The Daily Iowan

Ul plans new East Side rec center

■ The proposed facility, to be built next to North Hall, could be ready in five

By Troy Shoen The Daily Iowan

Within the next five years, UI students could enjoy a new recreation center on the East Side of campus, complete with two indoor pools, fulllength basketball courts and an elevated jogging track.

The proposed 140,000-square-foot facility, which would be built on the river bank next to North Hall, would also include racquetball courts and large fitness rooms, said Harry Ostrander, director of UI recreational

It would be located on the current site of the Iowa City water plant, said Ray Beemer, an associate director of recreational services.

"For years, I have been pursuing a need for a new East Side recreation facility with the administration," Ostrander said. "The UI administration has finally seen the need for this facility.'

Fitness East, the only UI recreation facility on the East Side of the river, opened in Halsey Hall on Sept. 23,

However, Ostrander said, the proposed rec center would be bigger and located closer to the residence halls.

The costs of renovating the former pool in Halsey Hall for the current facility cost $500,000, with an additional $130,000 going into new workout equipment.

Payments of the bonds needed for construction and upkeep of the new facility would be made through a mandatory $65 or $75 per semester fee for all students, Ostrander said. Students would then be allowed to use the facility without paying for a membership, which is currently the case at the Field House and Halsey Hall.

"This fee would allow all students complete access to the recreation facilities," Ostrander said. "All facilities will be controlled by a single access point, and non-students will have to pay an annual or day pass."

A recent survey of UI students showed that there was need for a larger facility, said Steve Parrott, associate director of university relations.

Sixty percent of UI students currently use the Field House, according to the survey. The survey also indicated that most students were willing to pay a fee for improved facilities.

"The study indicated the university needed to provide more recreation on (the East) Side of the river," Parrot

The Field House would be renovated along with the construction of the new facility, Ostrander said. The Field House would mostly be used for organized intramural activities, he added.

UI junior John Tye said he supports the idea of a new center.

IOWA POPULATION GROWTH

Area population shoots up in 1990s

A growing local economy is responsible for the increase.

percent, from 59,735 to 60,897; throughout the 1990s, Schoon said, Coralville jumped 22.6 percent, from 10,347 to 12,688, putting it among the top 10 in the state. David Schoon, Iowa City economic development coordinator, believes that the increase is the result of a growing local economy.

"The driving force is the expanding employment opportunities in Iowa City," he said.

The number of major employers Iowa City's population grew 1.9 in the city has grown steadily and consequently, employment opportunities and population have also expanded.

The UI, which - with 11,903 full-time employees and 22,856 part-time employees - is Iowa City's largest employer, often plays

Federal Reserve move won't touch student loans

 UI officials say the interest rate hike is unlikely to affect students.

> By Kelly Wilson The Daily Iowan

The Federal Reserve's decision Wednesday to raise interest rates for the first time in two years is unlikely to be detrimental to student loans, UI officials say

"I don't think we will see any effect by the increase for direct (student) oans," said Beth Oakes, an assistant director of Student Financial Aid.

The federal funds rate, the interest that banks charge each other on overnight loans, is now 5 percent, up from 4.75. In reaction to the Fed move, commercial banks increased their prime lending rate, the benchmark for millions of business and consumer loans, from 7.75 percent to 8 percent.

The interest rate for next year's student loans has already been established and will not change until July 2000, Oakes said. It is likely that the rates will have evened out by then, she added.

Students should also not be worried, because their loans were not affected by the last interest rate increase, in March 1997, Oakes said. William Albrecht, a UI professor of economics, believes the Fed's move is reasonable. Without an increase, inflation will pick up, he said.

Recent UI graduate Scott Andrews, who majored in business, said he was not concerned by the decision to raise interest rates.

"My own personal opinion is that the national and world economies are not in any real danger by raising the rates," Andrews said.

Some critics are calling the Fed's decision dangerous to the fragile world economy, but, Albrecht said, it is always hard to alter rates.

"It is always dangerous to raise interest rates, but it can also be dangerous not do anything," he said.

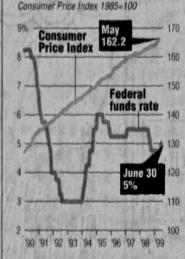

Clearly, Albrecht said, the Fed would have made such a move sooner if it hadn't been for the Asian economic crisis. Now that the crisis is settling down, the Fed is trying to make a little raise in rates now to avoid a bigger increase in the future,

Andrews said he had been expecting the decision to raise interest rates

U.N. to jump-start Kosovo civilian rule

■ Eighteen key nations plot the transformation of the province from Serb rule.

