UIHC rankings slide

■ The hospital fell in some areas of U.S. News and World Report's annual rankings.

By Heather Pavlica
The Daily Iowan

Five of 16 specializations at the UI Hospitals and Clinics saw their rankings decline in the U.S. News and World Report's 10th annual report on America's best hospitals. The UIHC Digestive tract, Endocrinology, Gynecology and Rheumatology areas slipped several points in the rankings since the magazine's 1998 report. The UIHC ranked 19th in Urology last year but did not rank this year.

In the overall rankings, Johns Hopkins, of Baltimore, Md., ranks first on the honor roll of hospitals demonstrating overall excellence. Second is the Mayo Clinic, of Rochester, Minn., and then Massachusetts General Hospital. The UIHC is not on the list.

"These rankings are just one of the factors we use to assess how we are doing in our environment," said R. Edward Howell, UIHC director and CEO. "We went down in some and up in some."

To be included in the rankings, hospitals must be affiliated with a medical school, be a member of the Council of Teaching Hospitals and have a minimum of nine out of 16 key technologies readily available, said Emily Adcock, the corporate communicator for U.S. News.

"We designed the survey to provide readers with information on the best diagnosis and care in each of the 16 specialties," she said.

Joel Weinstock, a UI professor of internal medicine, was skeptical about the UIHC's Digestive tract ranking, which slipped from 25 to 31.

"When people come here, they are amazed with the quality of our facilities," he said. "I do know that the quality of care has changed. We may not be the best, but we are damn good."

Glen, a former UI graduate student, poses next to his car, which has been vandalized four times in the last few months.

When HATE stalks the streets

by Laura Heinauer • The Daily Iowan

He came to Iowa City because he wanted to feel safe. A proud gay man, Glen, who requested that his last name not be printed, moved to Iowa City so he could live in a place where he felt he could express his sexuality without fear of retribution. The past few months have brought a string of what Glen calls hate crimes — that has made him lose sleep, along with the illusion that the town is a haven for those who are different.

The 15 carefully placed stickers plastered on the back of Glen's white Pontiac Grand-Am say a lot about him.

The words, symbols and flags say the former graduate student, who received his master's degree from the UI in May, is pro-choice and "visible." A rainbow-colored sticker also promotes his gay pride.

But the rainbows, ribbons and hearts do not tell the whole story of Glen's life in Iowa City since February.

On four occasions during the past semester, Glen filed reports with the Iowa City police of what he suspects to be hate-related violence targeting his automobile.

He reported the first attack after a Feb. 6 incident in which vandals kicked and stomped on the hood and windshield of his car. The second, on March 25, resulted in a damaged tail light. The third, which left the car's windshield cracked and hood dented, occurred on April 17, when Glen was in the midst of preparing for his comprehensive exams.

After the second incident, Glen said, he would lie awake at night until the bars closed, listening for any outside noise that hinted his car might be in danger. He even went so far as to set up a video camera in his window to record the parking lot while he was sleeping, he said.

By the end of the spring semester, Glen thought the worst was over. He stopped staying up late and filming the parking lot. Then, on June 13, Glen's rear window and hood were attacked, bringing the total cost of all repairs resulting from the four incidents to $1,600.

"The first time it happened, it made me distrustful, and every time since I've been pretty paranoid," he said. "I do a lot of walking now, and when I see people on the street, I wonder if it was them. I'd size up their body size and look at their footwear and wonder if it could have been them."

But after all of the violence he has endured, nothing made Glen feel more helpless than when he saw local residents talking about the series of hate-related shootings in Indiana and Illinois. They didn't think the same thing could happen in Iowa City.

"It's kind of disheartening being targeted because of my sexual orientation, and the police can't help," he said. "But when I realized that people don't even think it's a problem, I decided I had to say something."

According to police records, only two hate crimes occurred in Iowa City in 1998, and none have occurred in 1999.

Reno quashes Shaw appeal

■ The attorney general says the evidence does not warrant reopening the investigation into the death of Eric Shaw.

Associated Press

IOWA CITY — U.S. Attorney General Janet Reno has rejected an appeal to reopen a civil-rights investigation into the deadly police shooting of Iowa City artist Eric Shaw.

The information that the Department of Justice has received does not warrant a reopening of the investigation, said David Slade, a department spokesman.

Eric Shaw, 31, was fatally shot on the night of Aug. 30, 1996, while talking on the phone in his art studio. The shooter was former Iowa City police Officer Jeffrey Gillaspie, who was investigating what he thought was a burglary.

Gillaspie resigned from the department after being told he would be fired.

Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White ruled that the shooting was unjustified but that no criminal charges would be filed. The Justice Department determined last year there was not enough evidence to show that Shaw's civil rights had been violated.

In June, Shaw's parents, Jay and Blossom Shaw, asked Reno to review the Justice Department's decision not to prosecute Gillaspie or the police department.

Shaw family attorney John McLario has said requesting Reno to review the case would likely be the last possible legal action in the matter.

McLario did not return phone calls seeking comment Thursday. Jay and Blossom Shaw's phone number is unlisted.

The Shaws settled a wrongful death claim against the city on Jan. 30, 1997, receiving $1.5 million.

UI employees climbing the stairway to good health

■ The UI Wellness Program has some employees walking that extra mile.

By Troy Shoen
The Daily Iowan

Karl Kreder, a UI associate professor of urology, is taking the stairs.

Kreder is also taking to the Stairmaster three mornings a week at the UI Fitness Loft. Although he is not part of the UI Wellness Program, he can see why it is a success.

"I try to come workout in the morning — it helps me get through the day," Kreder said. "Somedays, though, I need encouragement to come work out."

The Wellness Program provides extra encouragement for UI employees, said Laura Reed, director of work life services. More than 625 UI employees are taking part in the Walk/Run Program, which started in April.

"The program has had an overwhelming response," Reed said. "We were hoping for 100-200 participants, and we far surpassed that."

One of those participants is Cindy Forbes, a nurse at the UI Hospitals and Clinics.

"I decided to take part in the program to lose weight," she said. "Since I started walking two miles a day over my lunch break, I've lost 20 pounds."

The program awards points for how many miles a person walks or runs, said Joan Troester, health promotion coordinator. For example, if an employee runs one mile, he or she receives one point. The more points an employee accumulates, the better the prize, she said.

But prizes are not the only benefits participants receive.

"Since I have started the program, I am more alert at work in the afternoon," Forbes said.

Forbes is the exact type of person the UI is hoping to reach with the program, Troester said.

"In starting the program, we were trying to target people who haven't

Board to announce finalists

■ The School Board has come under some fire for its interviewing process.

By Gil Levy
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa City School Board will announce the finalists for the new School District superintendent at noon today.

The board has met in the central office since Monday in a closed session, conducting interviews of five semi-finalists.

Board member Pete Wallace said he is pleased with the interviews process, despite public criticism of the board's interviewing process.

"We have five really superior candidates," he said. "Choosing among them will be difficult."

Wallace said he was aware of the criticism the board was receiving but pointed out that most of it was not coming from residents.

"Obviously one doesn't like criticism, but it's mostly coming from the Press-Citizen, and not the populous," he said.

Board member Linda Levey said she hasn't received any complaints from citizens; she was reluctant to make comments on the quality of the candidates.

"It could be that we choose none or one, two or three to come back as finalists," she said. "It wouldn't be appropriate at this point to comment on quality."

Reactions to the board's interviewing process were mixed among parents. Sandy Hirsch, who has two children in the Iowa City district, said she understood the need to keep the names confidential. She also thought that the candidates' districts should be understanding of a superintendent's desire to advance.

