All, plaintext spar over movie rights

L.A. June 23 (UPI) — Women's Rights Picture has assigned a federal judge to divorce a $5 million lawsuit over the rights to a movie about Katherine Albrecht (1894-1980), the woman who provided the first breast prosthetic after her breast was amputated after a tumor was discovered. The picture, which is currently developing a feature-length film about Albrecht, has been served with complaints that it is not the intellectual property of the women that were covered by her prosthetics. The judge, who is expected to rule on the matter, said the film's producers had not responded to his request for a court hearing.

ICARE pancake fest flips up its heels

A breakfast will be held this weekend as a part of the Iowa City Arts Festival to raise funds for ICARE.

By Erica C. Fegan

The Daily Iowan

Live entertainment and premium food will be featured at this weekend’s 13th annual pancake breakfast sponsored by the Iowa Center for AIDS Resource and Education.

The event, which raises funds for ICARE, 320 E. Collinwood, will be held on the Pedestrian Mall in the center of Dubuque and PHIA on June 15 at 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. ICARE provides practical and emotional support for people living with HIV and AIDS. It also extends support to their families and caregivers.

Robert Morey of Brother’s Keeper, an Iowa City economic developer that played at last year’s event, said the breakfast is one of the groups’ favorite events.

"It shows Iowa City at its best," Morey said. "It brings together huge numbers of community sponsors and individuals who volunteer their time. Brother’s Keeper will perform around 11 a.m. Other performances — including Big Wooden Sticks, Dot Tiamane, Barbara Boyle and Jeffery Morgan — are scheduled to play throughout the event.

More than 1,000 people are expected to attend the "breakfast" as in its informal open-air setting, and Thomas Gormley of New Pioneer Co-op, 22 B. Van Buren St., one of the breakfast’s corporate sponsors.

"Come prepared to eat indulgent food!" said Laura Hill, an ICARE representative.

Atmosphere is what draws a crowd to the event, said Brother’s Keeper. Converse Preserve Rd. and 1500 E. Market St., another sponsor of the event.

"It’s very family-oriented and festive," she said. "People feel they are contributing to a very good and important cause."

Another reason people are drawn to the event, Carrey said, is to show support to ICARE and its mission.

"Initially, it proved a hit continentally, though now people have developed a greater understanding," she said.

The next for the breakfast is Friday, 84 for children under 12. Advance tickets may be purchased at New Pioneer Co-op, AlternaTiques and ICARE.

For more information about the event, contact the Iowa City Arts Festival at 335-6030 or ICARE at 335-6063.

 Locals skeptical about Kosovo peace deal

REACTION

"I don't know if the peace agreement will be any more lasting than the talks that preceded it."

But UI senior Casey Van Westen says he is confident that peace has been reached. "I think it's about time for the United States to stop meddling in Balkan affairs," Westen said. "It's the duty of the international community to help the people in Kosovo to peace in their home." Westen is a junior at the University of Iowa and is a member of the UI debate team. "This is the reality of the conflict in the First World," Westen said.

But others are more cautious. "I hope it lasts," said CU junior Tim Doell, "but it is hard to know if this peace is going to be permanent." Doell is a member of the UI peace action group.

FUNDING

The United States has pledged $3.5 billion to help rebuild Kosovo. "This money will be used to help the people in Kosovo," said Doell. "But it is hard to know if this money will be used effectively." Doell said that the United States should be more involved in the rebuilding of Kosovo.

Debt, child care roadblocks to women going to college

COLLEGE

Women already in the work force have many more miles than their male counterparts to walk in order to become business owners or to enter college. According to a study by the United States Department of Labor, women with children are more likely to drop out of college than men without children. "Women in all groups also have different reasons for dropping out of college," said Pamela Haag, a senior at the University of Iowa. "Women in the workforce may drop out of college because they need to go to work or because they need financial aid and child-care assistance."

"Women going to college for the first time, as opposed to women going directly to college from high school, are more likely to drop out of college," said Haag. "Women going to college for the first time are more likely to have financial problems and to have to take jobs while they are in college."

Regents discuss Haskins buyout

Allegations may end Clem Haskins career at the University of Minnesota.

By Larry Benson
Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS—University of Minnesota regents didn't object to the firing of men's basketball coach Clem Haskins when they met behind closed doors Thursday. But Robert Bergland, regent, said, "I think just overhauling the academic counseling unit, which needs to be done, is in need of not going to cure it."

