Union plans shuffle groups

Some student organizations offices in the Union are on the verge of a major restructuring and relocating.

By Shirin Sadeghi
The Daily Iowan

Student organizations could soon be playing their own version of musical chairs as the UI attempts to restructure space in the Union.

As part of the university-wide "purposeful planning process," several student organizations may be moved from their present office locations to other places in the Union.

The move comes partly in response to Greek and Dance Marathon requests last semester for more Union space. Since then, a special committee created by the Office of Student Life has developed a proposal for reassigning rooms in the Union.

While the plans have yet to be approved, they are "near final," according to Alice Mathis, director of the Office of Student Life.

Among the proposed changes, the UI Student Government offices would be relocated into the office currently occupied by Student Legal Services. The move would mean a loss of 329 square feet for UISG; Student Legal Services would be moved out of the Union altogether.

UISG President Lana Zak said she'd rather stay put in the UISG's current basement office.

"I like our spot, and so I'm not interested in moving," she said. "But we'll look at whatever the Office of Student Life presents us with."

The main concern for UISG officials is a loss in student accessibility to their offices.

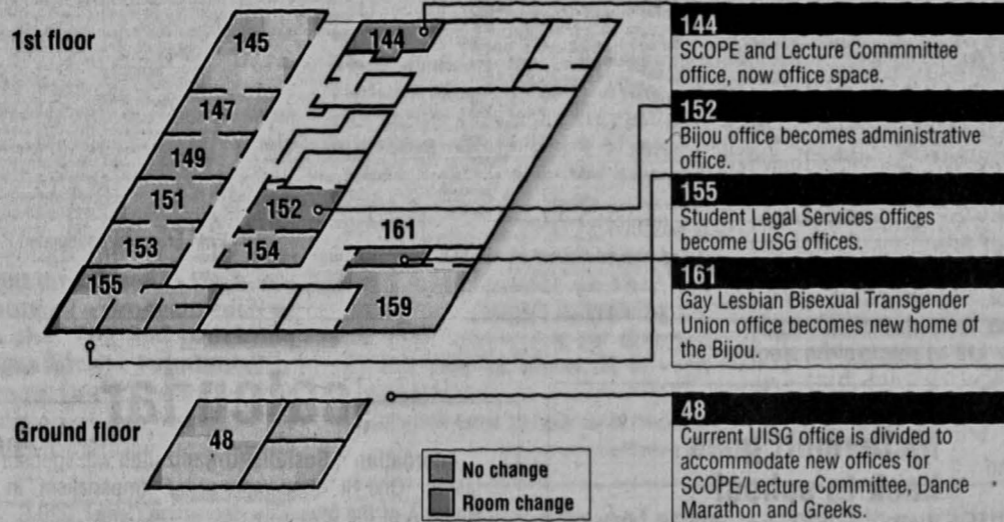

"Of the few people who know where the UISG office is, fewer know where the student legal office is," Zak said.

Other possible changes would involve relocating SCOPE, the Lecture Committee, Greek and Dance Marathon offices to the present

Switcheroo at the Union

The UI has created a proposal for a possible rearrangement of certain rooms to accommodate changing needs of student groups at the Union. Among the groups that would be affected are the Bijou, SCOPE/Lecture Committee, Dance Marathon, UISG and Greek organizations such as the Interfraternity Council. Dance Marathon and Greek groups would get new, locked offices, and other student groups would lose space to accommodate them. The Bijou is among the hardest hit, going from 494 square feet of space to 286, a 42 percent loss. Below, a diagram of the proposed changes:

Bijou to feel the squeeze of Union plans

Bijou officials say they have "serious concerns" about a possible relocation.

By Shirin Sadeghi
The Daily Iowan

While the UI tries to shuffle offices within the Union, Bijou officials say they wonder why they weren't involved in the decision to move the theater's offices to a considerably smaller space.

Bijou Director Taylor Segrest said he was informed Monday that the Bijou's offices would be the first to be relocated as part of the UI's overall "purposeful planning process," which began in 1998 and aims to renovate student facilities across campus.

The Bijou office could move from Room 152 in the Union to two separate locations on the Union first floor and basement, losing 208 square feet in the process.

The decision to move the Bijou is "near final," said Alice Mathis, director of the Office of Student Life.

News of the move came Monday to Bijou officials, who said they're frustrated at the prospect of losing so much space. More frustrating, said Segrest, is that Bijou members were neither involved nor informed about the possible relocation until now.

When the Office of Student Life created a committee in November 1998 to recommend changes in the Union, the only student representative on the committee was Scott Shuman, who was then the vice president of the UI Student Government, Mathis said.

Clinton opens door for Balkan talks

The president says NATO could pause in the bombing if the Serbs withdraw from Kosovo and Kosovar refugees can return.

By Terence Hunt
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Encouraging Russian peacemaking efforts, President Clinton said Monday "we could have a bombing pause" in Yugoslavia if Slobodan Milosevic accepts NATO's demands for the withdrawal of his troops, the return of refugees and the deployment of an international security force.

Clinton said "there's plenty to talk about" within the terms set by NATO, which require "at least the beginning of withdrawal of Serb forces."

After a news conference, Clinton conferred with Russian envoy Viktor Chernomyrdin, who reported on his April 30 talks with Milosevic.

Emerging from the 90-minute Oval Office meeting, Chernomyrdin said, "We got closer to a diplomatic solution."

He did not elaborate, except to say that he and the president discussed "the circumstances and the conditions" under which NATO would pause its air assault on Yugoslavia.

"It's a very complicated issue; we'll keep on working," the former Russian prime minister told reporters. "I remain hopeful."

A senior administration official, speaking on condition of anonymity, cautioned that this flurry of diplomatic activity "is not something that is going to result in some magical breakthrough in the next nanosecond."

This official, who sat in on the Clinton-Chernomyrdin meeting, said the Russian envoy's report on his talks

Freed soldiers reunite with families

The three U.S. Army men had a few injuries, doctors say, including two broken ribs and a broken nose.

By George Boehmer
Associated Press

LANDSTUHL, Germany — Upbeat and safe at a U.S. military hospital in Germany, three servicemen released by Yugoslavia were joyfully reunited with their families on their first full day of freedom Monday.

Army doctors pronounced the soldiers in generally good shape, but checkups also revealed fractured ribs and a broken nose, raising questions about how they were treated during their capture and month in captivity.

The Army declined to comment on how the injuries were sustained, citing the ongoing examinations and investigation into the circumstances of their March 31 capture on the Yugoslav-Macedonia border.

Before arriving at the Landstuhl Regional Medical Center Sunday, the soldiers told reporters that their scars and bruises stemmed from their capture but said they were generally treated well after that. Their commander, Maj. David Grange of the 1st Infantry division, was skeptical.

"I think it might have been they were poorly treated at the beginning, but that'll be determined," he said.

Pentagon spokesman Kenneth Bacon said the three soldiers would undergo further briefings in Germany for two or three more days.

Global Focus closes Nobel year with noble plan

Members of the Global Focus series will pursue the creation of a Human Rights Center for the UI.

By Quinn O'Keefe
The Daily Iowan

Organizers of the Global Focus Lecture Series say that although the series has officially ended, they intend to continue pursuing human-rights advocacy at the UI.

A Human Rights Center embodying the same ideals as the Global Focus series is being set up by lecture series organizer Burns Weston, a UI professor of law, and members of the Global Focus Committee.

If approved by the UI, the center would serve as a human-rights information clearinghouse on campus. Among other things, it would bring human-rights speakers to Iowa City, house human-rights scholars, and organize events that would raise the awareness of human rights.

The purpose of the project is that the awareness of human rights at the UI will not end with the Global Focus series, Weston said.

"I intend to continue to have an impact in the center and human rights," he said. "Even though I am retiring from the classroom, I am going to be based here in Iowa City and will be very involved in making certain things like Global Focus happen."

Members of the Global Focus Committee will pitch the idea for the center to the UI in two weeks, said Rex Honey, co-chairman of the Global Studies Program and an associate professor of geography.

"It is difficult to plan and put a price tag on something like this center, because we are not sure on funding and how much longer Weston will be able to work with us on the project," said Honey, who added that the location of the planned center is undetermined.

Weston, who is retiring from teaching next semester, organized the Global Focus series as a celebration of the 50th anniversary of the signing of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, which Weston labels the most important document of this half of the century.

The series, which brought to the UI four Nobel Peace Prize winners and more than 20 prominent human rights activists, ended on a somewhat low note this spring, when the three final lecturers — Nobel Peace Prize winner John Hume, author Susan Sontag and international lawyer Chidi Odinkalu —

STUPID PEOPLE STORIES

"I am a medical student currently doing a rotation in toxicology at the poison control center. Today, this woman called in very upset because she caught her little daughter eating ants. I quickly reassured her that the ants are not harmful and there would be no need to bring her daughter into the hospital. She calmed down, and at the end of the conversation happened to mention that she gave her daughter some ant poison to eat in order to kill the ants. I told her that she better bring her daughter into the emergency room right away."

Seems that a year ago, some Boeing employees on the airfield decided to steal a life raft from one of the 747s. They were successful in getting it out of the plane and home. When they took it for a float on the river, they were surprised by a Coast Guard helicopter coming toward them. It turned out that the chopper was homing in on the emergency locator that is activated when the raft is inflated. They are no longer employed there.

A woman was reporting her car as stolen and mentioned that there was a car phone in it. The policeman taking the report called the phone and told the guy that answered that he had read the ad in the newspaper and wanted to buy the car. They arranged to meet, and the thief was arrested.

Cruise and Kidman rated 'R'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Stanley Kubrick's final film, "Eyes Wide Shut," avoided the dreaded NC-17 rating. Instead, the Motion Picture Association of America on April 30 gave an R rating to the movie, which is about a married couple's sexual obsession. Release of a steamy, 90-second snippet from the movie starring Tom Cruise and Nicole Kidman triggered discussion about an NC-17 rating, which can be a box office killer because nobody under 17 is allowed in due to "explicit sexual content and dialogue."

WATERBURY, Conn. (AP) — Dylan McDermott was late to school. But he didn't get in trouble.

The actor, who plays lawyer Bobby Donnell on ABC's "The Practice," was scheduled to attend a fund-raiser on May 1 at his old grade school, St. Mary's School, and receive a Distinguished Alumnus Award. His flight from St. Louis was canceled, so the ceremony was pushed back nearly two hours.

The Quadrangle Public Cafeteria will be renamed and used to serve meals to residence hall students next year, while Hillcrest food service is being remodeled, Hartwig said.

