Downtown bars scanning the future of IDs

■ A new method of curbing underage drinking is trickling into downtown Iowa City.

By Glen Leyden
The Daily Iowan

Using a fake ID may no longer be so easy as scoring an expired driver's license from a 21-year-old friend.

An ID scanner, which enables bars and liquor stores to tell fact from fiction, is now being used at the Airliner, 22 S. Clinton St., and will soon be installed at the Fieldhouse Restaurant & Bar, 111 E. College St.

"We are trying to send the message that we do not want to sell to underage drinkers," said Randy Larson, co-owner of the Airliner.

"We are doing it because it is a good idea," said Fieldhouse manager Mike McConnell. "Hopefully, it will keep those with fake IDs from even entering the bar and rid us of the headache."

The scanner, which is operated by the doorman, quickly checks the magnetic strip on the back of IDs. The screen displays the person's name, age and the expiration date of the ID, Larson said.

IDs that are not legitimate or expired will be detected, and the people carrying them will not be let in. The scanner also detects IDs that have been reported lost, making it harder for someone of legal age to give an old ID to an underage person, Larson said.

The mere presence of the scanners may be enough to deter some UI students.

"I certainly would deter me from trying a fake ID, because I don't want to get caught and have to pay the fine for a fake ID," said Katie Foreman, a 19-year-old UI sophomore.

The scanner, however, cannot detect a valid ID that may have been lent to the user, Larson said.

"It is not going to solve all the problems of underage drinking, but it is a step in the right direction," he said.

The most common way for those who are underage to get into bars is by using IDs that have been loaned, said Darcy Firrell, a 22-year-old UI senior.

"In my experience, people use other people's real IDs; they rarely make them," she said.

Hy-Vee, 1720 Waterfront Drive, has also been using scanners when selling alcohol and tobacco.

But the scanners' price tag of nearly $300 and the perceived lack of a need may mean that some bar owners will look askance at the scanners.

It is not going to solve all the problems of underage drinking, but it is a step in the right direction.

— Randy Larson,
co-owner of the Airliner

"Right now, we don't see the need," said Chad Ambrose, manager at Malone's, 121 Iowa Ave. "We card hard as it is, and unless fake IDs become a problem, we don't need the expense."

But Brian Lueck, a 20-year-old UI sophomore, is convinced the scanners won't stop students from using fake IDs. "They won't make that big of a difference, because students always find ways to get around anything alcohol-related," he said.

78 days later, Serbs begin troop pullout

■ The Balkans are quiet as NATO suspends its air war and the U.N. authorizes a Kosovo peace force.

PRISTINA, Kosovo — Yugoslav troops rumbled out of Kosovo in trucks, armored cars and buses Thursday, prompting NATO to suspend its punishing 78-day air war and the United Nations to authorize a heavily armed security force to restore peace and begin reconstruction.

NATO troops massed in neighboring Macedonia to begin the peacekeeping mission, with the first soldiers ready to enter Kosovo as early as Saturday.

"We shall be off quite soon," British Lt. Gen. Michael Jackson, commander of NATO forces in Macedonia, said Thursday night.

Jackson also warned the rebel Kosovo Liberation Army not to try to take advantage of the withdrawal to pursue its fight with Serb forces.

He said U.N. Secretary-General Kofi Annan and other senior political leaders made it "quite clear that it would be foolish in the extreme to interfere with or create incidents" connected with the pullout.

"I would endorse that and say it would indeed be very stupid," Jackson said.

Even after the Wednesday signing of a Kosovo peace plan, some local skeptics believe that Yugoslav President Slobodan Milosevic may not follow through on his end of the bargain.

Under the plan, NATO agreed to stop bombing Yugoslav territory provided that Milosevic removed his troops from Kosovo and allowed the Kosovars back into their homeland.

UI freshman Mike Laughlin questioned Milosevic's credibility.

"The Kosovo peace agreement is a step in the right direction, but Milosevic has proven to be untrustworthy," he said. "And I don't see him following the rules."

Sara Martin, a recent UI graduate, said she is also uncertain about Milosevic following through on the plan.

Study: Debt, child care keep women out of college

■ A study reports that financial aid, child-care support and flexible schedules can help women's college enrollment.

By Anjetta McQueen
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The child-care programs and flexible schedules that allow some mothers to succeed in the workplace could also bring them to college campuses, researchers who surveyed hundreds of prospective students said Thursday.

"It would seem if any institution is to capture the student of the 21st century, it would have to be more responsive to these needs," said Maggie Ford, president of the American Association of University Women, which released a survey showing that debt, children, age and anxiety keep many women from pursuing college educations.

Of the 1,070 respondents to the group's national telephone survey this winter, women were more likely than men not to attend college initially because of their credit-card debt or lack of scholarships and other college aid. Another barrier to college cited by women more often than men was the need to care for their children.

The respondents, all high school graduates, were questioned in December 1998 and January 1999. They represented three groups: those who went straight from high school to work in the previous few years; those who went directly from high school to college in the previous few years; and those who went from high school to work for at least a year and then to college. The work-to-college group had graduated from high school within the previous seven years. The survey had a margin of error of plus or minus 5 percentage points.

UI to honor 15 alumni in star-studded fête Saturday

■ As part of a reunion weekend, chosen alumni will receive Distinguished Alumni Awards.

By George Hild
The Daily Iowan

At an awards ceremony Saturday, the UI will honor 15 alumni who have made significant contributions to the university and have exhibited leadership in their lives.

The Distinguished Alumni Awards ceremony has been taking place annually since 1963. The awards are the highest accolades alumni can receive, said an UI Alumni Association official.

"Almost all of those recognized are emotionally moved in some way or another," said Vince Nelson, executive director of the Alumni Association.

Their emotions are understandable, he said, because they have been chosen from as many as 80 candidates — a number that makes the event for the select few that much more special, he said.

UI senior Nick Taiber agrees that the awards are an honor for the alumni. As an alumni ambassador, Taiber acts as a liaison between the UI and the alumni and their related programs.

"It's more than just the award," he said. "It's about paying public credit to those who have contributed to the university and community."

Former Iowa Gov. Terry Branstad, who is among the winners, said he was unaware of the selection.

"It came completely out of the blue," he said. "I didn't even know I was a candidate."

Branstad said some of his biggest accomplishments have been in the realm of education. He credits many of his education policies as governor and their subsequent success with playing a large part in winning the award.

Meanwhile, preparations to secure the alumni's generosity are underway. "We always hope that we can engender them to make fresh financial contributions at a later date," Nelson said.

Despite that obvious goal, he said, the event is held to be enjoyed by all involved.

"We wish to provide a valuable and memorable experience for them," Nelson said.

The candidates are first nominated, usually by a friend, co-worker or family member, and then selected by a committee, Nelson said. A group of Alumni Association volunteers later reviews the selections and make the final decision, he said.

In addition to Branstad, the others who will be honored at the event are: John Colloton, George Garcia, Mo Mowlam, Darlene Paris, Richard Stanley, V. Hale Starr and R. William Van Sant (for achievement); Hayden Fry and David Morrell (faculty awards); McKinley Davis, Lois Eichacker and Jim Holton (service awards); David Hamod (young alumni award); and Ailene Liechty (friend award).

