Police seek connections in burglaries

Similarities in the string of West Side break-ins have raised the suspicions of the police.

The burglar took a VCR, a Sony PlayStation and items from a pocketbook lying in a room in which his oung children were having a slumer party, Horowitz said.

No one awoke or was injured during the burglary, he said.

The burglar was able to come through an "easy to open" front door and then exit through a back door, according to Horowitz. He said he oubts whether any of the valuables will be recovered.

Their decision could prove to be the action lawsuit by smokers to go to trial, was filed in 1994 on behalf of as industry's most dire courtroom loss many as 500,000 sick smokers and the heirs of those who died.

Plaintiffs and family members wept and hugged each other as the verdict

"The Marlboro Man just fell off his Some tobacco analysts said the news high horse into quicksand, and it will be years until the tobacco industry even gets him halfway out," said Ahron Leichtman, executive director of Citizens for a Tobacco-Free Society.

Philip Morris Inc., the nation's largest cigarette maker, said it remained under a court-imposed gag order and could not comment.

The industry claimed there is no scientific proof that smoking causes any illness and that the public is well aware that smoking is risky.

But the jury agreed with the smokers on all counts, including their claims that the industry deceived them about the dangers of smoking, hid research results, stopped scientific work that promised to produce safer cigarettes, and advertised to children. The jury also found that the industry "engaged in extreme and outrageous conduct ... with the intent to inflict severe emotional distress."

The $206 billion national settlement reached with the tobacco industry in November bars states from suing to recoup the costs of treating sick smokers; it does not prohibit lawsuits by individuals such as this one.

Now that the industry has been found liable, the jury will decide what damages should be awarded to the lawsuit's nine plaintiffs. Once their cases are concluded, the half-million other members of the class will be free to file their claims.

Jurors heard eight months of testimony and were exposed to thousands of documents from decades of tobacco litigation.

Former surgeons general, ex-tobacco industry scientists and doctors testified about the havoc smoking can wreak on the body, the difficulty in trying to quit and the manufacturers' refusal to cooperate with health officials.

Prof finds Iowa a fertile field of stories

■ A UI professor biked around the state, gathering stories, to raise money for the disabled.

> By Erin Gansen The Daily Iowan

Steve Thunder-McGuire, a UI associate education professor, is a lucky man.

He filled 11 days in June with a combination of things he has loved to do for years. The smile on his face is evidence of that.

Thunder-McGuire, who teaches storytelling and teacher education classes, combined his love for his son, who is a paraplegic due to traveling into a project to collect stories from Iowans.

"Storytelling is a real ordinary activity where you enhance everything you've done by recalling details of events," he said. "Just the act of paying attention and listening to other people's stories changes you."

From June 11-22, Thunder-McGuire bicycled to Care Initiative Centers - the group that sponsored his trip - in 10 Iowa towns and recorded more than 100 stories from residents and local people in the communities.

Selected stories will be put on a CD, to be titled 1,000 Miles of Iowa Stories, which he is working cerebral palsy, storytelling and on in conjunction with Tom Walz, a UI professor emeritus of social work.

The storytelling project will raise money for Bike For All, an organization that provides adventure cycling capabilities for disabled persons, he said.

"It was a situation where you pay the keenest attention to how people live their lives," Thunder-McGuire said of the project. "The transformation doesn't come from just listening to the stories. Each day, you place yourself in relation to the stories they tell."

He spent an average of five hours at each center. After getting a sense of who lived there, Thun-See STORYTELLER, Page 5A lowa City Road Races is seeking a new charitable sponsor for the Hospice Road Races this fall.

By Troy Shoen The Daily Iowan

After United Way's announcement on July 2 that it would not be a part of this fall's Hospice Road Races, some former participants are wary about maintaining ties with the event.

"It bothers me that my pledge money might have been mishandled," said UI senior Emily Olson. "I want to ask questions to find out if there were underlying circumstances before I take part again."

Olson was one of approximately 4,500 participants who raised more than $100,000 for the 1998 hospice

One reason behind United Way's decision to pull out is that the $97,000 check it received from officials of Iowa City Road Races for the '98 hospice race bounced, said Jim Lane, a member of the United Way board of directors.

However, some volunteers have assured the board that they plan to stick with the race this year, said Jim Barrett, president of the board of directors for Iowa City Road Races, which organizes race events.

But a large group of volunteers from the Delta Delta Delta sorority, which has helped with the event for nearly 25 years, said it is waiting to see what the Iowa City Road Race directors do before continuing its

A study identifying Iowa City's "problem" intersections is leading officials to take action and suggest improvements to make the intersections safer for motorists.

The intersection of Dubuque and Prentiss streets is the most accidentprone in Iowa City, according to a June 9 memorandum given to the City Council. The memo listed the five Iowa City intersections with the highest accident rates, according to a study by the Iowa Department of Transportation.

Addressing these problems usually means relatively minor modifications. In the Dubuque and Prentiss intersection, two metered parking spaces will be removed to improve sight distance for westbound traffic, said Doug Ripley, a city traffic engineering planner.

Other recommended improvements include cutting tree canopies, enhancing pavement markings and modifying the locations of street sign, said a report released by the city.

"We don't like to call these intersections 'dangerous,' " Ripley said.
" 'Dangerous' refers to the driver of the vehicle. These intersections are high-count locations.' The numbers on the memo come from a DOT study conducted from 1992-1996, which compiled statistics on Iowa City accidents. In the four-year period, there were 14 collisions at the Dubuque-Prentiss

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - An original member of the Supremes has lost an appeal of her trademark suit against three women who perform as Former Ladies of the Supremes.

The rights to the group's name are owned by Motown and not by former members such as Mary Wilson, the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said Tuesday.

The court said Motown had allowed Former Ladies of the Supremes - and another spin-off group, Sounds of the Supremes — to keep their names, and there was nothing Wilson could do about it.

Wilson's suit claimed the groups were misleading members of the public into believing they were the authentic Supremes. The court's response wasn't surprising, said Walter Allan, lawyer for Former Ladies of the Supremes — Lynda Laurence, Scherrie Payne and Jean

"She really didn't have a case, and she shouldn't really have taken an appeal," Allan said. Wilson's lawyer, Allen Hyman, declined comment, saying he hadn't seen the ruling.

Reporters assigned to the campaign trail will find a wealth of expertise among UI professors, who are available to analyze candidates' prospects, comment on campaign issues, and compare the current election season with those of previous years. To assist reporters in finding the right professors for their stories, the UI News Services has prepared an experts guide for the lowa caucuses and election 2000.

