the annual Step Show on May 1 were straightforward numbers by the Phi Beta Sigma fraternity and the Delta Sigma Theta sorority. The winning fraternity introduced its act with an apocalypse theme and gas masks, and the sorority team danced in bright camouflage-print overalls.

About 600 people gathered to see African traditions in music and dance at the event sponsored by the National Panhellenic Council in Macbride Auditorium. The competition included six performances from three sororities and three fraternities.

Kappa Alpha Psi performers provided a racy twist to their routine, smearing whipped cream on chairs, popping cherries into their mouths and a twirling a baton of fire in their act.

Jackson works his prisoner magic again

■ With persuasion — and with prayer — Jesse Jackson wins the release of three U.S. soldiers.

By Sonya Ross
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Looking a reluctant Yugoslav President Slobodan Milosevic in the eye, Jesse Jackson told him the time had come to let go of the three American prisoners he was holding. He held Milosevic's hand and prayed with him.

"I had to convince him of what his options were," Jackson told the Associated Press in an interview. "One of the failures of war is a failure of diplomacy, communication and trust."

Somehow, his preacher's persuasion worked on a Serb leader eager to change his image. Jackson emerged with the three soldiers in his custody, a joyful conclusion to what he said Sunday was the most dangerous of his forays onto hostile ground as a freelance negotiator.

"This mission was more volatile and more violent," Jackson said. "We saw bombs exploding. The night we got there was the heaviest bombing. But it was worth the risk."

Jackson also came out of Belgrade holding a letter for President Clinton, undoubtedly a political coup for the man who is seen as both a necessity and an omnipresent gadfly at the Clinton White House.

But with the success came criticisms that Jackson let himself be used by Milosevic, that he coddled Milosevic by praying with him, that he is meddling by urging Clinton and NATO to find a way to return Milosevic's gesture.

Speaking Sunday from Ramstein Air Force Base in Germany, Jackson made no apologies for putting pressure on NATO, saying "there are certain crises that deserve the highest level of presidential attention."

"Unless you talk, you cannot determine at what point your bombs are leading to the end," Jackson said. "We must look forward to a meeting, whether it's President Clinton or (British Prime Minister) Tony Blair."

Empty shoes a memorial for victims of AIDS

■ A rally in College Green Park remembers those who have died after contracting HIV.

By Alpana Lath
The Daily Iowan

About 25 pair of shoes were set out at a memorial at College Green Park Sunday evening. The people who might have filled them fell victim to AIDS.

The memorial was organized by Iowa City's Iowa Center for AIDS Resources (ICARE), whose volunteers placed a pair of shoes for each of the names read aloud.

A group of about 30 people commemorated the 13.9 million people who have died of AIDS worldwide.

The ceremony, which was followed by a candlelight procession to the Pedestrian Mall, also included time for shared experiences as well as music performances by Susan Beckett and Laurie Haag.

Haag, who is on the board of directors at ICARE, said remembering people who have AIDS and those who have fallen victim to the disorder was important in furthering advances toward combating HIV, the virus that causes AIDS.

"It's necessary to have people from the audience who have had experiences of friends or family members with AIDS," Haag said. "That gives other people who have not had any such experience a story, and something that makes them realize that AIDS is out there and you have to fight it."

Jennifer Hess, a music therapy intern at the UI Hospitals and Clinics, said she attended the memorial to listen to the music.

"AIDS is not something that I normally get emotional about because no one I know has it," she said.

RANDOM JOKES

• A pair of Michigan robbers entered a record shop nervously waving revolvers. The first one shouted, "Nobody move!" When his partner started toward the cash register, the startled first bandit shot him.

• A man was walking through a forest pondering life. He walked, pondered, walked and pondered. He felt very close to nature and even close to God. He felt so close to God that he felt if he spoke, God would listen. So he asked, "God, are you listening?" And God replied, "Yes, my son, I am here."

The man stopped and pondered some more. He looked toward the sky and said, "God, what is a million years to you?" God replied, "Well my son, a second to me is like a million years to you." So the man continued to walk and ... walk and ponder ... Then he looked to the sky again and said, "God, what is a million dollars to you?" And God replied, "My son, my son ... a penny to me is like a million dollars to you. It means almost nothing to me. It does not even have a value it is so little." The man looked down, pondered a bit and then looked up to the sky and said, "God, can I have a million dollars?" And God replied, "In a second."

Pfeiffer makes '50 Most Beautiful' for sixth time

NEW YORK (AP) — Michelle Pfeiffer, who has just made People magazine's "50 Most Beautiful" list for the sixth time, says she would like to have longer legs and curls.

Pfeiffer

"I'm not unhappy with the way I look now," Pfeiffer, 41, says in the May 10 issue of People magazine. But "I really would like curls."

The movie star is featured on the cover of the magazine's special issue, making her the only celebrity to have graced the "50 Most Beautiful" cover twice.

"I became a writer," he continued, "back in 1999. I had approximately, uh, the rest of the month to finish it. And those of you who know the month of February know what I'm talking about."

Bobbitt pleads guilty to larceny charge

FALLON, Nev. (AP) — John Wayne Bobbitt has pleaded guilty to an attempted grand larceny charge stemming from the theft of clothing at a Fallon store.

Bobbitt

Bobbitt, 32, who gained notoriety in 1993 when his then-wife, Lorena, cut off his penis, faces up to five years in prison and a $10,000 fine when he's sentenced on Sept. 14 for his part in a theft scheme involving store employees.

Bobbitt entered the plea last week as part of a plea bargain. In return, prosecutors agreed to cap his restitution at $5,000 and to drop felony theft and conspiracy to commit theft charges against him.

Help me, Harlan

Dear Harlan,
One of the guys I work with is engaged, but he constantly flirts with other girls. We've even had some very intense sessions of locking eyes.

He is very young in my opinion to be getting married. He's only 21, and I'm in my late 20s. I think he is attracted to me because of my age and that he fantasizes about being with someone "experienced."

I have feelings for him, but don't think I could ever do anything about it because I don't, as a rule, mess with other people's lives.

I suspect that he is getting married because he is deeply in love and doesn't want to lose his fiancée. I also sense he's torn between his fiancée and wanting more experience before he settles down.

— Not butting in

Dear Not butting,
I'm not looking to mess with this guy's life either, so I'll let your letter say it all. So, if you're the guy who is engaged and you're having serious staring sessions with an older woman at work, think about whether you want to be married.
If not, there's an older woman willing to share her expertise with you.

Dear Harlan,
I'm incapable of studying or writing my final papers. I have a major block and have been up all night for the last three days. NOTHING has been accomplished. Any help would be appreciated.

— All nighter

Dear All nighter,
Finals are insulting. You work an entire semester to prove that you know the materials only to have a professor call your bluff with a final exam. Assuming your lack of concentration isn't a more deeply seated problem, there are a few things you can do to try to get over your study block. When you study, take plenty of breaks. Make sure you study in a comfortable place, but not too comfortable, like in your bed. If you get distracted, remind yourself to take time after studying to deal with distracting thoughts. Set nightly goals. Consider a study group. Always avoid cramming.

Do whatever it takes to make studying and writing as effortless and entertaining as possible. It may even help you to have entertainers every other study break: Use your time wisely and be positive. Whatever you do, don't fight finals, because when it comes to finals, you'll always lose.

Search team finds lost capsule

■ The newly discovered capsule is still stuck 3 miles deep in the Atlantic.

By Marcia Dunn
Associated Press

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Lost at sea for 38 years, astronaut Gus Grissom's Mercury capsule was found over the weekend by an underwater salvage team that had been searching for the spacecraft 300 miles offshore.

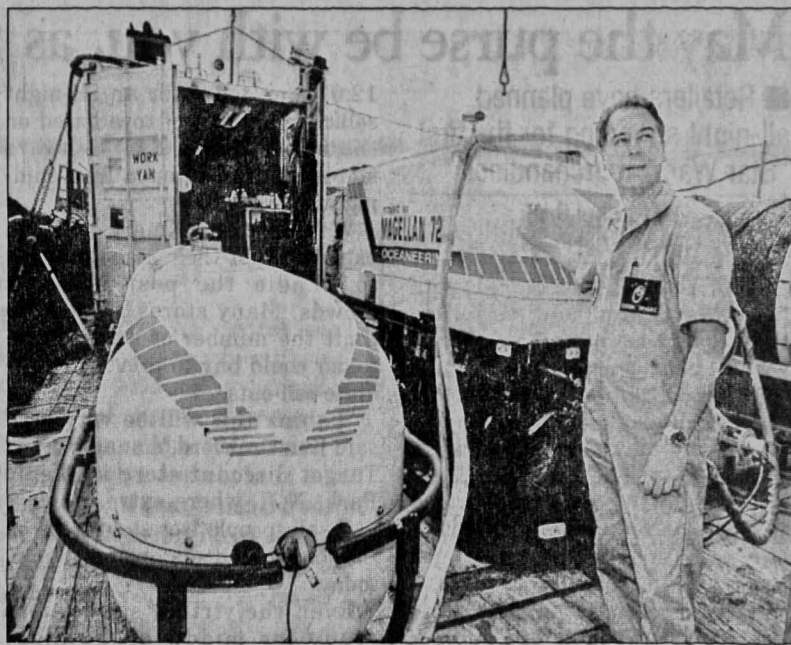

Liberty Bell 7 is still 3 miles deep in the Atlantic.

The cable to a remotely operated rover used to identify and photograph the capsule snapped in the rough sea May 1 and the rover sank. The salvagers are returning to Port Canaveral for new equipment and will have to wait at least a few weeks before going back to recover the spacecraft.

But at least they now know where it is, and they're thrilled about the May 1 discovery.

"It looks to be in beautiful condition and certainly capable of being recovered," expedition leader Curt Newport said Sunday by phone from the ship, the Needham Tide.

The only U.S. spacecraft ever lost following a successful mission, the capsule is still shiny in spots with an intact window and the name "Liberty Bell 7" clearly printed beneath it. Even the fake crack that was painted on the capsule to replicate the real Liberty Bell is still visible, as are the single marks left by the explosives that blew out the hatch following splashdown on July 21, 1961.

Liberty Bell 7 sank following Grissom's successful 15-minute suborbital flight — the nation's second manned space flight. The explosive bolts that blow open the hatch detonated prematurely, and helicopter rescuers were unable to lift the waterlogged spacecraft from the sea.

Grissom nearly drowned but was pulled to safety. He insisted until his death in the Apollo launch pad fire in 1967 that he'd done nothing wrong, although some questioned at the time — and still do — whether he bumped something or even panicked.

2 injured in electrical panel blast

Two electrical workers were injured after a panel they were working on exploded on May 1, fire officials said.

Dennis Hensley and Wayne Maas, both of Iowa City, remained in good condition at the UI Hospitals and Clinics Sunday night after the explosion.

At 6:50 p.m., firefighters were called to Millard Refrigerated Services, 2710 Highway 6 E. They found light smoke and Hensley and Maas alert and walking outside, said Ron Stutsman, chief of the Iowa City Fire Battalion.

Hensley and Maas had finished installing a new electrical panel at the warehouse when it exploded, injuring the two men, Stutsman said. The electrical workers sustained second-degree burns to their heads, hands and arms. Hensley is employed by Millard, and Maas is a local electrician.

It took firefighters approximately 20 minutes to extinguish the fire. Firefighters had to wait until representatives of MidAmerican Energy shut power off to the panel, Stutsman said.

Damage from the fire, which was contained to the panel, is estimated to be $50,000.

Memmer appears in court on burglary charges

Johnathon Lee Memmer made an initial appearance in Johnson County Court on April 30 for third-degree burglary charges that stem from an ongoing murder investigation.

The charges allege that Memmer broke into an apartment at 427 S. Van Buren St. on March 15 and stole several items, including two VCRs, stereo equipment and other items from the apartment in which two women were found beaten and burned to death four days later.

Johnson County District Court Judge Sylvia Lewis ordered Memmer held on $50,000 bond; she set a preliminary hearing for Friday at 2 p.m.

Memmer is already being held on $1 million bond for alleged probation violations stemming from a 1997 burglary charge.