Officer Derek Drish of the UI Department of Public Safety completed training through the Iowa Law Enforcement Academy earlier this month. He was a member of the 168th Basic School that was conducted from Jan. 18 through April 9 at Camp Dodge in Johnston.

The Law Enforcement Academy training is a 12-week program that includes instruction in procedures related to arrests, criminal investigations, search and seizure, traffic control, use of force and dealing with drunken drivers. All law enforcement officers in the state of Iowa are required to complete the training program before they can assume their duties on a permanent basis.

In addition to the academy's training program, Drish also completed a four-month field officer training program.

Coleman hits alcohol abuse, Greek blowouts

UI President Mary Sue Coleman says the local bars must help to cut down on underage drinking.

By Carrie Johnston
The Daily Iowan

The Daily Iowan: Despite explicit instructions from its national chapter, former UI fraternity Delta Tau Delta hosted a large party over the weekend that boasted 16 kegs. Sigma Nu also held a party on its front lawn, allegedly flaunting alcohol use to any drivers passing by on Dubuque Street. What is the university's reaction to this, and do you see a continuation of these problems next year when the UI Greek system is set to be completely dry?

UI President Mary Sue Coleman: I know that (Vice President for Student Services Phillip) Jones has been in some pretty good conversations with the leadership of the fraternities, and I am very pleased with the stance the leaders are taking. I know sometimes the leaders have trouble persuading all of their members that this is the right way to go, and they are struggling. ...

The chapters are on private property and are subject to the laws of the city, but what the university can do is refuse to recognize them as student organizations. And I don't want that to happen, because I believe that the fraternities can offer good, important opportunities for students. Hopefully, those people in fraternities can persuade others who are flouting what the university does not want them to do will stop what they are doing and create constructive solutions for the future. We are asking people to stand up, be responsible and act like the adults they are.

DI: The Iowa City Police Department has seen a large increase in the number of alcohol possession tickets issued to minors at local bars this year — so many that the city is calling for all bars to change their minimum age to 21, using liquor licenses as a bargaining element. What do you think about this idea?

Coleman: This is a natural consequence of what we are trying to do with the city in terms of the Stepping Up Project. The university is working with the city to look at all of the issues that surround underage and binge drinking. We have been working with students, we have been working with the City Council — at some point the bar owners will have to get engaged and help to reduce the incidents in their own bars. Whether it's no admission under 21 anytime, or past 10 p.m., at some point the bar owners have to help the city solve this problem.

DI: The ISIS program will soon be located on the World Wide Web through the WebISIS project. What do you see as the benefits of putting a program such as ISIS on the Web, and providing Web pages for all UI students?

Coleman: One of the things that excites me about the WebISIS Project is that it will provide students with the information about their own records and requirements and what they can do to participate more in the planning and completion of their programs. For a long time, students had to go to their adviser and query the database. I believe that our students are becoming so technologically proficient that there is no reason that they can't do that themselves.

with Mary Sue Coleman

DI: Given recent events in Littleton, Colo., individuals who wear trench coats have been given a stigma as being violent, disturbed people. Do you think the focus on clothing is a valid way to place blame?

Coleman: Clearly, the issues in Littleton were far more profound than clothing ... That trivializes it in my mind — it is much more than that. Young people go through some difficult stages in growing up, and some apparently get diverted and fall into an abyss. It is very, very sad.

City considers the parking angle

Old Capitol Mall's owner is requesting angled parking to woo potential customers.

By Steven Cook
The Daily Iowan

Several areas of Clinton Street, including those near some residence halls and the Old Capitol Mall, could see angled parking spaces as early as next year.

A request from the new owner of the Old Capitol Mall has prompted the Iowa City City Council to look at angled parking along Clinton Street from Burlington Street to Church Street.

At its Monday night work session, the council saw a presentation on the city's options by Jeff Davidson, assistant city director for planning and community development. The council voted to have Davidson draw up more detailed plans for the spaces.

The Old Capitol Mall owner, Pittsburgh-based Madison Realty Group Inc., says it wants angled parking in front of the mall to provide easier access for customers.

Between Market Street and Church Street, installing angled parking spaces would add 14 new spaces, Davidson said. He added that installing angled parking spaces from Burlington to Market streets could add about 90 new spaces.

While it would add new spaces to North Clinton Street near the dorms, Davidson advised against making the parking angled.

Angled parking forces cars to slow down but also creates more congestion, he said, which would be similar to that during the move-in and move-out periods for the dorms.

The North Clinton Street plan would be in addition to a plan to meter the area's parking spaces, which is scheduled to get underway later this month.

For the stretch of Clinton Street from Burlington to Market streets, Davidson also advised against angled parking on both sides of the street because it would make the street and sidewalks too narrow.

In other business, the final plan for the new Iowa Avenue parking garage was presented to the council. The estimated $12 million project is scheduled to be put to bid at tonight's formal council meeting.

Search for I.C. superintendent moves on

The consulting firm involved in the search for the new school superintendent is satisfied with the citizen input.

By Anita Chlipala
The Daily Iowan

Although only two community members attended the Iowa City School District's forum Monday night, a search firm says it has enough citizen input to begin looking for a new superintendent.

"We didn't have a lot of people show up because so many people took advantage to fax us or e-mail us," said John Hinck, a partner with the educational search firm the Bickert Group Ltd.

The forum was an opportunity for community members to give feedback on the type of person they would like to have as the superintendent.

Prior to the forum, the firm had issued a questionnaire for community members to generate suggestions for a superintendent profile. The questions that were asked regarded district strengths, issues and concerns of community members and personal characteristics that citizens would like to see in the superintendent.

The questionnaire received approximately 400 responses — well over the 200 that such forms usually generate, Hinck said.

"We have more than enough to provide us with a valid idea of what people are looking for," said John Cahill, also with the search firm.

Iowa City residents Jim Spratt and Emily Sutphin, the community members in attendance, agreed that an effort to communicate between the community and the district is a necessary quality in the superintendent.

"The problem of intelligence in this town and community is that an awful lot of folks are too busy to be in touch with the school system," Spratt said.

With the suggestions Hinck and Cahill have received, they said their next step will be composing a leadership profile. They then plan to present an official report to the School Board at its May 11 meeting.

Killers — not song lyrics — responsible for shootings

In their search for an answer to what may have caused the nightmarish and all-too familiar shootings at Columbine High School in Littleton, Colo., many people have looked to all forms of mass media and popular culture.

The shooters were said to be big fans of the Goth-rock shock performer Marilyn Manson, whose violent lyrics and gruesome imagery have become a lightning rod for criticism and blame for the shootings.

Protesters have gathered outside Marilyn Manson's concert venues long before Harris and Klebold became famous, and last week's concert in Cedar Rapids was no exception.

There is no reason to lend so much weight to Marilyn Manson's song lyrics. He is an admitted user of a variety of illegal drugs, as well as a cocaine addict. His famous saying, "Rehab is for quitters" shows where his own influences lie.

Critics point to lyrics from songs such as "Lunchbox" as promoting violence: The big bully try to stick his finger in my chest/ Trying to tell me, tell me he's the best/ But I don't give a good goddamn 'cause/ I got my lunchbox and I'm armed real well.

Manson, whose real name is Brian Warner, gleams his lyrics from his own adolescent experiences as an outcast. His mother had a serious drug problem, and hardcore pornography was readily available in his household, which Manson's book, "The Long Hard Road out of Hell," depicts in graphic detail.

Manson survived these perils and turned his rage into his art. Harris and Klebold may have identified with Manson's lyrics, but their murderous rampage was their own idea.

The blame squarely rests on no one but Harris and Klebold. Their inability to choose right over wrong or deal with their problems in a rational manner led them to execute their deadly plan.

These teen-agers were so open to suggestion, it was not a matter of the content of the messages they were seeking and identifying with. It was simply a matter of time before they submitted to their mental weaknesses and did something destructive.

Society and the media should stop wasting time asking why Harris and Klebold did what they did. Instead, we must turn our attention to how many more kids share these attitudes and what can be done, if anything, to help them get past these adolescent problems of alienation and hopelessness — before any more kids count past school shooters as influences.

POWs' return won't stop strikes

On May 1, Yugoslav leader Slobodan Milosevic released the three captured American soldiers to the Rev. Jesse Jackson. Despite Jackson's request that NATO stop the bombing as a gesture to Milosevic, the bombing has continued.

The continued bombing sent a promise to Milosevic: We will not stop hurting you until you stop the cleansing of Kosovars.

And it appears the United States can live up to this promise.

Jackson was in Yugoslavia as a independent United States diplomat. His visit was worrisome for the Clinton administration, which wasn't directly represented at the discussion. But Jackson fared well, freeing U.S. soldiers while allowing the U.S. freedom to act within NATO.

In the discussions, Milosevic gave some of his opinions to Jackson about the major issues involved in the conflict, including the violence against the Kosovars. In addition, Milosevic gave Jackson a letter for President Clinton that proposes a face-to-face meeting between Milosevic and Clinton to resolve the conflict. The letter and opinions from Milosevic should give U.S. officials a foundation for future negotiations, albeit a small one.

The possible results of Jackson's meeting with Milosevic are two-fold: First, the U.S. losing public support in part from continued bombing and holding on to two captured Yugoslav soldiers, and second, the U.S. gaining public support for the NATO attack by proving the air campaign is working and the tragedies in Kosovo can eventually be solved by negotiations.