The guide offers experts on 64 electionrelated topics listed under the general headings of politics, education, business, law, health, science and environment. The guide also includes biographical information, contact phone numbers and e-mail addresses for the 41 UI professors listed. In addition to a printed version, the guide is available on the Web at

"In creating our guide, we tried to anticipate the topics that will be central to this year's campaign so that we'll have experts available for reporters who turn to the UI for commentary and analysis.

The addition of the Caucus 2000 Experts Guide is one of several recent improvements to the news service Web site. A search engine has been added to allow keyword searches of more than four years' worth of archived press releases.

The UI Family Planning Clinic is now offering services for men that include health exams, counseling and safe-sex supplies.

The clinic has been offering these services to women for 20 years, said Paula Laube, director of the clinic. The services were extended to men this month, she said.

"We are expanding services because so many female patients have partners that need access to health care," she said. "Women have traditionally taken responsibility for family planning because they get pregnant. But there is more awareness on the part of men taking their

Nation's deaths following a monthly cycle

Alcohol, drugs and aid checks are linked in a study to the increase in deaths at the start of each month.

> By Janet McConnaughey Associated Press

The number of deaths in the United States rises at the start of every month and drops at the end, and addicts spending their first-ofthe-month government checks on drugs and drink probably account for most of the difference, researchers say. University of California, San 879. USPS (Diego, sociologist David P. Phillips and colleagues reached that conclusion after analyzing nearly 32 milion electronic death certificates over 15 years. The study was to be published in today's New England

Journal of Medicine The researchers suggested that addicts get aid that can be used only for food, clothes and shelter.

"You wouldn't do that for the try it out for a pilot project and see if it would make any difference,"

Phillips found that, during an average year, there were 4,320 more deaths in the first week of every month than in the last week of the preceding month.

That's about a 1 percent difference. But the gap widened when the researchers looked at killings, suicides or accidents in which drugs or drink played a part.

For every 100 such deaths at the end of a month, there were 106 or 107 at the start. And the difference doubled, to approximately 14, when the death certificates listed both drugs and alcohol as a cause. There were 106.5 homicides at the start of the month for every 100 at the end.

Welfare, Social Security and veterans' benefit checks are sent out at the start of the month.

The study "really highlights the extraordinary toll of substance abuse," said Lisa Najavits, a psychology professor Harvard Medical

Phillips got the idea for his study from a 1995 report on 105 schizophrenic cocaine addicts treated at a Los Angeles veterans hospital. They were most likely to test positive for cocaine, to have their worst psychiatric symptoms and to need psychiatric hospitalization during the first veek of each month, and least likely during the last week.

STATE BRIEF

lowa faces heavy food-stamp fine

DES MOINES (AP) — lowa is facing a heavy fine from the U.S. Department of Agriculture because it is making too many mistakes in issuing food stamps. "Because of the way the Department of Agriculture calculates error rate, there will always be states that don't fare well," said Deb Bingaman, acting administrator of the division of economic assistance at the Iowa Department of Human Services.

figures show that lowa ranked 10th in the nation for its food-stamp error rate between Oct. 1, 1997, and Sept. 30, 1998. More than 13 percent of the time, the state either gave families too many or too few food stamps.

This is higher than the national average for error, which was 10.7 for that Because states whose error rates are above the national average can be punished by the federal government, lowa could owe $735,441, Agriculture spokesman Shanholtzer said.

Cultural power shift is killing America's cities

n a recent trip to visit family in New York, I was reminded of the Pretenders' "My City Was Gone."

In the song, lead singer Chrissie Hynde laments the condition of her hometown in Ohio, a place similar and close in proximity to western New York. After having lived for several years in England, Hynde returns to her community to observe that "there was no train station/ there was no

The scenario that the song continues to lay out is of no less relevance today than in the early '80s, when it was written and recorded. In fact, it has become the stark reality of many small and even larger communities throughout the United States. Yet the eschewing of an urban lifestyle for the safe anonymity of the suburbs has become the standard in the United States, despite what it means for us as social and cultural beings.

A drive through Buffalo reveals a ghost of a city once vibrant with commerce and culture. The architectural features of the decrepit buildings downtown are suggestive of an urban sophistication that has long been deserted for the superficiality of the city's surrounding communities. Eighty JAMES TRACY miles southeast of Buffalo is my hometown, and the conditions there are similar. Once a bustling place predicated on the refueling and repair of coal-burning railroad engines, my city has gone through marked changes in just the past 20 years.

Even though there is something that resembles a downtown area, there is little if any reason to go there; many of the shops and offices have closed, unable to compete with the huge grocery and discount department store chains that have set up camp on the town's periphery.

Meanwhile, the money from the community that once may have been re-invested through transactions with local merchants is siphoned off and sent back to the corporate headquarters of the given chain. As of late, there is little if any competition even between these stores. For instance, in the late '70s there were no fewer than five grocery stores in town, and several smaller privately owned "corner stores" and pharmacies. Now there are just two grocery stores, and one of these is only a marginal performer. Two years ago, the largest of the two moved to stave off potential competition by buying up land were other stores might move in. The corner stores have all succumbed to chain-operated "convenient" stores, and the work of the apothecary and mechanic have been engulfed by the largest chain in the world, WalMart.

Such an unbridled centralization of power has implications for, among other things, how we define ourselves as social and cultural to see neighbors and friends on a city street or town commons, the encounter is now more likely to take place in a shopping mall or other such privately owned and operated locations. To its credit, Iowa City has an actual Pedestrian Mall and decently funded Public Library. This, however, is not the

While one used Coralville is a good example of what much of America has become, and it adequately encompasses everything that is repugnant about life in the suburbs — where the shops, the homes and even many of the people share a disturbingly uniform blandness that reflects their preoccupation with status emulation.

Coralville is proof that Iowa City isn't immune to this phenomenon, as many of Iowa City's merchants will attest. Coralville is a good example of what much of America has become, and it adequately encompasses everything that is repugnant about life in the suburbs where the shops, the homes and even many of the people share a disturbingly uniform blandness that reflects their preoccupation with status emulation.

