Loan idea may save students $630

By Kelly Wilson
 The Daily Iowan

The U.S. Department of Education says that more than 2 million students will benefit from lower student loan fees, to be implemented in August, but others say it's too early to tell.

The department announced Wednesday that students who pay for their higher education through direct student loans will be eligible for an average of $631 savings over the life of the loan. This average is based on a $10,000 loan repaid over a period of 10 years, said Jane Glickman, spokeswoman for the department.

"The savings could be higher or lower depending on the size of the loan," she said.

Approximately half of the 80 percent of UI students who receive some sort of financial aid use direct student loans, said Cathy Wilcox, associate director of Student Financial Aid.

She said the Education Department's announcement would be beneficial to a large number of UI students, but there is a catch because it is still in the proposal stage.

"The proposed reductions are not a given; they have to go through congressional approval before anything can really happen," Wilcox said.

Although the department is planning on implementing the reductions on Aug. 15 for the 1999-2000 academic year, there is some political criticism of the proposal, she said.

The critics do not think the Education Department has the authority to make such changes, Wilcox said, so it is possible the proposal will get blocked in Congress.

UI medical student Colin O'Brien, who has taken out loans to pay for his education, said he would like to see the reductions take effect soon.

"The cost of school is high enough," he said. "It would be beneficial to anyone by reducing the amount he or she has to pay. However, Congress has not always been able to pass things in an expedient manner."

The proposed reductions are similar to those already in place for the Federal Family Education Loan, Glickman said.

The family loan program is the older and more traditional way of directly involving banks in the loan process, Wilcox said. Students borrow money through banks; the money is then guaranteed against default from the federal government.

This could prove to be problematic if a bank were to sell a loan it had backed to another bank without the student's knowledge, Wilcox said.

Atrocity evidence emerges in Kosovo

NATO officials now say 10,000 Kosovars have been killed by the Serbs.

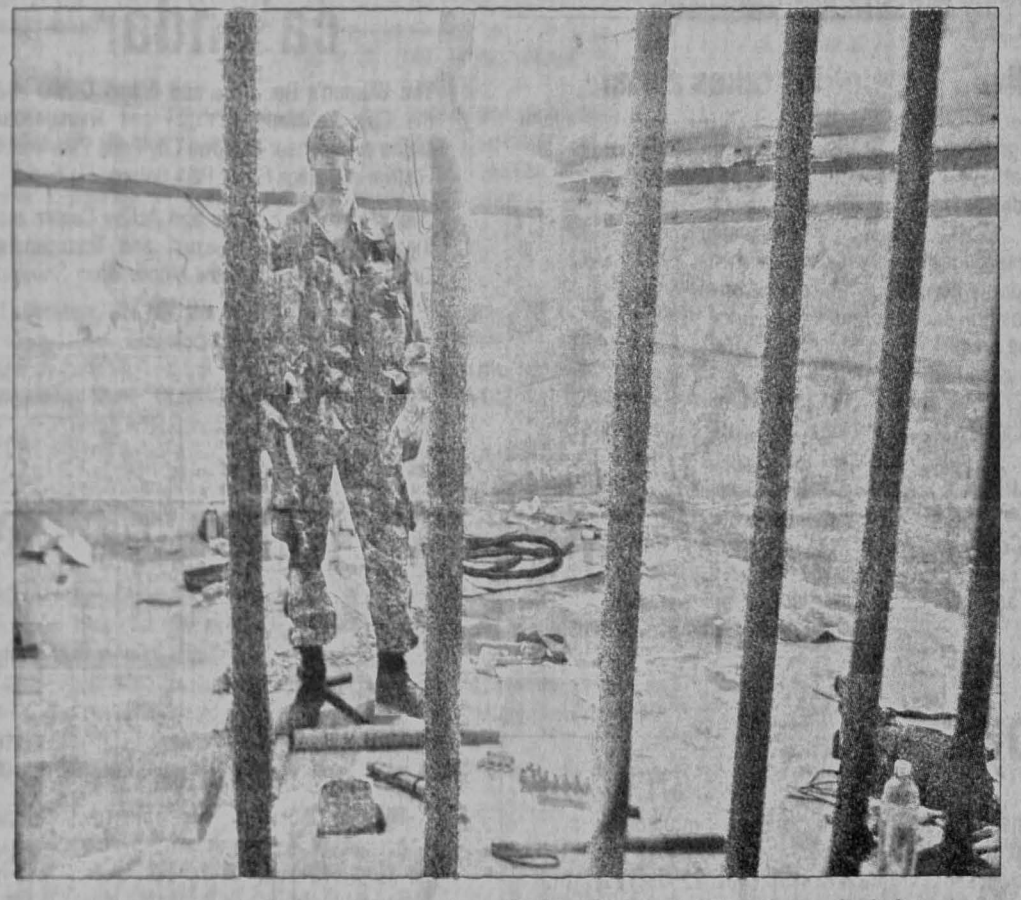

By Laura King
 Associated Press

PRISTINA, Yugoslavia — Accounts of brutality in Kosovo emerged Thursday in different tones — the stunned, flat voice of a teenage Kosovar girl and the measured sentences of a British official — but they both told of irrational savagery mixed with careful planning.

Just six days into the international military presence in Kosovo, officials have discovered so many mass graves and killing sites and heard so many wrenching accounts of atrocities that they now estimate at least 10,000 people were killed in the Serb crackdown against Kosovars, which began shortly before NATO began its 78-day air bombardment on March 24.

The mounting evidence is likely to add to calls for the arrest of Yugoslav President Slobodan Milosevic, who has been indicted by the international war crimes tribunal in The Hague. But President Clinton said Thursday that peacekeepers will take a "wait and see" approach toward Milosevic's arrest.

Fears grew that the Kosovo rebels of the Kosovo Liberation Army will seek violent revenge against the province's Serbs as the Yugoslav army continues its withdrawal under the international peace deal's terms. The plan called for the KLA to demilitarize, but rebels were openly bringing weapons in over the border from Albania Thursday.

One of the most grisly reports of slaughter so far came Thursday from the village of Poklek, 20 miles west of the provincial capital Pristina. The killings were, by residents' accounts, methodical.

Elhame Muqolli, 14, told of how she and scores of friends and neighbors were herded into a room by Serb police, who threw in a hand grenade, raked the room with machine guns and then set it on fire to kill anyone who might have survived.

Muqolli and five others had managed to jump out a window, but 62 others died in the April 17 incident. Their blood dripped through the floor to stain the ceiling of the room below.

There were no fresh bloodstains on the walls of a basement room at a police station in Pristina, but the items piled there spoke of horror: an array of torture instruments including bats, chains, a pickax and a black hood. An Kosovar resident of the neighborhood said he and many others had been beaten there.

British peacekeeping soldiers also found sadistic pornography in the room.

What was most chilling, said British Foreign Office Minister Geoff Hoon, was that the station "seems to have been just an ordinary police headquarters. In other words, the barbaric acts carried out in this building were probably

State jobless rate dips to record low

The state's unemployment level hit 2.6 percent in May, down from 2.7 in April.

By Troy Shoen
 The Daily Iowan

Two surveys released Thursday indicate a strong job market for Iowa in the near future.

A Cambridge Staffing survey on local employment levels supports an unrelated statewide survey by the Iowa Workforce Development, showing Iowa has hit a record low level of unemployment.

The state survey shows 41,500 people were unemployed in Iowa in May; the previous record low was 41,700 in October 1998.

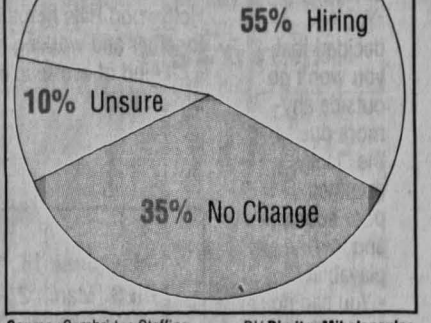

The unemployment rate dropped to 2.6 percent in May from 2.7 percent in April. State labor analyst Sha Khan said the low unemployment means the job market will continue to be competitive.

"I think employers are going to have to be a little more creative because it's very competitive right now," Khan said.

Cambridge's projections found 111 companies within a 50-mile radius of Cedar Rapids that planned on hiring 1,128 new employees in July, August and September. This is an increase in 130 jobs from Cambridge's last survey in March.

The new survey shows Beaton Inc., a local company, was expecting to hire 25 or more employees in the coming months.

Plane crash injures councilor

An airplane crash lands a city councilor and an airport employee in the hospital.

By Alexis M. Bierman
 The Daily Iowan

A plane crash at the Iowa City Municipal Airport Thursday afternoon injured Iowa City City Councilor Dean Thornberry and airport employee Larry Klimmeyer.

At approximately 2:45 p.m. paramedics were called to the airport, 1801 Riverside Drive; they transported both Thornberry, who was getting recertified, and Klimmeyer, the flight instructor, to the UI Hospital and Clinics emergency room.

By Thursday evening, both had been moved to the John Colleton Pavilion. Thornberry was able to speak on the phone but declined to comment further.

Iowa City Fire Department Lt. Chris Bock described the damage to the plane as "extensive, although it wasn't totaled. The landing gear was torn off, and the belly separated as it landed in the grass." A wing was also broken off.

The Fire Department was not called to the scene until the paramedics had arrived; they contacted the Fire Department for assistance at approximately 2:52 p.m., Bock said.

At the scene, Fire Department personnel assisted the paramedics in removing the two men from the plane using a Kendrick Extraction Device to stabilize the spines.

Bock said no bystanders were hurt in the crash.

Although a damaged fuel line released some fuel, there was no fire at the scene, Bock said. The situation was remedied by pulling a fuel line.

The plane was able to belly in just before the landing strip at the airport, Bock said.

UI spruces up Mayflower

The residence hall is undergoing renovations worth $1.5 million, scheduled to be completed this fall.

By Gil Levy
 The Daily Iowan

This fall, residents of Mayflower Residence Hall will enjoy more luxuries, including a coffee shop equipped with computers offering access to the Internet.

There will also be a new lounge, a recreation room located in the building's old pool area, a multi-purpose presentation room; in addition, the front entrance will be enlarged.

