Clinton Rx plan comes under fire

Lawmakers from both parties say the president's Medicare prescription-drug plan is too ambitious.

By Jim Abrams
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — At "very little" cost to taxpayers, all 39 million Americans covered by Medicare could get prescription-drug benefits without bankrupting the program, administration officials said Sunday in previewing President Clinton's reform package.

The president will announce the details of his program Tuesday. But already, lawmakers from both parties are saying the plan is too ambitious, and they are urging that the new drug coverage be limited to the working poor.

Elderly and disabled persons in the Medicare program who want the prescription coverage will have to pay for it, said Donna Shalala, secretary of the Department of Health and Human Services. The poor would get help buying medicine.

"This isn't about just adding some new, lush benefit," Shalala said on CBS' "Face the Nation," noting that half the people in rural areas do not have drug coverage. "This is critical to health care."

Gene Sperling, chairman of the National Economic Council, said on CNN's "Late Edition" that the

(The way to save Medicare from insolvency) is not to load it up with another big costly benefit that nobody pays for even though everybody wants it.

— Sen. Joseph Lieberman, D-Conn.

expanded prescription coverage would "cost very little" because of proposed savings through streamlining and strengthened competition.

The president, Sperling said, "is going to show a bit of political guts in coming forward with such a detailed plan."

But on Capitol Hill, there was skepticism that Clinton could save Medicare from bankruptcy and introduce a significant new benefit program.

Sen. Phil Gramm, chairman of the Senate Banking Committee, said two-thirds of Medicare recipients already have prescription coverage, either through the Medicaid program for the poor or through private Medigap policies. That leaves approximately 15 million beneficiaries with no coverage.

"I don't understand why we would

Medication would reach more people, supporters say.

Local health-care officials say they support President Clinton's plan to cover all Medicare recipients for the cost of prescription drugs.

"The basic nature of medicine needs to be changed," said Kamala Cotts, an associate in the UI Family Care Service. "Getting a doctor is not a problem because Medicare covers that ... It's getting the medication afterwards."

In Iowa, a significant number of people are elderly and on Medicare, Cotts said. However, she said, many of these people cannot afford expensive medications — some as high as $100 a month — that are prescribed to treat such serious conditions as high blood pressure. As a result, they often don't get needed prescriptions, she said.

"People need blood pressure treated; otherwise, they might have a stroke," Cotts said. "You don't want someone who is 50 to live another 30 years paralyzed. It's the quality of life we're concerned with."

The plan to provide drug benefits would shift the way health care is administered at the UI Hospitals and Clinics, said Shane Smith, an associate professor of pharmacy.

"More attention will be paid to preventative medicine," Smith said. If drug benefits are paid for, then compliance will be less of an issue for doctors who worry that their patients will not or cannot obtain the medication prescribed for them, he said.

The plan would also bring the cost of pharmaceuticals down, Smith said.

"We will have a large buying group in the government, and people are going to want to get government contracts," he said. This will ultimately

Trekkies boldly go to Riverside

More than 5,000 attend the 15th annual Trekfest.

By Gil Levy
The Daily Iowan

Riverside residents had the chance to meet and greet wannabe Spocks, Klingons and Enterprise crew members over the weekend, as "Star Trek" fans beamed themselves into Riverside for the 15th annual Trekfest.

Riverside, located approximately 12 miles south of Iowa City, is the self-proclaimed "future birthplace" of Capt. James T. Kirk.

The crew of the "Starship Riverside" enjoyed a parade, talent show, truck-pull and battle of the bands on June 25 and 26. Charles Napier, who made a guest appearance in one episode of the original "Star Trek," was the celebrity guest at the event.

Approximately 30 people participated in the Trek Costume Contest. Dustin Lyon of Mount Pleasant, Iowa, dressed as a "supporting cast member" of the series, was a finalist.

"It's kind of neat for a bunch of people to get together and express a common interest," Lyon said.

Tim Peek of Ottumwa, Iowa, was dressed as Spock, possibly the best-known character of the original series.

When asked during the contest to say his name and where he was from, Peek said, "I am Spock. Live long and prosper."

Serbs tell of Kosovar purge

"It is ethnic cleansing, under cover of NATO," a Serbian church leader alleges.

By Ellen Knickmeyer
Associated Press

BELO POLJE, Yugoslavia — Stripping homes down to the plaster, Kosovars burned and looted a Serb village Sunday, and a mentally ill Serb woman allegedly was raped and stabbed to death by armed Albanian men in uniform.

The pillaging of the village of Belo Polje was the latest in what a Serbian Orthodox Church leader said is a systematic campaign of violence that is driving out even the few elderly, frail Serbs still remaining in the western city of Pec and nearby villages.

Accounts Sunday from bleeding, bruised elderly Serb men and women supported that accusation.

Serbs sheltered at a monastery outside the city said Kosovo Liberation Army soldiers beat them as they forced them from their homes. One woman showed the curled, comatose form of a 63-year-old brother she said had been taken from his wheelchair and hurled into a yard.

"It is ethnic cleansing, under cover of NATO," said the church leader, Metropolitan Amfilohije Radovic, at the 14th-century monastery, now a sanctuary for Serbs guarded by Italian NATO tanks. "The people that left from here are bad, but the people who come are doing the same."

On the other side of Pec, Marica Miric, 85, stood amid the flames and chaos of the destruction of what until this week had been the all-Serb village of Belo Polje.

Global warming, characterized by a marked increase in the global mean temperatures over the last century, has been a growing concern of the world's environmentalists and scientists — and its effects could be of particular concern to an agriculture state such as Iowa.

Currently, two UI climate-change experts are in Washington, D.C., attempting to educate Congress on the scientific basis of global warming.

Anti-meth measures among new Iowa laws

Associated Press

DES MOINES — A number of anti-crime laws that will go into effect later this week are aimed at those who manufacture and sell methamphetamine.

Many of the measures written by the 1999 Legislature and approved by Gov. Tom Vilsack will take effect Thursday, when the state's new budget year begins.

Some of the major laws involve highly addictive meth, the use of which is allegedly rampant in Iowa. The laws include a 99-year sentence for delivering meth to a minor; crooks caught a second time face life in prison.

The measures also include a minimum two-day jail sentence for misdemeanor drug possession and bans on many materials used to make methamphetamine. For example, the state will have new penalties for tampering with anhydrous-ammonia equipment. The fertilizer is used to make meth.

The Legislature's get-tough laws extend beyond drug crimes.

Criminals who attempt to take guns from peace officers, whether or not they get them, will face felony charges. If a gun goes off, that's another felony charge.

Starting next week, even trying to escape from prison will put a felon behind bars on another felony charge. If a nonfelon does the same thing, it's an aggravated misdemeanor.

Motorists who drive away from law officers who order them to stop will face either an aggravated misdemeanor or a felony, depending on how fast they are driving and other circumstances.

Drivers or passengers will face fines if open alcoholic-beverage containers are in their vehicles, whether or not they intend to drink there. This doesn't apply to passengers in limousines or in the backs of recreational vehicles.

Believing is Chering

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — All Eric Campbell had to do was "Believe." It was a dream come true for the 11-year-old boy when he got to meet his idol, Cher, whose songs kept him going during daily radiation treatments for an inoperable, life-threatening brain tumor.

"She thought I was good," Eric said after Cher embraced him and gave him a kiss during a concert stop in Tampa on June 25. The boy gave the singer a tiny rose pin and a thank-you card during their meeting, made possible with help from the Fulfill a Wish Foundation.

LONDON (AP) — Rock legend Eric Clapton is coming clean about his addictions in the '70s.

"I know that when I was a full-blown, practicing alcoholic, everyone used to walk around me on eggshells," Clapton, 54, said in an interview with the Sunday Times.

"There were times when I just took sex with my wife by force and thought that was my entitlement. I had absolutely no concern for other people at all, and I think that what happens in a family is everyone starts to doctor their own roles to make it bearable to live that way," he said.

Clapton was interviewed in Antigua, the Caribbean island where he founded Crossroads Centre, a clinic to treat drug and alcohol abuse.

Help Me, Harlan

Dear Harlan.

I am so hurt. About 18 months ago, a friend of mine asked me to be his girlfriend. I wasn't ready to date him, but a week earlier we had slept together. It was something that I regretted immediately, but it happened. Two weeks later, I found out I was pregnant.

There is no doubt whether he loves me, and I know I love him. Well, Harlan, two days ago he told me he may have a child by another woman.

As far as I was concerned, the child I was carrying was his first and only child. It ends up that he got another woman pregnant two weeks before he got me pregnant.