Iowa City police say they want to talk to Memmer because he was seen with one of the victims on March 17. Memmer has not cooperated with police, who do not call him a suspect in the killings.

13 dead after tourist boat sinks

■ The boat, a WW II amphibious "duck," went down in less than 30 seconds, authorities say.

By Jamie Stengle
Associated Press

HOT SPRINGS, Ark. — An amphibious tourist boat that dragged 13 people to their deaths had been in the shop for repair of a drive-shaft seal two days before, a federal official said Sunday.

The amphibious vehicle of World War II vintage — called a "duck" because it travels both on land and water — sank rapidly shortly after entering Lake Hamilton on May 1 while passengers panicked and scrambled for life preservers.

The toll rose to 13 Sunday, after a woman died in a hospital, and divers returned to a lake and found her ex-husband's body. Their daughter also was among the victims.

National Transportation Safety Board member John A. Hamerschmidt also said investigators were focusing on a canopy over the boat that may have kept people from escaping.

Twenty-one people were on board, including the driver.

"The boat started taking on water and it started to tilt toward the back and went down in 15 seconds to 30 seconds," Garland County Sheriff Larry Selig said Sunday. He said it initially took on water over the stern.

"I understand one man tried to pass out life jackets, but there was no time," Selig said.

The passengers had to get out through a gap between the sides of the boat's hull and the canvas canopy, and their efforts to put on life jackets — which they were not required by law to be wearing — may have contributed to the problem, he said.

The victims included three children under the age of 5, Selig said, adding that the victims came from Tennessee, Louisiana and Arkansas.

Divers had been sent home on the evening of May 1, their work apparently complete, but then authorities learned that one passenger was still unaccounted for when 15-year-old James Patton of Russellville viewed the victims' bodies and said he didn't see his father, Jim Patton, 48, Selig said.

Seeing double en route to Hubble

■ As one astronaut prepares for a shuttle mission, his twin — and fellow astronaut — prepares for the launch party.

By Marcia Dunn
Associated Press

SPACE CENTER, Houston — Scott Kelly couldn't wait to share the news: He was going to space.

First, the astronaut called his wife. Then he walked down the hall and told his brother.

His twin brother.
His identical twin brother.
His identical twin astronaut brother.

Not only are Scott and Mark Kelly both space shuttle pilots, they both are also test pilots, combat pilots, Navy lieutenant commanders, engineers, married to blondes, with 4-year-old daughters on the same soccer team.

Not only are they the world's first astronaut twins, they're also the only astronaut siblings.

Don't expect any sibling rivalry, though. The 35-year-old Kellys haven't gone head-to-head since they were teen-agers competing for girls back home in West Orange, N.J.

In fact, Mark is handling the launch invitations and party plans for his brother. "It's wonderful to have a brother, no less a twin, and they're in the same job, who is so supportive," said their father, Richard Kelly, a retired police captain.

Indeed, the family said, there was nothing but brotherly pride when NASA called Scott in March and offered him the job of piloting the mission to repair the Hubble Space Telescope.

The telescope's deteriorating pointing system prompted NASA to move up its next regularly scheduled visit to October, eight months early. NASA already had assigned the mission's four space-walkers, but needed a flight crew fast.

Either brother could have been tapped for the single pilot slot; both were awaiting their first flight assignments. But Scott was picked because he had been trained in rendezvousing in space.

"They made the second-best choice. Ha-ha. Just kidding. Yeah, I mean it's great," said Mark, his brother grinning at his side. "Obviously, one of us was going to fly first."

The brothers are quick to point out that flying first has its disadvantages. They figure all the relatives and family friends will travel to Cape Canaveral, Fla., for Scott's Oct. 14 launch aboard Discovery. By the time Mark rockets away in the next year or two, many of the guests probably won't go back. Plus, Mark will be at the pre-launch party while Scott is stuck in quarantine.

Mission commander Curtis Brown Jr. joked that although he can tell the balding, mustachioed Kellys apart, "I had Scott promise that he wasn't going to skip out and have his brother substitute in unless I knew about it."

Letter writers send thoughts to shooting victims

■ Hundreds of letters have arrived in Denver expressing sympathy, fears and concerns.

By Michelle Koidin
Associated Press

LITTLETON, Colo. — They wrote to say how sorry they were about the massacre at Columbine High. They wrote of their tears. They wrote about their concerns for the wounded and the frightened.

One woman in Eagle Creek, Ore., wrote on behalf of her 5-year-old son.

"On the news they kept showing a young man crawling out of a second story broken window on the top of a police van," the woman, who signed her letter "The Hill family," wrote in bubbly cursive. "Could someone please let us know how he is? This picture in particular bothered our son."

If Patrick Ireland could write back right now, the woman would be relieved to know that he is getting better from his head wounds.

Eric Gay/Associated Press
Visitors look at the site where 15 crosses had stood on a hill above Columbine High School in Littleton, Colo. Sunday.

Still in the hospital, the 17-year-old's condition has been upgraded from serious to fair.

The South Metro Denver Chambers of Commerce has received dozens of letters. Hundreds more have arrived at a special post office box set up after the April 20 shootings, in which 12 students, a teacher and the two student gunmen died.

Some are Hallmark cards; some are written longhand on notebook paper. Some are typed or laser-printed; some are posters signed by entire senior classes in other parts of the country.

Few want a response from anyone. Some offer help, some offer understanding.

"I want you to feel better at this sad time," wrote Kalen, a second-grader at Moon Mountain School in Phoenix. "I lost my dad like you lost your son or daughter."

She drew a smiley face on her letter.

One of her classmates sent a drawing of heaven. Little stick-figure angels stand on clouds, and one cloud says "Cheer up!" And Carly, another classmate, wrote: "Dear Denver, I hope you feel better. I am so sorry!"

Moscoso supporters claim victory in Panama election

■ Panama elects a new leader to preside over the exchange of the canal.

By Michelle Ray Ortiz
Associated Press

PANAMA CITY, Panama — Mireya Moscoso, the widow of a popular leader, won elections Sunday to become the president who will lead Panama when the United States cedes control of the Panama Canal at the end of the year.

She beat Martin Torrijos, the son of military strongman Gen. Omar Torrijos, who had helped depose Moscoso's late husband from the presidency and went on to sign the 1977 Canal Treaties with the United States.

Torrijos conceded defeat with 59.4 percent of ballots counted, showing Moscoso with 44 percent of the vote to his 38 percent. Her lead grew as new results came in.

A third candidate, banker Alberto Vallarino, who bolted Moscoso's party after losing the nomination to her, held 17 percent of the vote.

"It is clear Mireya Moscoso has been chosen as president," Torrijos said. "I congratulate her and wish her success in running the country."

Moscoso's supporters drove through Panama City's streets, honking and waving her party's yellow, red and purple flags.

"It is a fabulous result. A woman who is dedicated to the people, in sync with the people, has triumphed. She has won in a decisive manner," Guillermo Endara, the former Panamanian president who is from Moscoso's Arnulfista Party, told The Associated Press.

Moscoso's late husband, Arnulfo Arias, was three times Panama's president before his final term was cut short in 1968. He died in exile in 1988.

Despite their contrasting histories, there was little ideological difference between Moscoso and Torrijos. Each had pledged to keep politics and corruption from undermining administration of the canal and to slow the privatization of state enterprises initiated by outgoing President Ernesto Perez Balladare.

Voters had rejected Perez Balladare's attempt last year to change constitutional limits barring him from seeking a second consecutive five-year term.

The 52-year-old Moscoso, a coffee company owner, will be the first woman to lead the nation of 2.8 million. She had predicted voters who resent Perez Balladare's free-market policies would reject his party colleague, Torrijos.

May the purse be with you, as toys hit shelves

■ Retailers have planned all-night shopping for the first "Star Wars" merchandise.

By Rachel Beck
Associated Press

NEW YORK — The Force is with "Star Wars" fans, and it's telling them to hit the toy stores early and spend, spend, spend.

The most-hyped line of movie-themed merchandise in history — for the still unreleased "Star Wars: Episode I — The Phantom Menace" — is finally going on sale on a studio-imposed schedule, and fans and retailers aren't wasting a minute.

In an unprecedented move, Toys R Us stores around the country decided to open their doors at 12:01 a.m. today for an all-night selling marathon of toys based on the movie. Some FAO Schwarz stores planned to open from midnight to 2 a.m.

Wal-Mart and Kmart called in extra staff for their 24-hour stores to handle the post-midnight crowds. Many stores planned to limit the number of items a customer could buy to prevent immediate sell-outs.

"I think this will be very big," said Ken Crawford, manager of the Target discount store in Menlo Park, N.J., where extra cashiers and salespeople were told to be on the job when doors open at 8 a.m. today.

Even the virtual stores were ready for middle-of-the-night surfers with an itch to buy. Internet merchants Amazon.com and eToys planned to open their online "Star Wars" stores just after midnight.

Fans had been waiting for months to get a glimpse of the vast array of goods — from action figures to wigs to body lotion to snack food — tied to the movie, which opens on May 19.

But LucasFilm Ltd. had signed strict licensing deals that prevented manufacturers from releasing virtually any information about their products ahead of time.

As a result, people had been speculating for months, especially on the Internet, about what the toys and other merchandise would be.

Jeff Van Pelt had already figured out that he'd spend about $150 at Toys R Us today morning.

FILM REVIEW
 By Gene Stupnitsky

Money is usually an aphrodisiac. You see it everywhere, not just in movies, but in so many television commercials. When it appears, the characters tend to sigh and smile and expand. And audiences respond in a similar fashion—they know what's up. Despite this, sometimes the analogy doesn't work: The film "Entrapment" is about the benjamins, but it lacks an aphrodisiac.

Catherine Zeta-Jones (more about her later) plays Virginia "Gin" Baker, who is introduced as an insurance-company investigator tracking the exploits of gentleman thief Robert "Mac" MacDougal (Sean Connery). A recent heist—in which a Rembrandt is taken from a New York skyscraper and replaced with a velvet Elvis—bears all the money marks of Mac. So Gin convinces her boss that she can go undercover (under covers?) and become Mac's partner on a daring robbery in England.

The script twists and turns through the questionable motives and loyalties of Gin, Mac and the shadowy Thibideaux (Ving Rhames), who provides Mac with hardware and surveillance. There is a nice set piece at Mac's Scottish castle. Gin must navigate like a freaky contortionist ballerina through a complex laser-beam alarm system. As you might have seen in the ads, this scene showcases Zeta-Jones' derriere, which gets more screen time than Rhames.

What's strange about the film is

Catherine Zeta-Jones and Sean Connery in the film "Entrapment."

that there is nearly a complete absence of conflict. You know that adage, drama equals conflict. I really didn't care what happened to whom and why. There is also a complete lack of chemistry between the Welsh Zeta-Jones and the obviously Scottish Connery. It turns out to be more like a father-daughter relationship (especially late in the film when he bends Zeta-Jones over and spansk her, while she is crying "Stop, Daddy, Stop!") It's really silly—he's trying to be all suave-like and he's got dentures. He is 68, she is 29. When he was playing Bond, she was teething. Which brings to mind the notion that Zeta-Jones would make a deliciously delectable Bond girl. Part of me feels that I have lost two hours of my life, forever. The other part of me feels that my psyche is permanently damaged, and I am somehow stupider for seeing this film.

5 new productions to take the stage this week

The showing of original works from the UI playwriting program will begin today.

By Lisa Hemann
 The Daily Iowan

The Iowa Playwrights Festival, the UI Department of Theater Arts' presentation of new work, is scheduled to begin today and run through Saturday in the UI Theatre Building.

The festival is scheduled to present five main evening productions, in addition to readings of new scripts and panel discussions by guest artists.

The focus on new work is one of the most important aspects of the festival, said Allison Moore, a UI graduate student in theater.

"The only way that we're going to have theater that reflects our society is to have new work," she said.

The UI playwriting program is in the top echelon of playwriting programs in the country, and the Iowa Playwrights Festival is a unique college theater event, Moore said.

"It's unique because of the level and number of production of new works. To have five productions going on at the same time is pretty incredible," Moore said.