"They're in high-profile positions and gaining experience to do something else," Hirsch said. "I hope the person will be accessible to parents, not just committees and principals."

Deb Larson, who has two children in district schools, would also like the new superintendent to be involved in the community.

"We need someone who is willing to work with students, teachers and parents," she said. "Someone who

To Selena, with love

BOSTON (AP) — Filmmaker Lourdes Portillo says she decided to make her documentary about slain singer Selena to explore the social forces that transformed the popular entertainer into such a beloved figure.

At Selena's grave, her devoted fans clean her headstone and leave dolls, flowers and intimate notes.

The public television special, "Corpus: A Home Movie for Selena," looks at the star's hometown of Corpus Christi, Texas, and the legacy she left behind.

The film, to be aired July 23, includes clips of Selena singing as a young girl, home movies, interviews with her family and a debate on her value as a role model.

Selena was killed in 1995 by the president of her fan club, Yolanda Saldivar, who is serving a life sentence for murder.

Rapper to chill in the house

TORRANCE, Calif. (AP) — Grammy Award-winning rapper Coolio pleaded guilty to a charge of being a felon in possession of a firearm and was sentenced to 10 days in jail and 40 hours of community service.

Coolio, 35, whose real name is Artis Leon Ivey Jr., also was placed on two years probation Wednesday by Superior Court Judge Andrew Kauffman.

Coolio was driving in Lawndale on Sept. 15, 1998, when a sheriff's deputy stopped him for allegedly driving on the wrong side of a street.

He told the deputy he had a gun in a door pouch, and the deputy seized the pistol, said prosecutor Alexis De La Garza.

Getting a slice of 'American Pie'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Don't confuse Don McLean's classic "American Pie" with the current movie of the same name.

The racy teen comedy has nothing to do with McLean or his popular 1972 song, though the singer did come to "an agreement" with Universal Pictures about using the name, McLean's lawyer, Bert Deixler, said Wednesday.

Although "American Pie" refers to "the day the music died," McLean says he never has stopped performing it.

"I have always sung 'American Pie' for my audience and would never think of disappointing them, because it is they who have given me a wonderful life and untold affection for almost 30 years," he said in a statement.

Liz Buckman, a Burlington resident who met her husband at a previous race, has participated in the dragon boat races for nine years.

"Anyone who hasn't tried it should," she said. "It's great fun. You meet a lot of people. Even if your team doesn't win, you still cheer the other teams on."

Dragon boat racing has been celebrated for more than 2,400 years and is held on the fifth day of the fifth moon of the Chinese lunar calendar, according to a brochure produced by festival organizers.

The races commemorate the spirit of Qu Yuan, a Chinese statesman and poet who drowned himself to protest the corrupt Chu Dynasty, the brochure said.

Fishermen saw him drowning and raced out to save him but were too late. The dragon boat races re-enact their attempted rescue.

Stanford professor to join faculty as African-American World Studies chairman

Horace Porter, an associate professor in the Stanford University English department, has accepted the position as professor and chairman of the UI African-American World Studies Program, announced Linda Maxson, dean of the College of Liberal Arts. He will begin at the UI in August.

Porter is a specialist in American and Afro-American literature and culture with special interests in autobiography, Ralph Ellison, Normal Mailer, Herman Melville and Toni Morrison. He will hold a joint appointment in African-American World Studies and English.

"I am certain that Porter's leadership will invigorate and energize the program," Maxson said. "He has all kinds of ideas for conferences, outreach programs and visiting faculty appointments. I will be looking to him to be active in building bridges between African-American World Studies and other programs in the college and the university."

Libraries' book-finding OASIS to fade away

A new $1.5 million on-line cataloging system will be put in by the UI Libraries next year.

By Chris Rasmussen
The Daily Iowan

The UI Libraries will replace the aging OASIS cataloging and acquisition system with a more recent, user friendly, Web-based program, starting in August 2000.

The new system, known as ALEPH 500, will be a much-needed improvement. It will come with a $1.5 million price tag, said Donna Hirst, a UI librarian.

"OASIS is dinosaur stuff," said Hirst. "It was first developed in 1970. ALEPH was developed in 1996 and can take better advantage of modern technology."

The modern technology that ALEPH will utilize best is the World Wide Web. Unlike OASIS, ALEPH will not require a special connection to access it from remote sites. For students who spend time on the Web, ALEPH should be familiar territory.

"It will be on the Web," said Hirst. "People with no training will be able to do basic searches."

OASIS, an acronym for Online Access System for Information Sources, is often seen as confusing or intimidating by students. UI junior Julie Ryberg said she's had her share of troubles with the system.

"It's confusing when you first come to school," she said. "I'm a junior now, so I know what I'm doing."

— Julie Ryberg, UI junior, on using OASIS everyone thought it was a strong system," she said. "The vendor has been very responsive."

To ease the skepticism, ALEPH has been modified to suit the UI, she said. One final modification will be the name; ALEPH 500 will be replaced by a UI acronym, much like OASIS.

The libraries considered installing the system earlier, but Y2K posed a problem.

"We considered December 1999, but because of the year 2000 cut-over, a quick consensus was made to wait until the next available time."

DI reporter Chris Rasmussen can be reached at: chris-rasmussen@uiowa.edu

Both systems are known as "integrated library systems," and they both can handle a multitude of tasks. Currently, books are ordered, circulated and catalogued through the OASIS system. The ALEPH 500 will do the same tasks more efficiently, Hirst said.

The library first started seriously looking into acquiring a new system in 1993, and four systems were evaluated from four different vendors.

"I've been asking for it a long time," Hirst said. "It was a fairly complex system of evaluation."

ALEPH, which is made by Ex Libris, an Israel-based software producer, was decided upon by a steering committee of 15 members.

"It ended up being a unanimous vote by the committee," Hirst said. Despite the unanimous vote, there were some who doubted ALEPH's abilities.

New Supreme Court rulings redefining police work

Nation's police must learn newest Supreme Court guidelines

By Richard Carelli
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Wyoming Highway Patrol troopers who pulled over a speeding car had no idea a backseat passenger was carrying drugs in her purse. But they ended up looking inside it anyway, a search now condoned by the nation's highest court.

That ruling is part of an annual summer ritual in which police departments across America are detailing for officers the Supreme Court's latest "dos" and "don'ts" of their work — guidelines that become part of the fabric of daily life.

The Wyoming troopers had noticed a hypodermic syringe in the driver's shirt pocket, and he admitted having used it to take drugs. That sparked a search of the whole car. This spring, the nation's highest court said the purse search was legal even though police had no reason to suspect the passenger of any crime.

In the court's recently ended 1998-99 term, police won some and lost some.

Stephen McSpadden, general counsel of the National Association of Police Organizations, said efforts are underway to familiarize law enforcement officers with the court's relevant latest decisions. They include:

- If police have reason to believe a car's driver has committed a crime, may they search the possessions of all passengers in that car? Yes.
- May police generally search motorists and their cars after ticketing them for routine traffic violations? No.

- Can police let TV camera crews and other news media accompany them when they enter someone's home to conduct a search or make an arrest? No.
- Can police tell people loitering with known street gang members to move on and arrest them if they refuse? No.
- May police, acting without court warrants, seize someone's car from a public place if they believe it was used for a crime? Yes.

"The court defines the constitutional boundaries that have to be respected whenever the police interact with citizens," said Steven Shapiro, national legal director of the American Civil Liberties Union. "The court's role is to tell police when they have crossed a line they cannot."