Here, most social activity is short-circuited by routes that exist between the garage, the office, and the mall. What is certain is that the routes between home, work and the favored venues of consumption will offer nothing out of the ordinary, save a traffic accident or two. Nor do they offer little if any interaction at all outside of perhaps a cordial nod or wave to grant a fellow traveler the right Yet this is the lifestyle - the hollow cultural standard - that many of us aspire to. If all of the cities are disappearing, what we are losing along with them is something far more important: the opportunity to choose between the role of the engaged citizen or the self-absorbed consumer.

Even some of the activists opposed to the rebuilding of Prairie du Chien Road admit they're too late to stop it. So over the summer, a multi-lane example of modern civil engineering will make rectilinear hash of the quaint rural curves.

The council's action does involve a legitimate safety issue, as demonstrated by Iowa City's recent Highland Avenue slalom-course fiasco. Anyone who walked, drove or biked on Highland with the speed islands in place found out that narrow and curvy is no safety boon, so evening the grade and losing the curves on Prairie du Chien might fractionally ease dri-

People who take aesthetics' side in a bout against progress hit the mat more often then not in this country, where we equate prosperity with rapidly spending the planet's irreplaceable capital. If America were long on long-term environmental thinking, we might have saved a billion here and there in the Superfund. Didn't we go through this last year? Coral Ridge Mall has given us an asphalt plain the size of Lake Erie, devastated local businesses, and brought us another giant leap toward the presumed goal of matching the anonymous sprawl of, say, Fresno. We all know it, yet the parking lot fills up every weekend.

Of course, from the vantage of our current prosperity, it's easy to romanticize. Historian Arnold Toynbee wrote that Utopia can only begin when a society stops expecting progress. That could happen from despair or from contentment. We could afford a little contentment now that the settlers' successors find their way of life threatened by the next stage of Tuesday's protesters were too late to stop development, but not because of zoning laws carved in granite 39 years ago. They lose because the 223 year-old values that got us here have a firmer hold than our more the recent panic about what those values destroy.

So if you're taking a long detour to avoid the construction this summer, you might want to catch a sunset from the old Sutliff bridge - while it's still there.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Bring back IWP - an open letter to President Coleman

I'm upset by the recent news that the International Writing Program has been drastically downsized over the past year and will probably be eliminated in the near future. Even if it is true that the program is expensive to operate and in need of closer integration with the teaching mission of the university, these are not reasons to cripple a program that has brought diversity and prestige to the Ul for 32 years.

As a 1992 graduate of the Writers' Workshop, I can testify that the IWP was a powerful incentive for me to attend lowa. Many applicants decide to come to lowa based not only on the prestige of the Writers' Workshop but on Iowa City's reputation as a Mecca for writers of all kinds.

The Writers' Workshop is largely responsible for this reputation, but other organizations make crucial contributions, including the International Writing Program. To quote Ramon Lim, the IWP helps create "a community of writers, by building an atmosphere of contemporary international literature on campus, through TV and radio interviews, through informal gatherings and discussions, and through numerous seminars and symposia that all university students can attend."

I came to lowa to enter this community. Yes, I also came to study under excellent, established American writers, but I wanted to be in a place where writers from other countries and cultures also gathered and worked. While it may be true that official relations between the Writers' Workshop and the IWP aren't close, I can assure you that the IWP offers an enriching experience to any Writers' Workshop student willing to take

Contact with the IWP Fellows goes a long way toward inoculating the future fiction writers of America against provincialism and allows us to draw on a vast, global literary heritage when composing our works. A great deal of the Writers' Workshop's luster depends on the community of up-and-coming international writers the IWP provides and constantly replenishes Do you, President Coleman, plan to destroy this community? Do you intend to undo years of hard work by exceptional, talented individuals? To what purpose? I can't believe you, the president of one of the foremost arts universities in the United States, can't get together with your provost and dean of Liberal Arts and find funding for one of the university's best writing programs — for one of the best writing programs in the world. And if it's true, as Dean Maxson says, that the IWP needs to be more closely integrated with the academic mission of the university, then it's clear that the program should be strengthened and broadened, not

It's your job to see this and to make it happen. I hope you will reconsider your intentions for the IWP and do everything in your power to restore the program to its original status, and to be its steward in future years.

Clinton must lead before he leaves

t is true, they say: He is a consummate campaigner. It isn't an election year. He doesn't have anything to lose.

But his actions suggest that he is still campaigning: whether for Al Gore's 2000 run, for Carpetbagger Hillary's Senate campaign, or to save his legacy.

A legacy that, I wish someone would tell him, can only be saved by forgetting about his legacy, and by doing something right - by leading.

But because President Clinton is more concerned with appearances than with civil liberties - than with the federal government's nearly unfettered ability to take property at will - he is actively opposing the best piece of civil-liberties legislation to come out of Congress this

In an effort to enhance America's war chest, Congress, in 1984, gave the Federal government Orwellian power in its ability to seize the property of those suspected of criminal activity. And suspect is the operative word here. All the government has to do in order to take your property is suspect that something illegal has, is, or will transpire on said property. AMANDA COYNE And under current law, the government can keep your property if it shows "prob able cause" that the property is subject to forfeiture. In other words, the burden of proof is on the person whose property has been seized. And probable cause, according to almost any lawyer, is easily justified and becoming more so every day.

Furthermore, there is no limit on the assets law enforcement agencies can seize for even the smallest of violations. If law enforcement agents were to find a marijuana plant growing in someone's backyard or on her or nce, they could seize the entire farm of house, along with the owner's vehicles and anything else owned by that person. And the person would have to post a 10 percent bond to challenge such a seizure.

In more than 80 percent of asset forfeiture cases, the owner of the property is never charged with a crime, yet because civil cases are so hard to fight, and because one is not entitled to a lawyer in civil cases, government officials usually keep the seized property.

Last year, such seizures put $1 billion in federal and local governments' coffers. Naturally, with so much money at stake, there have been abuses.

A man who was traveling with $9,000 to buy nursery stock was detained at a Nashville airport and his cash confiscated because officers told him that anybody carry ing that much cash had to be involved in the drug trade.

He has lied under oath, and generally made a mockery of the highest office in the world. And he's still concerned with whether we think he inhaled?

In Houston, a Red Carpet Motel was confiscated because prosecutors claimed that the management had failed to implement law-enforcement security measures, including raising room rates to make them less affordable to criminals. And these are only a couple of many examples.

The bill that was passed recently puts the burden of proof on the government, requires the government to provide lawyers to property owners who can not afford them, and generally "puts civil liberties back in our system.'