The coffee shop will be located next to a remodeled front lobby, which will contain an easily accessible front desk, said hall manager Jeffrey Roepsch. The desk will be equipped with computers and monitors for new security cameras that will be placed at the entrances.

The $1.5 million project to renovate the lobby and other first floor areas is on schedule, Roepsch said. The lobby is scheduled to be completed by July 31, and the coffee shop and surrounding areas by Nov. 1, he said.

"We wanted the look of a new and modern lobby, but we didn't want to interfere with students' study areas," Roepsch said.

And Maggie Van Oel, the director of Residence Services, said she was quite enthusiastic about the project.

"We wanted to open up the front so students in the lobby could look out to the street," she said. "This is the fun part of my job, providing services and envisioning things for the students."

Between 200 and 700 people occupy Mayflower throughout the summer, Roepsch said.

Justin O'Brien/
 The Daily Iowan

Jeffrey Roepsch, hall manager for Mayflower Residence Hall, describes the renovations to the residence hall Thursday.

"It sucked when I first got here, but it hasn't been a real problem," said Ron London, a research and internal medicine student from Louisiana who has been a Mayflower resident since June 1.

"I kind of got used to it, but I still wish it was finished. It sounds like it will be great."

Residents were notified about the renovations and given the option of living in Stanley Residence Hall,

Ja, you bet - 'Midsommar' comes to Twin Cities

■ The American Swedish Institute fêtes dancing, costumes and traditional music.

By Alexis M. Bierman
The Daily Iowan

Celebrating the longest day of the year with ring dancing, national and provincial costumes, traditional cardamom coffee cake and Swedish fiddle music, Minneapolis will host a traditional "Midsommar's" Celebration Saturday.

Drawing on the Swedish heritage, the American Swedish Institute will welcome the solstice, which symbolizes the return of light and merriment after a long winter in northern Europe.

"Light is almost revered in Swedish culture," said Jan McElfish, of the institute. The holiday, which is celebrated in many traditions including European folk and neo-pagan, has numerous customs associated with it, with themes of nature running through them all.

At the Swedish institute's celebration, the majstång, (similar to a May pole) will be featured. Decorated in the morning, a Norway pine will be raised in a special ceremony at approximately 1 p.m., followed by ring dancing.

"It's the highlight when the men (members of the institute's fiddle group) bring it in," McElfish said. "The fiddlers lead a procession of all the performers in their costumes and then the majstång is raised little by little, finally guided into place."

Traditional wildflowers will be used to decorate the pole and to create wreaths for children to wear during the ceremony. McElfish said the flowers are used in the ceremony, on cars and on boats, in order to demonstrate the happiness and festivity of the event.

Traditionally, there were seven plants (including St. John's wort, roses, birch leaves and fennel) associated with the season, according to pagan literature.

"There is a story about the seven flowers - that girls are supposed to place one of each under their pillow on midsummer's eve, and then they will dream of the man they are going to marry," McElfish said.

To accent the ceremony and add authenticity, the institute has invited three groups to participate in the event along with well-established fiddle and dance groups around the Twin Cities.

According to the organization's Web site, the youth group "Rivakat" will travel from Finland, along with the men's choir "Sandgrenska Mankör" and a folk dance troop from Sweden, "Åselebygdens Folkdanslag."

In addition, "an almost lost art" of hair-weaving will be demonstrated. The craft creates "really intricate, just

Brown takes a hit

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Hall of Fame football player and actor Jim Brown has been arrested on suspicion of threatening his wife.

Brown was taken into custody Tuesday evening after police received a call from his wife. He was freed on $50,000 bail.

On Wednesday, Brown, 63, and his wife, Monique, 25, said outside their Hollywood Hills home that they are still together and working on their differences. "I kind of overreacted," Monique Brown said.

PARIS (AP) — The publisher of Jacques-Yves Cousteau's biography claims he has a 1941 letter that reveals an anti-Semitic side to the undersea explorer.

Portions of the letter were reproduced in the daily France-Soir Thursday, when Cousteau was to be saluted posthumously by his successor at the prestigious Academie Française. Cousteau died two years ago; he was 87.

The letter was provided to the newspaper by Bernard Violet, who says it is addressed to Cousteau's best friend at the time.

It was written shortly after Cousteau was transferred to Marseille to work with French naval intelligence against the Nazi occupation.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It was a family affair when Phil Collins got his star on the Hollywood Walk of Fame.

The 48-year-old pop star was joined by his fiancée, two daughters and one of his ex-wives for Wednesday's ceremony.

"I'm pleased for my kids," he said. "When they have their own children, they will ask, what did granddad do? And they will show them my star."

Hundreds of fans were also on hand, leaving Collins a little overwhelmed.

Coralville revels in new town square

■ After 126 years, Coralville gets a small town staple.

By Angela Disalvo
The Daily Iowan

Since its founding in 1873, Coralville has been lacking something that is basic in most Iowa communities — a town square.

Now, 126 years later, that will change, with the development of several buildings that community leaders hope will become the heart of the city.

When completed, the downtown area will combine business offices and medical offices with existing government buildings near Fifth Street. A fountain and sculpture already greet people as they drive into the center of town.

Dave Jacoby, a Coralville city councilor, said the timing and the area just seemed to fall in place with each other.

"Coralville is growing. Fifteen years ago, its population numbered 4,000, and now we have somewhere in the neighborhood of 15,000. We are ready for some new development," he said.

The downtown project took off in the spring of 1995, when Chuck Skaugstad Jr. and his father, Chuck Sr. began constructing a building on Tenth Avenue. Since then, two more buildings have been built, and another one has been proposed.

The Skaugstads are a bit like pioneers in the building of the town-square area. Other developers have followed suit with the appearance of each building.

"In order to keep some continuity, the city looked to us and our designs before developing each new building," Chuck Skaugstad Jr. said.

Jacoby said planned unit development could take place in the area of Fifth Street, another reason it was chosen for the new downtown. Such a concept makes sure all developments are cohesive with the overall plan for the area.

"Planned unit development is a process where you look at the whole area and make sure everything will fit together like puzzle pieces," Jacoby said.

Jean Schnake, a Coralville city councilor, feels that the downtown will give residents a better sense of identity. Furthermore, the Coral Ridge Mall and the downtown area will complement each other well, she said.

"Downtown will have a lot of specialty shops, nice landscaping and nearness of city facilities. All of this will create an ambiance. The mall, on the other hand, is essentially for power shoppers. Both areas have a different purpose and will fit together well," Schnake said.

Coralville resident Monique Moore said she is very excited about the convenience of a town square.

"I see it go up (the buildings), and visually there is a lot of pride in what Coralville is doing. It will be great to be able to patronize my own city," she said.

Second strangling suspect named

■ Man charged with attempted murder in connection with a strangling case over the Memorial Day weekend.

By Steve Schmadeke
The Daily Iowan

Police Thursday revealed the identities of a second suspect and the man who was allegedly strangled in an incident during the Memorial Day weekend.

Shane M. Weese, 30, has been charged with the attempted murder of John Krohn, 31. Police had earlier identified Wesley T. Moore, 32, as the other alleged assailant.

Neither of the suspects has been apprehended.

Krohn, a UI graduate in physics, said he met the alleged assailants at the Deadwood, 6 S. Dubuque St., on May 29.

Krohn said he did not know the two men. The three of them headed to Krohn's apartment to get money for the bar cover, according to Krohn.

One of the men asked to use the bathroom, so the three men went up to his apartment, Krohn said.

"They were doing everything to put me at ease," he said. "I was planning to ask them up anyway."

Once inside, one of the alleged assailants offered him something from a prescription bottle, Krohn said. When he refused, the man choked him, said Krohn, leaving him unconscious.

"I remember breathing ... and hoping they wouldn't notice," Krohn said. He said he was eventually able to go to a neighbor's apartment, from which police were summoned.

Before the alleged attack, both suspects had been enrolled in Successful Living, 716 N. Dubuque St., a non-profit supportive housing program.

Theresa Kopatich, the program's executive director, said the men had been in the program for six or seven months but had never caused any problems. She could not say whether they were friends but said they knew each other.

Kopatich said the program works to create a support network for every member.

"If we see that a person is having a problem, we will work to get someone to assist him or her," she said. "But in this case, we didn't see anything. They got along with everyone."

Kopatich said Weese had left the program before the alleged attack and that Moore has not returned since the alleged attack.

Iowa City police Sgt. Mike Lord said the department has followed up on several leads pertaining to Moore.

The identity of the second suspect was determined after another interview with Krohn produced a witness who could identify Weese, Lord said.

CITY BRIEF

Duplex suffers fire

A duplex at 741 Orchard St. caught fire Thursday night, but the blaze was extinguished quickly.

"It was nothing significant," said Fire Department Lt. Chris Bock, describing the damage.

Duplex resident Eric Duffy reported the fire as soon as he saw smoke, which enabled the situation to be resolved in 25 minutes, Bock said.

Bock said that the fire was most likely ignited by a water heater in one of the homes. Apparently a gas leak in the garage was consistent enough to reach the wall of the garage and be absorbed into the complex's drywall, Bock said.

The fire in the drywall caused the wall studs to ignite, "which is kind of interesting," Bock said.

Early voting begins today

Johnson County residents today can begin early voting on two special constitutional amendments and for a seat on the Johnson County Board of Supervisors.

Today is also the last day Iowans can register to vote in the June 29 special election.

Satellite voting is expected to take place from 5-9 p.m. at the City Plaza, 210 S. Dubuque St., formerly the Holiday Inn.

On Feb. 3, the Iowa Legislature approved two constitutional amendments and voted to submit them for a special election, according to the Johnson County Auditor Web site.

The two amendments are:

- The Legislature and the governor would not be allowed to spend more than 99 percent of the projected state revenues.

- A 60 percent legislative majority would be required to raise sales or income taxes or create new taxes.

In the supervisor election, incumbent Carol Thompson is running against John S. Boardman for the seat; the term will last until Dec. 31, 2000.

For further information, call the Johnson County Auditor's Office at: 356-6004 or visit its Web page at: <http://www.jccn.iowa-city.ia.us/~auditor>.

