Panel: Illnesses not linked to implants

■ The report concludes that breast implants frequently leak and women must be warned.

By Lauran Neergaard
 Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Silicone breast implants do not cause major illnesses — yet they frequently break open and leak, which can cause pain, disfigurement and repeat surgery, concludes a long-awaited report that says women must be forewarned about breakage.

Monday's report is unlikely to end a decade-long controversy over breast implants, which thousands of women blame for severe illnesses running from cancer to rheumatoid arthritis.

But the Institute of Medicine, citing concern that many Americans were told their implants would "last for life," recommended a national "informed consent" form explaining high breakage rates for every potential implant recipient.

The Food and Drug Administration said it would figure out how to give women that warning.

The blue-ribbon science panel insisted that women who think their implants gave them serious illnesses are mistaken. Other scientific panels also have concluded there is no evidence that implants cause major illnesses, but the new report, mandated by Congress, was much anticipated because it is considered the most thorough and unbiased review.

"Many of these women are seriously ill, and we were moved by their suffering," said panel chairman Dr. Stuart Bondurant of the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill. However, "women with breast implants are no more likely than other women to develop these systemic illnesses."

The institute posted a condensed version of the 400-page report on the Internet (<http://books.nap.edu/catalog/9618.html>).

But the report won't end the controversy.

Women who say they were injured by implants seized on the warning about high breakage rates. They said they wished they'd been warned but continued to insist that's not the only problem.

"I may never be able to remove all the toxic chemicals that have leaked to all parts of my body," complained Marlene Keeling of Houston, who had ruptured implants surgically removed 16 years ago and has a nerve disease.

And next week, court hearings begin on a proposed $3.2 billion settlement between Dow Corning Corp., a former implant maker, and thousands

Locals mixed on minimum wage hike

■ Congress is expected to raise the federal minimum wage to $6.15 this session.

By Kelly Wilson
 The Daily Iowan

An increase of a dollar in the federal minimum wage — to $6.15 — is expected to be passed by Congress this session, but feelings are mixed throughout Iowa City on the effects of the increase.

Hannah Higgins, who is being paid minimum wage for working at the Seattle Coffee Company on the Pedestrian Mall, said she would be overjoyed by an increase.

"Oh yes, I would be so happy if the increase is passed, because I need more money," said Higgins, laughing. "More money, please!"

The proposed bills would raise the minimum wage by 50 cents on Sept. 1 and again by 50 cents on Jan. 1, 2000. The minimum wage was last increased in 1997.

Higgins' situation is rare, said John Beckord, president of the Iowa City Area Chamber of Commerce. In the tight job market now, few jobs pay below the proposed increase. On June 18, The Daily Iowan reported that the unemployment rate for Iowa in May was 2.6 percent, the lowest on record.

"To be competitive, most employers are already having to pay above $6.15 an hour to attract workers," Beckord said.

As a result, he said, the increase would not have much effect on the job market besides causing a ratchet effect. This happens when the "floor" of the market is raised, creating a ripple of increases on higher wages, Beckord said.

However, Laramy Finch, manager of That's Rentertainment, 218 E.

NATO suffers first Kosovo fatalities

■ An explosion while peacekeepers were clearing mines at a school kills two Nepalese soldiers and two civilians.

By Donna Bryson
 Associated Press

PRISTINA, Yugoslavia — Peacekeepers removing land mines, booby traps and unexploded ordnance from a school in Kosovo set off an explosion Monday that killed two Nepalese soldiers and two civilians — the first allied fatalities since the NATO-led force entered Kosovo on June 12.

Soldiers from the 69th Gurkha Field Squadron — riflemen from the South Asian nation attached to the British peacekeeping force — were helping to clear ammunition in the village of Negrovce, 20 miles west of Pristina, when a mine or booby trap went off, NATO said. Two civilians also died and a third was injured.

President Clinton, who is in the former Yugoslav republic of Slovenia, telephoned British Prime Minister Tony Blair to offer his condolences, officials said.

British peacekeepers said they were investigating the cause of the blast.

Despite the deadly explosion, the peace appeared stronger than ever, with Kosovar rebels pledging in a disarmament pact with NATO to lay down their arms. The deal came just hours after the last of the 40,000 Serb troops had left Kosovo.

The 20,000 or so NATO-led KFOR troops now in Kosovo said they were moving beyond their initial attempts to quell the violence and beginning to look at the longer term — establishing security and laying the groundwork for democratic elections.

"Very soon, KFOR will be the only military security presence here. That is how it should be," peacekeeping chief Lt.

The KLA has made a great contribution to freedom. The KLA has been fighting to achieve what we have achieved today.

Former UI president to return as law professor

■ College of Law Dean William Hines says he is enthusiastic about the four additions to the faculty.

By Gil Levy
 The Daily Iowan

Former UI President James O. Freedman is one of four professors who will join the College of Law faculty this fall.

Freedman, who was president from 1982-87, is scheduled to teach administrative law for one semester as the Mason Ladd Distinguished Visiting Professor. The professorship was established in 1981 in honor of former law school Dean Mason Ladd, who served from 1939-66.

In addition, Margaret Brinig, of George Mason University, Ann Estlin, of the University of Colorado, and Todd Pettys, a Seattle attorney, are joining the permanent faculty.

"I'm very excited to be coming back to Iowa City," Freedman said. "My time there was among the happiest of my life, both personally and professionally."

Law school Dean William Hines said he is looking forward to Freedman's arrival.

"We're thrilled to have him coming back," he said. "We know him very well, and he has a lot of friends here. It was our initiative."

Freedman was a member of the faculty while serving as president, although he never taught classes. From 1987-98, he served as president of Dartmouth College; he is now part of its faculty as president emeritus.

Victims of car accident loved fishing, ice-skating

■ A typical summer Saturday turns deadly after a picnic.

By Chris Rasmussen
 The Daily Iowan

Blonde, blue-eyed sisters Amanda, 7, and Samantha, 4, loved fishing with their father, ice-skating and gymnastics, said their grandmother, Virginia Brenneman, Monday.

On June 19, the two girls were killed in a head-on vehicle collision approximately two miles south of Hills, Iowa. Also killed was their mother, Lauren Brenneman, 33, who was in the car with them; Todd Graham, 25, the driver of the car; and Stephen Bina, 30, the driver of the other vehicle.

The beautiful, loving girls will be greatly missed, Virginia Brenneman said.

"They were loved by their cousins, who are devastated, had a father who is devastated, as well as two grandparents," she said.

Amanda would have begun her second grade year this fall at Oxford Elementary, while Samantha was ready to start pre-school.

A typical summer Saturday for the girls meant staying with their mother in Iowa City, said Kris Kimzey, 2430 Muscatine Ave., a neighbor of Lauren Brenneman. The girls would play games of freeze tag and ride bikes with Kimzey's children, Donovan, 8, and Britney, 6.

On week days, Amanda and Samantha lived with their father, Chris Brenneman, in Oxford, Iowa.

The girls and their mother began their fateful day with a trip to Lake Macbride with Donovan and Britney. Amanda and Samantha then had dinner with the Kimzeys, after which the girls, their mother and Graham headed to a picnic in Riverside.

The four were returning home from the picnic when the accident occurred on Highway 218. Traveling northbound in a southbound lane, their Oldsmobile struck the Jeep driven by Bina, and afterward caught fire, according to police reports. All five were killed on impact.

Blood specimens of Lauren Brenneman and Graham have been sent to the Department of Criminal Investigation laboratory in Des Moines to

'George' suit — a case about nothing

NEW YORK (AP) — A judge threw out a $100 million lawsuit filed by a man who claims Jerry Seinfeld and his TV producers stole his identity for the character of George Costanza. State Supreme Court Justice Harold Tompkins said Michael Costanza's suit was frivolous. Costanza, a real estate agent who lives on Long Island, said his rights were violated when the show used his "name, likeness and persona" to create George for "Seinfeld." Costanza said the show portrayed him in a negative, humiliating light and that "Seinfeld" co-creator Larry David defamed him when he called Costanza a "liar" and "flagrant opportunist" trying to cash in. Tompkins said he found the lawsuit baseless.

'Puff Daddy' promises to curb temper

NEW YORK (AP) — Rap star Sean "Puff Daddy" Combs has vowed to never again let his temper get the better of him, a friend said. "He's very upset at the perception that he let hip hop down," Def Jam Records Chairman Russell Simmons told Time in the June 28 issue. "One of his kids saw him in handcuffs on TV. That really upset him. He'll never let that happen again." Combs was arrested in April for allegedly beating record executive Steven Stoute, who suffered a broken arm, a broken jaw and cuts to his head. Time said Combs blamed Stoute for letting MTV air a music video with a scene that showed Combs nailed to a cross. Combs had reportedly ordered the scene cut because he worried it might be offensive. "Sean has a strong spiritual sense and a lot of faith, and I told him there were things that could damage him with the church," said the Rev. Hezekiah Walker, Combs' religious adviser at the Pentecostal Love Fellowship Tabernacle.

Digitally seeking smiling

LONDON (AP) — When the wedding photographer said "smile," Prince William didn't. So Prince Edward ordered his nephew's unsmiling image digitally removed from the official photograph of family members attending his wedding on June 19 to Sophie Rhys-Jones and swapped with an image of the young prince looking a bit more cheerful. "Prince Edward said he didn't think Prince William looked absolutely his best, so digitally we were able to put in another picture of Prince William from one of the other shots where he is smiling and laughing," photographer Geoffrey Shakerley told ITN Monday. William turned 17 Monday and received a car, the palace said. A palace spokesman refused to reveal what kind of car, except to say it was "sensible."

Raptor Project to band peregrine falcon chicks

The Macbride Raptor Project has set up the banding of three 25-day-old peregrine falcon chicks nested atop the Firstar Bank, 222 Second Ave. S.E., Cedar Rapids. The falcons would be taken from their nesting box atop the bank to the bank's conference room on the second floor, said Jodeanne Cancilla, project coordinator of the Macbride Raptor Project, co-sponsored by the UI and Kirkwood Community College. A lavender band was planned to be placed on one leg of each bird, showing that it has been identified by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. A red and black band on the other leg would identify it as a raptor from the Cedar Rapids area. Blood samples that are drawn would be filed, so if another decline in peregrine falcon population occurs in Iowa, more falcons with a similar genetic code can be brought into the state. The samples, along with future blood tests, will monitor the levels of pesticide in the birds' blood. This wild nest is from one of only two nesting pairs of peregrines in Iowa. Peregrines mate for life, and this pair has nested on top of Firstar Bank since 1993. They have raised 18 young, including these three hatchlings, and fostered one.

