China demands retribution

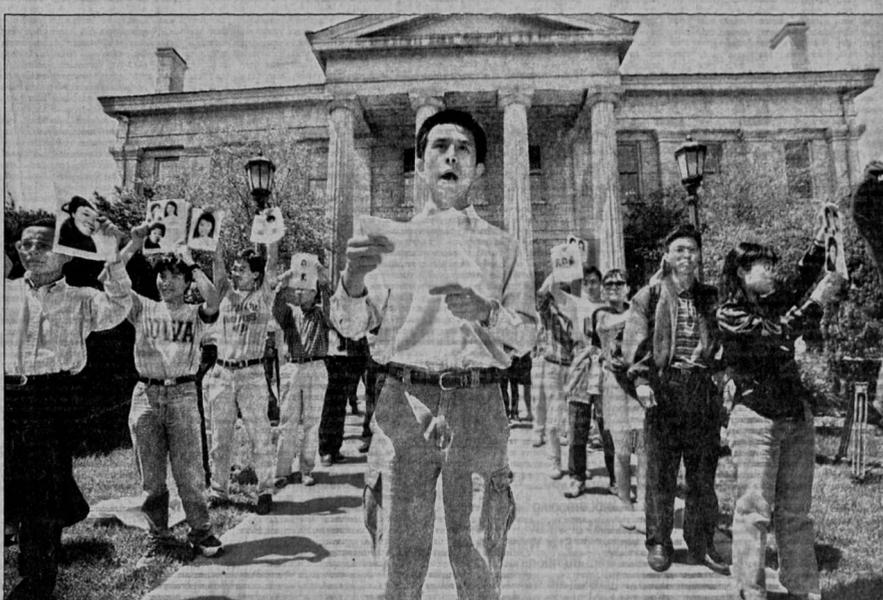

■ The foreign minister demands an "open and official" apology for the attack on the Chinese Embassy.

By John Leicester
 Associated Press

BEIJING — China broke off military ties and other contacts with the United States Monday and demanded that those responsible for NATO's bombing of its embassy in Yugoslavia be "severely" punished. Thousands of protesters hurled rocks at the U.S. Embassy in Beijing for a third day, with some dragging and kicking a life-size effigy of a U.S. soldier with an American flag on his chest.

Chinese authorities allowed waves of protesters to descend on the paint-spattered, debris-strewn U.S. Embassy from mid-morning Monday. Some hurled burning objects, and Tibetan monks in blood-red robes also joined the demonstrations.

Police allowed protesters along a seven-block route that snaked between the U.S. and British embassies and shooed away onlookers.

UI graduate student Shaowen Wang reads a statement Monday on the Pentacrest at the beginning of a protest against the May 7 NATO bombing of the Chinese Embassy in Belgrade. Around him, protesters hold photos of the bombing victims.

Bombing protest on Pentacrest draws more than 100

More than 130 protesters rallied in an angry response to NATO's bombing of the Chinese Embassy in Belgrade by marching around the Pentacrest.

The rally began Monday at 12:30 p.m. with demonstrators holding pictures of the victims of the bombings and signs demanding peace and an end to the bombings.

"As a U.S. citizen, are you aware of what your government is doing?" asked UI graduate student Shaowen

Wang in his speech at the rally. "We saw brothers and sisters die because of a mistake."

NATO and the United States have reported that the accidental bombing killed three Chinese citizens on May 7. NATO blamed "outdated intelligence" for the incident.

Several of the protesters were not satisfied with NATO's explanations. "We are here to ask NATO to apologize formally to the Chinese people," said UI graduate student Xue-mei Chen. "Maybe the bombing was intended."

"I'm so furious about what happened; I can't believe it's only a mistake," said UI graduate student Tianfeng Chai. "I think some people in the American government hate China because the Chinese government supports the Serbians."

Feng-Guan Lao, a UI graduate student and member of the Friendship Association of Chinese Scholars and Students, said there were no good explanations or excuses for the atrocities inflicted upon the Chinese.

"Western powers are lecturing us on human rights, but they don't follow the rules," she said. "They are hypocritical by not changing their own actions."

And because the bombing was accidental and claimed some lives, Chai said, President Clinton should have apologized rather than merely expressed regrets to the Chinese.

"He did nothing to support his statements," said Chai. "It's hard to understand whether he really apologized. He should stop the bombing."

"I'm so furious about what happened; I can't believe it's only a mistake."

— Tianfeng Chai, UI graduate student

Most of the demonstrators were Asian, and that was disappointing to UI senior Tye Kirk, who said people of all nationalities need to be involved to reach an agreement.

"It's too bad that American students aren't out here protesting NATO and the U.S. involvement in the bombing of Kosovo," he said.

Northwest Junior High School students carry their books as they walk past a Coralville police car Monday. Students were not allowed to carry backpacks into the school because of threats made there last week.

Northwest half empty after threats

■ Roughly half of the junior high's 800 students stayed home in the wake of threatening notes found last week.

By Steven Cook
 The Daily Iowan

The worst part about going to class Monday at Northwest Junior High School wasn't a threat of violence, one student said, it was that his friends weren't there.

"It was boring; nobody was in any of my classes," 13-year-old Jake Wallace said as his father, William Gay, waited to take him home after school Monday.

"It was stupid. People were trying to scare us, and that's not right," Wallace said.

He said as many as 20 students showed up for one of his classes, but as few as six showed up for another class.

School officials had feared violence Monday after eight students were threatened in two notes found last week; however, they reported no problems.

More than half of the approximately 800 students who attend the school stayed home. More than 250 parents called to excuse their children from school, officials said.

Six to eight Coralville police officers were on hand throughout the day to safeguard students and calm students' fears. Administrators also banned backpacks for the day and searched instrument cases before students entered the building.

Northwest Junior High Principal Bryce Hansen said he personally searched portions of the building before classes, though he was "as sure as he could possibly be" that nothing would happen. No lockers were searched, he said.

Parents who sent their children to school Monday said they were worried about sending them, but felt the precautions taken were adequate.

"This was probably one of the safest places in the coun-

Protest fails; 'Dumb Bunnies' stays in school

■ A popular children's book, and its absurd humor, was found to be harmless at a School Board meeting Monday.

By Erin Crawford
 The Daily Iowan

An objection to flushing people down toilets and allowing small children to drive cars led to an Iowa City School Board discussion on adult humor in elementary schools Monday.

Grant Wood Elementary School parent Amy Vrasprier requested that the book "The Dumb Bunnies," by Sue Denim, be removed from the school's library; that was denied at an Iowa City Community Schools Reconsideration Committee meeting.

"My main objection is that the book is in the school system," Vrasprier said. "It's OK in the Public Library when I'm with my child and can better monitor books."

Grant Wood media specialist Pat Braunger disagreed that the book is inappropriate and said it is very popular with kids. The book is one in a series of books featuring the Dumb Bunny family; there is also a CBS Saturday morning cartoon based on the series.

One day the Dumb Bunnies were eating their porridge.

Momma Bunny's porridge was too cold, so she blew on it.

Poppa Bunny's porridge was too hot, so he put it in the oven.

But Baby Bunny's porridge was just right, so he poured it down his pants.

"That's my boy," said Poppa Bunny.

Now playing at a university near you: finals

■ Good weather and Pixie Sticks are reasons to relax for some UI students as finals week begins.

By Julia Di Gangi
 The Daily Iowan

Finals week has rolled in and many UI students are trying not to crack under the pressure. The pleasant weather — or a bit of Pixie Stick — seemed to have helped some students slightly Monday.

To increase their attention spans and regain some energy, UI freshman Kristen Cherry and her roommate competed to see who could finish a foot-long Pixie Stick first.

"We thought that the race would help in studying by waking us up a little, but we got wired and we ran around and bothered everyone who was studying to help them not study," Cherry said. "We helped spread the procrastination."

Finals signify the end of ... oh, at

UI sophomore Jed Schneckloth plays "Ghetto Golf" with UI sophomore Ted Benzing Monday on South Johnson Street. "It's too nice to study," Schneckloth said.

Charter crash victims remembered

LaPLACE, La. — Friends and relatives — some using walkers, others in wheelchairs — gathered today at a retirement home to remember eight residents who were among the 22 people killed in a Mother's Day bus crash.

A day after the crash, a dozen investigators with the National Transportation Safety Board were in New Orleans to learn what caused the bus to hurtle off Interstate 610 down an embankment. The bus was carrying members of a senior citizens casino club. PAGE 8

MIAMI — The Miami Heat showed they can still win at home against the New York Knicks. Now Miami needs a victory at Madison Square Garden.

Alonzo Mourning scored 26 points and the Heat rediscovered their shooting touch Monday night, hitting 51 percent to beat New York 83-73 and even the best-of-5 series at 1-1.

The next two games will be Wednesday and Friday in New York, where the Heat are just 4-9 under Coach Pat Riley.

UI seniors Sean Noland and Emily Drach study in a conference room at the Pappajohn Business Building. Both say they are stressed about graduation and what will come after it. RANDOM JOKE

• Joe is at home doing his math homework. Joe: "Two plus five the son of a bitch is seven. Three plus six the son of a bitch is nine." As he is counting, his mother walks in. "Joe, what are you doing? Why are you saying that?" she asks. Joe replies: "I'm doing my math homework, Mom." "And is that what your teacher taught you?" his mother asks. "Yes," says Joe. The next day, the mother, worried about the education her son is receiving, goes to Joe's school to talk to the teacher. "I would like to know what you are teaching my son in math?" she asks his teacher. Teacher: "Oh, sure. We are learning addition problems." "And... are you teaching them to say two plus two the son of a bitch is four?" Joe's mother asks. The teacher replies: "No way! What I taught them was two THE SUM OF WHICH IS four."