IWP a more enriching program than administrators realize

I write in response to the invitation from President Coleman for faculty input regarding the International Writing Program. In view of the reporting in Wednesday's The Daily Iowan of comments that I gave to a DI reporter who called me Tuesday night, I will not reiterate here my summary of the conclusions of the ad hoc IWP review committee on which I served last year, beyond noting that every one of our recommendations has, over the past year and especially over the past two weeks, been effectively reversed.

It was for this reason that I declined to serve on another review committee recently appointed to decide the fate of the IWP. No doubt, if enough committees are appointed, one will eventually endorse the administration's course of action, but for me at least, the disregarding of the considered advice of experienced faculty in literature and in international studies raises doubts about the integrity of the review and consultative process. I do urge the members of the new committee to read the report our group submitted only a little more than a year ago. I also urge them to reflect on the fact that, as anyone who has traveled widely on behalf of the university knows, the IWP was not simply its best-known program; it was the only reason its name was known throughout much of the world. This was because the IWP was a program that generated extraordinary goodwill among a large cadre of creative and influential people by annually bringing together a critical mass of writers in an environment of rare freedom in which they were encouraged (but not forced) to interact with one another and with university faculty and students, and supplied with the assistance of experienced translators and other facilitators.

Like some of the other enhancing artistic resources of this campus — e.g. the performance programs of the School of Music or the exhibitions in the Museum of Art — the IWP had little direct tie-in with the academic curriculum, yet it was available to students and faculty who chose to take advantage of it (thus several of my students worked as translator-collaborators with visiting writers, deriving invaluable experience thereby).

It also enriched the wider community through readings and other public programs. Ironically, the IWP was more about giving people opportunities than about getting services from them, and yet, perhaps for this very reason, it became the source of incalculable cultural capital for the university and the state. IWP fellows were often relatively young, and many authors from (materially) poorer nations thus received their first opportunity to visit this country and to establish contacts with other writers and English-language presses here.

When they returned to their homelands, IWP alumni spread the surprising news that, contrary to rumor, the culture of the United States was not confined to New York and Los Angeles — that in the midst of the continent, surrounded by cornfields, there was a remarkable center of generosity, creativity and intellectual vision. How else could one find, for example, the Hindi fiction memoir Ek Baar Iowa ("Once upon a time in Iowa"), published in New Delhi several years ago?

I do not believe that the type of program suggested in recent communications from the College of Liberal Arts — in which a handful of writers are brought in to teach for one or two semesters, essentially as visiting faculty in various units — would provide comparable benefits, nor would it (under whatever name) convince any of the IWP's worldwide admirers that the program has not been eliminated. I find it especially ironic (and professionally depressing) that despite all the rhetoric about "internationalizing" the university and its curriculum, and amidst successful multimillion dollar endowment drives by the UI Foundation, our most famous international program has been abruptly terminated, against the advice of so many dedicated and experienced faculty members. I urge our highest administrators — most of whom have been here only a short time — to study carefully the full impact of three-plus decades of the IWP, and to proceed cautiously in their actions and in their public statements, especially to alumni and donors who may know more about our programs than they do.

I further urge the members of the new review committee, as they examine various options for some future IWP, to also consider the possibility that grievous administrative errors have been committed with respect to this program, and that the wisest course of action may be to admit these and seek to reverse them.

Sex offenders need more than drug therapy

Treatment of convicted sex offenders has combined things both old and new in an attempt to stop violators in their tracks. Prison time, therapy and neighborhood alerts have given way to the latest method in preventing sex criminals from striking again — castration.

States such as Maryland participate in a '90s version of the centuries-old method of punishment by subjecting criminals to weekly injections of Depo-Provera, a contraceptive that is said to lower testosterone levels in men. This in turn reduces their sex drive, thereby preventing any relapses into deviant behavior.

The drug, according to the Cedar Rapids Gazette, has been recommended for use in Iowa's correctional facilities by a law passed by the Legislature in 1998.

However, physicians across the state are concerned about the drug's side effects in men and uncertainty over the drug's ability to reach its desired effect among male sex felons. Hence, no doctors have stepped forth to help carry out the state's new plan to treat sex offenders.

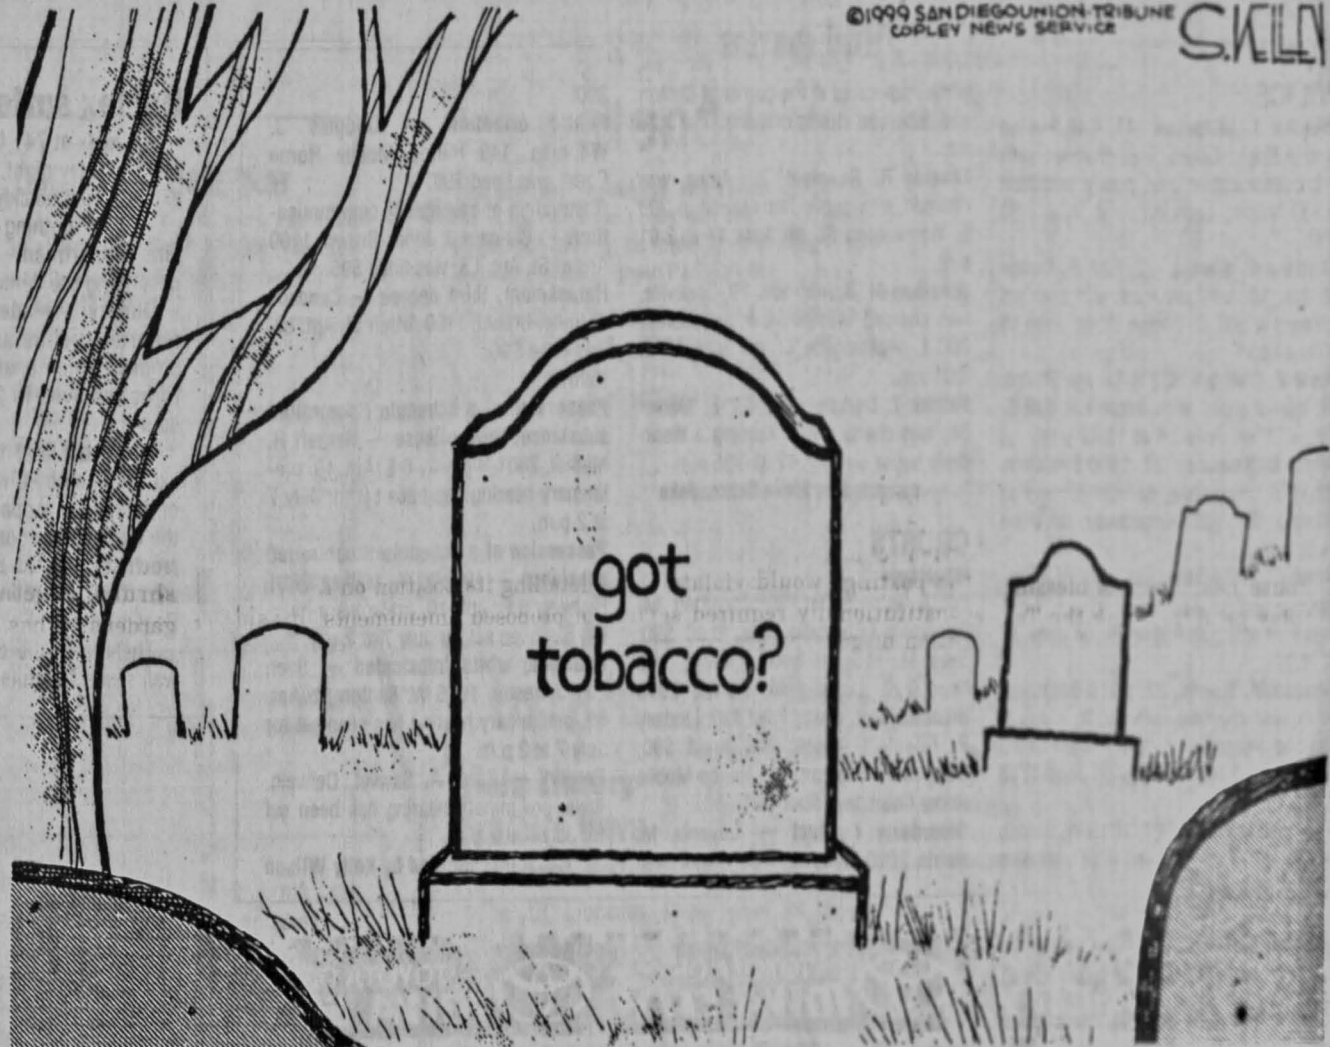

They should not be in any great hurry to do so, either. A physician does not need a psychology degree to know sex crimes are spurred not only by an innate sexual drive, but by mental problems that cloud perception of right and wrong. To find a true culprit in sexual assaults, one must look more closely at brain chemistry than hormonal chemistry.

Antisocial personality disorders, among other mental illnesses, lead individuals to commit harmful acts without regard for consequence. This, coupled with sex drive, can be a dangerous thing. Rape and murder all too often go hand in hand, and the key to preventing these incidents is lowering aggressive tendencies and giving the offender proper mental treatment.

Granted, Depo-Provera treatment in sex offenders is claimed to have been successful in the areas that have carried out this approach. But while containing a criminal's hormonal ability might prevent sex crimes, the criminal mindset will remain and can cause further damage unless properly recognized and treated.

Before Iowa's correctional facilities begin to treat their sex offenders in such a manner, they must realize this treatment is not the solution to repeated sex crimes. It can accompany, but can never replace, traditional therapy.

School athletics can interfere with educational goals

One of the most remarkable things about Iowa City and the UI is Kinnick Stadium. Of course, to those of us who live or work here, Kinnick does not seem so strange.

Indeed, not many in the United States would question a university having a stadium that can hold 70,000 people. It is not really that big.

But in any global context, Kinnick is really strange. I recall when I first came to Iowa City, being shown Kinnick and being amazed at its size. In all of the United Kingdom, where I am from, there is only one stadium larger than Kinnick, and that is the national soccer stadium, Manchester United, a very famous and extremely successful English professional soccer team, doesn't have a stadium that can seat as many as Kinnick.

So why do we have such a big football stadium? Well, people like to come and watch the Hawkeyes play football. But that, too, is a global anomaly. When I was in college in England, we had collegiate sports, but nobody would have dreamed of 70,000 people coming to watch a college game. That would have been preposterous.

