Supremacist kills self after spree

■ A member of a white racist organization was wanted in connection with a two-state, race-motivated shooting spree.

By James Prichard
Associated Press

SALEM, Ill. — A white supremacist suspected of targeting minorities in a deadly two-state drive-by shooting spree committed suicide by shooting himself three times as officers pursued him.

Benjamin Nathaniel Smith, 21, led officers on a slow-speed pursuit late Sunday after he ditched his blue Ford Taurus and carjacked a minivan at gunpoint at a gas station in the southern Illinois town of Ina, Marion County Sheriff Gerald L. Benjamin said.

The woman who was driving the minivan and her 13-year-old daughter escaped without injury.

Shortly after entering Salem, about 35 miles north of Ina, Smith shot himself under the chin. The minivan then went off the left side of the road and hit a small, abandoned building, causing the air bag to inflate.

Smith refused officers' orders to put his hands up, so several entered the van. As he struggled with five sheriff's deputies and police officers who tried to subdue him, Smith shot himself in the chest and leg. None of the officers fired, and Smith didn't appear to shoot at them, police said.

He was still combative even after being handcuffed and put in an ambulance but said nothing, police said. He bled to death from the chest wound a short time later in a hospital.

"I'm glad it's over," Benjamin said. "I feel sorry for his parents and the victims and their relatives. I don't know what caused this, but it's very sad."

Hate crimes not likely here, most say

■ Residents agree that Iowa City won't see hate crimes.

By Heather Pavnica
The Daily Iowan

In light of a recent shooting spree in two states that was racially motivated, some UI students and faculty say they don't foresee similar occurrences in Iowa City.

Not much racial tension occurs in Iowa City, said Joe Coulter, director of Opportunity at Iowa, a group that recruits minority students.

"Iowa City is a pretty hostile environment to things like that," he said. "You aren't going to find a lot of groups like that in Iowa City."

But though groups devoted to committing hate crimes may not be prevalent in the area, they probably do exist, said Robert Baron, a UI psychology professor. Baron, who is Jewish, said he has received hate phone calls because of his religion.

"Iowa City is no different from any place else," he said. "Of course there are white supremacist groups at the UI."

Life goes on, on Broadway

■ Criminal activity is being tackled in various ways by the city and the police department.

By Steve Schmadeke
The Daily Iowan

Iowa City residents were surprised last summer, when drug arrests, a drive-by shooting and gang activity surfaced in the Broadway area.

A year later, the area is dotted with children riding bicycles or playing.

However, the city's residents and officials say gang-related incidents are cropping up in different parts of town.

"I think we've seen a dramatic improvement," said Iowa City police Sgt. Vicki Lalla. "But that doesn't mean the problem is gone — it just means it has gone underground."

Criminals leave one neighborhood only to continue their activities in the next, Lalla said. This means crime in Iowa City has spread out, so "we go where the action is," she said.

"I'm not going to say we've totally eradicated gang activity," Lalla said. "But we've made a statement that we're not going to tolerate gang activity or behavior that is a blight on the community."

IWP petition draws large response

■ More than 300 signatures in support of the program will be included in the petition to be sent to the governor.

By Jill Barnard
The Daily Iowan

Over the Fourth of July weekend, more than 300 people signed a petition calling for the restoration of the UI International Writing Program. The petition will be sent to Gov. Tom Vilsack this week.

Former IWP employee Lemuel Torreallas and UI graduate student Mike Savitz helped to gather the signatures and support on the Pedestrian Mall on the evening of July 2.

"I was reading the articles in the paper, and it looked as though there was a real injustice being done," Savitz said. "I just thought I'd contribute a few hours to the cause."

Included in their display was a large copy of the petition with the three requests Torreallas believes are necessary to save the IWP and a list of reasons justifying them.

The petition asks that the program be removed from the authority of the dean of the College of Liberal Arts, put in a special UI division that recognizes its values and traditions, and placed in the hands of a capable director.

On May 25, Linda Maxson, dean of the College of Liberal Arts, put the 32-year-old IWP on "hiatus."

Although the July 2 display was modest, the petition drew an enthusiastic response; Iowa City resident Tim Banse said this didn't surprise him.

"You could literally talk for an hour about the benefits the program brings," he said. "I think to get rid of the IWP is very shortsighted."

He came to sign the petition because he disagreed with the UI over the handling of "valuable programs" such as the IWP, Banse said.

"The UI wastes so much money everywhere," he said. "I find it lamentable that it would shut down a program of this caliber, and yet it is buying $40,000 and $60,000 sport utility vehicles when a $16,000 one would do the job."

Savitz said he also was disturbed by

Rally to protest sprawling Iowa City

■ Some Johnson County residents say their land and lives are threatened by urban expansion.

By George Hild
The Daily Iowan

With urban sprawl threatening some Johnson County residents' rural way of life, a last-ditch effort against the building of houses and roads has been scheduled for today.

The residents have planned to gather at the intersection of Prairie du Chien and Newport roads today at 11 a.m. to protest the $1.3 million project to rebuild Prairie du Chien Road from Newport Road south to the Interstate 80 overpass.

The community hopes to persuade the county Board of Supervisors to reconsider the construction.

The development, meanwhile, is also scheduled to begin today after months of planning and consideration by the supervisors.

The areas have been zoned as residential since 1960, so this gives the board no choice but to continue developing, said Supervisor Sally Stutsman.

"It's already zoned, it's going to be developed — there's nothing we can do about it," she said. "The only responsible thing to do is make sure it's safe."

The design for the development has the least impact on residents and nature in the area, Stutsman said.

"People don't understand ... they think we want to tear up the ground and tear down trees," she said. "That's not the case."

But Elmer Hahn, Newport Township clerk, disagrees that the board has the community's best interests at heart.

"The Board of Supervisors only cares about money and tax revenue," he said. "It doesn't care about the human side of its work, only with the money it makes."

Hahn said the plan for the protest has generated solid community support but despairs over its timing.

"This is something that we should have organized many years ago, when it was still in the works," he said. "Now that the bulldozers are coming, it's far too late."

Hahn's sentiments are shared by Another big anti-Milosevic protest rocks Yugoslavia

■ As tensions rise, Moscow reaches an agreement with NATO on Russian deployments in Kosovo.

By Donna Bryson
Associated Press

PRISTINA, Yugoslavia — Up to 10,000 chanting protesters took to the streets in a southern Serbian town Monday — the latest sign of growing anger at President Slobodan Milosevic's government.

Moscow and NATO, meanwhile, reached a deal that opens the way for more Russian troops to deploy in Kosovo as part of the peacekeeping force there.

Russia had sought to change an agreement reached in Helsinki, Finland, last month defining where its troops would deploy in Kosovo, hoping to give its troops wider freedom to operate.

The dispute further strained relations between Moscow and the alliance. NATO blocked Russian transport planes from flying more paratroopers to Kosovo Sunday by persuading Hungary, Romania and Bulgaria to deny permission to fly through their airspace.

NATO's supreme commander, Gen. Wesley Clark, told the Associated Press that Monday's agreement kept more or less the same guidelines laid out in the Helsinki deal. The Russians will patrol in parts of the American, German and French sectors.

NATO said Monday that approximately 29,000 troops have so far arrived in the province for the peacekeeping mission, which is due to reach 50,000 peacekeeping troops overall.

Russia is to send 3,600 troops. Around 750 Russian paratroopers have been deployed at Slatina airport near Kosovo's capital, Pristina.

The peacekeepers' control of Kosovo is one of the factors that has fueled Serb anger at Milosevic's government — on top of the destruction wrought by NATO's 78-day air campaign.

Uses of peanut butter

- Mix it with egg whites and ammonia to see if it takes out stains.
 - Squish it between your fingers in the lunch-room muttering. "Only two more hours, and I have so much left to study ..."
 - Plug holes in your paneling walls.
 - Make sure you have some stuck in your fingernails whenever you go on a blind date.
 - Carry it around in your duffel in case of emergencies.
 - Use it to stick things if you run out of duct tape.
 - Keep a jar in your car because it rhymes.
 - Have the astronauts leave some of it in orbit.
 - Rub it on sore muscles.
 - Make "cream of peanut butter" soup.
 - Mix it with a large amount of brown sugar. Form into small spheres. Set on cookie sheet and leave on counter as if cooling.
 - Take one bite, then chew for several minutes to see if anyone notices. If not, keep chewing. After half an hour try to talk.
 - Put it in the bell of your brass instrument to make interesting new sounds. Try different amounts.
 - Fill a swimming pool with it and hang a "basket" on the edge. Get all your friends together to play "Killer B-Ball."

2 Live Crew rapper charged with battery

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Rapper Luther Campbell was charged with aggravated battery Monday after he allegedly struck a man in the face with a whiskey bottle at a nightclub.

Police said the former front man of 2 Live Crew became angry when a man and his friends blocked the rapper's view of a show at Club Zen early Monday.

Campbell began arguing with Mathieu Fabrice, then smashed a bottle of Jack Daniel's whiskey against his face, said Lt. John DiCenso of the Miami Beach Police Department.

Fabrice suffered cuts and a possible broken nose.

Campbell was taken to Miami-Dade County Jail and later released.