I can forgive him (eventually), but I don't know if I will ever be able to trust him. And a relationship has to have trust. Is it worth trying to save, or should I let it go?

Betrayed

Dear Betrayed.

He may be an extremely virile man with very little intelligence in the way of birth control, but he's also the father of your child, and that makes him an extremely important man.

If there's the slightest possibility of trusting him and making things work, you owe it to your child to try your hardest. There's nothing wrong with giving him one more chance. If he promises to be the man you can trust to love, give him a chance to prove it.

Bacteria low in the Reservoir, study says

While the bacteria level in lake was high in the spring, a recent test shows the level is safe.

By Troy Shoen
The Daily Iowan

Though the Coralville Reservoir may have had high levels of bacteria earlier this spring, reports show that it is currently safe.

A recent study conducted by the Des Moines Register found that four of 17 Iowa lakes tested — including the Reservoir — contained high levels of fecal coliform bacteria. The lakes were tested once in March, April and May, said Perry Beeman, the Register reporter who conducted the tests. But the Reservoir tested high only once during this three-month span, he said.

On April 26, the Register study found 250 colonies per 100 milliliters of water in the lake. The acceptable bacteria level in the Reservoir is fewer than 200 colonies per 100 milliliters of water. A colony is a group of bacteria.

When the lake was re-tested on May 24, only 27 colonies per 100 milliliters of water were found, Beeman said.

There are several possible reasons that the level of bacteria in a lake would vary from month to month, said Keith Dohrmann, beach-sampling coordinator for the Iowa Department of Natural Resources.

"At different times in the season, you see different qualities of water," he said. "The lake temperature will cause bacteria to do different things. And as the weather gets warmer, the number of swimmers increase, which may cause higher fecal contamination."

The Reservoir is tested three times each month and analyzed by the UI Hygienic Laboratory, said John Castle, park manager of the Reservoir. If bacteria levels are above the 400-colony level, the beach will be closed, and the Army Corps of Engineers, which runs the lake, is then notified by the UI, he said.

"The Army Corps of Engineers has not currently been notified by the university of high bacteria levels in the lake," Castle said. "If we thought bacteria levels were serious enough, we would post signs."

High levels of bacteria in a lake are not a cause for concern, said Nancy Hall, of the water-and-food laboratory at the Hygienic Laboratory.

"It is best to look at the trends instead of isolated incidents," she said. "Because it has been nice and sunny with no rains, the reports we've been getting from lakes have been good."

Brian Ray/The Daily Iowan
Jonathan Delarosa and Nate Davis play in the Coralville Reservoir on June 20.

Several factors may contribute to high levels of bacteria in the Reservoir. Livestock, septic tanks from houses on the lake and swimmers are all possible sources for water contamination, Castle said.

"I would assume that when the lake has high levels of bacteria, the Iowa River does as well," he said. "The water-treatment plant modifies for high levels and adds more chlorine to the water if it is needed."

However, if the lake becomes contaminated, nothing can be done to treat it, Castle said. "You just have to wait until the contamination in the lake goes away, which is usually by the next day," he said.

Even when the lake has high levels of bacteria, it is not dangerous to eat the fish from it, said Scott Grummer of the state DNR Fisheries Biologist Division.

"Fish are not digesting the water, so the bacteria will not build up in the fish," he said. "They also don't absorb the water through their skin."

Although the Reservoir beach is currently closed, Castle said, it was because of high water — not because of bacteria.

Memmer pleads not guilty

Jonathan Memmer, 23, has pleaded not guilty to burglarizing an apartment in which the bodies of two slain women were found on March 19.

Memmer pleaded not guilty to charges of burglary and third-degree theft on June 25. He allegedly tried to pawn electronic equipment that had reportedly been stolen from the apartment a few days before the bodies were found. Memmer is currently serving a five-year sentence for parole violation.

Currently, no charges have been filed in the deaths of Laura Watson Dalton, 29, of Creston, Iowa, and Maria Therese Lehner, 27, of Belton, Mo.

Iowa City Police Chief R.J. Winkelhake said "a lot" of evidence relating to the case has not yet been processed by the state crime laboratory; he had expected a full report two months ago.

Memmer's attorney, Edward Leff, could not be reached for comment.

Fire causes $10,000 in damages at North Hall

A fire began Sunday morning in the auditorium of North Hall when a short circuit occurred in an electrical wiring unit.

The fire spread about 10 feet up the south wall, said Dan Smith, acting battalion chief for the Iowa City Fire Department.

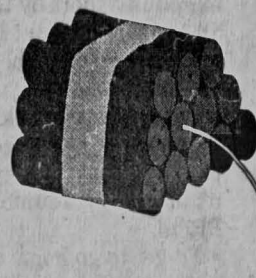

The building was locked and empty when the fire started at 9:39 a.m. The fire was put out 20 minutes after fire fighters arrived.

Smith described the incident as a "small fire" resulting in little flame damage and minimal smoke damage.

The Iowa City Fire Marshal's office assessed the damage at $10,000.

The high school reunions of Madison County

Several weeks ago, I received an invitation to attend my five-year high school reunion.

The invite was written by the guy who was student body president back in 1994 and went on about how phenomenal the class of '94 was and how no finer group of people had ever walked the hallowed halls of Winterset High, yadda blah blah. Our class was to be commemorated in fine style, indeed. We were to have "one helluva good time," the invitation declared: in the banquet hall out back of Madison County's premier used-car showroom. R.S.V.P.

"Hmmm," I thought, gazing out the huge bay window of my palatial estate, invitation dangling from my manicured fingers. "Return to my humble roots and face my old schoolmates? Having come so far in such a short period of time ... won't my staggering wealth and social renown make them all painfully aware of their lowly, thankless lives?"

How can I possibly go from jet-setting and hobnobbing with the glitterati to the back room of an auto dealership? I saw enough sordid back rooms during my younger years, clawing my way up the ladder of suc — "BBRRRAAAP! BBRRRAAAP!"

Ugh. I really must get a kinder, gentler alarm clock. My REM-cycle reverie (for that's what it was, of course) was cut mercifully short by the demands of my all-too-real life. But I still had to decide what to do about the reunion. I puttered around for a day or two, then decided to do what every quack self-help book out there advises — I decided to make a list, pros and cons, of why I should or shouldn't attend the reunion. It looked like this:

- I'd get to go home and see my mom and my sister Beek and hang with my grandma, who's cool.
 - I'd get to see the back room of a fine, fine, pre-owned auto dealership!
- The noise of good-natured, drunken revelry ebbed and flowed in the background. The girl sidled up to the boy on the couch. He was nursing a sloe gin fizz. "How's it goin'? You holding up okay?" "Yeah," he said. "What time is it, anyway?"

"About 2. Not too late. Hey —" The girl looked around, over her shoulder, and suddenly leaned into the boy, murmuring into his ear: "I've been thinking that an afternoon at an auto dealership, no matter how reputable, is an afternoon that can never be reclaimed."

So I didn't go. Neither did my boy, who was also part of the Phenomenal Class of '94. We decided to stay here in I.C., far away from the cornfields and Camaros of our troubled youth. The story would end here, were it not for certain information I received mere days ago. Turns out, the punchline is yet to come in this little comedic vignette: "Apparently, it was an argument over some recent wrongdoing — real or imagined — a million miles away — so it won't matter if I tell you everything and come off like a raging dork." The boy looked at the girl, open-mouthed, his eyebrows arched.

"Jeezus. Why would I think you're a dork? I never said that, did I?"

The girl spoke in a rush. "Well, no. But you don't say anything, and I can't read your face for shit. I never know what you're thinking. It's ... frustrating. Now do you want to hear about my twisted inner workings, or not?"

"Sure." The boy surveyed the crowd and sipped his drink of what was no doubt a fair amount of alcohol, the argument between the fireman and the teacher was taken up by the fireman's wife (one of the more unpleasant people I've ever interacted with) and the teacher's fiancée (who's from out of town). Words grew heated, insults were thrown, and darned if the teacher's fiancée didn't wind up with a head-wound from getting her noggin' bounced off a pole!

But this fiancée was not a girl to be underestimated! Through the blood and and drilled the only person in the room meaner and scrappier than her — a girl so disagreeable, even I (second-toughest woman in Iowa, you may recall) would hesitate to engage her in battle. After that, I hear the whole thing kind of devolved into this huge melee, with folks scuffling and cussing and basically making bigger asses of themselves than they did back in high school, which is amazing to me. I almost wish I'd been there — sounds like some old scores were up for settlement — but then, I think that night I stayed in, rented a flick, and snuggled with my boy and my cat. I have no bruises, and my dignity is still very much intact. Too bad about the Class of '94.