Wanted: better teacher training

■ A committee headed by President Mary Sue Coleman hopes to improve teacher-education programs.

By Luis Mashek
The Daily Iowan

An Association of American Universities committee chaired by UI President Mary Sue Coleman has persuaded the association to implement a resolution that would change some universities' ways of educating future teachers.

The resolution, which was passed this month by the association, addresses the enormous changes facing schools. "Helping (elementary and secondary schools) and their teachers prepare young people for lives of meaning in the 21st century America will require many and more creative actions on the part of individuals and institutions," the resolution said.

Sandra Damico, the incoming dean of the UI College of Education, said she is excited to carry out the resolution. Damico, who was a professor at Atlanta's Emory University, said the highest priority must go to teacher education.

"Training teachers and testing new methods shows how research universities have dual roles," she said. "Testing and implementing new ideas is part of a good teacher-education program."

Damico said she plans on implementing the resolution by creating stronger bonds between UI departments and local schools.

"The UI College of Education already has a close relationship with the College of Liberal Arts and sciences," she said. "I would expand these ties to establish a close commitment to local schools and other people with a strong desire to help the education system."

The association comprises 62 private and public research universities.

Coleman, who recommended passing the resolution, pointed out that the College of Education had no problems. But teacher preparation has to improve, she said.

"We have to work closely with different departments," she said. "Teachers need to work with schools around Iowa City, while parents can get involved by assisting local schools. The point is not that we have had preparation for teachers, but we could have better preparation and more of it."

In March, The Daily Iowan reported on weaknesses that were found in the College of Education's curriculum by the Iowa Department of Education in November 1998. One of the problems was under-utilization of experts' feedback, which, Coleman said, has been improved.

She said she now communicates with every principal on her visits to schools that have UI students participating in teacher-education programs.

"I make it a point to ask every principal if the students are well-prepared," she said. "People think we are doing a good job, but I'm encouraging the College of Educa-

Highlights of a resolution

- More fully integrating teacher education and professional development programs into the rest of the university.
  - Making more research experiences available to current and future elementary and secondary school teachers, especially in the areas of math and science.
  - Recognizing and acting on the knowledge that teacher preparation is inherently a partnership, and creating and sustaining stronger ties with schools, state departments of education, intermediate service providers and employers in preparation of teachers.
  - Creating and sustaining stronger programs of continuing education for teachers and integrating such programs with initial preparation programs.
- For a complete copy of the AAU resolution and background discussion visit <http://www.tulane.edu/au/AAUPolicy.html> tion to think of more ways to get input."

Sarah Anderson, a UI senior in education, said she feels positive about the additional opportunities for "research experiences," which were proposed by the association.

"My classes don't allow enough time for us to get in-depth in our subjects," Anderson said. "The time I use is spent skimming over material, as opposed to spending the time I need or want on different subject matter."

Iowa, a place to grow - slogans

■ Iowans have until June 30 to vote on a new state slogan, which Gov. Vilsack plans to announce in August.

By Jessica Welburn
The Daily Iowan

Iowans will soon vote on a new state slogan to replace "Iowa: A Place to Grow," which Gov. Tom Vilsack decided to change upon taking office in January.

The four choices are "Plant Visions, Harvest Dreams," "Fields of Opportunities," "Today's Dreams, Tomorrow's Iowa" and "The Best-Kept Secret."

Vilsack hopes a new state slogan will provide Iowans with something to identify with, said Luanne O'Shea, a representative of the Iowa Department of Economic Development.

The current state slogan has not been used regularly and is often confused with the tourism-marketing theme "Iowa, You Make Me Smile." O'Shea said she hopes the new state slogan will be utilized throughout the state.

Slogan recommendations were taken from citizens across the state. Vilsack then invited a group of high school seniors, who were chosen through a selective essay writing process, to travel to Des Moines to discuss and narrow the suggestions to four choices for Iowans to vote on.

Although some Iowans were content with the current slogan, in a small poll conducted of UI students, the favorite new slogans

We have to keep up with our wacky neighbors to the north.

— Nick Schaub,
UI senior

were "Fields of Opportunities" and "The Best Kept Secret."

When asked her opinion about the upcoming change, UI graduate student Jane Simonsen said "slogans are often cheesy"; but if she had to choose one, she said, she would select "Fields of Opportunity" because of its educational emphasis.

UI senior Nick Schaub also said "Fields of Opportunity" would be the best choice.

"We have to keep up with our wacky neighbors to the north," Schaub said, referring to Minnesota and Gov. Jesse Ventura. However, he said, he thinks all of the choices were reminiscent of Neil Young songs.

Former New York resident and current UI graduate student Louis Beaugris said Iowa is relatively unknown to the outside world, making "The Best-Kept Secret" the most appropriate choice.

"It's kind of quiet here," said Beaugris. "Kind of a little secret."

Iowans have a chance to vote until June 30. To participate, send your slogan choice to Slogan Vote, Governor's Office, State Capitol Building, First Floor, Des Moines, Iowa 50309, or fax to 515-281-6661 or vote on the Internet at

Cadaver bone helps to save boy's arm

■ Surgeons transplant a cadaver's arm bone to save a cancerous limb; nine months later, the boy tosses around a baseball.

By Alex Veiga
Associated Press

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. — Surgeons used a bone from a cadaver to save the cancerous right arm of a 6-year-old boy in a pioneering transplant that will enable the limb to grow as he does.

Nine months after the surgery, Adam Johnson used the arm to toss around a baseball during a news conference Monday at Joe DiMaggio Children's Hospital.

In September 1998, doctors removed most of Adam's humerus, the upper arm bone, because of a tumor the size of a grapefruit.

The doctors then replaced it by taking the humerus from a dead child and fusing it with a piece of Adam's own fibula, the thin bone that runs from the knee to the ankle.

Cadaver bones are commonly used in transplant surgery. But surgeons said this is the first time a live bone with its blood supply intact was combined with a cadaver bone so that the transplant would grow along with the patient.

Adam will have a full-size arm when he grows up, surgeons said. If he had received only a cadaver bone, he would forever have the arm of a little boy.

Adam, who lives with his family in Nassau, Bahamas, hopes to become a professional basketball player. His father said he is overjoyed his son has a chance to lead a normal life.

"I would like to thank the almighty God and the staff of the hospital," Anthony Johnson said.

In extremely rare circumstances, surgeons have successfully transplanted part of a patient's fibula to another part of the body, fusing it to whatever healthy tissue is left in the cancer-ravaged bone. The procedure was developed in Italy.

However, the fibula can fracture because of its narrow diameter.

In Adam's case, the surgeons decided to form a composite. They used part of Adam's fibula, with its blood supply and growth cartilage intact, and a cadaver bone to add strength and stability. The leg bone and cadaver bone are held together with a titanium plate.

The new procedure is "a spinoff of the techniques used in Italy. It's not anything necessarily new and different, but it's really a new twist on old ideas."

Alleged 'train serial killer' charged in Illinois slayings

■ An alleged serial killer, wanted in connection with five deaths in Texas, was charged in the death of a man and his daughter.

By Michael Pearson
Associated Press

MURPHYSBORO, Ill. — An alleged serial killer who is apparently making his way from town to town by hopping freight trains was charged Monday with murdering a father and daughter in Illinois, bringing to eight the number of slayings he is linked to.

Rafael Resendez-Ramirez, 39, was also put on the FBI's 10 Most Wanted list Monday. He is wanted for questioning in five killings in Texas and one in Kentucky since August 1997.

"All I do know is that if this person is the person we suspect in these crimes, it's a very dangerous and violent person," said Don K. Clark, the agent in charge of FBI's Houston office and leader of the nationwide task force searching for the suspect.

A tip to police from Donna McHugh helped them connect the Gorham killings to Resendez-Ramirez. McHugh identified a photo of him as the man she saw on June 19 staring at her through the window of a laundry in Percy, approximately 22 miles north of Gorham.

"He just looked scary," McHugh said.

Authorities believe Resendez-Ramirez has been riding the rails, finding victims along the tracks. As for a motive, Clark said: "I wish I could tell you."

The task force, assembled earlier this month after authorities connected the killings, has stopped and searched freight trains as part of its manhunt, and freight railroads have stepped up security, watching for drifters hopping trains.

"What we've learned about him through profiling, it's just a matter of time before he kills again," said Mike Cox, spokesman for the Texas Department of Public Safety.

Jackson County, Ill., State's Attorney Mike Wepseic said fingerprints found on an abandoned truck connect Resendez-Ramirez to the two southern Illinois killings. The bodies of George Morber, 80, and his 52-year-old daughter, Carolyn Frederick, were found June 15 in his home in Gorham, 100 yards from the railroad tracks. Gorham is approximately 330 miles from Iowa City.

Morber's truck was found

Wednesday in a school parking lot in Cairo, about 60 miles south of Gorham. The fingerprints on it matched Resendez-Ramirez's, authorities said.

The FBI increased a reward for information leading to an arrest and conviction from $75,000 to $125,000.

Resendez-Ramirez was charged in Illinois with murder and home invasion. Federal authorities also charged him with unlawful flight to avoid prosecution.

He is accused of shooting Morber in the head with a shotgun and beating Frederick in the head with the shotgun.

"Our community has just been stunned by this senseless act," said Morber's son, Bill Morber. "Everyone is scared; they're on edge, and I think they will be until this Ramirez is caught."

CITY BRIEF

Panel sets up phone line for deer-control views

The Iowa City Deer Management Committee has established a phone line at 356-5015 for public feedback on Iowa City's deer population.

The number of deer within the city limits has risen, according to a recent study, and the city is seeking ways to reduce the problems associated with the increase. The city used U.S. Department of Agriculture sharpshooters to kill the deer earlier this year. However, the shoot was halted by animal-rights groups, which threatened a lawsuit if the killing continued.

The committee will meet Wednesday to come up with an acceptable plan to control the deer. It will then present the plan to the Iowa City City Council. The committee's phone line is open to the public, said Lisa Mollenhauer, administrative assistant to the city manager.

"We wanted something easy for people to make comments about the deer population," she said. "The line can be used 24 hours a day, seven days a week."

Citizens can leave a recorded message. Questions or comments will then be sent to the appropriate person to be addressed, Mollenhauer said.

The messages may affect the committee's recommendations to the council, she said.

"It will help us to see the areas people are having the most conflict with, with the deer, and then we can put those comments with the numbers," Mollenhauer said.

Praise the Lord and pass the accusations

Well, Hallelujah — the Republicans in the House finally showed some true grit and did something about violence in the schools.