But Clinton doesn't care about such abuses. He doesn't care that, according to even those on the radical right, such laws are a "throwback to the old Soviet Union." What he does care about though - so passionately that he is willing to sacrifice the civil liberties of America's citizens - is that, according to Barney Frank, he is not perceived as an "inhaler."

Inhaling? During his tenure, he has used our countries entire stock of cruise missiles to rain destruction and terror down on Iraq, Sudan, Afghanistan, Yugoslavia, not to mention the $1 million price tag that comes with each missile. He has gutted our welfare system. He has killed thousands of Iraqis through his policy of bombings and sanctions. And many Serbs will probably face the same fate. He has lied under oath, and generally made a mockery of the highest office in the world. And he's still concerned with whether we OK, Mr. President, you didn't. You've convinced me. Now please, act like a big boy and do at least one thing right before you leave office and do not veto this bill. Lead, please, just once. Lead, and then leave.

intersection. Because the east approach to the intersection is on a steep incline and has many parking spaces nearby, vision is restricted, making it easy for collisions to occur, the report said. Ten of the 14 collisions occurred with cars coming from the east, it said.

Leslie Haguth, who works near the intersection at First Insurance Center Limited, 508 S. Dubuque St., said she has had trouble driving westbound on Prentiss going to work in the "Coming up the hill, a lot of people pick up speed and go into the intersection without totally stopping, or they will slam on the brakes, causing problems for the cars behind them," she said.

Haguth said everything is compounded because it is difficult to see up the hill, but there isn't much to be done to improve the condition of the intersection.

"It's mainly the drivers," she said. "If they would just look both ways and stop completely (it would be safe).

The Iowa City Road Races board will meet this week to find a new charity sponsor for the race, which should be an easy task, Barrett said.

Olson disagreed, saying potential sponsors are unlikely to be so willing after last year's fiasco. She added that students connected to United Way may also be reluctant to take part.

"The race will probably have to look for smaller sponsors (than the United Way)," Olson said. "Eventually, they will probably be able to get another big sponsor."

However, Terry Compton, a past runner in the event, does not think that there will be a dearth of participants.

"I will probably take part in this event in the future despite these problems," Compton said. "It is not that much of an issue among the people I run with."

After the '98 hospice race, United Way had questions about how the pledge money was handled questions that the Iowa City Road Races directors were unable to resolve, Lane said.

"It came time when we had to decide whether we were going to continue our relationship with the race," he said. "They were unable to answer some of our questions, so we decided to move on."

United Way eventually received all the money, but its directors were still unhappy about the situation, Lane said.

Study: Alzheimer's vaccine possible

■ The results of research on mice raise hopes in the fight against the brain disease.

> By Peter Svensson Associated Press

Raising hopes of someday preventing Alzheimer's, scientists have developed a vaccine that in mice appears to ward off and even reduce the brain-clogging deposits that are characteristic of the disease.

It is uncertain whether the treatment will work in humans, but the San Francisco pharmaceutical company behind the research wants to test it on people soon.

Deposits in the brain of a sticky protein called amyloid are one of the characteristics of Alzheimer's. The vaccine appears to prevent the formation of these so-called plaques in mice that were genetically engineered to overproduce amyloid.

Dr. Zaven Khachaturian, senior medical adviser to the Alzheimer's Association, called the study a

"If one can repeat the same phenomenon in humans, it will have a very important impact," he said. Even if it fails to produce a treatment, it introduces the idea of using a vaccination against protein deposits, which are associated with a variety of diseases, he said.

There is no known cure for Alzheimer's, which is believed to affect more than 4 million Americans. The patients, most of them older than 60, progress from forgetfulness to dementia and usually die five to 10 years after diagnosis.

In the study, published in today's issue of Nature, a team of researchers led by Dale Schenk at Elan Corp. tried to trick the immune system of the mice to recognize amyloid as a foreign substance that should be attacked.

The researchers injected nine 6week-old mice with amyloid com- years.

bined with substances that excite the immune system. Seventeen other mice of the same age did not get the vaccine.

When the mouse brains were dissected after a year, the researchers were surprised to find no or very small plaques in the injected mice, while the unvaccinated mice had extensive deposits

The researchers then tried a more ambitious experiment: injecting the vaccine into 24 year-old mice that already had plaques. Twenty-four similar mice did not get the vaccine.

"We saw that it completely stopped the further progression of the disease," Schenk said. "It looks like it might have actually diminished the plaques."

Elan wants to start trials with people later this year. Schenk said the researchers hope to submit a vaccine to the Food and Drug Administration for approval in five

Large rallies buoy Yugoslav opposition

Despite their many rifts, the anti-Milosevic forces are hopeful they can force a change in government.

> By Jovana Gec Associated Press

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia -Inspired by several large anti-government protests, opposition leaders are convinced that Serbs finally are resolved to oust President Slobodan Milosevic.

But big obstacles remain, and the goal of a Milosevic-free Serbia may still be months or more away. Achieving it hinges on whether the opposition can overcome their differences, unite their strategy, and parlay growing public anger into a nationwide anti-Milosevic front.

"In the next two weeks, we will see whether the flame will turn into fire," historian Milan Protic said Wednesday. "Milosevic's rule is cracking on all sides. It is now up to us to direct the discontent."

In the past two weeks, thousands of Serbs have rallied in several cities to demand Milosevic's resignation and political reform. Yugoslavia has been impoverished by a decade of neo-communist rule and, most recently, crippling NATO air strikes that destroyed much of its infrastructure and industry.

The protests even occurred in some of Milosevic's past strongholds, such as the town of Leskovac, where 20,000 marched in a spontaneous demonstration Monday.

Leskovac residents were back in the streets for the third straight day Wednesday, demanding Milosevic's resignation and the release of jailed activist Ivan Novkovic. Novkovic, a TV technician, became a protest hero after he interrupted his station's programming to call for a rally Monday against the local governor. He was arrested Tuesday and sentenced to 30 days in jail.

The protests in Leskovac, as well as those in Cacak, Novi Sad and Uzice, point to great discontent with Milosevic's hard-line policies, which led to the NATO bombing of Serbia and the virtual loss of Kosovo, a sacred land to many Serbs. They also show that Serbs may be losing their traditional distrust of the opposition and fear of change.

"The most important thing is that the Serbs have crossed the line," declared Goran Svilanovic, head of the Civic Alliance and one of the leaders of the main prodemocracy group, the Alliance for

Internet romance cut short

TOPSHAM, Maine (AP) -Missouri man who came to Maine to pursue a relationship with a woman he had met over the Internet died after cutting his neck with a chain saw on her front lawn to prove his love.