> By Barry Schweid Associated Press

UNITED NATIONS - In an unprecedented intervention, the U.N. secretary-general and 18 nations Wednesday undertook to revamp judicial and civil rule in Kosovo, less than three weeks after the NATO bombardment of Yugoslavia forced out all Serb troops and special police.

With hundreds of thousands of Kosovars returning to their homes, Secretary-General Kofi Annan brought together key international figures to plan for a new civil administration and to elicit pledges of interim police to support a U.N. peacekeeping force in trying to keep order among ethnic communities divided by hate and atrocities. "What we must do today is make sure having won the war, we are now in a position to build the peace, working with the local population and working with the international community," British Foreign Secretary Robin Cook said.

NATO's victory over Yugoslavia restored the self-rule to the province that was abolished by Yugoslav President Slobodan Milosevic a decade ago. It gives far greater authority to the mostly ethnic Albanian residents and a sharply reduced role for Yugoslavia, including elimination of Serb troops on the border.

Britain volunteered $1 million for a Annan-run trust fund. The United States, with $1.3 billion in assistance contained in pending legislation, made no additional commitment. A donors' conference is to be held July 27, probably in Brussels, Belgium. Establishing an interim police force of some 3,000 was accorded high priority. Pledges, including 600 from Britain and 200 from Germany, nearly doubled the commitments, rising to 1,900 from a little more than 1,000 at the start of the four-hour conference.

A poor and lonely old woman lived in a house with her cat. One day, as she sat knitting, the lights went out she had been unable to pay the electricity bill. So she went to the attic and got an old oil lamp from her childhood. As she rubbed it clean, a genie appeared and granted her three wishes. The woman said: "First, I want to be so rich l never have to worry about money again.

"Second, I want to be young and beautiful.

"Finally, I want my cat changed into a handsome prince.'

Poof! As the smoke cleared, the woman saw big bags of coins surrounded hemm When she looked in the mirror, she saw turned into a young and beautiful woman.

Iowa City officials and downtown business owners met Wednesday with the new owners of the Old Capitol Mall to celebrate the purchase.

A dinner was held at Gringo's, 115 E. College St., so that the Iowa City community could welcome the owners, Madison Realty Group, said Cathy Weingeist, executive director of the Iowa City Downtown Association.

"We're celebrating them being here because we're really excited about having new ownership in Old Capitol," she said.

Weingeist said local business owners are enthusiastic about the new businesses that Madison Realty will bring to the city.

"We're showing our support for the group, because in some ways, the Old Capitol Mall is the anchor of the downtown," she said.

The mall is expected to continue to offer consumers a wide range of products and services, Weingeist said, so that an even larger market might be attracted to downtown Iowa City.

"Having the Old Capitol Mall is sort of a counterbalance to the area," she said.

Group organizes to save Hickory Hill Park

New development and expansion is threatening the park's perimeter, some local residents say.

A group of concerned citizens met Wednesday night to discuss the preservation of Hickory Hill Park. whose borders, they say, are being threatened by nearby developments.

Oakland Cemetery, First Avenue expansion and the newly approved Northeast District plan are indications of nearby growth, putting the park's perimeter in jeopardy, say local activists. Friends of Hickory Hill Park, a local group formed by UI student Matt Carberry, held an organizational meeting Wednesday to discus actions to save the park.

"By combining our energies, we hope to get much more accomplished," Carberry said. "Council decisions will affect Hickory Hill forever. Development is not the best

"If there isn't a strong citizen stand, we won't be able to preserve the vistas of the park," she said.

Carberry became involved with the park while conducting research for an urban planning class. He discovered that while Iowa City had an adopt-a-park program, no one had adopted Hickory Hill. Friends of Hickory Hill will be a collective voice for people interested in the park and issues centering on the park, Carberry said.

Mississippi death blamed on Medicaid Rx limit

Donald Ashwell died of pneumonia because he couldn't afford a $45 antibiotic.

WASHINGTON - The emergency-room doctor diagnosed Donald Ashwell with early-stage pneumonia and prescribed an antibiotic.

But Mississippi limits how many prescriptions it buys each month for Medicaid patients, and the drugstore said Ashwell had reached his limit. Unable to pay for the $45 antibiotic. Ashwell went home

Three days later, Ashwell, 37, had worsened severely and was hospitalized - but it was too late. He died. And Medicaid had a $4,900 hospi-

It's the same conundrum facing all health plans: Medications are the fastest-growing health-care cost, so limiting them is logical when budgets are tight, said William Waldman of the American Public Human Services Association, which represents Medicaid directors.

There must be safeguards ensuring critical care isn't denied, Waldman cautioned.