Opinions

Vote 'No' and 'No' again tomorrow

There are two questions before voters tomorrow in the special election regarding two constitutional amendments. While the commercials blather on about school funding, what they are really talking about is how hard they want it to be to raise taxes. Currently, it requires a simple majority of more than 50 percent of state representatives to vote in favor of a tax increase for it to happen. The election will determine whether the bar is raised to 60 percent — a super-majority.

Both sides have done some investigating, and they have each concluded that the other side's position will hurt children. The anti-amendment side says that states with a super-majority requirement have some of the worst schools in the country. This is true, but it completely ignores any other factors that might affect school quality. Proponents of the amendment point out that states with super-majority laws have been increasing school funding faster than other states. This is also true but is probably just a coincidence.

Iowans should discuss the real issue — raising taxes. If our state needs to raise taxes, and a majority of our elected officials agree, shouldn't that be enough? Should a minority control whether or not we have enough state funding? A simple majority is sufficient, and Iowans should vote against this amendment.

The second question is about spending caps. Iowans will decide if they want a constitutional amendment that will stop lawmakers from spending more than 99 percent of the state's revenue in a given year. This is sometimes referred to as making the government balance its checkbook, as anyone with common sense could see that you can't spend more than you earn. This is a false analogy. Budgeting for a state and budgeting for a family are very different things, but if a comparison can be made, deficit spending is similar to taking out a loan.

Deficit spending earned a bad reputation in the 1980s because it was a time of excess, and the budget was always larger than revenue. That does not mean that deficit spending is never a good idea. During times of financial hardship, when people are unemployed and impoverished, revenue will be low. But the state might want to spend more money to create jobs or lower taxes. We should at least leave ourselves that option, and vote against this amendment as well.

Make an informed, intelligent decision tomorrow — vote no twice.

Pat's the problem, not the answer

Pat Buchanan's doomed 2000 presidential run included a stop in Iowa City on June 23, as the conservative commentator offered more of the same rhetoric that ultimately cut his bids short in 1992 and '96. Buchanan, who has stated that he seeks to bring solidarity to the Republican Party, is in the midst of tearing it apart once again.

Buchanan's campaign should include few surprises this time around, as his routine of attacking fellow Republicans and serving up ridiculous solutions to America's alleged ills to appeal to the far right is well-worn and predictable. More likely than not, Americans will hear similar proposals to what have been offered by Buchanan in the past, which include building walls around U.S. borders to keep immigrants out and severing many diplomatic and economic ties with other nations.

Buchanan is an isolationist in the truest sense of the word, as he is not only opposed to America's intermingling in foreign affairs but also refuses to form any allegiances with those in his own political party. Buchanan's shock value and brutal honesty earned him significant early support in both the '92 and '96 primaries, but his refusal to concede to the front-runners after his following waned probably served to undermine both the Bush and Dole campaigns in those respective years.

Indeed, Buchanan has in effect served as the Clinton/Gore campaign's unofficial third running mate in recent years, as his presence seems to hinder the GOP's cause more than it helps it. Already, Buchanan has launched an attack upon early favorite George W. Bush — which, of course, is simply part of the democratic process. This, however, is one of the few areas in which Buchanan's goals actually co-exist with democratic freedom.

Buchanan's radical politics appeal to only a segment of the GOP's electoral base and would have garnered him more success in the 1890s than the 1990s. By the time this decade draws to an end, at the close of 2000, Buchanan's presidential bid should be history as well. Until then, however, things will not be pleasant for his GOP opponents — or anyone for that matter — as Buchanan will likely divide the Republicans and do little to impede Al Gore's march to the White House.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

IWP plans are discriminatory

It seems time for President Coleman and Dean Linda Maxson to address in detail, to the UI community, why it was necessary to put the IWP program on hiatus while exploring new options/opportunities for the program; as others have explained, this hiatus may well result in the loss of the program's significant external funding, thereby creating its supposed fiscal infeasibility. At the very least, it's time to fully disclose the options and plans currently under consideration.

However, I don't think this hiatus comes out of the blue; it brings to mind those recent efforts to close down the cultural-center houses, moving the respective organizations into the IMU. Among other things, that was about destabilizing the communities that people of color have built at the UI; a constant reminder (read threat) that such centers (physical, political, cultural, social, etc.) are always subject to the whims and rhetoric of the (white) administration and power structure. How come it is not surprising, then, that the administration is now focusing on this particular UI program, with its entirely international population, including many people of color? Under the mission rhetoric, the narratives about fiscal viability and so forth, this decision is very much about race. And racism.

Vote 'No' on Tuesday

With the votes on the amendments to the Iowa Constitution Tuesday, we revisit the basic misapprehension and the accompanying manipulation of public opinion. It is an issue of fixing something not yet broken as we currently debate what to do with our revenue surpluses.

The Republican legislators in putting forth these amendments at this time are banking common folk will be naive enough to believe that minority rule will most often work in their favor. They are also banking on a low turn-out for a special election, where those who stand to gain will vote, and apathy or ignorance will take care of the rest. This is a bit of ideologically driven electoral chicanery designed to extend the reach of the current Republican numerical advantage in the Legislature well into the future. A Constitution ought to be a broad outline briefly stating basic principles that specific legislation would be designed to advance. If anyone bothers to attend to the specificity of the roughly 800 words of these amendments, they would see that they do not conform to this model. It is also worth asking just who is financing the obviously expensive "Yes" campaign that doesn't much mention minority rule. I encourage voters to read our Constitution and these proposed amendments and not rely on misleading or inaccurate sound bites even when lent the prestige of the former governor. I also encourage voters to amend the Constitution only when loftier principles with broader application are involved and to rebuke this Legislature for this cynical and expensive abuse of the electoral process with a resounding "No-No" vote.

Vengeful man admits he plotted son's death before conception

■ A man charged with murder says he fathered a child intending to kill him to exact revenge on his wife.

By Rick Callahan
Associated Press

FRANKLIN, Ind. — On Father's Day, Amy Shanabarger found her chubby-cheeked infant son, Tyler, face-down and dead in his crib.

Two days later — just hours after the tot's funeral — Ronald Shanabarger told his wife he'd killed their son. The next day he gave police a confession saying that not only did he kill the boy, he had planned the crime even before the child was conceived as a way of exacting revenge against his wife.

Tyler didn't die of Sudden Infant Death Syndrome, as the coroner had ruled, Ronald Shanabarger said. He confessed to suffocating the 7-month-old with plastic wrap.

He said it was revenge because Amy Shanabarger, before they were married, had refused to cut short a vacation trip to comfort him when his father died in 1996.

"Ronald Shanabarger said he planned to make Amy Shanabarger feel the way he did when his father died. He married her, got her pregnant, allowed time for her to bond with the child, and then took his (boy's) life," according to an affidavit prosecutors filed to support a murder charge.

Ronald Shanabarger, 30, who begged officers to shoot him after he confessed on June 23, was charged with murder. He is being held without bail pending a court appearance today for an initial hearing; an attorney will be appointed for him at the hearing.

Johnson County Prosecutor Lance Hamner said he hasn't decided whether to seek the death penalty.

Ronald Shanabarger said in his confession that on the evening of June 19, he wrapped plastic wrap around his son's head and face, then left the boy's nursery to get something to eat and brush his teeth.

Twenty minutes later, he said, he returned, removed the plastic and placed Tyler face down in the crib before he went off to bed.

Amy Shanabarger, 29, had worked that night at her job as a cashier at a grocery store. When she came home, she went straight to bed, assuming that Tyler was asleep; she found the boy's body the next morning.

Ronald Shanabarger, who worked at a tire-retreading center, told police he confessed because of the image of his son's face, flat and purplish from rigor mortis, haunted him.

Since then, he's confessed at least three times, Police Chief Harry Furrer said in an interview Sunday. Each time, the story has been the same — that he hatched his plan because he was enraged by his then-girlfriend's refusal to cut short a cruise and return home after his father's death in October 1996.

The Shanabargers were married the following May.

Detectives who have interviewed relatives confirmed that Ronald Shanabarger had long resented Amy Shanabarger's refusal to cut the cruise short, Furrer said. "Their statements substantiate his confession," he said.

New laws run gamut from hula to chili sauce

■ Most of the new laws that will take effect this week deal with riding herd on teenagers.

By Paul Haven
Associated Press

You can hula till you drop in Hawaii, but you'll need mom and dad's permission to have your navel pierced in Tennessee. And don't talk back to your teachers in Louisiana, or you may be breaking the law.