Students in the Playwrights' Workshop have the opportunity to present their work to be chosen for the festival in December. The pieces are chosen by a panel of two faculty members and an expert on plays. The students whose plays have been chosen then have five weeks to work on the production.

The festival is invaluable to students because it gives them the chance to work through every aspect of the production, said Margaret Baldwin, a UI graduate student in Theater Arts.

The scripts usually never stay the same after work on the production begins, she said.

"What's wonderful is you get to see the transition from the theoretical to the practical," Baldwin said. "The productions are) not like a novel; you can't just read the script and have the event happen."

The five productions scheduled to be presented include "The Saint of Morella" by Moore, "Weeping Woman" by Amy Wheeler, "Doppel Gang-Bang" by David Adjmi, "each loop like you mean it" by Kirsten Greenidge, and "Sunday Morning 2 Men Cooking" by Baldwin.

The guests scheduled to attend are Paul Walsh, dramaturg and director of humanities at the American Conservatory Theater in San Francisco; UI alumna and playwright Darrah Cloud; playwright Naomi Iizuka; and playwright/director Chay Yew.

Of all the college programs, the UI has the largest emphasis on theater productions and the festival is the

EDITORIAL

Time wasted scribbling on slips could be better spent

The dean's Student Advisory Committee is attempting to revise student registration by eliminating the need for an adviser to sign add/drop slips in the first two weeks of class. Students, eager to avoid the traditional trudge across campus at the beginning of every semester, have expressed interest in the proposed changes. But some UI faculty are hesitant to give the change the green light.

These faculty members insist that students may find themselves far behind their peers and unable to graduate. "I use signatures as an opportunity to touch base and make sure students understand the implications of graduation and financial aid," said Cary Covington, a UI associate professor in political science and an undergraduate adviser. "For most students, it's not that necessary, but I suspect you will find students who get themselves into difficult situations that a little bit of advising would have avoided."

However, the advising centers in Quadrangle Residence Hall and each individual department serve thousands of students. Many advisers have a hard time remembering an advisee's name and his or her academic status without accessing computer databases or looking at students' registration forms. It is hard to believe a student can get the crucial advice needed from a virtual stranger.

And why are advisers often strangers to students? Because registration is not a time during which students "touch base" with an adviser but usually the only time they see their advisers. The truth is, many advising offices are simply seen as the place to pick up your registration number.

If the need for adviser signatures is eliminated at the beginning of the semester, maybe advisers will be able to have more appointment time in which they actually get to know students at the start of the semester. Students would not have to wait in lines in advising centers or in Calvin Hall — they could instead be adjusting to a new school year and new classes.

As Covington said, for most students getting a signature is "not that necessary." But the UI should also realize that those students who are having trouble may actually benefit in some ways from the new system. After all, if advisers do not have to sign add/drop slips for the hundreds of students who are on the right track, they can spend more time advising those who do need help.

Soraya Asadi is a DI editorial writer.

Nothing like some good ol' Good vs. Evil

IT'S coming! Put your ear to the page and listen ...

BOM-bom! Bom bom bom BOM-bom! Bom bom bom BOM-bom! Bom bom bom ...

That's right — it's the theme from "Star Wars," the movie series that gave the world a whole new lexicon, including such phrases as "the Force," "Death Star," "light saber," "lexicon" and "licensed merchandise."

"Star Wars" has become an important and cherished part of our shared cultural heritage, like Starbucks and Pez. And soon another chapter will be added to the "Star Wars" legend with the release of the long-awaited new installment in the series, titled "Episode I: The Empire Gets a Building Permit." On the day this movie is released, millions of Americans will flock to movie theaters to share in the excitement and wonder of being told that the theater is sold out through October because all the tickets have been snapped up by crazed, drooling "Star Wars" geeks wearing officially licensed Han Solo underwear.

What explains the powerful appeal of the "Star Wars" series? Speaking as one who saw "Return of the Jedi" on video at least 14,000 times when my son was 4 and refused to watch anything else but also refused to be left alone with Jabba the Hutt, I would say that the key element is the theme of Good vs. Evil. Good is of course represented by Luke Skywalker (Mark Hamill), who has the Force, a mystical, universal power that causes him to be attracted to his sister. Fortunately, Luke gets over that and meets a wise Jedi master named Yoda (Raymond Burr) who trains Luke to harness the awesome power of the Force so that he can speak lines of really bad dialogue without laughing.

Along the way Luke meets many memorable characters, including Han Solo (Indiana Jones), Chewbacca (Sonny Bono), Princess Leia (Princess) and two quirky, lovable robots, C-3PO (Tony Danza) and R2-D2 (F7-Z9). After many hair-raising adventures, Luke finally goes to the Death Star (Marlon Brando) where he confronts Evil in the form of his father, Darth Vader (voice by Perry Como) and, in a heartwarming scene of reconciliation, beats him up. The dramatic climax comes when Luke removes the helmet from the dying Vader and gazes, at last, into the eyes of the person beneath the harsh, forbidding mask (Martha Stewart). In the end, Good triumphs over Evil, and Luke and his friends celebrate on the planet of the Ewoks, a race of fun-loving, short, hairy creatures (Robin Williams).

As humans, we relate to this timeless story because we all go through the same kind of moral struggle in our own lives. We have a Force within us, and sometimes we use it for Good, as when we decide to have a salad instead of a cheeseburger and fries; but sometimes we turn toward the Dark Side, as when we load up our salad with a fatty ranch dressing, or we take all the remaining artichoke segments from the salad bar, leaving none for the next person in line (Nick Nolte).

These timeless themes explain why we are all so excited that director George Lucas (Inc.) has decided, despite the very real risk that he will make billions of dollars, to come out with a new episode of "Star Wars." Until recently, specific information about the new episode was "Top Secret" — nobody knew the plot except Lucas, the actors and of course the government of China. Fortunately, however, I have obtained, from high-level sources who asked not to be identified (Al and Tipper Gore), specific details on the plot. If you don't want me to spoil the shocking surprise ending (Liam Neeson gets killed), stop reading right now, because here is ...

THE PLOT: There is big trouble brewing in the universe (California). The evil and greedy Trade Federation (Microsoft) is planning to invade the tiny planet of Naboo (Naboo), which is inhabited by a race of strange frog-like beings (the House Judiciary Committee). Two Jedi knights, Obi-Wan and Qui-Gon Jinn (Siegfried and Roy) go to Naboo, where, after overcoming numerous special effects, they are joined by the Naboo queen (Dennis Rodman). They escape in a space ship, but when the "D"-cell batteries in their light sabers run low, they are forced to land on the evil, Hutt-controlled planet of Tatooine (New Jersey). There they meet 9-year-old Anakin Skywalker (Danny DeVito), and they realize that he has the Force when he is able, without physically touching it, to raise and lower a garage door. After a meeting with the ancient Jedi Council (the Rolling Stones), Anakin and the others return to Naboo for a climactic finale in which Siegfried (Roy) battles with the evil warlord Darth Maul (Marv Albert) to determine who will ultimately control the tie-in rights for Star Wars collectibles (Pepsi). As the movie ends, we see the young Anakin preparing to face an uncertain future consisting of at least 14 more sequels, and we hear the stirring sound of ...

BOM-bom! Bom bom bom BOM-bom! Bom bom bom BOM-bom! Bom bom bom BOM-bom! Bom bom bom ... and we feel the Force welling up from deep inside ourselves. And so we burp.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Clarifying what the Alumni Association is all about

To the Editor:

I'm responding to The Daily Iowan's April 14 article titled "End of college is nigh; so are alumni junk mail and sales pitches," by Jill Barnard.

Barnard didn't provide an accurate story concerning the UI Alumni Association's merchandise program. We do NOT direct our merchandise mail efforts to students. Our brochures address families of graduates.

Each spring we market two types of products to parents of graduates: the chair by Standard and graduation watches by Seiko. We request mailings be sent to parents and NOT graduates.

I notice Barnard didn't use quotation marks with my alleged statements, since she didn't report what I actually said. Regarding comments about affordability of these products, I did admit they were out of the typical student's price range (hence the reason we don't market to students). At no time during the interview did we discuss pride. When asked why we don't market lower-priced items, my response was that we don't want to compete with university merchandisers. I did NOT say that we sell higher-priced items for higher commissions.

We're a nonprofit organization and we're in the business of raising funds to support alumni programs; we are not merchandisers.

In her second paragraph, Barnard writes, "the Alumni Association is busy filling UI seniors' mailboxes with merchandise, brochures and order forms." False.

Again, we direct merchandise mail efforts to parents, and we certainly aren't filling mailboxes with merchandise. That wouldn't be good business, now would it?

Barnard writes that we promote a watch with the UI logo. False again. The watch features the UI seal.

We're pleased with the opportunity to offer high quality products to our alumni. If there wasn't a demand for these products, our merchandise program would not exist.

assistant director of marketing

Having fun at the others' expense is no laughing matter

LIKE almost everybody else in America, I've been following the news of the Littleton, Colo., school massacre since it happened almost two weeks ago.

When contemplating how to handle this in writing, a multitude of emotional responses and possible approaches crossed my mind. My anger at the senselessness of the whole thing suggested a scathing read of the creeping evil of suburbia and how lack of culture combined with a steady diet of mall-crawling and bad TV can rot your soul. My sympathy and grief on behalf of Littleton and all the families of the dead and wounded suggested a eulogy of sorts, asking for the millionth time, "Why?... but then I realized — I think I know why.

It's a confluence of factors, of course. The killing at Columbine High had a lot less to do with Marilyn Manson and search-and-destroy video games than all the newly concerned parents out there seem to think. The why's are pretty simple when you get right down to it.

Dylan Klebold and Eric Harris were dorks.

They wore goofy black trench coats, messed around with computers and were your basic high school social no-accounts. Some of the popular, A-list kids at Columbine seemed to want to make sure that Klebold and Harris and their little posse of misfits knew their place and understood their dork-hood in Technicolor. To hear the remaining "Trenchcoat Mafia" tell it, the "popular" kids made them objects of ridicule and cruel remarks on an almost daily basis.

Now, I myself know all about making cruel remarks. I'm a virtuoso, as a matter of fact. Ask around. I studied under some of the cruelest, rudest little bastards you'd ever care to meet — I went to high school and junior high with some of them. They were of the same species as the kids who made walking punchlines out of the trench coat geeks at Columbine, I suspect, and they did the same thing to me.

And because of that — and were it not for the ridiculous neo-Nazi racist garbage angle to the whole thing — I might actually admit to understanding where Klebold and Harris were coming from. The smoldering, frustrated rage that you feel when some jackass seems to think he can mess with you just because you're weird and he plays football is not foreign to me.

I get it — because I was there. Back in junior high and high school, I got called everything from a Satanist to a dyke because I wore a lot of black and opted not to perm my hair. I thought it was absolutely hellish at the time, but now I look back and just find it absurd.

What's equally absurd is that there are people around who can't find anything better to do with themselves than make another person miserable. Bullies, you know who you are. You're the ones who take great pleasure in picking on people who have the nerve to stand out in a crowd and disturb your delicate sensibilities by being queer, Goth or anything else not obviously born and bred in corn country. But why should everybody be like you? Why shouldn't you be more like them? What's so fabulous about you?

So in case the message in the tragedy at Columbine hasn't quite sunk in yet — these people whom you big, strapping fellows so enjoy terrorizing are in fact people. They're not play-things put on this earth for your amusement. It doesn't matter that you're captain of the football team, or prom queen, or whatever — you don't have the right to be mean-spirited just because you feel like it. You're not allowed to hurt someone for no reason. Not because they might snap and try to eradicate their whole school, mind you, but because it's simply not the proper way to behave.

Our society is rife with violence and mass stupidity — don't add your own little piece to the slagheap just because you think it's funny. It's not funny. Klebold and Harris did not find it funny, and now everyone's crying.

What those kids did in Littleton was heinous and evil, no question. They were someplace I never hope to go — but I've seen it from a distance, and I have a pretty good idea how they got there. Even up here on my soapbox, comfortable in the luxury of being able to talk about the outcasts and misfits of the world as "them" and not "us," I'm not immune to the pang of sympathy I feel for two kids driven to such a cataclysmic act.