James Dinardi, 44, of Columbia, Mo., died at a hospital Monday. Police said he had moved to the area on June 23.

"The distraught individual had met the individual lady on the Internet, started up a romance, Police Chief Paul J. Lessard said.

But the woman apparently wanted to end the relationship, so Dinardi drove up to her home, pulled a chain saw from the trunk, and cut part of his neck off to show her how much he cared for her,

But even if Milosevic's situation seems more difficult than ever, the Yugoslav leader may still outmaneuver his opponents by playing on their rifts and lack of organization.

He still controls the powerful state media and retains the apparent loyalty of the police and army as well as the support of many Serbs angry with the West's bombing and perceived siding with Opposition hopes were also high after several huge anti-government protests earlier this decade, particularly the massive daily rallies in the streets of Belgrade and elsewhere in 1996-97.

Opposition leader Draskovic, who served briefly in Milosevic's government earlier this year, is balancing between the proand anti-Milosevic positions. Draskovic says he opposes street protests as a means of forcing Protic, the historian, said opposition leaders must capitalize on growing anti-Milosevic sentiment by presenting the public with a clear, united alternative.

"The people's initial response has even surprised us," he said of the public support so far. "It is happening independently of us and we will ride the wave."

A key opposition figure, Democ- the Associated Press.

ratic Party leader Zoran Djindjic, is calling for daily protests and says the opposition could be ready to call for a general strike in several

The opposition strategy, as outlined by Djindjic at Tuesday's rally in Uzice, is the following: The opposition and the Serbian Orthodox Church call for nationwide protests to run continually until Milosevic resigns and a transitional government is formed to organize free elections under international supervision.

Enlisting the active support of the influential church, which has urged Milosevic's resignation, may be crucial. But it's unclear whether the church, which has traditionally steered clear of politics, would indulge in such a struggle now.

Opposition leaders plan to travel to Kosovo on Thursday to try to win public backing from Serbian Patriarch Pavle and the Holy

The opposition claims to have gathered more than 100,000 signatures in the first week of a petition campaign aimed at pressuring federal lawmakers to start proceedings on whether to oust Milosevic. Some 3,200 people signed the petition in Nis on Wednesday, the first day it was distributed in the southern city, Mayor Zoran Zivkovic told

New look for All-Star

NEW YORK (AP) - This year's All-Star game will have a decidedly new look. wenty-three players will make their All-Star debuts next Tuesday, many taking the place of familiar names who have been slowed by injuries and ineffectiveness.

AL manager Joe Torre and NL manager Bruce Bochy picked their pitchers and reserves Wednesday, with Torre selecting four of his Yankees and seven newcomers. Bochy will bring Padres pitchers Andy Ashby and Trevor Hoffman with him to Fenway Park, along with 16 players who are used to getting three days off midway through the season.

Roger Clemens, Mo Vaughn, Alex Rodriguez, Greg Maddux, Barry Bonds and Kevin Brown will have a rare break before starting the second half. Bonds has been n All-Star seven straight years and Maddux has for the last five.

"Every year, you're going to have one or two deserving guys out, and that's unfortunate," said Rodriguez, who was beaten out by New York's Derek Jeter and Cleveland's Omar Vizquel for the backup shortstop spots. "I'm going to take those three days and rest my knee."

Three of the eight players who signed contracts worth more than $40 million this ffseason - Vaughn, Brown and Albert Belle - won't be making the trip to Boston.

In their place are a bunch of newcomers, ike Baltimore's B.J. Surhoff, whose 855 RBIs in 13 seasons were the most by an active player not to make an All-Star team. "I had a couple of opportunities before, but they didn't work out," Surhoff said.

Or Texas middle reliever Jeff immerman, who sent faxes to all 30 eams two winters ago just for the chance to try out. The Rangers were the only team to bite and Zimmerman has made the risk pay off, going 8-0 with an 0.89 ERA as a rare All-Star middle reliever.

Hawkeyes set to play under the lights at Kinnick

played Miami

By Todd Hefferman The Daily Iowan

Iowa football fans inherited at least two more hours of either bed time or beer time thanks to the UI Men's Athletics Department and ESPN.

The department announced that the Sept. 18 game between the Northern Illinois Huskies and the Iowa Hawkeyes at Kinnick Stadium will start at 5:15 p.m.

ESPN Regional picked up the game as well as the tab for the lights that will adorn the outside of Kinnick Stadium, courtesy of Musco Sports Lighting of Muscatine. The third game of the season will be the first night game since the Hawkeyes hosted the University of Miami in 1992, which the Hurricanes won 24-7.

It will also be the first time in more than seven years that the student faithful and other Hawkeye fans will inherit at least two more hours of playing catch, cooking bratwursts and drinking the finest drops of golden nourishment.

"Students probably won't get up but they'll probably still get up and drink all UI sophomore e n n y Ferguson said.

Others think that the added time will add up to another thing: time in jail.

"There's going to be a lot of drinking and a lot of tailgating," senior Mike Rodriguez said. "More arrests

Vice-president of university relations, Ann Rhodes, said moving the game's starting time back will have benefits, even though there may be additional security precautions.

"The later in the day the game starts, the more we get concerned," Rhodes said. "In the days leading up to the game we will discuss other security measures. (The broadcast) could give us a recruiting advantage, and it gives us a chance to show off our program."

In a written statement men's athletics director Bob Bowlsby said Iowa's expansive TV schedule is indicative of the school's reputation.

"The fact that our entire non-conference schedule is on television is a pretty good indicator of what the fans and TV executives think of the Iowa program," Bowlsby said.

Men's sports information director Phil Haddy said the possible increase in partying is not the only reason Iowa does not have night games.

"It's because of other things too, for one the parking lots are not lit," Haddy said. "Then you have the hospital. One of the other reasons is that we don't have lights and we have to bring in some lights to do it."

The most likely reason that ESPN chose the game between Iowa and the Huskies was that it was the last nonconference game not scheduled for television. The season-opener against Nebraska is slated for ABC, while the in-state rivalry against Iowa State is being picked up by Fox.

The Hawkeyes are coming off their worst season since 1980, when they finished 4-7.

Last season the Hawkeyes went 3-8, 2-6 in the Big Ten. The Northern Illinois Huskies went 2-9 overall and broke the longest losing streak in Division I-A history at 23 games with a 16-6 win over Central Michigan last

The game against the Huskies will be the second night game in a row for the Hawkeyes. The Sept. 11 game against the Cyclones begins at 6 p.m.