Many have benefitted from IWP's offerings

Paul Engle and I co-founded the International Writing Program at the UI in 1967; we retired in 1988. Paul Engle devoted half a century of his life to the UI: He directed the Writers'

Workshop for 25 years, developed it to become the leading writing program in the country, and later co-directed the IWP with me for 21 years.

During our tenure with the IWP, we brought more than 700 writers to Iowa for several months each year from Asia. Africa, the Mideast, Latin America, Eastern Europe and Western Europe. They wrote, participated in panel discussions of writing, talked to each other, taught a course ("International Literature"), joined the Translation Workshop for discussions of writing translated from their own languages, visited Iowa schools and farms, and traveled across the country. The International Writing Program is well known in many parts of the world. Saint Matthew said: "A prophet is not without honor, save in his own country."

The following few quotations represent the IWP writers' feelings and thoughts about the program, the UI, the state of Iowa and the country at large.

"I am here without a machine gun but with a pen. The United Nations could not bring Israel and Palestine together, but the International Writing Program has.

 Palestinian novelist Saha Khalifeh "For my friends in Iowa City (the unforgettable Iowa City), here are my enduring and warmest feelings. "The International Writing Program, with writers from all over the world, is something very much like what Hemingway said of Paris: "If you are lucky enough to have lived there ... then wherever you go for the rest of your life, it stays with you, for it is a moveable feast."

- Anantha Murthy, India "The organization and continuation of your great International Writing Program idea has become something of life importance to me."

- Jerzy Przezdziecki, Poland "See Iowa City and then live. All of us are beginning to dream about this little town and to fly to the Iowa River, where the unity of mankind, year after year, is not a mere slogan, but a wonderful reality."

- Patricia Esteve, Argentina

There were many, many more remarks from the IWP writers. I left Iowa City for China in mid-May. On my return on June 25, I was shocked and grieved to discover that the beloved child of an international writers' community was killed for reasons I don't understand.

4th of July has pomp but no substance hen it shall be said in any country in the world, my poor are happy; neither ignorance nor distress is to be found among them:

my jails are empty of prisoners; my streets of beggars; the aged are not in want, the taxes are not oppressive ...; when these things can be said, then may that country boast of its Constitution and government.

Who could have uttered such words? Was it Mandela? Gandhi? Allende Che? The ever-sanctimonious Bono? The words were written neither by statesperson nor celebrity, but rather by journalist Thomas Paine. Paine was convicted of treason in England in absentia for publishing The Rights of Man, from which this quote is taken. It should be noted that at many points in the 20th century, these sentiments would have been looked upon as treasonous, or "un-American," by our own government.

Walt Whitman once noted that Paine had "very positive opinions about politics," and his candid remarks cost him many relationships. Paine was one of the first to speak out against slavery and advocate for the equal rights of women. Today, there is a Thomas Paine Society that annually awards individuals who exhibit the "courage to stand up for what they believe, in spite of personal opposition or hardship.'

In 1998, consumer advocate Ralph Nader was recognized for the award. History does have ways of discerning between those who have spoken out against wrongs and injustices and those who have supported the status quo. Ask yourself how many streets in America are named after Bull Connor.

If Paine were alive today, what would he make of our contemporary Fourth of July, especially in light of the abroad and at home with its own citizenry?

"The Fourth James Tracy of July," he would opine,

"is a holiday that seems to be long on pomp and celebration yet short on reflection." "In fact," he might add, "the unbridled display of blind nationalism has more in common with a monarchy than a holiday meant to commemorate a rebellion against one."

By today's standards, most of Paine's musings would be considered beyond the pale of either conservative or liberal opinion. It is doubtful whether, even with the assistance of a good agent, Paine would ever be allowed on "Meet the Press." It would nevertheless be amusing to see him lecture George Will on agrarian land reform.

Would Paine whoop it up with Bill Clinton on the Fourth of July or ponder how far the United States must go as a nation to be worthy of its pride? Would he be advocating for more prisons or for more social programs and a leveling of the disparate resources in our schools? Would he be quick to cavort with a leader who in the past year has bombed three countries without provocation or

Who has approved of forcing single mothers to forego medical care and abandon their children for eight or more hours a day only to receive less than what they received while wedded to the state? Would Paine look glowingly on a nation with the highest incarceration rate in the world? Where the top 1 percent of the population owns 42 percent of the wealth and the top 10 percent owns three quarters? A nation where it is more common to buy access to a politician as a corporation than to reason with one as a concerned citizen? And where more than $260 billion in federally collected taxes go to the manufacture of weapons, most of which are both useless and dangerous?

Upon his death in 1809, newspapers remarked that Paine had "lived long, did some good and much harm." If only they knew how much more sense he makes than the lot of our present leaders, journalists and "experts." If only Paine were here to show us the importance of reflection and humility over the bargain-basement patriotism that will once again reverberate through our nation this Fourth of July.