Hospital rankings slip

Opinion Research Center, a social science non-profit research center in affiliation with the University of Chicago, compiled and collected survey data from 2,400 randomly selected specialists, said Julie Antelman, public information coordinator for the research center.

A hospital's overall score was based on three parts: a reputation survey, an annual survey and a mortality rate.

In the reputation survey, the specialists were asked to choose the best hospitals regardless of location or expense, Antelman said.

An annual survey, the second survey done by the American Hospital Association, asked various hospital questions on the kinds of equipment, specialty services and doctor-to-patient ratio, she said.

Despite some departmental declines in the specialties, UIHC still ranks second in Otolaryngology — ear, nose and throat — according to the report.

Richard Smith, a UI professor of otolaryngology, attributed the success of his department to teamwork.

"There is a lot of excitement, and we function well as a team," said Smith.

Iowa City shows flashes of intolerance

However, it is hard to determine actual numbers on instances of hate crimes because a motive must be established for an incident to be labeled a hate crime, said Iowa City police Sgt. Mike Lord.

"They won't call it a hate crime unless they etch the word 'fag' in the paint," Glen said.

"This is a pretty safe community for diversity. You just don't see much of it here," Lord said. "But it does happen, and sometimes it can be hard to tell."

Dawn Kirschmann, a member of the UI Lesbian, Gay and Bisexual Staff and Faculty Association, said she feels safe in Iowa City, but she knows of several occurrences in which people have endured both verbal and physical abuse.

"Iowa City is not perfect, and homophobia is present in Iowa City — I don't think anyone would dispute that," she said. "But this is definitely a gay-friendly town."

And it's not only homosexuals who feel at home in Iowa City. Susan Mask, director of the UI Office of Affirmative Action, said that like other college towns, Iowa City is more open to diversity.

However, even though there may be a lot of good will in Iowa City, it only takes one or two incidents to change people's perceptions, she said.

"Because the numbers are so small, we don't have a critical mass that tests the tolerance and acceptance level yet," Mask said. "It will be interesting to see if Iowa City stands up to that test."

It didn't for Glen. Regardless of the city's reputation, Glen said, his stickers made him a target.

He said he has not seen any other vandalized cars in the area where he lives and can't think of any acquaintances who would want to do this to him. That he lives in an area where there is a lot of late-night bar traffic may contribute to the problem, he said.

In the week since the hate-related shootings, the Iowa City Hate Act Rapid Response Team has not made any plans to commemorate the people who lost their lives because of hate crimes, said the group's founder, Faith Wilmont.

Since it was formed in February, the response team meets once a month to offer support and encourage pro-active steps toward stopping crimes of hate, she said.

However, knowledge of the group came too late for Glen. Having not heard of it until just recently, Glen said, he has not sought help from anyone locally except his friends and co-workers.

Glen said he will move to California in a month; while it is something he has been planning to do for more than a year, he is looking forward to getting away.

"When they ask me about the Midwest, I'll say, 'Well, I was in a progressive town, and my car still got vandalized four times,'" he said.

And while he doesn't want to blame Iowa City for the treatment he received during his stay, he said the town's image should not be taken for granted.

"It's the only place in Iowa that I would live, but it's not perfect," he said. "There is no such thing as a safe place. Everywhere you go you take risks."

been physically active," she said. "We are hoping that, by employees being physically fit, worker productivity will increase."

The wellness group is proposing a targeted program for employees that would meet their specific health needs, Reed said.

The program would be in line with the UI's goal of improving personal employee relationships, said Robert Foldesi, director of human resources.

"The university provides many health services to employees," he said. "We like to look at employees as a person in an entirety rather than just coming to work and putting in an 'x' amount of hours as a resource to the university."

The Walk/Run Program was started this just spring; the Wellness Program was started 15 months ago by the UI Wellness Group, which is made up of the UIHC Counseling and Health Promotions Services, the Employee Health Clinic and Work Life Services, Reed said.

"The university appreciates employees and their contribution to the university," Foldesi said. "We value their health."

Many organizations start wellness programs in the hope that it will reduce health-care costs for the company, said Amy Fletcher, a fitness specialist at Health Iowa.

"A healthy individual can handle stress better, feel better, have a lower incidence of anxiety, and reduce the risk of chronic illness," Fletcher said. "Companies should definitely provide this service for employees."

thinks of all different areas, not just her or his agenda."

In addition to board members, the interviewing process of the semi-finalists has been overseen by three community members, representatives from the Iowa City Chamber of Commerce, the Districtwide Parents Organization, as well as a local teacher.

Wallace said that the contributions of the three representatives have been very helpful.

Community members also had the opportunity to send questions to the candidates and read their responses. The candidates were referred to as Candidates A-E

Two questions approved by the board for candidates included issues relating to the future of school programs and the changing needs of students, and the amount of community involvement a superintendent should have.

All candidates agreed and stressed that community involvement, along with input from students, teachers and principals, was essential for a successful district.

The candidates' ideas on the future of schools emphasized the importance of meeting individual student needs and using as many possible resources in their aid.

The board will move to open session today at noon at the Central Administration Office, 509 S. Dubuque St.

Interviews of finalists by the board and two citizen groups are scheduled to begin next week; a public forum will be held after the interviews.

Discontent spreads in Yugoslavia

Opponents of Milosevic stoned his party's headquarters during a protest south of Belgrade.

By Aleksandar Vasovic
Associated Press

PROKUPJE, Yugoslavia — Protesters demanding the resignation of Slobodan Milosevic stoned his party's headquarters here Thursday after a supporter of the Yugoslav president fired gunshots into the air to disrupt the rally.

A scheduled counter-demonstration by government supporters failed to materialize, and police did not interfere with the rally by approximately 4,000 demonstrators, the latest in a series of public protests demanding that Milosevic step down.

"We will chase him out," said Goran Svilanovic, a top figure in the Alliance for Change, an umbrella group of opposition parties that organized the rally and other recent anti-Milosevic protests.

Opposition parties are trying to capitalize on the growing discontent among Serbs against Milosevic over the loss of historic Kosovo province after a widely destructive 78-day bombing campaign.

"They put shame on us, killing

Darko Vojinovic/Associated Press

Demonstrators gather Thursday in the town of Prokuplje, 155 miles south of Belgrade, to protest against Yugoslav President Slobodan Milosevic.

and burning in our name," Svilanovic said, referring to atrocities committed by Milosevic's forces in Kosovo.

"Too much evil has been done for them to be forgiven," said historian Milan Protic, another alliance activist. "It is too little to just demand that they leave; we must make them leave."

For the planned counter-demonstration, only roughly two dozen Milosevic supporters showed up, mostly elderly, and traded insults with the protesters in Prokuplje, a town of about 20,000, some 120 miles south of Belgrade.

One protester was slightly injured in a shoving match with government supporters. Some of the counter-demonstrators hung a banner on a nearby roof calling the protesters "traitors."

A Milosevic supporter came out of a local office of the ruling Socialist Party and fired several gunshots into the air. No one was injured, but protesters began to throw stones at the building until their leaders appealed for calm. Police did not intervene.

Vermont court mulls gay marriages

The Granite State may become a test ground for same-sex nuptials.

By Ross Sneyd
Associated Press

MONTPELIER, Vt. — Peter Harrigan and Stan Baker try to make sure they're close to the phone around 11 a.m. on Fridays.