MORE STUPID PEOPLE IN THE NEWS

• Portsmouth, R.I., police charged Gregory Rosa, 25, with a string of vending machine robberies in January when he (1) fled from police inexplicably when they spotted him loitering around a vending machine and (2) later tried to post his $400 bail in coins.

• Karen Lee Joachimmi, 20, was arrested in Lake City, Fla., for robbery of a Howard Johnson's motel. She was armed only with an electric chain saw, which was not plugged in.

• The Ann Arbor News crime column reported that a man walked into a Burger King at 7:50 a.m., flashed a gun, and demanded cash. The clerk turned him down because he said he couldn't open the cash register without a food order. When the man ordered onion rings, the clerk said they weren't available for breakfast. The man, frustrated, walk away.

• David Posman, 33, was arrested recently in Providence, R.I., after allegedly knocking out an armored car driver and stealing the nearest four bags of money. It turned out they contained $800 in pennies, weighed 30 pounds each, and slowed him to a stagger during his get-away so that police officers easily jumped him from behind.

Ryder sells restored house

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Winona Ryder sold her former home in Beverly Hills for about $900,000, or about $100,000 below the asking price, the Los Angeles Times reported Thursday.

The buyer is a former "Seinfeld" writer whom the paper didn't identify.

Built in 1926, the 2,000-square-foot, Spanish-style home has three bedrooms, limestone floors and a fire-place. Ryder bought and restored the house in 1996.

The star of the upcoming film Girl Interrupted purchased a nearby home last year for $2.5 million.

Ali, plaintiffs spar over movie rights

ROANOKE, Va. (AP) — Columbia Pictures has asked a federal judge to dismiss a $50 million lawsuit over the rights to a movie about Muhammad Ali.

The plaintiffs, former Ali spiritual adviser Jabir Herbert Muhammad and Jason Hirschfeld, the son of Ali's former lawyer, allege they are partners with Ali in Muhammad Ali Productions Inc., a company created in 1988 to develop "any authorized biographical or autobiographical story of the life and times of Ali."

Columbia attorney Jim Quinn told U.S. District Judge Samuel Wilson Wednesday that the case is really a breach-of-contract matter between Ali and the plaintiffs.

Dale Cooter, the attorney for the plaintiffs, argued Ali did not have the authority to sell the rights to his life story.

Murdoch divorce won't topple empire

LOS ANGELES (AP) — News Corp. Chairman Rupert Murdoch and his wife, Anna, have reached a divorce settlement that preserves his control over his global media empire, the couple said.

In a joint statement, the couple described the divorce as amicable.

Anna Murdoch, 54, filed for divorce in July 1998 in Los Angeles, raising questions about whether Rupert Murdoch's control of News Corp. might be threatened under California's joint property laws.

"The Murdoch family ownership and the management of News Corp. will not be affected," the couple said.

100-year-old alumnus to attend UI reunion

At 100 years old, Ralph McIntosh is truly a loyal UI alumnus.

The 1923 graduate will attend the UI Alumni Association's Spring Reunion Weekend activities this weekend, his 76th class reunion. He will travel from his Rockford, Ill., home with his daughter and son-in-law and attend the All-Class Banquet Friday night in the IMU Main Lounge.

"I'll be there with bells on," said McIntosh, who is looking forward to sitting at President Mary Sue Coleman's table at the banquet.

At the reunion, he hopes to find members of the UI swim clubs from the 1920s, including one woman who supposedly swam the Iowa River from Coralville to Iowa City.

McIntosh was a lifeguard at the women's swimming pool at the UI and knew many of the young women who swam there. He said he wasn't allowed to dive in and save them in distress but could pull them out with a 10-foot pole.

Besides working at a few jobs to pay his way through college (tuition was $40 per year in 1923), McIntosh spent most of his time studying in the College of Commerce. He and his twin brother, Roy, enrolled at the UI after working in government secretarial jobs in Washington, D.C.

"Our mother told us that if you were going to attend college, you were going to pay your own way," McIntosh said, adding that he also waited tables at a sorority and did office work. He was able to graduate with money left over in his college savings account.

"We did 4 1/2 years of college work in 3 1/2 years. We took six-week sessions in the summer to finish sooner," he said.

Here comes Miss Gay I.C.

Gay Pride Month continues with a drag show pageant this weekend.

By Kelly Wilson
The Daily Iowan

As part of the celebration of Gay Pride Month, a new queen will reign over Iowa City when the winner of the Miss Gay Iowa City pageant ascends the throne this weekend.

Eight contestants from around the Midwest are scheduled to compete in the pageant at the Union Bar, 121 E. College St., on June 13 at 9 p.m.

Diva de Paris, pageant organizer and co-emcee, said events such as the pageant are held to raise awareness in the community about the presence of drag performers.

"The pageant is going to be one of the biggest events during Gay Pride Month," she said. "Members of the gay and straight communities are really encouraged to attend."

UI senior Christa Raszkowski, who will attend the pageant, said she has been to eight drag shows in the past couple years. She likes to attend such events because they are different from the typical bar scene, she said.

"Drag shows are a nice change of pace, because they show you a different side of Iowa City," Raszkowski said. "The costumes and makeup really let the performers be creative and express themselves."

Contestants will be judged by the style and fit of their evening gowns and by the talent displayed while entertaining the audience. De Paris said the talent competition should be especially interesting because it will range from serious female impersonations to comedy numbers.

This is the second year of the pageant in Iowa City. Last year's winner, Angel Phoenix, will be in attendance to pass the crown on to the new queen.

Phoenix said she has enjoyed performing in Iowa City because the liberal attitudes of the citizens allow opportunities that are not available in other places.

"Performing in a straight bar is pretty incredible; that sort of thing can't just happen everywhere," Phoenix said. "It really shows a degree of acceptance."

ICARE pancake fest flips up its heels

A breakfast will be held this weekend as a part of the Iowa City Arts Festival to raise funds for ICARE.

By Erica C. Fogue
The Daily Iowan

Live entertainment and gourmet food will be featured at this weekend's 12th annual pancake breakfast sponsored by the Iowa Center for AIDS Resources and Education.

The event, which raises funds for ICARE, 320 E. College St., will be held on the Pedestrian Mall at the corner of Dubuque and Washington streets on June 13 from 8:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. ICARE provides practical and emotional support for people living with HIV and AIDS; it also extends support to their families and caregivers.

Robert Morey of Brother's Keeper, an Iowa City acoustic duo that played at last year's event, said the breakfast is one of the group's favorite events.

"It shows Iowa City at its best," Morey said. "It brings together huge numbers of community sponsors and individuals who volunteer their time."

Brother's Keeper will perform at around 10 a.m. Other performers — including Big Wooden Radio, Deb Tiemans, Barbara Boyle and Jeffrey Morgan — are scheduled to play throughout the day.

More than 1,000 people are expected to attend the "fantasy meal" in its informal open-air setting, said Theresa Carbrey of New Pioneer Co-op, 22 S. Van Buren St., one of the breakfast's corporate sponsors.

"Come prepared to eat some fabulous food!" said Laura Hill, an ICARE representative.