New laws passed in states around the country — many of which will take effect with the advent of the new fiscal year Thursday — regulate everything from chili sauce to rubber-duck races. A spate of new ordinances focuses on reining in teen-agers.

Starting Thursday, teens caught smoking in South Dakota can be fined once for every cigarette they light up, as can the merchant who sold them the pack. Louisiana passed a law that makes students in kindergarten through fifth grade address teachers with a courtesy title such as "sir" or "ma'am."

In Utah, the marriage age was raised to 16 from 14, and in Florida, a new law calls for teen-age girls to wait up to 48 hours for an abortion to allow doctors time to notify their parents. Indiana and Tennessee enacted legislation that requires parental consent for body piercing.

"Looking at it on a broader scale, I think there is an issue of protecting kids from themselves and keeping parents in control," said Stephanie Wilson, who monitors state laws at the National Conference of State Legislatures.

She said that in the wake of the recent shootings at Columbine High School and other schools, the nationwide trend toward the closer monitoring of teens is likely to continue.

"Columbine was a huge shock to everyone," she said. "I think parents really do feel a loss of control."

Many states have also taken steps to try to protect children in school.

In Alabama, teachers with unsupervised access to students must now be fingerprinted and undergo background checks. A new law allows school districts in Nevada to hire a chief of school police. In Maryland, students who plant bombs or make bomb threats can lose their driver's licenses.

New Hampshire passed a law allowing homosexuals to adopt children and also became the last state in the country to honor slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. with a permanent holiday.

Hula, once banned by missionaries as a "heathen practice," was declared the official state dance of Hawaii. South Carolina's new official state amphibian is the spotted salamander. Legislators in New Mexico passed a law declaring the state "The Land of Enchantment" and even came up with an official state question: "Red or green?"

The question refers to what type of chili sauce diners want to use with their Southwestern cuisine.

N. Korea warns of retaliation as talks break off

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — North Korea threatened retaliation Sunday for what it called South Korea's reckless military provocation. The harsh words came a day after bilateral talks ended with no agreement on the reunion of separated families.

"There is a limit to our patience and self-restraint," the North's Korean Central News Agency said, quoting a newspaper commentary. "Unlimited is our merciless retaliation against provocateurs and aggressors."

The editorial reiterated threats made after a naval clash earlier this month in contested fishing waters in the Yellow Sea. The North lost one ship in the firefight; approximately 30 of its sailors were believed to have died.

During the talks in Beijing, Pyongyang demanded that the South apologize for the June 15 gunfire, which Seoul said the North provoked by firing at its ships.

The South's delegation, led by Vice Unification Minister Yang Young-shik, returned home Sunday for briefing and consultation. The delegation also will receive instructions for the next meeting, scheduled for Thursday afternoon.

The talks, the highest level negotiations in 14 months between the Koreas, were originally intended to deal with reuniting an estimated 10 million families, separated first by the 1945 division of the Korean peninsula into the communist North and capitalist South and then by the 1950-53 Korean War.

The South coaxed the North to the negotiating table earlier this month by promising to deliver 200,000 tons of free fertilizer by the end of July in return for discussing family reunions. South Korea has already delivered 100,000 tons but said it would not ship the other half unless there is an agreement on the family reunions.

North Korea desperately needs aid after four years of famine. South Korean President Kim Dae-jung is seeking confirmation that his open policy toward the North, much criticized by conservatives, is working.

North Korean negotiators scuttled the last high-level talks in April 1998, also in Beijing, by refusing to discuss family reunions. South Korean officials say the reunions are an urgent matter, as many of the separated relatives are elderly and ailing.

Scientists warn of global hothouse tion traveling from the earth. In essence, they act like the glass ceiling on a greenhouse.

Temperature increases of 3.6 degrees Fahrenheit and a sea-level rise of 20 inches by the year 2100 have been projected by the Intergovernmental Panel of Climate Change. The U.N. program is made up of 2,500 climate scientists, economists and risk-assessment experts from around the world and is considered by most people to be the authoritative international body on climate-change issues.

"These changes occurring don't sound like much — but an increase of only 4-5 degrees centigrade would put us in another Ice Age," Baker said.

"We're heading toward a global hothouse."

Baker has been working in the area of climate science for the last two decades. His most recent work, which examined plant-fossil evidence of past climate change, puts him in a unique position to use his historical and pre-historical data to determine how climate change affects the environment.

The cause in question

The most disputed issue in the global-warming debate is not whether the temperatures are on the rise — most experts agree they undeniably are — but the cause of the rapid change. Most global-warming experts are pointing fingers at human activity.

"On the one hand, there has been natural global warming and cooling historically — yet, through environmental modeling, we can now see the causes of this most recent trend is anthropogenic (human-induced) in nature," Baker said.

"An overwhelming majority of people working in climate science agree that humans have a measurable effect on climate."

Stephen Hendrix, a UI professor of biology, agreed: "It is difficult to dismiss the evidence. There is a definite connection to our species — the vast majority comes straight back to our doorstep."

The climate-change panel concurred with such sentiments in its 1995 Second Assessment Report: "The balance of evidence suggests that there is a discernible human influence on global climate."

Of the anthropogenic causes, the biggest culprit appears to be carbon-dioxide emissions from the burning of fossil fuels, Baker said. Other emissions such as methane, nitrous oxide and CFCs come from the manufacture of cement, deforestation, intensive livestock production, oil and gas production, and industrial solvents.

Iowa: the wheat state?

It is difficult to foresee all the possible ramifications of the temperature increase, Baker admits.

"One certain change will be in agriculture," he said.

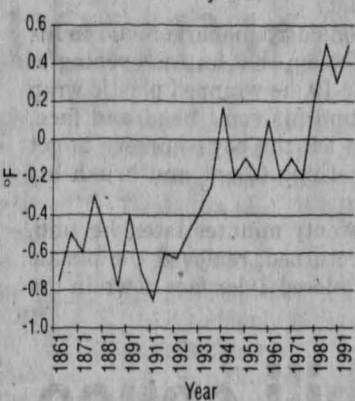

Baker predicts that there will be a change in regional production due to the shift in climate. For example, climate scientists say Iowa's climate will become drier due to global warming, necessitating a move from production of corn to wheat.

"We don't have a choice," said state climatologist Harry Hillaker. "This is going to be an issue for Iowa."

"Despite the fact that Iowa agriculture is pretty robust and can adapt, there are a range of possible changes in our region's agriculture that will be precipitated by global warming," said Eugene Takle, professor of atmospheric sciences and agricultural meteorology at Iowa State University. Takle studies the effects of climate change in Iowa and conducts climate modeling for the nation.

Human health concerns have also surfaced regarding heat strokes and the increase of disease-carrying insects.

Possible impacts will be shared by all species, causing severe stress on habitats. The rise in sea levels due to the melting of the polar ice caps is expected to make coastal land saltier, endangering wetlands.

"Global warming will have a substantial impact on the distribution of species across the landscape and composition of plant and animal communities," Hendrix said.

The future of the world's ecology seems ominous. Takle said the course of global warming is not reversible, at least not within the next 200-300 years.

However, the effects of current greenhouse gas emissions may be mitigated if people take the initiative to set the balance right and are committed to keep their efforts going.

want to drive those private programs out and substitute a government program for it," Gramm, R-Texas, said on CBS.

It is "the working poor, the poorest of the poor not on Medicaid, who don't have it, and we ought to work that out some way," Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, said on NBC's "Meet the Press."

Republican leaders generally have supported the idea of providing government-subsidized drug benefits only for those near the poverty level.

The administration argues many Medicaid policies are a major financial burden for the elderly, averaging approximately $90 a month and including a $250 deductible.

Clinton's plan would require smaller premiums and might pay about half the cost of prescriptions, up to perhaps $3,000 to $5,000 a year.

Sen. Bob Graham, D-Fla., whose state's senior population strongly supports cheaper drug prices, said on CBS that this could be accomplished by making Medicare more efficient and by cutting fraud and waste, which he said still accounts for about 10 percent of Medicare spending.

Sen. Joseph Lieberman, D-Conn., said the way to save Medicare from insolvency in the next decade "is not to load it up with another big costly benefit that nobody pays for even though everybody wants it."

result in cheaper drugs, he said.

Because most private companies will not cover people with pre-existing medical conditions, Medicare is the most viable option for such people, Cotts said.

Where the money will come from could be a problem. Locally, the UIHC is already expected to lose $12.4 million in Medicare payments because of federal cuts.