Campbell gained notoriety nine years ago when he was acquitted of giving an obscene performance at a south Florida nightclub after a federal judge declared 2 Live Crew's "As Nasty As They Wanna Be" album obscene.

The boy weighed 8 pounds, 4 ounces and was 20 inches long.

LONDON (AP) — The rock group Eurythmics staged a mini-concert Monday on the River Thames to announce the band's first major tour in 10 years, which will benefit Greenpeace and Amnesty International.

Appropriately, band members Annie Lennox and Dave Stewart performed their short set on the Rainbow Warrior II, a Greenpeace vessel.

"We are so proud to be here. This is a very noble boat," Lennox told the crowd that gathered to watch the show in the shadow of Tower Bridge.

Lennox and Stewart, whose biggest hit was 1983's "Sweet Dreams (Are Made of This)," began work on a new album last year, almost a decade after drifting apart.

The pair plan to encourage their audience to pledge at least $16 to Greenpeace and Amnesty International.

Cancer Center researchers to study new treatment for lymphoma

Cancer Center researchers will begin a series of studies to determine the effectiveness of a new treatment for lymphoma. The investigation follows a modified theme on a well-founded cancer-fighting tactic: using the body to heal the body.

"We know that our body uses antibodies to fight infection, so researchers have worked hard over the past two to three decades trying to manipulate the immune system to use monoclonal antibodies to fight cancer," said Brian Link, an assistant professor of internal medicine. Monoclonal antibodies are protein components of the immune system designed to attack and destroy tumors expressing specific molecules.

In 1997 the Food and Drug Administration approved the use of Rituxan, the first monoclonal antibody seen as effective in treating certain types of cancer, specifically lymphoma. Experiments with Rituxan were done at the UI and other centers.

Since that time, two monoclonal antibodies have been approved for different types of cancer, and researchers continue to look for ways to expand on these early successes.

The outlook for the study is positive, Link said, but he noted that if the treatment is not effective, the gain will be measured in terms of the lessons learned during the research that bring investigators closer to a more effective drug for lymphoma.

"This project highlights the fact that the UI Cancer Center is a multi-dimensional institution that has the ability to take high quality research from the laboratory bench all the way to the bedside," Link said.

Superintendent interviews begin

■ Closed sessions with the School Board will continue until Friday, when two or three finalists will be introduced to the public.

By Gil Levy
The Daily Iowan

The five semi-finalists for the Iowa City School District superintendent's position are scheduled to begin interviewing today.

Iowa City School Board member Cindy Parsons said the board will conduct interviews all week in closed sessions to keep the candidates' identities confidential.

Board member Matt Goodlaxson said three community representatives will be allowed at the sessions for outside input. They will include members of the Iowa City Chamber of Commerce and the Districtwide Parents Organization, and a local teacher.

Last week, the candidates' résumés, references and letters of introduction were given to the board by the Bickert Group, a search firm hired to select the superintendent.

The information about some semi-finalists included facts about their districts, Goodlaxson said.

"I want to keep an incredibly open mind until I see the entire package," he said. "They each will have their own presentation styles."

Parsons agreed that it was important to wait to reveal the names of the candidates until the personal interviews were complete but added that so far, she likes what she has seen.

"If all the candidates do as well with personal interviews as on paper, then we'll have a hard time choosing one," she said. "It's good though — we're very pleased with the candidates."

Interviews will run through Friday, when the board will return to an open session and introduce two or three finalists.

At that point, the identities, qualifications and backgrounds of the candidates will be public information.

Three rounds of interviews — one with the board and two with community groups — are tentatively scheduled for each finalist. Also scheduled is a public forum, at which the community will have the chance to meet and question the finalists.

UIHC ties up with Marengo

The UI Hospitals and Clinics began an affiliation with Marengo Memorial Hospital on July 1.

The UIHC plans to hire a chief executive officer for Marengo as part of the new two-part contract. Michael Trachta, a UIHC administrative fellow, is a good candidate for the position, said Dean Borg, UIHC director of information.

He added that Trachta has served as the unofficial CEO of the hospital as part of an educational experience.

The new contract formalizes the assistance UIHC has given to Marengo over the past several months, Borg said.

The 30-patient hospital has not had a CEO since spring 1998 but did well without leadership, Trachta said. "They need a central leader," he said.

GOP voters stress values, poll says

■ While Republican voters look at a candidate's morals, Democrats are more likely to value issues and experience.

Associated Press

DES MOINES — Republican voters likely to attend the Iowa caucuses put more emphasis on a presidential candidate's moral values than do Democrats, who mostly focus on issues and experience, according to a new Iowa Poll.

Among Iowans who plan to attend the GOP precinct caucuses early next year, 39 percent say moral character and personal values are more important to them in selecting a candidate than the candidate's experience and stands on issues.

For 33 percent, experience and issues matter more. An additional 27 percent say those factors are equal in importance to a candidate's moral compass, and 1 percent are unsure, according to the poll in Monday's Des Moines Register.

Opinions tilt the other way among likely Democratic caucus participants, with just 16 percent saying moral character and personal values are more important. A strong majority of 65 percent say experience and issues matter more.

Seventeen percent gave equal weight to morals and issues and 2 percent are unsure, the poll said.

The Iowa Poll, conducted for the Register by Selzer & Co. Inc. in Des Moines, is based on interviews with registered Iowa voters who say they definitely or probably will attend the Iowa caucuses.

Interviewers contacted 403 Democrats and 397 Republicans by using randomly selected telephone numbers for registered voters. Percentages based on the full Republican and Democrat samples have a maximum margin of error of plus or minus 4.9 percentage points.

Plucking idiocy from the jaws of culture

And so we go sliding into July. And sliding seems to be the apt word, given these humidity levels that only a jungle could love.

It's times like this that you look around at the 1,000 square miles of corn surrounding you, and you watch the temperature and the humidity race each other to the 100 mark, and you think, Thank god I never learned to drive a nail straight. Otherwise, I'd be working construction and losing 10 pounds a day out on some damn roofing job.

Things slow down here in the summer. Maybe you've noticed. Once the Arts Fest and the Jazz Fest trundle through, there's not a whole lot to look forward to except August, and August is going to be just like this, only hotter. And more humid. I'll bet you can hardly wait.

There's the summer crop of movies, I suppose. Unfortunately, the best thing about summer movies is that the cinemas are air-conditioned. With a couple of exceptions — the new Spike Lee movie, the new Stanley Kubrick movie — summer movies are depressingly similar: They spend $167 million on special effects, which become less and less special with each showing, and a buck-50 on the writing.

So thank god for Dean Linda Maxson. With perhaps an assist from President Mary Sue Coleman. They saw a long, dull, dripping summer looming and leaped in with some much-needed comic relief. Leaped in with both feet firmly in mouth, you might say.

I'm speaking, of course, of the International Writing Program fiasco. Here you have a globally renowned program, famous in such diverse places as Germany, Argentina, China, Finland — the list goes on. And on.

I have some first-hand knowledge of the IWP's reach. In Berlin, I attended a reading by the famous Slovene poet Tomaz Salamun, an IWP alumnus.

The Berlin writing community treated me like a star simply because I was from Iowa City, home of the IWP. Similarly in Bremen, where one of the famous local writers, Michael Augustin, is also an IWP alum. And back in Berlin, one of my friends was the leading Bloodaxe poet John Hartley Williams, who thought I was one of the luckiest people alive because I come from the community that had hatched the IWP. When Clark Blaise read in Berlin, the writing community turned out in force, because he was the IWP director at the time. The program spread the name of the UI across the globe in a way that the medical school, the law school or the engineering school never will.

So what does Maxson do with a one-of-a-kind program such as the IWP?

Naturally, she closes it down. In a true bit of Nixon-speak, she claims that it's not closed down, but you'd be hard pressed to find it these days. The IWP "needed a more structured academic component to justify its resources. It needed to be more involved with the academic mission of the university" is what Maxson said. Whatever that bit of gobbley-gook means.

The whole thing smacks of corporate-style bean counters unable or unwilling to understand what true quality is. This has been a depressing hallmark of American society since the days of Reagan. The only thing that matters is the bottom line.

We've come to expect this sort of idiocy from such behemoths as IBM and AT&T. But to see it in a university — especially a school that wants to pretend it's one of the 10-best public universities in the nation — bespeaks an intellectual vacuity that is stunning. Whatever rep the university has, has been based on being an intellectual and cultural oasis in the middle of the cornfields, and the Writers' Workshop and the IWP have been at the forefront of this reputation. To summarily kill the IWP — and to do it in what smacks of a midnight raid over the Memorial Day weekend — makes you think that the administration is basically brain-dead. Someone please turn off the life-support machines before they turn the UI into Iowa State.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

I.C. not doing enough to prevent underage drinking

In response to the article concerning the steps local people are taking to combat the problem of underage drinking in Iowa City ("Bars reject criticism on alcohol policy", DI, June 17), I just want to say that sh#@ sells and the Iowa City City Council and local bar owners are good at shoveling it. Ryan Rooney, manager of the Union Bar, which admits underage patrons, said, "We take every measure we can to curb binge and underage drinking."