They stood up to the evil forces of Satanism and liberalism (which they would probably call a redundancy, if only they knew the word) and voted to allow schools to post the Ten Commandments on the classroom walls.

The House GOP didn't lift a pinkie, of course, to halt the flood tide of guns that this society is awash in. But hey — guns don't kill people. Geeks in black kill people. You know, those guys who play kinky video games — and, no doubt, peruse pornography foisted on this great nation by smutty-minded, godless liberals — instead of contemplating and memorizing the Ten Commandments.

Well, obviously. Liberals probably could've figured this out themselves if they weren't so godless. And smutty-minded.

I have to admit I'm a little puzzled by this Ten Commandments notion. Granted, I'm a hard-core atheist, but I have thumbed through the Bible once or twice, though it was long-enough ago that the local glacier was just starting to recede like Al Gore's hair-line (which is how he invented the end of the Ice Age). As I dimly recall, when Moses brought the commandments down from the mountain — which is what people back then had to make do with because mega-malls hadn't been invented yet — it caused a riot of, well, Biblical proportions. So I'm not entirely persuaded that the violence-preventing mode of the commandments has been completely proven.

Then there's the problem of which version of the commandments a school should use. As I understand it — probably from reading the smutty-minded, godless New York Times — there are three basic versions: Protestant, Roman Catholic and Jewish. (There's probably a Serbian Orthodox version, too, and the first one goes: Thou shalt not commit

You just have to wonder if the Ten Commandments notion was Charlton Heston's idea — after all, he's not only president of the NRA and opposed to the slightest whisper of gun control, he also once played Moses in a movie.

Albanianism.) So should schools post all three versions? And will a riot of Biblical proportions ensue when Tommy notices that Jennifer is not reading the Protestant version, as she should be, but is sneaking peeks at the Catholic version because that's what the hunky Irish trombone player reads? (OK, that's rather fanciful. Hunky Irish guys don't play the trombone; they play the piccolo.)

And how detailed he or she should get. At what point does a teacher cross the line from reasonable explanation into the grey area of exciting young libidos? And who gets to decide? (Let me guess — conservative, god-loving Republicans?)

Of course, that's one of the problems with the Bible as a whole — a fair amount of it reads as if it had been written by smutty-minded liberals.

You just have to wonder if the Ten Commandments notion was Charlton Heston's idea — after all, he's not only president of the NRA and opposed to the slightest whisper of gun control, he also once played Moses in a movie. Given the American penchant for taking washed-up, Grade B actors and turning them into policy makers, it only seems natural. And because it's only been 43 years since Heston portrayed God's middle-man, he can probably even recite one or two of the commandments. The whole thing's been fun to watch — kind of like "Seinfeld," only with humor. Tom DeLay, for instance; the way he whipped the GOP troops with exhortations of Biblical proportions, you would've thought he was campaigning to become pope of America.

It reminds me of the conservative commentator who opined that prayer in the schools would've prevented the Littleton massacre. Naturally. And displaying the Christ-in-the-manger scene year-round would make every day Christmas. As nutty ideas go, posting the Ten Commandments on school walls is definitely Hall of Fame squirrel bait.

Walnut, anyone?

Opinion

NRA wins the battle but will lose the war

The NRA has won. . . for now.

By a 280-147 vote on June 18, the U.S. House defeated a gun-control bill, sponsored by Republicans, that was a quasi-effort to force background checks on firearm purchases at gun shows, flea markets and pawn shops.

The bill had become a watered-down version of the same bill passed earlier this year by the Senate as a response to the Columbine shooting. The defeat might end prospects of gun-control legislation in Congress this year, a victory for those siding with the NRA.

But the defeat may also prove to be a victory for gun control in the long run. Although the Columbine shootings immediately raised gun-control awareness, Congress has again failed to produce any change.

And voters will have their opportunity to respond in the 2000 election.

If politicians and Americans want a change in gun-control laws, they'll have their chance in the 2000 election, when gun control is almost sure to be an important issue. For those in Congress who are taking a lax approach to the issue or are opposed to gun control, watch out — Americans are against you. The pressure on the NRA is building and ready to explode.

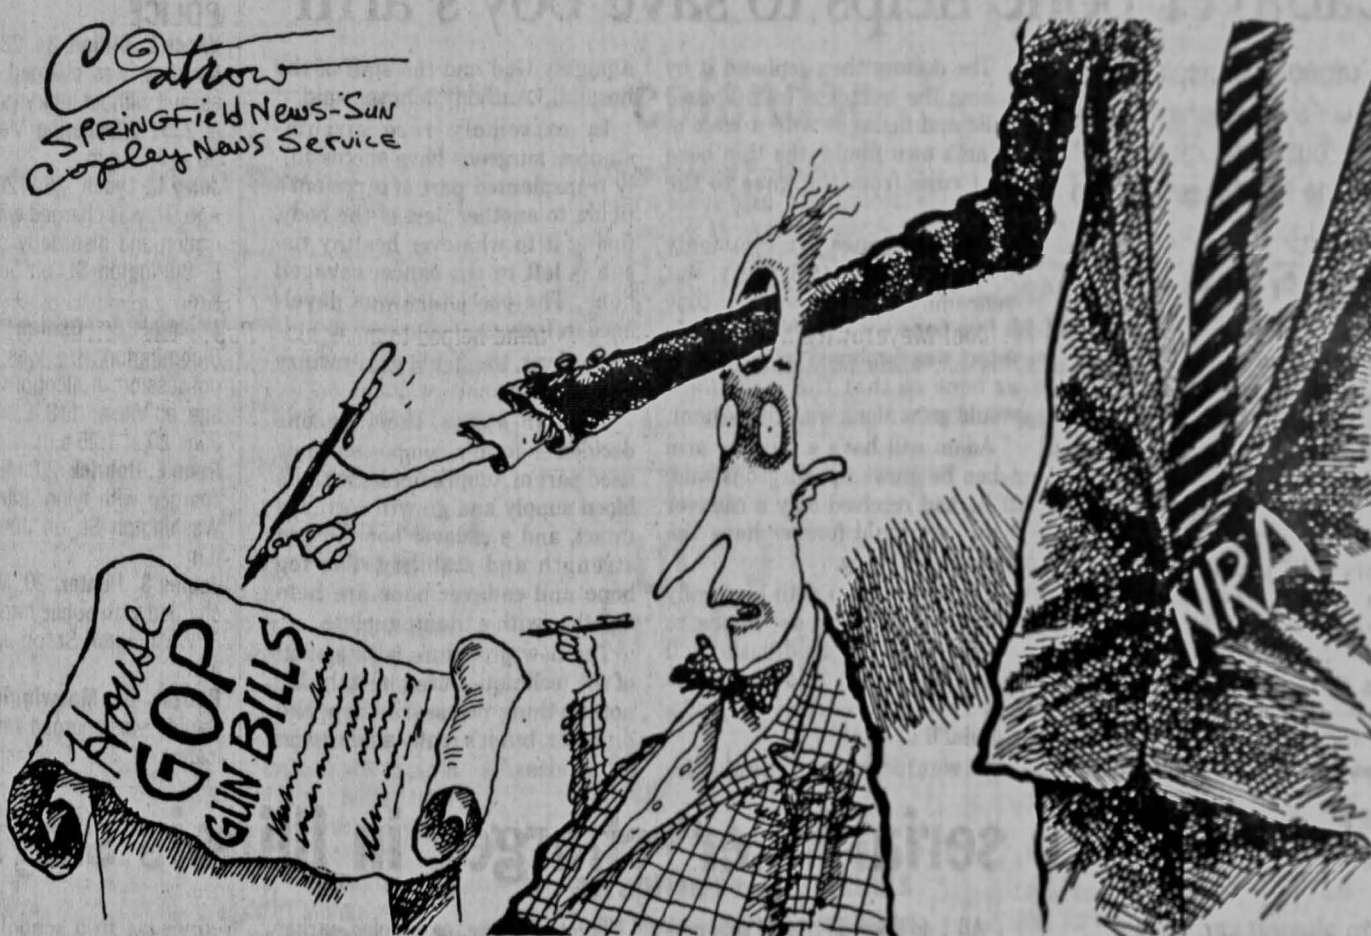

When Americans are given a chance to take action, the NRA and all its power (and money) won't be able to compete against the power of individual votes. Too many lives have been lost, and too many Americans are at risk to just sit and watch. Something will be done.

No reasonable and law-abiding American should refuse background checks — including those confused legislators in Washington. For those who have attended a gun show, it's plainly evident that various deadly weapons are available with little to no security checks, and something needs to be done. Eliminating firearms is one thing. Trying to keep them out of the wrong hands is another.

We must attempt the latter — even if it takes until after the 2000 election for changes to be made and the NRA to be injured.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Vote "No" on June 29 amendments

Five days before the Fourth of July, Iowans will be given the opportunity to vote against amendments to the Iowa Constitution that are anti-democratic, unwise, unnecessary and could raise property taxes.

We encourage you to join us by voting "No" on two proposed constitutional amendments on June 29. There are two major problems with these amendments: 1) They purport to fix a problem that doesn't really exist; and 2) their impact would be detrimental for many Iowans.

When was the last time you heard any mention of any potential increase in your state taxes? For the fifth straight year, the state Legislature has provided tax relief for Iowans. These targeted tax cuts have included a 10 percent across-the-board income tax cut and a rise in personal and dependent exemptions. More importantly, we have moved from a gigantic state deficit of millions of dollars to a budget that has produced a surplus that allows us to give back to Iowa citizens. This has been done with discipline by legislators, not constitutional mandates.

With the passage of these amendments, we fear that legislators will not be able to provide targeted tax relief and renege on the commitments to improve our schools, children, roads, elderly and local governments — leaving School Boards, City Councils and county supervisors with no choice but to raise our local property taxes.

So what's the rush? We really don't know. But we do know that supporters are betting that most Iowans will not go to the polls for a special election during the Fourth of July holiday week. We think that is a sneaky way of doing business.

We hope you'll join us by voting early or going to the polls on June 29 and voting against two constitutional amendments that are anti-democratic, unwise, unnecessary and could raise property taxes.

Getting back to the roots of the blues

Ma Rainey, a story of overcoming obstacles, will kick off Summer Rep.

By Deanna Thomann
The Daily Iowan

The Mother of the Blues was the name given to singer Gertrude "Ma" Rainey. Her music and attitude reflected the tenor of the 1920s and said much about the black experience during that time. Celebrated playwright August Wilson has captured this essence in his play Ma Rainey's Black Bottom.