Smoke-free dorms a step in the right direction

Smokers have a right to their delusions. What use is the freedom to smoke without the freedom to deny their addiction and incipient emphysema? If I can suspend belief in physics long enough to enjoy watching the Enterprise travel at warp speed, then a smoker can put biology on hold long enough to enjoy a pack of Winstons.

Of course, rights have limits. Even First Amendment free speech does not cover yelling "fire!" in a crowded theater, unless you torch a row of seats first. Just as the right to practice kickboxing ends at your neighbor's nose, the right to leave smelly concentrations of carcinogens hanging in dorm room air ends at your roommate's lungs.

If tobacco had no health-threatening effects, common courtesy would still demand that smokers abstain in close quarters, as must people with other disgusting habits, such as cranking up their '70s Disco Hits CD. Unfortunately, and perhaps unfairly, technology has not given smokers the pulmonary equivalent of earphones. (I wonder when nicotine patch companies will get around to marketing to non-smokers - all the fun of an expensive addiction without the massive organ failure).

Smokers' delusions would remain their own business if they could keep the miasma to themselves. Deep down they know this, but persist in denial. They think an open window is a generous concession, as if the sill selectively draws out all of the pollutants in the room, leaving only clean air. They think that stubbing out a butt somehow erases the smells that the cigarette left in clothes, hair and furniture while it was lit. Smoke-free dorms would move things further in the right direction, towards a community that realistically acknowledges the consequences of smoking for quality of life.

A lot of smokers feel embattled these days. They have to use designated rooms, and they get pittying looks whenever they say "I can quit whenever I want." They cling to their Big Brother paranoia and warn that laws against pork will follow. But bacon eaters can clog their own arteries to their hearts' congested content and never put a speck of plaque in anybody else's body.

On the brighter side, over the last two decades some old delusions have lost their hold. Denial of the link between cancer and smoking now appears limited to major stock holders in Philip Morris. And judging by the decline in litter, smoker sensibility has markedly improved. In the old days people thought that cigarette butts and pop can tabs disappeared on contact with the ground.

If the expense, bad-smelling hair, stained teeth, short breath and short lifespans don't discourage smokers, that's their own business. What the rest of us have to live with in a dorm or public place is everybody's business. With the end of designated smoking rooms, smokers suffer no more inconvenience than people who have always had to take certain activities elsewhere. Dorms never had indoor space set aside for launching model rockets, and polite woodworking hobbyists wouldn't use power saws in Smokers will be able to live with a dorm ban — maybe even a little longer than they would live without it.

UI politics fueling IWP crisis

The news of the shattering of the IWP has reached across the UI campus, across the city, across lowa, and across the globe. As there are undeniable intimidation practices subduing the UI faculty and professors from voicing their outrage and concerns, much of the disappointment and, to be blunt, anger, is only internalized and

I am writing on behalf of those who cannot, for fear of retaliation by the administration. I have worked with the IWP as a work-study student and therefore have the knowledge of the program and its functions that many administrators, who only see things in dollars and cents, seem to lack. I am outraged at the hasty decisions of Dean Linda Maxson, who obviously does not know the facts about the IWP or its finances, functions, prestige or impact on the UI and the community.

The IWP has been nominated for a Nobel Peace Prize for its outstanding international outreach and importance. The program is without a doubt one of the UI's most precious programs; the sabotage of the program has been a disgrace to both the UI and its administrators. Maxson's actions have proven only her ignorance and illwill toward the program.

Yet we don't see the provost, the president, the alumni or other officials taking any steps to remedy this unfortunate situation. Why would the officials let such an important program for the UI, the community and the world suffocate and die? Let's be honest: Funding is not the problem. Priorities are the problem

I feel ashamed to have gone to a university whose internal politics deny the students, faculty and surrounding community diversity and awareness. I feel ashamed to have attended a university that employs intimidating and uninformed deans and superiors who make hasty decisions about programs and issues of such vital impor-

Irish talks adjourn without accord

■ Talks aimed at trying to save the Good Friday agreement and form a historic government have hit a snag.

> By Shawn Pogatchnik Associated Press

BELFAST, Northern Ireland -With two key parties sticking to incompatible positions, Northern Ireland's rival politicians adjourned talks early this morning after failing to reach an agreement on forming the historic Protestant-Catholic government.

The politicians, however, said they would return after a few hours of sleep to continue efforts to salvage last year's landmark Good Friday accord.

British Prime Minister Tony Blair had set a midnight Wednesday deadline, but all sides kept pushing to bring together the Protestants of the Ulster Unionists and Catholics of the IRAlinked Sinn Fein party.