Surely his bar cannot be making that much money off the 19- and 20-year-olds who are admitted, because they are not old enough to drink, and his establishment would not experience decreased alcohol sales if they were not admitted. The reality is that if you walk into the Union Bar on any given night, you encounter many people who you know are under 21 with drinks in their hands.

Most of these people have had older friends purchase the drinks for them, and therefore the bar owners say it is not their responsibility because they check for hand stamps designating that the purchaser is of legal age at the bar.

But by allowing minors to place themselves into a situation in which alcohol consumption is one of the primary activities and in which peer pressure to consume is at its highest, bar operators such as Rooney who say they try to prevent underage drinking directly contradict themselves.

I do not, however, place most of the blame for this problem on bar operators. After all, they are just trying to maximize their profits within the limits of the law. The problem of underage drinking in local bars can be directly linked to our City Council here in Iowa City. The council does a good job of pretending that it is concerned about this problem by holding its little meetings and by encouraging groups with catchy names such as "Stepping Up." Has the council ever considered that ending this problem would be as simple as passing an ordinance that would allow no minors into drinking establishments after 9 or 10 p.m.?

The council recognizes that underage drinking tickets are a great cash cow for the city of Iowa City. Everyone knows that if all the bars in this town only admitted 21-year-olds, there would be fewer underage drinkers to ticket, and that is why the council has chosen to keep this corrupt system of bars admitting underage patrons in place.

Many underage people who would otherwise go to bars may choose to drink in other places. But if the bar owners and the city were really serious about reducing the rate of underage drinking in downtown Iowa City establishments, they would have taken some of the steps I mentioned.

White is wrong about Constitutional amendments

Adam White's statement that the proposed amendment to ban flag desecration is "blatantly unconstitutional" ("GOP asleep when reading Constitution", DI, June 30) is blatantly incorrect. If White's statement were true, the U.S. Constitution could never be modified because no one could ever propose changes. Fortunately, however, Article V of the Constitution allows precisely for such amendments, and indeed a strength of our Constitution is that it allows for revisions. While constitutional amendments do not occur often, those that are passed by both houses of Congress as well as three-fourths of the states are just as binding and legitimate as the rest of the Constitution.

Any questions? Ask Vinny — during his visiting hours

Ever since I declared my candidacy for president of the United States, concerned citizens have been asking me: "Dave, why don't you also run for U.S. senator from New York?"

This is tempting. I live in Florida, but apparently New York has very lax residency requirements, such that anybody who has ever changed planes at LaGuardia Airport can run for senator. Exhibit A, of course, is first lady Hillary "Rod" M. Clinton, who recently developed an intense lifelong commitment to New York, which she demonstrated by putting on a Yankees hat and declaring that she has been "a huge Yankees fan ever since they won the 1957 Super Bowl."

That is a strong credential, but I have a stronger one: I was actually born and raised in Armonk, N.Y., and after college I worked in New York City for two years, during which I commuted on subway cars containing an estimated 17 million other New Yorkers packed together so tightly that you would sometimes discover, when you got home, that you were wearing somebody else's underwear. So I know what New York needs: It needs for everybody to wear deodorant. If I were elected senator, I would introduce a law requiring specially trained Armpit Police to patrol the subways armed with high-pressure fire extinguishers full of Right Guard. Also, I favor the death penalty for Donald Trump. Rod M. Clinton has not even MENTIONED these issues.

So if New York wants to elect me as senator, fine, but I am not giving up my presidential campaign, which is starting to look highly professional. Not only do I have an official Web site — <http://www.herald.com/davebarry/> — featuring an actual unretouched photograph of me apparently looking directly at Monica Lewinsky's butt, but I also now have an official press secretary. His name is Vincent "Vinny" Setala, and if I had to summarize, in once sentence, the reason I selected him, that sentence would be: "He's in jail."

I am not making this up. Back in January, when I first talked about running for president, Vinny sent me a letter from Halawa Prison in Aiea, Hawaii, offering to be my vice president. I had to turn him down for that position, because the vice president's job is to attend funerals for foreign heads of state, and Vinny would be limited to funerals held inside Halawa Prison. But Vinny makes a perfect press secretary, because he's not allowed to talk directly to anybody but his lawyer. So when the press wants to ask me some pesky trick question, such as what my opinion is, I can just say: "You'll have to ask my press secretary about that." Then they'll have to figure out how to reach Vinny. Their best bet would be tunneling.

Meanwhile, the presidential race has been heating up. On the Democratic side, front-runner Al Gore, continuing his effort to "loosen up" his stiff image, recently had both of his feet tattooed to look like wingtips. On the Republican side, the clear front-runner is George W. Bush, who has capitalized on the huge name-recognition advantage he enjoys as the son of a respected and admired former president, Gerald Ford. But Bush could be hurt by the persistent tales of his wild youth; one rumor, which I will not dignify by repeating, is that there is a photograph floating around somewhere showing George W. dancing naked on a bar. In fact, the Democrats were planning to use this against George, but then they found out that the person he's dancing with is Tipper Gore.

But so what? This is 1999! Who CARES what these two consenting adults did, in private, back in 1997! It's ancient history! The American public wants to stop wallowing in the gutter and talk about the ISSUES, darn it! I would say, based on reading my mail, that the No. 1 issue among voters right many residents, who feel that their rural way of life is steadily being changed with urban expansion.

Some residents have little hope that the protest will be beneficial. "We are slowly but surely losing our rural way of life because of urban sprawl and development," said Sarah Uthoff, a Newport Road resident.

For Orianna Haman, who resides at the intersection of Prairie du Chien and Newport roads, the issue isn't whether she can get into town faster but how the construction will impact her land.

"We've lived here for 50 years, and we love this land," she said. "Once it's bulldozed and covered with concrete, you can't go back."

There were expressions of unhappiness over the attitudes of the new residents, too. "Dealing with their condescending attitudes is almost worse than losing our land," Uthoff said. "They all seem to want a city living in the country, and that really changes things around here."

Such changes could include higher property taxes, increased traffic and relocation for the residents.

We are slowly but surely losing our rural way of life because of urban sprawl and development.

— Sarah Uthoff, Newport Road resident

The attitude associated with urban sprawl also affects the use of land, Uthoff said.

"The city people convert all the farmland and only use it at night when they come home to sleep," she said.

Despite the prevailing disposition of defeat and resignation, some residents are convinced the protest will be worthwhile.

"We want to raise awareness about urban sprawl and show that it's not only happening here but all across Johnson County," said Becky Soglin, a Prairie du Chien resident.

The protesters would also like to work together to play a larger role in future community affairs, Hahn said.

"The farmers need to have a voice, and this protest will help to foster it," he said.

people might commit a hate crime or become members of a hate group, Baron said.

They could have a severe mental disorders, they could have been raised in a subculture that approves of that type of attitude or they could be thumbing their noses at society, he said.

"They could be saying, 'I'm not like the rest of you sheep, I'm different, I'm special,'" Baron said.

Ali Barghouthi, president of the UI Islamic Studies group, said he hears hateful comments on the streets about women who wear veils or men who have long beards.

"I do have a beard; they make fun of it," he said, "Sometimes I hear, 'Hey, Abe Lincoln.'" Though he is aware of comments, Barghouthi, too, said he doesn't think Iowa City has many hate crimes.

"Sporadic violence is always there," he said. "But I'd be surprised if organized hate group crimes would happen in Iowa City."

The UI Student Government has a policy stating that all student groups must not exclude any type of student, said UISG President Lana Zak. This includes ensuring that all groups — regardless of racial focus — are open to all students, including Barghouthi's Islamic Studies group.

the UI's move on the IWP.

"It seems like the intentions of the administration are destructive toward this program," he said.

UI grad students Dapeng Li and Yiyun Li said they had no direct involvement with the IWP but said they were familiar with it because of its fame in China, their homeland.

"Before we came here, all we knew about Iowa was the IWP."

They said the UI was making a mistake by putting IWP on hiatus.

"It's a place for writers from all over the world to come and share their opinions," Yiyun Li said. "It's something the UI should cherish."

Those who were directly involved in the program said its value was even greater than the international recognition it brought the UI. Recent UI graduate Julie Fall, who was a work-study student with the IWP for three years, said the program was one of her favorite experiences of Iowa City and the UI.

"It exposed me to foreign cultures, and I was able to meet a lot of interesting people," she said. "I would say I learned more from the IWP than from most of my classes."

Torrevillas said more than 100 people have also signed the petition posted on the Save IWP Web site, and 30 people have spoken on camera in support of the restoration.

Torrevillas said he is planning to show an IWP T-shirt such as the one he wore last weekend during the program's weekly public access television show. He added he no longer has access to the interview tapes of international writers that are normally run on the half-hour show, so he will instead display the shirt.

Supremacist commits suicide after rampage

Smith had been heading toward a crowd of about 2,000 people gathered two miles down the road for Independence Day festivities. "Our main target was to get him stopped before he got there, but fortunately he did that for us," Deputy Todd Garden said.

Two people were killed during the drive-by spree, including former Northwestern University men's basketball coach Ricky Byrdson, who was black, and a Korean student in Bloomington, Ind. At least eight others were wounded, one seriously.