If anything remotely positive can be gained from a bloody massacre, it's this — above all, be good to each other and be gentle. Refuse the offer of harm and respect yourself enough to realize that even your most offhand remark has an impact on someone. There's a difference between a private smirk at something silly and the public humiliation of another person for no good reason. Hopefully, when the tears run out in Littleton, the quiet that comes afterward will allow for folks to contemplate that distinction — and recognize how fragile people are sometimes.

House Majority Whip Tom Delay, R-Texas, told "Fox News Sunday" that Clinton should meet Milosevic to negotiate an end to "this failed policy of bombing for diplomacy."

In the Balkans, meanwhile, the alliance pounded Yugoslavia with new attacks, and a spokesman said there would be "no reward" for Milosevic for freeing three U.S. soldiers.

"What he's got to understand is that the decision that's going to impress us most is the decision to order troops out of Kosovo" and "clearly and unambiguously" accept an armed international force," said Jamie Shea, NATO's chief spokesman.

Heavy anti-aircraft fire could be heard in the capital Belgrade on Sunday evening. The city was plunged into darkness shortly afterward when NATO jets struck a major power line, Yugoslav officials said.

The Serbian state power company said warplanes hit a major line supplying electricity from Obrenovac power plant, 18 miles southwest of Belgrade, local radio in Belgrade reported.

A number of Serbian towns started losing power in waves starting around 10 p.m. Television and radio went off the air, traffic lights went out, and hospitals quickly switched on emergency generators.

full said he contacted the police on April 29 because he was worried that those in the house would throw a party. He said his main concern was to watch the house and its occupants for fear they would damage the property.

Manfull did not learn of the party until Sunday afternoon.

"I'm not surprised as much as I'm disappointed," he said. "I have better things to do (today) than deal with this."

Because of Sunday's party, a consultant for the national Delta Tau Delta chapter will visit the house this morning to check for any damage to the house. If any is found, those living in the house will be evicted, Manfull said.

"We had hoped these guys would learn a lesson on life out of all this," he said. "Obviously, they haven't."

Soper, one of three charged this weekend, confirmed reports of between 450-500 people in the house. He also confirmed that by the end of the night, partygoers had drunk 16-17 kegs of beer.

Most of the people at the party were in the basement of the house in order to reduce noise levels, Soper said.

"It was very under control and organized," he said.

UI sophomore Christina Miller, who lives in Currier Residence Hall, said she did not hear any noise coming from the building on May 1. Because her window faces the house, she said, she often hears noises coming from it.

"Usually, I hear everything they do over there," she said. "I didn't notice them (Saturday) night like I did when they had the party where they trashed their house."

Of the three charged with disorderly house, two were former Delta Tau Delta members. The third, Murphey, does not live in the house and is not a former chapter member, Soper said.

Because of the increased attention directed at the former fraternity, Soper said, it had two people checking identification at the party to ensure that minors would not be served alcohol.

If the international chapter consultant finds any damage in the house, occupants will be notified of their eviction sometime this week, Manfull said.

"Actions speak louder than words," he said. "I don't think these guys realize they are jeopardizing their careers by acting like idiots. We will seek restitution."

Jackson brings soldiers home

JACKSON

This war is so costly already, so deadly already, and can get worse."

The journey to Yugoslavia was Jackson's fourth trip to a foreign land to retrieve captured Americans. In 1984, Jackson went to Syria and won the release of Navy Lt. Robert O. Goodman Jr., whose jet bomber was shot down during a raid over Syrian anti-aircraft positions in Lebanon.

Several months later, Jackson was in Cuba, talking Fidel Castro into releasing 48 American and Cuban political prisoners. In 1990, he helped win the release from Iraq of more than 700 foreign women and children detained as human shields against an American military attack after Iraq's invasion of Kuwait.

Jackson said experience has taught him that freeing prisoners can open doors. He recalled that then-President Reagan called Syrian President Assad after Goodman's release.

"It led to a greater ability to deal with Lebanon and Syria and the PLO at the time," Jackson said. "So I certainly hope there is a courteous response to (Milosevic's) setting our prisoners free. He had the power not to do it. But he did it."

In his session with Milosevic, Jackson laid out this option: Milosevic could stubbornly keep the prisoners and watch NATO bombs make rubble of his nation. Or he could set them free and "build a diplomatic bridge" so that Yugoslavia would not become a permanent pariah.

At the meeting's end, they stood together. Jackson took Milosevic's hand and, along with other religious leaders in his delegation, prayed with him. He told CNN he felt there was nothing wrong with praying with Milosevic even though some critics viewed it as inappropriate.

"I believe in prayer, and I will not compromise in my will to pray," Jackson said. "You should pray for sinners and victims, not just pray for and with friends."

After signing documents, Jackson told the soldiers they were free, and headed for the Yugoslav-Croat border. They walked across the border together, hand in hand, chanting the now-famous phrase that Jackson's mentor, Martin Luther King Jr., used to close his 1963 March on Washington: "Free at last, free at last — Thank God Almighty, we are free at last."

Late on May 1, Jackson called Clinton to report that he and the soldiers were leaving Belgrade. Clinton thanked him, said national security spokesman David Leavy.

Leavy said Clinton would likely talk with Jackson this week but not Milosevic. He declined to comment on the letter Jackson was carrying, saying Clinton had not seen it.

Jackson would not comment on it either. "It's his letter," he said.

Sunday, Jackson lingered in Germany to await the arrival of the soldiers' families. But, he said, he would not be on hand when Clinton visits the air base at midweek; he was scheduled to return to Washington today.

on Omega Psi Phi's team were led onto the stage by a rope, conjuring up an image of slavery.

No matter what the theme, all the performances involved precise choreography of stomping, clapping and sometimes cane tapping.

And amid the cheers and chants, participants said the evening was about cooperation, not competition.

"I think it's great that different black organizations are coming out to celebrate in unity," said Dirul-Islam Muhammad, a UI freshman and a member of Omega Psi Phi.

Mary Peterson, associate director of the UI Office of Student Life and emcee for the event, said the show always gives people a feeling of friendship, camaraderie and togetherness.

"Fraternities and sororities build deeper and closer bonds with each other... as they prepare to step in front of their friends, peers and guests," she said.

At around 10 p.m., with two performances remaining, a fire alarm went off. Everyone exited the building, and police officials arrived at the scene. Investigators said someone had pulled the alarm and that by state code it was considered a false report. No one was caught.

Kish Harris, a UI senior and member of Delta Sigma Theta, said the alarm incident was frustrating.

"It kind of takes it away from the show when someone tries to do something," she said. "But it's nothing to dwell on."

The majority of the audience returned to see the final performances and hear the results of the competition.

After receiving an honorary 1999 Step Show plaque with her sorority sisters, Harris said the event was only the beginning of her evening plans.

"We have a lot of people in town, so we'll probably be out partying all night," she said.

The show was everything one could hope for, said UI grad student Milton Harris.

"They were really good," he said. "This was my first time ever attending one, so it was really exciting."

Iowa's Strada takes home another gymnastics honor

After being named Big Ten Gymnast of the Year this season, Todd Strada added another prestigious award to his resume Friday night.

Strada was awarded the N.R. Holzhaeupfl Most Valuable Team Member at the annual men's gymnastics team banquet at the Iowa City Holiday Inn.

The junior was an All-American this season after finishing third overall at the NCAA Championships. Strada also earned Big Ten Athlete of the Week honors twice.

Freshman Don Jackson joined Strada on the All-Big Ten Team after winning the pommel horse at the Big Ten Championships this season. The Littleton, Colo., native was named the Best Competitor of 1999 by his teammates.

"I felt really good about this year's competition," Jackson said. "I had some problems this year, but for the most part, I was able to do my job and stay on the horse."

Senior Adrian Johnston was a nominee for the Nissen-Emory Award, which is equivalent to college football's Heisman Trophy. The award was given out at the NCAA Championships, and Todd Bishop of Oklahoma went home with the award. Senior Lou Datillo earned two honors, receiving the Iowa Stick Award and the Dr. C.E. Obermann Outstanding Senior Award.

Junior Doug Jacobson was the most improved competitor after finishing third on the pommel horse at the Big Ten Championships, while fellow junior Anthony Petrocelli was named the emotional leader of the squad. Sophomore Kevin Agnew grabbed the Coach's Appreciation award, while freshman Steve Davis was mentioned for his academic excellence.

Elway says goodbye to Broncos, football

■ Broncos quarterback John Elway broke down and sobbed Sunday while announcing his retirement from football.

By Aaron Lopez
 Associated Press

ENGLEWOOD, Colo. — He sounded so very upbeat at the start, cracking jokes and telling stories about himself and his Denver Broncos.

Then John Elway turned to his retirement — and that's when it hit him.

His face crumpled and the sobs came.

"I can't do it physically anymore, and that's really hard for me to say," the 38-year-old Elway said Sunday, pausing frequently to regain his composure as he addressed the crowd at a suburban Denver hotel.

"It's hard to walk away. I can't explain in words how much everyone has meant to me."

After dazzling fans and confounding defenses for 16 years, the quarterback made official what everyone had known for more than a week. He delayed the announcement because of the school killings in Littleton, and his news conference began with a moment of silence for the victims.

Elway, master of the last-minute comeback, becomes the third superstar to leave his sport since January, joining Michael Jordan and Wayne Gretzky.

"The over-under in the locker room yesterday was how many times I'd cry," Elway said through his husky, choked voice. "I took the under."

Then, after crying some more, he added, "I lost the bet."

Elway, wearing a blue-and-silver ribbon on his suit jacket in memory of the shooting victims, was joined on the stage by Broncos coach Mike Shanahan and team owner Pat Bowlen.

Elway's wife, Janet, and their four children sat in the front row. The children smiled at their dad's jokes and remained poised when he broke down. Janet, however, cried as her husband spoke.

"For 16 years, the family life has focused around me and football, and

Men smother competition in night meet

By Matt Bowen
 The Daily Iowan

Coach Larry Wiecezorek had reason to smile Saturday night after the Iowa Twilight Invitational at Cretzmeyer Track.

In what he described as a track and field "Field of Dreams," the Hawkeyes routed their competition, beating second-place Minnesota by 91.5 points.

Iowa finished the meet with 193.5 points, keyed by six first-place finishes.

"This was the most exciting track meet ever at the University of Iowa," Wiecezorek said.

An energetic crowd filled the stands and lined the fences around the track as former and current Hawkeye track stars showed the hometown crowd what it came to see.

In the 4x100 relay, the Iowa squad of Tony Branch, Tim Dodge, Kurt Felix and Bashir Yamini held off the Iowa Elite team of former Iowa Olympic hopefuls.

Yamini anchored the relay and edged out a closing Antuan Maybank, a gold medal winner in 1996, to take the title with a time of 39.96.

"It was great to show off for the home crowd," Dodge said. "The other guys (the Elite team) had been practicing with us all week and talking trash about it."

Beck achieves goal, breaks javelin mark

In front of a packed house at Francis X. Cretzmeyer Track, sophomore Mandy Beck and junior Colleen Prendergast took center stage Saturday night on the women's side of the inaugural Iowa Twilight Invitational.

With fans peering in from outside the fence because there was no room in the stands, Beck and Prendergast both set school records as the Iowa women finished third out of five teams. Western Michigan beat the Hawkeyes for the second time this season and eventually won the Twilight Invitational.

Beck broke Terri Soldan's 1983 javelin mark of 152-feet 6 1/2-inches, which is tied with three other marks as the second-longest standing record for women's outdoor track. Beck threw 153-4.

"That was a goal," Beck said. "It just hasn't been happening all year. I threw five personal bests in the javelin, so I was really pleased with how I threw."

Prendergast won the 100-meter hurdles and broke the school record in the process, finishing ahead of fellow Hawkeye and the previous record-holder, senior Paula Ruen, in 13.60 seconds. Coincidentally, Ruen also broke her own record of 13.74 seconds, finishing second in 13.71 seconds, but couldn't catch Prendergast at the finish line.