Also, angry pharmaceutical companies worried about profits could lobby against the change, Smith said.

site, the Trekfest was the brainchild of former City Councilor Steve Miller, who wanted to declare Riverside the future birthplace of Kirk.

Kirk, played by William Shatner, was supposedly born in a small Iowa town. Riverside was searching for a theme for its '85 summer festival, and Miller's suggestion was adopted, christening Riverside as Kirk's future birthplace.

Riverside bar owner Jerry Murphy said Kirk will be conceived in his bar, Murphy's Bar and Grill.

"We've got a plaque under the pool table that says 'Capt. James T. Kirk will be conceived on this spot, June 22, 2233,' which draws some attention," he said. "People like to take pictures of it, but other than Trekfest and Kirk's birthday, it goes largely unnoticed."

The event's organizer, Bill Poch, president of Riverside Area Community Club, said he loves what Trekfest does for Riverside.

"It's a reason for our small community to have a festival. We've got something to hold onto, something to bring people in from throughout the Midwest," he said.

Spurs celebrate first title with San Antonio fans

After defeating the New York Knicks 78-77 in Madison Square Garden, the Spurs came home to a hero's welcome.

By Jim Vertuno
 Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — The San Antonio Spurs came home Saturday to share their NBA championship trophy with a city starved for a winner.

The Spurs won their first NBA title in the franchise's 26-year history, beating the New York Knicks in five games in the finals. San Antonio clinched the series with a 78-77 victory Friday night that touched off a downtown celebration for which fans had ached.

That the Spurs won the series in New York's Madison Square Garden instead of the Alamodome mattered little to the thousands who greeted the team's plane at San Antonio International Airport Saturday afternoon.

Nor did it matter that the championship capped a lockout-shortened season in which the league was often criticized for sloppy play.

"It's about showing that nice guys do finish first. Hopefully, this is the start of a dynasty. There's a lot of pride with this. It's as important as the Alamo," fan Frank Cassiano said. "Remember the Alamo! Remember the Spurs!"

City merchants agreed. Downtown stores were fully stocked with Spurs championship T-shirts, and congratulatory banners hung in shop windows.

The Spurs returned the appreciation with a full-page ad in the San Antonio Express-News thanking fans for their support.

Police measured some of that support at more than 12,000 fans strong when the team arrived Saturday.

The crowd alternated between chanting "Go, Spurs, Go!" and singing Queen's "We Are The Champions" as the plane taxied onto the runway and pulled up to the gate.

Guard Avery Johnson, who hit the winning shot, was the first to emerge from the plane holding the gold NBA Championship trophy over his head.

Center David Robinson was right behind, and carried the trophy to a makeshift stage and thrust it over his head before passing it down so that fans could touch it.

"It's good to be home. You deserve this championship, San Antonio, you deserve this!" Robinson exclaimed. "We worked so hard to get here. I waited 10 years, the city waited 26."

Johnson said he has yet to settle down from his championship-winning shot with 47 seconds left in the game.

"My heart is beating a thousand times a minute," he told the crowd, who greeted him with chants of "M-V-P! M-V-P!"

"This is for people who make $12,000 a year and have been Spurs fans forever. This is about everybody in San Antonio, it's not just about us," Johnson said.

Just as he had immediately after the game Friday, Tim Duncan record-

PTL action continues tonight

By Greg Wallace
 The Daily Iowan

The third week of Prime Time League action kicks off Monday with a full slate of action, including a battle between two teams trying to stay in the hunt for the league title.

At 7:30 PM, Fitzpatrick's, which stands at 1-2 after beating Mike Gatens Real Estate on opening night, takes on Merrill Lynch/Nike. Merrill Lynch is 0-3, but they have been competitive in each of their games thus far. Duez Henderson has looked sharp so far for Merrill Lynch, as have BJ Windhorst and Matt Woodley, members of the Drake basketball team. Henderson scored 27 points and grabbed 14 rebounds in Merrill Lynch's 104-91 loss to Deli Mart Thursday night, while Woodley added 27 points of his own.

Fitzpatrick's will be looking to break a two game losing skid. Thursday, the team was without Dean Oliver, but Jess Settles picked up the slack, scoring 41 points. However, it wasn't enough, as Kent McCausland matched him shot-for-shot, scoring 39 in Lepic-Kroeger/Active Endeavors' 114-112 win.

In other action, Deli-Mart/Iowa City Ready Mix, coming off a heart-breaking loss to Goodfellow, takes on The Fieldhouse/Gringo's at 4:30. Mike Gatens Real Estate will battle Imprinted Sportswear/Goodfellow Printing at 6:00 PM, and Goodfellow will tip off with Lepic-Kroeger Realtors/Active Endeavors at 9 PM, in the final game of the evening. All games will be held in air-conditioned comfort at the North Liberty Community Center, just off Highway 965 in North Liberty.

Better late than never

Team U.S.A. took the opportunity to rest its starters last night and still grabbed a 3-0 win to advance to the quarterfinals.

By Barry Wilner

FOXBORO, Mass. — Starters, subs, what's the difference? Not much on the U.S. soccer team.

Backups Shannon MacMillan and Tisha Venturini did the scoring, while regulars Julie Foudy and Tiffeny Milbrett provided the spark coming off the bench Sunday as the United States beat North Korea 3-0 to advance to the quarterfinals of the Women's World Cup.

"My job is to get ready and take whatever time I get," MacMillan said after scoring once and setting up two goals by Venturini in the second half. "Some of us have to step up when we rest some players."

"I think I sealed my statement that I will give my heart and soul to this team."

U.S. coach Tony DiCicco had the luxury of resting some stars and he used it wisely. MacMillan and Venturini, former starters, played the whole game. Foudy and Milbrett came on for the second half with the match scoreless, and ignited the Americans to their third straight win and first place in Group A.

"We feel we have a strong group who have not been starting," DiCicco said after the win set up a second-round elimination game with Germany. "This was a chance for them to help us out."

"Shannon played a Shannon MacMillan type of game today. A goal like Shannon's will make any coach look like he said the right things."

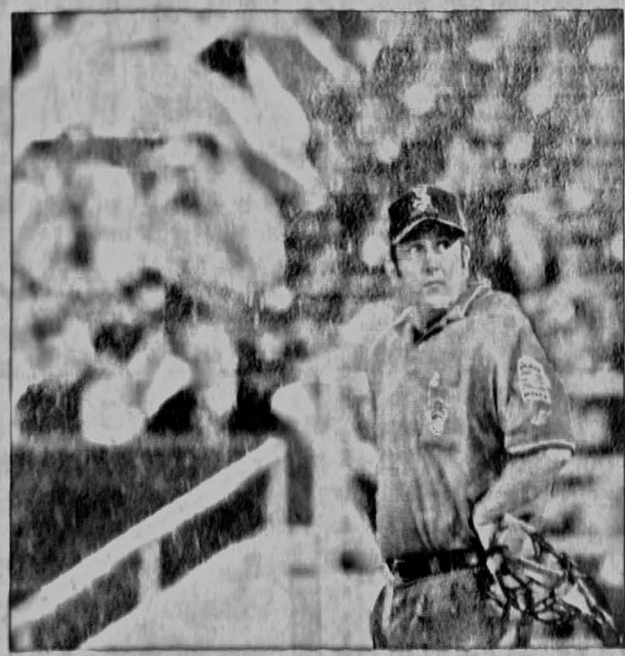

DiCicco's decision to rest starters Michelle Akers, Kate Sobrero, Foudy and Milbrett showed in the scoreless first half. Although the Americans dominated the ball and had many scoring chances, their Home plate umpire Dale Scott watches the rain move in before the start of the sixth inning of the Cleveland Indians game against the Kansas City Royals Sunday.

ATLANTA (AP) — Greg Maddux allowed only two hits in eight innings Sunday in his best outing of the season to help the Atlanta Braves beat the New York Mets 1-0.

The Braves took the final two games of the series against the Mets, expanding their lead to four games in the NL East.

Atlanta has won nine of 12 games. The Mets, who had won five in a row, before losing two straight to the Braves, have won 15 of their last 20 games.

Maddux (7-5) walked two and struck out six before leaving for a pinch-hitter in the eighth inning after throwing 93 pitches. He lowered his ERA to 3.87 and has given up only two earned runs in his last 21 2-3 innings (0.83).

John Rocker allowed two baserunners in the ninth inning before striking out Robin Ventura for his 16th save in 19 opportunities.

New York's Masato Yoshii (6-6) was nearly as good as Maddux, giving up four hits, walking one and striking out four in seven innings.