Why is college sports so big here? What purposes does it serve? In part, it is because high school sports are so big. In many ways, it is just as shocking that 5,000 people would attend a high school football game as that 70,000 attend a college game. Put simply, college and high school athletics are huge parts of the culture of education in the United States. They are a tradition. But sometimes tradition inhibits progress. While it might be heretical to suggest such a thing, sometimes traditions must be examined very closely to see if they are worth keeping.

The concern here is a very simple one. Does all this athletic activity get in the way of the educational mission of colleges and high schools? There is a second question that might need to be faced. If college and high school athletics do detract from the educational mission, what can be done about it?

Asking questions such as these doesn't get you any brownie points, because for some people, athletics — at both college and high school levels — is a religion. This has been made clear to me over the past five years as I have served as a School Board member for the Regina Education Center here in town.

The only time we ever got a big crowd at School Board meetings was when we were dealing with football. Education and religious issues were of no interest, but sports could really get people riled up. It is also interesting to note that the school got a new athletic track much sooner than it got a renovated chapel.

I suspect that such attitudes are not limited to Iowa City. It is worth recalling that, a few years ago, the Texas Legislature passed so-called "No pass, no play" legislation requiring all athletes on school teams to be passing all classes, or they could not play. That sounds like a good thing, but consider the circumstances that gave rise to the need for such legislation.

As far as I am aware, the UI does a good job in ensuring that college athletes take real classes, do their college work themselves, and, finally, graduate. However, not all colleges do so well. I am sure we have all been delighted by the troubles surfacing up at the University of Minnesota — we all knew those Golden Gophers were a little tarnished. But such scandals erupt often enough to suggest that they are endemic to the current system, rather than minor aberrations of it.

Given that, do we have the courage to ask ourselves whether athletics, at the very least in their current form, belong in our colleges and high schools? To try to answer that question, I examined carefully the UI's new strategic plan (which is still in draft form). It talks about a threefold mission of teaching, research and public service, but it doesn't mention athletics.

I am quite open to the idea that I have missed how athletics enhances the university's mission. It is probably there in black and white, and I missed it, because I'm from another culture. But perhaps, heretically, I can suggest that athletics aren't central to our mission.

Please don't misunderstand. I thoroughly enjoy watching college athletics, and according to my wife, spend far too much time on fall Saturdays watching football games. But that doesn't mean that it is right. We need to be sure that it belongs here and is part of our mission. I am fully aware that heretics get burnt at the stake, but could I request, before you light the fires, a tall double skinny latte, with biscotti? Thanks awfully!

Keyes comes stumping into town

■ Republican Alan Keyes' campaign heads to Coralville in his bid for the presidential nomination.

By Erica C. Fogue
The Daily Iowan

Republican presidential candidate Alan Keyes is expected to be in Coralville for a rally at the Westfield Inn in Coralville today at 7 p.m.

Keyes is known for his morally conservative politics — he opposes abortion and gay and lesbian marriages and supports school prayer and Christian "family values."

Many of his supporters mirror his conservative leanings. For example, UI biomedical technician Doug Wichhart, a 26-year-old father and husband said he supports Keyes' platform based on the incisiveness of his views.

"He takes a very principled stand on issues," Wichhart said. Keyes directly addresses three of Wichhart's top priorities: eliminating abortion, returning control of schools to parents,

Kelly Etzel/The Daily Iowan

Presidential candidate Alan Keyes spoke in Iowa City on April 24 during the "First in the Nation" straw poll, in which he finished fourth.

abolishing income tax and adding an incorporated sales tax.

However, despite some ardent support, Keyes will be challenged to win much favor in Iowa.

"You have to remember that Ambassador Keyes did not do particularly well in the Iowa caucuses four years ago," said Arthur Miller, a UI professor of political science. "I wouldn't say he is a major contender."

Yet Keyes' supporters insist that his lagging chances are due to scant media attention and little name recognition rather than because of a faulty platform.

"Chances are good, provided he can get the media attention," Wichhart said.

If Keyes' message is widely publicized, many believe that his simple message will attract voters.

"He is very good at simplifying problems and bringing them back to the Constitution," said Jean Hogan, a Republican volunteer for the Keyes campaign in Johnson County. "And he's a good speaker."

Hogan said that she is supporting Keyes because she attracted to his philosophy and programs.

Yet Miller cites Keyes' inability to implement a program as one of the candidate's major problems.

"He does not translate his moral message into public policy and laws," Miller said. "He doesn't spell out any policy that he would put into effect that would bring about renewed moral change in America."

Regents OK Westlawn bridge

■ The board also raised patient rates at the UIHC by 4 percent, effective July 1.

By Chris Rasmussen
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa state Board of Regents Thursday appropriated funds for the construction of a pedestrian bridge over Highway 6 that will connect the International Center with Westlawn, providing a link between the arts campus and the health science campus. The bridge is expected to cost $1,343,000.

"(The bridge) is a safe and positive step for International Programs to be connected with other parts of the campus," said Liz Swanson, associate dean of international programs.

The bridge has special significance for Swanson.

"I'm a student at the College of Nursing, and I walk back and forth between the campuses quite frequently," she said.

On Wednesday, the regents approved a 4 percent increase in

It is a safe and positive step for International Programs to be connected with other parts of the campus patient rates at the UI Hospitals and Clinics, to become effective on July 1.

The increase was necessary because of inflation and operating factors, said Dean Borg, the UIHC information director.

"The UIHC is losing revenue because reimbursement from the federal programs Medicare and Medicaid, which the UIHC is forced to accept, is less than what the hospital would normally charge," said Regent Clarkson Kelly.

Borg said the Balanced Budget Act of 1997 is the reason that Medicare and Medicaid payments are inordinately low.

Borg also attributed the rate increase to the slightly declining number of inpatients.

Kelly said hospitals operate on economies of scale, and any decrease in number of patients is cause for concern.

Borg tried to put the UIHC's rate increase in perspective. "Historically and nationally, we have been far below the rate increases of similar institutions," he said.

The regents also appropriated $3.7 million to relocate the Pediatric Bone Marrow Transplant Unit to the Pediatric Unit in the Colloton Pavilion.

"It brings in people from all over the world, and its accommodations needed enhancement," Borg said.

The vacated space in Carver Pavilion will be renovated to meet the needs of the expanding Adult Bone Marrow Transplant Unit.

Once again, city takes aim at Bambi

■ Iowa City's deer herd population is up 62 percent from 1997, and officials are mulling a culling.

By Greg Smith
Associated Press

IOWA CITY — Paul Bowers stands by the 7-foot fence of chicken wire that skirts his vegetable garden, the third fence he has built in an attempt to keep hungry herds of deer from nibbling every last plant to the ground.

"I have a sling shot, and I use that to bean them," he said. "The only problem is, they've become so used to people, I can hit them three times before they finally even start to move away."

A lack of predators and a bountiful food supply — trees, shrubs, vegetable and flower gardens — has caused the deer population to explode. There are so many deer roaming the streets of Iowa City that officials are considering drastic means to get rid of them.

Last winter, the city hired federal marksmen armed with silencer-equipped, high-powered rifles to cull the herd. The shooting was halted after animal-protection groups sued, saying there had not been adequate time for public comment.

But this year, faced with an even bigger herd, city officials are considering hiring sharpshooters again — or even allowing bow-and-arrow hunting within the city.

Deer freely graze through neighborhoods, causing thousands of dollars in damage. They bound across roads and highways, posing a risk to motorists. Helicopter counts by the Iowa

Buzz Orr/Associated Press

Two deer wander through Iowa City in December 1998. A lack of predators and a bountiful food supply has caused the deer population to explode.

Department of Natural Resources tallied 869 deer — up 62 percent from 1997 — in the Iowa City area. Biologists say an urban area can support between 20 and 30 deer per square mile; in some parts of Iowa City, particularly in the north, there are up to 167 deer per square mile.

Police reported 15 car-deer accidents in 1996, 28 in 1997, 50 last year, and 23 so far this year.

"I fully expect someone to get killed in an auto-deer accident sooner or later," Mayor Ernie Lehman said. "We have created an environment that is so friendly to deer. They are protected because hunting is not allowed in city limits. They have all the food in the world. They have no natural predators."

"If I were a deer living in the country, I'd move to Iowa City."

Sharpshooters from the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Wildlife Services Division had killed 22 deer in two nights before the hunt was stopped on Jan. 22.

The marksmen were to have killed 240 deer, with the meat going to some 900 low-income residents, which officials say would have reduced the city's deer population to fewer than 35 per square mile.

But the UI coalition and four national groups — the Animal Protection Institute, Friends of Animals, the Fund for Animals and the Humane Society of the United States — went to court, arguing that there had not been adequate public comment under the National Environmental Policy Act.

A federal judge in Washington, D.C., issued a temporary restraining order on Feb. 12, preventing USDA sharpshooters from participating in the city's deer-shooting plan.

A 13-member citizens committee has been meeting to figure out what to do this winter. One thing is certain: One way or another, the deer herd will be thinned.

House passes display of Ten Commandments

■ The move comes at the behest of the conservatives, as Congress looks for ways to prevent violence in the schools.

By David Espo
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Searching for a way to curb youth violence, the House bestowed its blessing Thursday on displaying the Ten Commandments in schools and other state-owned facilities and braced for a showdown over gun control.

The vote was 248-180 for a proposal by Rep. Robert Aderholt to allow states to display the commandments. Critics said the provision was unconstitutional, but the Alabama Republican countered that it would "promote morality and work toward an end of children killing children."

Separately, in a second victory for the entertainment industry in as many days, the House rejected a proposal to require labeling of violent content in such entertainment products as video games.

The debate marked the House's attempt to fashion a response to the shootings at a Colorado high school and elsewhere in recent months and prompted lawmakers in both parties to lament cases of "children killing children."

The vote on the Ten Commandments was largely along party lines, with 203 Republicans and 45 Democrats in favor and 164 Democrats, one independent and 15 Republicans against.

Aderholt said the commandments "represent the very cornerstone of Western civilization and the basis of our legal system here in America." But Rep. Robert Scott, D-Va., countered that the proposal sought "to elevate one particular religion over all others," an effort that he said was "blatantly unconstitutional."