Dubuque student wins 1999-2000 Scholz Award

Anna Tauke, a UI sophomore from Dubuque, has been named the 1999-2000 recipient of the Paul D. Scholz Memorial Scholarship. Tauke, a UI Presidential Scholar and member of the UI Honors Program and Hawkeye Marching Band, is simultaneously working toward earning a degree from the College of Engineering in electrical and computer engineering and a degree from the College of Liberal Arts in physics. The Paul D. Scholz Memorial Scholarship award was established in 1993 by the College of Engineering to honor the memory of the former associate dean and professor of mechanical engineering. It is given annually to a current undergraduate engineering student who best exemplifies the academic and personal qualities that Scholz represented, such as integrity, leadership and dedication to excellence. The $1,500 scholarship is designed to provide recognition and support for a current undergraduate engineering student who expects to enroll in a graduate degree program in engineering and possibly become an engineering professor.

How to get ahead in the real world

THAT magic time of year is rapidly approaching, and we're not talking June, here — which is when most of the best people were born. Not to insult any of the other months, which are all fine enough, but June kids tend to be the most clear-eyed, intelligent yet good-looking, witty people around — multi-talented souls whose only drawback seems to be a tendency to speak French at the wrong moment.

No, the magic time of year is the end of school, and for the lucky ones, that means you've done your time and can now be paroled — though the university prefers to use the word "graduation," for some mysterious reason.

BEAU ELLIOT

And parole — or graduation — means that you'll be taking your first tentative steps into the real world, which is an oxymoron to end all oxymorons. ("Oxymoron" is an ancient Greek word that translates roughly as, truly stupid person or thing that can commit respiration. Most dictionaries use a picture of Dan Quayle as a means of illustration.)

Having been out in the real world (and if you wonder how you can be both "out" and "in" at the same time, you're a long way along in understanding the nature of the real world), I can tell you there's only one phrase you'll need to remember in order to get by: Things have never been less like they are than they are now.

Just repeat it to yourself, like a mantra, each morning, preferably while standing before the mirror. You'll do just fine.

The first thing you'll notice about the real world is that your parents, stodgy traditionalists who still believe that Creedence Clearwater Revival is the cutting edge of music, will no longer foot the bill for the rent and groceries. They'll no longer hand the bill, neck the bill or stomach the bill, either. This means you'll have to get a real job.

Don't sweat it. Millions of human beings before you have had real jobs, and, while they all did eventually die, almost none of them could prove a connection between a real job and death.

When I lived in Berlin, back in my incarnation as an unsuccessful musician (a job I proved to be well-suited for), every East Berliner I met told me the same joke about having a real job in the dear, departed East Germany: We pretended to work, and the state pretended to pay us.

It's not exactly like that out in global capitalism. First of all, in all likelihood you won't be working for the state, you'll be working for a corporation. And, while they will pretend to pay you, they will expect you to work. There's only one rule about work: never take responsibility for anything — unless it's already wildly successful. Then you hog all the responsibility. For pointers on this technique, see Al Gore and the invention of the Internet.

The second thing you'll discover about your real job — after realizing the part about the pretend paycheck — is that your supervisor has the IQ of yesterday's toast. Don't sweat it. Every supervisor in the world has the IQ of yesterday's toast — that is, when he or she doesn't have the IQ of last week's mushy peas. It's this kind of intelligence and savvy that made them supervisor material in the first place. Just roll with it. Remember one thing: Never show the slightest hint of initiative. That way you'll blend in with everybody else.

The other thing you'll notice about the real world is that there's an animal called politics out there. Just ignore it — that's pretty much what everybody else does. The people who run for office, any office, will invariably remind you of your supervisor in the intelligence department and of a snapping turtle in the department.

Another fascinating facet of the real world is that the United States will always be bombing some place you've never heard of until the United States starts bombing it, and then you won't be able to pronounce it, anyway. Don't sweat this, either. Back in my aforementioned career as an unsuccessful musician, I bombed thousands and thousands of times — so often that I started referring to gigs as sorties. As in, I had a sortie in Kalona last weekend, but I flew in under their radar and escaped.

As you can see, the real world is not a difficult place. Just remember to stand in front of the mirror each morning and repeat your mantra. Things have never been less like they are than they are now. Things have never been less ...

Justice Scalia has the right stuff

ON May 5, I had the distinct pleasure of listening to Justice Antonin Scalia speak at Cornell College in Mount Vernon.

Justice Scalia addressed the relationship between law and morality, promoting the proposition that a republican form of government allows the majority to legislate its morality, so long as that legislation is not forbidden by the Constitution.

Today, in academia and elsewhere, it is fashionable to condemn any who would bring morality or religion into discussions of the law. This liberal notion of the law views law and morality as being separate, with each hermetically sealed off from the other, and proclaims that it is wrong for the majority to legislate its morality into law.

Scalia rejects this and asserts that law is as legitimate when based upon religious convictions as when it is based upon philosophical and utilitarian grounds.

He gave the example of animal cruelty. Proscribing animal cruelty because of a religious belief that such cruelty is wrong is equally as valid, if not more so, then when such behavior is proscribed on philosophical grounds.

Also, there is nothing inappropriate when the majority believes that conduct should be forbidden because of a religious belief and legislates that belief into law. To think otherwise is to not believe in the form of government we live under.

The Constitution sets limits as to what the majority can impose upon the minority. The minimums guaranteed in the Constitution are for the protection of the minority, but there is certainly no prohibition on the majority implementing its will through its representatives.

For example, the majority may, for religious or philosophical reasons, outlaw bigamy, because there is nothing in the Constitution guaranteeing a right to bigamy nor a clause prohibiting the majority from imposing its moral judgment in this area.

Scalia, along with Judge Robert Bork and others, advocates a position of Constitutional interpretation in which the text of the Constitution, as understood by those who ratified it, is what is authoritative.

Therefore, issues the Constitution does not address are left to the people to decide how to deal with. The majority may, then, through their legislatures, decide what limits, if any, there will be in certain areas of conduct.

They can proscribe conduct as long as this proscription is not in violation of the Constitution. The majority, for instance, cannot outlaw the free press, nor can they allow unwarranted searches of private homes, but in other areas of conduct not addressed by the Constitution, the majority can outlaw or endorse certain activities.

Many in the audience listening to Scalia expressed concern over the possible persecution of discrete and insular minorities that might, because they are unpopular, be oppressed by the majority if it were to legislate its morality. While the concern is valid, the Constitution simply does not protect every minority.

Political minorities, for example, are protected under the First Amendment, along with religious minorities. But beyond those enumerated in the Consti-tion, the protection afforded others must be gained through the political process. Those who wish to give legal sanction to activities not protected by the Constitution must persuade the majority. To say otherwise would be to short circuit the democratic process, the process where decisions are made concerning public policy are made after much compromise.

It is by circumventing the political process that liberals try to impose their agenda upon the nation.

If the majority will not legislate a right to homosexual activity, the liberals then sue to see if nine justices will find such a right in the Constitution. That's what almost happened in Bowers v. Hardwick.

Many of the new rights found in the Constitution are the result of liberals who, because they cannot win at the polls, try to force their morality upon the rest of the nation through the courts — all the while condemning the majority who would legislate its morality.

Judges find rights to privacy, to die and to homosexual activity while also finding that the death penalty is unconstitutional, all without support from the text or the original understanding of the Constitution. This is nothing more than imposing that unelected judge's morality on the nation, under the guise of interpreting the Constitution.

Essentially, Scalia sought to show — and, in fact, succeeded in showing — that those who criticize legislating according to religious convictions are often, at the same time, also trying to circumvent the popular branches of government and, in so doing, imposing their own morality through the judiciary.

EDITORIAL

Financial-aid law not fair

Because of a provision in the Higher Education Act of 1998, college students better not be convicted of a state or federal drug offense. Students who need financial aid, that is.

Under this cruel and possibly discriminatory law, financial-aid eligibility may be delayed or denied to individuals convicted of a state or federal drug offense. The ineligibility applies to all forms of financial aid, including grants, student loans and work study.

Luckily, a reform measure that would void this provision of the original act was proposed in Congress this year.

The reform would also, therefore, stop a law that essentially hurts only lower-class citizens who rely on financial aid. Wealthier students who receive financial aid need not worry because their education can be funded personally.

The original act, in fact, hurts anti-drug use campaigns. Instead of allowing people on the edge of the drug culture escape through education, the provision may force the same people into the middle of the culture they were trying to escape. If government wants decreased drug use, it must promote education, not prevent it.

Chances are the reform bill, proposed by Rep. Barney Frank, a Massachusetts Democrat, will have a tough time making it through the Republican-dominated Congress. In addition, the original provision was added by Republicans before passing the Higher Education Act of 1998, and many Republicans will be reluctant to change their opinions.

Because of the inevitable inaction by Congress on this legislation, students must take notice and voice opinions on the reform.

To the Editor:

I am writing in response to Kathryn Sayre's letter that was published in the DI on May 3. Sayre claims that an April 14 article by Jill Barnard "didn't provide an accurate story concerning the UI Alumni Association's merchandise program."

The article refers to expensive souvenirs that the Alumni Association tries to sell to students and their parents. Sayre states, "We do NOT direct our merchandise mail efforts to students."

This is false. I have personally received the ridiculous promotions described in the article.

Sayre goes on to say, "We request mailings be sent to parents and NOT graduates." Well, she may have requested it, but apparently she was ignored. This junk mail was sent to my apartment as well as my parents' home.

Sayre points out that Barnard confused the "UI logo" for the "UI seal" when describing a promotional watch. Not only is this a petty distinction but it shows that Sayre completely missed the point of the article. My real gripe, however, is not with the merchandise.

I recently received a letter describing my gift from the UI Alumni Association. The letter was from the association's executive director, Vince Nelson. It stated, "in recognition of your upcoming graduation, we have a gift for you." It was a SIX-MONTH LIFE INSURANCE POLICY.