Authorities said they believed Smith began his drive-by killing spree in Chicago on July 2 by wounding six Orthodox Jews leaving synagogue. Within an hour, Byrdson was shot to death in nearby Skokie and two Asian-Americans were shot at, but not hit, while driving in Northbrook.

The shooter also fired at Asians and blacks in two Illinois cities on July 3, seriously wounding one man, before the Bloomington shooting Sunday.

Authorities also believe the gunman also wounded a black minister in Decatur, Ill., on July 3, but they were waiting for ballistics tests to confirm that.

A .22-caliber handgun and a .380-caliber handgun found with Smith were consistent with the guns used in the shootings. Authorities were trying to trace the source of the weapons.

Smith was a member of the World Church of the Creator, a white-supremacist organization; he distributed anti-minority literature while a student at Indiana University.

Crimes unit goes after gangs

In May 1998, the police presence was bolstered in the Broadway area by the Special Crimes Action Team, a squad formed to combat gang activity. Grant money and funds appropriated by the Iowa City City Council made it possible to allocate six experienced Iowa City police officers to the team, said Police Chief R.J. Winkelhake.

"We're giving them (the officers) certain kinds of problems — gang activity and some basic kinds of behavior that detracts from the quality of life in Iowa City and Coralville," he said.

A recent department report said the team has made nearly 1,500 arrests, mostly for drug and alcohol violations, since its inception.

Other moves to curb crime have steadily grown. Property managers have trimmed bushes that once concealed drug dealing and put brighter lights in stairwells outside apartments. The City Council has appropriated money to renovate Wetherby Park and improve street lighting in the Broadway area.

Jerry Hansen, who lives in the area, believes the moves have reduced criminal activity because earlier "we used to have people congregating in the streets selling drugs."

"Iowa City is seen as a laid-back town," Hansen said. "But you can't deal with these gangs in a laid-back manner."

Hansen is president of the Wetherby Friends and Neighbors Association, which was formed last summer to help reduce crime in the neighborhood of 1,150 households; most of the residents are renters. One of the association's primary goals was to help police "get rid of troublemakers," Hansen said.

He added that the association encouraged people to call police when they saw trouble. Communication with police was "very good," Hansen said.

However, he said, he would like to see the police force expanded to deal with criminals remaining in Iowa City.

"On the surface, things have quieted down a lot, but the potential is still there," he said. "This drug thing won't go away easily."

Summer not such a hot time in the city

By Stephen Balsley
The Daily Iowan

The conceptual idea of Summer of Sam, the new Spike Lee film, is to tell the story of New York City in 1977, when the Yankees win the World Series, the punk and homosexual movements take the forefront, and David Berkowitz does his damage as a serial killer.

The actual film is about one man's inability to refrain from sex with everyone but his wife and his inability to accept change and new styles in NYC. Focused on a cheating husband from the old school, Vinny (John Leguizamo) and his relationship with Ritchie (Adrien Brody), the new school punk, the relationship between these two men sets the backdrop for the escalating problems of 1977.

Vinnie is a man who loves everyone, a lot, except his wife. Beyond a womanizer, this man at different times in the film sleeps with women in his car and in his seat at the hair salon where he cuts hair. There is nothing to like about this character, and Leguizamo leaves the audience thoroughly disgusted with him, fulfilling his role as the resident "player" of the era.

His wife, Dionna, is played by Mira Sorvino. There is no role in this film for Sorvino to play because Dionna is such a static foil to Vinny. A woman who cannot satisfy her husband's sexual desires, is a slave to her father, and lives in absolute ignorance of her husband's misdeeds, the only thing the audience wants from Sorvino is to see her storm out of the film and demand one good line that does not make her sound like an ignorant fool.

The shining moment of this film is the performance of Brody as Ritchie. Ritchie is from the old neighborhood and still is a friend of Vinny, but since living in Manhattan, he has changed his image into the punk styles of the late '70s. Ritchie plays three chords on his guitar, spikes his hair, has tons of zippers on his pants, wears a dog collar, speaks with a fake British accent, hangs out at CBGB, and fills the role of the rising scenester. Despite all of these sometimes stereotypical things, Ritchie is not the stereotypical punk. Instead, because of the performance of Brody (who some may remember for his brilliant work in The Thin Red Line), there are many more levels to this role.

Friends Vinny (John Leguizamo, left) and Ritchie (Adrien Brody) fear serial killer Son of Sam in the Bronx of 1977.

Another fine performance is put in by Bebe Neuwirth as Gloria. Proving her flexibility once again, the woman who once was Lylith on "Cheers" is a very convincing hair salon owner.

As anyone can expect, the climax of the movie involves a clash between Vinnie and his old school buddies, who are in search of the Son of Sam killer, and Ritchie, who is discovered to be a male stripper and prostitute. This is all set up, all of these sub plots, with Berkowitz and the Yankees as the backdrop. This is where the film fails.

There is just too much going on for the film to work. The plot has been bogged down in the story of a failing marriage for sometime, and despite the cuts to Berkowitz going insane and then killing, there is little suspense in the film.

In the end, this is a movie about Vinnie's relationship with Dionna, Vinnie's relationship with Ritchie, and everyone's inability to not have sex. Add in a cheesy computer effect, Sam the Dog talking to Berkowitz, and you have another film that once looked great in idea but failed in production.

Fences set to break barriers

■ Summer Rep continues with another groundbreaking play by August Wilson.

By Stephen Balsley
The Daily Iowan

Summer Rep continues today with the opening of Fences in Theatre B, UI Theatre Building. Another work by the renowned and controversial August Wilson, Fences promises to be stirring and dramatic.

"August Wilson's plays are basically realism and are not inaccessible to any audience," said Ken Shaka Ali, who plays Troy Maxson. "In my experience, audiences in Iowa City are as sophisticated and astute as audiences from New York or California."

Most performances are sold out for Fences, which will run till July 25 at 8 p.m. There are, however, a few limited seats available, and there is a waiting list at the theater box office.

Considered to be one of the best plays written by the Pittsburgh native, Fences centers on the life of Maxson, a former baseball player. Since his time in the Negro League, he has spent his life trying to fight against the forces that bind him ... then, he finds himself the binding force for his family.

Fences has won every major theater award (including Tonys and the Pulitzer Prize) and is recognized as one of the most brilliant plays written in the past decades. New York critic Frank Rich said: "In Fences, August Wilson writes about the pain of an extended family lost in the wilderness of de facto segregation and human hope."

Wilson has been described as a playwright trying to chronicle history while providing a conduit for sleepless souls. His work has often been controversial — just as his ideas and principles have been.

Wilson left Pittsburgh Central Catholic High School after being accused of plagiarism. He then educated himself by reading in the public libraries of Pittsburgh. He has maintained his role as a prominent black writer over the past couple of years through his arguments about audience, place and understanding. This is evident in the depiction of his characters, such as the strong and demanding Maxson.

For Ali, the performances of those who have played Maxson were hard acts to follow. "I saw James Earl Jones play the role in Broadway, and I recognize the brilliance that he brought the part," he said.

"But I am trying to create a path of my own, ignoring others, and trying to expunge my honest feelings and live truthfully on stage from moment to moment. Basically, the dangers of competing can be overwhelming."

Tickets for Fences are $16 ($8 for youth and students; $12 for senior citizens). For tickets or further information, call the Hancher Box Office at 1-800-HANCHER.

Clinton begins poverty junket

■ The president wants to extend the economic boom to areas that have been left behind.

By Sonya Ross
Associated Press

TYNER, Ky. — Ray Pennington sat in the shade of a walnut tree outside his tumbledown wooden house, a portable oxygen tank helping him breathe, as President Clinton cut a swath through Pennington's extended family to stand before the older man.

"I'm glad to see you," Clinton said, and extended his hand. "Well, I am too," Pennington said as he accepted it. A look of joy spread across the older man's craggy face when Clinton sat down beside him, sipped a Mountain Dew and chatted about the hot weather.

"I've lived 69 years, and this is the first time I've ever seen a president. It's a pleasure to meet you," Pennington said simply.

People such as Pennington — who spent his life slaughtering hogs and now is struggling with emphysema — were the focus Monday as Clinton began a four-day, cross-country tour to promote a plan for drawing jobs and investment to areas that have not shared in the prosperity of the 1990s.

"Even though this is a blessed time for America, not all Americans have been blessed by it," the president said during a rally on Main Street in Hazard, Ky. "So I came here to show America who you are ... It's been a hot day. But when I'm gone, I hope you will remember more than the president came, and you were hot."

With a handful of business executives, Cabinet secretaries and politicians in tow, Clinton flew by helicopter to Tyner and drove into the Whispering Pines community, a cluster of small trailer homes with about 100 residents, many of them Pennington's relatives.

Pennington's daughter, Jean Collett, 48, escorted Clinton along a gravel drive that connected her small beige house with those of her father and her daughter, Betty Jo Brewster, 25.

Collett quit her job at the local Dairy Queen to care for her newly widowed father; the family relies heavily on the $6.30 an hour that Brewster's husband, Anthony, earns at a local electronics plant.

The president explained his plan to expand Medicare to Collett as they walked the short distance to Pennington's home, which faced a large satellite dish and an above-ground swimming pool in Brewster's backyard.