Iowa Summer Rep '99 will present Ma Rainey's Black Bottom tonight at 8 in the David Thayer Theatre, UI Theatre Building. The play will be the first work presented as part of the "Out of the Blues" festival, which will feature material by Wilson, a two-time Pulitzer Prize-winner.

Set in a Chicago recording studio in 1927, Ma Rainey tells the story of black musicians and their dealings with white executives. The play explores the roots and significance of blues music and also examines the social conditions surrounding blacks throughout the "Ma Rainey is about struggle and overcoming obstacles," said director Mary Beth Easley. "It's a play that offers a very strong viewpoint of culture and history of the African-American experience."

In 1900, at the age of 14, Rainey began her singing career in a Georgia black revue. A few years later, she heard the blues for the first time. Rainey's strong voice suited its styling, and by the 1920s, her music became a phenomenal means by which the blues was popularized.

Bill Caise, a M.F.A. student in theater at the UI, will play the role of Cutler, the leader of the instrumentalists who accompanied Rainey.

A road trip becomes a loving ode to Pop

A son makes a documentary about his father's life by journeying with him the past.

By Nancy Rabinovitz
Associated Press

BOSTON — As a young man, Hy Meyerowitz was a vaudevillian, a sharp Catskills comedian who was the consummate toastmaster.

As an old man, his mind dulled by Alzheimer's disease, Meyerowitz still cracked one-liners, but they had lost their edge.

In 1995, three years before he died, his son, photographer and filmmaker Joel Meyerowitz, decided to spring his father from an assisted-living facility in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and take him and his own son on a road trip.

Prodding and probing the elderly man's imagination and memory, the three generations traveled back to New York City — to Harlem, where the elder Meyerowitz spent his childhood, and to the Bronx, where he raised his family.

Joel Meyerowitz and his son, Sasha, 30, a cinematographer living in Boulder, Colo., filmed the trip with a camcorder. The result is Pop, an hour-long "Frontline" documentary airing today at 8 p.m. CDT on PBS.

The film is a montage of footage from the trip, and videos of Hy Meyerowitz and his wife as young parents with three young sons.

Hy Meyerowitz grew up during the vaudeville era. Quick-witted and spunky, his powers of observation made him the neighborhood sage. After marrying, he sold dry-cleaning supplies for a chemical company, but the entertainer in him never faded.

His wit and sharp mind helped to mask his Alzheimer's symptoms for many years.

"When he started nailing $100 bills to the wall and hanging pictures on them and driving my mother to the supermarket and driving away, we started to realize, 'Uh, oh, trouble,'" Joel Meyerowitz said.

While driving from Florida to New York, Joel Meyerowitz tries to get his father to think rationally and to block out the obsessions forming in his mind: imagining his wife is cheating on him or looking for coins on the ground.

Throughout the three-week trip, Joel Meyerowitz tries to stimulate his father's mind with questions about his other sons and what they do for a living.

Having produced and directed Pop, his first film, Joel Meyerowitz said his experiences may persuade him to explore care of the elderly in another film.

He died at the age of 90. The day he died, Pop was being shown at the Museum of Modern Art in New York and at the Hampton Film Festival on Long Island.

"Hy read people beautifully," Joel Meyerowitz said. "He used humor as a lever. I guess that was the thrilling part for both my son and myself: to see someone with a disability and not yield to it."

As 'geisha chic' takes hold in America, one geisha scoffs

NEW YORK (AP) — Geisha chic is quietly taking hold.

It started with Arthur Golden's novel Memoirs of a Geisha, which sold more than 1 million copies. Then Steven Spielberg bought rights to the film. Then it hit the fashion runways.

Fashion shows introduced the obi, a carefully tied sash that is worn over a kimono, this spring; Madonna wore a red vinyl obi and gown with jumbo kimono sleeves to this year's Grammy Awards. Fashion magazines tell women to "Geisha-ize."

But a veteran geisha who knows Golden is annoyed that her art has been appropriated by American pop culture.

"I took a very strict examination to become a geisha. I studied very, very hard," said Kiharu Nakamura, her eyes moist as she remembers long nights with drunken clients and exhausting days of lessons in traditional arts.

"I want to correct the idea of geisha," she said, "but then I go to a party and see people putting chopsticks in their hair. Ridiculous!"

Despite the geisha's image as a sort of high-class prostitute, the women are really professional entertainers and generally do not sleep with clients. Traditionally, they dance, tell amusing stories and play party games; the name geisha means "practitioner of arts."

Nakamura, 87, spent years studying Japanese dance, flower arrangement, the tea ceremony, poetry, and other skills. Before becoming a geisha, she had to pass a grueling exam.

Golden was friends with Nakamura before writing his best seller but used another geisha, from Kyoto, as a primary source for the book. Steven Spielberg's film depiction of the novel is due out in December 2000.

High court to rule on cable smut

The Supreme Court will decide if a 1996 federal law, supported by the Clinton administration, goes too far.

By Laurie Asseo
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court agreed Monday to decide whether a federal anti-smut law went too far in trying to keep families who do not subscribe to cable TV channels such as Playboy Television from getting glimpses and earfuls of the raunchy stuff.

The Clinton administration is trying to revive the 1996 law, struck down by a federal judge on grounds it swept too broadly in trying to keep children from seeing sex-oriented programs on networks only partly scrambled for non-subscribers.

Society has an interest "in seeing to it that children are not exposed to sexually explicit materials," the government's appeal said.

Playboy Television lawyer Robert Corn-Revere said in a telephone interview that the law, which limited such programming to nighttime hours even for paying subscribers, was "unnecessary overkill."

The court set the stage for its latest word on cable television, expected sometime in 2000, as it neared the end of its 1998-99 term. The justices planned to announce more decisions today, and they could release all remaining decisions and begin the summer recess later this week.

The anti-smut law was enacted as part of the 1996 Communications Decency Act after complaints arose that even though sex-oriented channels are scrambled for non-subscribers, the picture and sound sometimes get through.

A Florida woman said she found her 7- and 8-year-old children and a playmate one afternoon watching the Spice channel, with scenes of a couple seemingly having sex with the "groans and epithets that go along," according to the government's brief.

The law required cable operators that don't fully scramble or block sex-oriented networks for non-subscribers to show those "indecent" programs only between 10 p.m. and 6 a.m.

Playboy challenged the law in 1996 as a violation of the Constitution's First Amendment, which protects freedom of speech. Unlike obscene material, indecent material is constitutionally protected.

A federal judge in Delaware struck down the law last December, saying its provisions were too broad.

Another section of the law already requires cable operators to completely block any channel, free of charge, once a customer requests such action. The trial judge said giving customers adequate notice of that alternative would be less-restrictive than barring all daytime adult-oriented programming.

There are several types of technology for scrambling and unscrambling cable TV signals, and the effectiveness often varies depending on the weather, the quality of the equipment, its installation and maintenance.

An increasing number of cable television systems use digital technology, which easily scrambles signals fully for those who do not subscribe to a particular station.

The Clinton administration's appeal asked the justices to give the government broader leeway to regulate indecency on cable television, much as it regulates broadcast radio and television.

The invalidated law "imposes a very limited restriction on speech and is a very effective approach to the substantial evil it addresses," government lawyers said.

Government lawyers said there was no proof the individual-blocking alternative would be practical because the cost would add up if many customers requested it.

Playboy's lawyers said it was "far from obvious" that adult-oriented channels were more harmful than other premium channels that show movies with profane content. The film Another 48 Hours, shown on HBO, averaged a profanity every 30 seconds, Playboy lawyers' brief said.

Corn-Revere, the Playboy network's lawyer, said the law requires "turning off Playboy Television for two-thirds of the day" even though two-thirds of American households don't have children. Many televisions have technology allowing the owner to lock out a particular channel, he added.

"Voluntary solutions are far more effective to block unwanted programming," the network's brief said.

Follow Slovenia, Clinton tells Serbs

■ The president blasts Slobodan Milosevic and vows not to give Yugoslavia "one penny" as long as the Serb is president.

By Terence Hunt
Associated Press

LJUBLJANA, Slovenia — From this pro-Western country that broke from Slobodan Milosevic's grip, President Clinton urged Serbs Monday to "reject the murderous rule" of the Yugoslav leader and follow Slovenia into democracy.

In a drenching rain, thousands of Slovenes cheered Clinton on the first visit by an American president to this small nation, wedged between the Alps and the Adriatic coast. A patchwork sea of umbrellas covered Congress Square during the president's speech.

Clinton did not mince words about Milosevic during a day that stretched from diplomatic talks in Germany to dinner in a 16th-century castle once used as a summer home by the late communist leader Josip Broz Tito.

The president pledged there would be no U.S. money — "not a bit, not a penny" — to help Milosevic rebuild bridges and roads destroyed in Yugoslavia by 78 days of NATO air strikes.

"I can't wait for the day," Clinton said, when a democratic leader replaces Milosevic, who has been accused of war crimes for the killings and terror in Kosovo.

The president implored war-scarred refugees not to take revenge on Serbs remaining in Kosovo. "They should not do it.

President Clinton shakes hands with Slovenes who braved a downpour to hear him speak in Ljubljana Monday. Clinton toasted Slovenia as an example of what a democratic Balkans could become and urged Serbs to "reject the murderous rule" of Yugoslav President Slobodan Milosevic.

They should not do it. It won't in the end satisfy anyone. It will only compound the horror," Clinton said.

In the chilly downpour, a food caterer was tapped to hold an umbrella over Clinton's head during his address. Secretary of State Madeleine Albright, her summer-white pumps squishing sprays of water from the carpeted stairs on the stage, received a roar of recognition from the crowd.

They also cheered Hillary Rodham Clinton.

Despite the weather, Clinton plunged to the rim of the crowd, grabbing hands two, three and four at a time.

Winding down a week-long trip, Clinton congratulated Slovenia for choosing democracy when it proclaimed independence from Yugoslavia in 1991. Other nations are taking the same path, he said, but "these gains are fragile, for freedom's enemies hope for our failure."

"To succeed, we must begin with a simple truth: Racial and religious hatred has no place in a civilized society," Clinton said. "That is why free nations stood against Mr. Milosevic's ethnic cleansing and killing in Kosovo."

Gen. Mike Jackson said Monday.

Hours earlier, he received two crucial documents. The first was confirmation from the Serb-dominated Yugoslav military that its forces, accused of atrocities against Kosovo's ethnic Albanian majority, withdrew from Kosovo to comply with NATO's midnight deadline.

The second, coming minutes after midnight, was a pledge by the Kosovo Liberation Army to put down its weapons, withdraw its fighters to barracks and join efforts to establish peaceful politics in Kosovo.