For almost eight months now, the two men have awaited the weekly release of Vermont Supreme Court decisions to learn whether they can get married.

The high court decision — which could come at any time over the next few months or years — could make Vermont the first state to allow gay marriage. As a result, the case is being closely watched across the country.

"If there's any place it could stick in the country, I think it's Vermont," said Vermont law school Professor Greg Johnson. "It strikes some deep chords here about the tradition of independence, letting people do what they want with their private lives."

So far, the notion of allowing two men or two women to marry has not found acceptance in any state. Courts in Alaska and Hawaii have ruled in favor of gay marriage. But they were essentially overruled by the voters last November, though there's still legal wrangling.

That puts Vermont at the forefront of one of the biggest political debates of the day. No other state's high court is dealing with the issue.

Baker and Harrigan and two lesbian couples sued in 1997 when their town clerks, on the advice of the Vermont attorney general, denied them marriage licenses. As in the Hawaii and Alaska cases, the Vermont couples argue that marriage is a fundamental right.

Legal marriage would afford gay and lesbian couples a wide range of civil benefits in Vermont, including family leave, bereavement leave, retirement and pension benefits, health insurance, inheritance, and the right to make medical decisions on behalf of a same-sex partner.

If the court rules in favor of same-sex unions, opponents could seek to amend the state Constitution to thwart the decision. But that's not as easy in Vermont as it is in most other places, such as Hawaii and Alaska.

Two successive Legislatures must approve a proposed constitutional amendment. It then has to be adopted by a statewide vote of the people. The process generally takes four years.

Youth violence continues to drop, statistics say

Statistically, things are looking up for America's kids, a government report says.

By Laura Meckler
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Despite fears about violence in schools, the number of kids committing and falling victim to crime has been dropping since 1993, according to a government report on the state of American children.

The report painted an improving and mostly hopeful picture of children and teens, with vaccinations and preschool enrollment up and teen smoking and childbirth down.

"The trend is in the right direction. We're sailing with wind," said Kristin Moore, president of Child Trends, a research group.

Still, Moore notes that there's been no progress in reducing teen alcohol consumption or increasing health insurance coverage, and even the areas that have seen improvement are still disturbing. "We're not where we should be," she said.

The annual report, released Thursday, is designed to be a broad assessment of the state of the nation's children, a collection of statistics from across the federal government. Backers hope it will some day reach the prominence of the annual economic report to the president.

"I would contend that our children are as important to the future of the country as the economy," said Dr. Duane Alexander, director of the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development. "The stock market will never depend on it, but I hope the report will annually at least focus attention on the status and condition of our children."

Lately, much of the attention on teens has dealt with violence, as the nation struggles to understand school shootings in Colorado, Georgia and elsewhere. But youth violence has actually been dropping since it peaked in 1993.

"The public in general doesn't have a very accurate view of violent crime," said Margaret A. Zahn, a criminologist at North Carolina State University.

In 1997, there were 31 serious violent juvenile crimes committed for every 1,000 children ages 12 to 17. That's down from 52 per 1,000 in 1993 and is the lowest rate since 1986, according to the Justice Department. Still, in 1997 there were 706,000 violent crimes involving one or more of these teens.

There are also fewer teen victims of crime. There were 27 victims for every 1,000 people ages 12 to 17 in 1997. That's down from 44 in 1,000 in 1993, Justice said.

Part of the decline can be traced to the overall decline in all types of crime, which is tied to the strong economy, said Zahn, who is dean of the College of Humanities and Social Sciences at North Carolina State.

"There are a lot of kids on the margin," she said. "They have legitimate jobs that they didn't have before."

She speculates that policy-makers were alarmed by the rising numbers in the late '80s and early '90s and instituted programs that have begun to work. She pointed to a Philadelphia recreation program that was shut down during budget cuts in the 1980s, and then reopened after tax collections and concerns rose.

The entire report, issued by the Federal Interagency Forum on Child and Family Statistics, is available on the Internet at <http://childstats.gov>.

ISU's Groce arrested

AMES, Iowa (AP) — Iowa State's leading receiver is charged with assaulting another student, but he said it is a case of mistaken identity. Damien Groce, 20, was charged Tuesday with serious misdemeanor assault. Gordon Thunder told campus police officers that he was hit in the face. His injuries were visible, but not believed to be serious, officials said. Groce, who led Iowa State with 47 receptions for 640 yards and seven touchdowns as a junior last season, has been suspended from the team, according to athletic department policy. Groce said Wednesday that the real assailant, whom he declined to name, would confess. Campus police acknowledged that they have talked with someone else who was on the scene. "The arrest was based on witness and victim identification, however, the incident is still under investigation," said Jerry Stewart, associate director of Iowa State's Department of Public Safety. Stewart did not immediately return a phone call Thursday seeking comment. Groce spent Tuesday night at the Story County Jail in Nevada. He was released Wednesday morning without having to post bond.

Senior Open leader overcomes ailments, slow start

■ Ed Dougherty made two eagles en route to 4-under-par 68 Thursday.

By Chuck Schoffner
 Associated Press

WEST DES MOINES, Iowa — Ed Dougherty, whose litany of physical ailments could fill a medical journal, rallied after a faltering start to grab the first-round lead Thursday in the U.S. Senior Open.

Helped by two eagles, Dougherty matched a Senior Open record with a 30 on the back nine of the Des Moines Golf and Country Club and finished at 4-under-par 68.

The tricky, undulating greens that were the talk of the practice rounds proved no problem for Dougherty, who curled in a 20-foot putt for a birdie, three-putted only once and 10 times got away with just one putt.

Gil Morgan, Bruce Summerhays and Walter Hall were two strokes back at 70, with defending champion Hale Irwin and 1997 winner Graham Marsh leading a group at 71.

"I am absolutely thrilled," said Dougherty, who won only once on the

PGA Tour and has yet to win as a senior. "But it is only the first round. I hope I am here Sunday afternoon talking to you. Then I will be really thrilled."

He wasn't so thrilled with his start. Dougherty bogeyed three of the first eight holes and had to give himself a pep talk while walking to the ninth tee.

"I said maybe I can grab a birdie here, make the turn 2-over and have a chance to shoot par," he said. "I think even par in a U.S. Open is a great round."

Par? How about 6-under for the back nine.

Dougherty sank a 10-foot putt for birdie on No. 9, then turned it on. He made par on No. 10, sank a 5-foot putt for birdie on No. 11 and got an eagle on the par-4 12th hole with an 8-iron after pushing his tee shot into the right rough.

"It just landed soft and rolled into the cup," he said. "I mean, that was really something."

His second eagle came on No. 15, a par-5. From 250 yards, Dougherty used a 5-wood to drop the ball 6 feet from the pin and rolled in the putt. He made a 20-footer for birdie on 16, and parred 17 for his third straight 3. The string was broken with a par on No. 18.

"I didn't realize that until I signed my scorecard," Dougherty said. "Then I was disappointed I missed that putt on 18. But I had a good day."

After what Dougherty has endured, it's a good day when he can make it to the course. He had major surgery on his left shoulder in April 1996 and couldn't even pick up a 1-pound weight when he began physical therapy, hard to imagine of a man who now sports burly 15-inch forearms.

On his 50th birthday in 1997, he herniated two discs in his back squatting to pick up a box of tissue. And earlier this year, Dougherty blew out a ligament in his right wrist.

Summerhays felt fortunate to play in the morning, before the heat of the day settled in and the wind picked up.