Yoshii gave up Atlanta's only run in the third when Eddie Perez singled with one out, reached second on a sacrifice by Maddux and scored on an RBI double by Ozzie Guillen.

It was the second consecutive strong outing by an Atlanta starter who had been struggling. Tom Glavine allowed four hits in the Braves' 7-2 win over the Mets on Saturday night.

Marlins 4, Expos 3

MONTREAL — Dave Berg hit a tiebreaking two-run double in the eighth inning as the Florida Marlins beat the Montreal Expos 4-3 Sunday.

With the score tied at 1 and runners on first and second, Berg hit a two-out double to left-center off Mike Thurman (3-5). Bruce Aven followed with an RBI single off reliever Guillermo Mota to make it 4-1.

The Expos closed to 4-3 in the ninth on Orlando Merced's, two-out, two-run single off Matt Mantei. But with runners on first and third,

New Life Duathlon a big hit

The New Life Fitness Duathlon brought people from all over the midwest to compete at the Res.

There were two 32-year old winners, overcast skies, plenty of bagels, and vulchers at the first New Life Duathlon Saturday morning.

Originally scheduled to be a 1/2 mile swim, 19 1/2 mile bike, and 4 mile run, the New Life Duathlon was born when water levels at the Coralville Reservoir became too high and full of bacteria, scratching the swimming portion of the course. A two mile run was inserted in the swimming portion's place, making the race longer.

"This is an awesome race for me because I went to school here," Chicago's Julie Deardorff said. Deardorff, a metro reporter for the Chicago Tribune who is training for an Ironman competition in Florida later this year, graduated from the UI in 1989 and received her MBA in 1992. She finished in 1:41.11 seconds, nearly five minutes off the course record.

"It's a really awesome course, because there are no hills in Chicago, so it's nice to train here. I love coming back to Iowa City."

Cedar Rapids native Kevin Drake, 32, won the men's overall in 1:27.38 seconds. Ames' Matt Thomas actually finished the race first, but, with the race being run in three different waves, started five BALTIMORE — Bernie Williams homered twice and Orlando Hernandez earned his ninth win as the New York Yankees completed a perfect six-game road trip by beating the Baltimore Orioles 6-2 Sunday.

Williams hit solo shots in the first and third innings off Sidney Ponson (7-5). It was the eighth two-homer game of his career, the second this season.

Luis Sojo also homered for the Yankees, his first since July 30, 1997, to spark a three-run ninth.

minutes before Drake's group started. Drake won the Iowa Triathlon Series, which is a part of the Heart of America Triathlon Series that the New Life Duathlon was a part of.

After the race, bagels from Bruegger's, bananas, cantaloupe,

Gatorade, grapes and water were available to help the racers recover from the long race. Chiro-Sports of Cedar Rapids also provided free sport massages. The proceeds from the race will go to the University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics' Miracle Arts Center, a service for young inpatients at the hospital.

The overcast skies at racetime kept the temperatures in the mid-70's at the 7:30 a.m. start. A slight breeze off of the Reservoir contributed to comfortable conditions, and even a band of vulchers that chose to watch the festivities from the damn. No word on what the vulchers were eating.

"Weather conditions really couldn't have been any better," race director Ed Grattan said. Grattan has been the director of the race all nine years of its exist-tence, and will continue on next year.

"When someone comes up to me and says 'thanks for the race' or 'I'm glad I made the trip,' that's what it's all about," Grattan said. "It's seeing the enjoyment of the racers."

ed the celebration on a video camera. Guard Steve Kerr, who won three championships with the Chicago Bulls, said post-game celebrations are becoming old hat.

"This is getting old for me," Kerr joked. "Thank you. This is a thrill for me. I feel like it just landed in my lap."

The team made only a 15-minute appearance before leaving in three team buses.

About two hours before the team's arrival, 3,000 fans were already waiting to greet the team on the tarmac. The throng happily withstood a slight drizzle, cheering and mugging for TV cameras long before the Spurs touched down. Later, fire trucks sprayed the crowd with water to take a little edge off the 88-degree heat that was up near 100 on the heat index.

Marla Hargrave said she dropped her season tickets in part because of the lockout. But by season's end, Hargrave was back on the bandwagon. She got to the airport three hours early for the celebration.

"As soon as the season started, we were back with them," Hargrave said. "Everybody know the lockout was about business. We love the Spurs."

The postgame victory celebration lasted into the early hours

Saturday as thousands of fans poured onto downtown streets. Unlike other cities where sports celebrations have turned violent, San Antonio police reported no major incidents.

In a decade of repeat champions — the Chicago Bulls and Houston Rockets won eight titles between them in the 1990s — talk of a repeat had already begun.

"We've talked about it already. ... We'll be back in it again," Johnson said.

Team U.S.A. used the first half to loosen up, then turned it up attack wasn't crisp, particularly in midfield.

But that changed drastically in the second half in 89-degree heat. Milbrett entered at halftime for Mia Hamm and Foudy came on for Cindy Parlow. Those moves paid off with three goals in 20 minutes.

"I think that Millie creates things. Whatever game she plays in, it's a spark," Foudy said. "We started to go at the defense and then they collapsed and we could go wider on them. We weren't doing that in the first half."

MacMillan's shot from 20 yards, off Foudy's feed, skipped off the grass and past goalkeeper Kye Yong Sun on the short side in the 56th minute. The crowd of 50,584 at Foxboro Stadium, somewhat subdued until then, erupted in cheers as MacMillan slid face-first along the grass.

"The ball just moves around when she shoots," U.S. goalie Briana Scurry said of MacMillan's darts, which often fool Scurry in practice. "That ball totally dipped before it got to the keeper."

Moments later, with the Americans finally loosened up,

Kristine Lilly hit the goal post with a left-footed volley. The Koreans quickly moved upfield and Jin Pyol Hill hit the crossbar from 15 yards.

Lilly barely missed again seven minutes later on another sharp feed from Foudy. But when Milbrett made a long run and passed to MacMillan deep in the Korean area, there would be no U.S. mistake. MacMillan's soft pass was headed in by Venturini in the 68th.

Venturini, who like MacMillan started for the gold medal team at the 1996 Olympics, connected again eight minutes later with a header off MacMillan's free kick. She celebrated with a cartwheel.

Venturini was not available after the game because she was randomly chosen by FIFA to be drug-tested.

Scurry made a handful of outstanding saves as the Koreans finally ventured upfield after falling behind. She preserved the team's second shutout of the opening round. The Americans beat Denmark 3-0 and Nigeria, which also advanced to the quarterfinals, 7-1.

"She's like a rock of granite for us," DiCicco said of Scurry, who made five saves.

Blue Jays.

Witt (4-4) snapped a streak of nine consecutive starts without a victory by limiting the Blue Jays to two singles after Shannon Stewart led off the game with a double.

White Sox 7, Red Sox 6

BOSTON — Craig Wilson hit his first two home runs of the season, including a two-run shot in the top of the ninth inning, to lift the Chicago White Sox to a 7-6 comeback win over the Boston Red Sox on Sunday.

One day after scoring 11 first-inning runs in a 17-1 rout of the White Sox, Boston built a 5-0 lead after two but could not hold on for the win.

Reds 5, Astros 2

HOUSTON — Michael Tucker homered to help the Cincinnati Reds beat the Houston Astros 5-2 Sunday to sweep the four-game series and nudge into first place in the NL Central.

The Reds, the best road team in baseball at 26-10, won seven straight against first-place Arizona and Houston for their best trip in 35 years. Cincinnati went 8-0 on a trip in September 1964.

Pirates 6, Brewers 5

MILWAUKEE — Ed Sprague hit a three-run homer and Milwaukee's pitching staff self-destructed in the seventh inning as the Pittsburgh Pirates beat the Brewers 6-5 in their last 17 games.

Henry Rodriguez added a two-run homer and Glenallen Hill hit a solo shot for Chicago, which avoided a three-game sweep.

Mariners 5, Rangers 2

SEATTLE — Ken Griffey Jr. hit his 27th homer and robbed Juan Gonzalez of a three-run shot with a spectacular, over-the-fence catch as the Seattle Mariners closed out the Kingdome with a 5-2 victory over Texas on Sunday.

With his father, Cincinnati Reds coach Ken Griffey, watching from the broadcast booth, Griffey gave the Mariners a 3-2 lead with a three-run homer in the first inning before a sellout crowd of 56,530.

With two men on in the fourth, the nine-time Gold Glove winner leaped over his 8 1/2-foot wall in center to snare Gonzalez's 395-foot drive for the final out of the inning.