Residents who clustered along their path told Clinton they have a crying need for better transportation and better housing. Most of the homes had broken windows, some covered with cardboard or wood. Two large fans tilted precariously in the windows of Brewster's home, blowing hot air on a sweltering 97-degree day.

"My first electricity was in 1961. I didn't have running water in a bathroom until five years ago,"

Collett said.

Clinton wants to extend the country's good economic times to places such as this, from Appalachia to the Watts area of Los Angeles. "We have to provide incentives for people to go there," he said. "We know that government can't solve these problems alone; we know that we'll never get anywhere by leaving people alone, either."

The administration is characterizing these areas as an $80 billion untapped market, in terms that seem to ring of a trade mission to Africa or Latin America. Along the way, the business leaders planned to announce various investments and assistance to the communities they visit.

"We need help; we need hope," said Mayor William Gorman of Hazard, a depressed coal-mining town.

In Hazard, First Union National Bank committed $5 million in small business equity loans in Appalachia; BellSouth was announcing a partnership with the Kentucky community college system to place 100 people in technical and customer service jobs; and Bank One was investing $1 million in the new Appalachian Ohio Development Fund, which will provide financing and technical assistance to small businesses.

"Appalachia does not represent poverty, but potential," civil rights leader Jesse Jackson, who accompanied Clinton, told the crowd. "You've worked hard enough, you've paid your dues enough ... Let Hazard share in the wealth."

All-Star Game starters announced

NEW YORK (AP)— The Boston Red Sox used high-tech campaigning to help Nomar Garciaparra edge Derek Jeter for the starting spot at Fenway Park for next week's All-Star game.

Garciaparra, in third place for shortstops with one week to go, passed New York's Jeter and Cleveland's Omar Vizquel in American League voting released Monday.

Paul Beeston, baseball's chief operating officer, said last Thursday none of the Internet votes had been counted until the last week. Fans were allowed to vote 22 times on the Internet for the July 13 game in Boston.

Garciaparra apparently benefited from Boston's aggressive campaigning on-line. Garciaparra, who trailed Jeter by 30,655 votes last week, finished with 1,089,974. Jeter was second with 1,069,528 and Vizquel was third with 1,038,362.

Four members of the Cleveland Indians, who lead the majors in attendance, made the starting lineup. Jim Thome (1,364,692) will be at first base and Roberto Alomar (2,793,891) starts at second.

"It's a great honor and something you always dream about no matter if you have been there before," Thome said. "I can still have a little time off even if I make the game because it is different. It is a fun game, not where you are killing yourself."

Kenny Lofton (1,676,595) and Manny Ramirez (1,898,430) join leading vote-getter Ken Griffey Jr. of Seattle in the outfield.

"I want to go out there and have some fun, enjoy a little time off," Lofton said. "I like to do the Fanfest and be with the kids. That's fun. It's a mental break from the action of the season."

Griffey became the leading All-Star vote-getter for the fourth straight year and seventh time overall. Griffey, elected to start for the 10th consecutive time, got 2,918,055 votes.

Griffey is batting .315 and is second in the league with 27 homers and 78 RBIs entering Monday.

The rest of the AL starting lineup: Texas' Ivan Rodriguez (1,897,774) at catcher, Baltimore's Cal Ripken (1,285,728) at third base and Tampa Bay's Jose Canseco (1,664,282) at designated hitter.

Iowa ponders tougher restrictions for international players

High school officials may make athletic participation harder for exchange students.

SIOUX CITY, Iowa (AP) — Slaven Markovic arrived here from war-torn Bosnia last August. By January he was playing with the Sioux City West basketball team, and in March he helped the team to a championship.

The immediate impact of the 6-foot-8, 235-pound center — who has signed to play at Northern Iowa — started a debate on rules regarding foreign students and Iowa high school athletics.

Some coaches and athletic officials are wondering if Iowa should tighten its high school rules regarding foreign transfer students. Iowa has the most lenient rules in the Midwest, and there is concern that foreign athletes and ambitious coaches could abuse them.

With the right connections, eager foreign athletes are easy to find, said Steve Bergman, boys' basketball coach at Iowa City West.

"There's a lot of good players out there, and if you want one, you can get one," said Bergman, who coached in Iceland for a year and has led several Iowa all-star teams to Australia. "If I wanted to find a player, I could."

It might not be so easy if Iowa had tighter eligibility rules. In Iowa, independent foreign athletes are treated the same as cross-town transfer students. They are required only to sit out of competition for 90 school days.

But in three neighboring states — South Dakota, Wisconsin and Missouri — a foreign transfer student who is not part of a recognized exchange program is ineligible for a year. In Illinois, an athlete can miss up to a year, depending on whether they have a legal guardian or are financially self-supporting.

"They just can't come into our state, move in and expect to play right away," said Marty Hickman, assistant executive director of the Illinois High School Association.

In Nebraska and Minnesota, there is a 90-day wait plus a one-year eligibility limit once an athlete plays. Missouri doesn't allow foreign athletes to play unless they are members of a recognized exchange program.

Iowa officials have no plans to change the waiting period, although it has been discussed.

"A year of ineligibility would take care of the situation," said Bernie Saggau, executive director of the Iowa High School Athletic Association. "There are very few who would come to America who would sit out an entire year."

Coach Bill Harris, whose West Des Moines Valley team lost to Sioux City

West in the championship, is concerned about the potential for recruiting.

"I think if they come to the school on their own, that's fine," he said. "If coaches get into the market of actively recruiting players, I think it changes the playing field."

Sioux City West coach Jim Hinrich said he didn't recruit Markovic. In Bosnia, Markovic had belonged to the same club team as former Northern Iowa player Munib Dzuho. Dzuho told Markovic about Sioux City West, where he knew of a teacher from Bosnia.

School officials checked Markovic's birth certificate and transcripts to verify his age — he was 19 — and welcomed him to the team.

"Everyone said that we were cheating," Hinrich said. "I wish there was some way you could convince people it was on the up-and-up."

Second half rally propels Fieldhouse

Rod Thompson helped the first-place Fieldhouse/Gringo's team win for the fifth time this year.

By Todd Hefferman
 The Daily Iowan

The Fieldhouse/Gringo's got 13 points from Rod Thompson in the second half to seal their fifth victory of the Prime Time League season, 109-99 over Nike/Merrill Lynch, Monday night.

Nike broke open a tight first half with a 7-0 run in the last two minutes to take a 56-55 lead, but lost a 10-point lead in the last 14 minutes to drop to 2-4 on the season.

"When we went up by nine or 10, both teams went small," Nike player/coach Randy Larson said. "We didn't get out on the shooter, and they made a lot of their threes."

A 9-0 run capped by a lay-in by Jerry Drymond made it 74-65, Nike, with 13:24 to go in the game. On The Fieldhouse's next possession, Darryl Moore went baseline for two of his 26 points to end the drought. Nike's Duez Henderson followed with a nifty turnaround jumper to put Nike back up by 9, 76-67 at the 12:13 mark, but back came The Fieldhouse.

"We got down 10, and we started knocking down shots that weren't falling in the first half, took the lead, and never looked back," Fieldhouse guard Pat Voss said.

Voss went 6-10 for 18 points, including four key three-pointers. Thompson finished with 18 points and 7 rebounds. After getting beaten on the offensive glass early, The Fieldhouse rebounded nicely in the second-half to eventually win the battle of the boards 40-34.

"They were killing us on the boards early, on offensive rebounds," Voss said. "After we started boxing out we pulled away, we got some easy fast break points off their misses."

Duez Henderson had his best game of the season for Nike, finishing with 29 points and 10 rebounds. B.J. Windhorst added 25 and Matt Woodley put down 23 points in a losing effort.

Fans endure heat during practice round

25,000 spectators came out to watch the first practice round of the U.S. Senior Open.

By Chuck Schoffner
 Associated Press

WEST DES MOINES, Iowa — Sweat-soaked and sunburnt, they trudged along the fairways of the Des Moines Golf and Country Club, where water was a precious commodity and trees offered welcoming shade.

They applauded even the worst shots and clamored for autographs from the unknowns as well as the knowns. "Who was that?" was the most oft-asked question of the day.

The answer didn't matter. Some 25,000 fans endured sweltering conditions to watch the players in the U.S. Senior Open on Monday — and it was just the first day of practice.

"It's mind boggling," exclaimed Rocky Thompson, a touring pro since 1964. "This is like the Masters or the British Open for a practice round. This thing is outrageous."

Thompson was among the dozens of golfers who ran a gantlet of autograph hounds as they walked off the 18th green after their round or as they strode from the practice range to the first tee.

Among those in line was 10-year-old Michael Peterson, who came down from Emmetsburg, 3 1/2 hours away, with his father, Dennis. Working the practice range, Michael had the signatures of eight golfers on his cap before noon, including J.C. Snead, Bruce Fleisher, Jim Colbert, Isao Aoki and Dana Quigley, who thanked everyone after he signed.

Dad was enjoying himself, too. "These are the guys I grew up watching on television and idolizing."

Cincinnati moves into first place with victory over Houston

On a sweltering day, Ron Villone pitched his third consecutive masterful game.