NBA to start drug testing

■ The players union wants to dispel a study that said 70 percent of it's players smoke pot.

> By Chris Sheridan Associated Press

NASSAU. Bahamas - Marijuana testing is coming to the NBA, and the players' union wants its rank and file to know the time to stop partying Player representatives for the 29 teams were told at the union's annual meeting to spread the word to their teammates about the league's new drug policy.

Since marijuana can stay in a person's system for two to three months, players who use it in July run a risk of getting caught in October.

"I would think that if guys are using, they got the message last year that they'll be tested," Tyrone Corbin of the Atlanta Hawks said Wednesday. "Some guys, just like society in general, don't get the message until they're caught. Hopefully, they'll get this message and it won't put their careers in jeopardy."

Steroids were also added to the league's banned substances list during the last collective bargaining negotiations, and all players will be tested when training camps open in October. Rookies will be tested four times a season on a random basis.

"When the testing comes, the proof will be in the pudding," said union director Billy Hunter, who scoffed at a report in 1997 saying about 70 per-

Former junior college standout awaits the big time lowa basketball player Rob Griffin's road to Division I basketball has gone through Flint Mich., and Burlington.

By Mike Kelly The Daily Iowan

Two years ago, Rob Griffin left the big city for small town Iowa in order to pursue his dream of playing Division I basketball. Two years later, he will achieve that goal.

After a stint at Southeastern Community College in Burlington, the 6-foot-6 forward from Ypsilanti, Mich., should be a major contributor for Iowa next season, bringing to the table a scoring presence and depth inside.

At Southeastern, he finished eighth in the nation among Division I junior college players, averaging 22.2 points per game. On April 7, Griffin's time spent at SCC paid off as he was awarded the first scholarship of the Steve Alford era.

"It (Southeastern) made me appreciate what I have now, more," Griffin said. "If there wasn't basketball at Southeastern, there was not much to Griffin has burst on the Iowa City basketball map this summer, playing with Goodfellas of the Prime Time League. He announced his presence with authority in the season opener, knocking down 45 points and grabbing 13 rebounds in a 107-100 victory over Merrill Lynch/Nike.

"The thing I like most about Rob is his big-time passion for the game of basketball," new Iowa coach Steve Alford said. "He has a very positive attitude for becoming a better basketball player.'

In April, Alford came directly from the Final Four to Burlington in order to recruit Griffin. His pitch worked well; Griffin canceled a visit to Auburn and signed with the

Some players say drug reports are overblown

cent of the league's players either use marijuana or are heavy

A player also can be tested during the regular season if an arbitrator decides, after a hearing, there is reasonable cause to believe a player has used, possessed or distributed any prohibited substance.

Many players taking part in the union meeting said there are a number of marijuana users, although the total is nothing close to 70 percent of the player population.

Several players, including Chris

Webber, Mookie Blaylock, Vernon Maxwell and J.R. Rider, have been arrested on marijuana-related charges. Sacramento Kings guard Jason Williams was kicked off his college team at Florida for testing positive for marijuana twice.

NBA players who test positive at training camp must undergo a mandatory counseling program. A second positive test brings a $15,000 fine, and any third or subsequent positive test results in a five-game suspension.

"The NBA is like any industry, there's going to be people on drugs," Jim McIlvaine of the New Jersey Nets said. "As role models, people need to know that we don't

"Certainly there are guys out there using, and hopefully they'll get the message that they have to stop," McIlvaine said.

Penalties for such illegal narcotics as cocaine, heroin and PCP are much more severe. A positive drug test - or a conviction or guilty plea to a crime involving one of those drugs — can lead to disqualification from the NBA.

Anyone testing positive for steroids gets a five-game suspension for the first offense, a 10game suspension for a second offense and a 25-game suspension for a third offense.

Androstenedione, the testosterone-producing substance taken he said.

baseball slugger Mark McGwire and others, is not on the NBA's list of banned substances.

"I don't think it's a very big problem in the league," said Corbin, who was at Vancouver's airport in 1997 when Blaylock, his Hawks teammate, was found to be carrying marijuana by a drugsniffing dog.

Danny Schayes of the Orlando Magic said reports of widespread usage are overblown. However, he said drug use - and not just marijuana — was a serious problem when he entered the league in advantage of his kindness."

Griffin is no stranger to playing high-level basketball in the summer. Last season he played in the Pro-Am League, a developmental league for college and CBA players, as well as NBA stars who wanted to keep in shape.

His teammates in the Flint, Mich., based league included NBA standouts like Glen Rice and Steve Smith, as well as Michigan State star Mateen Cleaves.

Although he has played with some of the NBA's best, Griffin said he emulates the style of play of his hero Michael Jordan.

"I always try and play like MJ," Griffin said. "Especially his hard work, determination and passion for the game."

Although he is dominating the Prime Time League, the 1999-2000 season-opener cannot come soon enough for Griffin. "It's Maryland," the amicable Griffin said with a smile. "I'm excited."

Fans still come out to cheer on legends

"The only way I can tell you is that the odds are a good 50-yearold player can beat a 55-year-old player who can beat the 60-yearold player," Doyle said. "So then you read stuff that come 55 and 56, the player's productivity goes down."

The lack of older winners can also be traced to the increase in the quality of play that has occurred since 1980, when the Tour was founded. Palmer won the first Open he entered, in 1981, but he hasn't won since, and hasn't finished in the top 20 since 1987, when he finished fourteenth.

"I have seen more good players," Palmer said. "From 1980 to present, like in everything else in golf, the field has increased in numbers. and I think the caliber of play has increased. It is getting better and better all the time. A lot of people said the Senior Open wouldn't survive. My goodness, if this isn't surviving, we are all dead."

Fans will still have plenty of familiar names to cheer, even though Nicklaus pulled out of the Open Tuesday because of a sore hip. At 69, Palmer still attracts hordes of recruits for "Arnie's Army," and Irwin won the US Open in 1990, and is still competitive on the regular Tour. Lee Trevino, Gil Morgan, and Raymond Floyd are also golfing legends, although it is unclear whether or not Trevino will compete this week.

They will also se some extremely competitive golf. As is tradition for a United States Golf Association event, the greens will be hard and fast and the rough will be deep. Players missing the fairway on their tee shots won't be playing to save par- they'll be playing to save bogey.