The talks passed their 18th straight hour at Stormont, center of British administration in Northern Ireland, before negotiators quit for the night, without the publication of a long-awaited report by the disarmament commission established under the accord.

The report would formally assess the prospects for winning the gradual disarmament of the

Despite mounting pressure from both Blair and Irish Prime Minister Bertie Ahern since the latest talks began Monday, Sinn Fein was refusing to give any firm assurance that the outlawed group would start to disarm by any fixed date.

The Ulster Unionists, chief representative of Northern Ireland's British Protestant majority, have Indeed, their position remained that the Irish Republican Army must start disarming at the same time as the government's formation. The Ulster Unionist leader, David Trimble, has already been elected to lead the government.

"We ought, in the words of the leader of Sinn Fein-IRA, Gerry Adams, jump together," said Ulster Unionist deputy leader John Taylor, who was shot 16 times in the face and body by an IRA assailant in 1972.

While Iowa City experienced slow but steady growth, Coralville has undergone rapid growth and development throughout the decade. It has seen a vast extension in business and housing, helping to attract more residents.

"The overall quality of life is increasing and driving the population growth," said Lanny Vandaele, a member of the 2000 Census Committee.

The key reasons for the growth were Coral Ridge Mall, a new elementary school and improved infrastructure and design, he

"Housing in Coralville is cheaper than in Iowa City, while still maintaining quality," Vandaele said. "With the cheaper housing and expanding businesses and schools, the city is attracting more families."

Meanwhile, Des Moines, Waterloo and Dubuque saw decreases in population, while the cities with the biggest growth surrounded larger cities, such as Des Moines and Cedar Rapids, according to the census bureau.

The population of Cedar Rapids, Iowa's second-largest city, rose 5.3 percent, from 108,772 in 1990 to 114,563 in 1998.

Nationwide, the Census Bureau estimates that the population has increased by 8.7 percent, with the largest growth in cities having between 10,000 and 50,000 people.

Of the U.S. cities with more than 1 million people, all but Philadelphia experienced growth. Phoenix, Ariz., led the list, followed by San Antonio, Texas, San Diego, Calif., Houston and Dallas.

Gabe's marathon of music will let freedom rock

■ Firecracker 500 returns to lowa City again this weekend.

> By Jeremy Erwin The Daily Iowan

The sounds of freedom will be pouring out the doors of Gabe's this weekend, when the venue plays host to its annual music fest Firecracker 500.

Unlike in years past, when the festival boasted of mainly indie and garage bands, this year's event promises to be a truly eclectic one, with acts ranging from the country swing of Big Sandy and His Fly Rite Boys, to trash-rock favorites The New Duncan Imperials. This year's change in format was not only a very wise move, but a necessity, said Gabe's booking agent, Doug Roberson.

"With a lineup this diverse, we're able to showcase a different style of music every night, and in turn, cater to a much wider audience than in years' past," he said.

The four-day event kicks off Friday at 9 p.m. with Trolley and the Bent Scepters for openers, followed by the always entertaining headliners Big Sandy and His Fly-Rite Boys.

The festivities continue Saturday with a colossal five-band lineup that is set to include Knuckle Drager, the Chezwicks, Thee Lordy Serpents and Iowa City's very own Bassturd. Topping off the evening, dressed in its finest velour Western wear, is the New Duncan Imperials, whose act has been described by drummer Goodtime as "a definite party atmos-

Purdue basketball team slapped with two years probation

■ The Purdue Boilermakers must also give up a scholarship and limit on-campus visits.

By J.R. Ross Associated Press

Purdue was placed on probation by the NCAA today for two years for major violations involving an assistant men's basketball coach and two others close to the team.

The NCAA cut a scholarship from the team, limited recruiting visits to the school and recommended the NCAA force Purdue to pay a penalty of more than $340,000.

The Boilermakers were spared bans from postseason tournaments or restrictions on television appearances. The NCAA did not cite basketball coach Gene Keady.

"The head coach may have been involved in one secondary violation," said Oklahoma law Professor David

Swank, who chairs the NCAA Committee on Infractions. "But as far as the major violations, there was no evidence presented that he was involved in these violations in any

Purdue had no immediate comment on the NCAA sanctions. The school scheduled a news conference later today.

NCAA The

Committee Infractions said the university violated rules regarding recruiting, extra benefits and ethical conduct. There were also several secondary violations by the NCAA champion women's basketball team, though none was considered serious and no sanctions were leveled against the program.

As part of the school's penalty, the committee recommended that the NCAA force the school to repay up to 90 percent of the revenues generated from the Boilermakers' appearance in the 1996 men's NCAA tournament. Swank said that includes revenues from appearances in 1997, 1998 and 1999, a total of more than $340,000.