PRIME TIME LEAGUE

Fieldhouse suffers second loss

By Todd Hefferman
 The Daily Iowan

The first game on Thursday's Prime Time League schedule pitted two of the best small forwards in the league when Kurt Spurgeon and first-place The Fieldhouse/Gringo's took on Rob Griffin and Goodfellow Clothing.

Goodfellow took every advantage to run against The Fieldhouse, putting up an early 8-0 run with buckets by David Kruse, Aaron Deeter, and an emphatic follow-up dunk by Griffin to take a 20-15 lead.

With 1:37 to go in the game, Spurgeon followed up a Thompson miss to put The Fieldhouse up 101-99, but a Griffin three-pointer put Goodfellow back in front 102-101. After a Deeter steal, Richard Willock of Goodfellow was fouled. His first free throw clanged off the back iron, but the second one trickled in to give Goodfellow a 103-101 lead. Jason Price rebounded Thompson's miss but lost the ball out of bounds, giving the ball back to The Fieldhouse one more time.

After working the ball to Voss, who came around a screen, Price, his defender, promptly left him wide-open for the potentially game-winning shot.

"I was trying to come around a screen, I fell on the ground," Price said. "I was just hoping he missed."

Voss did miss, and Goodfellow became only the second team this season to beat The Fieldhouse, winning 106-101 when Goodfellow's Malcolm Brown sank a last-second three-pointer as time expired for the final margin of victory.

"We needed a win, we haven't had all our people for all the games," Goodfellow player-coach Ray Lynch said.

Price was happy to have Goodfellow's strongest scoring threat back in action. Griffin scored a game-high 27 points and snared nine rebounds.

"We had Rob back, and got that scoring we needed," Price said. "He's like Mike, so you gotta get him the ball."

Greg Spurgeon was disappointed with his team's second loss, but was happy how his team put themselves in a last-second position to win the game.

The Fieldhouse remained in first-place with a mark of 5-2, while Goodfellow moved to 3-4 on the year with four games to go.

Grudges held in World Cup clash

■ Some Chinese fans think a victory would avenge perceived injustices by the U.S.

By John Leicester
 Associated Press

BEIJING — Sure, sports and politics shouldn't mix. But there's too much bad blood between China and the United States for their clash in the Women's World Cup final to be just about scoring goals.

For some Chinese, a drubbing of the U.S. women in Saturday's eagerly anticipated match would help avenge the May 7 accidental bombing of China's embassy in Yugoslavia.

"I really hope they lose face," said Wang Zhanjun, a Beijing factory worker who runs a fan club for a men's soccer team. "Economically, militarily, we can't punish America, so we have to use soccer."

Grudges aside, Chinese sports fans long starved of success in men's international soccer are looking forward to finally seeing China make good.

To enthusiasts' huge disappointment, the Chinese men's team has never even qualified for a World Cup — let alone been in a position to win one. So the success of the women has seemed almost heaven-sent.

Liu Ailing and Sun Wen — China's top women players — are on their way to becoming household names. One official newspaper refers to the team as "China's roses."

Even Wu Yi, China's most senior female politician and a tough trade negotiator, has gotten swept up in the excitement. Wu, a Cabinet member, reportedly interrupted a speech to

Reds get back on track against Cards

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Greg Vaughn and Mike Cameron each homered, and Pete Harnisch won his third straight to lead the Cincinnati Reds to a 8-5 win over the St. Louis Cardinals on Thursday night.

The win averted a three-game sweep by the Cardinals who were attempting to get over the .500 mark for the first time since June 8.

Vaughn hit his 19th home run in the first off Kent Mercker (2-5) after Sean Casey was hit by a pitch. Cameron led off the second with his ninth homer, making it 3-0.

Harnisch (9-6), who has won seven of his last 10 decisions, gave up four runs and eight hits in 5 2-3 innings. Danny Graves pitched the ninth for his 12th save in 15 chances.

The Reds scored twice in the third to chase Mercker who allowed five runs and six hits in his 2 1-3 innings. Mercker had allowed only five runs in his previous three starts.

White Sox 6 Royals 5

CHICAGO — Magglio Ordonez hit a bases-loaded double with one out in the ninth inning Thursday, driving in the tying and winning runs as the Chicago White Sox came from behind for a 6-5 victory over the Kansas City Royals.

The Royals had taken a 5-4 lead in the ninth on Carlos Beltran's two-run homer, his 12th.

The White Sox loaded the bases in the bottom of the ninth when reliever Tim Lincecum walked Liu Rodriguez leading off. Ray Durham reached on a throwing error by first baseman Mike Sweeney. One out later, Don Wengert walked Frank Thomas, loading the bases.

Ordonez, the team's lone All-Star representative, hit a 3-1 pitch from Wengert into the right-center field gap.

Expos 4, Mets 3

NEW YORK — Shane Andrews' pinch-hit sacrifice fly in the top of the eighth lifted the Expos to a come-from-behind 4-3 win over the New York Mets on Thursday.

The Mets bullpen, which had a 3.25 ERA over their last eight appearances, allowed two runs and failed to hold a lead for starter Masato

Yoshii, who allowed two runs and four hits in six innings after being touched up for eight runs against the Braves last Friday.

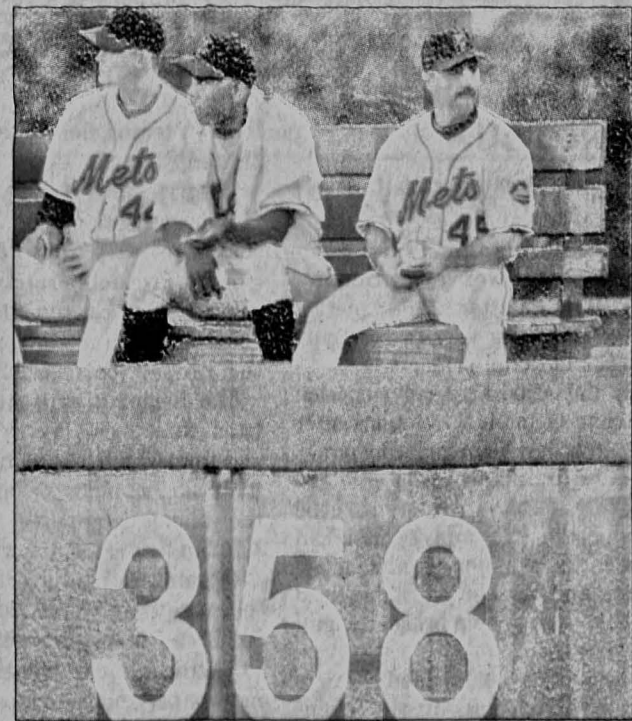

The Mets built a 3-1 lead before Vladimir Guerrero's home run off Yoshii in the top of the sixth brought the Expos to within a run.

Blue Jays 11, Orioles 6

BALTIMORE — The Toronto Blue Jays hit six home runs, including two each by Willis Otanez and Tony Batista, and completed their second three-game sweep of Baltimore in 10 days with an 11-6 victory Thursday.

Carlos Delgado and Shannon Stewart also homered for the Blue Jays, who won 10 straight over the Orioles and took the season series 11-1. Toronto hit 21 home runs in the 12 games, including nine in this series.

The Blue Jays beat Baltimore three straight times last week in their last at-bat, then won twice in the same fashion Tuesday and

New York Mets reliever John Franco, right, sits with Jason Isringhausen and Pat Mahomes in the bullpen Thursday.

DENVER — Mark Grudzianek drove in three runs and Chan Ho Park helped his cause with two RBIs as the Los Angeles Dodgers outlasted the Colorado Rockies 11-8 on Thursday.