NATO officially ended its air campaign Sunday. The Belgrade government took a reciprocal step Monday, asking Parliament to end the state of war it imposed on March 24, the state-run Tanjug news agency reported.

The state of war was declared the day NATO began its air campaign. It banned men of military age from leaving the country, let the army take over key institutions, and made the news media subject to censorship.

At the same time there were new reports of a media crackdown: An umbrella group for Yugoslavia's fledgling independent radio and television broadcasters said the government was forcing independent stations to replace their newscasts with those of the state-controlled networks.

U.S. planes bomb Iraqi sites

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — U.S. warplanes bombed Iraqi air-defense sites Monday in response to Iraqi fire in the northern and southern no-fly zones, U.S. military officials said.

U.S. Air Force F-16s and F-15s dropped laser-guided bombs on an Iraqi command-and-control site north of the city of Mosul, some 250 miles north of Baghdad, the Germany-based U.S. European Command said in a statement released on the Internet.

An F-16 also attacked a surface-to-air radar site east of Mosul with anti-radiation missiles, the statement said.

In southern Iraq, U.S. Navy F-18s dropped precision-guided bombs on two Iraqi surface-to-air missile sites near As Samawah, about 150 miles south of Baghdad, military officials said.

That attack was a response to Iraq's firing of anti-aircraft artillery at allied planes patrolling the southern no-fly zone, a statement from the U.S. Central Command at MacDill Air Force Base in Florida said.

The Iraqi army claimed that U.S. warplanes hit civilian sites in southern Iraq, wounding six people, the official Iraqi News Agency reported. No allied aircraft were damaged in the incidents.

Germany OKs millions for camp survivors

WASHINGTON (AP) — The German government has agreed to provide 235 American survivors of World War II concentration camps with about $18 million in compensation for their suffering, a State Department official said Monday.

The compensation averages about $76,000 per victim, but the amount each will receive depends on the length of confinement.

Germany sent the $18 million to the U.S. Treasury Department on June 9 for distribution to the survivors without announcing it publicly, said the official, asking not to be identified.

Ronald Bettauer, who led the negotiations for the State Department, said Monday the claimants have received the paperwork on the rewards. "The claimants who've gotten back to us seem to be quite happy," he said.

The reparations grew out of a 1995 settlement of a 40-year-old court fight by concentration camp survivor Hugo Prinz. The New Jersey man and 10 other Americans split $2.1 million from the German government in that case, which prompted a fresh U.S. review.

Attorney General Janet Reno asked the Justice Department's Foreign Claims Settlement Commission to try to determine how many other Americans might be eligible for German compensation. More than 1,360 claims were filed, but the U.S. government sought reparations only for those who were held in recognized concentration camps.

U.S., Cuba hold narcotics talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Amid protests from Cuban-American lawmakers, four U.S. officials met Monday in Havana with Cuban officials to discuss ways of improving counter-narcotics cooperation, a State Department official said.

Meetings between U.S. and Cuban officials on issues other than migration are rare but not unprecedented.

"This is not a change in U.S. policy," said Michael Ranneberger, who heads the State Department's office of Cuban affairs. He said the meeting was taking place within guidelines for law enforcement efforts on counter-narcotics.

The U.S. team consisted of two State Department and two Coast Guard officials, none of whom holds a high rank. They were to spend only one day in Cuba.

Monday's meeting was aimed at elevating communications on counter-narcotics issues from an existing telex link to a phone link and other means, an official said, adding that the U.S. team had no plans to offer assistance to Cuba, to share intelligence, or to discuss joint operations.

U.S. counter-drug specialists have become increasingly concerned about South American traffickers' use of Cuban waters and air space to transport drugs to the United States, and the law enforcement community had requested that a team be sent, said the official, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Boy killed, father burned in blaze

AMBLER, Pa. (AP) — A 5-year-old boy playing with matches started a fire that killed the child and badly burned his father as he tried to rescue his four children from their burning row house on Father's Day.

The fire also damaged 14 other row houses. The body of Daniel Gaskins was found under debris on the second floor of his house after Sunday's fire, which burned out of control for three hours in this Philadelphia suburb.

Daniel started the fire while playing with matches on a sofa bed, Whitpain Township police said. Daniel's father, 39-year-old Nathan Gaskins, was burned on more than 20 percent of his body as he tried to rescue his children. He was in critical condition Monday at Crozier-Chester Medical Center.

After delay, North and South Korea meet

■ With the resolution of a fertilizer dispute, the two rivals hold their highest-level talks in 14 months.

By Tara Sullivan Duffy
Associated Press

BEIJING — After a daylong delay over a late fertilizer shipment, North Korea and South Korea earlier today opened their highest level government negotiations in 14 months.

The talks at the neutral site of a Beijing hotel signaled political willingness by the normally antagonistic governments to improve ties despite a skirmish between their navies and a dispute over a detained South Korean.

Yang Young-shik, the South Korean vice unification minister, and his North Korean counterpart, Pak Yong Su, talked about the weather before they began negotiating aid and reunions among families separated by the 54-year struggle between the communist North and capitalist South.

In the display of friendliness for reporters, no mention was made of the dispute that postponed the talks for 24 hours. North Korean delegates canceled Monday's talks because South Korea had missed a Sunday deadline for promised fertilizer deliveries.

The 22,000-ton shipment arrived overnight in the North Korean port of Nampo, clearing the way for the talks. South Korea's Yang told reporters Monday that rain had delayed the shipment, the last of 100,000 tons promised by June 20.

Under an agreement reached in secret negotiations early this month, South Korea promised to supply 200,000 tons of fertilizer by the end of July. In return, North Korea agreed to discuss the family reunions.

Talks between the two governments broke down in April 1998 after North Korea refused to negotiate the reunions and at the same time sought more aid from Seoul.

Since then, North Korea has entered its fourth year of famine, and its next harvest will be bleak without much needed imports of fertilizer and fuel.

North Korea has threatened retaliation for last week's skirmish, during which South Korean warships sank a North Korean gunboat, killing reportedly as many as 30 crewmen, in disputed waters in the Yellow Sea.

In the detention dispute, the South Korean woman has been held by North Korea since Sunday for allegedly trying to get a north-erner to defect. The South has denied the charge and threatened to end a tourism agreement if she's not released.

determine levels of alcohol, if any. The results should be back in two to three weeks, said Officer Mike Hicks of the Iowa State Patrol.

Hicks said state troopers noticed the odor of alcohol on the bodies of Lauren Brenneman and Graham.

Keith Skiles, 44, of Cedar Hill, Mo., and Sare Lanzafame, 56, of St. Louis, passengers in the Jeep, were rushed to UI Hospitals and Clinics. Skiles was discharged Sunday; Lanzafame is listed in serious condition, according to the UIHC Central Nursing Office.

Graham is survived by his father, Clay Graham. Clay Graham said he received the news of the accident at around 7 a.m. Sunday from Graham's younger sister.

He described his son as "a hard worker and very dependable."

Funeral arrangements for Graham are scheduled for Wednesday. Visitation is today from 5-7 p.m. at George L. Gay Funeral Home, 2720 Muscatine Ave. Donations will be collected for the Todd A. Graham Memorial Fund.

Bring and Estin are nationally visible specialists in family law, Hines said.

"We couldn't pick between the two, so we took both," he said. "We're extremely enthused to have such a team."

Bring and Estin have 35 years of teaching experience between them; Pettys, who has lectured at the University of Washington, is joining the faculty at an entry-level position.

Hines is confident about Pettys' ability. "It's hard to do better at an entry-level position," he said. "We're very lucky to have him."

Both Bring and Estin taught at the UI last summer, but they have not worked together.

"I consider her (Bring) a friend and a colleague," Estin said. "I feel I have friends there already."

The professors are filling positions that have been vacated over the last five years.

One of the most noted professors to leave was Burns Weston, associate dean of international law, who retired in May. Among other accomplishments, Weston was responsible for the "Global Focus: Human Rights '98" lecture series.

Professors such as Weston are impossible to replace, said Nick Johnson, a UI visiting law professor.

Raising minimum wage draws mixed reaction

WAGE

Washington St., said a lot of people, including some of his employees, are trying to earn a living off minimum wages.

"Most of the people I know are trying to make ends meet off the minimum wage or just a few cents more than that," he said. "It is not an easy thing to do, especially in such an expensive town."

The proposed increase has been backed by President Clinton, who spoke about it during his State of the Union address in January. The minimum wage has been gradually increasing since its implementation in 1938 at 25 cents an hour.

Sarah Taft, an employee of Mind Matters, 130 S. Dubuque St., said she thinks having a minimum wage is a good idea but the current rate of $5.15 an hour is too low. "Kids get paid that just to babysit these days," she said. "It just seems like too little to pay someone."

Although Taft said the increase is a step in the right direction, she wondered if the amount is the answer.

"The thing is, I don't know if $6.15 will be enough," she said.

of women who stand to receive the payments. Monday's report is positive news, but it will not affect the proposed settlement, said Dow spokesman T. Michael Jackson.

Up to 1.8 million American women have received silicone breast implants since 1962 — a time before the FDA required proof that all medical devices were safe and effective.

Complaints that implants broke and caused illness began in the late 1980s; in 1992 the FDA banned silicone gel-filled breast implants except for breast cancer patients in special clinical trials.

Implants made of a silicone shell but filled with saline, or salt water, were not restricted.

Only two California-based companies, Mentor and McGhan Corps., continue to study gel implants for cancer patients. McGhan also recently won FDA permission to try gel implants for cosmetic augmentation in a 500-patient trial.

Both companies say they warn women that implants could break or leak. Mentor said it cannot tell women how big a risk that is; McGhan called a 2 percent per year breakage rate "acceptable."

"For a breast implant to be acceptable by surgeons and by patients, it can't be a truck tire," said Jeff Barber, McGhan executive vice president. But "there will always be some percentage of failure," he said.

Stern defends low ratings, lockout

The NBA boss is optimistic, but announced a committee designed to improve the quality of play.

By Chris Sheridan Associated Press

NEW YORK - David Stern defiantly defended his low-rated finals and lockout-tainted season, even while announcing that a panel will recommend changes to improve the quality of NBA games.

'It was nice to have a season,' the commissioner said Monday at his annual NBA Finals news conference. 'We think the fans appreciated both the settlement of the collective bargaining negotiations and the fact that teams like San Antonio - the league's smallest market - have an opportunity to continue to compete.'

Stern faced a stream of questions about the league's troubles - the huge drop in television ratings for the finals, the trend toward stagnant offenses and low-scoring games, players entering the league at a younger age and the fallout from the lockout.