Wardlaw's team exceeds expectations at conference meet

■ The No. 6 Hawkeyes defeated No. 3 Minnesota in the quarterfinals, then lost by a point to second-seeded Wisconsin in the semifinals.

By Lisa Colonna
 The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's tennis team missed the finals of the Big Ten Championships by one point over the weekend, falling just short of its title goals.

The No. 6-seeded Hawkeyes lost to No. 2-seeded Wisconsin, 4-3, in Saturday's semifinals.

"We were a bit disappointed because we were wanting to be in the finals," junior Natalya Dawaf said. "We did not get as far as we wanted, but we proved ourselves."

Iowa had defeated the Badgers earlier this season, 4-3, but Wisconsin got its revenge.

"We went in expecting to beat them because we beat them earlier in the season," senior Erin Wolverson said.

"But they played better tennis against us in the Big Ten Championships than during the season. We won the doubles point and that gave us confidence going into singles and it came down to Shera's (Wiegler) match (at No. 2)."

Wiegler, a junior, fell to Wisconsin's Andrea Nathan in three sets, 6-7 (2), 6-4, 2-6.

"In singles we had two quick wins at Nos. 3 and 4, but in the other matches we lost the first sets, so it was an uphill battle," coach Paul Wardlaw said.

Although the Hawkeyes did not advance to the finals, they had their strongest showing of the decade, Wardlaw said.

Iowa finished fourth in the conference in 1989-90 and will rival that position when the final standings are released later this week.

The Hawkeyes advanced to the semifinals after defeating the No. 3 seed, Minnesota. The Golden Gophers came away with a 4-3 victory earlier in the season, but Iowa turned the tables the second time around, winning 5-2 in the quarterfinals.

"We went in with the attitude that we had nothing to lose," Wolverson said. "We were going to make them beat us. We just wanted to play well. We did that and got the result."

Iowa lost the doubles point, but swept the Nos. 2-6 singles matches to get the win.

Thursday, Iowa defeated Penn State (No. 11), 5-0, in the first round of competition.

Now the team is hoping for a bid to the NCAA tournament (the 64 qualifiers will be announced Wednesday) and is reflecting back on its season.

"We've accomplished so much," Dawaf said. "Our performance at the Big Ten Championships has given us hope. We can do whatever we put our minds to. It's a great feeling that we could accomplish so much."

Mullen places third at Big Tens

■ The junior was one bright spot for the Hawkeyes, who finished ninth at the Big Ten Conference meet in West Lafayette, Ind.

By Eric Petersen
 The Daily Iowan

Despite an outstanding performance by junior M.C. Mullen, the Iowa women's golf team finished ninth at the Big Ten Championships to conclude its season.

Mullen had her best-ever finish at the conference tournament, placing third. She finished tied for 11th at last year's event.

The 72-hole tournament was held in West Lafayette, Ind., at Purdue University's Kampen Course, a newly opened course the Hawkeyes had played only once prior to the Championships.

Iowa began Sunday in seventh place, but shot a final-round 321 to drop to ninth in the 11-team field. Iowa opened with rounds of 323 and 320 on Friday, and finished with a team score of 1,293.

"I'm disappointed with how the team finished," coach Diane Thomason said. "We just couldn't get consistent scoring. We only had two players scoring well for us (Mullen and sophomore Katherine Mowat) and that was really tough. We just don't have much depth."

Mullen moved up from fourth to third place with a final-round 76, ending with a score of 307.

"It was encouraging," Mullen said. "My season, except for Myrtle Beach (where she won her first collegiate title earlier this season), was pretty 'blah.' This is totally the highlight of my season."

Mullen finished six strokes behind champion Erin Carney of Indiana, who became the fifth athlete in Big Ten history to win back-to-back titles. Carney was co-champion last season with former Hawkeye Stacey Bergman. Second-place finisher Amber Amstutz of Ohio State finished three strokes ahead of Mullen.

The Buckeyes won the tournament by 12 strokes over Indiana with a score of 1,239. The victory was OSU's seventh team title, tying the school with Indiana for the most conference titles in tournament history.

Mowat, who briefly led the tournament after a first-round 73, ended in a tie for 14th with a score of 317.

Iowa's other competitors were junior Kelli Carney (333, T-42nd), sophomore Meghan Spero (336, T-45th) and freshmen Melissa Harjes (368, 63rd) and Sasha Chacon (376, 64th).

When asked what he'd miss most about Sunday afternoons, Elway said, "I'll never be able to fill the void of playing a football game."

Sharpe "to be quiet." "I know you're open, I know you're open, I know you're open," Elway said about Sharpe, drawing loud laughs. Sharpe attended the news conference along with several other current and former teammates, including running back Terrell Davis and Elway's heir apparent, Bubby Brister. "I guess it's like Haley's Comet," Sharpe said. "It only comes along every 77 years, and I got an opportunity to play with him. That's what it's like." For years, the only thing missing from Elway's resume was a Super Bowl title, and he took care of that by winning two straight. In his final game, he was voted Super Bowl MVP in a 34-19 win over Atlanta last January. He becomes the only quarterback to retire after winning a Super Bowl. "I truly believe John was the very best to ever play," Bowlen said. Elway was exceptionally durable throughout his career, missing only 15 starts because of illness or injury, but his retirement was hastened by the sheer wear and tear of professional football. He was hit more than any quarterback in NFL history, absorbing 559 sacks in 256 games. He compiled the best passer rating of his career in 1998, but his season was interrupted by hamstring, back and rib injuries that caused him to miss all or part of six games. His deteriorating, arthritic left knee probably will have to be replaced.

Mullen overcomes rough first round to place third

WOMEN'S GOLF Continued from Page 1B course, which was designed by the USGA, was too much for the Hawkeyes to overcome. She said less than one-third of the 66 competitors shot under 80 during the tournament's first round. "The course was very tough all weekend," Mullen said. "It's tough to score low, you have to play very well."

Mullen, a Peosta, Iowa, native, kept her cool after an opening-round 81, shooting a second-round 74 and consecutive rounds of 76 to finish in the top five. "She putted really well," Thomason said of Mullen, who collected four birdies on Sunday's back nine. "She kept her spirits up and made some good shots when she needed to." DI sports writer Eric Peterson can be reached at ejpeters@blue.weeg.uiowa.edu

"I haven't been on the NCAA list since freshman year." That year, Prendergast qualified for the NCAA Championships in the 60-meter hurdles. Later at the Twilight Invite, along with junior Lakeya Boatright, senior Stacey Bynoe and Ruen, Prendergast helped the Hawkeyes win the 4x100 relay in a season-best time of 45.79 seconds. "It was probably one of the best races we've run all year," Ruen said. Boatright, senior Becky Kaza, freshman Amy Murphy, sophomore Gina Shannon and senior Jill Scheibel also won titles for the Hawkeyes. Boatright won the 100-meter dash in a personal-best time, Kaza won the high jump, Murphy won the 10,000-meter run, Shannon tied her season-best in winning the pole vault and Scheibel won the 1,500-meter run. "It's so good to hear familiar voices cheering," Scheibel said. "My dad and my roommates are here. I wanted to qualify (for the NCAA) so bad, so I had to pick it up." Iowa coach Jim Grant said his team came through in a positive way at the first home meet of the outdoor season. "I thought they lifted their performance levels a notch tonight, so I was happy," Grant said. The Hawkeyes won eight events overall and scored 146 points, but the event really centered on the atmosphere of the first night meet in school history. "I haven't had this much fun in a while," Prendergast said. "It feels like a Drake (referring to the Drake Relays), just a little smaller.

I think we need to do the Twilight more often. I've never seen this kind of crowd for a track meet." Musco Lighting, the company that donated the lighting system that made the meet possible, was given two rounds of applause. "This is what track and field needs," Minnesota coach Gary Wilson said. "The Iowa people have done a wonderful job of getting people here. I don't think I've seen a nicer meet in 38 years of coaching." In the 4x400 relay, Iowa's team of Branch, Dwight, Dodge and Yamini held off the Elite team again to take the title with a time of 3:06.18, sending the home crowd into a frenzy. Both the 4x100 and 4x400 relay teams provisionally qualified for the NAAs. "That was fantastic," Wiczorek said. "Two of them just came back from spring football (Yamini and Dodge) and one of them just came off the injured list (Dwight), so to do that was remarkable." Iowa's Arno van der Westhuizen won the hammer throw (198-8), breaking the track record, and placed second in the shot put (57-10 1/4). Jeremy Allen took second in both the discus (179-2) and the hammer throw (179-2). "I'm happy about it," van der Westhuizen said of the stadium record, "but I know I can throw farther."

Stetson Steele and Chad Schwitters crossed the finish line together amid celebration with respective times of 14:30.21 and 14:30.26 in the 5,000-meter run. Dan Ralph won the javelin throw with a distance of 220-6 to provisionally qualify for the NAAs and Yamini took the long jump at 24-3 1/2 feet. Rucker leaves Iowa, scores four in pro debut

Iowa's Guy Rucker has left school and signed a contract with a USBL team.

By James Kramer
The Daily Iowan

Center Guy Rucker has left the Iowa basketball team, leaving coach Steve Alford with another available scholarship, but creating a void for the Hawkeyes around the basket.

Rucker

Rucker, a 6-foot-10, 270-pound Inkster, Mich., native, signed with the New Hampshire Thunder Loons of the United States Basketball League. At Iowa, he had been facing uncertainty concerning his academic eligibility, and once a player signs a pro contract, he no longer has collegiate eligibility.

Rucker's first game with New Hampshire was Friday against Long Island, and he scored four points and grabbed four rebounds in 12 minutes. Most of the USBL's players are not well-known, with the exception of boxer Roy Jones Jr. and former Phoenix Suns forward Richard Dumas.

Rucker's former roommate, Iowa football player Bashir Yamini, said he knew little about the circumstances surrounding Rucker's departure. Yamini said Rucker, who would have been a senior, left Iowa City "a couple weeks ago."

"Obviously he made the decision to leave," Yamini said. "He had to come to some conclusion."

When Rucker entered Iowa, he was considered a partial academic qualifier, meaning he did not have the necessary test scores in high school. He was allowed to compete after sitting out a year, and could have played next season if he earned his degree by this summer.

A recent decision by a federal judge placed the partial qualifier rule in limbo, which clouded Rucker's future even further. Yamini said Rucker was close to getting his degree, but the uncertainty prompted him to jump ship.

"They were waiting to hear from the NCAA, and by the time they would have found out, it may have been too late to find a spot with a pro team," Iowa senior-to-be Jacob Jaacks said.

After a stellar freshman season in which he averaged 10.6 points and 5.7 rebounds per game, Rucker often struggled during his final two years with the Hawkeyes. As a sophomore, he battled weight problems and last season, his hands were frequently unreliable. He averaged 6.7 ppg and 3.9 rpg.

Losing Rucker means two things for Alford's Hawkeyes. First, the team will be extremely small — Jaacks is the only post player with any experience. Second, Alford now has two scholarships to offer recruits. That number could grow if sophomore-to-be Joey Range is not retained due to academic difficulties.

"We've known about (Rucker's situation) for some time," Jaacks said. "We're out there scrambling for some size. We're in a situation we don't wanna be in."

Alford has signed two junior college players since being hired on March 22. The first, Rob Griffin, is a 6-5 guard/forward. Joe Ferrino, a 6-7 forward, is the other one. They won't alleviate Iowa's size problem much, so Alford will either have to settle for having a smaller, quicker team or find a big man quickly.

"We've known about (Rucker's situation) for some time. We're out scrambling for some size. We're in a situation we don't wanna be in."

— Iowa senior-to-be Jacob Jaacks

Todd Fields, a 6-11 center from St. Catherine Junior College in Kentucky, visited the Iowa campus over the weekend, sources told the DI. Fields, who averaged 18 points and eight rebounds per game last season, would have two years of eligibility and could play immediately.

IOWA SOFTBALL

Iowa gaining momentum, hoping for postseason

The Iowa softball team swept Purdue in a three-game series over the weekend.