The Dodgers, who won for just the second time in 11 games, built leads of 5-0 and 10-5, averting getting swept in the four-game series.

Park (5-7), who had lost his previous four starts, won despite allowing 10 hits and seven runs in five innings. His ERA rose to 6.52. Jeff Shaw pitched the ninth for his 19th save in 20 chances.

Madole took the lob from Brian Thomas with 1.7 seconds to play and banked it home to steal the game from Fitzpatrick's, who stormed back after being down by as much as 15 points late in the game.

"Otis, I, and Brian Thomas were talking about it. Brian said just throw it up there and see if one of us could tip it in."

Fitzpatrick's took their first lead of the second-half when Ryan Hogan drained a three with 4.9 seconds on the clock. Thomas drove baseline on the ensuing possession but the ball was knocked out of bounds, setting up the final play.

Millwood (11-4), selected to his first All-Star team on Wednesday, struck out 10 and walked one to win his fifth straight start. He allowed no hits after the fifth inning in his fourth career complete game and first since Aug. 25 at Houston.

Brian Jordan and Ryan Klesko also homered for the Braves, who have won six of their last eight games.

Yankees 3, Tigers 2

DETROIT — Tino Martinez hit a tiebreaking leadoff homer in the ninth inning as the New York Yankees won their final game in Tiger Stadium, beating Detroit 3-2 Thursday night.

Martinez lined a 2-2 fastball from C.J. Nitkowski (1-3) into the upper deck bleachers in right-center to break a 2-2 tie and make a winner out of Orlando Hernandez (10-6).

"El Duque" went eight innings to win for the fifth time in his last six decisions. He gave up two runs and seven hits, with two walks and seven strikeouts. He struck out the last four batters he faced, including the side in the eighth.

Mariano Rivera got the last three outs for his 22nd save.

Cubs 9, Pirates 4

PITTSBURGH — Jose Hernandez homered and drove in four runs and the Chicago Cubs, accustomed lately to losing by big scores, roughed up Pittsburgh rookie Kris Benson for a 9-4 victory Thursday night.

Hernandez keyed a five-run third inning off Benson (6-7) with a three-run homer, then added an RBI single in the fifth while going 3-for-3 with a walk.

The Cubs were outscored 217-130 while losing 20 of 26 before Dan Serafini (2-1) continued the Pirates' struggles against left-handed starters, yielding two runs over five innings in his first NL start. The Pirates are 9-16 against left-handers.

Morgan made a late charge and was 3-under through 17. But he got into trouble on No. 18 when his approach from 110 yards flew the green and he bogeyed the hole.

Irwin's 71 was six strokes better than his opening round in last year's Open, but he wasn't taking much solace in that. He missed makeable birdie putts on the first two holes and never got into a groove, finishing with three birdies and two bogeys.

"The goal today was to get off to a good start and I didn't do that," said Irwin, who has won three of his last five tournaments.

"That will be the goal tomorrow," he said, "to get off to one of those good starts where you get the momentum early and you don't feel like you are trying to catch up during the round. Because the greens are not going to allow you to catch up a lot."

provide her audience with game updates during China's 5-0 semi-final defeat of Norway on Sunday.

A similar battering of America could go a long way to restoring China's national pride.

In the atmosphere of suspicion clouding China-U.S. relations after the embassy bombing, conspiracy theories are spilling over into the sporting arena. There seems little chance that Saturday's final can match the "ping-pong diplomacy" China and the United States used 28 years ago to help bridge the gulf between them.

Government-run media have raised doubts about the evenhandedness of the referees for the championship game, saying officials in previous clashes between the two teams clearly favored the United States.

They've also suggested that U.S. organizers of the World Cup sought to trip up the Chinese women by deliberately making them trek back and forth across America and its four time zones in the competition's earlier rounds.

The Beijing Morning Post calculated that, including their trip to and from China, the team will have flown 25,793 miles, or once around the planet, compared with just 4,763 miles for the Americans.

Organizers planned it like that "because the Chinese team is the American team's biggest obstacle to taking the championship," the newspaper suggested.

It remains to be seen whether China's success in America will translate into greater funding and popularity for their long-overlooked sport back home.

Wang, the fan club leader, is already planning to organize his group of drum-beating soccer enthusiasts into attending women's games in Beijing.

"I've always been a real macho, not caring about the women, but I'll pay attention now," he said.

The national team's Swiss marketing company, International Sports and Leisure, hopes World Cup fame will attract sponsors.

A 67-year-old grandmother, Zhu Ying, was so inspired by the team's performance that she phoned the Beijing Morning Post to announce her plans to enroll her 10-year-old granddaughter in a sports school to play soccer. She also urged Beijing's more than 10 million residents to donate one yuan each (about 12 cents) to fund women's soccer.

hundred times stronger than the men, but their rewards are too little," she said.

The women's success already is putting pressure on China's men to buck up and raising questions about whether they deserve the largesse lavished on them since professional leagues were set up five years ago.

"Compared to male soccer players, the women players' incomes are pitifully small, but they repeatedly make it to the World Cup," Wu Yi, the Cabinet member, was quoted by the state-run Xinhua News Agency as saying. "Male players should learn from their spirit."

"If the women are world champions, the men will have to crawl into a hole. They'll lose so much face," added Li Feng, a soccer fan. "It will really give the men a push."

Fenway Park latest on baseball's endangered list

The Boston Red Sox have proposed a new stadium, but fans aren't letting Fenway Park go without a fight.

By Howard Ulman
Associated Press

BOSTON — It's the stadium where Carlton Fisk waved a home run fair in the 1975 World Series, the same stadium where Bucky Dent's three-run homer carried the New York Yankees over the Boston Red Sox in the 1978 AL East playoff.

It's the stadium that will be on a national stage again Tuesday night when baseball's best gather for the All-Star game.

And it's the stadium that, a few years from now, may not exist.

It's 87-year-old Fenway Park, where the Green Monster, 37 feet high but just 310 feet down the left field line, turns pop flies into homers and vicious liners into wall-banging singles.

Fisk and Dent hit their balls over that wall. On Tuesday, sluggers Mark McGwire, Sammy Sosa and others will take aim at it just as opposing sides have been swinging away in the battle over renovating or replacing the park that opened on April 20, 1912.

"I think the Red Sox want to look at it as somewhat of a farewell party," said Michael Governor, spokesman for Save Fenway Park!, which has an architect-designed plan to renovate the stadium. "The true all-star this coming Tuesday is Fenway Park."

Red Sox officials have met with the preservationists but say the plan doesn't have a chance of succeeding.

"It really does not," said Kathryn St. John, a spokeswoman for the club. "We understand the emotion that pushes people to renovate Fenway Park. No one loves Fenway Park more than the Red Sox. We looked at renovation for a long time but it clearly is just not feasible."

Tuesday's national spotlight could point out the stadium's shortcomings — narrow seats and aisles, outdated restrooms and too few concession stands. St. John said bringing the stadium into compliance with handicapped-access regulations makes renovation even less likely.

Instead, the Red Sox have proposed a $545 million stadium project just across Yawkey Way from the current one. Groundbreaking could begin in the fall of 2000, with the first game possible in the 2003 season.

Still to be worked out is financing. The Red Sox say they'd like to keep public aid to a minimum. But they may need $200 million for infrastructure work besides the $350 million they plan to spend on the stadium. They also must obtain land now occupied by 24 businesses. There would be about 100 luxury boxes, and the current capacity of 33,871, lowest in the majors, would be boosted to about 45,000. That would provide money for a team that hasn't won the World Series since 1918.