The news conference was held several hours before the start of Game 3 of the finals between the New York Knicks and San Antonio Spurs.

'Obviously, there is an absence of the world's most famous person, no less that world's most famous athlete, Michael Jordan,' Stern said. 'But I think we're seeing the creation in front of our eyes of the kinds of teams ... that are going to get known. So the state of the league is one that finds us very optimistic about the future.'

The 16-member committee, composed of coaches, former players, team executives and owners, will meet Tuesday to discuss rules changes for next season.

Put the brooms away; Knicks salvage Game 3, 89-81

Allan Houston's 34 helped New York give the series a whole new look.

By Chris Sheridan Associated Press

NEW YORK - It took 41 days for a team to beat the San Antonio Spurs, and the New York Knicks gave the NBA Finals a whole different look by doing just that.

Behind 34 points from Allan Houston in one of the best games of his career, the Knicks defeated San Antonio 89-81 Monday night in Game 3 to cut their deficit to 2-1 in the best-of-7 series.

The Knicks never trailed, never let the Spurs' numerous comebacks rattle them and played what was easily their best all-around basketball of the series. It was San Antonio's first loss since Game 2 of the first round and ended the Spurs' NBA-record postseason winning streak at 12 games.

Game 4 is Wednesday night, and another victory by New York could make this once-lethargic, low-rated series as compelling as any.

To do so, the Knicks will need another night like the one they got from Houston - an inspired display of clutch shooting, whether on jumpers, drives or foul shots.

Houston shot 10-for-24 from the field and 12-for-12 from the line as he tied his career playoff high. Latrell Sprewell added 24 and Larry Johnson had 16 for the Knicks, who have played their best all season just when things have looked most bleak.

Nothing would have been as daunting as facing a 3-0 deficit, and the Knicks played like they knew this was their only chance to give themselves an opportunity to win the series.

New York came out fired up, opening a 14-point lead in a first quarter in which they debuted yet another new starting lineup, replacing Chris Dudley with Marcus Camby.

'We just came out with a lot of energy,' Sprewell said.

'If you can't come out with a big effort and poise, then you don't need to be out here.'

The Spurs quickly cut into that lead and finally tied the game midway through the third quarter, but Houston answered with several clutch shots to restore the Knicks' comfort zone.

San Antonio made one final charge in the fourth, but never got closer than four. One big reason why was the lack of production from Tim Duncan, who was scoreless in the fourth as he missed all four of his shots.

Duncan finished with 20 points and 12 rebounds, doing little after the Knicks started triple-teaming

Okey returns to Prime Time League

After getting a call an hour and a half before game time, Sam Okey gave Deli-Mart/Iowa City Ready Mix a winning boost.

By Todd Heffernan The Daily Iowan

Monday night's Prime Time League game between Deli-Mart/Iowa City Ready Mix and Goodfellaz featured a half-court assist and the return of one of Iowa City's most beloved former players.

In the most entertaining game of the night, Sam Okey suited up for Deli-Mart and threw down 29 points to lead Deli-Mart to a 109-99 victory in his first game. 'I got a call around 4:30, they said they needed someone, I was here by 6,' Okey said.

Okey took the place of Jermaine Willform, a former player from North Alabama that hasn't suited up for either of Deli-Mart's first two games. Teammate Ryan Luehrsmann said that Okey could remain on the team until Willform shows up and wants to play, or if Willform decides not to play at all this season.

Even though Okey hadn't practiced with the team, he fit in nicely with his old point guard. Luehrsmann dished out 10 assists, including the play of the night early in the second half.

Driving with the ball on a two-on-one fast break, Luehrsmann twisted the ball halfway around his back before lifting it up over his right shoulder where Okey slam-dunked it, trailing behind him. It was Okey's fourth dunk of the game.

'I got to play more with him tonight than I did all of last season, so it was nice,' Okey said.

Early in the first half Goodfellaz's David Kruse orchestrated the first half-court assist in Prime Time League history. Off-balance and leaning on his left leg, Kruse picked up a loose ball and flung it towards the rim, where teammate Rob Griffin snared it in mid-air and laid it in.

Griffin was hot early, putting up 23 points in pulling Goodfellaz within three at half-time, down 59-62. He finished with a game-high 33, but couldn't bring

Cardinals stymie Astros

By R.B. Fallstrom Associated Press

ST. LOUIS - Mark McGwire homered for the third straight game, and Kent Bottenfield tied for the NL lead with his 11th win, leading the St. Louis Cardinals over the Houston Astros 5-3 Monday night.

McGwire, who entered a month behind the pace he set in his record 70-homer season last year, hit his 22nd of the season in the third inning off Sean Bergman (4-4). The ball cleared Big Mac Land in the upper deck, and landed in the second tier, a drive estimated at 473 feet, to put the Cardinals ahead 4-0.

It's his second-longest homer of the season, behind only a 484-footer that left Dodger Stadium in May.

Bottenfield (11-3), who never before won more than five games in a season, won for the third time in four starts and tied the Astros' Jose Lima for the league lead.

Bottenfield allowed three runs - one earned - and four hits in seven innings. He helped himself with a two-run double in the second for his first RBIs of the season.

Ricky Bottalico completed the five-hitter for his 10th save.

Bergman gave up five runs and nine hits in four innings. He's lost three of four starts, allowing 15 earned runs in 20 2-3 innings.

Cardinals rookie Joe McEwing was 2-for-4 with a double and RBI single to extend his hitting streak to 13 games. He's 20-for-55 during that stretch, and leads NL rookies with a .321 average and 26 multihit games. Devil Rays 3, Twins 2

MINNEAPOLIS - Jose Canseco singled home the go-ahead run in the seventh inning Monday, and the Tampa Bay Devil Rays stretched their winning streak to three by beating the Minnesota Twins 3-2.

These are the real soccer moms

Joy Fawcett and Carla Overbeck take on the double-duties of playing World Cup soccer and motherhood.

By Barry Wilner Associated Press

As Joy Fawcett wandered the hallways at the U.S. national team's hotel, she ran into Carla Overbeck. The two standout defenders looked at each other and laughed.

'I have a lot of time on my hands and I spend it looking for things to do,' Fawcett said. 'If someone tells me to sit down and relax, I have a hard time with not doing something.'

It comes with the job of being a soccer mom. Except that Fawcett, who has two daughters, and Overbeck, who has a son, have taken the concept to an extreme.

Both players took a leave of absence from the team to have children. And both came back despite the physical and emotional demands parenthood can have on a full-time elite athlete. Now they're playing in the Women's World Cup.

'I get a lot of help,' said Fawcett, whose older daughter, Katelyn, is 5, and younger daughter, Carli, is 2. 'My mom and dad are around, my husband Walter is great and very supportive, but it can be hard. If the girls are with me for training, they are away from their father. Or I am away from my family. But we are committed to doing it.'

Talk about commitments. Look what Fawcett had on her plate in 1997.

him. David Robinson led the Spurs with 25 points.
San Antonio shot 5-for-18 in the fourth quarter and committed six of its 20 turnovers.
New York led 65-62 entering the fourth, and the lead grew to seven in the first minute as Sprewell scored on a difficult drive and Camby had a thunderous dunk off an offensive rebound for his first points of the game.
A jumper by Houston gave the Knicks a 10-point lead with 6:31 left, and the score was 80-71 with the clock ticking toward four minutes before the Spurs made their final push.

A three-point play by Robinson and a 3-pointer by Sean Elliott made it 81-77 with 3:13 left, but the threat ended quickly as Houston hit a 20-footer, Mario Elie missed a 3-pointer and Camby converted a short jumper to give the Knicks an 85-77 lead.
The Knicks played just about as well as they can in the first 12 minutes, not getting much of a lift from Camby but benefiting from two personal fouls each against Elie and Jaren Jackson, and technicals against Elie and coach Gregg Popovich.
The technical against Popovich came after the referees waved off a 3-pointer that would have cut New York's lead to 22-15. Instead, the Knicks steadily increased their lead to as many as 14, 32-18 on a 3-pointer by Chris Childs with 8 seconds left in the quarter.

Antonio Daniels hit a 3-pointer just before the first-quarter buzzer, and San Antonio began the second quarter with a 19-10 run to pull within two, 42-40, on a drive by Elliott on which it appeared he traveled.
New York led 49-46 at halftime behind 18 points from Houston, 12 from Sprewell and 10 from Johnson. Robinson had 14 and Duncan 12 for the Spurs.
Camby went to the bench with four fouls early in the third quarter, kicking a chair as he arrived at the bench still scoreless, but Houston hit a pair of jumpers and a pull-up 3-pointer on the fast break — all in a span of 1:01 — for a personal 7-0 run that put New York ahead 56-47.

The Knicks then missed their next 11 shots and allowed Duncan to tie it at 58 with 3:31 left in the third.
Houston then hit a 3-pointer as the 24-second clock expired and made two free throws with 1:41 left to reach 30 points, and New York took a 65-62 lead into the fourth.

Goodfellaz through in the last two minutes of the game.
"We rushed a lot of shots late," Griffin said. "If we would have calmed down we would have won the game. We were missing one of our big bodies, and they had Sam, which is another big body for them."
After helping Deli-Mart/Iowa City Ready Mix to their first win of the year, Luehrsmann said that more ball movement really opened the door to easier baskets.
"It was like night and day,"

Luehrsmann said. "Tonight we had a lot of movement, the last game we had too many people doing individual-type things. When people cut and move around it makes it a lot more fun."

Mike Gatens Real Estate held on for a rare defensive struggle in the first game at the North Liberty Community Center. Kyle Galloway's fifth three-pointer of the night gave Gatens an 84-79 lead with less than two minutes to play.

Imprinted Sportswear took control of the game early in the second-half with a 14-0 run to win their second game of the early season.
Former Iowa player Don Stokes had 10 of his second-half 12 points in that spurt, including two consecutive threes, which helped put Lepic-Kroeger away.
Craig Callahan scored 32 points and pulled down 12 boards for Lepic-Kroeger, who were without top draft picks Acie Earl and Kent McCausland.

Former Hawkeye Darryl Moore lit up Fitzpatrick's for 28 points in the second half to lead Fieldhouse/Gringo's to a 116-113 victory.
Iowa's Ryan Hogan scored 31 and Jess Settles added 27 for Fitzpatrick's, which lost its first game of the season after beating Mike Gatens Real Estate on opening night. Fieldhouse/Gringo's held up a 50-47 halftime lead to win their second game of the young season.