The Supreme Court struck down a Kentucky state law that required posting the Ten Commandments in every public school classroom, ruling that the postings would violate the constitutionally required separation of government and religion.

Other provisions, approved Wednesday, would call for tougher penalties for juvenile offenders, make it easier to try some juveniles as adults, and require federal prosecutors to devote increased time and money to pursuing gun-related crimes.

Those votes served as a prelude to the gun issue, the focus of a pitched political and lobbying battle for the past two weeks between the forces of the White House and gun control on one side and the National Rifle Association on the other.

House Democratic Leader Dick Gephardt, leading the charge for greater gun control, paid grudging respect to the work of the NRA.

"I'm in admiration of what it's able to do," he said at a news conference, referring to an organization that has poured an estimated $14 million into political campaigns in the past decade.

"You've got members (of Congress) who are looking at a big independent expenditure that can be run against them; at votes that can be implemented against them" if they defy the organization's wishes, he said.

For its part, the NRA issued a letter to members of the House detailing its position on a variety of proposed amendments. It said it "very strongly supports" a provision advanced by Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., which, it said, "does not include any gun-control provisions."

Dingell's proposal would curtail existing requirements for sales at gun shows, partly by redefining a gun show.

An alternative, backed by the White House, would retain the provisions approved by the Senate last month. They would require mandatory background checks for all purchases at gun shows, closing what supporters said was a loophole left in the 1993 Brady Bill.

In addition, votes were expected on proposals to require that a safety device be sold with all handguns, to raise the minimum age for the purchase of a handgun from 18 to 21, and to ban the importation of high-capacity ammunition clips.

Moral Problem? Or Money Problem?

"Do you think that the decline of marriage and the moral dissolution of the family is a money problem? Or do you think it's a problem that comes from putting the self first, from deciding there are not obligations that have to be respected, and at the end of the day, freedom is just another kind of empty licentiousness?"

U.S.-Russian talks on Kosovo deadlocked

■ Technical experts from both sides were "refining the details" of a possible deal on peacekeeping sectors.

By Robert Burns
Associated Press

HELSINKI, Finland — U.S. and Russian negotiators failed after a second day of negotiations Thursday to reach agreement on Moscow's peacekeeping role in Kosovo. The sticking point is Russia's insistence on having its own sector to patrol.

The talks headed by Defense Secretary William Cohen and Secretary of State Madeleine Albright and their Russian counterparts are to resume today, spokesman Kenneth Bacon said.

Bacon said the two sides' technical experts were working overnight "refining the details" of a possible deal. Cohen said there was no deadline for the negotiations, but the U.S. delegation planned to leave today for talks with NATO allies in Brussels, Belgium.

After about 12 hours of closed-door talks, Cohen emerged from the presidential palace to say the negotiations, which had been scheduled to end Thursday, were on track.

"We have made great progress today and resolved a lot of outstanding issues," Cohen said. "We have not yet finalized an agreement."

His counterpart, Defense Minister Marshall Igor Sergeev, said, "We have optimism to reach agreement at our level in order to have something to report to our presidents."

Cohen presented to the Russians a "very detailed" proposal to deal with the question of their peacekeeping contingent, an issue that Bacon said was the final obstacle to an accord.

As the talks stretched into the night, the Russians countered Cohen's offer and he, in turn, proposed yet another approach, Bacon said.

Other officials said Cohen was urging the Russians to accept a geographic patrol area within one of the already established five peacekeeping sectors in Kosovo, thereby avoiding a split between NATO and non-NATO areas. One suggestion was to call this a Russian "zone of responsibility."

almost a matter of routine."

Amid the accounts of brutality and fear, there were stories of courage and compassion. In the western town of Decane, residents recounted how the local Serbian Orthodox monastery sheltered Kosovars from a rampage by withdrawing soldiers.

Now that the soldiers have left, a few elderly Serbs fearful of Albanian reprisals hid in the monastery, but local Kosovars, who remember the monastery's kindness, vowed to protect them.

But in Devic, a monastery tucked away in the hills of central Kosovo, was ransacked and terrorized by KLA rebels who had surrounded the religious shrine since early 1998, the CNN television network reported.

Serb civilians frantically followed Serb soldiers retreating from the province, and tens of thousands of Kosovars streamed back into their homeland from camps in Albania and Macedonia.

At least 10,000 Kosovars — and probably many more — were killed by Serbs in a two-month slaughter across Kosovo while NATO bombs fell on Yugoslavia, according to Hoon, the British foreign office minister.

"Tragically, our estimates of the numbers of innocent men, women and children killed will almost certainly have to be revised upwards," he said.

UI scientists find key migraine player

■ CGRP apparently controls the inflammation that causes the excruciating pain, two researchers report.

By Glen Leyden
The Daily Iowan

Those who suffer from the agonizing pain of migraines might be one step closer to knowing why their torment seems endless, thanks to recent UI research.

Andrew Russo, an associate professor of physiology, and Paul Durham, a research investigator in physiology, published their findings on migraines in June's issue of the Journal of Neuroscience.

"We have identified a key player called CGRP (calcitonin gene-related peptides) that controls the inflammation that is the cause of the pain," Russo said. "But, as of yet, we don't know exactly how to control the amount of CGRP released."

Currently, the most effective drug for combating migraines is Sumatriptan, Russo said. No one knew exactly how the drug worked until Russo's and Durham's findings.

"Sumatriptan regulates the amount of calcium like a thermostat," Russo said. "If you have too much calcium, it can lead to increased pain — but Sumatriptan keeps the calcium level at half way for an extended period of time, and this helps to alleviate the pain."

Durham said he is hopeful that the study will make substantial advancement in the research of migraines.

"The study of migraines has been stuck in a rut, except for Sumatriptan," Durham said. "Our research will hopefully find new targets to combat and help alleviate migraine pain." Sumatriptan, however, fails to help all migraine sufferers.

"Those with heart conditions or the very young are advised not to use Sumatriptan because of possible complications," Durham said. "If we broaden the study of players that cause migraines, possibly a new drug can be found in the future."

While a more effective cure will depend on further research, there are lifestyle changes that can lower one's chances of getting migraines, Russo said.

"Of course, one should look for lifestyle changes over the use of drugs," he said. "Stress reduction and changes in diet can help to reduce migraines."

Some UI students hailed the news of the study.

UI senior Robin Stricklin suffers from migraines that bring about severe discomfort.

"It's like a really bad headache, but I also get nauseous, and I can't see well," she said. "All I want to do is lie in a dark room and wait for the pain to go away."

Stricklin has had little luck with the treatments she has undergone and is eager for new developments.

"I have been unable to keep down other medicines, and they never seem to work right, so I would really be interested in any new findings," she said.

Einstein's brain = mc2, study says

■ Scientists find the "mathematical reasoning" part of the physicist's brain was 15 percent wider than normal.

By Emma Ross
Associated Press

LONDON — We always suspected something must have made Albert Einstein smarter than the rest of us.

Now, scientists have found that one part of his brain was indeed physically extraordinary.

In the only study ever conducted of the overall anatomy of Einstein's brain, scientists at McMaster University in Ontario, Canada, discovered that the part of the brain thought to be related to mathematical reasoning — the inferior parietal region — was 15 percent wider on both sides than normal.

Furthermore, they found that the groove that normally runs from the front of the brain to the back did not extend all the way in Einstein's case. That finding could have applications even to those with more pedestrian levels of intelligence.

"That kind of shape was not observed in any one of our brains and is not depicted in any atlas of the human brain," said Sandra Witelson, a neuroscientist who led the study, published in this week's issue of the Lancet, a British medical journal.

"But it shouldn't be seen as anatomy is destiny," she added. "We also know that environment has a very important role to play in learning and brain development. But what this is telling us is that environment isn't the only factor."

The findings may point to the importance of the inferior parietal region, Witelson said.

While the differences may be extraordinary between Einstein and everyone else, there may be more subtle, even microscopic, differences when the anatomies of the brains of people who don't fall into the genius category are compared with each other, she said.

The researchers compared the founder of the theory of relativity's brain with the preserved brains of 35 men and 56 women known to have normal intelligence when they died.

With the men's brains, they conducted two separate comparisons — first between Einstein's brain and all the men, and next between his brain and those of the eight men who were similar in age to Einstein when they died.

They found that, overall, Einstein's brain was the same weight and had the same measurements from front to back as all the other men, which Witelson said confirms the belief of many scientists that focusing on overall brain size as an indicator of intelligence is not the way to go.

Witelson theorized that the partial absence of the groove in Einstein's brain may be the key, because it might have allowed more neurons in this area to establish connections between each other and work together more easily.

She said it is likely that the groove, known as the sulcus, was always absent in that part of Einstein's brain, rather than shrinking away as a result of his intelligence, because, as one of the two or three landmarks in the human brain, it appears very early in life.

Some parents of incoming freshmen also use Mayflower instead of a hotel during Orientation.

"It's not that bad," said Carol Blondell, of Mount Prospect, Ill., a parent who is here for two days.

"I'm glad there are not many students around to mess things up. Parents can handle it better."

Roepsch said the renovations are being done during the summer to reduce the distraction for students.

"We know it's an inconvenience," he said. "It's tough on the staff, too, but we're very excited."

A new and improved fire-suppression system will also be finished by the end of the year. Roepsch said it will in no way affect students.

Of the new jobs available in the Iowa City area, the survey shows the need for office personnel is expected to increase 29 percent. However, factory positions are expected to decrease by 40 percent.

"During the summer months, production is slower at manufacturing plants," said Chris Stevenson, administrative assistant at Cambridge. "This trend is normal for the summer months."

The number of companies hiring, however, is expected to decrease. Cambridge's projections indicated that only 48 percent of the companies surveyed plan to hire, down from 57 percent a year ago.

Sonderleiter to add inside depth for the Hawkeyes

Iowa coach Steve Alford has recruited the 6-foot-9 senior-to-be since he was coaching at Southwest Missouri St.

By Greg Wallace
The Daily Iowan

DES MOINES- Sean Sonderleiter had his choice of colleges to play basketball, but in the end, family and faith made his choice very easy.

The 6-foot-9 Des Moines Christian senior-to-be announced that he would be a Hawkeye at a press conference Thursday morning in Timberline Gymnasium, DM Christian's home court.