Robert Haskins (University of Minnesota regent), enernent on the buyout negotiations and declined to answer questions later.

But academic counselors, faculty and student-athletes have complained about the academic fraud involving the team. Boston said during the open portion of the regents' meeting.

University President Mark Nolde authorized university general counsel Mark Rotenberg last week to begin negotiations with Haskins' lawyer, Ronald Haskins' lawyer, Ronald Haskins, even though an investigation is under way. But Rotenberg Rotenberg and Thursday announced that no agreement had been reached and there was no timetable for the negotiations.

Boston added Haskins' buyout contract in 1994 when he was the men's athletic director. It includes an unusual clause that allows Haskins to receive $23,000 in deferred compensation even if the contract is terminated with just cause. If not cause cannot be shown, Haskins would be entitled to almost $2 million, plus benefits.

Rotenberg, who gave the status report on the negotiations to regents, declined to discuss their reactions.

"No matter what happens, the investigation will be completed even if it's completed. The regents want to complete the investigation," Bergland said after Thursday's meeting.

"It's really up to the football team. They are under the athletic director's authority, and I don't think just overhauling the academic counseling unit, which has been done, is in need of not going to cure it."

Boston, though, made it clear that in his view.

"The primary responsibility for academic integrity at the University of Minnesota rests with the Department of Academic Support Services," Boston said during the open portion of the regents' meeting.

McHale nominated for Hall of Fame

Kevin McHale and Johnston Thompson lead the nominees for the Basketball Hall of Fame.

By Jeff Baus
Associated Press

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. — Kevin McHale, who played in a great Boston Celtics team alongside Larry Bird and Robert Parish, has been nominated for the Basketball Hall of Fame.

The other Bostonians are Bill Russell, who played on all the Celtics’ championship teams that won 11 titles in 13 years and won an NBA Finals Most Valuable Player award in 1966, and Reggie Lewis, whose career was cut short by a heart attack.

The other nominees include former NBA players Bob McAdoo and Phil Smith, plus former college coaches Jerry Sloan, who won two NCAA championships with the Utah State Aggies in 1977 and 1978, and Randy Woodson, who was 2-0 with a save for Dillard University in the 1979 NCAA Tournament.

McHale scored 1,631 points in his 620 games with the Celtics and won an Olympic gold medal in 1984. He is a five-time All-Star and nearly was voted into the Hall of Fame in 2000.

Johnston Thompson, who coached Creighton to the 1984 NCAA championship and is among the all-time winningest coaches with 515 victories, also is nominated.

McHale led the defensive effort by being against the high-powered teams including the Los Angeles Lakers in the 1983 NBA Finals. He averaged 20.1 points per game with 50 percent scoring during the playoffs.

In 1985, McHale set the Celtics record with 38 points against the Detroit Pistons. Bird broke the record nine days later with 40 points against the Atlanta Hawks.

The story Thursday will be the same as in 1985. Sampson said three different Cell phones that had the same package.

A Civil War

Southern baseball teams enjoy a distinct advantage over their Northern counterparts.

From all indications, college baseball is alive and well. However, on TV ratings for the College World Series are not exactly high and fan interest has never been strong. Why is this, and why is there still a gap between college baseball and professional baseball? It's all about the weather.

"Baseball, in my opinion, is at its root a Southern sport," said Hoffman, the Daily Iowan reporter. "It seems like the players and coaches are always thinking about the weather. They're always trying to find ways to keep the game moving, even when it's raining or cloudy.

On the other hand, professional baseball is more of a national sport. It's played in all kinds of weather, and the players are used to it. They're just as likely to play a game under the lights as they are to play in a rainstorm.

"Baseball, in its opinion, is as a crossroad," Minnesota head coach John Anderson said. "It's going to get better, or it's going to get worse."

And I think it's going to get worse before it goes better.

"I think there's a definite disparity between Northern and Southern teams," said Hoffman. "It's not just about the players and coaches, it's about the fans as well. Southern teams know how to play in the heat and humidity, while Northern teams struggle in the heat and humidity.

"Baseball is a Southern sport. It's all about the weather. The fans enjoy the heat and humidity, and the players enjoy the heat and humidity," said Hoffman.

"I don't know any other sport that is as dependent on the weather as baseball is. It's all about the weather."