Paul Sorrento doubled off Gary Rath and, one out later, pinch-runner Dave Martinez took third as David Lamb reached on an error by pitcher Rob Radosky (0-1), who picked up a comebacker and threw to second with no one covering the bag.
Martinez was thrown out at the plate when center fielder Jacques Jones picked up the ball and threw it to shortstop Cristian

Guzman, who made the relay.
Red Sox 5, Rangers 4
BOSTON—The Red Sox made most of the fielding mistakes, but the Texas Rangers made the costliest one Monday night.
Catcher Ivan Rodriguez's seventh-inning throwing error led to the winning run, and Nomar Garciaparra went 4-for-4 as Boston beat the Rangers 5-4 for their third straight win.
Garciaparra, 7,931 votes behind New York's Derek Jeter in fan balloting for the All-Star starting spot at shortstop, had two doubles, two singles and a stolen base, giving his .382 career average against Texas.

Blue Jays 11, Royals 4
TORONTO—Tony Fernandez raised his major league-leading average to .414, and Shawn Green homered twice and tied a career high with five RBIs to lead the Toronto Blue Jays over the Kansas City Royals 11-4 Monday night.
Tigers 13, Athletics 11
DETROIT—Tony Clark hit a three-run homer in the eighth inning as the Detroit Tigers rallied after wasting a six-run lead and beat the Oakland Athletics 13-11

Monday night.
Dean Palmer also homered for the Tigers, who led 9-3 in the third but fell behind 10-9 in the fifth.
Jason Giambi homered twice for Oakland, and Eric Chavez also connected for the Athletics.
Indians 4, Mariners 3
CLEVELAND—Jim Thome scored from third on Jose Mesa's wild pitch with one out in the 12th inning Monday night to give the Cleveland Indians their ninth win in 10 games.

Stern lists lack of scoring and rough play as problems

STERN

The 1999 season was marked by a significant drop in scoring, with only one team, the Sacramento Kings, averaging 100 points a game. This continued a decade-long trend toward a lower-scoring games.
One questioner, a journalist from Spain, pointed to San Antonio's unappealing 80-67 victory in Game 2 and wondered whether his countrymen should have bothered to wake up at 3 a.m. to watch the game.

"On the basis of one game and relatively low shooting percentages, I wouldn't think that game as you know it has come to an end," Stern said.
"It's true, (Game 2) was not the prettiest game that we've ever had in the NBA finals, and it does continue a trend of very aggressive defense. It's an issue that obviously is a concern to us," he said.

The special committee is made up of coaches Lenny Wilkens, Rudy Tomjanovich, Rick Pitino, Pat Riley and Mike Krzyzewski, players Antonio Davis of Indiana and Steve Smith of Atlanta, broadcasters Isiah Thomas, Hubie Brown and Doug Collins, executives Kevin McHale, Donnie Walsh, Billy King and Dan Issel and owners Jerry Colangelo (Suns) and Gordon Gund (Cavaliers).

The committee will focus on four areas:
—officiating: how games are called and whether NBA basketball has gotten too physical.
—the lane: creating more open space near the basket.
—clock rules: having 24 seconds to shoot and 10 seconds to bring the ball past midcourt.
—defense: whether to allow zone defenses.

motherhood. She resigned from UCLA at the end of '97, but said she'll consider a return to coaching after she retires as a player.
The hardest part for the 31-year-old player/mother was not finding enough hours for everything. Fawcett struggled most with getting fit enough to recapture her place on the national team.

"The toughest thing was the speed," she said. "When you get pregnant and gain that weight, you get a little slower. I don't know if it is age or the childbirth, but there are a few players on the team who are faster."
There's only one who can sympathize with Fawcett's family situation, though. Overbeck, the team captain, gave birth to son Jackson in August 1997.
"I didn't realize the time commitment it requires to have a child," said Overbeck, also 31. "Every second of the day is devoted to him."

"But it puts things in a greater perspective. No matter how tough a day you have at practice or how tough a game you have, he's there to cheer you up."
There's an added benefit of being a mom on the national team.
"Any time we've needed someone to watch the kids, well, I've got 19 built-in baby sitters," Overbeck said. "I never was short on volunteers. We're all a bunch of kids on this team, anyhow."

In Orlando, Fla., Fawcett had a live-in nanny, Nicki Richards, who also traveled with the team. So both daughters accompanied Fawcett.
Overbeck did not have a nanny, but Richards would take care of Jackson whenever mom was training or playing soccer.
"It's harder when we're not in residency, trying to find time to work out," Overbeck said.

NHL checks instant replay out of the crease

■ Replay will no longer determine if a goal should be disallowed because of a crease violation.

By Ken Rappoport
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Less than two days after the Stanley Cup finals ended in controversy, the NHL said it will no longer use videotape replays to decide disputed goals when a player is in the crease.

Commissioner Gary Bettman said Monday's rule change had nothing to do with the goal scored by Brett Hull that won the Stanley Cup for Dallas against Buffalo in triple overtime early Sunday.

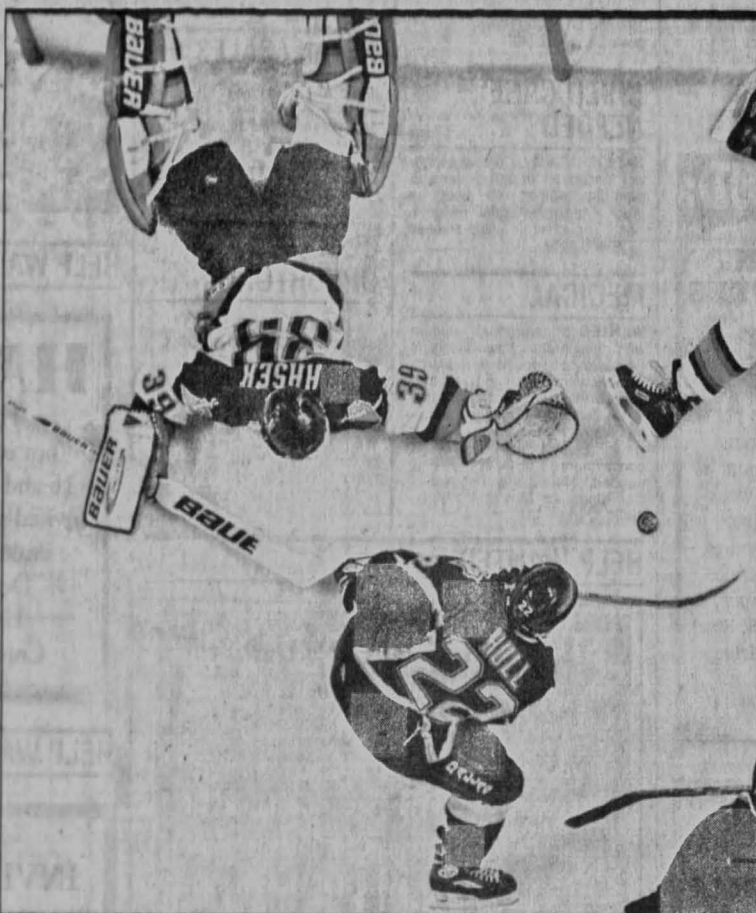

The Sabres, who lost the game 2-1, said a replay showed that Hull's goal should have been disallowed because his skate preceded the puck into the crease before he shot it past Dominik Hasek.

Bettman said the league was more concerned the game would lose some of its spontaneity when play is stopped for a video review of a goal. He said the video replay situation had been discussed by the league's Board of Governors about a week before the controversial Game 6.

"We're relying too much on replay" for goal decisions, Bettman said.

Bettman said the man-in-the-crease rule will stay in place, but on-ice officials will decide whether goals count — without using replays. The rule usually disallows a goal if an offensive player has any part of his body in the goal crease.

Videotape replay will remain in use for all other existing circumstances, such as if the puck has crossed the goal line, if it is in the net prior to the goal frame being dislodged, or if it is in the net before time has expired.

With one skate in the crease, Dallas right wing Brett Hull shoots the Stanley Cup winning goal past the sprawling Buffalo goalie Dominik Hasek in the third overtime period of Game 6 Sunday morning.

Other than saying "the absolute right call" was made on Hull's goal, Bettman would not address the Game 6 controversy. He left that up to Colin Campbell, director of hockey operations, and Bryan Lewis, the NHL's supervisor of officials, who planned to discuss the issue at a news conference Tuesday.

"The rule (on Hull's goal) was absolutely, correctly applied," Bettman said. "Everyone understands it was the right call."

Buffalo coach Lindy Ruff said after the game that to reverse a goal that decided the title would be a "nightmare" for the league.

Bettman said he was unaware of any official protest by the Sabres.

The official response from the league after the goal was that it didn't matter that Hull had his skate in the crease, but that he had full control of the puck. Lewis said officials looked at the play probably six or eight times.

The rule, which was drawn up to protect goaltenders from injury, has been disliked by many skaters. Many goals have been disallowed even by infractions that are purely incidental to the play, such as a teammate's skate in the crease away from the action.

Campbell "is going to work on the interpretation over the summer," Bettman said.

In other action, the board approved a change in regular-season overtime in hopes of having a better chance to decide games that go past regulation.

When teams are tied after regulation, they will each receive a point in the standings. Then a five-minute overtime period will be held, with each team using four skaters instead of five. A winning team would receive another point.

The format was used by the American Hockey League this season on an experimental basis, and the league was satisfied with the results: Of the 44 games that went into overtime, 27 (or 61 percent) had the ties broken.

Stars shining bright

■ Dallas celebrated its first Stanley Cup with the Texas fans Monday.

By Jaime Aron
Associated Press

DALLAS — With a tug of his pant legs, Dallas Stars owner Tom Hicks showed off the perfect symbol of a Texas team winning the Stanley Cup: black boots with the shiny silver trophy emblazoned on each shin.

Forward Dave Reid added to image by wearing a black cowboy hat throughout a downtown parade on Monday and a Reunion Arena pep rally in honor of the NHL champions.

More than 75,000 people lined the streets for the parade. They saw the players ride by on four floats, the final one carrying the Cup.

"For them to see a team other than the Cowboys win something is fun," forward Guy Carbonneau said.

Truth is, Dallas fans have loved the Stars ever since they moved from Minnesota in 1993.

"You've been here with us for six years," captain Derian Hatcher, one of three remaining Minnesota North Stars, told the Reunion Arena crowd. "Now we have (the Cup) here and it looks good here. Hopefully, we can build a nice little house for it."

The Stars won the first title in their 32-year history and the first for a team in the Sun Belt early Sunday with a 2-1 triple-overtime victory over the Buffalo Sabres in Game 6. Although a controversy is brewing over the Cup-winning goal scored by Brett Hull while his left foot was in the goalie's crease, there were no references to it Monday.