He said the committee also recommended Purdue collect only 10 percent of revenues from possible tournament appearances the next three Swank said a decision on that matter most likely would be delayed until next year if Purdue appeals the decision within 15 days.

Also, an assistant men's basketball coach was banned from off-campus recruiting for a year, and the Boilermakers will lose a scholarship for the 2000-01 and 2000-02 academic years, limiting the men's basketball team to 12 scholarships for those

The university will be limited to four paid recruiting campus visits during the 1999-2000 and 2000-01 seasons.

All team and individual records from the 24 games during the 1995-96 season in which an ineligible athlete participated will be vacated. That includes the NCAA tournament appearance that season.

The committee penalized Purdue, in part, for a 1995 loan that an assis-

A nice, frosty draft

Bulls take Brand in Devil of a draft

By Chris Sheridan Associated Press

WASHINGTON - All those trade scenarios, all those intricate plans that consumed Jerry Krause's life since he won the lottery a month ago turned out to be a bunch of Bull-oney.

In the end, the Chicago Bulls decided to keep their No. 1 pick and select Elton Brand, the college player of the year who left Duke after his sophomore sea-

Brand, a 6-foot-8 forward, was chosen after the Bulls took a serious last look at Rhode Island's Lamar Odom, bringing him into Chicago for a workout on the eve of the draft.

Krause went with the safer of the two picks, choosing to try to rebuild his dynasty with a solid frontcourt player.

"We considered trade offers in several directions," Krause said. "What we didn't want to do is get in a situation where we lost Elton. He's got the makeup and physical ability to be a building block for this team."

Steve Francis was chosen second by Vancouver, Baron Davis went third to Charlotte, Odom went fourth to the Los Angeles Clippers and high schooler Jonathan Bender went fifth to Toronto but will be traded to Indiana for Antonio Davis.

"I didn't know where I was going to fit in this draft. I did want to be the No. 1 pick," Brand said. "I feel I am the best player and I can improve a lot. I think I can be the cornerstone in their rebuild-Asked if he knew he would be the No. 1 overall pick, Brand said: "Not at all. I didn't have the slightest idea. I feel See DRAFT Page 28 MCI Center Wednesday just prior to the draft.

Koch headed for New York

■ The former Hawkeye will not be the only famous Koch in the Big Apple next season.

By Mike Kelly

After a long wait in the NBA draft, the New York Knicks drafted former Hawkeye J.R. Koch with the 46th overall pick in Wednesday's draft.

The 6-foot-11 forward averaged 10.4 points for the Hawkeyes last season which was second best on the team.

Koch improved his draft status immensely in three pre-draft camps. At the Portsmouth Va. camp, Koch was named to the All-Tournament team averaging nearly 20 points per game.

Draft analyst and Utah coach Rick Majerus praised Koch following his selection Wednesday.

"I really like this pick," Majerus said of Koch. "This guy reminds me of a poor man's Keith Van Horne, (a former standout at Utah, now in the NBA.) He is not afraid to stick his nose in there. He can post up and shoot threes as well."

Jess Settles, Koch's teammate at Iowa, said he believes Koch is ready to make the jump to the NBA.

"He (Koch) can run the floor very well," Settles said. "He is very quick for a guy that is 6-11. I look for him to definitely get his shot and that is all you want. Just get your foot in the door and stay as long as you can."

NEW YORK - Tony Clark hit a two-run homer into Yankee Stadium's center-field bleachers as the Detroit Tigers stopped New York's sevengame winning streak, 8-2 Wednesday.

The Yankees outhit Detroit 12-11 but stranded 15 runners, went 0-for-7 with runners in scoring position and made several physical and mental mistakes.

Second baseman Chuck Knoblauch, still having trouble with his throws, made his 15th error, tying Mike Caruso of the White Sox for second in the AL, two behind Chicago's Greg Norton. Knoblauch also was doubled off first base in the first inning but saved a run with an inning-ending throw in the second on a hard grounder that caromed off pitcher Andy Pettitte (5-6).

Brian Moehler (7-8) pitched in and out of trouble, leaving the bases loaded in the fourth and stranding two in the first, second and fifth innings. Moehler, who has won consecutive starts following a threegame losing streak, allowed two runs

Brand, 20, was the first player ever to leave Duke as an underclassman. He averaged 16.2 points and 9.8 rebounds in his final season there, leading the Blue Devils into the NCAA championship game.

Brand became the first player from Duke ever selected first overall.

"He's just an outstanding person," Krause said. "It was a very tough decision. We just came to a decision that we think Elton Brand is an outstanding player."

The Grizzlies selected and chose guard Francis, who had indicated he would be less than enthralled to play in Canada. Francis kept his head buried in his hands as his name was announced, then raised his arms in the air to a loud ovation as he walked onstage to meet commissioner David Stern.