The atmosphere is what draws a crowd to the event, said Robin Butler, co-owner of Alternatives Conserve Preserve Et Al., 323 E. Market St., another sponsor of the event.

"It's very family-oriented and festive," she said. "People feel they are contributing to a very good and important cause."

Another reason people are drawn to the event, Carbrey said, is to show support to ICARE and its cause.

"Initially, it proved a bit controversial, though now people have developed a greater understanding," she said.

The cost for the breakfast is $8; $4 for children under 12. Advance tickets may be purchased at New Pioneer Co-op, Alternatives and ICARE.

NYPD verdict should send message to other U.S. cities

Abner Louima, a Haitian immigrant who was falsely arrested and tortured in a New York precinct two years ago, achieved a significant victory Tuesday when NYPD Officer Charles Schwartz was convicted of assisting another officer in the abuse of Louima. The principal offender, Officer Justin Volpe, pleaded guilty to the assault two weeks ago.

Along with Louima's victory came a win against police brutality in cities from New York to Los Angeles, as a considerable precedent was set for future police violence cases. The most notable result of this case, which is still continuing, is not that two officers now face prison time, but that some of their own colleagues testified against them.

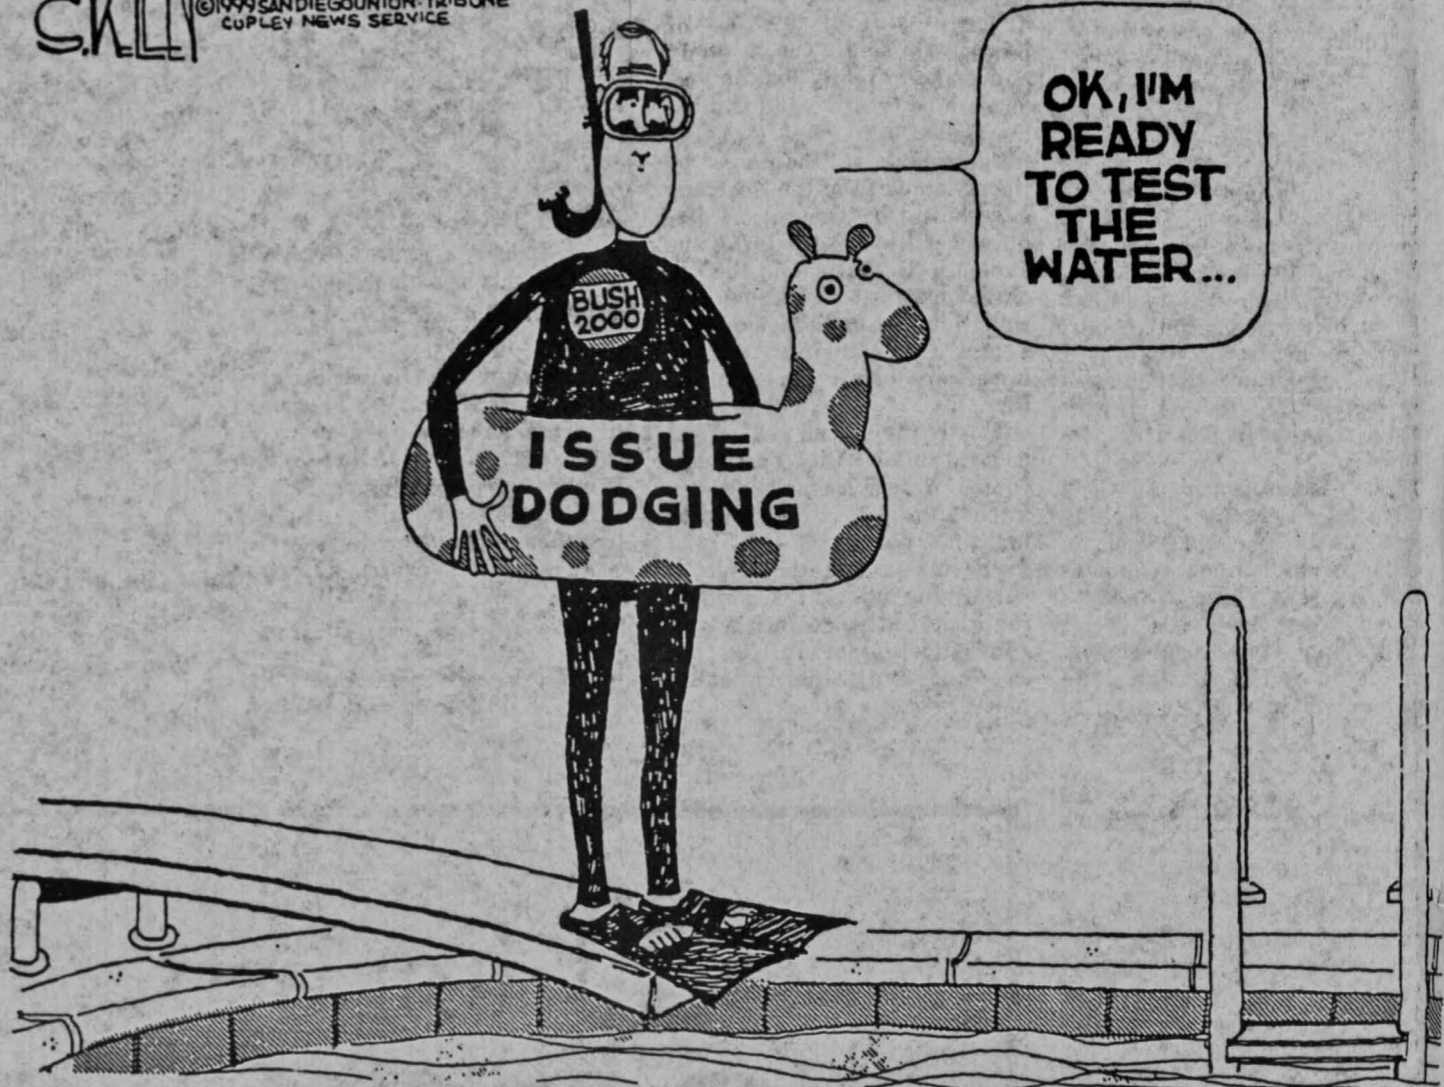

Police departments for years have been fortified against legal attack by an unwritten code of solidarity in which officers are reluctant to turn against one another, whether right or wrong. This "blue wall of silence" has continually interfered with the carrying out of justice in police cases. This was evident in Los Angeles in 1992, when four officers were initially acquitted in the beating of Rodney King, and in Iowa City in 1996, when the police officer responsible for the death of local resident Eric Shaw was allowed to leave the force without reprimand.

With four NYPD policemen testifying against their fellow officers, one must hope that the recent case in New York sets a trend across the nation. Police officers should be allowed to participate on either side of a court case against members of their own department without fear of stigmatization. In the future, said U.S. Attorney Zachary Carter to USA Today, "we'll see that officers realize the people who really betray them are not those who testify against other officers but those who misbehave in their presence."