By Tony Wirt
The Daily Iowan

If there were any questions as to whether the Hawkeye softball team had enough pop in its bats to advance to the Big Ten Tournament, they were all answered this weekend.

Iowa (37-22-1, 11-8) pounded out 30 hits in a three-game sweep of Purdue, and took a large step towards the postseason tournament in Ann Arbor. The Hawkeyes are currently alone in fifth place in the Big Ten, with the top five teams qualifying for the tournament.

"Right now we are where anyone would want to be," Iowa coach Gayle Blevins said. "We control our own destiny and we just have to take advantage of the opportunities in front of us. The last two teams we play are ahead of us in the standings."

"We feel we are moving in the right direction now. We are getting great energy, and we are maintaining it."

The Hawkeyes swept Saturday's doubleheader by scores of 4-3 and 4-2, then in Sunday's game, Iowa completed the sweep with a 9-3 win over the Boilermakers (29-24, 8-12).

Iowa jumped all over starting pitcher Nicole Crouse, hanging seven runs on the Purdue freshman in the first two innings. The Hawkeyes added two more runs on RBI singles by Megan Atkins and Jill Knopf.

The runs were more than enough for the Hawkeye pitching tandem of Megan Petersen and Kristi Hanks, who shut the Boilermakers down after a small three-run scare in the fourth. Hanks took over for Petersen in that inning and earned her 15th win.

"We had a real productive weekend offensively," Blevins said. "We kept Purdue under constant pressure, and that took the pressure off our defense and pitching."

In Saturday's action, Iowa held a 3-1 lead going into the bottom of the sixth, but Purdue tied things up with a two-run single by Kristen Billen.

With two out in the seventh, a Purdue error allowed Hanks to come in with the winning run.

In the nightcap, the Hawkeyes took a 4-2 lead with five consecutive singles in the bottom of the fifth. Starting pitcher Kelly Zeilstra cruised the rest of the way for a four-hit victory.

Besides the three-game sweep, Iowa received another boost when leading hitter Tammy Utley returned to the lineup. The senior was hitting .333 when she was sidelined with a knee injury at Ohio State earlier this season.

Utley tore her right anterior cruciate ligament, but opted not for surgery, leaving her playing without ACLs in either knee. She lost her other due to a previous injury.

The Fort Dodge native was 2-2 in her first game back, and had an RBI single in Sunday's game.

"It was really nice to get Utley back," Blevins said. "She gave our lineup a big boost, and gives us a real quality presence."

SPORTS BRIEFS

Hetherington wins LPGA City of Hope

MURRELLS INLET, S.C. (AP) — Rachel Hetherington is showing Australian women's golf isn't all about Karrie Webb.

Hetherington shot a 4-under-par 68 Sunday and survived a final-round shootout to win the rain-shortened LPGA City of Hope Myrtle Beach Classic, her second straight tour victory.

"These two weeks have been good fun, I wish I could play like this all the time," she said after earning $101,250 for her third career win.

It wasn't easy. Hetherington, who won last week's Chik-fil-A Charity Championship, finished with a 7-under 137 total at Wachesaw East Golf Club. Then she waited more than an hour as the rest of the field tried to catch her.

No one could, not even Webb, the tour's money leader who missed a 10-foot birdie on No. 18.

Leta Lindley, who led with six holes to go, rimmed out a par putt on 18 that would have forced a playoff.

Helen Alfredsson, at 6 under, drove into the soggy rough on the final hole and settled for par.

Donna Andrews got within one stroke after making birdies on Nos. 12-14, but got no closer.

Gordon gets back in win column in California

FONTANA, Calif. — Aside from bouncing back after a couple of bad races in a short period of time, Jeff Gordon said his victory Sunday in the California 500 is proof of what he has been saying all along.

"I've been saying all year our team is better than it's ever been," Gordon said.

"All of the things we've been talking about — great cars, a great engine program, great pit stops — if we could just get some good fortune and have everything come together. Well, this was it.

"It's a real special win for us because we wanted to put Texas and Talladega behind us," he added, referring to two events where he crashed and finished near the bottom of the field.

Appleby wins Houston Open

THE WOODLANDS, Texas — Stuart Appleby is certain his wife was with him Sunday when he won the Shell Houston Open, his third career victory and the first since her death last year.

"She gave me the strength today," the native of Australia said after his 1-under-par 71 gave him a one-stroke victory over Hal Sutton and John Cook. "It's not just a golf game which makes you win a tournament."

"Most of it is your mental strength, and that's what I was able to do all week. It's been difficult to do that during the last year."

Appleby finished with a 9-under 279 total one day after his 28th birthday and the win was worth $450,000.

Montoya lives up to billing in Nazareth

NAZARETH, Pa. — Rookie Juan Montoya passed another checkpoint on his road to stardom.

He had been advised to wait until Nazareth. Now, the new sensation of the CART circuit, can deliver this message: Been there, done that.

He did it so well that virtually no one passed him Sunday in the Bosch Grand Prix. And the 23-year-old Colombian, a champion last year in Formula 3000 road-course racing, added a victory in his first career start on a short oval.

"My guys won it more than me," Montoya said, belying his reputation for being cocky. "We practiced a lot on hitting the marks."

That was a reference to pit stops, a key to his dominant race in which he took the lead in the series. He has 45 points, two more than Adrian Fernandez.

UI ROAD SPORTS ROUNDUP

Men's Golf

The Iowa men's golf team continued its weary ways this weekend, finishing 15th out of 17 teams at the Bruce Fossum Invitational in East Lansing, Mich.

Iowa improved its score with each successive round, but could not overcome two awful opening rounds Saturday that left them tied with Akron for last place.

The Hawkeyes came back Sunday with a final round 302, but it was too little too late. Iowa ended with a team score of 924.

Junior Adam Turner led the team, finishing tied for 18th place after shooting a 224. His performance was a bit surprising to coach Terry Anderson, considering Turner had been averaging a paltry 78.3 strokes in his nine rounds this spring.

Despite last week's encouraging 11th-place performance at the King Cobra Intercollegiate, Anderson was leary of proclaiming this weekend's disappointment a step back.

"We've still got some work to do," he said. "However, slowly-but-surely I think we're getting somewhere."

The nearest Hawkeye to Turner was freshman Ian Brendal, who finished in a tie for 53rd, despite ending up only eight strokes behind Turner with a score of 232.

Iowa's other competitors were sophomores Matt Stutzman (236, T70th) and Jason Wombacher (239, T80th) and senior Chris Englund (242, 86th).

Stutzman's reign as Anderson's top gun ended abruptly this weekend. The Lincoln, Neb., native, who was named Big Ten Golfer of the Week last Tuesday, shot over 16 strokes above his spring average.

"For the patience he displayed last week, he didn't have any this week," Anderson said.

Women's rowing

The Iowa women's rowing team traveled to Madison, Wis. last weekend with the goal of making some noise in the finals of the Midwest Rowing Championships.

Showing flashes of success early on, the Hawkeyes made four finals.

The Women Varsity 8+ squad finished fifth in the final with a time of 6:33.38, just 5.88 seconds out of first place. In the race, Iowa finished ahead of Top 20 power Ohio State by nearly seven seconds in the race and posted a lower time than Michigan in an earlier qualifying heat.

"These meets are all building blocks for us, we have had a lot of duels and this one was our second largest in terms of numbers," assistant coach Wendy Wisheart said. "This one was important because of the rankings."

Iowa ran into a little trouble in the finals of the 2nd Varsity 8+ and Varsity 4+.

After finishing second among the qualifiers in the 2nd Varsity 8+ final, Iowa was a bit erratic and finished fourth with a time of 6:24.89, a full eight seconds off the pace.

In Varsity 4+ competition, Iowa posted a sixth place time of 7:32.02 in the final, compared to a 7:11.38 qualifying time in an earlier heat.

The Women 2- squad brought home the only top three finish of the regatta with a close second place finish to Drake with a time of 8:12.9, just five tenths of a second out of first place.

The Iowa men's crew team also traveled to the regatta with favorable results. The men finished fourth in the Novice 4+ competition with a time of 6:55.6.

KENTUCKY DERBY

Right dream, wrong horse at Derby

■ D. Wayne Lukas won the Kentucky Derby for the fourth time Sunday.

By Ed Schuyler Jr.
Associated Press

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Eduardo Caramori's Kentucky Derby dream came true — for D. Wayne Lukas.

Caramori said he dreamed the winner would come out of the No. 16 post, and when it came his turn to pick a post position Wednesday the trainer chose 16 for First American.

On Friday, however, Aljabr, who drew No. 5, was scratched, meaning every horse from No. 4 out moved in one place. So First American started from the No. 15 post, and the Lukas-trained Charismatic started from No. 16.

At the end of the 1 1/4 miles Saturday at Churchill Downs, Charismatic was first by a neck over Menifee, and Lukas had his fourth Derby victory and 11th triumph in a Triple Crown race.

First American finished, you guessed it, 16th.

An early celebration by Chris Antley, riding Charismatic for the first time, could have proved costly.

"He got excited and gave the No. 1 sign three jumps from the wire," Lukas said Sunday. "If Menifee had caught us, that finger would be in glass in formaldehyde in the barn right now."

Lukas had told anyone who would listen that Charismatic was improving rapidly and would be dangerous.

One who listened, and believed, was Lukas' sister, Dauna Moths.

"My sister, bless her heart, said she wanted to bet $30 across," Lukas said. "She bet 10, 10 and 10."

The mutual clerk, however, punched out three $30 tickets (win, place and show).

Charismatic paid $64.60.

Rey Au/Associated Press

Jockey Chris Antley, right, aboard Charismatic, signals his win after crossing the finish line to capture the 125th running of the Kentucky Derby on Saturday in Louisville, Ky.

$27.80 and $14.40. The win payoff was the third highest in 125 Derbys, behind Doneraill's $184.90 in 1913 and Gallahadion's $72.40 in 1940.

Charismatic's more highly regarded stablemate finished third in the 19-horse field. He was 1 1/2 lengths ahead of Prime Timber, trained by Bob Baffert, who was trying to become the first person to three straight Derbys.

"I've got to tell it's the first time I've rooted for a Lukas horse, in those last 50 yards," Baffert said. Charismatic is owned by Bob and Beverly Lewis, who own Silver Charm, Baffert's first Derby winner.

The first four Derby finishers will run in the Preakness on May 15 at Pimlico.

It will be Charismatic's fourth race in six weeks. But, Lukas said, "He should bounce back. I think he can handle it."

Baffert said the filly Silverbulletday, winner of the Kentucky Oaks, also is being pointed to the Preakness, but that his other Derby starters, the filly Excellent Meeting and General Challenge, will get a rest.

Excellent Meeting, 15th with a quarter mile left, finished fifth. The strapping General Challenge finished 11th. Baffert said the gelding got a lot of dirt in his eyes, and "it looked like he was dragging his right leg, but he's OK today."

The race was roughly run, and a lot of horses came out of it with cuts and bruises. Many were blocked or forced to race wide and never got into contention.

The filly Three Ring was bumped at the start, then her saddle slipped and she was out of it quickly. She finished 19th.

"I've been really lucky all these years," said Baffert, who has two wins and a second in four Derbys. I got the (trouble-free) trip. Yesterday, I didn't get the trip with any of my three horses."

The Preakness is limited to 14 starters, and Baffert said he would like to see the 20-horse Derby limit reduced.

Walden, who also finished second with Victory Gallop to Baffert's Real Quiet last year, said of 20 starters being allowed, "I might win it some day because another horse gets in trouble."

"They call it a roller Derby, it's rough," Lukas said. "But that's what makes it unique."

Scotty Schulhofer, trainer of Lemon Drop Kid (ninth), said jockey Jose Santos told him, "Don't be disappointed. He had to run 1 1/2 miles in a 1 1/4-mile race."

Lemon Drop Kid is going to the Preakness and so are the Nick Zito-trained Stephen Go Even (14th) and Adonis (17th). Zito said it's the most disappointed he's been after a race because neither colt got a chance to really run.

It is possible Worldly Manner, making his first official start after only a trial race in Dubai, will go in the 1 1/4-mile Preakness. The colt was bought for $5 million by the Maktoum family's Godolphin Racing stable after he won the Del Mar Futurity on Sept. 9.