That's great, if I am killed before my next birthday, I can still repay a portion of my student loans! A six-month life insurance policy is one of the most worthless gifts I can imagine. I don't mean to suggest that the UI Alumni Association owes me anything. It doesn't. But as far as the life insurance goes, thank you very little.

Children's author Shel Silverstein dead at 66

■ The acclaimed writer and songwriter was found in his home Monday, apparently the victim of a heart attack.

Associated Press

KEY WEST, Fla. — Shel Silverstein, the author of such acclaimed children's books as "A Light in the Attic" and "Where the Sidewalk Ends," was found dead Monday morning of a heart attack. He was 66.

Silverstein had severe coronary artery disease. Friends said he had recently complained of an upset stomach and "didn't feel quite right," said Associate Medical Examiner Dr. Richard Eicher.

Two cleaning women discovered Silverstein's body in the bedroom of his home Monday. Eicher said he could have died Sunday or Monday.

Silverstein's books, which he illustrated with his own humorous images, are packed with colorful characters such as walruses with braces and camels in brassieres. His poetry is light and irreverent and humored children and adults alike.

"It's a devastating loss," said his longtime friend and lawyer Sheldon Vidibor of Los Angeles. "I'm numb."

Vidibor described him as "the sweetest, brightest man that I know, good to everybody, loyal, loving. He's a wonderful person, a wonderful human being. It goes without saying incredibly talented."

Silverstein is best known for his children's poetry. His work includes "The Giving Tree" (1964), "Falling Up" (1996) "Where the Sidewalk Ends" (1974) "A Light in the Attic" (1981) "The Missing Piece" (1976) and "The Missing Piece Meets the Big O" (1981).

Silverstein's characters in "A Light in the Attic" include Mrs. McTwitter, the Gink and the Dragon of Grindly Grun. Mrs. McTwitter is the baby sitter, who's "a little bit crazy. She thinks a baby sitter's supposed to sit upon the baby."

The quick-digesting Gink is a giant lizard who swallows some children, and the fire-breathing dragon complains that "lunches aren't very much fun. For I like my dannels medium rare and they ALWAYS come out well done."

"The Giving Tree" celebrates 35 years in publication this fall. Silverstein won numerous awards for his work, including the Michigan Young Readers Award for "Where the Sidewalk Ends."

In the poem "Hug O' War," from "Where the Sidewalk Ends," Silverstein describes his favorite game:

"I'd rather play at hug o' war,

Author Shel Silverstein, who died on Monday, is best known for his children's poetry.

Where everyone hugs
Instead of tugs,
Where everyone giggles
And rolls on the rug,
Where everyone kisses,
And everyone grins,
And everyone cuddles,
And everyone wins ...
Children find his poems "exciting and fun — they're silly," said Jaime Johnson, children's librarian at the Coral Gables Library. "He was different from Dr. Seuss. It had to do more with reality ... he used things kids knew."

Before turning to children's poetry, Silverstein wrote verse for adults only. His career began as a writer and cartoonist for Playboy in 1952.

He later served in the Army in Japan and Korea, where he was a cartoonist for the Pacific Stars and Stripes.

Silverstein also was a celebrated lyricist, publishing numerous songs, including Johnny Cash's "A Boy named Sue" and Loretta Lynn's "One's on the Way." He also wrote the folk songs "Unicorn" and "25 Minutes to Go."

try," Gay said as he waited to take Jake home Monday. "I felt it was my responsibility to send him. One day had already been disrupted. I just hope everything will be normal again — the way it should be."

The school will attempt to return to some semblance of normality the rest of the week, Hansen said.

Police will continue to be present on the campus through Friday. Backpacks will be allowed today, but students must leave them in their lockers. All backpacks will also be subject to random searches.

Hansen said students reacted well to the police presence in the building, and some students even baked Rice Krispy Bars for some of the officers. However, a normal day wasn't possible with so many students gone, he said.

Threats such as those at Northwest have been occurring more frequently since the April 20 Columbine High School shooting in which two gunmen killed 12 students and one teacher.

Iowa City Community School District Superintendent Barbara Grohe said determining the right reaction to such threats is difficult.

"We walk a fine line between overreacting and not reacting at all," she said. "I think we acted appropriately."

"If this would have happened a couple months ago, we probably would not have given much credibility to it," Hansen said later. "But the rules have changed. Unfortunately, I don't think the kids understand that the rules have changed."

Janene Suddarth, whose son, Eli, 14, attended school Monday, said worrying about whether to send her son to school was something she never expected to have to do.

"I thought the only concerns I would have would be the normal teen-age concerns for normal changes at that age, rather than threats," she said Monday afternoon. "That wasn't covered in the parenting books."

CHINA

China's suspension of high-level military ties — and talks over arms control, international security and human rights — signaled one of the lowest ebbs for China-U.S. relations in 20 years.

China's Foreign Ministry didn't say when contacts might resume.

Foreign Minister Tang Jiaxuan condemned NATO's attack as a "vicious invasion" and demanded an "open and official" apology. He said the United States must thoroughly investigate the attack on May 7, make the results public and "severely punish those responsible."

Secretary of State Madeleine Albright said NATO would provide China with a full explanation. She added that statements by Chinese authorities indicated anti-American protests in Beijing had the government's approval.

Hunkered down inside the embassy compound was U.S. Ambassador James Sasser, who refused Tang's summons for a face-to-face meeting. In an interview, Sasser said the protests got so threatening at one point that he ordered preparations for destroying sensitive documents.

least a semester. But that isn't anything students should get worked up about, said UI junior Peter Dangremond.

"The way I like to think of it is like nothing is worth flipping out like a lunatic when you know it's going to be done real soon," he said. "If you're going to start tripping and bugging out, then you need to chill out, because life is about having fun, not flipping out."

UI junior Kris Kuraitis, however, had a hard time expressing her feelings about finals.

"I'm so stressed out I can't even talk," she said, returning to her study table at the library.

Much calmer and enjoying the weather was UI freshman Becky Walker.

"How can anyone be studying for finals on a day like today?" she said, while doing cartwheels on the Pentacrest lawn.

But the good weather doesn't seem to be doing much good for Walker's chemistry grade.

"You come out here, and you think I'm going to study outside because it's so sunny, and then you just lie there or take a nap," she said. "You forget about finals because it slips your mind, and I'd rather be out here and not worrying about it."

The weather also affected UI freshman Brianna Hodges.

"The weather makes me want to run around naked rather than study," she said.

Hodges also listed getting another tattoo and riding on a Harley as things she'd rather be doing than studying.

"I'm so lost and so confused for my Spanish final that if I studied from now until my 4:30 final, I would still not know a thing," she said. "Besides, I would rather go outside in the warm weather and dance around."

'Dumb Bunnies' prevails in censorship question

DUMB BUNNIES

"It's a book with outrageous humor that is very appealing to children, and we attempt to provide a broad spectrum of books," she said.

One scene of absurdist humor that offended Vrasprier involved Baby Bunny dumping a bowl of porridge down his own pants and being praised by Poppa Bunny.

"The parents in it are condoning behaviors, and you don't know what kids will try, so we don't need to put negative behaviors in their heads," Vrasprier said. "I see Poppa Bunny saying, 'It's dangerous, but it's OK,' and that's not something I want a child to learn."

Some parents consider the book's humor to be too adult for its 4- to 7-year-old target audience, but board members felt censorship was the wrong measure to take.

"I'm not convinced that it is necessary that 'The Dumb Bunnies' be restricted," board member Susan Bender said. "It's difficult for me to imagine some child would be harmed irreparably by this book."

"This is not intended to be an informative book," board member Victoria Walton said. "It's intended to be a spoof."

Reviews of the book have been mixed, although the book averages four out of five stars, board member Mary Jo Langhorne said.

"The Book List, one of the most critical sources, describes 'The Dumb Bunnies' as 'missing the mark, but funny,'" she said.

Vrasprier said she was disappointed with the committee's deci-

Iowans becoming leery of Y2K

■ A Dewitt man's improbable electric bill prompts worries about the computer bug.

Associated Press

DEWITT, Iowa — When a computer error boosted Lloyd Harmsen's monthly electricity bill to $141,311.48 from the normal, for this time of year, $20 to $30, he began to worry about Y2K.

"My concern is if they have trouble with monthly billing, what will the problem be when Y2K comes?" the Dewitt resident said.

His April 20 bill was straightened out, but Harmsen fears such errors will be more difficult to untangle if the so-called Y2K problem strikes utility computers.

The worry is that some computers might not be able to process the date change from Dec. 31, 1999, to Jan. 1, 2000, and that the inability to process information could cause computer systems to crash.

Commonwealth Edison, which serves Harmsen's property in Fulton, Ill., is quickly approaching its

"A lot of people are running scared right now, I think. Most of the people around here are just afraid they're not going to have service."

— Terry Henke,

manager of Henke Hardware in Keokuk, Iowa goal of becoming Y2K compliant, spokesman Steve Nailor said.

Three hundred employees have worked since 1996 to ensure that the lights stay on Jan. 1 and that financing and billing systems are ready, he said.

"June 30 is the drop-dead date," Nailor said. "We think that we'll be ready."

Harmsen isn't alone in his worries.

The Iowa State Fire Marshal's Office recently reported that the fear of losing electrical service during the first few days of the year 2000 is driving many people to purchase portable generators.

"It's been an issue," said Maria Allen, manager of Clinton's Farm & Fleet store. With each shipment of generators this year, the store has consistently been sold out.

"This whole year it's been hard to get them," she said.

Buyers aren't specifically mentioning Y2K, but Allen believes it must be playing a role.

"They have said they felt they always wanted one, and now is the time to do it," she said.

Sales of emergency generators have been good this year at Henke Hardware in Keokuk, Iowa, and manager Terry Henke also believes Y2K has been a factor.