CINCINNATI (AP) — The Houston Astros couldn't touch Ron Villone in their climate-controlled dome and did little better in scorching heat that turned the field into a griddle.

The left-hander extended one of the NL's most amazing turnarounds Monday, throwing 100 pitches in witing conditions as the Cincinnati Reds pulled away to a 5-2 victory.

Five days after he outpitched Randy Johnson, Villone (4-2) had another overpowering performance and even had a base hit of his own as the small-market Reds moved back into sole possession of first place in the NL Central.

Villone had a streak of 21 scoreless innings — second-longest in the majors this season — snapped by Matt Mieske's two-run homer in the seventh. He gave up six hits and two walks in seven innings while getting his third consecutive win, two of them over the Astros.

Danny Graves pitched the ninth for his 11th save in 14 chances.

Aaron Boone had three hits for the second straight game and Mike Cameron homered off emergency starter Chris Holt (1-9) as Cincinnati split the four-game series. The Reds are 8-3 this season against their division rival.

PITTSBURGH — Henry Rodriguez homered and drove in three runs and the Chicago Cubs benefited from some terrible Pittsburgh infield play on a brutally hot day to beat the Jason Kendall-less Pirates 5-2 Monday.

 Ryan Hogan scored a game-high 44 points to help Fitzpatrick's even up their record at 3-3 with a win over Imprinted Sportswear/Goodfellow Printing.
 Fitzpatrick's scored the first eight points of the game and had leads of 11, 13, 16, and 18 points, but could not quite put the game away.
 Threes by Fitz's Brandon Welsh and Hogan put Fitzpatrick's up 61-47 at the break, but Imprinted rallied.

Down 95-83 later in the game, Imprinted went on a 11-4 run that was capped by a driving David Willock to pull within five.
 Imprinted's Kevin Long grabbed a Dean Oliver miss and was fouled on the putback basket. He made the first free throw, but missed the second, which was hauled in by Westlake and put back to pull Imprinted within a basket of tying the game with less than four minutes to play.
 "When we did get a lead we have to keep our intensity up," Hogan said. "It's hard to do, but I think if we do we have a good shot with the championship."

 In the battle of the six shooters,

Mike Gatens Real Estate used a distinct height-advantage to turn a somewhat close first half into a laugher.
 Both teams only used six players, but Gatens' defense turned out to be the difference. NBA-bound J.R. Koch started with Brad Lohaus, Kyle Galloway, Terry Cress and Tony Cress for Gatens as they broke open a 13-point halftime lead with four blocks in the first 12 minutes.
 The first half also featured a high-light-film alley-oop from one Cress to the other, as Tony launched his fifth assist to a sprinting Terry. Tony finished with 9 assists, 21 points, and four rebounds. Terry finished with 21 points, six rebounds, and four assists.
 "We got real good tonight because we got J.R.," Galloway said. "With J.R. and Brad that's a tough combination."

 Deli-Mart/Iowa City Ready Mix got 33 points from ex-Morningside College player Seth Madole to lead them to their third victory of the season. Madole went 18-38 and grabbed 15 boards to help Deli-Mart even up their record at 3-3. Lepic-Kroeger Realtors got 24 apiece from Kevin Washpun and Craig Callahan but fell to 2-4 and into a tie for sixth-place in the standings after the sixth day of competition.

 fifth of Jason Schmidt (8-6).
 Jon Lieber (7-3) finally gave the Cubs something resembling a well-pitched game in his first start against his former teammates, allowing two runs in 5 1/3 innings as temperatures peaked at 101 degrees. The Cubs snapped a four-game skid.
Cardinals 1, D'backs 0
ST. LOUIS—At least the Arizona Diamondbacks got two hits in the rematch of Jose Jimenez vs. Randy Johnson.
 Jimenez followed up his June 25 no-hitter against Arizona with a two-hitter in a 1-0 victory Monday for the St. Louis Cardinals.
 Jimenez (5-8) retired the first 13 batters, before Steve Finley doubled with one out in the fifth. That was Arizona's first hit in 13 1/3 innings off Jimenez. The Diamondbacks' only other hit was a single off Jimenez's glove by Andy Fox to lead off the sixth.
 Jimenez, who allowed seven runs in a 4-1-3 innings against Houston in his last start, has a 7.09 ERA against the rest of the NL, but it stands at 0.00 against the NL West-contending Diamondbacks. The rookie right-hander struck out a career-high nine and walked one.

Mets 2, Expos 1
NEW YORK—Given the heat, it was amazing how long it took for hitters to warm up at Shea Stadium on Monday night.
 On the hottest day of the season, Brian McRae pushed home the go-ahead run with a double-play grounder in the eighth inning, and the New York Mets beat Montreal 2-1.
 New York, which has come from behind in seven of its last nine victories, is still struggling at the plate. Still, the Mets have won 20 of their last 28, including 10 of 13 at home.
Brewers 5, Phillies 0
PHILADELPHIA—Jim Abbott battled sweltering heat with guile and stamina, while Jeff Cirillo, Dave Nilsson and Jeromy Burnitz homered to lead the Milwaukee Brewers to their fifth straight victory, 5-0 over the Philadelphia Phillies on Monday night.
 Abbott (2-7) allowed only three hits in six innings in his best start of the season to win for the first time since May 30. Dropping down almost sidearm against left-handed hitters Bobby Abreu and Rico Brogna, Abbott walked three, struck out three and sent manager Phil Garner back to the cool dugout when he considered a pitching change in the sixth.

Red Sox 4, Devil Rays 2
ST. PETERSBURG, Fla.—Mark Portugal beat Tampa Bay for the third time this season and Mike Stanley homered in Boston's 4-2 victory Monday night.
 Portugal (5-6) went six innings, allowing two runs and seven hits, to improve to 3-0 in four starts against the Devil Rays. Tim Wakefield pitched a perfect ninth for his ninth save.
 Tampa Bay stranded nine men and went 1-for-12 with runners in scoring position against Portugal and Derek Lowe, who struck out Jose Canseco and Fred McGriff to get out of a jam in the seventh.
Orioles 9, Yankees 1
NEW YORK—Cal Ripken celebrated another All-Star election with his 1,000th career extra-base hit, and the Baltimore Orioles beat the 100-degree heat and nemesis Andy Pettitte to stop the New York

 ing," Dennis Peterson said. "They're all good guys, it seems like to me. This is a great thing for Des Moines."
 Peterson said he might come back for Sunday's final round, though if someone offered him a ticket for an earlier round, "I'd probably volunteer," he said.
 Play in the Open begins Thursday morning on the 6,888-yard, par-72 course, which already is quickly earning the respect of the competitors.
 "It's in great condition, the best I've seen all year," said Bob Duval, who got his first Senior Tour victory when he won the Emerald Coast Classic in late March. "It's going to take some time to get used to these greens, maybe two or three practice rounds."
 "There's a lot of contour to these greens. They're going to be tough."
 Adding to the challenge was the stiff southerly breeze that blew across the course, which made shots even trickier.

 "With the wind blowing as hard as it is, it's difficult to assess the difficulty of the course," Ed Sneed said. "It's a difficult course anyway, but with the wind, it's especially tough."
 But that's what playing in the Open is all about: hitting good shots off the tee and accurate shots from fairway to green in tough conditions.
 "Even with the wind, you're going to get some players scoring low," Sneed said. "But as a field, I don't think the scoring will be that low."
 Low or not, Thompson raved about the course and the fans. The Senior Open will be the first major tournament played at the Des Moines Golf and Country Club, an undulating, 36-hole layout along Interstate 80 west of the city.
 The championship course will consist the club's original 18 holes: nine from the North Course and nine from the South Course. Those holes were selected because they're located in the interior portion of the property and have the most interesting landforms.

 "The course is easily one of the most beautiful courses on earth—really," Thompson said. "I've played 2,000 of them and this is in the top 15."
 Fans and golfers put up with steamy conditions and a relentless sun. The temperature climbed to 93 and the heat index reached 105. The golfers at least could retreat to an air-conditioned locker room. The fans had to hang in there and they did, cheering even the ugliest hook or slice.
 Jay Swords of Rock Island, Ill., found relief in the breezy covered bridge that spans a creek between the first green and second tee. Swords will drive back and forth from home—a trip that can take three hours in heavy traffic—at least through Wednesday and maybe on Thursday. He'll stay

Tigermania dulls, but Woods is as hot as ever

Since his crowds have become quieter, Tiger Woods is letting his game do all of the talking for him.

By Nancy Armour
Associated Press

LEMONT, Ill. (AP) — The last time Tiger Woods made a victorious walk up the 18th fairway at the Western Open, thousands of fans broke through the security ropes to follow him.

Woods headed for the green with a sea of people in tow, just wanting to be close to him, just wanting to bask in "Tigermania" if only for a few minutes.

On Sunday, Woods took his victory walk alone. Maybe it was the tighter security. Maybe his victory was anticlimactic after leading the second and third rounds.

Or maybe Tigermania is finally settling to a low roar.

"To be honest with you, I don't think so," he said when asked if the near-hysteria that followed him in 1997 will ever be repeated.

"Because of the fact I was new to the scene. I came out new and fresh. Most fans don't pay attention to amateur golf," he said. "Then, when I came on the scene, the huge endorsement numbers got everybody's attention. Then coming out and winning twice in seven weeks and getting my card that way, getting the Tour championship, people kind of took notice of that.