Francis played in college at nearby Maryland, averaging 17.0 points in his only season for the Terrapins. Francis, 22, was a first-team All-ACC selection last season and was widely considered one of the most exciting college players to watch.

A shooting guard in college who was expected to be a point guard in the pros, Francis might play alongside point guard Mike Bibby with the Grizzlies.

"Hopefully, when I wake up tomorrow, I'll be happy," said Francis, who has never been to Canada. "I feel relieved now more than happy."

Davis was taken third by the Charlotte Hornets, who had said they would grab the UCLA guard if he was still available.

sophomore season in which he averaged 15.9 points and 5.1 assists while still recovering from a torn anterior cruciate ligament suffered during the 1998 NCAA tournament.

Instead of getting Davis, who they wanted, the Clippers landed Odom, the 6-foot-10 phenom who so intrigued Krause.

The 19-year-old Odom had one of the most bizarre pre-draft existences of anyone, making himself eligible, hiring and then firing an agent, trying to get reinstated at Rhode Island and then missing a pre-draft physical before NBA scouts in Chicago.

Those were only the latest travails involving Odom, who attended three high schools during his senior season and planned to enroll at UNLV before the validity of his entrance exam scores were brought into question.

"Some decisions I made may not have been the best at that time," Odom said. "I'm 19 years old. I'm thankful I didn't make those mistakes when I'm 29 and it's too Davis, 20, left the Bruins after 17.6 points, 9.4 rebounds and 3.7 assists - numbers that had many player personnel directors calling him the most talented all-around player available.

Toronto, selecting fifth, took the rail-thin, 205-pound Bender of Picayune, Miss., who scored 31 points in the McDonald's All-American game, breaking Jordan's record by one.

The Raptors have already worked out a trade with Indiana that will send Bender to the Pacers in exchange for Davis. The trade will be formally announced Aug. 1, Davis' agent said.

Bender, 6-foot-10, was chosen higher than any high school entrant since Kevin Garnett, who went fifth overall to Minnesota in Wally Szczerbiak went sixth to the Minnesota Timberwolves, becoming the first senior selected in this draft. In 1997 and 1998, seniors were the top picks overall. The Wolves acquired the sixth pick from New Jersey in the Stephon Marbury trade.

Szczerbiak, 22, a 6-7 small forward with NBA 3-point range and At Rhode Island, he averaged a strong all-around game, is one of three collegians who have been added to the U.S. national team that will compete in July for a qualifying berth in the 2000 Olympics.

The others are Brand and Richard Hamilton, a shooting guard from Connecticut who was chosen seventh by the Washington Wizards - much to the delight of the hometown crowd.

Hamilton, 21, left Connecticut after a junior season in which he averaged 21.5 points and led the Huskies to the national title.

Last fall, athletic director Morgan Burke said Purdue found no evidence to support allegations about the loan. But the NCAA found the loan was unsecured, given to a player with no credit history and lacked a cosigner.

The NCAA began a preliminary inquiry with interviews at the school in the summer of 1997 and expanded it in March 1998.

By that time, Purdue had already disciplined assistant coach Frank Kendrick for meeting with then-recruit Jamaal Davis in the summer of 1996 during a period when coaches are barred from contact with recruits.

Kendrick was fined an undisclosed sum and forbidden to recruit off campus for 10 days during the official recruiting period that began in November 1996.

The NCAA, which did not mention Kendrick by name in the report, said an assistant coach involved in the recruiting violations would be subject to NCAA "show-cause" requirements for one year. The penalty allows the committee to determine whether the individual's athletic duties should be limited for a specified

In December 1996, Burke said Keady and Kendrick inadvertently violated NCAA rules by making 15 telephone calls to Davis, who later signed with the Boilermakers, but did not play as a freshman because of academic ineligibility. Davis played in 12 games as a sophomore last season, then quit the team in

Big Ten endures difficult week

■ Big Ten Commissioner Jim Delaney said he has had better weeks.

> By Hal Bock Associated Press

Say this much for the Big Ten Conference: Six of its 11 schools are halfway through the week without any bad news. That's more than can be said for the other five.

"I've had better weeks," Big Ten Commissioner Jim Delany said Wednesday.

He spoke as Purdue's basketball program was placed on probation for two years by the NCAA. Purdue lost a scholarship and had recruiting visits limited as a result of major violations involving an assistant coach and two others close to the team.

This came just days after coach Clem Haskins took a $1.5 million buyout to leave Minnesota as the university begins to rebuild from an academic fraud scandal involving its basketball team.

Three other schools - Michigan State, Michigan and Iowa have players in trouble.