Taking action against police in cases of wrongdoing has always been a difficult task, but recent events in the Louima case could help ease the burden on violated citizens and increase scrutiny within, as well as upon, police departments in other cities. As one of the last lines of civil protection, the police must prove capable of policing themselves as well as their constituents.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Spread the Hawkeye spirit

I am writing from Hamilton High School in Hamilton, Mich., where I have taught for the past 22 years. We are currently involved in something of a controversy concerning our school's use of the tiger hawk logo. I am writing in hopes of giving you a more complete perspective from this side. I have the feeling that the UI sees this as just a random abuse of its trademark; nothing could be further from the truth.

Hamilton is a small, rural community located in southwestern Michigan. Our school began in 1960, and students at that time had a contest to name the school mascot. The winning name selected by the students was "Hawkeyes," partly because of the success of the Iowa football and basketball teams at the time. Ever since, our community has taken great care to protect the image of the "Hawkeyes," partly because of the realization that it was "on loan" to us.

In those formative years, we often used an early version of "Herky" and over time made some changes, but all the while realizing that we must protect what the logo represents. So how did we come to use the tiger hawk?

Over the years, many Hamilton people would travel to or pass through Iowa and stop at businesses solely to buy Hawkeye merchandise and, as the UI used the tiger hawk more frequently, it became more familiar to us. Because it is so classy and so clearly personifies "Hawkeyes," there was greater interest to use it. This was 10-15 years ago.

I guess it just never really occurred to us that we would be offending anyone, partly because we were basically using it for nonprofit reasons, and it is sort of natural that virtually every high school in America borrows some aspect of their identity from a college or pro team.

So here we are, in an era in which colleges are understandably seeking to protect their images and important sources of revenue. I must, however, strongly disagree with Larry Bruner's statement: "If high schools were allowed to use the logo, it would no longer have value to the university." I feel that our use of the logo has given the UI identity and recognition all over Michigan.

Furthermore, as I said earlier, many people in our community go to Iowa to buy officially licensed products. Additionally, our school has paid royalties to the UI by buying some officially licensed merchandise to sell.

Our community and school have been devastated by the UI's stand. You must understand how important the school and its identity are to a small community. We have a history of using and revering the Iowa identification for 38 years and never were questioned. Is there anything we can do to get the UI to reconsider and make some sort of exception?

Please accept my views on behalf of the students and the community. "Hawkeyes" is something that means as much to us as it does to so many in Iowa. Help allow us to keep what best symbolizes that true "Hawkeye spirit."

UI faculty fight for territorial rights amid the clutter

Status is a strange thing to measure in the world of Academe.

In business, your status is generally defined by the size of your salary and your stock options. In politics, status changes rapidly, but seems at present to be defined by what you've invented lately (such as the Internet or a sudden love for New York) or by what your interns will do for you (or possibly, to you, depending how you define both "to" and "you").

But in academia, status is of necessity defined otherwise. Salary alone won't do it, because we academics refuse, in spite of all the evidence, to accept that football and basketball coaches are more important than ourselves. Most faculty don't invent much, because our concern is with the realm of supposedly pure ideas (with the recent exception of the dean of divinity at Harvard, at least as far as pure goes). And only a select few (or so the rumor goes) have interns.

So, status in academia is defined much more in terms of position, or territory if you will, than elsewhere in society. This has been brought home to me recently, as we here in the College of Engineering are undergoing a major disruption.

The renovation of our building and the significant addition to it means that everyone is moving offices. Furthermore, when all the dust settles, not only will everybody be in new offices, but also the worth of a given location in the college will have changed remarkably. And this latter point especially is unsettling.

The location of a faculty members' offices has long been a clear indication of their importance. Different faculty members have different goals in seeking out their ideal locations, but the really important thing about their office is that it is theirs. Faculty mark their offices as effectively as any other predator. That is not to say they urinate on the lintels (although they might). But faculty members find ways to mark their space.

This becomes most apparent when they have to move office. The first thing you learn is that faculty offices, like Dr. Who's Tardis, are much bigger on the inside than the outside. Look at how much stuff the average faculty member crams into his or her office. It is approximately five moving vans full of stuff.

This excess of material serves two purposes. First, almost any faculty office is piled high with books. Papers are scattered in piles all over the place. This is done to create an impression of erudition. We persuade ourselves that we can find any paper in this large agglomeration instantly, when, in fact, we spend most of our four and a half hours each week looking for bits of paper that we have put "in a safe place."

In essence, faculty offices are all so crammed with material that they are very close to gravitational collapse. We don't actually lose things in our offices, they just get sucked through the teeny little black holes that lurk beneath our desks.

But leaving aside such cosmological considerations, we also cram our offices full of junk (sorry, I mean scholarly articles, although the terms are often synonymous) so that we can't be moved without our consent. We have heard of people in industry having their desks cleared out, and one way in which we protect the whole tenure system is by making this impossible.

Of course, there are some few exceptions to this picture of a contented (if somewhat cramped) faculty member. You will occasionally visit faculty who have (horror of horrors) tidy desks! This is a sure sign that they are being won over to the dark side! Before you know it, they will leap out from behind their desks, wielding a twin-bladed light saber, and become associate deans or some such.

The only thing to do in cases like this is decide whether their office space is nicer than yours.

But the really disturbing aspect in the College of Engineering is not the gravitational disturbances and other health hazards caused by faculty moving from their offices. It is the extreme concern of the faculty about the location of their new office space. As has been noted, location is everything, but nobody knows yet which locations are going to be key. Where will the seats of power reside?

And what all this comes down to is that nobody really knows which offices the departmental secretaries (the true source of real power!) will have, and how the traffic will flow around them. Once that is known, our power structure will be clear, but until then, we faculty in engineering are like planets that have no sun about which to orbit. If you see us wandering lost and alone, do us a favor and buy us a cup of coffee!

Women already are more likely than their male counterparts to think their ages could be a barrier to college. The single biggest barrier to attending college, however, is money. Both sexes are equally likely to have a problem, but women are more likely to be concerned about credit-card debt and the cost of college. First District Rep. Jim Leach, R-Iowa, said he is unsure of many issues surrounding the agreement but added that he is hopeful it will work.

"What is still unknown is the duration and difficulty of the deployment facing NATO and U.S. troops in the region, as well as the ramifications for U.S.-Soviet and U.S.-Chinese relations as a result of the conflict in the first place," Leach said.

Debt, child care road blocks to women going to college

Women already in the work force were six times more likely than their male counterparts to think their ages could have been a barrier to college (18 percent of women, compared with 3 percent of men). Women going directly from high school to college worried more than men about college entrance exam scores.

The single biggest deterrent to attending college, however, was money. Both sexes cited it as a problem, but women in all three categories were more likely than men to be concerned that their credit-card debt and lack of college aid would keep them out of school. Women in all groups also wanted better information about financial aid and child-care support from colleges. Working women attending college for the first time were the most likely to want flexible class scheduling.

Those surveyed found community colleges most responsive, Ford said.

Pamela Haag, a senior university women association researcher, also pointed to American University in Washington, D.C., and Smith College in Northampton, Mass., for model programs that encourage mid-career enrollments. Such programs offer flexibility and special counseling, she said.

"As there are career changes and other transitions, there may be an element of necessity of being a student throughout one's life," said Haag, adding that 60 percent of college students over 25 years old are women. "These students bring great study skills and have a diverse population, which will result in more interesting, well-rounded research."