"A lot of people are running scared right now, I think," he said. "Most of the people around here are just afraid they're not going to have service."

At Lowe's home improvement

Center in West Des Moines, generators have been selling at "a pretty good clip" all year.

"We service a lot of rural Iowa, even though we're in a metro market, and generally people want to have that alternate power source for a lot of different reasons," said Brad Johnson, store manager. "We have tornadoes, storms ..."

"I'm sure there has been some (worry) about the Y2K, but people want to have an alternative power source in the event of any kind of emergency," Johnson said.

Scott Roehler, manager of Stall's Farm and Home in Estherville, Iowa, said he's had a hard time getting any portable generators in his store this year for customers who want them.

Suppliers, he was told, have a long backlog of orders.

"Everybody that I've talked to that wanted them this year, it was not Y2K," Roehler said. "Most are contractors and farmers ... Farmers wanted it for the summer months because of storms; contractors use them in the field."

'Jackpot justice' comes under fire in Alabama

■ A jury's $581 million verdict in an overcharging case provides further fodder for tort reform.

By Jay Reeves

Associated Press

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — An Alabama jury awarded a jaw-dropping $581 million to a family who claimed they were overcharged $1,200 for two satellite dishes, providing fresh ammunition for lawmakers who want to reform a legal system that they say is out of control.

Whether such huge punitive-damage awards should be restricted has been a thorny issue for Congress and state legislatures nationwide. Tort reform, as it is called, is a particularly heated issue in Alabama, where critics say juries commonly dispense "jackpot justice."

It was an Alabama jury a few years ago that awarded $4 million to a doctor who didn't like that the paint had been touched up on his new BMW. The U.S. Supreme Court struck down the award, and the doctor eventually got $50,000.

The $581 million verdict, delivered on May 7, is certain to be on the minds of Alabama state senators as soon as today, when they consider bills that would limit punitive-damage awards and make it more difficult to file frivolous lawsuits. A committee has approved the bills.

"If ever there was a prime indication that Alabama needs to address the tort reform issue, this is it," Ragan Ingram, spokesman for Lt. Gov. Steve Windom, told the Birmingham News. "That's a lot of money; Alabama businesses can't survive in this kind of environment."

But some lawyers say consumer protection laws are weak, so eye-popping verdicts are the only real protection available in Alabama to someone who has been cheated.

"I think the system is working now better than it ever has," said Tom Methvin, the attorney who won the $581 million verdict.

The case involved Barbara Carlisle and her parents, George and Velma Merriweather of Greensboro, in rural Alabama. They sued Whirlpool Financial National Bank and Gulf Coast Electronics, contending that the companies tried to gouge them for $612 each on the purchase of two $1,100 satellite dishes sold by a door-to-door salesperson in 1995.

The salesperson said they would have to pay $34 a month for three years, but the contract ran for 4½ years, Methvin said.

Once the lawsuit was filed,

Whirlpool Financial waived payment of the amount that was disputed by the family, said Robert Spotswood, a lawyer for Whirlpool Corp., which has since sold Whirlpool Financial to TransAmerica Bank. The family lost nothing, Spotswood said.

Yet the jury awarded them $975,000 to compensate for their mental anguish and $580 million to punish the company.

The jury heard testimony that Whirlpool Financial cheated thousands of Alabamians out of $8 million by getting them to sign credit-card deals that required them to pay as much as 300 percent in interest, even though the advertised rate was only 22 percent.

"We proved that Whirlpool Financial targeted the elderly and the illiterate," Methvin said. The jurors "were outraged that this was going on in a modern society."

Rescuers find no more victims in Hawaiian landslide that killed

■ Several hikers were sunning themselves at a pool beneath the popular Sacred Falls Sunday when the accident occurred.

By Ben Dipietro

Associated Press

HAUULA, Hawaii — Rescuers using heat-seeking cameras and military search dogs did not find any more bodies early Monday in tons of debris left by a weekend landslide that killed at least six people and injured dozens of others.

"We're pretty much certain there are no more dead bodies under the landslide," said Honolulu Fire Capt. Richard Soo.

Dozens of hikers were sunning themselves at a pool beneath one of Hawaii's most scenic waterfalls Sunday when the landslide sent tons of boulders — some of them the size of compact cars — crashing down.

A helicopter survey indicated the area, a popular hiking spot at Sacred Falls State Park on the northeast coast of the island of Oahu, remained unstable hours after the landslide.

Geologists were gingerly trekking into the valley this morning to determine the stability of the debris and the surrounding cliffs.

"It looks like the cliff face came away," state Department of Land and Natural Resources geologist Glenn Bauer said after flying over the area.

Jeff Widener/Associated Press

Friends and family members hold hands and pray for the victims of an avalanche at Sacred Falls State Park on the northeast coast of the island of Oahu, Hawaii, Sunday.

Thirteen of the injured, including a 29-year-old man in critical condition, remained hospitalized.

The park in the lushly forested Koolau Range is about 30 miles north of Honolulu. The falls spill into a pool, reachable by a 3-mile hike, at the base of a 90-foot cliff.

"Probably about 50 feet from the base, a big chunk of the upper cliffs slid down on the base of the falls where all the people sit down and others are swimming," Honolulu Fire Chief Attilio Leonardi told television station KITV.

The pool, popular with tourists and locals, was crowded on a sunny, tropical Mother's Day.

"There were people in the water, there were people under the falls, there were people 50 feet from it that still got hurt," hiker Rodney Woodington told KITV.

Another hiker, Dr. Geoff Scott, of Anaheim, Calif., coordinated medical efforts at the scene.

"The first thing we did was we got the people we could help, we got them out of the fall zone," Scott told KITV. "And then after we did that, we triaged who was sickest and basically tried to support them until the Fire Department got there."

Tracey Murphy, 22, of Kunia, a former volunteer fireman, cut up towels from his pack and helped bind wounds. Murphy told the Honolulu Advertiser that he walked out of the area carrying another hiker who had a broken arm and a missing finger.

Twice-delayed trial of Larry Flynt gets under way

CINCINNATI (AP) — Hustler publisher Larry Flynt's twice-delayed trial on obscenity charges could take three to six weeks, the judge said Monday as he began assembling prospective jurors.

Hamilton County Common Pleas Judge Patrick Dinkelacker said he hoped to have a jury seated by today.

Flynt, 56, and his brother, Jimmy, 52, were indicted in April 1998 on charges of pandering obscenity, disseminating material harmful to a juvenile, conspiracy and engaging in a pattern of corrupt activity. Both appeared in court Monday, eager to challenge this Ohio River city's anti-pornography standards.

The charges stem from the alleged sale of a sexually explicit video to a 14-year-old boy at the Hustler Magazine & Gifts store that Jimmy Flynt manages. If convicted, each brother could get 24 years in prison and $65,000 in fines.

The trial, originally set for Jan. 19, has been rescheduled twice because Flynt, who has been in a wheelchair since he was shot in 1978, needed surgery for a urological problem related to his paralysis and also developed pneumonia.

Reporter who wrote about dying of cancer fired for deception

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — A reporter at a rural Kentucky newspaper who wrote moving stories about her battle with cancer was fired Monday after admitting she didn't have the disease at all, but AIDS.

Kim Stacy, 33, said she lied because of the stigma attached to AIDS.

"I grew up in a small-town atmosphere where you are crucified for having AIDS or being gay," Stacy, who is a lesbian, said in an interview Monday.

Over the past few weeks, she had told readers of the Owensboro Messenger-Inquirer that she had brain cancer and had less than a year to live.

She admitted the fabrications after the publisher at another paper for which she once worked confronted her with his suspicions.

"I'm terribly sorry; I didn't think about what I was doing," she said in the interview. "I betrayed a lot of people and misled a lot of people including my own friends and family. Nobody knew until this weekend that I have AIDS."

Parent of 'Diff'rent Strokes' star says life, not show, was problem

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Dana Plato and her fellow "Diff'rent Strokes" child stars Gary Coleman and Todd Bridges enjoyed a heady TV fame that ended more than a decade ago. It seems they've been paying for it ever since.

Plato, 34, died on May 8 of an accidental drug overdose, one day after telling Howard Stern's radio show she was clean and sober. Bridges also has fought to overcome drug and legal problems; Coleman has been beset by legal and financial woes.

But to blame their Hollywood experience is wrong, Betty Bridges, Todd's mother, said Monday.

"The media portrays it as the kids on the show being cursed. It had nothing to do with that. The show was a very positive experience," Betty Bridges said.

The drug problems faced by her son and Plato stemmed from their difficult home lives, not the pressures of early fame, she said. Todd Bridges suffered when she and his father, now dead, got divorced.

Plato had to cope with her mother's serious illness, Betty Bridges said.

"My son has said to me, 'I would have these problems whether I was in the business or out of it,'" she said, adding: "How many kids who are not in show business have a drug problem?"

NO CONDOM??

If someone asks you to risk your life for sex, ask yourself... Is that person worth it? Is anyone worth it? Abstinence is the only sure way to avoid AIDS and other diseases, but if you decide to have sex, plan ahead.

"In a subset of them, it's likely inherited — they're born bad," he said. "In others, there may be a subtle brain injury that they experience during gestation or at the time of birth."

Black estimates 7 million Americans are sufferers of the disorder and suggests that nearly everyone knows someone who has ASP. Nevertheless, he said, the public remains largely unaware of the disorder, which psychiatrists have known about "for over 200 years."

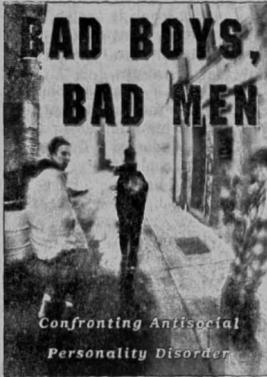

"The media don't talk about it," he said. "The public focuses on different aspects like crime and delinquency rather than seeing those as systematic of a larger problem."