I just can't see where there will be a lot of low scores," Irwin said. "If you miss a few fairways and get on the wrong sides of these greens, you are going to be hardpressed to make par."

The tournament starts today and runs through Sunday. The sold-out event will be held at the Des Moines Golf and Country Club in West Des Moines, IA.

The Pirates won their second in a row following four consecutive losses and sent the Cubs to their sixth loss in seven games and 20th in 26 games. The Cubs are a season-low five games under

The only run off Cordova came in the sixth, when right fielder Freddy Garcia misplayed Jose Hernandez's routine fly into a double and Mark Grace singled

The inning before, Garcia put Pittsburgh ahead 1-0 by hitting Mulholland's first pitch of the fifth into the left-field seats for his fifth homer. The drive was estimated at 437 feet.

Devil Rays 3, Red Sox 2

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. - Tampa Bay's Dave Eiland pitched six strong innings to get his first major league win in almost four years Wednesday night, a 3-2 victory over Pedro Martinez and the Boston Red Sox.

John Flaherty, Paul Sorrento and Aaron Ledesma drove in runs for the Devil Rays, who denied Martinez (15-3) his major league-leading 16th victory despite striking out 14 times against the Red Sox ace.

Eiland (1-4) allowed seven hits and struck out one to get his first win in the big leagues since July 21, 1995 when he was with the New York Yankees.

PITTSBURGH(AP) - Keith Athletics 7-4 Wednesday to break a four-game losing streak and avoid being swept by Oakland for the first time in five seasons.

Stevens, who entered the game in the sixth as a defensive replacement. broke a 4-4 tie with his single and the Rangers added another run in the seventh on a throwing error by Oakland catcher Ramon Hernandez.

Reliever Jeff Zimmerman (8-0), who was picked for the AL All-Star squad earlier in the day, pitched 2 1-3 scoreless innings for the win.

Braves 7, Marlins 3

ATLANTA - Greg Maddux is pitching like his old self again.

Maddux allowed one run in six innings before leaving with a bruised foot Wednesday night in the Atlanta Braves' 7-3 win over the Florida

Maddux (9-5) left the game after being hit on the top of his left foot by a grounder hit by Bruce Aven with two outs in the sixth inning. Maddux threw Aven out on the play and limped off the field. X-rays showed no damage.

The right-hander gave up three hits and no walks with five strikeouts to win his third straight start. He is 4-2 with an

0.73 ERA in his last six starts. Tigers 6, Yankees 4

DETROIT — Luis Polonia homered and Detroit hit six doubles off David Cone as the Tigers beat the New York Yankees 6-4 Wednesday night.

Chili Davis hit a two-run homer and Scott Brosius had a solo shot for the Yankees, who grounded into three inning-ending double plays.

Cone (9-4) entered the game with a 2.54 ERA, second-best in the AL, and had a 13-2 career record and 2.62 ERA against Detroit. But he gave up six runs on 12 hits - both season highs - in six innings.

both homered for the White Sox (40-41), who finished the first half of the season one game under .500. Parque (9-6) allowed seven hits and one walk while striking out three.

Expos 3, Mets 1

NEW YORK — Luis Lopez's error in the eighth inning allowed the go-ahead run to score and help the Montreal Expos snap a five-game losing streak with a 3-1 win over the New York Mets on Wednesday night.

Lopez entered the game at third base after Robin Ventura when he was hit by a pitch in the left foot in the third inning. It was Lopez's third game at third base

Terry Jones opened the eighth inning with a single off Turk Wendell (2-1). After a sacrifice bunt, Manny Martinez hit a grounder to third that Lopez threw past first baseman John Olerud, allowing Jones to score the tiebreaking run.

Blue Jays 7, Orioles 6

BALTIMORE — Willie Greene hit a two-run homer in the ninth inning to cap yet another Toronto comeback against Baltimore's beleaguered bullpen and give the Blue Jays a 7-6 victory Wednesday night.

It was the fifth straight game between the teams that Toronto won in its last at-bat. This time, the Blue Jays rallied from a three-run deficit by scoring four runs in the final two innings.

Cardinals 2, Reds 1

ST. LOUIS - Darren Bragg's tworun homer in the bottom of the ninth inning gave the St. Louis Cardinals a 2win over the Cincinnati Reds on Wednesday night.

Scott Williamson (7-3) had pitched two hitless innings before blowing the game in the ninth Pinch-hitter Willie McGee reached on a throwing error by All-Star shortstop Barry Larkin to start the inning. Bragg followed with his fourth home run of the season, just over the right-field

It was just the sixth loss in the last 27 road games for Cincinnati, which lost the first two games in St. Louis. The Reds have the best road record in the league (26-12).

Phillies 5, Brewers 4

PHILADELPHIA - Scott Rolen's homer with two outs in the bottom of the ninth atoned for a blown lead in the top of the inning and gave the Philadelphia Phillies a 5-4 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers on Wednesday

Rolen, who couldn't handle Ron Belliard's bad-hop double into the leftfield corner that capped a two-run ninth and tied it at 2, won the game with a shot off Bob Wickman (2-4).

Rolen had been hitless in his first four at-bats, leading fans to chant "Scotty's due! Scotty's due!" when he came to the plate in the ninth. He responded with his 19th homer of the season.

Twins 4, Indians 3

MINNEAPOLIS - Denny Hocking hit a bases-loaded single through a drawn-in infield in the bottom of the ninth inning to lead the Minnesota Twins to a 4-3 win over the Cleveland Indians on Wednesday night

The Twins had blown a 3-0 lead to win a game in which the benches cleared twice after inside pitches.

Pinch-hitter Doug Mientkiewicz doubled high off the right-field wall off reliever Steve Reed (3-1) and advanced to third when Enrique Wilson's throw to third on Cristian Guzman's sacrifice bunt was late.

Paul Assenmacher relieved and intentionally walked pinch-hitter Chad Allen to load the bases. Hocking, who was 0-for-4, followed with the runscoring single.

Event organizers overwhelmed by World Cup success

The success of the Women's World Cup has amazed its organizers.

By Barry Wilner Associated Press

LOS ANGELES - In Marla Messing's wildest dreams, the Rose Bowl would be filled on July 10, just like nearly every other stadium was when the United States played a Women's World Cup game

And in those dreams, clearly the two best teams in the tournament would be playing for the hampionship. One of those squads, from the host United States, would have captured the fancy of the nation, transcending what has been a history-making

"The last two weeks have been an absolutely exhilarating experience," Messing, president of the organizing committee, said Wednesday. "As big as I thought this tournament could be, it has been bigger.