The survey showed that men and women had different reasons for going to college. Women were more likely to go for "personal enrichment" and interesting careers than men, who were more interested in getting the credential of a diploma.

tion wreaked by the bombing campaign and the imminent arrival of a huge foreign force on Yugoslav soil, President Slobodan Milosevic proclaimed victory.

"The people are the heroes," he said on national television at the same time that NATO Secretary-General Javier Solana announced the bombing campaign had been suspended.

In Washington, President Clinton told Americans Thursday night "we have achieved victory for a safer world" in Kosovo. He warned Serbs that the United States will not help them rebuild from bombing "as long as your nation is ruled by an indicted war criminal."

In an 11-minute address from the Oval Office, Clinton all but called for an uprising against Slobodan Milosevic, telling Serbs they had needlessly suffered air strikes because he was determined "to eliminate Kosovar Albanians from Kosovo, dead or alive."

"But we are ready to provide humanitarian aid now and to help to build a better future for Serbia, too, when its government represents tolerance and freedom, not repression and terror," Clinton added.

A wave of euphoria swept through the White House on the day the bombing stopped and Serb troops began withdrawing from Kosovo. But Clinton was somber as he warned of the dangers still facing 50,000 peacekeeping troops — including 7,000 American forces — in escorting refugees homes and clearing mines. The vanguard of U.S. forces went ashore in Greece and began heading overland to Macedonia to spearhead the entry into Kosovo.

West High coach resigns after drug bust

IOWA CITY (AP) — The girls' swimming coach at West High School has resigned following his arrest in May on felony drug charges.

T. J. Foust, 24, of North Liberty, is charged with delivery of cocaine and manufacturing marijuana.

The charges stem from an investigation during which Foust allegedly sold more than an ounce of cocaine to a police informant for $1,400, said Johnson County sheriff's Lt. Dave Henderson.

A subsequent search of an apartment rented by Foust, which was approximately 10 blocks from West High, turned up an indoor marijuana-growing operation, officials have said.

The investigation found no link to any members of the swim team, Henderson said.

Foust has had no contact with the swim team since the season ended on Nov. 7, 1998, said Marv Reiland, the West High athletics director.

Foust's telephone number in North Liberty has been disconnected.

Fear rides rails in Texas town

WEIMAR, Texas (AP) — In earlier times, the railway running through this town meant progress. The founder of the feed store, for example, made his fortune after jumping off a freight train to find work.

Lately, though, the train whistle has become a sinister sound.

In the past month, three people have been bludgeoned to death in their homes here, apparently by a killer who is riding the rails.

The crimes were identical — a break-in in the dark, a beating, valuables missing. Behind the houses, yards away, lay railroad tracks.

They were the first killings in these parts that even the old-timers can recall.

"The train used to be a good sound," says Charles Herzik, who has lived all his 60 years in Weimar, a ranching community of 2,000 people 80 miles west of Houston. "Now it makes you feel scared."

Herzik manages the M-G Farm Service Center, a general store offering everything from potting soil to shotguns. In the past few weeks, he has sold more firepower than during all of hunting season.

"Everybody you talk to is scared," he says. "People have never seen anything like this."

Investigators say at least two killings in the Houston area and one in Lexington, Ky., may be linked to those here. The victims were all beaten to death, and the crimes occurred near railroad tracks.

This week law officers from Texas and Kentucky, along with the FBI and railroad officials, formed a task force to intensify the hunt for the man suspected in all six slayings: 39-year-old Rafael Resendez-Ramirez, a drifter from Mexico with a record of weapons and burglary charges.

"We're looking for a fugitive that possibly does not have any set roots in one location," says Don Clark, head of the FBI's Houston office. "That's the biggest thing that we know right now, is that this person is probably in a constant transient status."

A $60,000 reward has been posted for information leading to Resendez-Ramirez's arrest.

The freight railroads have stepped up security, watching for drifters hopping trains.

Rural, Pop Art coming to museum

Two new exhibits from the museum's permanent collection will offer a wide range of styles.

By Stephen Balsley
 The Daily Iowan

The UI Museum of Art continues to feature exhibits from the permanent collection, with two impressive openings Saturday. For the more conventional connoisseur, the museum will offer "Marjorie Hayek: Images of Iowa's Rural Heritage"; in contrast, "Pop on Paper" is for the liberal art fan.

Emily Vermillion, education curator at the Museum of Art, said, "I think these two exhibits will attract a wide variety of people. There are very diverse artists being presented, all of whom should be very intriguing to art fans."

The "Marjorie Hayek" exhibit will feature the realistic drawings she has created of many of Eastern Iowa's interesting barns. Through Hayek's intense detail, the drawings render the casual fan a strong impression of the historical value of many of the barns of the area.

Being shown in the Members' Lounge, this is the first exhibit of Hayek's work that has ever been presented at the UI. "This is very exciting and unusual," said Barbara Weets-Caudill, a local artist and a long-time friend of Hayek.

"Dr. Pamela Trimpe has been instrumental in developing this exhibit, which will also feature a book that has been published featuring many of (Hayek's) works," Weets-Caudill said.

The exhibit will continue through Aug. 8; the book should be available for purchase at the Museum of Art.

"Pop on Paper" is a Pop Art survey from the permanent collection. Artists included in the exhibit will be Claes Oldenburg, Roy Lichtenstein, James Rosenquist and Jim Dine.

One of the features of the exhibit will be a recent print purchased by the UI of Andy Warhol's "Electric Chair #78."

"This print should attract many fans of Warhol to the museum," Vermillion said. "This piece will be the highlight for a particularly stunning exhibit."

Warhol is one of the most instrumental artists of the past half century. His work in developing Pop Art started in Pittsburgh, at Carnegie Mellon University, and continued in New York City.

The exhibit will run through Aug. 22. The Museum of Art is free and open to the public.

Wandering down Iowa's memory lane

The annual Iowa Folk Heritage Weekend will be held in Des Moines on Saturday and June 13.

By Alexis Bierman
The Daily Iowan

Instead of scampering up your family tree in search of your identity, you could take a trip to Des Moines for the third annual Iowa Folk Heritage Weekend.

On Saturday and June 13, Living History Farms will present more than 30 performers and exhibitions to give people a taste of Iowa culture, said Trudy Wood, an event organizer. The heritage weekend includes music, dance, drama and crafts.

"So much happened in Iowa when the immigrants came here," Wood said.

Helping to keep Iowans' history alive, the event enhances the Living History Farms' regular interpretive programs, she said.

Roger Field, of Ankeny, Iowa, will prepare and bake samples of Norwegian pastry rosettes. Using a cast-iron mold and hot oil, a method learned from his grandmother, Field is happy to play a part in keeping traditions alive, he said.

"Our heritage and all other nationalities are losing things brought over from the homelands," Field said. "These are cultural things that need to be preserved - know your roots!"

Another activity will be Scandinavian storytelling performed with puppets and traditional instruments, according to the event's Web site.

Various woodcarvers will show how the craft was a part of the early immigrants' daily lives, as they make rolling pins, Welsh love spoons, Dutch wooden shoes and lathed candle sticks. Other crafts will include rug-braiding, chair-caning and glass-blowing.

A Yaqui Nation descendant, Ralph Moisa Jr., will offer details on the customs of many Native American groups as he demonstrates a tepee setup.