As a result of this unawareness, few funds have been appropriated for the study of ASP, Black said. Effective treatment, therefore, remains elusive.

"There's no pill for it, there's no therapy for it," Black said. "Instead we look at other problems that antisocials have and try to treat those."

For example, he said, three quarters of ASP sufferers are drug and alcohol abusers. Treatment of this abuse sometimes

They tend to break rules, to hurt others and to lack a conscience. The root causes of the disorder are neither purely genetic nor purely environmental but a combination of both, said Black.

Confronting Antisocial Personality Disorder

alleviates ASP itself.

Black's interest in ASP stems from research he did while a psychiatry resident at the UI Hospitals and Clinics. He read case histories of antisocial people who had been admitted to the hospital several years prior to his residency, which began in 1982, then located those people and investigated their progress. He discovered that many still suffered from symptoms that had appeared in their case histories.

In his book, Black uses serial killer John Wayne Gacy — who was a patient at the UIHC in 1968, and with whom Black exchanged correspondence — as an extreme example of an antisocial.

"He's a good example of the antisocial person who completely lacks a conscience," he said. "He never experienced remorse and regret."

Where society sees disparate groups of troublemakers — con men, juvenile delinquents or repeat offenders — Dr. Donald Black sees one group of individuals with the same psychiatric problem: antisocial personality disorder or ASP.

"Lifelong serial misbehavior — that's ASP in a nutshell," Black said. In an effort to broaden the public's understanding of the disorder, Black has written a book, "Bad Boys, Bad Men: Confronting Antisocial Personality Disorder."

He is scheduled to read from the book tonight at 8 at Prairie Lights Books.

Black, a UI College of Medicine psychiatry professor, said the typical sufferer of ASP is a young male with a long history of breaking rules.

"Many of them start as early as five or six," he said. "They may be the schoolyard bully. In the teen years, they may become juvenile delinquents. And when they move into adulthood, they may become criminals."

Black said three characteristics tend to describe those with ASP:

Show not at fault, Jenny Jones says

DETROIT (AP) — Talk show host Jenny Jones said she regrets the shooting death of a guest after he appeared on her show but does not agree with a jury's decision that held the program responsible.

"I feel very regretful. I'm very sorry that Scott (Amedure) lost his life," Jones said on "Dateline NBC" Sunday. "I think it's an awful, awful tragedy. I really don't think we can be held responsible."

Amedure, 32, was killed in 1995, three days after he admitted on a taping of "The Jenny Jones Show" that he was attracted to Jonathan Schmitz, who had agreed to appear to meet his secret admirer.

An Oakland County jury last week ordered the show and its corporate owner, Warner Bros., to pay Amedure's relatives $25 million.

Jones said the show's staffers made it clear to Schmitz that his secret admirer could be a man or woman and that it had no way of knowing about Schmitz's past suicide attempts or struggles against alcoholism.

Unlike in real life, 'Wit' wins again

NEW YORK (AP) — The Pulitzer

Prize-winning "Wit" has earned another honor: outstanding new play of the 1998-99 theater season, so named by the Drama Desk.

The Drama Desk, made up of theater writers, also named "Parade," a musical that had a short run at Lincoln Center in New York City, as the outstanding new musical in ceremonies held Sunday.

"Wit" is about a literature professor who is dying of cancer. "Parade" tells the true story of a Jewish man in Atlanta who was accused of murder and lynched early this century.

Other winners among the 28 categories were Brian Dennehy ("Death of a Salesman") and Kathleen Chalfant ("Wit"), outstanding actor and actress; Brent Carver ("Parade") and a tie, Carolee Carmello ("Parade") and Bernadette Peters ("Annie Get Your Gun"), outstanding actor and actress in a musical.

Outstanding revival of a play also was a tie, between "Death of a Salesman" and "The Iceman Cometh."

"You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown" was judged outstanding revival of a musical.

Clinton urges end to youth violence

■ The president meets with opinion leaders and gun makers to organize a campaign in the wake of Columbine.

By Terence Hunt
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Twenty days after the Colorado school shootings, President Clinton mobilized gun makers and the entertainment industry Monday for a national campaign against youth violence. "We'll have to overcome the old ways of doing business," he declared.

The president challenged producers of violent movies, video games and CDs to consider the consequences of what they make. "We cannot pretend that there is no impact on our culture and our children that is adverse if there is too much violence coming out of what they see and experience," the president said.

Sixty opinion leaders — from poet Maya Angelou and American Online chief Steve Case to singer Gloria Estefan and movie-industry lobbyist Jack Valenti — came to the White House for three hours of closed-door talks with Clinton, Hillary Rodham Clinton, and Vice President Al Gore and his wife, Tipper.

In rare praise from a Republican, House Speaker Dennis

Hastert applauded Clinton for holding the meeting and urged more discussions to "figure out what's ailing our society and how we can correct it."

Participants included parents, teachers, kids, law enforcement officers and government leaders, along with officials from gun makers Smith & Wesson Corp., Glock, Inc. and O.F. Mossberg & Sons.

"Everybody recognizes that they're part of the problem; they need to be part of the solution," AOL's Case said.

Actor Andrew Shue, former star of "Melrose Place," said, "There was no scapegoating at all in any form. In fact, everybody was completely on the same page, of putting aside their own interests and acting to make something happen."

In a step hailed by Gore as a breakthrough, AOL and the video game industry agreed at the meeting to plug a loophole that allows children to buy violent video games over the Internet that they are too young to buy in stores.

Moreover, the American Shooting Sports Council, representing 350 firearms manufacturers and distributors, endorsed a five-point administration plan for gun control, including background checks for firearms bought at gun shows and increasing the minimum age for buying a gun to 21.

But there were dissident voices elsewhere.

FBI fumbled TWA crash probe, officials say

■ A panel hearing on the investigation says the FBI tried to suppress a report that determined the cause as mechanical failure.

By Shannon McCaffrey
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The FBI was accused at a Senate hearing Monday of using heavy-handed and often bumbling tactics to try to prove terrorists had downed a TWA jetliner off Long Island, N.Y., even as evidence mounted that a mechanical failure was to blame.

"FBI leadership, in the case of TWA Flight 800, was a disaster,"

Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, said as his panel's hearing on the crash investigation got under way. "In my view, the FBI risked public safety."

The hearing presented a 24-page report from the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms that determined just six months after the Boeing 747 went down in July 1996 that mechanical failure had been to blame. The FBI was accused of trying to suppress that report and ignoring evidence that did not point to the idea that a bomb or a missile brought down the plane.

ATF, a Treasury Department agency, took part in the investigation because an explosion was involved.

Investigators eventually determined that a mechanical malfunction caused the plane's center fuel tanks to blow up, killing all 230 people on board.

A former top scientific investigator with the FBI who worked on the Flight 800 case said James Kallstrom, then director of the FBI's New York bureau, became enraged when he disputed the bomb theory.

"He got about six inches from my face and proceeded to advise me in very graphic terms that it was a bomb," William Tobin testified.

Kallstrom, who did not testify Monday and has since left the FBI, denied that he had suppressed the report but did say he did not want it to get out because it was "premature." Pieces of the plane were still being pulled from the ocean floor and the plane had not yet been completely reconstructed when the ATF reached its conclusion, he said.

"It is not that we were holding out for a bomb or missile, we were holding out for a thorough comprehensive investigation," Kallstrom told the Associated Press. "If in the end the only criticism of the FBI is that we worked too hard, too long and did too much, I will accept that criticism proudly."

Gambling bus crash victims remembered

■ Investigators were in New Orleans to find out the reasons for the crash that killed 22 people.

By Peter Aachariadis
Associated Press

LaPLACE, La. — Friends and relatives — some using walkers, others in wheelchairs — gathered today at a retirement home to remember eight residents who were among the 22 people killed in a Mother's Day bus crash.

"We pray for the families," Monsignor Thomas Rodi said as audience members cried and comforted each other at the Place DuBourg retirement home.

A day after Sunday's crash, a dozen investigators with the National Transportation Safety Board were in New Orleans to learn what caused the bus to hurtle off Interstate 610 down an embankment. The bus was carrying members of a senior citizens casino club heading to Mississippi.

The death toll originally was given as 23 this morning but was corrected to 22 in the afternoon. Mayor Marc Morial blamed confusion among the different agencies that responded to the accident.

Robert Francis, vice chairman of the safety board, said it could take months before the investigation is complete.

He said investigators were checking witness reports of a car possibly cutting off the bus but also would look into the driver's medical history and driving record.

At this morning's memorial service, Place DuBourg resident Isabel Dautreix remembered one of the victims, friend Dot Richard, who would bring her pudding and a newspaper every day.

"Every morning my paper would be there, and I woke up this morning and I thought, 'My paper wouldn't be there,'" Dautreix said.

She said she doesn't go on casino trips but she and Richard often played bingo together and would talk about splitting their jackpots if either won. She had been looking forward to seeing her Sunday because she had won on May 7, when her friend was n't feeling well and didn't play. "I thought I would see her and I would share it with her," Dautreix said, her voice trailing off.

Terrell Walker, safety director for Custom Bus Charters, which chartered the bus for the trip to Casino Magic in Bay St. Louis, Miss., said the driver told him the bus had been cut off by a car.

The eastbound bus swerved across all three lanes of the highway and off the road, crossing a narrow, paved golf-cart path that emerges from a tunnel next to the highway and crashing down one embankment and up another. It came to rest on a flat, grassy area along the highway where it passes through one of the city's biggest parks.

Federal law does not require seat belts in excursion buses. Even driver Frank Bedell, 49, of New Orleans, was not wearing one. He was among 17 people who remained hospitalized Monday, 11 of them in critical or guarded condition.