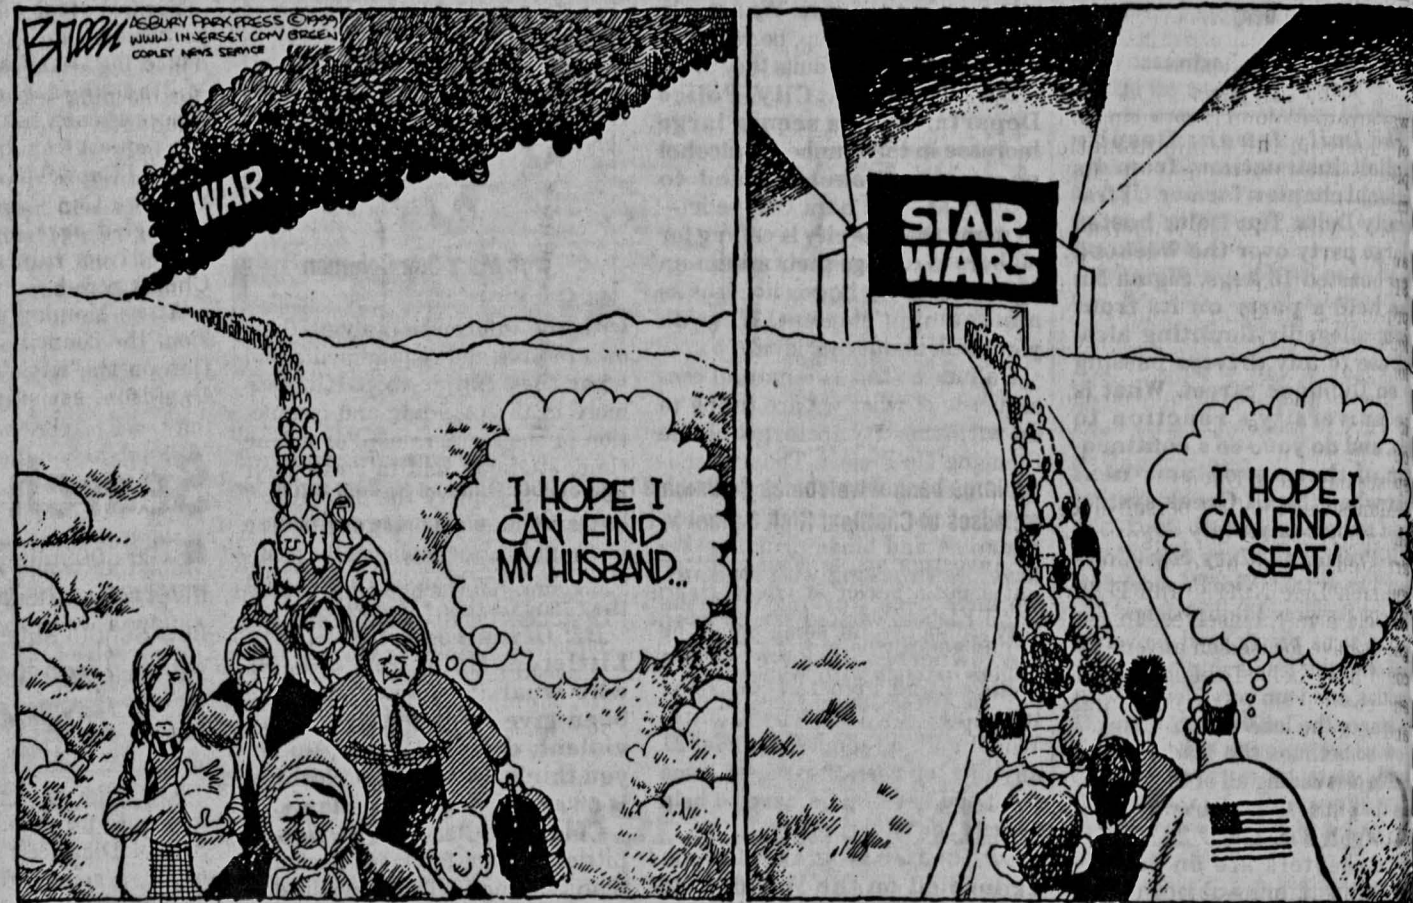

The second possibility seems more likely. Although Milosevic may have gained a few points with Americans for releasing the soldiers, he will soon lose them because of nightly stories about suffering refugees.

Milosevic may still hope for a split within NATO and American public opinion, but his concession will promote the opposite. If NATO's air attacks weren't dissecting Milosevic's future aspirations, he would never have made any such concession. His concession, he must have hoped, would slow the assault.

But, as NATO has demonstrated by bombing Yugoslavia since Jackson and Milosevic's meeting, the attack will cease when he completely ceases.

And that, the United States maintains, is a promise.

Outside looking in on senseless war

THE war in Yugoslavia is entering into a new phase. With almost all Serbian TV stations and transmitters destroyed and so-called "dumb" bombs introduced, the conflict becomes uglier every day. Although opinions differ, most Americans remain passive as long as no American ground troops are involved.

I ask myself why people who know so little about the Balkans and its people think that they know what is right and what is wrong there. Why do few question information presented by NATO, a side whose objectivity cannot be trusted simply because its credibility is at stake? Under scrutiny, its evidence does not hold up, as it has not at many occasions. Recall Pristina stadium, claimed to be a concentration camp. Recall "executed" Albanian leaders. Think of the alleged killing when, in fact, not even a single video of "massacres" has been produced while leading newspapers describe the KLA's hit-and-run war in Kosovo. Can't some news service lend them a camcorder?

There were 2,000 people (Albanians and Serbs) killed during several years of this civil war, started by Albanian extremists whose goals were to separate historically Serbian territory from Serbia and unite it with Albania. There were more than 1,000 civilians, both Albanians and Serbs killed by NATO bombs during this five weeks of bombing.

"Collateral damage," we are told. Serbian kids torn into pieces by precision guided missiles as seen on Greek TV, but not on CNN. Scores of Albanian kids near Pristina killed or disfigured by cluster bombs they have mistaken for toys. Read reports from Paul Watson of the Los Angeles Times. He is one of the few Western correspondents in Kosovo.

Kosovo is becoming uninhabitable, yet we are told that NATO's mission is to return the refugees to their homes.

International laws created after WW II with a sole purpose to prevent another major war are being thoughtlessly violated.

A country is being systematically destroyed for the simple reason that it did not permit stationing of NATO forces in its territory. Please read the Rambouillet "agreement" and what it spelled

Please think of the refugees who need a country to return to, not a scorched, flattened place, uninhabitable for years to come. Please listen to Congressman Tom Campbell who is taking President Clinton to court for his violation of the U.S. Constitution by attacking a sovereign country. Please listen to Jesse

Jackson, who has just secured the release of the three American soldiers being held hostage. Remember they said that the Serbs treated them well. Please let us stop this war before more people are killed and more people lose their homes. Yelena Perhunkova is a graduate student at the UI College of Education. In the rockets' red glare, the imbalance of postmodern war

AND so the war in the Balkans churns on. It's a curiously postmodern sort of war, a battle of sound bites and video clips. Not so curiously, actually — this is the manner in which the United States fights its wars, anymore.

The murky green video of a "smart" bomb or missile arcing through the night toward an indistinct gray-green rectangle on the ground. Flash of fire, plume of smoke.

A Pentagon media-coddler points with his stick at a freeze-frame and somberly intones that a bridge or a munitions bunker or an ammunition factory has been "removed." Loss of human life is "collateral damage," as if we were discussing taking out a home loan on an aging domicile.

It's as if the U.S. military had learned one major lesson from the Vietnam War: that conflict was lost on the TV screens of America. What happens on the ground is secondary compared with what is shown on the evening news.

And so the first thing the Pentagon does is to seize the air waves. Making war becomes a technological wizardry and virtuosity display, which has the effect of reducing war to the level of a video game. Americans understand video games, much like they understand SUVs. (Not that they much understand the disastrous effects of SUVs on the environment or their contribution to the carnage on the roads.)

Americans like to keep things simple. Easily understandable. The concept of the 1912 Serbian invasion and annexation of Kosovo or the myth behind the battle of Kosovo Polje 100 years before Columbus sailed is murkier than the green-gray Pentagon video clips.

This is, after all, the culture that cares more about Pamela Anderson's breasts (and her now-vanished implants) than it does about breast cancer. Just judging from the media coverage.

Though coverage is not the first word that leaps to mind when considering Pamela Anderson.

And it is this American obsession with the simple, this cultural desire to reduce everything to the level of a video game, that means Slobodan Milosevic and the Serbs are involved in a war they can't possibly win.

It has nothing to do with high-tech wizardry or military superiority. America invented, if not the video game itself, the raising of video cultural to a state religion. America, not surprisingly, invented P.R., too.

This is, after all, the culture that cares more about Pamela Anderson's breasts (and her now-vanished implants) than it does about breast cancer.

BEAU ELLIOT

In this battlefield, the Serbs are hopelessly outgunned. And it has nothing to do with their early-'80s-era jets or their Ozzie-and-Harriet-era tanks. The Serbs are fighting with 19th century concepts of boundaries and nationalism. The United States is fighting the 21st century war of computers and videos.

The Serbs might as well be using horse-mounted cavalry. America is using MTV. Welcome to the new globalism, Serbia.

It's as great a mismatch as the Ethiopian spears against the Italian tanks in the '30s. And you have to feel sorry for the Serbian people, whose society is being blasted away under the rain of NATO bombs and missiles.

But it's impossible to feel any sympathy for Milosevic and his crony-fed government. They started this war, in 1991. From Dubrovnik to Vukovar to the siege of Sarajevo to Srbenica, they have proved themselves to be a particularly vicious gang of ultranationalist thugs. They must be stopped. They should have been stopped long ago, but Bill Clinton kept blinking. But also, as the bombs burst and the rockets glare redly over the Serbian sky, it is impossible not to remember this bit from Vietnam: We had to destroy this village to save it.

Susan Demas' April 15 column, "We can't put off the fight for universal human rights," mischaracterized the Unocal oil company's involvement in Afghanistan. The company's involvement in an oil pipeline through the region ended in December 1998, and Unocal has never endorsed the Taliban, as the column asserted. The DI regrets the error.

Man arrested for Columbine gun

A Colorado man was charged with supplying the Littleton gunmen with a semiautomatic handgun.

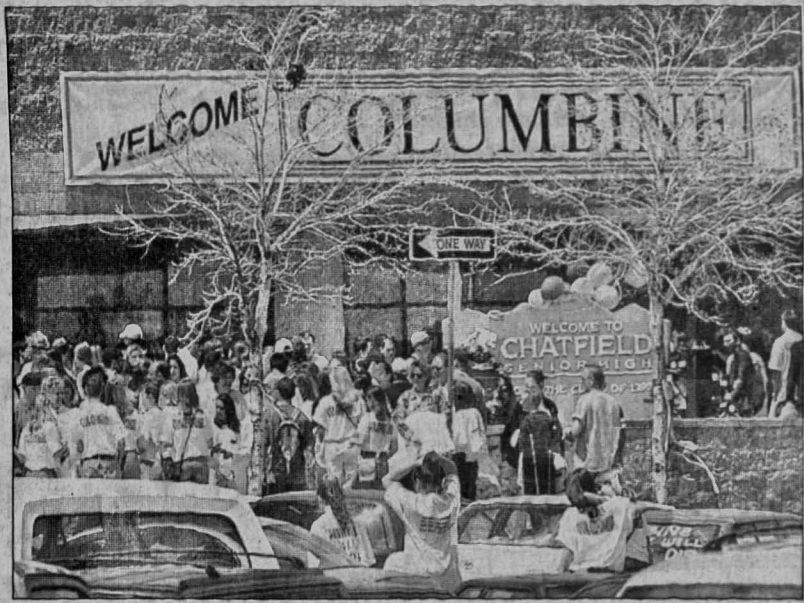

By Robert Weller
Associated Press

LITTLETON, Colo. — A man was arrested Monday on suspicion of supplying the semiautomatic pistol used in the Columbine High massacre.