Report: Stevenson's father is Julius Erving

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) Alexandra Stevenson, an 18-year-old from San Diego, has made a startling debut Wimbledon, advancing to the quarterfinals amid controversy involving sex, race and money. Now the issue of her parentage has been raised.

A copy of Stevenson's birth certificate printed by The Fort Lauderdale Sun-Sentinel on Wednesday, lists the father as Julius Winfield Erving II - the same formal name of basketball great Julius "Dr. J" Erving.

Dr. J

The certificate gives the child's name as Alexandra Winfield Stevenson, born Dec. 15, 1980, and was filed Jan. 7, 1981, in San Diego.

Asked if Stevenson was his daughter, Erving told the paper, "No."

"I have four children," he said, listing the names of three sons and a daughter. He and wife Turquoise have been married since 1972.

Tour reluctantly readmits Virenaue

PARIS — The Tour de France reluctantly lifted its drug- related ban on rider Richard Virenque on Wednesday, but general director Jean-Marie Leblanc said there will be a legal fight to restore the suspension.

The world's most prestigious cycling race was ordered by the International Cycling Union on Tuesday to allow Virenque to race.

Although Leblanc' said the order will be obeyed, he called it a "takeover by force, three days before the start of the Tour de France.

"We have been prevented from leading our rehabilitation (of the Tour)," he said.

Ausmus suspension cut to one game

NEW YORK - Brad Ausmus' suspension for "aggressive arguing" with an umpire was reduced from two games to one by American League president Gene Budig, and the Detroit catchsat out Wednesday's game against the New York

Budig left in place the $500 fine against Ausmus. He eliminated the $500 fine against Detroit manager Larry Parrish but left intact his two-game suspension. Parrish will miss games at Minnesota on Friday and Saturday. Budig, who heard the appeals Tuesday, imposed the original penalties June 7, saying Ausmus and Parrish were too aggressive when they argued with umpire Chuck Meriwether on May

As McGee's career winds down and he spends more time on the bench watching the game and bouncing ideas off Tony La

Russa, he's getting a feel for what it would be like to be in charge La Russa gives him an unqualified endorsement, and McGee is intrigued. "I don't see myself doing it, but this man has been doing it for a long time and that makes me feel good that he thinks I'm capable of doing it," the 40-yea-old said. "I love the game, in any capacity. Whether it's coaching, playing, whatever it is.'

It's free agent time in the NHL

■ Theo Fleury, Valeri Kamensky and Pat Verbeek all could switch teams this during this off-season.

Associated Press

Another NHL season opens Thursday. No, not the race for the Stanley Cup, the race for freeagent dollars.

Such players as Colorado's Theo

Fleury and Valeri Kamensky and Pat Verbeek of the champion Dallas Stars will be able to sign with any team with the passing of the midnight deadline Wednesday.

They are part of this pensation to the former team. The restricted free agents are summer's unrestricted free-agent crop, meaning they can sign with any team in the NHL without com-player, the penalty is steep: up to five first-round draft choices, depending on the amount of salary offered the player. In this case, the former team has the right to match the offer sheet presented to the

Among those in this elite "Group II" crop are Anaheim forward Paul Kariya and Detroit defenseman Nicklas Lidstrom.

It should otherwise be open season for NHL teams looking for that key player and missing ingredient. Such as Brett Hull, who joined the Stars after coming over from St. Louis last summer.

Except there are no Hulls available this time. Or even a Ron Francis or Curtis Joseph.

Those three signed with new teams last summer in a big year for big-name free agents.

Fleury, who was traded from Calgary to Colorado just before the trading deadline in March, is the biggest name in a less glamorous crop this time. Fleury scored 93 points in the 1998-99 season from 40 goals and 53 assists.

Fleury figures to be one of the big winners this summer, expected ed $2.4 million salary he earned this past season.

The New York Rangers may be interested, among other teams. Wayne Gretzky, who retired at the end of the season after playing three years in New York, said he had recently done some lobbying with Fleury for his former team.

"Now it's up to the Rangers," Gretzky added.

The Rangers have already kept two of their top players out of the free-agent market by re-signing defenseman Brian Leetch and forward Adam Graves. Mark Recchi was another big-name player who re-signed with his team, the Philadelphia Flyers.

Some of the other unrestricted free agents available: defensemen Ulf Samuelsson of Atlanta, Steve Duchesne of Philadelphia and Washington's Mark Tinordi; forwards Joe Murphy of San Jose, New Jersey's Dave Andreychuk, Joe Juneau of Buffalo, and Craig Janney of the New York Islanders; and goaltenders Kirk McLean of Florida, Ken Wregget of Calgary, and Washington's Rick Tabaracci.