As election nears, Israel closes PLO offices

■ With a week to go before Israeli voting, Netanyahu shuts down parts of the PLO headquarters in Jerusalem.

By Samar Assad
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Just one week before Israeli elections, Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu Monday moved toward a confrontation with the Palestinians, ordering the closure of three offices in the PLO headquarters in Jerusalem.

Palestinian officials and Israeli Public Security Minister Avigdor Kahalani failed to find a compromise after hours of effort, and the orders were issued three hours after a 7 p.m. negotiating deadline.

Jawad Boulous, an attorney for Orient House, said a last-minute compromise offer was rejected because the Israelis continued to insist on removing two offices to the West Bank.

Boulous returned to Kahalani's office after the 7 p.m. deadline with a counterproposal, which was apparently rejected by the Israelis.

Palestinian leaders and Israeli security officials predicted large-scale riots should police try to use force to close parts of the Orient House.

However, a police raid is unlikely within the next few days. Israeli peace activists said they would appeal the orders to the Supreme Court today to prevent a closure, a move that could delay a decision until after the May 17 election.

Earlier this month, Netanyahu's government ordered three departments in the Orient House closed, saying they had ties to Yasser Arafat's Palestinian Authority. Under the interim peace agreements, the Palestinian Authority cannot operate in Jerusalem, whose status is to be determined in future peace talks.

Among the offices ordered closed was that of top PLO official Faisal Hussein. Another ordered closed deals with mapping — including the monitoring of Jewish settlements — and the third handles international relations. The Israelis have not sought the closure of the office dealing with the revocation of residency permits by Israel, the information office or the office that considers disputes among Palestinian residents of Jerusalem.

Ethnic Albanian refugees scuffle with one another in front of police headquarters at the Stenkovce refugee camp near Skopje, Macedonia, Monday. Chanting "NATO, NATO!" angry Kosovo Albanians protested the alleged beating of two refugees by Macedonian police and demanded that NATO take control of the refugee camp.

Serbs announce drawback

Yugoslavia says it is withdrawing some of its forces in Kosovo; NATO says it will continue the bombing.

By Candice Hughes
Associated Press

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — Yugoslavia announced a partial withdrawal of its forces from Kosovo Monday, but President Clinton and NATO said it wasn't enough to stop allied bombing.

The Yugoslav announcement, apparently aimed at maintaining momentum toward a peace deal, gave no indication of how many troops have been withdrawn or how many were left.

The army supreme command ordered the partial withdrawal after finishing its operations against the rebel Kosovo Liberation Army, said the statement carried by the state-run Tanjug news agency.

The pullout was to have begun at 10 p.m. Sunday (3 p.m. CDT), the army said. Virtually all foreign reporters have left the province under government orders, and it could not be determined if any units had actually left.

The notice also made no mention of the Kosovo population, largely driven out or displaced within the Serb province. The State Department said Monday that Serb forces and civilians have uprooted more than 90 percent of all Kosovars from their homes.

In Washington, President Clinton welcomed cautiously Belgrade's announcement, hours after Secretary of State Madeleine Albright dismissed it as a "half-measure."

"I'm encouraged by any good word," the president said. "But I think that the conditions that we set out are the minimal ones to make this work."

NATO's conditions for ending the bombing include an immediate and verifiable end of violence and repression in Kosovo, the withdrawal of Serb forces and paramilitary police from Kosovo, the deployment in Kosovo of an international military force, a return of all refugees and the establishment of an interim political solution.

Replying to the announcement, alliance spokesman Jamie Shea said the NATO air campaign would continue until Milosevic met its terms.

"Operation Allied Force will continue until those conditions have been fulfilled and fulfilled in full,"

Shea said in Brussels, Belgium.

Approximately 40,000 Yugoslav troops, police and special forces are believed to be in Kosovo, and they are widely blamed for expelling some 700,000 Kosovars into neighboring Macedonia, Albania and Montenegro.

Before NATO air strikes began on March 24, Milosevic had an estimated 12,000 troops in the province, including regular and special police, and Yugoslav army troops stationed along the volatile border with Albania.

Fighting in Kosovo erupted in February 1998, when Milosevic sent thousands of troops in to crush the Kosovo Liberation Army, which is fighting for independence from Serbia. The announcement Monday said the government's anti-rebel operations were finished.

"Considering the fact that the actions against the so-called Kosovo Liberation Army have been completed, the Yugoslav army supreme command ordered the beginning of the partial withdrawal of the army and police units beginning May 9, 2200 hours," the statement said, adding that security forces would be reduced to "peacetime levels" when agreement on a "U.N. mission in Kosovo" is reached.

U.S. companies lie low in China

Because of the protests against the bombing of the Chinese Embassy, many U.S. businesses close down.

By Joe McDonald
Associated Press

SHANGHAI, China — Kentucky Fried Chicken outlets in China were closed because of damage by protesters, while an investment conference in Beijing was called off.

A bomb threat to an American company emptied an office building.

Worried U.S. companies canceled public activities Monday, and foreign employees tried to stay out of sight. While many said violent anti-American protests won't affect long-term plans to do business in China, others worried that already slowing foreign investment could be hurt.

Among the casualties was a high-level meeting between state-owned China Construction Bank and U.S. investment house Goldman Sachs and Co., which was canceled after the Chinese couldn't guarantee security.

"If this continues, it will be negative for investor sentiment," Fang Shinghai, a Construction Bank executive, told Dow Jones Newswires.

Companies with distinctly American identities were targeted by protesters angry at NATO's bombing of the Chinese Embassy in Yugoslavia.

Kentucky Fried Chicken said three of its restaurants in the southern city of Changsha and one in Hefei in the East were closed after extensive damage Sunday by protesters.

A restaurant in the western city of Xi'an closed after police warned they couldn't control protesters outside, said Tony Chan, a spokesman in Shanghai for Tricom Global Restaurants Ltd., which owns 310 Kentucky Fried Chicken restaurants and 40 Pizza Huts in China.

"None of the Pizza Huts has been attacked. Maybe they think it's Italian," Chan said.

Three of the 54 McDonald's restaurants in Beijing closed Sunday "for the safety of the staff and customers," but reopened Monday, said Mayee Tang, a McDonald's spokeswoman in Hong Kong.

The company is looking into reports of vandalism at its other outlets, Tang said.

In Shanghai, police evacuated a building Monday that houses foreign companies after a bomb threat was telephoned to Connell Bros. Co. Ltd., a San Francisco-based trading firm. Other tenants include Budweiser Brewing Co. Ltd. and the British Council, a government cultural agency.

A bomb squad searched the building, found nothing, and reopened it after about three hours. Connell closed its office for the rest of the day.

Harrington Johnson, managing director of Connell Bros. in Hong Kong, said he suspected the company was targeted because its name in Chinese is "American Mutual Benefit Company."

Despite security fears, both China and its foreign investors have strong incentives to keep doing business.

Rare goals by Eastwood and Hecht lift Blues a give-and-go with Demitra and slipped a backhand past Belfour. "He's a great player and to play with him is a pleasure," Hecht said. "I'm learning a lot."

Demitra got open when he avoided a check from Richard Matvichuk.

"I got a little bit lucky and just moved my body and he missed me," Demitra said. "All of a sudden I got almost a breakaway and I just gave it to Hecht."

The tight-checking game was in stark contrast to Game 2, which was filled with odd-man rushes. The Blues, playing in front of the team's first sellout crowd of the playoffs, outshot the Stars 24-18 in regulation.

A four-minute high-sticking penalty on Blues captain Chris Pronger, who caught Derian Hatcher in the face, helped the Stars get off to a fast start. Hull scored his second goal of the playoffs, and only Dallas' third in 33 power-play opportunities, with a shot from the left circle off a feed from Nieuwendyk at 3:07.

The Blues got off only three shots in the first period, but tied it on a fluky goal at 2:58 of the second. Ricard Persson flipped the puck end-over-end toward the net and it deflected off Eastwood's glove and Sergei Zubov's stick before eluding Belfour.

It was Eastwood's seventh career playoff goal in 62 games and second point in 10 games this postseason.

scored 18 points for the Kings, who took the lead late in the third quarter and held off the veteran-laden Jazz down the stretch.

The Kings were blown out 117-87 in Game 1. The Game 2 win was Sacramento's first playoff victory since April 28, 1996.

Webber opened the game by lowering his shoulder and dropping Stockton as the guard came through the lane on Utah's first possession. The flagrant foul knocked the wind out of Stockton, but he hit the two free throws.

After the game, the Kings jumped, screamed and hugged each other on the sideline, while the Jazz left the court quickly to a smattering of boos.

The Jazz lost at home for the third time in five playoff games dating to last year's NBA Finals. The Jazz's franchise home playoff record fell to 60-24, though it's still the fourth best mark in league history.

After shooting 13-of-22 in Game 1, Stockton and Jeff Hornacek were 7-of-23 from the field Monday. Jon Barry and Vernon Maxwell each scored 12 points for the Kings, and Barry hit consecutive 3-pointers early in the fourth quarter that put Sacramento up by double digits.

rebounds for the Knicks, but he was hampered by foul troubles, as were Sprewell and Kurt Thomas.

Hawks 89, Pistons 69

ATLANTA — The Atlanta Hawks would probably like to start every game in the third quarter.

For the second time in the best-of-5 series, Dikembe Mutombo and the Hawks dominated Detroit after halftime and grabbed a commanding lead over the Pistons with their second straight 20-point victory, 89-69 Monday night.

Detroit had no one to contain Mutombo, who controlled the game at both ends of the court. He set a personal playoff high with 28 points and also grabbed 13 rebounds, after burning the Pistons for 17 points, 19 rebounds and six blocks in the opener.