Mark Manes, 22, surrendered to authorities and was jailed on $15,000 bail for investigation of providing a handgun to a minor. If found guilty, he could be sentenced for up to six years in prison.

"He was the last person who had it before it was supplied to one of our gunmen," said sheriff's spokesman Steve Davis.

Manes was the first person since the massacre 13 days ago to be arrested and accused of helping gunmen Eric Harris and Dylan Klebold arm themselves. Investigators have focused on anyone who could have helped them assemble and position their arsenal of guns and more than 50 bombs.

A large banner welcomes Columbine High School students as they arrive for classes at Chatfield High School in Littleton, Colo., on Monday afternoon.

Investigators said an employee at a pizza parlor at which Harris and Klebold worked served as the middleman who put the two teenagers in touch with Manes. The arrest came 13 days after the attack in which Harris and Klebold sawed-off shotguns used in the massacre, but until Monday they had not tied anyone to the TEC DC-9 semiautomatic handgun.

Also Monday, Columbine students returned to classes at rival Chatfield High School.

For the rest of the school year, Chatfield students get their school for morning sessions. Columbine students, whose school is still a police crime scene, arrive around lunchtime to take over Chatfield for afternoon classes.

Three large banners adorned the school, one reading simply: "Welcome Columbine."

Columbine students Veronica Nuncio and Breanna Cook, both 17-year-old juniors, showed up for their first day of classes in a small car with the words "We are Columbine" on the back window.

"They've been really nice, very supportive," Cook said of the Chatfield students and staff. "I didn't think they would want us here."

Nuncio said she was near the cafeteria when shooting broke out in her school, and she saw people get shot. She said she still has trouble sleeping, and she was nervous about going back to school.

Clinton warns Japanese on steel imports

As the Japanese prime minister visits the White House, the president takes a stern stand on steel imports.

By Sonya Ross
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton told Japan Monday to reduce its steel imports "on a consistent basis" or the United States will act to block those imports.

Following a meeting with Japanese Prime Minister Keizo Obuchi, Clinton told a news conference that the United States would act to keep Japanese steel out of U.S. markets if those imports continue to exceed the levels existing prior to the Asian economic crisis.

"We will take action if steel imports do not return to their pre-crisis levels on a consistent basis," Clinton said. "Playing by the rules of trade is the best way to sustain a consensus for open trade."

The Commerce Department said last week it had determined that Japanese steel companies were engaging in illegal steel dumping — selling abroad at less than home-market prices — and that tariffs of up to 67 percent could be imposed on hot-rolled carbon steel, a widely used product.

Such tariffs, which could be imposed retroactively to mid-November, effectively would price that type of steel out of the U.S. market.

Clinton said it is important that Japan respect both the principles of open trade and fair trade. "I have fought for both objectives. It will help Japan adapt to the challenges of the new global economy," the president said.

Obuchi did not directly address Clinton's warning but said Japan was "swiftly and boldly taking every measure in order to address the difficulties we are facing and to achieve Japan's economic recovery."

The steel troubles aside, Clinton warmly welcomed Obuchi to the White House for the first official visit of a Japanese prime minister in 12 years. He said Obuchi's beginning to work on economic problems immediately after taking office last July was a positive indication that Japan will weather its woes.

"You have been in office less than a year, but already you have taken important steps in meeting the challenges that face you, and reaching the goals that unite us," Clinton said. "With the right choices, Japan and Asia will emerge stronger, more open, more democratic, better adapted to meet the 21st century."

Fans mobbed toy stores to buy merchandise from "Star Wars: Episode I — The Phantom Menace" Monday.

By Michelle Fleeman
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — In a galaxy located somewhere between reason and insanity, 30-year-old construction worker Gil Juarez was spending $100 for a one-way ticket back to childhood.

"You can buy whatever you want right now," Juarez observed of the benefits of adulthood, as he shopped for "Star Wars" action figures, models and children's underwear at a Toys R Us in Los Feliz. "It used to be you had to ask your parents. Now it's just your wife saying, 'No, no, no.' And since I have the money, I say, 'Yeah, yeah, yeah.'"

"Star Wars" fans, collectors and others invaded toy stores Monday just after the stroke of midnight.

The mission for these Storm Troopers armed with credit cards was to become the first in the solar system to buy merchandise from "Star Wars: Episode I — The Phantom Menace," which doesn't reach theaters until May 19. It was a trip to the dark side, literally: People waiting in line in places such as Lawrenceville, N.J., and Brookfield, Ill., when the stores opened at midnight. And when the Earth's single sun rose, another wave arrived to buy the most popular items, including 12-inch Darth Maul villains, Jar Jar Binks space creatures, and a Jabba the Hutt that barfs green play gel ("Not a food item," the box warns.) Fans had been waiting for months to activate the little Darth Maul's lightsaber-swinging action or to press the saddlebag of the nimble steel-like kaadu for realistic running action. But the emperor forbade it. George Lucas, the director, creator and owner of all things "Star Wars," secured strict licensing deals that prevented Hasbro from releasing virtually any information about its Chinese-made products until the determined hour (though Internet rebels had pictures of the stuff posted on their unofficial Web sites for months).

Portland jolts java-giant Starbucks in attack on the corporate latte

The coffee titan's latest shop in the historic Portland, Maine, Old Port district has come under siege.

By Victoria Brett
Associated Press

PORTLAND, Maine — Some people must really be steamed at the Starbucks coffee shop in Portland's harborfront neighborhood of old brick buildings.

The huge custom windows at the Starbucks in the city's Old Port section have been smashed four times in five weeks in what may be a protest against the corporate giant and its coast-to-coast uniformity.

Now, the windows are boarded up, and surveillance cameras will be installed inside and out.

"It looks like a war zone," says Police Chief Michael Chitwood. "I can't remember any time in recent history where one location received so much aggravated criminal vandalism."

Never before has the coffee giant been treated so badly, not even when a grand opening was greeted by protesters in Madison, Wis., and a petition drive was launched to shut down a shop in Larchmont, N.Y.

Many see Starbucks as a big business turning small-town America into a generic landscape of chain stores. Critics also fear Starbucks will snuff out the independent coffee houses in Old Port, a neighborhood of boutiques, art galleries, restaurants and buildings that date to the late 1800s.

For that reason, Amy Therberge would never set foot in Starbucks.

"I want to support local businesses," the coffee-loving Simmons College student said outside Java Joe's, a locally owned coffee house down the street.

Joseph Boskin, director of urban and public policy at Boston University, says the backlash may be greater in older, established cities on the East Coast, where there is resentment when mom-and-pop stores are replaced by corporate chains.

Starbucks began in 1971 in Seattle as a single store. By 1996, there were 1,115 stores; the company's goal is to own 2,000 stores in the United States by next year. It also has stores in Asia, Europe and Canada.

In the last year alone, three Starbucks have come to the Portland area — two downtown and one at the Maine Mall. The Old Port store opened a year ago.

For all the anti-corporate talk, the Old Port Starbucks is hugely profitable and not a bad neighbor. It offers decent wages with health and dental benefits, along with stock options. It also becomes involved in the community through charity events.

NATION BRIEF

Twisters rip Midwest

OKLAHOMA CITY — Tornadoes tore through Oklahoma and Kansas Monday night, wiping out whole neighborhoods, killing at least 18 people and injuring hundreds.

"I heard it, the house started shaking and then the big rumble," said 74-year-old Katherine Burch, who hid in the bathroom of her southwest Oklahoma City home during the storm. "Glass and everything flew in it."

Police and emergency workers combed through the debris as darkness fell, searching for survivors. Crumpled cars littered two highways.

"We are getting so many injuries we are just tagging them and bringing them in," said Shara Findley, a spokeswoman for Hillcrest Health Center in Oklahoma City. "We're getting everything you can think of."

Four people were killed in Midwest City, just southeast of Oklahoma City, said Ben Frizzell, a spokesman for the state Office of Emergency Management; another eight were killed in Chickasha, about 50 miles southwest of Oklahoma City. Six were reported dead in Kansas, according to officials.

In Oklahoma, Midwest Regional Medical Center said it was treating at least 100 injured.

"They are coming in all the doors," said spokeswoman Jill Fraim.

The tornado was one of several that formed over a five-hour period, beginning in southwest Oklahoma and stretching northeast. Damage was reported with some of the storms, which were part of a storm system over the Midwest.

unexpectedly canceled.

"Twenty-five people were planned to speak, and only three did not come — the numbers are not at all bad," Weston said.

The series featured, in one year, more Nobel Peace Prize laureates at the UI than ever before. Desmond Tutu's presentation drew nearly 4,000 spectators to Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

The series was funded by many departments and foundations at the UI, but the major funding came from the Levitt Family Distinguished Lecture Fund, distributed through the College of Law. Weston estimated that the total cost of the series topped $200,000.

Some members of the Global Focus Committee said the UI has been internationally recognized for its efforts to raise human-rights awareness. The Global Focus Web site, for example, has registered more than 300,000 hits since August.

"The UI, through Global Focus, has become a model for the country," said Dorothy Paul, a Global Focus Committee member and a member of the U.N. Association. "We have become a force in human rights."

Union plans could squeeze Bijou

But Bijou officials said they were not represented and were consequently kept in the dark about the plan, Segrest said.

"I was told that student leaders were supposed to be on that committee, and when I found out months later, third hand, that I hadn't even been notified of the committee's existence, I was a little upset," he said.

For his part, Shuman said, he did not foresee any problems with the proposal because he hadn't received a significant amount of negative feedback from student groups.

While Shuman was the only student on the committee, Phillip Jones, vice president for Student Services and dean of students, said students were part of the process because they could fill out surveys and attend focus groups.

"This planning process was designed in order to keep many people involved," Jones said.

The Bijou's relocation would mean moving the theater's offices to a first-floor room and into additional space in the basement of the Union.

The basement space is not a locked facility, so the Bijou would essentially lose 342 square feet of locked space, according to Office of Student Life estimates.

This loss concerns the Bijou because the theater needs locked space for such items as reels of film, computer equipment, archival materials and other film machinery, Segrest said.