The current infield, part of the grandstand and the third-base dugout would be preserved, and the Green Monster would be moved closer to the shortstop area. All that would serve as part of the entrance to a new stadium.

The team is using All-Star events to show off its plan. A model of the new stadium is on display at FanFest, where thousands of fans flock to exhibits.

Television monitors there show a web page in which fans can comment on the plan.

While baseball commissioner Bud Selig has said renovation can't work, the preservationists are taking advantage of the national spotlight as well.

They planned rallies in conjunction with Sunday's Futures Game involving top minor-league prospects, Monday night's home run derby and Tuesday night's main event.

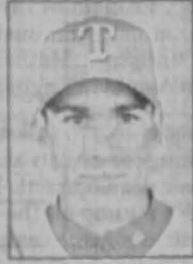

"We have all kinds of banners and signs," Governor said. "I don't know if you necessarily want to call it a protest march. It's a rally."

Zimmerman goes from bushes to prime time

By Rob Gloster
Associated Press

OAKLAND, Calif. — Two seasons ago, Jeff Zimmerman was out of organized baseball, faxing major league clubs pleading for a chance to try out. Now Zimmerman is in the spotlight as an All-Star and a bullpen ace for the Texas Rangers.

Zimmerman

"If you had asked me about making the All-Star team two years ago, I would have just laughed," he said. "I didn't even make the all-star team when I was pitching in the independent Northern League in '97."

Now he's 8-0 with a 0.89 ERA for the AL-West leading Rangers. He got the win in Wednesday's 7-4 victory over the Oakland Athletics, pitching 2 1/3 innings to tie a club record with his 16th straight scoreless appearance.

Zimmerman, who has struck out 46 and walked only nine in 50 1/3 innings, has the lowest ERA and has allowed the lowest batting average (.110) in the major leagues.

Fellow Texas reliever and All-Star John Wetteland said Zimmerman's numbers are hard to believe.

"Like 99 percent of the rest of baseball, I hadn't heard of him before this year," Wetteland said of his setup man. "Now, sometimes we look up there and he's got Super Nintendo numbers or Little League numbers."

It has not been an easy route to the majors for Zimmerman. He pitched two seasons at Texas Christian, then spent 1994 pitching in France. He was a starter for the Canadian national team in 1995 and 1996 in hopes of pitching in the Olympics, but Canada failed to qualify.

Zimmerman was selected in 1997 for the Canadian team scheduled to play in the world championship qualifying tournament, but that was canceled.

So the right-hander went to Winnipeg of the Northern League, where he went 9-2 as a starter and led the league with a 2.82 ERA. In 1998, he was signed by the Rangers as a free agent and was made a reliever. He went to Single-A Charlotte, then was promoted to Double-A Tulsa.

He came to spring training this year as a non-roster invitee, and has turned into a top middle reliever. He has become the first Texas pitcher to begin his major league career with eight straight victories, and the Rangers are 28-5 in games in which he has appeared.

"I can't think of anyone who came on the scene with less publicity and did as much," Texas manager Johnny Oates said. "These things happen — not often, maybe once in a lifetime, and this is my once."

Zimmerman, 26, has not allowed a run in his last 19 2/3 innings, the second longest streak in Rangers history.

"You look at hitters' faces, and you can see they're wondering, 'How can he throw a slider at 2-and-0, how can he paint the plate on a 3-and-2 count?'" Oates said. "He exemplifies pitching instead of throwing."

Managers say All-Star rosters need expansion

The managers for Tuesday's game faced difficult choices in filling their rosters.

By Hal Bock
Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) — For every player who felt slighted after being left off the All-Star game rosters, managers Joe Torre and Bruce Bochy can only sympathize and plead for understanding.

The dilemma for both was having more deserving players than they had room on their rosters.

Torre and Bochy agreed Thursday that the toughest part of assembling their teams for the 70th All-Star Game Tuesday night at Boston was deciding which players to leave behind.

"There are so many deserving players not on the club," said Torre, who will manage the American League for the second time in three years. "I know Bruce is aching the same way I am."

He is.

"I knew it would be difficult," said the NL's Bochy, who is managing in his first All-Star game. "When you try to figure it out, you start thinking about players who deserve to go but you don't have a spot for them. It was a little tougher than I thought."

Both Torre and Bochy said they would like rosters expanded by five players to provide more room for the managers to fit in deserving players. All-Star rosters were set at 28 players from 1969 until last year when they went to 30.

Torre said the toughest call for him was in the outfield.

"There are so many you can choose," he said, ticking off names like Troy O'Leary of Boston and Jermaine Dye of Kansas City, both hitting over .300 with 17 home runs going into Thursday's games, but left off the AL team.

He also mentioned Mike Sweeney and Johnny Damon of Kansas City, Toronto's Carlos Delgado and Seattle teammates Alex Rodriguez and Edgar Martinez as players he would have selected if he had room.

Torre said his most difficult call was passing on Harold Baines of the Baltimore Orioles. "It was so tough with the great years he's had, with his reputation, to have to leave him off the team," Torre said. "He's been around a long time and he's putting up terrific numbers."

Baines was batting .341 with 18 home runs and 60 RBIs as Baltimore's designated hitter going into Thursday's game.

Torre at first had to pass on Cleveland pitcher Charles Nagy, then added him when Mariano Rivera of the New York Yankees was forced to withdraw in order to take care of personal matters.

"Pitching was tough for me," Bochy said. "In the National League, we're seeing some of the best in years."

He mentioned relievers Arman-

Pure Latin bliss highlights weekend

Victor Mendoza and the Orquesta de Jazz will collaborate on a series of shows.

By Jeremy Erwin
The Daily Iowan

It's been four long days since Iowa City's annual Jazz Festival left town and stranded you high on a mountain top of pure jazz bliss. You need more... you crave it! Well fear not, you jazz-junkies, as Iowa's own Orquesta de Jazz y Salsa Alto Maiz is pairing up with one of the world's foremost jazz percussionists, Victor Mendoza, to bring you a weekend overflowing with the spirit and energy of the finest in Latin jazz.

MUSIC

Victor Mendoza and Orquesta de Jazz y Salsa Alto Maiz

When: Today at 9:30 p.m., Saturday at 5 p.m. and 9:30 p.m.
Where: Gabe's, Kirkwood College and the Sanctuary, respectively

Tonight will mark the first time Mendoza has shared the stage with the whole of Orquesta de Jazz (often referred to as the Salsa Band); however, a collaboration seems to have been in the works for quite some time. "A couple of us first met Victor at a percussion workshop at Berklee a while ago and have since performed a few times together, including a small group at the Sanctuary following his performance at last year's jazz fest," said Jim Dreier, percussionist for Orquesta de Jazz.

This weekend will feature three collaborative performances by Mendoza and Orquesta de Jazz — a 9:30 p.m. performance at Gabe's today, a 5 p.m. performance Saturday at the "Latin Drumming Festival" at Kirkwood College in Cedar Rapids and a 9:30 p.m. Saturday show at the Sanctuary. There will also be a free clinic by Mendoza in the Band Room at

The members of Orquesta de Jazz y Salsa Alto Maiz.

Kirkwood College Saturday at 1 p.m.

"I'll not only be giving lessons in Latin rhythms but will also be explaining the importance of Latin music in America, a type of music that exists in no other part of the world," said Mendoza, who is frequently invited to conduct major classes at universities and music schools around the world. Previous stops include the Royal College of Music and the Guildhall Arts and Music Academy in England, and the Scottish Royal Academy in Glasgow.