The Pistons, held to a team playoff low of 70 points in Game 1, needed only two days to break the mark. In fact, Monday's contest followed a nearly identical pattern as Game 1, won by the Hawks 90-70 after they held the Pistons to just 27 points in the second half — including a scoreless streak of 7 1/2 minutes in the third quarter.

This time, Atlanta trailed 44-43 at the break, only to crush the Pistons by scoring the first 17 points of the second half. Detroit finally broke the run on Jerry Stackhouse's 16-foot jumper from the corner with 6:21 remaining.

By then, the game was over — and Detroit's season might be, too. Game 3 is Wednesday night at the Palace of Auburn Hills.

The Pistons have been unable to counter the 7-foot-2 Mutombo, long one of the NBA's most stifling defensive players but a major offensive force in this series. Playing all but two minutes, he was 13-of-14 from the field.

Mutombo eclipsed his season high of 24 points and his playoff best of 26, set against Detroit in the first round of the 1997 postseason.

Steve Smith, who added 21 points, led the Hawks during the deciding run by scoring nine of the 17 points, including two 3-pointers.

Detroit made a run at tying the lowest-scoring quarter in playoff history, sitting on six points in the final minute before Lindsey Hunter hit a jumper with 33 seconds remaining. Two free throws left the Pistons with a dismal 10-point period on 3-of-15 shooting.

Kings 101, Jazz 90

SALT LAKE CITY — Nine seconds into the game, Chris Webber slammed John Stockton to the floor. Forty-seven minutes later, he was still towering over the Utah Jazz.

Webber scored 20 points and hit consecutive hook shots over Karl Malone in the closing minutes as the Sacramento Kings evened their best-of-5 series with a 101-90 win over the Utah Jazz in Game 2 Monday night.

The Jazz got just two field goals, both from Malone, over the first 9 1/2 minutes of the fourth quarter and turned the ball over on four straight possessions in the closing minutes. Malone scored 33 points, but his teammates were just 20-for-56 from the field.

Sacramento didn't fare much better, scoring just once in a span of more than five minutes late in the game, but Webber and Vlade Divac scored clutch points to clinch the upset. Game 3 is Wednesday night at Arco Arena in Sacramento.

One game after suffering the worst playoff loss in the Kings' 51-year history, the young Sacramento team showed a world of maturity. Divac and Jason Williams each the Baltimore Orioles.

Aomar's sacrifice fly in the seventh inning off Juan Guzman (1-4) helped him defeat his former teammates and came shortly after Belle got caught off the bag for the final out in the top of the seventh.

David Justice, Richie Sexson and Wil Cordero homered, and Dave Burba (3-1) pitched seven solid innings for the Indians.

Jeff Conine went 3-for-4 with a homer for the Orioles, who lost for just the second time in eight games.

Royals 8, Twins 4

MINNEAPOLIS — Johnny Damon had four hits, including a two-run homer, as the Kansas City Royals completed a four-game sweep of the Minnesota Twins with an 8-4 win Monday night.

Damon, who had four RBIs Sunday, extended his hitting streak to 14 games, the longest in the American League this season, with three singles and the homer. He scored twice and drove in three runs, helping send the Twins to their sixth straight loss.

Damon hit .556 (10-for-18) as Kansas City swept a four-game series for the first time since May 6-9, 1996 against the Angels. The Royals have won 15 of their last 18 games at the Metrodome, where the Twins are just 5-15 this season, the worst home record in the league.

Jay Witasich (1-2) allowed three runs and five hits in 6-2-3 innings. He retired 11 consecutive batters during one stretch between the second and sixth innings, but tired in the seventh and left after home runs by Marty Cordova and Terry Steinbach pulled Minnesota to 7-3.

LaTroy Hawkins (1-6) gave up seven runs and 10 hits in 6-2-3 innings. Minnesota has scored just 22 runs in Hawkins' seven starts and only two while he was in the game.

White Sox 5, Rangers 2

CHICAGO — Jamie Navarro pitched four-hit ball for eight innings and Magglio Ordonez hit his eighth homer of the season Monday night as the Chicago White Sox beat the Texas Rangers 5-2.

Navarro (2-3), still trying to regain the form that made him the Chicago Cubs' ace in 1995, had lost his last two starts. But he was dominant the entire night, allowing only one run.

Navarro struck out four, walked one and shut down a Texas team that arrived in Chicago fresh from a 20-hit game in Toronto on Sunday night.

After Tom Goodwin led off the game with a single, Navarro didn't give up another hit until the fourth inning.

Mark McLemore and Juan Gonzalez had singles in the fourth as Texas scored its first run. Navarro gave up another single to Ivan Rodriguez in the seventh.

Bob Howry pitched the ninth for the White Sox, giving up Rafael Palmeiro's RBI single.

Astros 6, Pirates 0

HOUSTON — Mike Hampton pitched a five-hitter to win his fourth consecutive decision, leading the Houston Astros over the Pittsburgh Pirates 6-0 Monday night.

Hampton (4-1) struck out seven and walked none in his first shutout and complete game since a seven-hitter against the New York Mets on April 21, 1998. He also kept up his hot hitting going 1-for-3 to raise his average to .286.

Hampton, who got his fifth career shutout, has allowed just one run and seven hits in his last 16 innings, lowering his ERA to 2.83. He is 4-0 in his last five starts against the Pirates.

Pete Schourek (1-3) allowed six runs, nine hits and five walks in four innings.

Cardinals 5, Phillies 2

ST. LOUIS — Mark McGwire hit his first home run at home in nearly a month and the St. Louis Cardinals snapped the Philadelphia Phillies' five-game winning streak, 5-2 Monday night.

McGwire connected in the sixth inning against Carlton Loewer for his seventh home run. The two-run shot was McGwire's first homer at Busch Stadium since April 11 and ended a 1-17-16 slump.

Kent Bottenfield (5-1) allowed two runs and eight hits in eight innings.

Rockies 10, Mets 3

DENVER — Henry Blanco hit his first home run since 1997 and Dante Bichette homered and tripled Monday night as the Colorado Rockies ended a three-game losing streak with a 10-3 victory over the New York Mets.

Blanco's three-run homer was the second of his career, the other coming on Sept. 28, 1997, when he played for Los Angeles.

Todd Helton drove in three runs for the Rockies. Luis Lopez and Jermaine Allensworth hit solo home runs for the Mets. Pedro Astacio (3-3) won his third straight start, striking out seven in eight innings. Al Leiter (1-4) gave up eight hits and walked six in seven innings.

Mike Piazza hit an RBI single in the Mets' first. Both benches were warned in the second after Astacio hit Bobby Bonilla in the right knee — Bonilla left the game in the fourth. Astacio helped himself in the second with an RBI single. Bichette's fourth home run made it 2-1 in the third.

Chiasson's BAC was 0.27 at time of death

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Steve Chiasson of the Carolina Hurricanes was drunk when he was killed in a pickup truck accident last week, a toxicology report showed Monday.

His blood alcohol level was more than three times the legal limit, the state Medical Examiner's Office in Chapel Hill said.

Chiasson's blood alcohol level was 0.27 when he died May 3. The legal limit in North Carolina is 0.08.

The 32-year-old player, an NHL defenseman for 13 years, was killed in a single-vehicle accident. He was thrown from his truck after leaving a party at the home of teammate Gary Roberts.

The accident happened hours after the Hurricanes had been eliminated from the playoffs in Boston. Teammate Kevin Dineen said Chiasson refused to wait for a taxi and decided to drive to his nearby home.

Police said Chiasson was traveling 74 mph in a 55 mph zone when the accident occurred about 4 a.m. Chiasson is survived by his wife, Susan, and three young children.

"I was there with Steve," Dineen said Monday. "I told Sue's family they should be prepared for this."

NBA tabs Armstrong for Sixth Man award

ORLANDO, Fla. — Darrell Armstrong hoisted the trophy and smiled for photographers. When he lowered the NBA's Sixth Man award back to the table, he sighed.

"That's my weightlifting for today," the 6-foot-1, 180-pound guard said, flexing his arms. "This thing is pretty heavy."

The fifth-year pro who helped the Orlando Magic to the second-best record in the Eastern Conference was honored Monday as the league's best player who came off the bench in more games than he started.

Armstrong, a football placekicker in college who played in five different pro basketball leagues before finally catching on with the NBA, averaged career-highs in points (13.8), assists (6.7), rebounds (3.6), steals (2.16) and minutes per game (30) while appearing as a reserve in 35 of 50 games.

He led the Magic in assists and fourth-quarter scoring (4.5) and made 161 of 178 shots from the foul line to rank third in the league in free-throws percentage (.904).

Buckeyes lose two basketball players

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Two players expected to be mainstays on Ohio State's team next season — sophomore forward Jon Sanderson and 7-foot-3 junior-college recruit Aleksandar Radojevic — will not play for the Buckeyes.

Sanderson, who started every regular season game during Ohio State's turnaround 27-9 run to the Final Four, has decided to transfer.

Radojevic, a native of Montenegro who played last season at Barton County (Kan.) Community College, was ruled ineligible by the NCAA for playing four games and a total of 19 minutes — and earning $13,000 — on a Yugoslavian professional team two years ago.

Tuinei sought heroin prior to her death

McKINNEY, Texas — Former Dallas Cowboys star Mark Tuinei went to an apartment to obtain heroin in the night before he died and apparently used it as well as the drug Ecstasy, one of the team's players told police in a court document.

The document, which investigators filed to get a warrant to search Tuinei's house, contains information from Cowboys running back Nicky Suaula, who said he spent last Wednesday evening with Tuinei in a Dallas apartment.

Suaula said he and Tuinei went to the apartment to get the heroin and "Mark went into the bedroom, and he said, 'Here it is.'"

"When Mark came back to the living room, he looked as if he was passing out. Nicky advised (that Mark started having problems and stopped breathing," the affidavit said. Suaula said Tuinei was alive when he dragged the 6-foot-5, 320-pound ex-offensive lineman from the apartment to his car.