Additionally, the Bijou received other bad news Monday. Renovations that had been planned for the Terrace Room of the Union to accommodate both the Bijou's projectors have been postponed due to a $10,000 increase in estimates, Segrest said.

Two remaining options for the renovation include incorporating it into overall building renovations set to occur within two years, or proceeding with the changes as planned during Winter Break.

Segrest said, he feels his organization will "absolutely not" have a role in the final decision making.

"Only because I know the strength of the administrative stronghold on student services," Segrest said.

UISG location. In this possible change, Office of Student Life documents show that Greek and Dance Marathon offices would see a 65 percent and 102 percent increase in space respectively. SCOPE and Lecture Committee would endure no space loss.

The Bijou would see its office space cut almost in half, as it would be moved to two separate areas in the Union.

Nothing is final until Phillip Jones, vice president for Student Services and dean of students, gives his stamp of approval. Jones would not comment on any possible changes in Union office space but said he "will share the information in full when (he has) had an opportunity to get it to where it should be at this point in the game."

For the most part, student groups affected by the proposal say they have been unaware of the possible changes.

"I would want to know what the room is and what it's like," Ryan Barker, SCOPE director and a UI sophomore, said of his organization's new office. "I think that student input would be good."

"I think student leaders should be the leading participants in the process," said Bijou director and UI senior Taylor Segrest.

The leading participant in the process thus far has been an Office of Student Life committee that was formed last semester; it includes representatives from the Union Business Office, student life and one student, Scott Shuman, a UI senior and the former UISG vice president. The committee was specifically created in order to analyze the best way to shuffle Union offices.

"The goal of the committee was just to provide a series of recommendations ... for hopefully obtaining more space or changing some space in the Union," Shuman said.

As the only student on the committee, Shuman's role was to be in contact with the student organizations that would be possibly affected and to report their needs to the committee. Mathis believes the committee did the best it could to involve students in the planning.

"If you really evaluate and assess this and look at what we have to work with, I think it's been a fair assessment," Mathis said.

Many UI students have had an impact on the Union shuffle by filling out surveys and attending focus groups on possible campus-wide restructuring of student facilities, Jones said. The UI has spent $150,000-$200,000 on consultants to garner and analyze student opinion on these matters, he said.

"I expect there will be people who will not understand the process," he added.

The university-wide "purposeful planning process" could finally come to a head on May 10, when Jones presents the final update to UI President Mary Sue Coleman.

"Our next step is to try to put up a plan that satisfies the students and the regents," Jones said.

with Milosevic in Belgrade revealed nothing from the Serb leader that merits serious consideration.

For any "pause" or suspension of NATO air strikes, "we have to see verifiable signs that the Serbs in fact are departing" from Kosovo, the official said.

In Yugoslavia, meanwhile, storekeepers lit their shops with candles and work crews slowly restored electricity in Belgrade Monday after NATO blacked out the Yugoslav capital with "soft bombs" that short-circuited power stations.

It was the first time civilians in Belgrade and elsewhere across Serbia had suffered such a massive blackout since the allied air campaign began.

contemporary American artists.

The prints will represent works from — but not exclusively by — Degas, Rembrandt, Albrecht Dürer, Camille Pissarro, Jasper Johns, Grant Wood, Thomas Hart Benton, Susan Rothenberg and Rockwell Kent.

Margery Stell, president of the Art Print and Drawing Study Club, helped bring the fair to the UI.

"We have been doing this for many years and hope to see a good turnout of people for this free event," she said. "All of these galleries are very good and should prove very interesting for any kind of collector or art fan."

Kathy Edwards, a curator at the museum, stressed the opportunities the fair offers.

"I want people to know what a great chance this is to see lots of original prints for many different prices, from $150 to $1,500," she said. "Many of these prints are done by very famous people who would be familiar to just about any art fan."

Print works started in 15th-century Europe with the invention of engraving and moveable type. The art form has developed in the past couple of years and changed with technology.

Stell admitted that she was a fan of some of the modern works that will be available at the fair.

"I am interested in seeing some of the newer prints that will be available. This event is going to provide a casual venue for many different collectors interested in different forms of print," Stell said.

Hans Ehrenhaft, an Iowa City retired doctor and a long-time collector of print art, said: "This is a great fair to attend to look and buy. Iowa City, like any place, is a good place to buy art as long as you get good connections with dealers."

ARTS BRIEFS

A suspicion with a view

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — Gene Hackman and Morgan Freeman are getting mixed up in a mystery.

The two are to begin filming a remake of the French murder mystery "Garde a Vue" in Puerto Rico later this month.

In the film, to be titled "Under Suspicion," Freeman will play a police chief who investigates the murder of a woman found dead during a street festival. Hackman plays the prominent attorney who finds the woman's body.

"It's basically the story of three people and the complexities that it generates," Hackman said.

The original French film, based on the novel "Brainwashed" by John Wainright, debuted in 1972.

Law student awaits payoff from NBC

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — A law school student is waiting for his payoff from proving Geraldo Rivera wrong.

Last September, on his CNBC show "Rivera Live," Rivera said criminal prosecutions aren't brought for lying about sex, and offered $10,000 to anyone who could prove him wrong. He made the challenge as he discussed the Clinton-Lewinsky scandal.

Steve A. McCloskey, 46, a law student at North Carolina Central University, checked the computer databases and found about a dozen such cases.

McCloskey sued Rivera in March for breach-of-contract when the network wouldn't pay. Three weeks later, NBC agreed to pay McCloskey the $10,000 and an extra $86 for court costs and postage. McCloskey declared victory.

"After winning my first case with somebody like NBC, I hope it's not all downhill from there," he said.

MAJOR LEAGUE BASEBALL

Gubanich's first big league hit is grand

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — John Jaha's bases-loaded walk in the 10th inning gave the Oakland Athletics a wacky 12-11 win Monday over the Boston Red Sox...

Tampa Bay's Wade Boggs slides home safely ahead of the tag by Detroit catcher Brad Ausmus Monday night at Tropicana Field in St. Petersburg, Fla.

Chris O'Meara/Associated Press

Matt Stairs homered to tie the game in the ninth for the As, who trailed 7-0 after two innings and were behind 11-6 in the eighth.

In the 10th, Tim Lincecum led off with a double off Kip Gross (0-1) and Tony Phillips was intentionally walked. Tim Lincecum relieved and threw a wild pitch on his first pitch. Mike MacFarlane walked to load the bases. After Jason Giambi fouled out, Jaha walked on four pitches to end the game.

Gubanich made the most of his first major league hit by making it a grand slam, becoming the first player to do that in 17 years.

Indians 10, Rangers 4

ARLINGTON, Texas — Kenny Lofton went 4-for-5 with four RBIs, including a tiebreaking sacrifice fly to lead Cleveland.

The Indians had 16 hits, including two each by Enrique Wilson, Roberto Alomar, Manny Ramirez, Travis Fryman and Sandy Alomar. Every starter had at least one except Jim Thome, who walked four times, and they all scored.

White Sox 8, Angels 1

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Magglio Ordonez hit a three-run homer and drove in four runs, and Frank Thomas became Chicago's career leader in extra-base hits.

John Snyder (4-1) pitched his first complete game of the year and the second of his career. He held the Angels to four hits and no walks.

Devil Rays 14, Tigers 6

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Dave Martinez singled in each of the first three innings, driving in four runs, as Tampa Bay beat Detroit.

The Devil Rays scored twice during the first inning, three times in the second and third and added six more runs in the fourth to take a 14-6 lead.

Blue Jays 16, Mariners 10

SEATTLE — Carlos Delgado homered twice, drove in five runs and set a Toronto record with five runs scored to give David Wells his first victory in more than two weeks.

Delgado went 3-for-3 with solo homers in the second and ninth innings for his 12th multihomer game. He also walked and was hit by a pitch.

Royals 9, Yankees 3

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Mike Sweeney's three-run homer capped a six-run sixth inning as Kansas City beat New York to split a four-game series.

The Royals had 44 hits in the four games and outthemed the defending world champions, 11-3.

Kansas City starter Jose Rosado held the Yankees hitless for the first three innings but was knocked out of the game with one out in the fourth when Bernie Williams' hard grounder bounced once and struck him in the left shoulder.

National League

Dodgers 7, Expos 0

MONTREAL — Chan Ho Park and Alan Mills combined on a seven-hit shutout as Los Angeles beat Montreal, giving Dodgers manager Davey Johnson his 1,000th career win.

Park (3-2) struck out eight and scattered five hits in seven innings. Alan Mills pitched the last two innings to complete the Dodgers' second shutout of the season.

Mets 5, Astros 3

NEW YORK — Rick Reed pitched six solid innings in his first start since coming off the disabled list to lead the New York Mets to their sixth straight win.

Reed (2-0), making his first start since being placed on the DL with a slightly torn calf muscle April 12, allowed three runs and five hits while striking out six. At one point, the right-hander retired 11 straight against the National League's best hitting team.

Reds 4, Diamondbacks 3

CINCINNATI — Mike Cameron broke out of an 0-for-13 slump with a bases-loaded single in the ninth inning, giving Cincinnati a victory over Arizona.

Cameron hit the second pitch from Darren Holmes (2-1) off the wall in right field to snap a 3-3 tie and end the Reds' three-game losing streak.

Pirates 9, Giants 8

PITTSBURGH — Brian Giles' second

homer of the game tied it and Brant Brown completed Pittsburgh's four-ninth-inning comeback with a game-winning single against Robb Nen as the Pirates beat San Francisco.

Jeff Kent became the first San Francisco player in eight years to hit for the cycle and went 5-for-5. But the Pirates' Jason Kendall also went 5-for-5 and Giles had three hits and drove in five runs.

Braves 4, Cardinals 2

ATLANTA — The Atlanta Braves, extending Mark McGwire's homerless streak, rallied for their sixth straight victory when pinch-hitter Brian Hunter hit an RBI double in the eighth inning and went on to beat St. Louis.

The Cardinals went ahead 2-1 in the top of the eighth on Ray Lankford's second homer of the season, but the Braves came back with three runs against rookie Jose Jimenez and the St. Louis bullpen.

Padres 9, Phillies 3

PHILADELPHIA — Ruben Rivera had three hits and three RBIs, including one of the longest homers in Veterans Stadium history, as San Diego beat Philadelphia to break a five-game losing streak.

Rivera's second-inning homer traveled 468 feet and landed in the next-to-highest deck in left. Only two other players, Pittsburgh's Willie Stargell in 1971 and the Mets' Butch Huskey in 1997, have homered into that area.