Some of the performers will explain how music was integral to the life of early Iowans. Old-time country and gospel will exhibit the spirit of barn dances and church social gatherings, while folk and Celtic music will highlight the entertainment value.

Iowa City musician Dave Moore will make his third appearance at the heritage weekend, bringing his unique style on the guitar, button accordion and harmonica.

Wood said she is happy to have Moore participating. "He writes songs with a variety of people and ages about Iowa's history," she said. "He always has a lot of interaction with the audience."

Regents discuss Haskins buyout

■ Allegations of wrongdoing may end Clem Haskins' career at the University of Minnesota.

By Laura Baenen
Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — University of Minnesota regents didn't object to negotiations to buy out the contract of men's basketball coach Clem Haskins when they met behind closed doors Thursday, Regent Robert Bergland said.

"I think the clear, overwhelming consensus was that we're going to wait until the president gets what he needs for decisions, and then we'll find out in more detail what's happening and counsel with him on what to do," Bergland said after Thursday's meeting.

In an open meeting to discuss gender-equity goals, McKinley Boston, vice president of athletic and student affairs, did not comment on the buyout negotiations and declined to answer questions later.

But academic counselors, faculty and students themselves share responsibility in the allegations of academic fraud involving the team, Boston said during the open portion of the regents' meeting.

University President Mark Yudof authorized university general counsel Mark Rotenberg last week to begin negotiations with Haskins' lawyer, Ronald Zaman-sky, even though an investigation into the scandal won't be completed until September. Rotenberg said Thursday no agreement had been reached and there was no timeline for the negotiations.

Boston signed Haskins' 10-year contract in 1994 when he was the men's athletic director. It includes an unusual clause that allows Haskins to receive $423,000 in deferred compensation even if his contract is terminated with just cause. If just cause cannot be shown, Haskins would be entitled to almost $1.2 million, plus benefits.

Rotenberg, who gave the status report on the negotiations to regents, declined to discuss their reactions.

"No matter what happens, the investigation will be completed even if something happens and coach Haskins leaves," Bergland said after Thursday's meeting.

The investigation is needed so steps can be taken to correct the situation that led to the scandal, Bergland said.

"I think just overhauling the academic counseling (unit), which has to be done, is in itself not going to cure it," he said.

Boston, though, made it clear that is his focus.

"The primary responsibility for academic integrity at the University of Minnesota rests with the Department of Academic Support Services," Boston said during the open portion of the regents' meeting.

McHale nominated for Hall

Kevin McHale and John Thompson lead the nominees for the Basketball Hall of Fame.

By Jeff Donn
Associated Press

George Widman/Associated Press
Ex-Boston Celtics forward Kevin McHale has been nominated to the Basketball Hall of Fame.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. — Kevin McHale, who played in a total of three championship rings with Boston and Seattle; Jo Jo White, who played with two championship Celtics teams and won an Olympic gold medal in 1968; and Wayne Embry, who won an NBA championship with the Celtics in 1968.

John Thompson, who coached Georgetown to the 1984 NCAA championship and 14 straight NCAA tournaments, also is a candidate. This year's Hall of Famers will be selected June 21. They will be picked from the nominees announced Thursday by officials at the Springfield shrine.

For enshrinement, a nominee needs 18 of 24 votes from the Honors Committee.

Brought to the Celtics in 1980 with Parish, McHale at first was the team's sixth man. He went on to play 12 seasons in the all-star frontcourt that included Bird. The team won NBA championships in 1981, 1984 and 1986.

"He was a go-to guy, just like Larry Bird," said Red Auerbach, the Celtics vice chairman and former coach who brought McHale to the team. "When you need a basket real bad and the game is on the line, you can go to McHale."

The 6-foot-10 McHale honed his offensive skills by playing against his high school coach one-on-one in the small town of Hibbing, Minn. McHale's agility, long arms and array of moves allowed him to shoot over even taller NBA defenders. He averaged 18 points per game with 55 percent shooting during his career.

In 1985, McHale set a Celtics record with 56 points against the Detroit Pistons. Bird broke the record nine days later with 60 points against the Atlanta Hawks.

SPORTS BRIEFS

Manager's disguise raises NL ire

NEW YORK (AP) — Who was that masked man in the New York Mets dugout? Apparently it was manager Bobby Valentine. He wasn't confusing Wednesday night's game against Toronto with Halloween. Valentine merely returned to the bench incognito after he was thrown out by umpires.

"From the information we have, he was ejected and came back to the end of the dugout in a disguise," NL senior vice president Katy Feeney said Thursday. Valentine was ejected in the 12th inning by plate umpire Randy Marsh for arguing a catcher's interference call on Mike Piazza. The manager, according to information reported to the NL, returned to the dugout with a fake mustache and glasses.

Feeney said the league was investigating and hopes to have a decision by Friday.

Ex-boxer takes SI to the bank

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Sports Illustrated magazine was ordered to pay at least $8.5 million to ex-heavyweight boxer Randall "Tex" Cobb, who sued for libel after the publication reported he helped fix a fight and shared cocaine with the loser.

A federal court jury awarded the compensatory damages Wednesday to Cobb and will decide on punitive damages during a hearing Friday.

Cobb, 46, declined to comment on the case, saying "I'm sorry," when reached Thursday morning at his hotel room. Cobb's attorney, George Bochetto, said his client feels redeemed.

Sampras is poised to regain No. 1 spot

LONDON — Pete Sampras is about to regain the No. 1 spot in the tennis rankings.

The five-time Wimbledon champion was assured of returning to the top after a 7-5, 6-3 victory Thursday over Australian qualifier Wayne Arthurs in the third round of the Queen's grass-court tournament.

Losses this week by No. 1 Yevgeny Kafelnikov at Queen's and No. 2 Pat Rafter — in the Gerry Weber Open in Germany — cleared the way for Sampras, who began the week at No. 3.

The victory Thursday will put Sampras on top for the 268th week when the rankings come out Monday. That will tie him for second place in the all-time rankings with Jimmy Connors. Ivan Lendl holds the all-time record of 270 weeks at No. 1.

"I've got some years left to break that record (Lendl's)," Sampras said. "I'm more pleased about the way I'm playing than the ranking."

Five new events added for 2002

SALT LAKE CITY — Olympic organizers are adding five events, mostly for women, that are expected to pay for themselves in the 2002 Winter Games.

The United States could win more Olympic medals with the addition of women's bobsled and men's skeleton, a head-first version of luge.

Both events have a "very good" chance of producing medals for American teams, said Cathy Priestner-Allinger, sports director for the Salt Lake Organizing Committee.

Women would get their own skeleton competition under the games' expansion approved Friday by the SLOC management committee, which also added cross country ski sprints and 1,500-meter speed skating for men and women.

Knight under investigation for battery

By Susan Skiles Luke
Associated Press

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. — Bob Knight's famous temper could land him in trouble again.

The Indiana basketball coach, who was convicted of assaulting a policeman in Puerto Rico 20 years ago, could be charged with battery for allegedly choking a man who accused him of making a racist remark.