"It's been like a cultural shift," Messing said, "and the way the tournament caught fire, we've tipped into something. We think this will be a seminal moment, that people will look back in 20 years and say, 'That event is responsible for the development of women's sports."

The tournament has been such a success that it could scare off bidders for the future. Cooper acknowledged that Australia is the only nation to submit a plan to play host to the 2003 Women's World Cup.

Huffman's amazing sacrifice captured on film

Showtime is filming the story of Daniel Huffman. who quit football to save his grandmother's life.

> By David Crary Associated Press

TORONTO - Daniel Huffman watches on the sidelines of a high school football field as movie stars film a scene in "The Daniel Huffman Story.

"It's way too strange," the Florida State student says. Not many 20-year-olds have movies made about them. But not many did what Huffman did give up his football career by donating a kidney to his grand-Huffman's act of love occurred three years ago. That was the summer before his senior year at high school in Rossville, Ill., the small town where his grandparents raised him following his parents' divorce.

His grandmother, Shirlee, badly needed a kidney transplant. There were fears she might die while waiting, perhaps more than a year for a suitable donated kidney.

So Daniel decided to make the donation himself, even though losing one of his two kidneys meant he would have to give up football and other contact sports forever. He was a starting defensive tackle on the Rossville team, and had to shelve plans to play in college.

Since then, there's been a lot of good news for Huffman. His grandmother is now healthy, and he got a full scholarship to Florida State as a student trainer with the football team. That deal came thanks to Seminoles coach Bobby Bowden, who first heard Huffman's story when each of them was honored at a football awards ceremony.

Now Huffman is the subject of a movie being filmed in Toronto: "A Gift of Love: The Daniel Huffman Story."

It is to be televised on the Showtime cable network this fall, although producer Daniel Paulson said it also might be released in movie theaters.

Paulson said he immediately envisioned a film after reading

"Maybe he should make the hits harder - make me look mean."

Also on hand was Bowden, who plays himself in the movie. He almost turned down the role to preserve his family's summer vacation, but decided he owed it to Huffman and to the school to participate.

"Here's a kid - he probably had a future in football, and he gave up his kidney for his grandmother," Bowden said. "You don't see young people doing things like that - I just never heard of anything more valiant."

Huffman, who will be a junior this fall, said he enjoys his work with the Florida State team, which enables him to travel with the squad on road games. Bowden suggested Huffman might have a future as a professional sports trainer, but Huffman said he is enjoying being an English major and might have a try as a sports publicist.

As for the movie, Huffman hopes it moves those who see it.

The death

Commercials of the living dead

California leads way in protecting dead celebrities from unauthorized resurrection.

> By Jeff Wilson Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — With sophisticated technology raising a host of dead icons for encore performances to pitch products, aging stars and surviving family members are taking steps to make sure these digital resurrections come with their blessing.

Television commercials that feature Fred Astaire dancing with a vacuum cleaner, Humphrey Bogart hustling jewelry and John Wayne hawking Coors beer can be powerful sales tools.

Although these ads were authorized by relatives, every so often advertisers will simply pirate a celebrity's likeness to move a product.

In California, where Hollywood has clout, a bill is working its way through the state Legislature that would provide protection for dead icons. Among the key proponents are actress Janet Leigh and Astaire's widow, Robyn.

"Celebrities have control over their images when they're alive, and we ought to give them that same control when they are dead," said state Sen. John Burton, D-San Francisco, author of the California bill.

As Leigh put it: "My image is my product, my franchise, my commodi-

With no federal legislation to protect dead celebrities and their heirs, state Senate Bill 209 guards against unauthorized commercial exploitation of a celebrity's name and likeness, particularly in instances in which that likeness is altered digi-

New York, for instance, doesn't recognize a descendant's right to control publicity at all; Indiana, meanwhile, is the toughest by offering 100 years of protection after death.

There is a need for federal legislation. There is a move toward it, and it continues to build, but we're simply not there yet," said Scott Whiteleather, vice president of the Indianapolis-based CMG Worldwide Inc. CMG, which licenses the rights to use celebrity images, is the leader in protecting and marketing the names and images of such deceased personalities as Bogart, Marilyn Monroe, Babe Ruth, James Dean, Ingrid Bergman and Bette Davis.

"It isn't surprising that the majority of the body of law for this exists in California. This is where the majority of celebrities live," Whiteleather truth." Current California law requires someone who wants to use a dead celebrity's name, voice, likeness or signature for commercial purposes to get permission from the person's survivors. But there are potential loopholes — like for an artistic product that may feature the subject but is owned by others.

Burton's bill would eliminate the exceptions and force those sued by heirs to prove that the use of a dead celebrity's name, voice, likeness or signature was of a journalistic nature and covered by the First Amendment. The bill also increases California's protection period from 50 years to 70 years after death.

Some estates handled by CMG are interested in using the images in tasteful ways, but other clients are more interested in protection than making money.

"There are celebrities and families who might not want their name associated with any product. We have clients who come to us to make sure there is no use of their relative," said Whiteleather, refusing to identify CMG's aggressive posture on behalf of clients has been compared with Walt Disney Co.'s militant protection of its Mickey Mouse and other copyrights.

"We are often referred to as being a bit Disneyesque," Whiteleather

Being bad never felt so good

NEW YORK (AP) - When the original members of Bad Company got together last fall at Black Barn Studios in Surrey, England, they didn't know what to expect.

"We didn't want to get on anybody's toes," said guitarist-songwriter Mick Ralphs. "We were dying to cut loose. Then we launched into an old song." As it turned out, the chemistry was still there. "We went into 'I Can't Get Enough of Your Love," said musician-singer-songwriter Paul Rodgers. "It was like putting

Said Ralphs: "We never came to dislike each other at all. It's remarkable, really. I don't worry it's going to be different now. I don't feel pressure. It feels easy. It feels good."

The group's new 33-song, two-CD set, The "Original" Bad Company Anthology (Elektra Records), presents the band's songs in chronological order. "Can't Get Enough," a No. 5 single in 1974, is the first song on the new CD, followed by "Rock Steady" and the No.

"Some people say it's the soundtrack of their lives, certainly of their youth," Rodgers said.

The original band members were brought back together at the funeral of their manager Peter Grant two and a half years ago. "Led Zeppelin was there. (too, a lot of faces we used to know in the old days," Rodgers said. "We talked