Spectators killed by debris in IRL race

■ Debris from a three-car crash killed three spectators and injured eight Saturday.

By Joe Macenka
Associated Press

CONCORD, N.C. — Three spectators were killed and at least eight injured when struck by debris that flew into the stands after a three-car crash in the VisionAire 500 Indy Racing League event Saturday night.

Spectators sitting in the area where the crash occurred saw a tire and suspension parts flew into the fourth-turn grandstands at Lowe's Motor Speedway and struck the spectators.

Area hospitals reported treating at least eight people, including one child who was in critical condition.

Two people were flown by helicopter to Carolinas Medical Center in nearby Charlotte, spokeswoman Kirstin Bass said. She said a child was in critical condition late Saturday night and an adult was in serious condition.

Three adults flown to University Hospital in Charlotte were in good condition, Bass said.

She declined to elaborate on the injuries or identify the victims.

Three of the injured were transported by ambulance to Northeast Medical Center in Concord.

Spokeswoman Carol Lovin said Nathaniel Blosser, 19, of Hickory, and David Duncan, 27, of Newton, were released late Saturday night, and Chad Duncan, 22, of Conover, David's brother, was still being treated but was expected to be released Sunday.

The three people killed also were transported to Northeast.

As rescue workers were attending to the injured, the track canceled the race.

"This is a terrible thing," said speedway president H.A. "Humpty" Wheeler, who went into the stands where the debris landed and tried to comfort some of the spectators. "It's very regrettable. It's something we'll live with for a very, very long time."

Ninety minutes after the crash, the nearly 50,000 spectators had filed out of the track and investigators were working at the accident scene, taking measurements and roping off the area.

In the 1.5-mile superspeedway's sprawling infield, about 200 drivers and crew members gathered for a somber prayer service.

"My teammates and I are just full of sorrow," 1998 Indianapolis 500 winner Eddie Cheever said. "Our thoughts and prayers are with the individuals and families. The decision to stop the race was the right one. We all leave Charlotte with extremely heavy hearts."

John Paul Jr. and Stan Wattles slammed hard into the fourth-turn retaining wall on lap 61 of the 208-lap event and went spinning down the front stretch, collecting the car of Scott Harrington.

Television replays could not show conclusively what kind of debris flew into the stands. But Joe Tiano, a Hickory, N.C., resident who was sitting about 150 feet away in a neighboring section of stands, said a wheel and suspension parts flew into the seats.

"It came up here like a rocket and then started bouncing around," Tiano said.

Authorities cleared the section of the stands and the race was red-flagged while emergency workers attended to the injured. While medical personnel worked, track security employees stood around them holding up white sheets.

"Everybody who was taking pictures had their cameras taken away by the cops," Tiano said.

One of the injured spectators was sitting in the 15th row, and the other two appeared to be about 10 rows higher.

MAJOR LEAGUE BASEBALL

It's on to Baltimore for Cuban team

■ The Orioles will host a rematch with Cuba tonight. Earlier in the season, Baltimore defeated Cuba, 3-2.

By David Ginsburg
Associated Press

BALTIMORE — Cuba's national baseball team headed to Baltimore on Sunday, getting an airport send-off from Cuban leader Fidel Castro.

After sorting out visa problems that delayed the flight from Havana, the team boarded a charter about 4 p.m. CDT for its exhibition game with the Baltimore Orioles tonight.

However, the delay meant the Cubans had to cancel their workout at Camden Yards and a reception in the team's honor.

The visa problems, concerning some in the delegation of more than 300, were resolved Saturday night.

This will mark the first time a Cuban team has played a major league team in the United States.

In the opener of this series, the Cubans beat the Orioles 3-2 in 11 innings on March 28 in Havana. It was the first time in 40 years a major league team played in Cuba.

In the days leading to that game, the Orioles had to scramble to get their birth certificates, passports and visas in order. This time it was the Cubans who were tangled in red tape.

At one point, the delay was thought to put Monday night's game in danger. But that is no longer the case.

The Orioles will be their traditional wearing black, orange and white for the rematch, but they'll be thinking red, white and blue.

"The important thing of every game is to win no matter what kind of uniform you wear or who you represent," Orioles pitcher Ricky Bones said Sunday. "This time we're going to represent the United States. We should go out there with pride and try to win."

The Orioles have struggled mightily since beating Cuba in March. The team is in last place, the players are being booed at Camden Yards and manager Ray Miller might not have his job by the end of the 12-game homestand Thursday.

So the Orioles can be forgiven if they don't regard the game with great anticipation.

"Obviously, you'd like the club to have a day off," Miller said. That's much the same attitude the Orioles carried into the first exhibition. But shortly after the playing of both country's national anthems, their attitude changed.

"A lot more comes into it than just you or your team. Even though we weren't really representing the U.S., we were in a way," outfielder B.J. Surhoff said. "We were one team but we were representing a whole lot of people. They looked at it as their national team representing them."

"Down there I knew it would be really intense and they'd be into it. I'm kind of curious to see how it's all going to play out tomorrow night."

In the first game, many of Cuba's best players were unavailable because they were involved in the country's playoffs. There was no such obstacle this time, so the Orioles can expect even more competition in the rematch.

"They'll have a better team this time. They'll have better players to choose from," said catcher Charles Johnson, whose two-run homer provided the majority of Baltimore's offense in the first game.

Miller hoped to rest his starters after six innings of that game, but the close score and high intensity caused him to stick with most of his stars for the entire contest. He will use his regular lineup Monday with the exception of his starting pitcher.

Scott Kamieniecki, who is on the disabled list, will start for Baltimore. The Orioles can only hope the Cubans don't counter with Jose Contreras, who allowed two hits over eight shutout innings and struck out 10 in the first game.

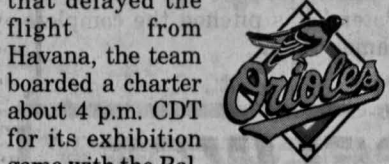

While many of the Orioles consider the game a distraction, they realize the prestige associated with representing their country.

Spokeswoman Carol Lovin said Nathaniel Blosser, 19, of Hickory, and David Duncan, 27, of Newton, were released late Saturday night, and Chad Duncan, 22, of Conover, David's brother, was still being treated but was expected to be released Sunday.

The three people killed also were transported to Northeast.

As rescue workers were attending to the injured, the track canceled the race.

NHL PLAYOFFS

Jagr braves through injury to lead Devils

Gene J. Puskar/Associated Press

Pittsburgh captain Jaromir Jagr, right, is hugged by goalie Tom Barraso following Jagr's overtime game-winning goal past New Jersey goalie Martin Brodeur Sunday in Pittsburgh. Jagr, playing with a groin injury, scored two goals to tie the playoff series at 3 games a piece.

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Jaromir Jagr's recovery was nearly as miraculous as his play. Jagr, visibly slowed by a groin injury that sidelined him for four games, scored an electrifying tying goal with 2:12 left in regulation, then won it in overtime as the Pittsburgh Penguins staved off playoff elimination by beating the New Jersey Devils 3-2 Sunday.

Jagr's two-goal performance on a day he wasn't expected to be in uniform no doubt will go down in NHL playoff history not only for its brilliance, but its bravery.

"It was just unbelievable," teammate Brad Werenka said of a victory — and a memorable one-man show — that prolonged the Penguins' season and, at least temporarily, saved the bankrupt franchise from possible extinction.

Jagr, the NHL scoring champion, was hurting so badly that he could barely stand up on skates before the Devils' 4-3 victory Friday in Game 5. He talked pessimistically Saturday of playing in Game 6, but became more encouraged after being fitted with some scuba diver's pants that provided more support and partly eased the pain.

"I felt pretty good," he said. "The new pants held my leg a little tighter and I felt much better when I skated. That's when I decided to play."

The series now heads to a climactic Game 7 Tuesday night in New Jersey, a game that seemed improbable when the Devils took a 2-1 lead on Scott Niedermayer's goal at 4:34 of the third.

Improbable most of all to the Devils, who had held Jagr in check until his final flurry provided one of the most dramatic finishes in Penguins' playoff history.

"We're absolutely disappointed about letting this one get away," Brian Rolston said of the Devils' sixth consecutive playoff overtime loss. "Jagr is the best player in the world, so we're not surprised. But we were pretty confident up 2-1 with 2½ minutes to go."

With time winding down and the Penguins desperately rushing the net with every opportunity, Jagr carried the puck into the Devils' zone, then got it back from German Titov to score as Niedermayer left him undefended to cover Titov. It was Jagr's first goal since his overtime goal in New York two Sundays before ruined Wayne Gretzky's final NHL game.

Bruins 2, Hurricanes 0

BOSTON — The Boston Bruins won their first playoff series in five years, blanking the Carolina Hurricanes behind the goaltending of NHL shutout leader Byron Dafeo.

Joe Thornton and Anson Carter scored as the Bruins completed their comeback from a 2-1 deficit by winning their third straight game and taking the best-of-7 Eastern Conference quarterfinal 4-2.

Two of those wins came at home, where the Bruins had won just one of their previous 12 playoff games. Their second-round opponent depends on the outcome of other Eastern Conference series.

Dafeo notched his second playoff shutout after getting 10 in the regular season, both league highs. He was at his best in the second period when Carolina outshot Boston 16-3. The Hurricanes had just four shots in the third period.

Maple Leafs 1, Flyers 0

PHILADELPHIA — The Toronto Maple Leafs struck late again to bounce the Philadelphia Flyers from the playoffs.

Sergei Berezin scored with 59 seconds left in regulation Sunday night as the Maple Leafs beat the Flyers 1-0 to advance to the second round.

Toronto, despite trailing for most of the series, advanced to the second round against Boston. The Flyers lost their seventh straight overtime playoff game and were seeing that it was decided by a late penalty.

After John LeClair was called for elbowing Mike Johnson with 2:54 left, the Maple Leafs scored on a fluke play that sent the Flyers home in the first round for the second straight year. Bryan Berard, who made a kick save earlier with Joseph wandering from the net, fanned on his shot and then had the puck bounce off defenseman Adam Burt.

It bounced right to Berezin, who shot it past a sprawling John Vanbiesbroeck for his second goal of the series and deflated a Philadelphia hockey season that ended with injured captain Eric Lindros watching as he recovers from a collapsed lung.

Mark Recchi led a final charge by the Flyers, but Curtis Joseph finished up a 26-save performance and leaped into the arms of teammate Dimitri Yushkevich when the horn sounded.

The Flyers were incensed by the penalty call, and coach Roger Neilson let it be known afterward.

ST. LOUIS 5, PHOENIX 3 Blues push series to seven

By R.B. Fallstrom
Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — The Phoenix Coyotes' season isn't the only thing at stake now.

After the St. Louis Blues forced Game 7 with three straight goals Sunday in a 5-3 victory, Phoenix coach Jim Schoenfeld's future with the team is in serious jeopardy. So serious that he guaranteed a victory Tuesday night.

"I would tell you that I'll stake my job on it, but that's already been done," Schoenfeld said. "So I'll just say we're going to win Game 7."

The Blues, who trailed 3-1 in the series but have won the last two games, reacted mostly with amusement to Schoenfeld's bold words.

"If they don't, I guess he's in trouble," captain Chris Pronger said with a smile.

Even Schoenfeld's players were a bit surprised to hear it.

"Who starts that?" captain Keith Tkachuk said to reporters. "You guys? We don't need any of that before Game 7."

The Blues had their biggest offensive game of the series without a point from Al MacInnis, their leading scorer the first five games. Defenseman Jeff Finley, who scored only one goal in the regular season, broke a third-period tie.

"It's always exciting to score," Finley said. "When you don't do it very often and you get a goal like that, it feels great. That's the biggest goal of my career,

Mary Butkus/Associated Press
Blues' Craig Conroy raises his arms after scoring Sunday.

definitely."

Finley had a goal and two assists in 30 regular-season games with the Blues and has only eight goals in 385 career games. Until this game he also had been one of the Blues' weak links on defense with a minus-4 for the series.