Indians 6, Royals 5

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Richie Sexson and Manny Ramirez bailed out Dwight Gooden after the shortest outing of his 15-year career as Cleveland rallied for a rain-soaked victory.

Gooden gave up five runs on five hits and a walk and threw just 28 pitches while getting only one out in the first.

D'backs 3, Cardinals 2, 10 innings

PHOENIX — Travis Lee tripled to lead off the bottom of the 10th inning and scored on pinch-hitter Andy Fox's single as the Arizona Diamondbacks recovered from a blown save in the ninth to beat the St. Louis Cardinals 3-2 Sunday night.

Lee lined Ricky Bottalico's 2-1 pitch to right field and the ball got past Thomas Howard, allowing Lee to easily make it to third. Hanley Frias hit a high bouncer Bottalico, but no one covered first and the runner was safe.

With the outfield playing in to try to cut off the run, Fox hit it deep to right-center to end the game.

Angels 4, Athletics 3

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Randy Velarde, Todd Greene and Garret Anderson had RBI singles in the first inning as the Anaheim Angels handed the Oakland Athletics their fifth straight loss.

Steve Sparks (3-5) got his first victory since May 29, a span of four starts. He allowed two runs on four hits and six walks in five-plus innings.

Giants 8, Dodgers 7

SAN FRANCISCO — J.T. Snow hit a three-run homer and Ellis Burks followed with a solo shot in a four-run third as San Francisco broke a five-game losing streak.

Jeff Kent added two RBI singles as the Giants avoided getting swept at home by the Dodgers for the first time in 18 years. Los Angeles fell into last place in the NL West for the first time.

WIMBLEDON 1999

Week two ready to kick off

■ Anna Kournikova vs. Venus Williams and Tim Henman vs. Jim Courier are just two of the big matches Monday.

By Steve Wilstein
Associated Press

WIMBLEDON, England — Boris Becker's emphatic return, Jim Courier's emotional revival and Jelena Dokic's extraordinary rout of Martina Hingis set up a Super Monday of matches starting week two of Wimbledon.

If rain doesn't intrude on the sunniest Wimbledon in years, Centre Court will be a showcase of impassioned clashes beginning with Britain's Tim Henman trying to avenge a Davis Cup loss to Courier.

John McEnroe caught the mood of that much anticipated match, and fanned some flames, by accusing Henman and his teammates of choking against Courier in the Davis Cup two months ago on an indoor court in England.

Henman said he "desperately" wants to beat Courier, and the American said he's eager to feed off the energy of a crowd that will be against him from the start.

Courier was hospitalized and given an intravenous drip for dehydration during his five-setter Friday. He said he's completely recovered.

Venus Williams and Anna Kournikova, the two most photographed and followed women in the tournament, will be up next on Centre Court.

"Tell Anna that I like grass,"

Dave Caulkin/Associated Press

Jelena Dokic stretches for a shot from Anne Kremer during their third round match on Wimbledon's Centre Court Saturday.

Williams said after hearing that Kournikova disparaged her chances to win Wimbledon.

Becker, the 31-year-old three-time champion back for his last hurrah, then takes on Patrick Rafter, the two-time U.S. Open champion, in a duel of classic serve-and-volleyers.

"I'm not here to play halfway," Becker said. "It's all or nothing. That's the way I've been playing all my career."

One of the other themes of the first week — the record run of five qualifiers into the round of 16 — will be played out in the Court One stadium, where former champion Andre Agassi starts off against the so-far unbreakable serves of Australian journeyman Wayne Arthurs.

Arthurs has faced only six break points against his serve in three matches, and brushed them all away.

Seven-time women's champ Steffi Graf follows against another qualifier, Kim Clijsters of Belgium, before an ace-a-thon between Greg Rusedski and Mark Philippoussis.

Court 2, the dreaded "Graveyard of Champions" where Richard Krajicek was buried by qualifier Lorenzo Manta on Saturday, gets a shot at five-time and defending champ Pete Sampras when he meets Canada's Daniel Nestor.

Court 2 should also be packed for the duel between Dokic and Mary Pierce, after an opening match pitting No. 3 Lindsay Davenport against Barbara Schett.

Ayala takes Tapia's WBA title

■ In a major upset, Paulie Ayala outpointed pound-for-pound entrant Johnny Tapia's WBA Bantamweight belt.

By Ed Schulyer Jr.
Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — This was just a show to a lot of people until a fight broke out.

A crowd of about 6,000 at Mandalay Bay cheered and laughed as Mia St. John, who has been photographed in Playboy, won a decision and 311-pound Butterbean pummeled Peter McNeeley, who on a previous visit to Las Vegas was pummeled by Mike Tyson.

Then anyone in the crowd who was not a fight fan had to become one as bantamweights Paulie Ayala and Johnny Tapia put on a demonstration of skill and courage over 12 frantic rounds Saturday night.

Ayala handed Tapia his first defeat in 49 fights and won the WBA 118-pound title.

"To beat a champion you really have to beat him," said the 32-year-old Tapia (46-1-1, 25 knockouts) of Albuquerque, N.M. He did not agree with the decision but acknowledged, "Paulie is a great champion, a great fighter."

The three judges all scored the fight for the 29-year-old Ayala — one by one point and the other two each by three points. The Associated Press favored Ayala 115-113.

"A great champion like Johnny, you've got to take him on every round," said Ayala (28-1, 12 knockouts) of Fort Worth, Texas.

Every round was close. Every round was exciting, marked by sharp combinations to the head, savage blows to the body and several collisions of heads as both fighters refused to give an inch.

The 30-year-old McNeeley has fought back from drug and alcohol abuse. He had hoped to gain some recognition and better fights and atone in some way for his ridiculed loss to Tyson in 1995 in which manager Vinny Vecchione jumped into the ring and stopped the bout after 89 seconds.

Butterbean, billed as King of the Four-Rounders, stopped McNeeley, 212, at 2:59 of the first round. He battered him with head shots but failed to knock him down.

"They tried to run me out of town when he was getting pounded by Mike Tyson," Vecchione said. "They complained like hell before for what I did. There were no knock-downs, no cuts (Saturday night). I think he should have been given more of an opportunity."

McNeeley had become emotional at a news conference Wednesday and referee Jay Nady had been instructed to watch him closely.

"I never thought being a little emotional at a press conference would affect a fight being stopped three nights later," McNeeley said.

McNeeley wants a rematch but that's unlikely. The 32-year-old Butterbean, whose name is Eric Esch, wants something even more unlikely.

"I want Mike Tyson at four rounds," he said.

Sedin twins highlight NHL Entry Draft

By Howard Ulman
Associated Press

BOSTON — Maybe they should rename the National Hockey League entry draft the European Hockey League entry draft.

For the first time, Europeans were chosen with the first four picks Saturday. And for only the third time, a European was taken first.

"There is more scouting being done in European countries," New Jersey general manager Lou Lamoriello said.

The top pick was Patrik Stefan, a powerful forward from the Czech Republic selected by the Atlanta Thrashers.

The Thrashers hope he can, eventually, provide offense they couldn't get when they chose 26 players in Friday's expansion draft. They obtained the choice, originally held by Tampa Bay, as part of a flurry of pre-draft trades.

Vancouver had the next two picks and chose twins Daniel and Henrik Sedin, who play in the competitive Swedish Elite League and wanted to stay together in the NHL.

"Having all the Europeans is a little bit of a coincidence," said Toronto assistant general manager Anders Hedberg, also from Sweden. "It doesn't matter where they come from. They're chosen on projection (to play in the NHL) and talent."

Pavel Brendl from the Czech Republic was chosen by the New York Rangers with the fourth pick, obtained in a trade with Tampa Bay. He had 73 goals in 68 games last season with Calgary of the Western Hockey League, one of the Canadian Juniors leagues that consistently turns out top NHL talent.

Stefan had 11 goals in 33 games with Long Beach of the professional International Hockey League but had his season shortened by two concussions. That apparently didn't bother Atlanta and Stefan said he's fine now.

Stefan and Brendl are considered the only two drafted players likely to play in the NHL next season.

Inkster finishes career Slam

■ Juli Inkster became the second woman to complete a career Grand Slam.

By Doug Ferguson
Associated Press

WILMINGTON, Del. — A dream that began 16 years ago finally came to fruition Sunday when Juli Inkster won the LPGA Championship, making her only the second woman to win the modern career Grand Slam in women's golf.

Inkster, who won two majors as a rookie in 1984, won the final two legs just three weeks apart. Her victory at DuPont Country Club Sunday came just as quickly, with an eagle-birdie-birdie finish that gave her a 6-under 65 and a four-stroke victory over Liselotte Neumann.