"Winning the Masters by 12. Being a person of color, doing that at a tournament that historically has denied access. So a lot of different subplots."

But Woods, who regained the No. 1 world ranking with his victory at the Western, can still draw a crowd. The rest of the field Sunday at Cog Hill Golf and Country Club played in relative obscurity. Relative, that is, because those were about the only people paying attention to the other golfers.

Thousands of people lined every hole he played. People staked out spots at upcoming holes hours ahead of time. There were cheers of "C'mon, Tiger!" and "Go get 'em, Tiger!" after every drive and every hole. Marshals repeatedly had to ask fans to stop walking or talking, reminding them others were still playing.

"I knew that people would be pulling for Tiger big-time," said Mike Weir, Woods' playing partner Sunday. "I just had to block that out and play my own game and not pay attention to what he was doing."

What Woods has been doing lately is playing his best golf since 1997 — even better, actually. Despite steamrolling through the Masters and winning three other tournaments that year, he was horrified when he looked at videotapes of his swing. So he ripped it apart, changing just about everything.

Tiger Woods acknowledges the crowd after sinking his putt on the 18th green Sunday at the Western Open.

The effort to make the changes second nature to his game showed. Though he held the No. 1 ranking and led the tour with 13 top-10 finishes, he "only" won one PGA Tour event.

"Being No. 1 in the world and not winning like I was doing in '98, that's not that great," he said. "I was having consistent finishes, but also changing my game. And I knew it was going to take me awhile, so I understood that.

"But I liked winning," he said. "I don't like going home and knowing that somebody beat me."

This year, he's already won three PGA Tour events. Including a tournament in Germany, he's won three of his last four starts. He also leads the PGA Tour with 10 top-10 finishes this year.

The long, jaw-dropping drives are still there. His bunker game is vastly improved, and his putting is stronger, too. And his killer competitiveness is as sharp as ever. When Weir pored his lead to one stroke with a birdie on No. 7, Woods responded by rolling the ball within 8 inches of the pin on his second shot and then making the putt for birdie.

Weir, who missed his own birdie putt, never threatened again.

"The key is just keep hitting good shots and give yourself a chance at some putts," Woods said. "I'm rolling the rock well. I'm controlling my trajectory, driving it pretty good. Overall, my game is coming around. I like it. I'm very pleased."

He now takes his new and improved game to the British Open, which begins July 15. With the way he played this past weekend, Weir said Woods must be among the favorites.

Ohio State picked up another dangerous scorer as Sean Connolly agreed to become a Buckeye.

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Sean Connolly, the second-leading scorer at Providence as a freshman, will transfer to Ohio State for the 2000-2001 season, his father said.

Connolly told Ohio State coaches about the decision on Sunday night after a two-day visit to campus, said his father, Mike Connolly.

"He wasn't there more than 20 minutes and he knew it was where he wanted to be," his father told The Columbus Dispatch. "He was very impressed with everybody."

He canceled visits to North Carolina State and Texas.

Connolly, 6-foot-5 guard from Peabody, Mass., made 38.8 percent of his 3-point shots and 85.7 percent of his free throws last season to earn a spot on the Big East All-Rookie team.

He took 61 percent of his field goal attempts from behind the arc, made 64 of 165 and averaged 11 points in 26 minutes per game.

Ohio State coach Jim O'Brien has had success with Big East guards transferring to Ohio State before. Scoonie Penn, who played for O'Brien at Boston College before transferring to Ohio State, helped lead the Buckeyes to the Final Four last spring in his first season in Columbus.

Connolly's decision came the day after 6-11, 230-pound Matt Marinchick of Hudson committed to sign with the Buckeyes in November. He is rated the No. 1 center and among the top 10 high school seniors in Ohio next season.

Pirates: Kendall's return in 1999 unlikely

After suffering one of the more gruesome injuries in recent memory, the Pirates' All-Star catcher will be lucky to return next season.

By Alan Robinson
Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — Jason Kendall wants to return in 1999. The Pittsburgh Pirates will be satisfied to get their All-Star catcher back in 2000.

Kendall, who shattered his right ankle and tore all of his ankle ligaments in a scary accident at first base Sunday, told several teammates Monday that he wants to play a few games in September.

But while the Pirates aren't discouraging Kendall's plans for a speedy recovery from the frightening injury, they also won't jeopardize his career by rushing him back prematurely.

"I think Jason Kendall thinks he's going to play again this year but, realistically, he's not," manager Gene Lamont said Monday. "When he gets back, he'll realize how tough it is."

"I'll be real happy if he's ready to go in spring training," trainer Kent Biggerstaff said.

Jack Failla, the team orthopedist who assisted in Kendall's surgery, said Kendall needs at least three months of rest and rehabilitation to return to normal.

"From a medical standpoint, it is unlikely we would recommend coming back before the end of the season," Failla said.

In addition to dislocating his right ankle and fracturing a 1/4-inch by 3/8-inch piece of bone, Kendall also tore three outside ankle ligaments and one inside ligament.

"Every single ligament in the ankle was ruptured," Failla said. "I've never seen anything quite like this."

The All-Star catcher's right ankle snapped nearly in two as he tried to beat out a bunt Sunday against Milwaukee, causing his fibula to jam its way through his skin — a gruesome sight that left some players nauseous.

Kendall's ankle crumbled as he struck the front inside edge of the bag, rather than the top. Kendall needed several steps to catch his balance, putting more stress on the badly injured ankle and possibly causing more damage.

Still, Failla said the injury isn't necessarily career-threatening. Bobby Bonilla had a similar-style fracture during a mid-1980s as a Pirates farmhand and recovered to become an All-Star.

Robin Ventura, then with the White Sox, snapped his ankle in similar fashion during a home plate collision in spring training two years ago and returned four months later.

Also, Kendall is one of the Pirates' hardest-working players, and Failla said motivating him during his rehabilitation won't be necessary.

"Knowing Jason Kendall, we'll have to hold him down for a while to protect the repair," Failla said. Kendall will remain hospitalized for another 2-3 days to receive intravenous antibiotics, then will wear a protective cast for six weeks. He will lift weights and do other exercises during that time to maintain his upper body strength.

Kendall's parents, including father Fred, a roving catching instructor with the Cincinnati Reds, flew to Pittsburgh on Sunday night to be with their son.

Arena fans hear all of the action

■ Thanks to a new invention, Arena football fans can listen to live, on-field action.

By Deepti Hajela
Associated Press

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Duke Covone was at a New York Giants game with his wife not long ago. She mentioned that it would be interesting to hear what the players talked about on the field.

And that got Covone thinking. Covone is a partner in Interactive Sports Signals, Inc. The company, headquartered in New Milford, Conn., is giving fans of the New Jersey Red Dogs of the Arena Football League a chance to listen to the players during the game.

The company has been putting microphones on players and renting headsets to spectators in the stands.

"I like listening to the strategy part," Charles McHarris, a 44-year-old fan, said at a recent game at the Meadowlands. "You can hear what the players are thinking."

Covone started working seriously on this project in March 1998 when he met Sebastian Failla, who worked in satellite communications. They spent the next year working on the plan and trying to sell it professional sports leagues.

They were joined by a third partner and began by using the system at Red Dogs games.

Bill Kostroun/Associated Press

Tim James, 33, of Dover, N.J., hears the sounds of the game at the the Red Dogs football game against the Buffalo Destroyers Friday, June 25.

"We wanted to start with a venue big enough to try the system but not overwhelming," Covone said.

The headsets have been available at home games this season, with the Red Dogs getting a percentage of the profits, team spokesman Kevin McKearney said.

"The only hesitation we had was for the logistics," McKearney said. "After that first meeting pretty much, we knew it was definitely something we would like to be involved in."

Up to four players wear microphones at every home game. The signal from the microphones is sent to tiny receivers spectators can rent for $10. The talk is live and uncensored, and even children are permitted to rent a receiver. The headset comes with a pamphlet warning of rough language.

Gastineau arrested on contempt charge

NEW YORK (AP) — Former New York Jets defensive end Mark Gastineau was arrested Monday for violating an order of protection in an ongoing domestic dispute, police said.

Gastineau, 42, surrendered at a Queens precinct stationhouse and remained in custody awaiting arraignment on a charge of criminal contempt.

The ex-NFL star allegedly violated a court order on June 22 by going to his wife's Queens home, where he repeatedly rang the doorbell and refused to leave, police said.

Gastineau was sentenced last October to three months probation after pleading guilty to a misdemeanor assault charge for hitting his wife. He had been arrested a month earlier for hitting his then-fiancee, Patricia Schorr, at a Manhattan apartment.

Gastineau was charged with misdemeanor assault, menacing and criminal possession of a weapon. The court complaint said the weapon was a glass cocktail table with which he threatened to hit Schorr.

At the time of Gastineau's guilty plea, Schorr said she had married him in late September. She also refused to cooperate in the prosecution of her husband.

Tour de France riders tumble in ocean crash

■ American Lance Armstrong lost the overall lead in the Tour's second stage.