Brewers 6, Marlins 4 (13 inn.)

MIAMI — Fernando Vina hit a two-run homer in the top of the 13th inning to give Milwaukee a victory over Florida before the smallest Marlins crowd ever at Pro Player Stadium.

Archie Corbin (0-1) walked Rich Becker leading off the inning and Vina hit a 3-2 pitch over the right-field wall for his first home run of the season.

How to spell Guerrero? With plenty of E's

■ Vladimir Guerrero is a talented hitter, but his defense leaves a lot to be desired.

MONTREAL (AP) — Vladimir Guerrero was known for a hot bat when he joined the Montreal Expos two years ago. These days, his glove draws attention.

After just one month, he leads the major leagues in errors, with nine — an astonishing number for an outfielder.

"I'm not worried or too concerned," he said. "But I want to be sure this doesn't become a problem or a habit because some of the errors that I've made have been routine plays where I tried to be too aggressive."

Who knows, maybe it's in the genes? His brother, Wilton, the Expos' second baseman, is tied for second in the majors in errors with seven.

No outfielder has reached 20 in one season since Bob Johnson of the 1935 Philadelphia Athletics. The post-World War II high is 19, by Lou Brock (1966) and Chili Davis (1988).

Outfielders have reached double figures just 12 times in the '90s. Before Guerrero made 17 last year, the highest total had been 13 by Sammy Sosa ('90 and '95).

Even before an error against St. Louis on Friday night, Guerrero became the first outfielder with eight in one month since George Bell in July 1988.

"I'm only concerned about what's happened, I'm not concerned about what could happen," Expos manager Felipe Alou said. "I know he's not that bad. Whether he's careless or lacks concentration for any reason right now, that's something else."

E-9 has popped up next to Guerrero's name two more times than W has popped up next to Montreal in the standings.

A day after his latest error, Guerrero worked out with Montreal coaches Pete Mackanin and Gene Glynn before batting practice, forming a pile of balls along the outfield wall after fielding and catching one ball after another from a ball-throwing machine.

"He asked to go out there," Alou said. "He works out as hard as anybody we've had here."

"I want to be sure this doesn't become a problem or a habit because some of the errors that I've made have been routine plays where I tried to be too aggressive."

— Vladimir Guerrero

While two of his errors this season were on throws, 30 of Guerrero's 38 errors since the start of the 1997 season have been fielding mistakes, a staggering number for an outfielder.

His ninth error this season came on a drive by St. Louis' Placido Polanco. Guerrero misjudged the ball off the bat, turning to his right as the ball sliced away from him toward the right-field corner. He was forced to turn around completely and change directions, and the ball popped out of his glove.

The 23-year-old Dominican hit a team-record 38 homers, drove in 109 runs and batted .324 in 1998, his second major league season. He was hitting .281 with four homers and 19 RBIs going into Monday night's game against Los Angeles.

Chiasson killed in automobile accident

By Tom Foreman Jr.
Associated Press

RALEIGH, N.C. — Hours after his team was eliminated from the Stanley Cup playoffs, Carolina Hurricanes defenseman Steve Chiasson was killed when his pickup truck flipped on a dark, lonely road.

The 32-year-old player was found early Monday morning in north Raleigh, and the State Highway Patrol says he might have been speeding after drinking alcohol.

The truck rolled and ejected Chiasson, who was not wearing a seat belt and had been driving alone, investigators said. Weather was not a factor and no other vehicles were believed to have been involved.

"This is a tragedy that is impossible to put into words," said Jim Rutherford, Carolina president and general manager.

Hours earlier in Boston, the Bruins ended the Hurricanes' season with a 2-0 victory in Game 6. On Friday night, Chiasson scored the first goal in a 4-3 double-overtime loss to the Bruins.

"When you work together in our environment, you have a family among players and an extended family among wives and children that go to school together and play on sports teams together," Carolina coach Paul Maurice said at a news conference.

"It's really an environment unlike any other. When a tragedy like this has happened, unfortunately ... there's no other way to put it except for we've lost a member of our family. It's a very painful time for all of us."

Added NHL commissioner Gary Bettman: "When a young life ends prematurely, when a young family loses a husband and a father, words cannot begin to express our sorrow."

Team spokesman Chris Brown said two cases of beer and water, sports drinks, milk and vegetable juice were served on the team's charter flight to Raleigh.

He didn't know how much beer, if any, Chiasson drank. After the plane landed about 1 a.m. at Raleigh-Durham International Airport, the players got into their vehicles and left.

"When you get on the plane, you're pretty disappointed," said Brown, fighting tears. "We lost a playoff series, but you figure out that it doesn't really matter. You get a dose of reality."

NBA ROUNDUP

Late run helps N.Y. qualify for playoffs

NEW YORK (AP) — Patrick Ewing and the Knicks made things difficult for themselves, but still qualified for the postseason for the 12th consecutive year, blowing several double-digit leads in a 95-88 victory over Boston.

It took a late 9-0 run spearheaded by Allan Houston for the Knicks to finally put away a Boston team that came back from deficits of 16, 12 and 10 points.

Ewing, hobbled by a sore Achilles' tendon that restricted his mobility, still managed to tally 27 points and a season-high 19 rebounds in one of his best performances of the season.

Wizards 113, Nets 102

WASHINGTON — In a rare run-and-gun game for this truncated NBA season, Rod Strickland had 24 points and 13 assists and Mitch Richmond added 24 points as Washington won in a mop-up game with New Jersey.

The two worst teams in the Atlantic Division played their next-to-last game as if it were either the All-Star game or a throwback to the 1980s: lots of moves, lots of dunks, lots of fast breaks, tons of turnovers and not much defense.

The Wizards took control with a 17-6 run starting late in the third quarter, just as Nets point guard Stephon Marbury sat down with his fourth personal foul.

Pistons 115, Bulls 71

CHICAGO — Playing in Michael Jordan's old stomping grounds, Grant Hill looked like the Air Apparent on Monday, scoring 14 of his 22 points in the third quarter as Detroit routed the Bulls. It was the sixth straight victory for the Pistons, who are 1½ games behind idle Atlanta for the fourth playoff spot.

Kings 112, Nuggets 104

DENVER — The Sacramento Kings clinched their second playoff spot in 13 years as Vlade Divac had 25 points, seven rebounds and five assists in a victory over Denver. Reserve Predrag Stojakovic added 17 points and Scot Pollard had 10 rebounds.

Widow of ex-Celtics star seeking millions

■ Reggie Lewis' doctors are being sued for malpractice. Their lawyers say cocaine use contributed to Lewis' death.

By Alexis Chiu
Associated Press

BOSTON — Six years after Boston Celtics star Reggie Lewis died while shooting baskets, a malpractice suit went to trial Monday in an attempt by his widow to restore his reputation and collect the millions he could have made.

Donna Harris-Lewis contends her husband's doctors, some of the city's most respected physicians, misdiagnosed and mistreated the basketball player's fatal heart rhythm disturbance.

The doctors say Lewis used cocaine and lied about it, making an accurate diagnosis impossible.

The lawsuit is against Dr. Gilbert Mudge, who led the specialists, and Drs. Mark Creager and Peter Friedman, who were consultants. A third consultant, Dr. John Rutherford, recently reached an undisclosed settlement with Harris-Lewis.

"If the proper treatment had been given, Reggie Lewis would be here today," said plaintiff attorney Robert Harley.

Harris-Lewis is suing to recover money Lewis would have made had he lived past 27. Estimates of his potential earnings have ranged from $40 million to more than $100 million. Her attorneys contend Lewis could have continued playing by wearing a defibrillator or taking medication, or could have held other positions like broadcaster or product pitchman.

William Dailey Jr., Mudge's attorney, said in his opening statement that Lewis lied to doctors about his cocaine use until two weeks before he died, and the lack of full disclosure early in the treatment process made a proper diagnosis impossible.

"It would be the same as if I went in with a stomach ache and never told my doctor I'd eaten a two-week-old meatloaf," Dailey said.

Harris-Lewis has adamantly denied her husband ever used drugs.

But Dailey said there was strong motivation to lie: Lewis' three-year, $9 million contract would have been nullified by illegal drug use.

Superior Court Judge Thayer Fremont-Smith imposed a gag order and none of the main participants in the case would comment publicly.

But the story of Lewis' death and the finger-pointing that followed has played itself out very publicly in a city that loved its Celtics and adored the team's brightest star when he died.

In 1993, Lewis collapsed during a playoff game against the Charlotte Hornets. A "Dream Team" of New England Baptist Hospital doctors assembled by the Celtics diagnosed him with arrhythmia, a potentially life-threatening, career-ending heart condition.

The grim conclusion led Lewis to seek a second opinion from one of Boston's most respected cardiologists — Mudge, of Brigham and Women's Hospital.

Mudge reported that Lewis suffered from a neurological disorder that causes fainting spells. With proper treatment, he said, Lewis could return to basketball. Three months later, Lewis died while shooting hoops in the offseason.

Give another chance. Give blood.

Sacramento improved to 25-23 with a 111-100 victory over Phoenix on Sunday night, ending the Kings' NBA-record streak of 15 straight losing seasons. They have clinched at least a 500 record, the first time they've managed that since 1982-83 — when they were still based in Kansas City.

Cuban manager not afraid of team members defecting

ORIOLES-CUBA

 There was a heavy police presence outside the ballpark to monitor demonstrations, and Immigration and Naturalization Service agents stood by just in case of potential defections.
 Inside the park, fans had trouble keeping track of the Cuban hitters. Castro, who scored three times, lined a triple that highlighted a four-run second inning as Cuba batted around.
 Harold Baines hit a two-run double in the first, right after a 56-minute rain delay in the middle of the inning. But that was about all that went right for Baltimore as Scott Kamieniecki was hit hard.
 Orioles pitchers never retired the Cubans in order, and Baltimore fielders made three errors. Albert Belle went 0-for-3 and struck out twice.

 Instead, the fans standing behind the Cuban dugout on the third-base side had a field day. Waving flags and banners, blowing whistles and dancing, they watched their club win first-ever game between the Cubans and a major league team in the United States.
 Danel Castro hit two triples and scored four runs. Ariel Pestano had three of Cuba's 18 hits, the most against the Orioles since opening day.
 By the time Morales homered, more than half of the fans had left. He raised his arms high as he reached home plate, the Cubans streamed from the dugout to greet him. Delino DeShields hit a three-run homer in the Baltimore ninth.