After thanking God, his family, and his team, Sonderleiter pulled on a black-and-gold baseball cap and announced that he would play for head coach Steve Alford and the Iowa basketball team.

Sonderleiter said that while Drake, Iowa State, and Iowa, the main competitors for his services, were equal, there was something special that steered him Steve Alford's way.

"I visited all three schools, and they all had nice schools, but Iowa just stuck out," Sonderleiter said.

"The coaching staff were all great people, and they had a great relationship with God. I thought they had the best things that I needed academically, and they had a great basketball program, too."

Sonderleiter cited Alford's strong Christian faith and a need to be close to home as important factors in his decision.

"It's always great to have another spiritual partner to have with you, being a strong Christian is always good," he said.

Sonderleiter becomes the sixth player to commit to the program since Alford took the head coaching job in March, joining transfers Ryan Hogan, Joe Fermino and Rob Griffin, as well as Iowa preps Glen Worley and Jeff Horner.

He projects as either a power forward or a center for Iowa. He has played center for three years for Des Moines Christian, a small high school, but may move to a power forward role in college.

"We've played him as a post player, and I don't know where Iowa sees him, but I'd assume he'll play a little four as well as a five," Sonderleiter's coach, Mike Swaim, said. "That means he'll have to come out on the floor a little more, but he's doing that now in the summer more than he did for us during the year."

Sonderleiter averaged 16.5 points per game and 12 rebounds for a Des Moines Christian team that finished second in the Class 1-A state tournament, and also placed third and fourth as a sophomore and a freshman.

1-A is Iowa's smallest class, but Sonderleiter is ready for the jump to the Big Ten. He has faced top competition already as part of an AAU team, and he knows that being the best will take some work.

"I've watched Iowa forever, since I was a kid, and I'm going to have to work hard, hit the weights hard, and just be dedicated to the game to make it in Big Ten basketball," Sonderleiter said.

Sonderleiter said that Alford had been recruiting him since the beginning of last season, when Alford was at Southwest Missouri State, and continued his pursuit when he took the head coaching job at Iowa. Sonderleiter felt that Iowa's lack of big men also influenced his decision.

Galloway shines in losing effort

Iowa junior Kyle Galloway scored 41 points in his first competitive game since a 1998 back injury.

By Greg Wallace
The Daily Iowan

Kyle Galloway hadn't played basketball competitively in quite a while. But it sure didn't show in the Prime Time League opener Thursday night.

Galloway scorched the nets for 41 points for Mike Gatens Real Estate in his first live game since November. However, it wasn't enough to overcome a strong team effort from Fitzpatrick's, as Gatens lost 112-92 in the first game for both teams.

"I couldn't hit any of my three's, but I've been working hard, and I'm just trying to get out there and get in the best shape that I can," Galloway said. "I've got a lot to work on."

Galloway was 14-26 from the field, including 4-14 from 3 point range. Dean Oliver had a great all-around effort for Fitzy's, scoring 23 points, and adding eight rebounds and seven assists.

The game also marked the first glimpse Iowa fans had of new Hawkeyes Joe Fermino and Ryan Hogan. Fermino, a transfer from Barton County (Kansas), proved to be a force, scoring 13 points and grabbing four rebounds. Hogan had 11 points and five assists.

"I'm exceptionally happy that I get to play with my point guard," Fermino said. "I really need to get and get used to the way that he plays. It was a tough move from Kansas, putting all my furniture in a U-Haul, but it feels good to be here and I'm ready to get going."

Hogan is also excited about being a Hawkeye and playing with his future teammates.

"This is a great chance for us to get accustomed to one another," Hogan said. "We want to win this Prime Time League—move the ball, spread the love, and everyone will be happy. We're here to play team ball, and hopefully it will carry over to next year."

Fitzpatrick's jumped to a ten point lead at halftime, led by 12 from Oliver. The Injured star propels Dallas to a 3-2 series lead

Mike Modano chipped in two assists, giving Dallas exactly the spark they needed.

By Alan Robinson
Associated Press

DALLAS - With a black-and-blue line and a touch of gray, the Dallas Stars are one victory away from Stanley Cup silver.

Darryl Sydor scored a power-play goal in the second period and the Stars, the oldest team in the playoffs, held off the Buffalo Sabres 2-0 in yet another tightly played game Thursday night for a 3-2 series lead.

With the Stars' Ed Belfour matching the better-known Dominik Hasek save for save in the closest finals in years, the Stars can hoist their first cup by winning Game 6 Saturday in Buffalo. If they don't, Game 7 will be Tuesday in Reunion Arena.

Belfour, who has a better save percentage in the playoffs than Hasek, stopped 23 shots in his best game of the series. Hasek, considered hockey's best goaltender but a backup to Belfour when Pittsburgh swept their Chicago Blackhawks in the 1992 finals, made 19 saves but also gave up a third-period goal to Pat Verbeek.

Mike Modano assisted on both goals and also debuted a black-and-blue line for the black-and-green Stars with Brett Hull and Benoit Hogue. Modano has played with a serious wrist injury since Game 3, while Hogue has two torn knee ligaments and Hull missed Game 4 with a strained groin.

The Stars also constantly won big faceoffs, a key statistic dominated by the Sabres in the previous two games, with 39-year-old Guy Carbonneau taking many of the draws.

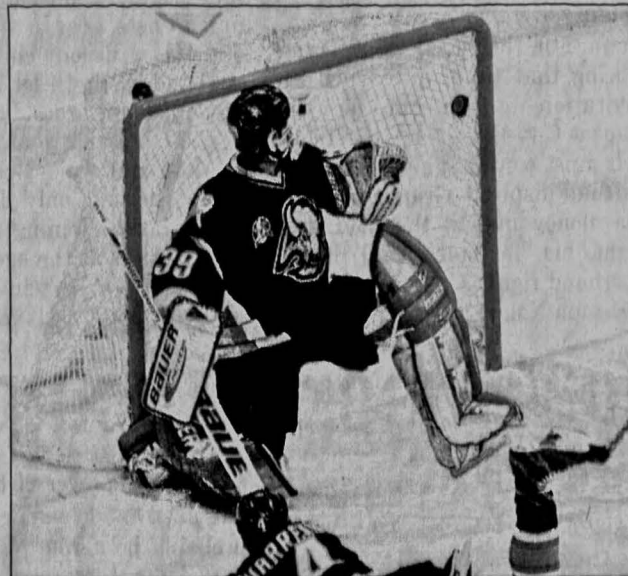

The Sabres, who lack the big names and big scorers of the Stars, have scored only eight goals in five games and now face big odds, too. No team has rallied from a 3-2 deficit to win the Stanley Cup since Montreal in 1971.

Just like the previous four games, Game 5 featured exceptional goaltending, plenty of hitting and a scarcity of open-ice play. It all goes back to the goaltenders. Both Belfour and Hasek have goals-against averages under 2.00, the first time that's happened in a finals since 1945.

This is the lowest-scoring series since 1947, when Toronto and Montreal also had only 19 goals through five games. Game 5 was only the second in the series decided by two goals; Dallas won Game 2 at home 4-2.

Modano warned the Stars after the teams split 2-1 decisions in Buffalo that Dallas had to be prepared to win 1-0.

Buffalo Sabres goalie Dominik Hasek watches the puck go in the net on shot by Dallas Stars Darryl Sydor. Sydor's goal proved to be more than enough as Dallas won Game 5 of the Stanley Cup finals, 2-0 Thursday.

Dallas brings in lucky national anthem singer

STARS
The Stars almost did, taking a 1-0 lead deep into the third before Verbeek essentially iced the go-ahead victory by scoring at 15:21. Modano poked the puck up ice to Richard Matvichuk, who shot it ahead to Verbeek. He skated into the slot and went to his backhand to beat Hasek for his third goal of the playoffs.
On this night, the stars decided it for the Stars.
After a scoreless first period that had numerous open-ice hits but few good scoring chances, Dallas took advantage of Curtis Brown's interference penalty to score the initial goal for only the second time in the series.

Modano threaded a pass from the right circle across the slot to Sydor in the lower left circle. Hasek chose not to come out of the net and cut off the angle, allowing Sydor to lift the puck over the goaltender's left shoulder and under the crossbar at 2:23 of the second.
Sydor didn't have any power-play goals in the playoffs, but his nine during the regular season were second only to Hull's 15 among the Stars.

While Dallas finally broke through with a man-advantage, Buffalo's struggles on the power play continued.
The Sabres went 0-for-3 in a physical game in which referees Kerry Fraser and Don Koharski overlooked most infractions, and are 0-for-17 on the power play since scoring twice in Game 2. They are 0-for-16 in the last three games.

The Stars, aware they might be playing their final home game if they didn't win, brought in their lucky star: singer B.J. Thomas. His best-known hit is "Raindrops Keep Falling on My Head" — not exactly a good-luck song — but the Stars are 6-0 when he sings the national anthem.
No need to guess who will sing in Dallas if there is a Game 7.
Hogue tore two knee ligaments in the Western Conference finals against Colorado and played for the first time in the finals.

Griffin pours in 45 points, grabs 13 rebounds

PRIME TIME
lead stretched to 14 early in the second half, but Gatens cut the lead to 72-65 after a Galloway trey.
They would get no closer, however. An Oliver coast-to-coast layup made it 74-65, and after rebounding a missed Gatens three, he cut open for a three-pointer that ended any Gatens hopes, making the score 77-65.
Gatens was playing without two of its better players, J.R. Koch and Glen Worley, and had only eight players in total. Terry Cress added 25 points for the depleted Gatens squad. Jess Settles had fourteen points and twelve rebounds for Fitzy's, and Drake player Dontay Harris added fourteen points and twelve rebounds.
"We could use those guys," Galloway said. "Even though I'm 6-6, I'm a short 6-6 and not much of a post player."

Fieldhouse/Gringos 108 Lepic Kroger/Active Endeavors 105
The Fieldhouse/Gringo's won a barn-burner over Lepic-Kroger Realtors/Active Endeavors, 108-105 in overtime. Lepic-Kroger forced the overtime on an off-balance Dusty Waddlington three-pointer as time expired in regulation, cashing in on The Fieldhouse's Rod Thompson's missed free throw with 7 seconds left. Thompson redeemed himself, however, by making 4 straight free throws in the final 20 seconds of overtime to preserve the win for The Fieldhouse. Thompson led all scorers for the game with 30 points and 16 rebounds.
"They were saying to me at the end of the game, 'hey, a lot of pressure, huh?' And it don't exist. So I took my time and knocked them down", Thompson said.