Monroe County prosecutor Carl Salzman said Thursday he had not decided whether to file charges against Knight or possibly against the other man, Chris Foster, 38, a Bloomington guitar-maker, for provoking the confrontation in a restaurant parking lot Monday night.

Foster said he was at a Mexican restaurant in nearby Ellettsville with a friend and couldn't help hearing Knight's profanity-laced conversation as the coach sat with his wife and her two sisters in the mostly-empty room.

"The vast majority of all dialogue was sports-related stuff, baseball, basketball, names and statistics," Foster said. "At one point, he made a comment that was basically, 'When I have a black player who comes into some money, I tell him, 'You buy your mother a house and you hang onto the rest of it,' because when one of those people comes into money, the rest of them come out of the wood-work.'"

Foster, who is white, said he spoke to Knight as they were paying their

Stars finally solve Hasek, even series with 4-2 win

After being owned by Dominik Hasek in Game 1, the Dallas offense found a way to get around the Dominator.

By Alan Robinson
Associated Press

DALLAS — Brett Hull, who feared he might never see the Stanley Cup finals again, scored the winning goal for desperate Dallas with 2:50 remaining and the Stars staved off a possibly lethal loss by beating Buffalo 4-2 Thursday night to even the series at a game apiece.

Hull, one of the NHL's top scorers for years but absent from the Stanley Cup finals since his rookie year in 1986, beat the hard-to-beat Dominik Hasek with a wicked slap shot from above the right circle dot.

The goal capped a determined Dallas comeback that saw the heavily favored Stars contained by the Sabres' smothering defense for two periods, only to bury the Sabres with 19 shots in the final period.

Even at the end, Dallas had to fight to preserve the lead, killing off a rare late-game power play resulting from Derian Hatcher's high-sticking penalty at 17:31.

Hatcher made up for his mistake, scoring into an empty net at 19:34.

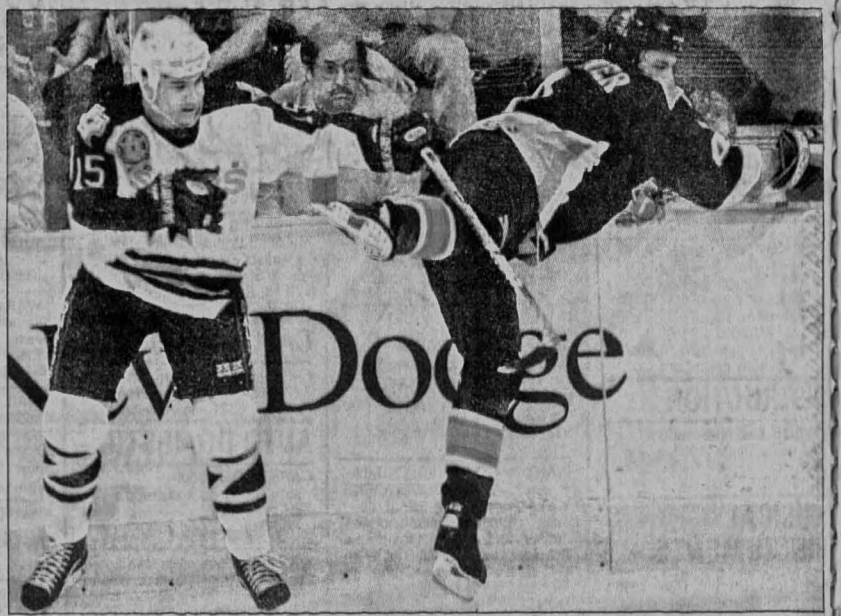

The Stars almost had to win, as only three clubs in the last 60 years have rallied to win the Stanley Cup after losing the first two games.

Now, the Stars have the momentum heading into Game 3 Saturday night at Marine Midland Arena. The team that has won Game 2 has won 26 of the past 28 Stanley Cups, including every team in the last 10 years.

The Sabres, trying to put a 2-0 stranglehold on the series before playing at home, fell behind 2-1 despite dominating the first two periods, then tied it on Alexei Zhitnik's power-play goal at 5:36 of the third.

It was a lethal combination for the two-time defending NHL regular-season champion Stars — Darryl Sydor in the box and Buffalo on the power

Southern baseball teams enjoy a distinct advantage over their Northern counterparts.

By Greg Wallace
The Daily Iowan

From all indications, college baseball is thriving.

Attendance and TV ratings for the College World Series are perennially high and fan interest has never been stronger. But dig a little deeper, and you'll find a different story.

No true Northern team has made the Series since 1991, when Creighton qualified, and this year is no different. Iowa has not been to Omaha since 1972, and no Big Ten team has qualified since Michigan in 1984. The gap between North and South in baseball has never been larger. Southern teams are dominating, and Northern teams don't really know what to do about it.

"Baseball, in my opinion, is at a crossroads," Minnesota head coach John Anderson said. "It's going to get better, or it's going to get worse. And I think it's going to get worse before it gets better."

"I think there's a definite disparity between Northern and Southern teams," Louisiana State head coach and four-time national champion Skip Bertman said. "I don't think there's much doubt that if you get better weather, you get more playing time and outdoor time."