 The Orioles did everything to make their visitors feel at home. Along with playing Cuban music over the public-address system, Boog's Bar-B-Q Pit — run by former Baltimore star Boog Powell — added rice and beans to the menu.
 The Bird mascot greeted the Cuban players as they were introduced, and fans gave them nine ovations. In fact, the only booing before the game was directed at Orioles manager Ray Miller.
 A light drizzle fell at the start of the game and it was halted in the bottom of the first inning.
 Clearly, though, there was not going to be a rainout, not after all the trouble baseball went through to arrange this game. And, there was no curfew — this was the Cubans' last trip into town, of course.

Though baseball officials and police seemed somewhat tense because of the possibility of defections, the Cubans seemed to treat the topic lightly.
 In a pregame news conference, Cuban manager Alfonso Urquiola was asked whether he was afraid one of his players might run into the Baltimore dugout chasing a foul ball and never return.
 Urquiola laughed, as did Cuban stars Antonio Pacheco and Linares.
 "We are not concerned about that," Urquiola said through a translator. "We have no fear, otherwise we wouldn't be here."
 Unlike in Havana, where Castro sat in a front-row box, there was no obvious presence of American government officials. U.S. Senators Christopher Dodd, Patrick Leahy and Paul Sarbanes attended, but sat in private boxes on upper levels.

Iowa alumnus could announce his final football season in 1999

so I drew on my wealth of experience from Iowa Falls," Holzhammer joked. "I still don't know how he found out about me."
 Holzhammer did not know the spring game would be used as an audition. Elliott asked him to announce the games that fall and after the football season, Holzhammer was asked to continue on with basketball.
 "And that is what I have been doing for 25 years," Holzhammer said of his volunteer position.
 "He has done a good job of it," Wine said. "I personally like his style. He's very professional and fair to visiting teams. I know he had a good reputation among Big Ten coaches. In basketball, the coaches got to know him. (Indiana coaching legend) Bob Knight knows him well and thinks a lot of him."
 "P.A. announcers have an impact on the image of the school and Bob has given us a good image. He's a huge Hawkeye fan, but he eliminates that."

 Holzhammer follows a strict pregame routine to ensure that the Hawkeyes and their opponents are presented in the best possible light.
 "I have taken it very seriously that a person's name is the most prized possession they have," Holzhammer said. "I do my best to pronounce names correctly."
 Holzhammer said that before games, he does his homework. If he discovers that a foreign player will be on the visiting team, Holzhammer will meet with a university faculty member who is familiar with that player's home country.
 "I will bring my tape recorder with me and have them read the names into the recorder," Holzhammer said. "Then I can practice saying them and I write them in my own phonetic spelling. But (the job) is more than just the names of who scores."
 Holzhammer receives a general outline that has been developed by an administrative assistant about what to say, and throughout the game, he receives announcements that have been screened and cleared.

 "No one has said what I can or can't say, but we do have a policy that any announcements have to be university-related," Holzhammer said.
 During the games, Holzhammer has his eyes focused on the action.
 "In football, I do have two people there to identify numbers, called spotters," Holzhammer said. "In basketball, there is just another person there to answer the phone for emergencies, public safety issues and media clarification."
 Other than that, he is on his own.
 "It gets a little hectic in the (football) booth," Holzhammer said. "With the noise all around, you have to concentrate."
 That concentration and dedication has led to special recognition for Holzhammer.
 "In 1989, I was named an honorary letterman," Holzhammer said. "The letterman vote you in, it is a big honor. I cherish it very much."

Father Bob, who is an alumnus of the UI, was also recognized prior to the final home basketball game of the 1998-99 season.
 "It was a total surprise," he said. "I announced the graduating seniors and their parents, then heard this voice saying that there was another person to recognize."
 "I was presented with an autographed basketball ... and my three grandchildren gave me roses."
 But when Holzhammer leaves his P.A. duties for good, he will take much more with him than just those gifts.
 "One of the things I have found most enjoyable is the associations I have made with the players and coaches. They have become very meaningful," Holzhammer said. "I have been asked to counsel students, to officiate their marriages and to baptize their children. You realize you are getting older when asked to do that, but the associations are tremendous."

when we beat them."
 Mullen's play was up and down like the rest of the team, but she put everything together at the conference meet, which was held in West Lafayette, Ind.
 The Peosta, Iowa, native placed third in the 72-hole event, bettering her finish at last year's tournament by eight spots.
 Mullen said she hopes her pattern of improvement at the Championships translates into a first-place finish next spring.
 "I have to go for that, that's the goal," she said. "I want to do better leave the team for personal and academic reasons.

 Mowat, who finished tied for 14th at last weekend's Championships, will be transferring to Louisville in search of an academic program that better suits her career interests.
 Mowat's departure leaves Mullen, junior Kelli Carney, Spero, freshmen Sasha Carney and Melissa Harjes and at least three new recruits coming in for the fall season.
 Already signed are Heather Suhr, a three-time Wisconsin state champion, Leslie Gumm from Galesburg, Ill., and Mollie Shearen from St. Paul.
 Thomason said she expects to sign one or two more recruits before the start of the fall season in September.

 Until then, the current Hawkeyes will be spending the summer improving their weaknesses by playing in various tournaments around the Midwest.
 "Summer is a time where they can work on their individual games," Thomason said. "That's when you really develop your game."
 Iowa will open up its fall season in Myrtle Beach, a site that was favorable to the team in the spring.

Protesting Castro's Cuba

If it's not magic, the pros won't use it

Every major and minor league team uses a mysterious pudding-like product to rub down baseballs before games.

SEMINOLE, Fla. (AP) — To his neighbors, Burns Bintliff is a retired New Jersey Turnpike maintenance contractor. To major league players, who may not even know his name, he's the supplier of a silky, chocolate pudding-like product known as "magic mud."

Umpires at every major and minor league ballpark in America and Canada use the mud, called Lena Blackburne Rubbing Mud, to take the shine off baseballs before each game.

Shiny balls, straight out of their plastic wrapping, are no good, professionals say. Pitchers can't get a good grip and hitters are sometimes blinded when the sun or indoor lighting hits the too-white surface. Umpires say a little dab of Bintliff's mud removes the shine off balls without scratching or denting the surface.

Bintliff's product is so superior to other muds, professionals say, that in 1969 it was permanently enshrined in the Hall of Fame at Cooperstown, N.Y.

"There's something about this mud," retired major league umpire Bill Kinnaman told the St. Petersburg Times for its Monday editions. "I don't know how to explain it. It takes the shine off without getting the ball excessively dark."

According to Bintliff's wife, Doris, Russell Aubrey "Lena" Blackburne was a major league infielder with the White Sox and later, a coach for the then-Philadelphia A's.

At the time, the mid-1930s, teams used a variety of substances to rub baseballs — tobacco juice, shoe polish, dirt from the baseball field or a combination — but nothing they tried gave the balls the right look or feel.

Blackburne searched for the perfect rubbing compound until one day, according to legend, he found mud he liked in a secret body of water, probably in the northeast.

By 1938, he was supplying the mud to all American League teams. Because he was a die-hard American League fan, he refused to sell the mud to National League teams until the mid-1950s. Since then, every major and minor league team has used only the product. One container, which weighs a little more than 16 ounces, will usually last a season.

A.L. suspends Tigers' Moehler for 10 days

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Brian Moehler isn't even bothering to appeal his automatic 10-day suspension for scuffing baseballs.

The Detroit Tigers pitcher was notified of the penalty by AL president Gene Budig on Monday, two days after Moehler was ejected from a game against Tampa Bay by umpire Larry Barnett, who said the right-hander doctored baseballs with sandpaper.

"The reason why we didn't appeal was I wanted to get this behind us," Moehler said before the Tigers' game Monday night at Tampa Bay. "Whether we appeal or don't appeal, people have their own opinions. It comes down to me wanting to pitch and soon. I think that's the best thing to do and just move on."

Hamilton reportedly heading to NBA

STORRS, Conn. — All-America forward Richard Hamilton, who led Connecticut to its first national championship in March, reportedly will enter the NBA draft.

ESPN reported Monday that Hamilton will announce at a news conference at 2 p.m. CDT Tuesday that he will leave the school. Tim Tolokan, UConn's sports information director, would not confirm the report, but said a news conference has been scheduled for Gampel Pavilion.

Concord track sets up trust fund for victims

CONCORD, N.C. — The track where three fans were killed by flying debris is offering counseling for other spectators, and has set up a trust fund for the victims.

Eight other fans were injured Saturday night when parts from a three-car wreck at more than 200 mph during an Indy Racing League event flew over a safety fence and into the grandstand.

Lowe's Motor Speedway officials also said Monday that they probably would increase the height of the safety fences surrounding the 1.5-mile superspeedway in response to the crash during the VisionAir 500.

Rose back in baseball

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — Pete Rose, baseball's banned career hits leader, will be back in uniform on a field next week.

SPORTS BRIEFS

The Sacramento Steelheads of the Western League said Monday they are hiring Rose as a special hitting and infield instructor for spring training. The Steelheads start their first season May 21.

Rose, expected at camp May 20, agreed to a lifetime ban from organized baseball in August 1989 after an investigation by baseball commissioner A. Bartlett Giamatti, who concluded the then-Cincinnati Reds manager bet on games involving his team, a charge Rose still denies.

His ban does not apply to the Steelheads because the Western League is not affiliated with organized baseball — the major leagues and the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues, which is the governing body for the minors.

Pats will stay in Bay State

BOSTON — With a $70 million plan coalescing in the Statehouse to help the New England Patriots make infrastructure improvements at Foxboro Stadium, the team plans to stay in Massachusetts.

A team spokesman also quashed rumors that owner Robert Kraft planned to sell the team.

"I have said flatly that the Pats are not for sale," Stacey James said Monday. "We plan on staying in Massachusetts for a long time."

The team has not confirmed that it will stay in Foxboro, although there don't appear to be any other viable alternatives in the Bay State.

Dodgers top luxury tax list

NEW YORK — Major league teams finally received their estimated luxury tax bills Monday, and the Los Angeles Dodgers had the highest projected payment at $5.15 million.

The New York Yankees were No. 2 at $4.25 million, followed by Baltimore at $4.07 million, Atlanta at $772,000 and the New York Mets at $525,000.

Projections were based on opening-day payrolls and already have changed significantly.

The luxury tax, agreed to in the settlement of the 1994-95 strike and scheduled to go out of existence after this season, was designed to slow spending by the high-revenue teams but has had only a slight effect, prompting renewed calls for a salary cap by some low- and mid-revenue teams.

Tax is assessed on the teams with the five highest payrolls at a rate of 34 percent on the amount above the midpoint between payrolls Nos. 5 and 6.