ImprintedSportswear /Goodfellows 116 Deli-Mart/Ready Mix 104
Also in Thursday's action, Imprinted Sportswear/Goodfellow Printing took an early lead and built on it the entire game, blowing out Deli-Mart/Iowa City Ready Mix 116-104. Ex-Wyoming player Troy Washpun had 20 points and 10 rebounds for Imprinted, while Hawkeye Jacob Jaacks added ten points and ten boards, dominating the action in the paint. Former Hawkeye Kenyon Murray had 31 points for Deli-Mart.
"It's going to take a little while longer to really dominate," Jaacks said. "This isn't really a big man's league, it's more of a guard's league, a little more up-tempo, shoot it every time you catch it. If I get the ball I'll do my thing, but if I don't it's not going to be pretty."

Goodfellas' 107 Merrill Lynch/Nike 100
In the evening's last, but certainly not least game, incoming Iowa junior college transfer Rob Griffin put on quite a show. The junior-to-be, who transferred from Southeast Community College in Burlington, scored 45 points and snared 13 rebounds in Good Fellas' 107-100 win over Merrill Lynch/Nike. Former Drake player BJ Windhorst scored 30 for Merrill Lynch, which held a 55-51 halftime lead but was unable to overcome 28 second half points from Griffin.

Grant deserves title shot in the near future

forward on their basketball team. During that time, he earned an invitation to try out for the Kansas City Royals as a pitcher.
It must be that time as a pitcher that inspired Grant to name his money punch, the overhand right, his "fastball". Well, if his overhand right is a fastball, it's a 101-mph Nolan Ryan Express.

To go along with his killer overhand right, Grant has good power in both fists, goes to the body well, and has a decent chin. Also, his size and strength let him muscle any opponent around the ring.
The big knock against Grant is his late start and lack of experience. He had only 12 amateur fights before joining the professional ranks at the age of 22, and some feel that isn't enough to pick up everything a champion needs to know.

Well, Grant's learning on the job.
He's learned not to rely on the one-punch knockout and has become one of the games best finishers once he has an opponent hurt.
He's learned the value of body-punching to wear an opponent down in a long fight.
He learned how to deal with adversity when a headbutt opened a nasty cut over his eye early in his last fight against Ahmed Abdin.

So far, he's answered all questions thrown at him. The only question left is how much longer will he have to wait to get a title shot?

Iowa recruit compared to Bowen, Street

RECRUIT
"They really have a lot of size leaving the program, and by the time I get there, they're going to need some big strong people to play there," Sonderleiter said.
Sonderleiter is only 225 pounds, small for a player of his size. He will need to add strength, and will probably be a role player for his first season at Iowa.

Recruiting guru Van Coleman has called his style similar to that of former Hawkeyes Ryan Bowen and Chris Street. Sonderleiter says that he's ready to work hard to make himself better.

"I'll do whatever Steve Alford tells me to do to become a key player for Iowa," Sonderleiter said. "I'll just make me work harder to achieve that goal."
"He's coachable," Swaim said.

"Any time a coach can get a player who will listen and be coachable, I think it's one of the most important things for a player's development."

BASEBALL ROUNDUP

Segui's triple lifts Mariners

DETROIT (AP) — David Segui hit a two-run triple in the ninth inning as the Seattle Mariners rallied to beat the Detroit Tigers 4-2 Thursday night.

With Detroit leading 2-1, reliever C.J. Nitkowski walked Ken Griffey Jr. to start the ninth. Todd Jones (1-2) came on and gave up a single to Butch Huskey that put Griffey on third when right-fielder Bobby Higginson bobbled the ball for an error.

Segui followed with a drive to the right-field gap that scored both runners. He then scored on David Bell's one-out squeeze bunt.

Phillies 7, Padres 5

SAN DIEGO — Paul Byrd won his 10th game and Bobby Abreu led a 12-hit attack by going 3-for-5 with two RBIs as the Philadelphia Phillies beat the San Diego Padres 7-5 Thursday.

Abreu fell a home run short of hitting for the cycle.

Blue Jays 3, Angels 0

TORONTO — Tony Fernandez homered to raise his major league-leading average to .405 and Kelvim Escobar pitched seven scoreless innings as the Toronto Blue Jays beat the Anaheim Angels 3-0 Thursday night for a four-game sweep.

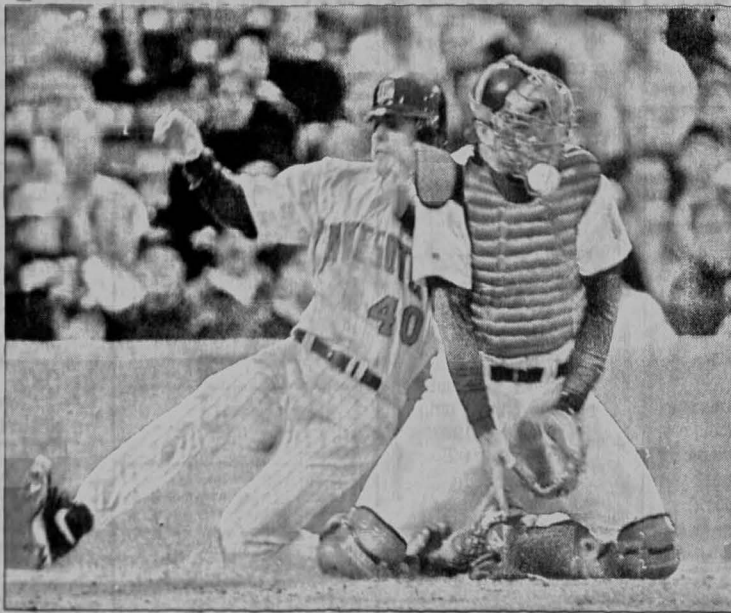

Reds 2, Brewers 0

CINCINNATI — Pete Harnisch threw 106 pitches in five innings but held Milwaukee to three hits, and the Cincinnati Reds beat the Brewers 2-0 Thursday.

Harnisch (6-6) struck out six and walked four.

Twins 8, Red Sox 7

BOSTON — Jacque Jones had a tiebreaking two-run double and went 3-for-5 Thursday night as the

Charles Krupa/Associated Press

Minnesota's Marty Cordova scores in the first inning in Boston, Thursday.

Minnesota Twins averted a four-game sweep with an 8-7 win over the Boston Red Sox.

Boston has lost eight of its last 12.

Rangers 4, Yankees 2

NEW YORK — The Texas Rangers used a triple play, four infield hits and Juan Gonzalez's solo homer off a dominating Roger Clemens to beat the New York Yankees 4-2 Thursday night.

Mets 4, Cardinals 3

ST. LOUIS — Al Leiter won his third straight start and Robin Ventura went 3-for-4 with a home run as the New York Mets beat the St. Louis Cardinals 4-3 Thursday night.

Mike Piazza singled and scored twice to extend his hitting streak to 20 games, the current high in the majors.

Braves 8, Astros 5

HOUSTON — Kevin Millwood took a perfect game into the seventh inning before Craig Biggio singled, and the Atlanta Braves beat the Houston Astros 8-5 Thursday night.

Millwood (7-4) struck out seven of his first nine batters.

Indians 10, Athletics 6

CLEVELAND — Pinch-hitter Jim Thome doubled in the go-ahead run in a five-run seventh inning, and Roberto Alomar had four RBIs as the Cleveland Indians rallied past the Oakland Athletics 10-6 Thursday night.

White Sox 9, Orioles 3

CHICAGO — Paul Konerko hit his first career grand slam, Magglio Ordonez and Chris Singleton homered and Baltimore committed five errors Thursday as the White Sox beat the Orioles 9-3.

It was Baltimore's first loss in eight games.

OMAHA, Neb. — Lale Esquivel made sure Miami coach Jim Morris would have another shot at a national title.

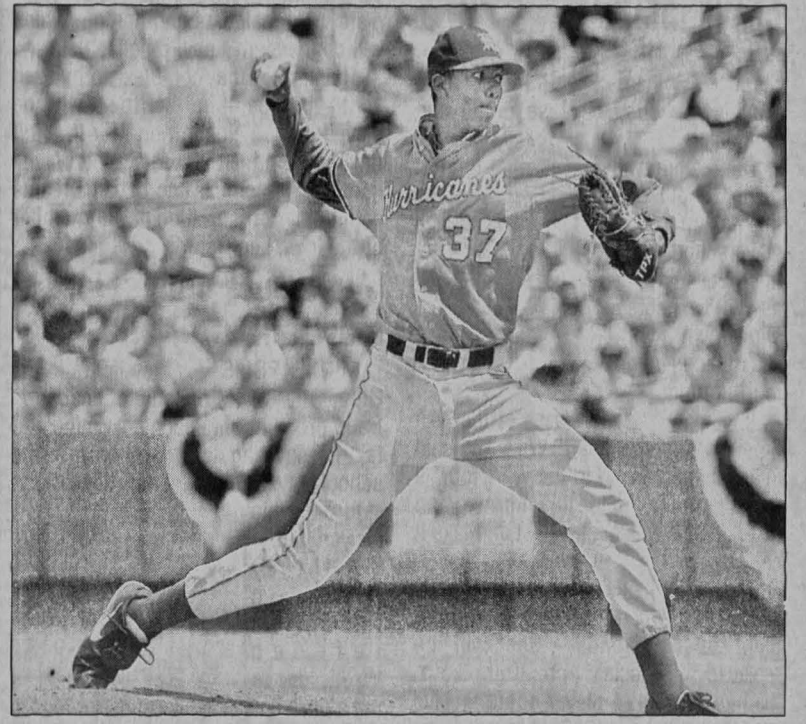

Esquivel doubled off the center field wall in the fifth, driving in two runs as Miami beat Alabama 5-2 on Thursday in the College World Series.

The victory sends the top-seeded Hurricanes (49-13) to Saturday's championship game. Alabama (53-16) was eliminated.