But he had two big shots in the crucial sequence. Nikolai Khabibulin stopped Finley's first drive from the left point, but Pierre Turgeon gathered in the rebound and swept a backhand shot over front. Finley skated in a few strides before blasting the game-winner at 8:59.

Craig Conroy scored twice, including a late third-period goal that made it a two-goal game for the Blues. Conroy closed it out with a rebound shot with 4:11 to go.

NBA ROUNDUP

Duncan, Spurs make case out West

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The West hasn't been won yet, although the San Antonio Spurs took another giant step Sunday toward doing just that.

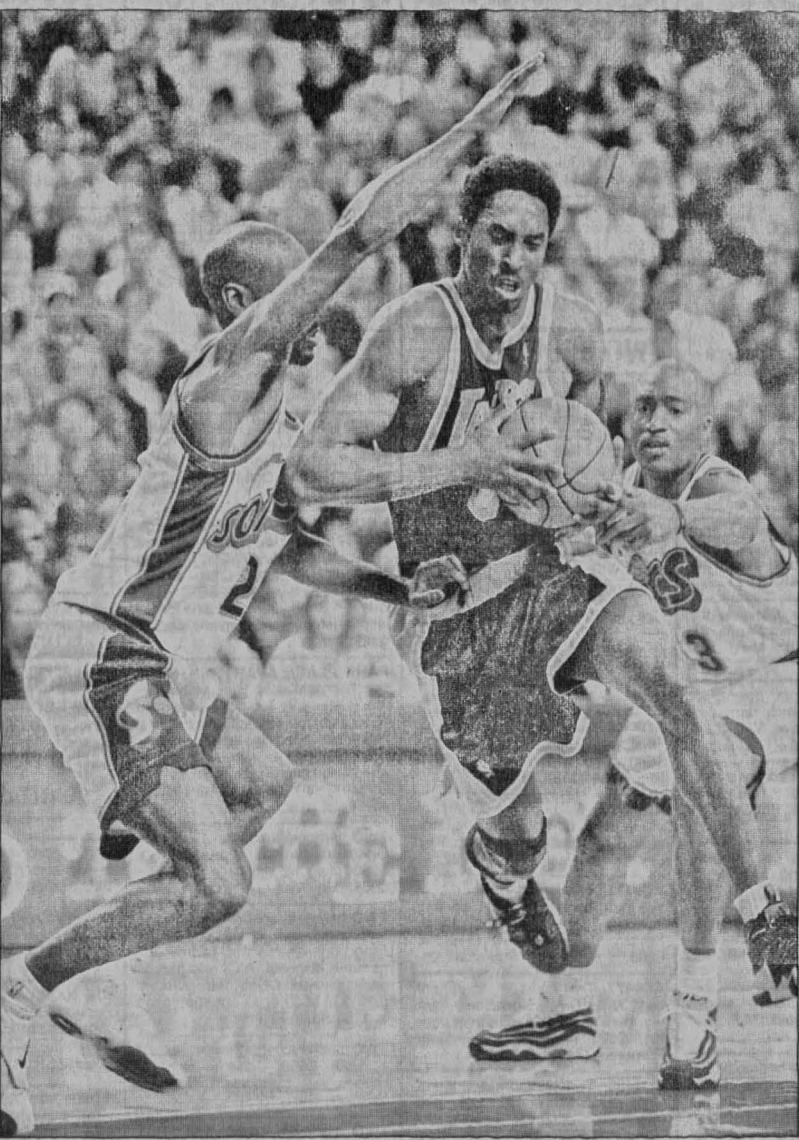

With chants of "M-V-P" raining down on Tim Duncan from the largest crowd in the NBA this season, the Spurs played an inspired fourth quarter and defeated Utah 84-78 to prevent the Jazz from clinching the conference.

Now, it's the Spurs who can secure homecourt advantage throughout the postseason by winning their final two games — at Portland on Tuesday and at Golden State on Wednesday.

"This was huge," Duncan said, "and winning those last two games will make it really, really big."

Duncan had 26 points, 14 rebounds and four blocked shots, outplaying Karl Malone down the stretch and showing rare flashes of emotion.

An emphatic dunk by Duncan off a missed shot with 9:06 left elicited a scream from the 7-footer and gave San Antonio its first lead since the first quarter, 67-65.

Los Angeles' Kobe Bryant drives down the lane around Seattle's Gary Payton, left, and ahead of Hersey Hawkins during the second quarter in Seattle Sunday.

Pistons 100, 76ers 96

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — It was the last regular season home game for Joe Dumars, and he and Grant Hill both made sure it was memorable.

Hill scored 35 points and Dumars added 15 — six down the stretch — as the Detroit Pistons clinched a playoff berth Sunday night with a 100-96 victory over the Philadelphia 76ers.

Heat 100, Hornets 93

MIAMI — In a game fraught with playoff implications, Terry Porter scored 12 of his 18 points in the fourth quarter, including an 18-footer and a 3-pointer in the final minute that secured Miami's victory.

Jamal Mashburn paced Miami with 20 points, while Alonzo Mourning, wearing goggles, returned after missing three games with an eye injury, to get 19 points and 12 rebounds.

Rockets 110, Clippers 84

HOUSTON — Charles Barkley had 19 points and 12 rebounds and Scottie Pippen led a fourth-quarter 3-point shooting charge and the Houston Rockets beat the Los Angeles Clippers.

The Rockets never trailed and led comfortably throughout most of the game but the Clippers trimmed a 20-point deficit near the end of the third quarter to 86-74 with 7:06 to play.

Kings 111, Suns 100

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — Jason Williams had 24 points and Chris Webber had a double-double despite leaving the game three times for back treatment as the Sacramento Kings moved within a win of the playoffs with a victory over the Phoenix Suns.

If the Kings win either of their remaining two games, on Monday at Denver or Wednesday at home against Vancouver, they will capture their second playoff spot in 13 seasons.

Trail Blazers 110, Nuggets 102

DENVER — Damon Stoudamire had 17 points and nine assists as the Portland Trail Blazers beat the Denver Nuggets 110-102 Sunday night to move within a half-game of Utah for the top seed in the Western Conference.

Arvydas Sabonis and Isaiah Rider each added 16 points for Portland, which had seven players in double figures.

Yanks rally yet again to defeat Royals

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Bernie Williams hit a tiebreaking two-run homer in the ninth inning as the Yankees rallied from a four-run deficit to beat Kansas City 9-8 Sunday, their 14th win in their last 15 games against the Royals.

Hideki Irabu was pounded for six runs and 11 hits in 4 1-3 innings in his first start of the season, allowing home runs to Joe Randa, Johnny Damon and Larry Sutton.

New York, which has won nine of its last 11 overall, trailed 6-2, went ahead with a five-run sixth, then allowed Carlos Febles' RBI single in the seventh off Jason Grimsley (2-0).

Orioles 6, Twins 0

BALTIMORE — Mike Mussina (4-1) allowed six hits in seven innings as Baltimore won a series for the first time since mid-September. The Orioles have lost 11 consecutive series.

Arthur Rhodes pitched the eighth and Mike Timlin got three outs to complete Baltimore's second shutout of the season.

Tigers 8, Devil Rays 2

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Juan Encarnacion's three-run double keyed a four-run first inning and Justin Thompson (4-2) won his fourth straight start, allowing two runs and eight hits in six innings.

Damion Easley hit a two-run homer in the fourth, putting Detroit ahead 6-0. Julio Santana (1-3) gave up eight runs — seven earned — and 10 hits in five-plus innings.

Athletics 7, Red Sox 5

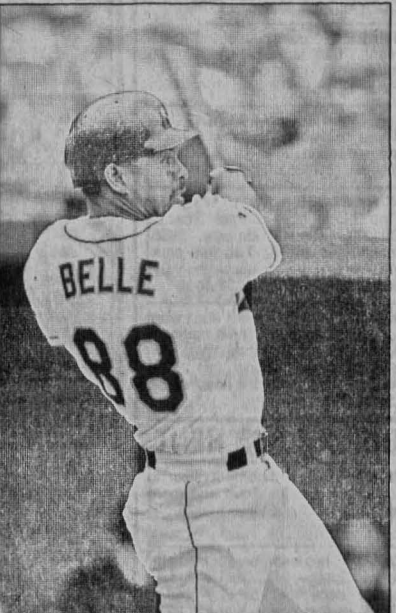

OAKLAND, Calif. — Jason Giambi's go-ahead, two-run single in the sixth inning led Oakland to a win in a matchup of knuckleballers.

With Boston leading 5-4 in the sixth following John Valentin's three-run homer, Giambi hit a bases-loaded single off Jim Corsi, who had relieved Tim Lincecum (1-1).

Mariners 3, Blue Jays 2

SEATTLE — David Bell had a game-winning homer in the ninth inning and Butch Huskey hit a game-winning single two outs later for Toronto.

With Seattle trailing 2-1, Bell homered off Peter Munro leading off the ninth, his seventh off the season.

Nick Wass/Associated Press

Baltimore's Albert Belle hits a solo home run against Minnesota during the third inning of the Orioles' 6-0 win.

Braves 5, Reds 3

ATLANTA — Javy Lopez had a pair of run-scoring doubles as the Atlanta Braves knocked out former teammate Denny Neagle after 2 1-3 inning and beat the Cincinnati Reds 5-3 Sunday to win their fifth straight game.

Gerald Williams added a solo homer in the fourth inning, and rookie Odalis Perez (1-1) got his first regular-season career win, helping the Braves to their eighth win in nine games.

Phillies 12, Dodgers 3

PHILADELPHIA — Curt Schilling (4-1) escaped a bases-loaded, no-outs jam in the sixth inning to beat Kevin Brown (2-2), who gave up a season-high six runs and eight hits in six innings.

Schilling struck out eight and had a season-high four walks, allowing three runs and six hits, including Todd Hundley's two-run homer.

Brewers 6, Diamondbacks 5

MILWAUKEE — Pinch-hitter Marquis Grissom had a three-run homer in the eighth inning off Gregg Olson (0-2), who blew a save for the fourth time in eight chances this season. Milwaukee stopped a five-game home losing streak.

Matt Williams homered twice for Arizona, raising his total to a league-leading 10. His two-run shot in the eighth off David Weathers (2-0) gave the Diamondbacks a 5-3 lead.

Cardinals 8, Expos 7, 10 inn.

MONTREAL — Fernando Tatís, who hit a three-run homer in the first inning, slid home to break a 6-all tie in the 10th, beating the throw by shortstop Michael Barrett on Eli Marrero's routine grounder. Willie McGee then scored on a wild pitch by Ugueth Urbina (2-3).

Chris Widger homered for the Expos in the bottom of the 10th against Juan Acevedo (2-1), who blew his first save in four chances.

Mets 2, Giants 0

NEW YORK — Dennis Cook (5-0) became the NL's first five-game winner when shortstop Ramon Martinez dropped Ripkey Henderson's eighth-inning fly ball, allowing Matt Franco to score the game's first run off John Johnstone (3-1).

John Olerud followed with an RBI single as the Mets extended their winning streak to five with a three-game sweep.

Pirates 8, Rockies 5

PITTSBURGH — Mike Benjamin hit a two-run triple in a four-run fifth. Pittsburgh took two of three games from Colorado and won consecutive games for the first time since April 19-20.

Pirates starter Jason Schmidt (4-1) was knocked out after allowing five runs and six hits in five innings.

Cubs 3, Padres 2

CHICAGO — Gary Gaetti, whose struggles at the plate left him with a lower batting average than some pitchers, hit a go-ahead two-run single in the eighth.

The Padres lost all three games in Chicago, the first time they've been swept in 74 series. Their streak of 73 series without a sweep was the fourth-longest this century, and the longest in more than 50 years. Their last sweep came Aug. 25-27, 1997, at Philadelphia.

Astros 3, Marlins 2

MIAMI — Shane Reynolds (5-1) became the first NL starter with five win and Carl Everett drove in two runs as Houston won its fourth straight. Florida has lost five in a row.

Reynolds struck out six, walked none, and limited the Marlins to eight hits in 7 2-3 innings. Billy Wagner pitched the ninth.