Former major leaguer Adcock dies at 71

Joe Adcock hit four home runs in a game, but probably will be remembered more for a homer that didn't count as one.

Adcock, the first baseman for the 1950s Milwaukee Braves championship teams, died Monday at his home in Coushatta, La. He was 71, and had Alzheimer's disease.

With the homer that wasn't, Adcock broke up baseball's longest no-hitter.

On May 26, 1959, Pittsburgh's Harvey Haddix retired the first 36 Braves he faced — pitching 12 perfect innings.

In the 13th, the Braves' Felix Mantilla reached on an error and moved to second on a sacrifice by Eddie Mathews. After Hank Aaron was walked intentionally, Adcock hit the ball out of Milwaukee's County Stadium to end the no-hitter and win the game.

But the score was listed as 1-0 because Adcock inadvertently passed Aaron on the bases. Instead of a homer, Adcock was credited with a one-run double.

Final two IOC cases to be reviewed today

LAUSANNE, Switzerland — The last two cases involving IOC members in the Salt Lake scandal will be reviewed by the committee's leadership today with the help of new evidence.

The International Olympic Committee's new ethics commission, meeting for the first time Monday, sent the cases of Australia's Phil Coles and South Korea's Kim Un-yong to the ruling executive board.

Kim is an executive board member and the highest-ranking official implicated in the scandal.

L.A. accused of holding illegal Cuban tryouts

BOSTON — The Los Angeles Dodgers denied accusations they held secret tryouts in Cuba, but two Cuban minor league players say the team scouted them in their homeland, arranged their escapes and then ordered them to lie about it.

First baseman Juan Carlos Diaz, 23, and outfielder Josue Perez, 21, have asked major league baseball to declare them free agents on grounds they were signed illegally, and at less than market value. The Boston Globe reported Sunday.

Protesters create chaos in Camden Yards

■ Cuba defeated the Orioles 12-6 Monday in Baltimore in an event marred by anti-Castro protesters.

By Ben Walker
 Associated Press

BALTIMORE — The Baltimore Orioles knew the Cuban players could hit hard. What they didn't know was that the Cuban second-base umpire could hit, too.

The umpire, Cesar Valdez body-slammed and punched an anti-Castro demonstrator in shallow center field Monday night as the Cuban all-star team embarrassed Baltimore 12-6.

Omar Linares and Danel Castro each had four hits, and Andy Morales spread his arms wide as he steamed around the bases after a three-run homer in the ninth inning. Reliever Norge Vera pitched seven strong innings as the Cubans avenged a 3-2, 11-inning loss at Havana on March 28.

The Orioles, whose AL-worst 7-17 record belies their payroll of more than $78 million, were completely outplayed by a team whose players make a total of about $2,250.

The crowd at Camden Yards was already booing the home team and the Cubans led 6-3 in the rain-delayed exhibition when it became a real slugfest in the fifth inning.

An inning after three protesters ran into the outfield and were arrested, a man jumped onto the field down the right-field line. Carrying a sign that said, "Freedom — Strike Out Against Castro," he headed toward short center.

But Valdez, one of three Cubans on the six-man umpiring crew, took exception and charged after the fan.

They tangled briefly, then Valdez lifted the fan over his head and threw him down to the ground hard. Valdez began swinging, and appeared to land a couple of blows to the man's head, before Orioles left fielder B.J. Surhoff rushed in and pulled Valdez off.

Police said the four people who ran onto the field — all from Miami — were arrested on a charge of trespassing.

At least one of the protesters wore a T-shirt that said, "40 Years Is Too Much," an apparent reference to Fidel Castro's leadership of Cuba. As police led one fan past the Cuban dugout and the Cuban delegation, he yelled at them while the Cubans booed and gave him the thumbs-down sign.

Just like every other team, the Cubans proved they could run around the bases against the Orioles, too.

So this became the most curious question at Camden Yards: Would any of the Cuban all-stars run away before

REVEREND ROBERT HOLZHAMMER • AN IOWA LEGEND

Twenty-five years after his first Iowa game, Rev. Robert Holzhammer is truly the Voice of the Hawkeyes

By Lisa Colonno
 The Daily Iowan

"Hello everyone. ... Welcome to Carver-Hawkeye Arena ..."

The unmistakable voice falls upon the ears of 15,500 Iowa basketball fans and draws their attention to the scorer's table. There sits Reverend Robert Holzhammer, as he has for the past 25 years.

But at the end of the 1999 basketball season, the seat behind the microphone was left vacant.

Holzhammer, 76, has served as the public address announcer for Iowa men's basketball and football games since 1974. Although he will continue to announce football for at least one more season, his booming voice will no longer bounce off the rafters of Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

"His voice is associated with Iowa football and basketball," said Phil Haddy, the Iowa men's sports information director. "He will be missed."

Last fall, Holzhammer composed a letter to basketball coach Tom Davis, telling him that when Davis left, Holzhammer would leave with him. Davis' contract was not extended beyond last season, meaning Holzhammer's final game at the mic was Feb. 23 against Northwestern.

"I wanted to let the new coach start with a new announcer," Holzhammer said.

He also said the length of the basketball season was a reason for stepping away from his announcing position.

"The season goes on and on, from November to March, and I want to have the opportunity to go somewhere warm (during that time)," said Holzhammer, who is also the retired Rector of Trinity Episcopal Church in Iowa City, where he served for 28 years until 1990.

"Football occurs in a short period of time, and I didn't want to put the athletic department in a position to have to find two people (for replacements). We'll meet after the 1999 season and evaluate the situation at that time," he said.

The last time the Iowa athletic department found itself in this situation, Lute Olson had just started as the new basketball coach and Bob Cummings recently took over the football program.

The announcer at that time, Bud Suter, had a kidney transplant in 1968 and died in 1974. The P.A. announcing position was left vacant and Bump Elliott, the athletics director at the time, needed someone to announce the spring football game of 1974.

"I knew 'Father Bob' did some P.A. work," said George Wine, who was sports information director for the UI from 1968-1993. "I attended the same church and I was aware of his interest in P.A. announcing. He had the type of voice that was good for that area and I suggested to Bump Elliott to replace Suter with Father Bob. No one else was under consideration and now he's been doing it for 25 years."

Holzhammer had his first taste of announcing in Iowa Falls, where he filled in as the Iowa Falls Cadets' football announcer and eventually took over the job for about three years.

When he moved to Iowa City in 1962 to become Rector of Trinity Episcopal Church, Holzhammer would make calls to the hospital and then frequent football practice.

"I always say it was not the call of God, but the athletic department, that got me here," Holzhammer said.

Father Bob got the call from Elliott in 1974.

"The athletics director called me and asked me to do the spring game.

Herrig awaits today's draft

Former Iowa center/forward Amy Herrig should finally learn of her fate in professional basketball today when the WNBA holds its player draft, a week after it was uncertain whether the three-year-old league would even have a season.

The draft was originally scheduled for April 27, but was postponed because of a disagreement between the league and the players union over a collective bargaining agreement.

Herrig

However, an agreement has been made and it is time for Herrig to play ball.

"It feels really good," Herrig said. "I am really excited for it."

The WNBA will provide beginning-to-end draft coverage exclusively over the Internet. A live RealAudio broadcast of the draft can be heard on WNBA.com beginning at 10 a.m. CDT.

The third annual draft is scheduled for four rounds, with each of the 12 teams having one pick in each round.

Five teams have expressed interest in Herrig, an honorable mention All-American, including Sacramento, Detroit, Washington and expansion teams Orlando and Minnesota.

Herrig is expected to become the ninth Hawkeye to play in the WNBA. Former Iowa players Tangela Smith, Nadine Domond and Angela Hamblin were chosen in last year's draft.

If she is not selected today, Herrig said she will test the waters at teams' free agent camps in the upcoming weeks.

Herrig averaged 18.7 points and 11.3 rebounds per game as a senior.

Iowa hopeful for future

By Eric Petersen
 The Daily Iowan

Taking into consideration the lack of experience and depth the Iowa women's golf team had going into the 1998-99 season, its ninth-place finish at last weekend's Big Ten Championships might not be as bad as it seems.

Coach Diane Thomason lost 1998 Big Ten co-champion Stacey Bergman, who transferred to Tennessee, leaving five players on the roster and only four with collegiate experience.

The Hawkeyes made the most of what they had, though, crowning two individual tournament champions (sophomore Meghan Spero and junior M.C. Mullen, on separate courses in Myrtle Beach, S.C.) and finishing in the top five in four of their 10 tournaments.

"Overall, (the season) was better than what we expected," Mullen said. "We had a lot of inexperience and not as much depth as we would have liked, but we frustrated a lot of teams

COLORADO ROCKIES 6, CHICAGO CUBS 1

Rockies end Cubs' winning ways

By Rick Gano
 Associated Press

■ Colorado went on a scoring binge in the sixth inning to help Brian Bohanon continue his streak of wins and to end Chicago's.

CHICAGO — Unbeaten Brian Bohanon won his fifth straight game and the Colorado Rockies scored five runs in the sixth inning to stop the Chicago Cubs' five-game winning streak, 6-1 Monday night.

Bohanon (5-0) went eight-plus innings, allowing five hits and one run, and also had two singles and an RBI. Vinny Castilla had two doubles and a single for the Rockies, who finished with 12 hits.

The game was delayed for nearly five minutes in the bottom of the eighth when fans littered the field with debris and various objects, including a baseball, after a controversial call at second base.

With Mark Grace on first, Sammy Sosa bounced to third, and replays showed that second baseman Mike Lansing dropped Castilla's throw. But umpire Jerry Crawford ruled that Lansing had possession before dropping the ball and that Grace was out, bringing Cubs manager Jim Riggleman out of the dugout to argue and sending the crowd into a litter-tossing rage.

The Rockies had six hits and batted around in the sixth, a rally that began when Lansing singled off the leg of Steve Trachsel (1-2), with the ball ricocheting into foul ground off first base. Grace retrieved the ball but his flip to Trachsel was late.

Larry Walker singled Lansing to third and Dante Bichette followed with a sacrifice fly. Walker went to second on the play and scored on Castilla's double.

Trachsel walked Todd Helton intentionally but Neifi Perez spoiled the strategy with an RBI single. After Henry Blanco struck out, Bohanon singled to make it 5-1 and finish Trachsel, who apparently had a brief verbal exchange with a fan behind the Cubs dugout as he headed down the steps.

Darryl Hamilton then greeted reliever Dan Serafini with another run-scoring single.