Pat Bradley is the only other woman to have won the Dinah Shore, U.S. Open, du Maurier Classic and the LPGA Championship, completing her sweep 13 years ago at the same tournament.

Mickey Wright won the Grand Slam in 1962 when it consisted of the Open, LPGA, Titleholders and Western Open.

Inkster won the U.S. Open at Old Waverly three weeks ago by taking a four-shot lead into the final round. This was far more difficult, with as many as five players tied for the lead at one point. But she took only 15 putts over the final 12 holes and left no doubt about her victory — or her place in history.

The next stop for Inkster is the Hall of Fame. Her victory Sunday left her only one point short of induction. She could get that by winning the points-based player of the year, and she now leads Karrie Webb by a slim margin.

Only 10 other players have won at least five majors — Inkster won the Dinah Shore again in 1989 — and all of them are in the Hall of Fame.

"I can't comprehend this," said Inkster, who turned 39 the day of the first round. "It's been an awesome year. For once in my life, I'm speechless."

Inkster finished at 16-under 268, by five strokes the lowest 72-hole score ever recorded at Dupont in the six years it has been host of the LPGA Championship.

Waldorf wins on first playoff hole

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP) — Duffy Waldorf arrived at the tee of first playoff hole Sunday to find Dennis Paulson, an old childhood pal, waiting to play for the title of the Buick Classic.

One hole later, Waldorf got reacquainted with another long-lost friend, a PGA Tour victory.

For only the second time in his 13-year career, Waldorf won a tournament. And he did it in an unusual way for someone so unaccustomed to winning — by staying relaxed and patient but aggressive. Everything seemed to be in Waldorf's comfort zone at the end, even his playoff opponent.

"It was fun. We were both happy to be there," said Waldorf, who birdied the last two holes of regulation to force the playoff. "It was great to see him there."

Waldorf and Paulson have known each other since they started playing the same amateur events in Southern California starting when they were 13 or 14. They competed against each other in college — Waldorf at UCLA and Paulson at San Diego State. Their wives are friends and when they bump into each other at a golf course or a hotel pool, their kids play together.

It was no surprise, then, to see Waldorf and Paulson strolling down the fairway of the par-5 18th, the first playoff hole at the Westchester Country Club, chatting away even though $180,000 was at stake. That's the difference between the $450,000 first prize and the $270,000 second prize.

"Let me tell you, it's hard not to chat with Dennis," Waldorf said. "Dennis is 'Chatty Cathy.'"

But it was Waldorf who had the last word. Paulson pushed his second shot from the fairway into trees on the right, needed two chips from the rough to get within 25 feet and missed his par putt.

Waldorf, meantime, hit driver-driver to a greenside bunker and blasted out to 15 feet. Needing only a two-putt for the title, Waldorf rolled the ball in for his third straight birdie and the biggest payday of his career.

Waldorf birdied 17 from 6 feet and 18 the first time from 4 feet after a long shot out of a different greenside bunker.

"Duffy played good and we got to play an extra hole and he was victorious," Paulson said. "It was a lot of fun."

Paulson, who closed with a 4-under 67, and Waldorf, who had a 71, finished regulation tied at 8-under 276. Chris Perry was one stroke back after a 70, while Scott Hoch was alone in fourth at 278 after a 69.

Parenting according to Sandler

By John Mullin
 The Daily Iowan

I always had a theory about Adam Sandler movies: Basically, they all had generic stories, loads of cheap jokes and a lot of self-consciously cheesy material in lieu of any real filmmaking prowess.

At the same time, though, I couldn't help but love most of his big-screen endeavors. There's always been something about Sandler movies that set them apart from other films of the same, uh, genre. Beneath the violent outbursts of Happy Gilmore, the grating Cajun accent of The Waterboy's Bobby Boucher and Robbie Hart, Sandler's hopeless romantic from The Wedding Singer, there was an odd sort of warmth and modesty that always shone through.

His new film, Big Daddy, which opened on June 25, is probably his most thoroughly entertaining yet, and it disproves my notion of Sandler's movies being fundamentally hollow. All the things we've come to expect from his movies are there — the brash inappropriateness, the cameos by Sandler's company of stock actors (Steve Buscemi, Rob Schneider, et al.)

and the story line that doesn't seem to take itself too seriously. There is something new this time, however, that Sandler movies have previously lacked: maturity. This time Sandler plays Sonny Koufax, a guy who went to law school but, unlike his father and friends, never went on to take the bar exam. As the movie opens, he's steadily working one day a week at a toll booth in the Bronx while living off a $200,000 settlement he won a few years earlier. His father and girlfriend (played by a scantily clad Kristi Swanson) are both pressuring him to do something with his life, but, like other Sandler characters, he's the sort of guy who clearly intends to stay a boy forever.

One morning, 5-year-old Julian (a role shared by newcomers Dylan and Cole Sprouse) is brought to the apartment with a note saying that Sonny's roommate, Kevin (Jon Stewart of "The Daily Show"), is the father. Kevin has just gone away on business, and Sonny is left to take care of the kid until the Social Services office opens Monday. As the weekend goes on, it dawns on Sonny that keeping Julian might show he's a responsible adult and patch things up with his girlfriend. It's the scenes between Sonny and Julian that make the movie so precious. Actor/director Dennis Dugan, who previously directed Sandler in Happy Gilmore, handles the material with a knowing confidence. He seems to understand that some of the most genuine moments of the film are those in which Sandler and Julian are allowed to do their thing, and the editing is minimal. It's really funny to watch Sandler play the ridiculously inept father-figure. He feeds Julian packets of ketchup, teaches him to whiz wherever he wants to, and uses him to pick up women in public places. For a large portion of the film, he also allows him to change his name to Frankenstein. Sonny's theory is that kids become messed up when they have too many rules imposed upon them. He brags to his friends that he's pioneering a new style of parenting by giving the kid options and letting him make the right decisions himself.

To say more about what goes on would spoil some of the best parts of the movie, but suffice to say that it's the most satisfying film he's made thus far on every level. Comically, Sandler is at the top of his game, and whenever the movie seems to border too close to cheese-ball sentimentality, old favorites such as Schneider stop in and quickly take it back into the realm of the screw-ball comedy. Sandler, who began his career in show business playing "Stud Boy" on MTV's "Remote Control," is even more real and likable here than he was in The Wedding Singer, which seemed to be a breakthrough for him at the time. Joey Lauren Adams of Chasing Amy plays a complicated love interest who manages to be career-driven, charming and vulnerable all at the same time. The vibrant cinematography by Holland-born D.P. Theo Van de Sande (Cruel Intentions, Wayne's World) is easily the most rich and textured that a film such as this has gotten in a while, and Teddy Castellucci's score blends well with songs by Rufus Wainwright and Garbage, adding the right tugs of emotion and humor when needed. Castellucci's music does, however, border a little close to James Newton Howard's My Best Friend's Wedding score at times with subtle nods to the same composer's Dave as well.

Some audiences may find certain elements of the movie offensive. Apart from the flagrant child negligence, Dugan loads the flick with lots of large-breasted women who don't seem to mind wearing short skirts and low-cut tops. Allen Covert, who played Sandler's best friend Sammy in The Wedding Singer, plays an old college buddy who is engaged to another college buddy of theirs. While the movie doesn't necessarily take direct shots at them, the gay stereotype is played up for laughs a bit here and there. The script was written by Sandler, Steve Franks and frequent Sandler collaborator (and current "SNL" head writer) Tim Herlihy. Sandler's next film, Little Nicky, in which he plays the son of Satan, is due later this year.

ARTS BRIEF

Elton John seeks $40 million loan to pay hefty bills

LONDON (AP) — Elton John, the big-spending singer who accumulates homes, fabulous jewels, top-of-the-range wigs and luxury cars as fast as he makes hits, is seeking a $40 million loan to pay off bills, the Sunday Times reported. John is negotiating with a London finance house, Samuel Montagu, and has agreed to sign over income from future hits as well as proceeds from old ones, the newspaper said, quoting unidentified sources. The singer, who reportedly spends up to $400,000 a week on credit cards, will also offer his homes in England, France and the United States as collateral. John, 52, needs most of the money to clear loans outstanding in Britain and the United States, including an $11 million overdraft with an English bank, and a loan of nearly $4 million, the newspaper said. John, knighted after "Candle in the Wind," his reworked song for Princess Diana's funeral, has had a chart success every year since 1971. The Sunday Times estimated his fortune at $256 million, and his income in the five years to 1996 at $131 million.