As both Mendoza and Orquesta de Jazz will be supporting recently released albums — titled Black Bean Blues and Live at Montreaux, European Travelogue respectively — each performance is sure to be a unique chance to hear the very best Latin jazz has to offer. Black Bean Blues features Mendoza on his primary instrument, the vibraphone, and while still maintaining traditional Latin roots, it showcases his amazing ability to take vibraphone performance to new heights. Orquesta de Jazz's new release, Live at Montreaux (available through www.salsaband.com), was recorded at the Swiss jazz festival last summer during the band's European tour and captures the true essence of a live "Salsa Band" performance.

As this weekend promises to be a monumental one in all aspects, one of the more obvious questions is why such a happening would occur in Iowa City.

"I was in London last month, and when I would tell people that I was going to be heading to Iowa City soon, they would say, 'Iowa? You've gotta be kiddin' me! Are you crazy?'"

"Iowa City is a happening place, you'd think it was in France or something," I would tell them," Mendoza said. "Your audiences are critical and demanding, yet really appreciative of the music that gets played there. It's amazing — there's just this energy that I can't describe, and I'm really excited to be playing there again."

NEW EXHIBITS

African vessels in form and function

The UI Museum of Art new exhibit "Shaping Earth: African Vessels" opens today and will feature clay vessels made for common use, and ponders the question: How are these vessels art?

That is an easy question to answer for Vicki Rovine, UI curator of Africa, Oceania and the Americas. "This gives people the chance to look at sculpture in a different form. These are all utilitarian pots, but they are all different in form and design, creating a truly intriguing art form."

The exhibit will be on display from Saturday through Dec. 31. Continuing the Museum of Art's commitment to the tradition of African exhibitions and educational programs, these vessels will be viewed in close comparison with other African art. The exhibit features the work of African women from across the continent.

"I think it is interesting for someone to look at this whole room filled with pots, that all may look the same from a distance, and then when people look closely, they realize the intricate patterns and designs of each vessel," said Rovine.

Through the glass brightly

Now through Aug. 15, a diverse and colorful array of river rock and glass jewelry by Terri Logan and Joyce Roessler will be on exhibit at the Iowa Artisans Gallery, 117 E. College St.

Logan hails from Richmond, Ind. Although she has been creating art all of her life, Logan has only been designing jewelry professionally for seven and a half years. The former psychotherapist has already won several awards and has had her work shown in prestigious galleries around the nation.

Roessler is a native of Kentucky who currently has her own studio in Boston. She has become a quite well-known artist whose work has appeared nationally in contemporary glass galleries.

Although Roessler has been working with hot glass since 1978, it was not until 1992 that she began to focus on bead making and glass jewelry design.

The Iowa Artisans Gallery generally focuses on Midwestern artists, the jewelry of Logan and Roessler was specifically chosen to be displayed for this special show.

"We like to invite artists whose work is being prominently seen in national craft venues," Dobrian said.

Class in session for Lakers

■ Lakers players began learning the triangle offense this week.

By Beth Harris
Associated Press

LONG BEACH, Calif. — Their confused looks said it all: some of the Los Angeles Lakers just don't get Phil Jackson's triangle offense.

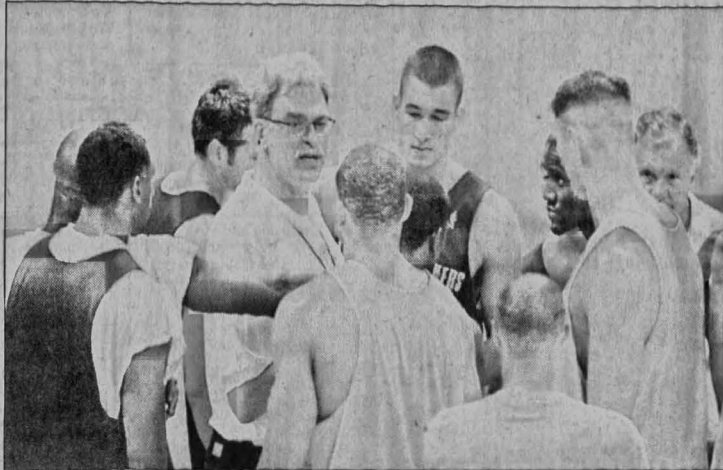

Of course, they've had only three practices under their new coach and most of the team is still on vacation. But the four Lakers from last season who showed up Thursday for Summer Pro League practice were befuddled.

"It's not so much an offense as it's just a philosophy about basketball," said fourth-year pro Travis Knight, sounding like he's picked up the Zenmaster's lingo.

"It's a philosophy about how the game is supposed to be played. I like it," he said.

That doesn't mean Knight understands, however.

"It's going to take a while to adjust to," he said. "I'm having a hard time."

Jackson isn't completely used to his new team, either.

Telling onlookers what they could expect this fall, the word Chicago slipped out of Jackson's mouth. "Uh, the Lakers, excuse me," he said as the crowd laughed.

Jackson was the most popular draw on the first day of the summer league that will feature entries from 12 NBA teams, including the Lakers, Clippers, Boston, Cleveland, Dallas, Milwaukee Orlando and Seattle.

The coach who guided the Chicago Bulls to six NBA titles in eight years has been labeled a savior for a Los Angeles team that hasn't been in the NBA Finals since 1991 and was swept out of the playoffs the past two seasons.

Tyson to return to ring in October

■ The former heavyweight champion will begin another comeback this fall.

By Tim Dahlberg
Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — Mike Tyson's future is shaping up, just as the former heavyweight tries to do the same with his body.

Tyson will return to the ring Oct. 2 in Las Vegas for his first fight since stopping Francois Botha in the fifth round Jan. 17, his manager said Wednesday.

If all goes well in that bout, manager Shelly Finkel told The Associated Press that Tyson would fight again Dec. 11 on a pay-per-view card. Both fights would be held at the MGM Grand hotel-casino in Las Vegas.

No opponents have been selected for either of the two fights, but possible opponents for Oct. 2 include Zeljko Mavrovic of Croatia or Germany's Axel Schulz.

A spokesman for the MGM Grand confirmed that the Oct. 2 date was "the next available date we have."

The first fight would be televised on the Showtime cable network. It would be Tyson's first non pay-per-view fight since he stopped Buster Mathis Jr. on the Fox network on Dec. 16, 1995.

Assuming Tyson wins, he is scheduled to fight a pay-per-view fight Dec. 11, with an upgraded opponent along the lines of Andrew Golota or Shannon Briggs. The 33-year-old former heavyweight champion has fought only once — against Botha — since his infamous biting of Evander Holyfield's ears ended their fight in the third round June 28, 1997.

The most feared heavyweight of his time in the late 1980s, Tyson has fought only 12 times in the last decade. He is 9-3 in those fights.

Tyson has been in Phoenix since last month, shedding pounds to get ready for the boxing portion of his training that will begin sometime in the next two weeks.

Tyson weighed the heaviest of his career when he fought Botha, 223 pounds, and reportedly weighed 275 pounds when he was released from a Maryland prison May 24 after his latest jailing for attacking two men following a traffic altercation.

Meanwhile, Finkel said Tyson will continue to be promoted by Denver-based America Presents, which promoted his comeback fight against Botha.

Tyson, who split with promoter Don King after accusing him of taking more than $100 million in his earnings, had a two fight deal with America Presents.