Miami returned to the title game for the first time since 1996, when LSU's Warren Morris hit a two-out homer in the ninth to deny the Hurricanes, who are seeking their first national title since 1985.

Closer Michael Neu started the eighth for the Hurricanes, allowing a leadoff single by Jeremy Brown in the bottom of the ninth.

Neu got Kelley Gullede and Brent Boyd on strikes, then walked Antonio Bostic before Derek Wigginton grounded into a force at second. Shortstop Bobby Hill fielded it and stepped on the bag ahead of Bostic, and Neu had his 15th save.

Florida State 8, Stanford 6

OMAHA, Neb. — Sam Scott's towering two-run homer capped Florida State's four-run sixth inning and the Seminoles rallied to beat Stanford 8-6 on Thursday night in the College World Series.

The Seminoles (56-13) forced a rematch Friday with the Cardinal (50-14). Both teams have one loss in their double-elimination bracket, and the survivor will play Miami in Saturday's championship.

Stanford brought the tying run to the plate in the bottom of the ninth.

After reliever Zach Diaz (4-1) walked leadoff hitter John Gall, he got Joe Borchard to foul out, popped Josh Hochgesang out to first and got Damien Alvarado to ground to second for the force.

Florida State came back from a 6-2 deficit, tying it on Scott's shot into the right field bleachers. Reliever Mike Wodnicki left a fastball too high and Scott hit it high and deep.

Mickelson, Duval, two others share lead at U.S. Open

■ Father-to-be Phil Mickelson is ready to drop out of the tournament if his wife goes into labor.

Doug Ferguson
Associated Press

PINEHURST, N.C. — The wedge and putter that staked Phil Mickelson to a share of the lead in the U.S. Open were not the most important items in his bag Thursday.

That would be the pager he keeps in a side pocket, his link to an expectant wife in Arizona and word that their first child is on the way. Amy has a special code to punch in should she go into labor.

There were no beeps in the first round, just birdies. Mickelson took advantage of his deft touch around the greens and a damp, vulnerable Pinehurst No. 2 for a 3-under 67, putting him at the top of a packed leaderboard that included David Duval.

Tiger Woods dazzled the gallery with two birdies on the last two holes for a 68. He was joined there by Payne Stewart and a suddenly surprising contender — John Daly. Even after his best start ever in a U.S. Open, an important first step toward winning his first major championship, Mickelson wouldn't think twice about leaving early.

"It's not worth the tournament," he said. "As important as the U.S. Open is to me and every other player in the field, this is the birth of my first child. I wouldn't miss it for the world. This is an exciting time for me." That may not be the case for everyone else.

On what figures to be the easiest day for scoring because of the soft greens, the best anyone could muster was a 67. The sun finally broke through the clouds and drizzle late in the day. It is expected to stick around through the weekend, which will only harden the already treacherous, crowned greens designed by Donald Ross.

"This is as tame as we'll play the golf course all week," Stewart said. "If you really didn't take advantage of the golf course today, you really have your work cut out for you." Billy Mayfair, who lives near Mickelson in Scottsdale, Ariz., and whose wife just found out she was expecting their first child, made three long birdie putts to join the crowd at 67. "I've got his beeper number," Mayfair joked.

Paul Goydos birdied three of the last six holes to get to 67. Rocco Mediate also was at 3-under with three holes to play.

Duval, who burned his right thumb and forefinger making coffee six days ago, apparently is a quick healer. He breezed through Pinehurst with Hogan-like precision on his way to a bogey-free round, the first time he has broken par in the first round of a U.S. Open.

"I was not able to practice quite like I would have liked, but there are times when that's good," Duval said. "When I did finally hit balls on Tuesday, everything was where I wanted it to be."

After one round, everything is in place for what could shape up to be a thrilling next three days, perhaps even the long-awaited duel between Woods and Duval.

Flu keeps Williams out of Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Serena Williams withdrew from Wimbledon today because of flu and high fever.

The withdrawal leaves the tournament without one of its marquee players and ends the possibility of an expected showdown with sister Venus in the fourth round.

"She's got a terrible case of the flu," Serena's father, Richard Williams, said in a statement faxed to the WTA Tour. "I took her to the doctor this morning and he told her it was best to rest and take it easy."

Serena Williams was to have been seeded 10th when the two-week tournament opens Monday. She will be replaced by Russia's Anna Kournikova, the highest-ranked player not to receive a position in the top 16 when seedings were released earlier this week.

Petrovic, Ubratan up for Hall of Fame

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. — Former NBA player Drazen Petrovic and Brazilian basketball star Pereira Maciel Ubratan were nominated for election to the Basketball Hall of Fame by its International Committee.

Petrovic, who played for the New Jersey Nets and Portland Trailblazers, was killed in a 1993 car crash at age 28. He was a member of Yugoslavian and Croatian teams that won silver medals in the 1988 and 1992 Olympics and led his Real Madrid team to the European Cup Championship in 1989.

Ubratan, a 6-foot-6 center nicknamed "O'Rei" or "The King," led the Brazilians to five South American Championships, a gold medal in the 1963 world championships, and a third-place finish in the 1964 Olympics.

The inductees, chosen from among 17 coaches, players and contributors, will be announced Monday.

I-Cubs, Barnstormers build sports complex

DES MOINES, Iowa — Two professional sports teams are building a $200,000 community sports complex next to a YMCA in one of Des Moines' most distressed neighborhoods.

The Iowa Cubs will help design and maintain a regulation Little League baseball field and a T-ball field in the park next to the John R. Grubb YMCA.

The Iowa Barnstormers will build a 50-yard artificial-turf football field, complete with goalposts and netting, which will be the team's new practice field.

Thanks to the complex, organized youth baseball and softball will be played in the neighborhood for the first time in more than 20 years, said Wayne Ford, the director of the Urban Dreams community organization and a member of the Iowa Legislature.

Minnesota counselor may talk after all

MINNEAPOLIS — A key figure in the University of Minnesota's academic fraud probe might change his mind and talk to investigators, but only if the school gives him "some benefit" in return, his lawyer said.

Attorney Ron Rosenbaum refused Wednesday to put a price on academic counselor Alonzo Newby's testimony. But he said Newby wants some gain for telling what he knows about allegations that at least 20 current or former men's basketball players cheated on course work.

"Let me tell you what it wouldn't take. It wouldn't take some giant severance package. It wouldn't take hundreds of thousands of dollars. It could be as little as a letter of recommendation," Rosenbaum said. "It's just got to be some benefit to get Alonzo off the dime — something that would tip the balance to make it in his interest."

Newby had asserted a Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination and refused to testify for the university's outside investigators last month.

13 Iowa coaches up for Coach of the Year

DES MOINES, Iowa — Twelve Iowa high school coaches are candidates for national coach of the year in their sports. Ankeny's Fred Smith, who is retiring this month, is up for athletic director of the year.

Smith and the 12 coaches became eligible for national consideration after earning regional honors in an area that encompasses Iowa, Minnesota, Nebraska, South Dakota, North Dakota and Colorado.

The national coaches of the year will be announced June 25 in San Diego at the annual convention of the National High School Athletic Coaches Association. "Thirteen is a lot to be up for these awards," said Jerry Wetzel, who formerly coached at Indianola and is a long-time association member. "In the past, we've maybe had four or five. They're all deserving."

Jackson Pollock's "Mural" will be reinstalled at the UI Museum of Art, after being featured in New York and London in a retrospective of his works.

'Wild man,' experimental sculpture mark museum exhibit

Works from the Museum of Art's permanent collection will feature, among others, Jackson Pollock and Dennis Oppenheim.

Take the painting of a wild man and the experimental sculpture of a modern artist, add some air conditioning, and you get the new attraction opening Saturday as part of the UI Museum of Art's Summer Exhibitions.

EXHIBIT
"Painting and Sculpture"

When: Saturday
Where: UI Museum of Art
Admission: Free
 The exhibit, titled "Painting and Sculpture from the Permanent Collection," will run through Aug. 22. One of the features of this exhibit will be the return of Jackson Pollock's "Mural." A stunning piece, Michael Kimmelman called the piece "Pollock's first great painting" recently in the New York Times, when the painting was on exhibit in New York City.

This exhibition will be an exploration of our permanent collection, a way to present patrons with familiar as well as unfamiliar work.

Pollock is well-known as a wild man of the art world. Before he died at the young age of 44, he was infamous for his shocking work.

"Apart from all of the wildness, like Vincent Van Gogh, (Pollock) was a great artist. Especially when you put him in the context of the 1950s," wrote Henry Hilson, a fellow artist.

"Mural" was given to the UI by Peggy Guggenheim; it has been featured in the past by the museum.

Also highlighted in this exhibit is a sculpture by Dennis Oppenheim, "Image Dissonance (Coffee Cup)."

Oppenheim works more in an abstract realm, dealing with both an absence of space as well as formal structure in his work.

Recent critics writing about his work for a Toronto exhibit referred to Oppenheim's work as "humorous, violent, subversive and elegant." These descriptions are all apt in providing a feeling for his complex work, which is better viewed than described.

"This exhibition will be an exploration of our permanent collection, a way to present patrons with familiar as well as unfamiliar work, with old friends as well as new," said Stephen Prokopoff, director of the Museum of Art.

'ER' doc goes from IVs to PCs in Pirates of Silicon Valley

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In the new TNT film Pirates of Silicon Valley, Noah Wyle is ungrooved, arrogant and generally unappealing.

An irresistible opportunity, says the actor, whose portrayal of Apple Computer Inc. magnate Steve Jobs is a sharp departure from the idealistic, fresh-faced physician Wyle plays on "ER."

The show chronicles the rise of Jobs and fellow computer empire builder Bill Gates of Microsoft Corp. Anthony Michael Hall plays Gates in the film debuting 7 p.m. CDT June 20 on TNT.

Pirates of Silicon Valley offered Wyle the vibrant part of Jobs, who is portrayed as a sometimes-heartless visionary working to create a brave new high-tech world. It also, Wyle said, was a smart exploration of a pivotal period.

"This story leapt off the page, because I couldn't believe no one had done it before," Wyle said. "On the surface, it's a great American fable about how the largest accumulation of wealth in the history of mankind was obtained, and who got stepped over, stepped on, stabbed in the back in the process.

"But underneath, you see the origins of a revolution that we're still feeling reverberations from."