Suaula then drove to Tuinei's house in Plano, suburban Dallas. Suaula got two blankets from the house and slept in the car with Tuinei until about 5:30 a.m. Thursday, he told police.

"When Nicky woke up, Mark was not breathing," the document said.

Duval and Woods will go one-on-one

David Duval and Tiger Woods have spent the past two months denying a rivalry. An 18-hole exhibition between them on prime-time television probably won't change their minds.

"It doesn't determine the best players," Duval said Monday during a conference call to announce the "Showdown at Sherwood," which ABC Sports will televise live on Aug. 2 at Sherwood Country Club in Thousand Oaks, Calif.

Straw finally charged

TAMPA, Fla. — New York Yankees outfielder Darryl Strawberry finally was charged Monday by Florida police with possessing cocaine and soliciting a prostitute.

The New York Yankees outfielder is scheduled to be arraigned on May 26, Assistant State Attorney Pam Bondi said.

Strawberry, who has a home in Tampa, was arrested on April 14 a few miles from the Yankees' extended spring training camp. Police said he offered an undercover female officer $50 for sex, and that he had 0.3 grams of cocaine wrapped in a $20 bill in his wallet. He was released on $6,000 bond.

Webb wins again

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. — A long and bizarre Titleholders Championship ended Monday with a degree of normality — Karrie Webb, a winner once again.

In a back-nine shootout caused by three storm delays, Webb made three birdies in seven holes for a three-stroke victory over Annika Sorenstam, giving the 24-year-old Australian her fourth win of the year.

Three Hawks prepare for nationals

By Lisa Colonno
The Daily Iowan

All-Big Ten sophomore Tyler Cleveland and the No. 1 women's doubles team of freshman Toni Neykova and junior Shera Wiegler are NCAA Tournament-bound.

Neykova and Wiegler have been selected to participate in the NCAA Doubles Championships, which will be held May 24-28 in Gainesville, Fla. They are the first doubles team in Iowa women's history to qualify.

"They played very well, especially down the stretch," coach Paul Wardlaw said. "They had a great win against Wisconsin in the Big Ten Tournament, which was Wisconsin's only Big Ten loss all season. They complement each other well."

At No. 1, the tandem amassed a 11-4 overall record after being paired on Feb. 27. Neykova and Wiegler held a No. 38 national ranking during the season and defeated Ohio State's No. 1 doubles, the nation's No. 16 team.

Cleveland, who will compete May 26-30 in Athens, Ga., is the first Iowa men's player to be selected for the individual tournament since 1989. In the No. 1 singles position, he compiled a 30-12 overall record and a 7-3 Big Ten record, beating three players who were ranked in the nation's top 10 at some point during the season.

"This has been a goal of mine," said Cleveland, who holds a No. 54 ranking. "After last year, when I had some success, I thought that the NCAA's were a realistic goal, but a high goal. It is nice to be able to achieve that."

Elliott's progress good enough to send him home

Former Iowa defensive coordinator Bob Elliott's month-long hospital stay ended Sunday, when the coach was sent home.

By Mike Kelly
The Daily Iowan

Former Iowa assistant football coach Bob Elliott was discharged from the University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics Sunday after spending three weeks there recovering from a bone marrow transplant.

Dean Borg, Director of Public Information for the UIHC, said Elliott was recovering well enough to make brief trips away from the hospital in recent days before being released Sunday.

"He's progressing as well as can be expected," Borg said. "His recovery is fairly typical of someone that has had a bone marrow transplant."

The 46-year-old former Hawkeye player and coach had been in the hospital since April 7 and underwent the procedure on April 16 to combat a rare blood disorder called polycythemia vera. The disease causes the body to hyperactively produce red blood cells, white platelets. If left untreated, the disorder could turn into leukemia.

Sunday became a memorable Mother's Day for Elliott's mother, Barbara, and his wife, Joey. Elliott has two children, Grant and Jessica.

Barbara Elliott was relieved and thankful that the doctors were able to administer her son's transplant so successfully.

"We feel so fortunate that things fell into place so well," she said. "It was like it was meant to be."

Elliott's cousin, Gregg Underwood, of Chattanooga, Tenn., donated the marrow that was a perfect match for the transplant.

Elliott's white blood cells and platelets continue to increase, which indicates that the new bone marrow and his blood were grafting well, Borg said in a statement released Monday.

Borg said Elliott will continue to receive treatment "very frequently" at the UIHC.

Doctors have told Elliott he must keep a low social profile during his recovery. As a result of the bone marrow transplant process, his immune system is weakened and will continue to be for the next several months, limiting his public appearances.

WESTERN CONFERENCE SEMIFINALS

Fuhr-ious attack leads Blues

Pavol Demitra's OT goal gave St. Louis a 3-2 win in a hard-hitting game against Dallas

By R.B. Fallstrom
Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — After a slow start in the playoffs, Pavol Demitra is the St. Louis Blues' go-to guy again.

The team's leading scorer continued a postseason surge when he scored from the right side of the net at 2:43 of overtime for a 3-2 victory over the Dallas Stars on Monday night.

"Everybody tried to help me and I'm back," Demitra said. "I'm just happy and I'm enjoying my time on the ice and enjoying my time with the puck."

Demitra has five goals and eight points in the playoffs, including an assist in Game 3, and three of the goals have come in the last two games. He was 10th in the NHL with 89 points, but had entered the game a team-worst minus-4.

The game-winner came off a setup from Geoff Courtnall. Demitra knifed in front of a Stars defenseman and beat Ed Belfour to put an early end to the Blues' fifth overtime game in 10 postseason games.

"Somebody made a nice pass out of the corner," Belfour said. "I wish I could have gotten further out. Demitra made a nice shot."

Two less-likely sources of offense, faceoff specialist Mike Eastwood and rookie Jochen Hecht, also scored as the Blues cut the Stars' series lead to 2-1 heading into Game 4 Wednesday night.

The Stars, the NHL regular-season champions with a franchise-record 114 points, missed a chance to put the Blues in an almost impossible situation. Only two teams have recovered from a 3-0 series deficit, the last the New York Islanders in 1975 against Pittsburgh.

"We never thought about losing," Demitra said. "We know we can beat Dallas, and we proved it."

Dallas, which got goals from Darryl Sydor and Brett Hull, won

Game 2 in overtime on a goal by Joe Nieuwendyk. The Stars' franchise-record six-game playoff winning streak came to an end.

"As much as you don't want to lose, you can't win them all," said Hull, who played his first postseason game in St. Louis since leaving the Blues after 10 seasons. "You have to battle harder because it's the playoffs."

"The team that makes the most mistakes usually loses, and tonight it was us."

Sydor forced the overtime with his first goal of the playoffs at 9:08 of the third. Grant Fuhr got a glove on Pat Verbeek's drive from the slot, and Grant Marshall got his stick on the rebound before Sydor tapped it in.

Hecht, who was with the Blues for only three games during the regular season, had given St. Louis the lead at 4:52 of the third. Hecht, the leading scorer at Worcester of the AHL with 21 goals and 56 points who joined St. Louis on Saturday, worked

Garcia-parra goes off on Seattle pitching

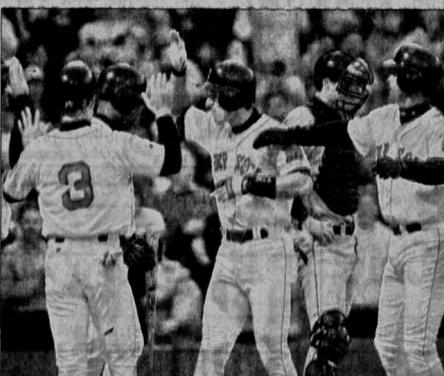

Nomar Garcia-parra hit three home runs in a 12-4 Red Sox rout of the Mariners.

(BOSTON) (AP) — Nomar Garcia-parra hit two grand slams and a two-run homer to become the first AL player with 10 RBIs since 1975, leading the Boston Red Sox past the Seattle Mariners 12-4 Monday night for their fifth straight win.

Garcia-parra, who tied a team record for RBIs, hit his first slam off Brett Hinchliffe (0-2) in the first inning. He then sliced a two-run shot around the right-field foul pole off Hinchliffe in the third.

After fouling out in the fourth and walking in the sixth, Garcia-parra hit his second grand slam off Eric Weaver in the eighth for a 12-3 lead.

Garcia-parra, whose previous career high was five RBIs, began the game with only one lifetime slam — also against Seattle.

Garcia-parra became the first major leaguer to drive in 10 runs since Mark Whiten had 12 RBIs and four homers for St. Louis on Sept. 7, 1993, at Cincinnati. The last AL player to do it was Fred Lynn for Boston on June 18, 1975.

The 10 RBIs tied the Boston record Lynn shared with Norm Zauchin (May 27, 1955) and Rudy York (July 27, 1946).

Heat even up series

Alonzo Mourning's 26 points lead the hot-shooting Heat to a 10-point win Monday night.

MIAMI (AP) — The Miami Heat still have a shot against the New York Knicks.

Alonzo Mourning scored 26 points and Miami rediscovered its shooting touch Monday night, hitting 51 percent to beat New York 83-73 and even their best-of-5 series at 1-1.

The Heat hit a season-low 35 percent in a 20-point loss to New York in Game 1, but this time they overcame 18 turnovers and another poor shooting performance by Tim Hardaway.

Dan Majerle made two 3-pointers, his first baskets of the series, to thwart New York's comeback hopes in the fourth quarter.

Miami also clamped down defensively, holding the Knicks to 39 percent shooting. Latrell Sprewell and Allan Houston, who scored 22 points apiece in Game 1, managed just 15 and 12, respectively.

The Heat's bench was better too in Game 2, with Terry Porter contributing 11 points and Clarence