Cubs broadcaster has heart attack

CHICAGO (AP) — Former Chicago Cubs third baseman Ron Santo had a mild heart attack Monday and was hospitalized in Denver, the team said.

Santo, 59, a color commentator for Cubs' broadcasts on WGN radio, was stricken early Monday at a hotel in Denver, where the Cubs are to start a three-game series with the Colorado Rockies on Tuesday. "Ron has spoken with members of the Cubs organization, and they say he is in good spirits," said spokesman Benjamin De La Fuente.

Hospital spokesman Jeff Schwartz said Santo came to the hospital about 2:30 p.m.

"He's comfortable, alert and resting," Schwartz said.

The five-time Gold Glove winner played for the Cubs from 1960 to 1973 and for the Chicago White Sox in 1974.

Sampras feels 'back home'

Defending champion Pete Sampras feels much more comfortable at Wimbledon than at the French Open.

By Steve Wilstein
Associated Press

Dave Caulkin/Associated Press

WIMBLEDON, England — A clay pigeon at the French Open as Andre Agassi made history, Pete Sampras fairly danced to the thrill of the grass at Wimbledon with a pirouette on match point of his first-round romp.

Not a ball had been struck on Centre Court since Sampras won his fifth Wimbledon a year ago, and the tattered brown field of that triumph was once again a rich green lawn when he returned Monday.

For Sampras, a second-round loser on the dusty red clay of Roland Garros three weeks earlier, the sight and smell of all that green was almost intoxicating.

"I felt like I was back home on that court," Sampras said after disposing of Australian Scott Draper 6-3, 6-4, 6-4 in a mere 88 minutes. "I couldn't ask for a better start."

On a day when the only upsets were sunshine and a dry sky, Sampras cavorted with the friskiness of a colt let loose in a lush pasture, rollicking from the start and pounding out a dozen aces at up to 130 mph.

"It's the scene, it's the court," he said. "From the first point on, this is it for me. This is our big event. I was very keyed up and very eager to play well today, really get off to a good start in this tournament."

He leaped to put away an over-

French in 10 attempts and has exited from it in the second round four times. "But through time, you've just got to put things behind you. I look at Wimbledon as my next goal."

Sampras came to London early, won a tune-up on grass at Queen's, and found the confidence he'd been lacking in a shaky year. He also regained his No. 1 ranking, and the top seeding at Wimbledon.

Agassi carved a spot for himself in tennis history at the French, becoming only the fifth man — and the first American in 61 years — to complete a career Grand Slam. Sampras has a chance here to claim his own distinction by becoming the first man this century to win a sixth Wimbledon, and the first man in the open era to win a dozen majors.

Australian Roy Emerson holds the record for Grand Slam wins, 12, but all those came in the mid-1960s before the open era of professional tennis began in 1968.

"I'd love to break (Emerson's record) one day, and it's something I believe is realistic that I can do in the next couple of years," Sampras said. "But I'm not sitting here putting pressure on myself."

"I need to have goals, but that's a goal I never thought would come true. As a 20-year-old kid, trying to make his mark, I never even thought I'd have won 11 majors by the age of 27. But now that I'm in this position, I'd love to do it."

Going after similar records is Steffi Graf, who is two shy of Margaret Court's mark of 24 Grand Slam singles titles and two shy of Martina Navratilova's record of nine Wimbledon singles titles.

head at the start of the last game, powered an ace down the middle, stabbed a volley, and put match point away at love by spinning like a ballet dancer for a backhand drop volley that spun back toward the net.

It was classic Sampras, his full repertoire on display.

The victory was also his 15th in a row at the All England Club, where his record since 1993 is 40-1.

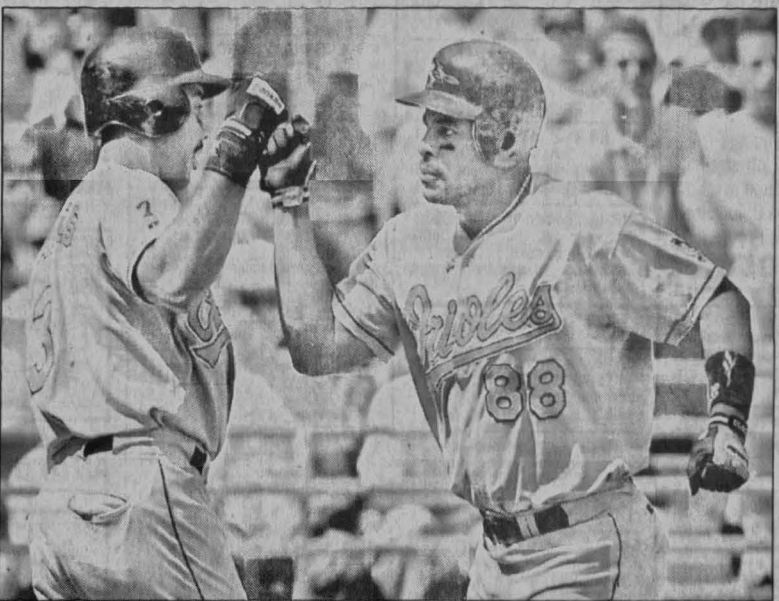

Sampras presented such different performance from the one he gave at the French, where he posed an easy target for Andrei Medvedev's passing shots and lobs.

"Whenever I lose at the French, I get back home and I'm disappointed once again," said Sampras, who has never won the

Orioles are back after brutal start

After a hideous start to the season, Baltimore is finally playing up to its payroll.

By David Ginsburg
Associated Press

Michael S. Green/Associated Press

Baltimore's Albert Belle is congratulated by Harold Baines after Belle's home run in the seventh inning against the Chicago White Sox Sunday.

BALTIMORE — Two weeks ago, the Baltimore Orioles were 15 games under .500 and entrenched in last place. Manager Ray Miller was in danger of losing his job, the starting pitching was awful and the team led the league in runners left on base.

There was no reason to believe things would change by September, let alone by the end of the month.

Even in victory, the Orioles had problems. Coming off a humbling doubleheader loss to Florida, Baltimore rebounded to beat the Marlins 4-2 on June 9. But in the ninth inning, Albert Belle and Miller engaged in an expletive-laced shouting match in the dugout after Belle jogged to first base on a grounder and was removed in a double switch.

Since then, Belle has gone 16-for-38 and the Orioles are on a 10-1 roll that has lifted them out of the AL East cellar and in position to make an impact in the AL East.

The starters are 8-1 during the streak and the Orioles have been consistently clearing the bases behind a home run spree. Miller's biggest problem these days is figuring a way to get all his hot hitters into the game.

During a stretch in which they played 18 of 24 games on the road, the Orioles turned a 13-game deficit to just 8 1/2 and climbed within a game of third-place Toronto in the AL East. Their only loss since that doubleheader fiasco in Florida came against the Chicago White Sox on Thursday, and Baltimore followed that by hitting 10 homers in three straight wins. Now things get interesting. The Orioles follow an off day Monday with a six-game homestand against the Boston Red Sox and New York Yankees, the top two teams in the division.

"We have a ways to go yet, but we feel good about our club," Miller said after the Orioles raised the team average to .284 with a 12-hit effort in Sunday's 8-4 win over the White Sox.

Hoosier turning life around after stabbing

Cornerback Curtis Randle El has a new approach to life after almost being killed at a party.

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Indiana cornerback Curtis Randle El, stabbed outside an off-campus apartment last spring, says his life has taken a new direction.

By his own accounting, Randle El used to take much for granted, including being alive. That was before the night of March 22, when a knife was plunged deep enough into his abdomen to spill out part of his intestinal tract.

"The scar runs 14 or 15 inches, right through the middle of my stomach," he said. "That's not something you can take lightly."

Randle El was also wounded in the chest.

"They told me later that if the knife had entered a half-inch over, I'd be dead or at least messed up for life, because it would have severed a big blood vessel," he said.

Several lives changed that night following a series of run-ins between some of Randle El's teammates and members of an Indiana fraternity. Football players Tyrone Browning, Kyle Moffatt and Damian Gregory ended up off the team and facing misdemeanor charges. Two members of Phi Beta Sigma fraternity — Richard Gilliam, to find yourself in that position."

Randle El said the events of that evening have enhanced his spirit and redirected his focus on life.

"It wasn't anything but God," he said. "I don't want to seem like a big religious person or anything, but I feel the Lord saved my life and turned it around."

"I was going in the opposite direction from what I was supposed to. Not to go into detail, but I was doing things I should not have been doing and not doing all the things I should have been doing. I feel like God knew that and that something like this was needed to get my attention."

Coach Cam Cameron said he hopes his players remember what happened to Randle El.

"I think we all learn from our mistakes, and anytime we make a poor decision, from my standpoint as the head coach, it's important I see the guys learning from that," Cameron said. "It seems that Curtis has learned a valuable lesson. He's now starting to really understand, I hope, what we've been talking about for three years."

Randle El agreed.

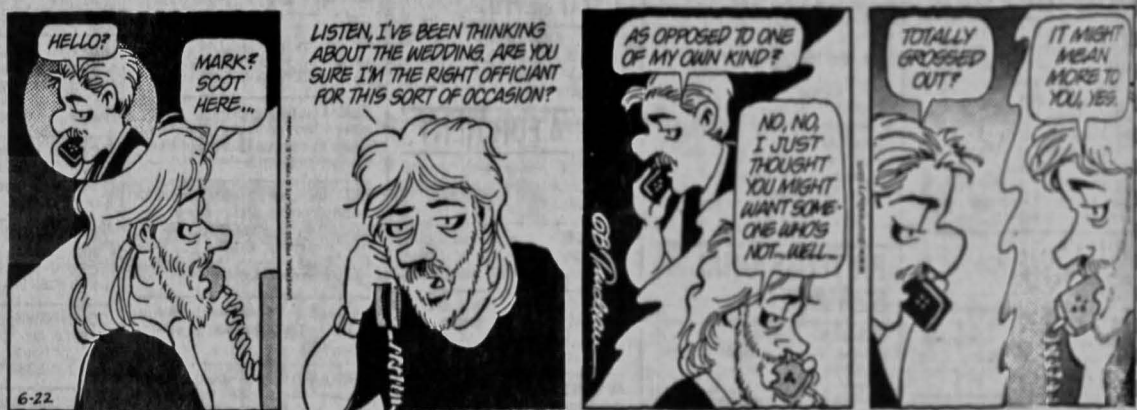

"Coach Cam says everything happens for a reason, and I believe that," he said. "This experience has changed my life, big time. I look at life differently. I look at football, my parents, my brother, my friends, differently now. I value those relationships more."