By Jocelyn Noveck
Associated Press

SAINT-NAZAIRE, France — The Tour de France sank below sea level on Monday. A 10-rider crash on a narrow spit of land ensnared some of the top riders during the second stage of cycling's premier event.

The spill happened on the Passage du Gois, which connects a small island to the mainland in the coastal Atlantic Vendee region. The strip is no more than two car lengths wide and is usually submerged by water. It is closed during high tide.

The picturesque ocean causeway proved treacherous for such favorites as Alex Zulle, Michael Boogerd and Ivan Gotti. They lost valuable minutes when they were trapped behind the crash.

The day's racing began under brilliant skies, with the 109-mile stage won in a final sprint by Tom Steels of Belgium. Lance Armstrong of Texas lost the overall lead to Estonia's Jaan Kirsipuu.

Another American, Jonathan Vaughters, fractured his chin in the crash and had to drop out of the race. Vaughters and Armstrong both ride for the U.S. Postal Service team.

Armstrong, recovering from testicular cancer, is second overall. He is in excellent position for Sunday's time trial and the later mountain climbs.

"I just want to stay out of trouble until the real race begins on Sunday with the time trial," Armstrong said.

Kirsipuu earned bonus points in winning two of the day's three sprints. In third and fourth place were sprinter Mario Cipollini of Italy and Germany's Erik Zabel.

In another strong showing for U.S. Postal, George Hincapie came in sixth and is seventh overall.

Vaughters was taken to a hospital in Nantes, as was Marc Wauters, who also is out of the race.

The crash wasn't the first of the day — there was an earlier mishap at 21 miles involving 30 riders.

With the beginning of the summer holiday for many of the French, thousands of vacationers lined the roads. They set up folding chairs and elaborate picnic tables along the road and leaned out of balconies in small villages.

Along with the occasional anti-drug banner — "Say No to EPO" — many fans showed support for French cycling star Richard Virenque. He is under investigation for last year's race that was nearly cut short because of the drug scandal.

"Allez Richard — We Forgive You," said one banner held by two young children.

Race organizers say there will be spot drug tests during the coming days.

Wimbledon gives bounce to tennis

■ Capped by Pete Sampras' compelling title, this year's tournament continued the sport's exciting surge.

By Stephen Wilson
Associated Press

WIMBLEDON, England — Tennis has some zip again. Wimbledon, like the French Open a month ago, injected new life into the sport when it needed it most.

The All England Club provided the stage for the coronation of a new female champion (Lindsay Davenport), the farewell of an old champ (Steffi Graf) and the emergence of potential future champs (Alexandra Stevenson, Jelena Dokic and Mirjana Lucic).

Wimbledon also confirmed the untouchable grass-court mastery of Pete Sampras, as well as the remarkable renaissance of Andre Agassi, who energizes the men's game like no other player.

"Andre brings out the best in me," Sampras said after blasting Agassi in straight sets Sunday for his sixth Wimbledon crown. "He elevates my game to a level that is phenomenal."

Phenomenal sums up Sampras' 6-3, 6-4, 7-5 victory, a virtuoso display of serving, volleying and shotmaking that was arguably the best performance ever on Centre Court.

Willie Renshaw is the only man with more Wimbledon titles (seven), and that was back in the 1880s. At 27 years old, Sampras looks certain to surpass that record as well as the mark for total Grand Slam championships (12), which he now shares with Roy Emerson.

Jytte Nielsen/Associated Press

Pete Sampras dives across the court in an effort to reach a shot from Andre Agassi in the Men's Final on Sunday. Sampras won 6-3, 6-4, 7-5.

Asked how many more times Sampras can win Wimbledon, Agassi said, "For the next four years — as many times as he wants."

Sampras will be chasing the Grand Slam record two months from now at the U.S. Open, a tournament he has won four times.

"I'd love to do it where it all started for me in 1990," he said.

If Sampras is the best player ever to pick up a racket at Wimbledon, there is still debate whether he's the greatest ever, period. Sampras has never won the French Open, or even reached the final of the clay court classic.

By contrast, Sampras' idol, Rod Laver, won the French twice. Bjorn Borg did it six times. And Agassi won the French four weeks ago to become only the fifth man in history to win all four Grand Slam events.

The French Open is the toughest test in tennis, where baseline play and physical stamina are the key ingredients. Neither is Sampras' strong point.

But on the lawns of Wimbledon, where the rallies are few and the serve-and-volley dominates, Sampras is invincible. He's slightly less omnipotent on the hard courts of Flushing Meadow, where the higher bounce gives players like Agassi a chance.

"I want another shot at him and I want another shot at him this summer," Agassi said. "I want another shot at him in the finals of the U.S. Open."

Men's tennis suffered in recent years from a shortage of personalities and a lack of a compelling rivalry. Now, with Agassi back at the top after climbing back from No. 141, he could provide Sampras with the foil he needs.

Garcia makes move for Ryder Cup spot

■ Some golf greats think the 19-year-old should represent Europe in the event

By Robert Millward
Associated Press

LONDON — Sergio Garcia keeps moving closer to a spot on the Ryder Cup team.

And a number of people — Colin Montgomerie and U.S. captain Ben Crenshaw among them — think the 19-year-old Spaniard should represent Europe in Brookline, Mass., on Sept. 24-26.

Garcia won the Irish Open on Sunday, his first pro title in only his sixth tournament. He earned enough Ryder Cup points to put him 18th on the list of European team contenders.

Garcia

Even if he does not make the automatic top 10, he could be one of captain Mark James' two extra picks.

"If Mark James thinks I'm up to it, I'll be glad to play," Garcia said Sunday after finishing with a 7-under 64 and winning by three strokes.

"I am playing well and if I can help the team I would love to play in Boston," Garcia added. "But there is a long time until September."

Garcia showed up for practice for this week's Loch Lomond tournament sporting a shaved head.

"When I turned pro I said that when I had my first big victory I would cut my hair like this," he said.

He has Loch Lomond and seven more tournaments to make the top 10. And by the way he's been playing in his six tournaments, it appears he has the game to qualify.

Since placing as the highest amateur at this year's Masters, Garcia tied for third at the Byron Nelson Classic in May and 11th at the Memorial tournament three weeks ago. On the PGA European Tour, he has placed 25th, 20th, 19th and now first.

Crenshaw is convinced he'll see Garcia at Brookline.

"A kid like this is extra special," Crenshaw said. "There's no question in my mind he'll be in the European team."

Montgomerie, who leads Europe's Ryder Cup points list, said a month ago James should put Garcia in the team and play him alongside Masters champion and fellow Spaniard Jose Maria Olazabal.

"Just give Sergio to Olly and let him go," Montgomerie said.

Other big names in the top 10 are Olazabal, Darren Clarke, Lee Westwood and Bernhard Langer and James himself, although the captain won't play. But former Ryder Cup stars such as Nick Faldo and Ian Woosnam have virtually no chance of making the 10 and will need to be among the captain's choices to make the lineup.

Scurry: a wall to wall goalkeeper

By Barry Wilner
Associated Press

STANFORD, Calif. — Brazil's sharpshooters and China's precisionists don't scare Briana Scurry.

After all, she practices against the best front line in the world, so why worry during games?

The Americans have had little to worry about in front of their goal during the Women's World Cup. They've yielded only three scores on their way to the finals, one a ball they put into their own net.

While there have been enough breakdowns by defenders and midfielders to concern coach Tony DiCicco, he doesn't have the same anxiety about his goalkeeper.

"As a former goalie and a goalie coach, I can really appreciate what Bri does," DiCicco said as his team began preparations for Saturday's final against China. "She challenges shooters, she plays the angles well, she knows where to be. And she's a leader on this team."

"This is a team that has a lot of scoring ability and presses the attack, and having her back there gives us the freedom to that. I can't say enough about her or how much confidence we have in her." Scurry has three shutouts in this tournament and 52 for her career. She joined the national team in 1994 and a year later was the No. 1 keeper as the Americans finished third in the World Cup.

She backstopped the United States to the gold medal at the

Doug Mills/Associated Press

U.S. Women's soccer goalie Briana Scurry keeps her eyes on a shot during a practice session on June 29.

1996 Olympics, making headlines not for her habit of undressing shooters, but for her promise to streak through the streets of Athens, Ga., if the team won. It did, and off she went.

Before this World Cup, some pointed to Scurry and the defense as being suspect. While the backline has made several errors, Scurry has been solid. Or, as her teammates call her, "The Wall."

"We as defenders are going to make mistakes," U.S. captain Carla Overbeck said. "Knowing that Bri is back there makes all the difference ... Bri is a calming force. She is extremely athletic. She's very dependable. She's the best keeper in the world."

Scurry laughs when she hears such praise. But when the 27-year-old goalie from Dayton, Minn., plays as she did in the semifinals — six saves, most on difficult shots — Scurry probably deserves such adulation.

"The best?" she asked. "People say that? When I play well, I am, when I don't, I'm not. I don't know. It might be true. I'm on the best team."

Perhaps. The Chinese are 2-1 against the Americans and have looked sensational in the World Cup. They will provide the final test.

The Americans are confident their wall can match up with China's Great Wall, goalie Gao Hong. And that Scurry can handle China's best finishers, Sun Wen and Liu Ailing.