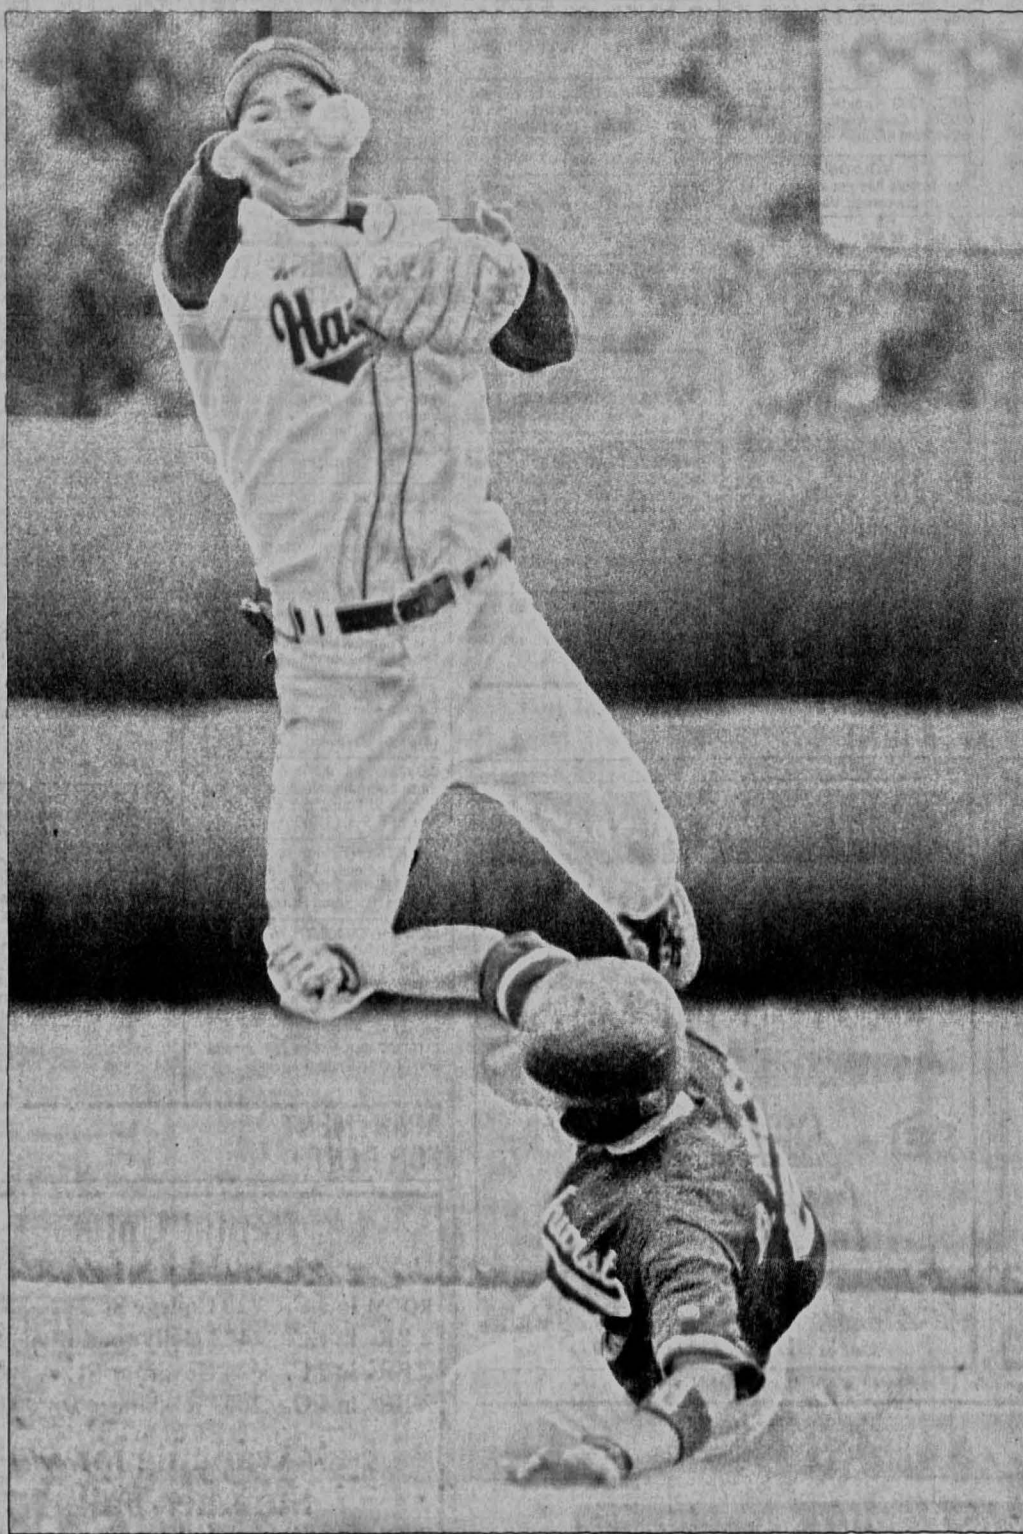

Southern schools have that one distinct advantage over northern schools — climate. The baseball season begins in January and runs until June, when the College World Series takes place in Omaha. The weather is nice in the South all winter long, but the story is not the same in the North. This season, for example, Iowa's home opener was played on March 23.

When they go south during the early season, Northern teams are playing against squads that have been outside for two months. This can lead to mismatches, since players on Northern teams are still rusty.

"It's like a basketball team practicing in the hall for three weeks, then going to Kentucky and expecting to win," Anderson said. "It's not going to happen."

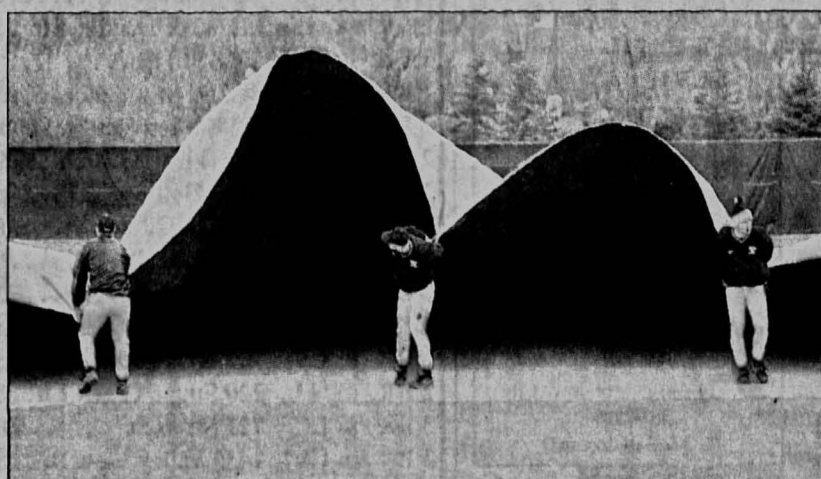

Poor weather has affected Iowa baseball quite adversely in the 1990's. Teams are allowed to play 56 game schedules, but Iowa has averaged only 51 games per season for the decade, including only 46 in 1998. This year, the team played 56 games — the most since 1990.

Despite the differences, Bertman thinks the South's success is rooted deeper than 80 degree temperatures in February. He feels that weather is an advantage for the South that can't be made up, no matter how hard the NCAA tries.

"They're big, tough, the NCAA, they're awesome," he said. "But they can't do anything about the weather—they're not that big. It's broader than just the weather. The SEC has large football stadiums and raises a lot of money into the baseball programs, which leads to nice baseball stadiums. The stadium

Hoffman gets 200th save in Padres 2-1 win

Trevor Hoffman, who was drafted as a shortstop, continues to move up the charts as one of the game's top closers.

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Trevor Hoffman, who started his professional baseball career as a shortstop, reached another milestone Thursday when he saved his 200th game.

Hoffman did it in fitting fashion, striking out the side in the ninth to preserve Sterling Hitchcock's first win in just more than a month as the San Diego Padres beat the Oakland Athletics 2-1.

Hoffman said this one will go down as one of his most memorable saves, along with Nos. 50 and 53 last year — the last one tied the NL single-season record — and being on the mound when the Padres clinched the NL West against the rival Los Angeles Dodgers in 1996 and again last year.

"I think that was fitting, but more importantly, was how it was done," said Hoffman, who's blown three saves this year after doing it just once in his dominating 1998 season. "There's been a lot of talk about velocity being down. I know I've been battling location. Kind of the whole season I've been struggling with trying to put everything together."

Hoffman's blown saves have stood out because they came in dramatic fashion, on home runs by Mike Piazza, Matt Williams and Sammy Sosa.

"Today, it seemed like the pitches I was missing with, they weren't hittable misses," said Hoffman, the 25th big leaguer to reach 200 saves. "When I made my pitches, I made them where I wanted. More importantly than that, I'm looking at it as I finally pitched a good inning."

Hoffman said the only thing he can attribute his struggles to is getting a late start on his offseason workout program because of the Padres' World Series appearance.

"I never got a dead arm in spring training, and then I never felt like I had a dead arm, but I might have gone through a situation where just the velocity wasn't there," he said.

Hoffman struck out Chris Spiezio on a changeup, caught Eric Chavez looking at fastball after he fouled off three pitches and got Jason Giambi swinging on a full-count fastball. It was his 12th save this year.
