UI officials hope forum will aid IWP

■ The new overseer of the program wants input from the public.

By Angela Disalvo
The Daily Iowan

A July 29 public forum on the UI International Writing Program is expected to provide community input on the program's future.

David Skorton, UI vice president for research, called the forum to assist him in making decisions on the direction of the 32-year-old program.

"The idea for the forum is to tell the public about the immediate plans we have for the IWP," he said. "But most importantly, we want to hear the opinions of others."

After the July 9 announcement that the IWP would be taken off its hiatus, Skorton began overseeing the program. He recently asked Sandra Barkan, assistant dean of the Graduate College, to help with the administration of the program during the upcoming school year.

The administration's goal is to give visiting writers the best the IWP can offer, Barkan said.

"We have good support from the UI faculty, and we are going to go ahead and get this program functioning as well as possible," she said. "We are very excited about forging ahead."

Rowena Torrevillas, a former IWP associate, will work with Barkan during the transitional period. She said the forum is a good time for the administration to take public opinion into consideration.

"I think it is a positive step — it is an indication of the enthusiastic attitude of Skorton," she said. "I admire the fact that he wants to do things right."

Skorton has also appointed a nine-member IWP advisory group to assist him through the year.

We have good support from the UI faculty, and we are going to go ahead and get this program functioning as well as possible. We are very excited about forging ahead.

— Sandra Barkan,
assistant dean of the Graduate College

Steve Sharra, the only student member of the group and a former IWP participant, said he was excited about the program's reinstatement.

"I wish the best for this program, and I am going to contribute to it the best I can," he said.

Another member of the group, English Professor Adalaide Morris, said the group will help Skorton review public opinion and fiscal reports.

"The mission of our advisory board is to support the IWP and make it successful," she said.

Skorton said a large turnout at the forum could help him and the group with any long-term decisions about the IWP.

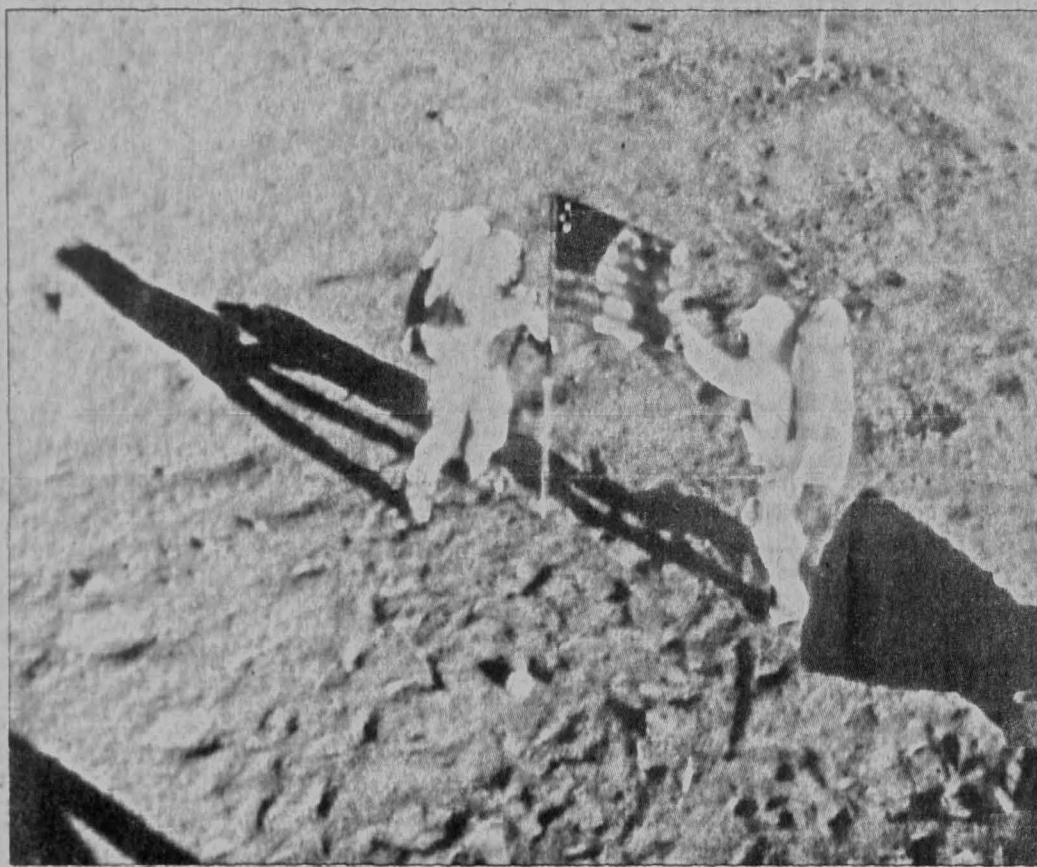

"This will definitely be most useful if people come and share their views with us," he said.

The forum will be held in Room W10, Pappajohn Business Building, at 7 p.m. All are invited to attend.

Walk on the Moon

Apollo 11 astronauts Neil Armstrong and Edwin "Buzz" Aldrin plant the U.S. flag on the lunar surface in this July 20, 1969, file photo. Today marks the 30th anniversary of the first walk on the moon.

Excerpts from log of Apollo 11

July 20, 1969

The lunar module lands on the surface of the moon at 3:17 p.m. CDT. Astronaut Neil Armstrong radios Mission Control: "The Eagle has landed."

Armstrong puts his left foot on the moon at 9:56 p.m. CDT. It is the first time that man has stepped on anything that has not existed on or originated from the Earth.

"That's one small step for a man, one giant leap for mankind," Armstrong radios. Astronaut Edwin "Buzz" Aldrin is taking photographs from inside the spacecraft.

"The surface is fine and powdery," he says. "I can pick it up loosely with my toe. There seems to be no difficulty in moving around as we suspected. It's even perhaps easier than the simulations ..."

Armstrong focuses a movie camera on a small, stainless steel plaque on one of the legs of the landing craft. He reads: "Here men from the planet Earth first set foot on the moon, July 1969 A.D. We came in peace for all mankind." Below the inscription are the names of the Apollo crew and President Nixon.

From a leg of the spacecraft, the astronauts take a 3-by-5 nylon U.S. flag, its top edge braced by a spring wire to keep it extended on the windless moon, and erect it on a staff pressed into the lunar surface.

The astronauts listen as Nixon speaks by telephone: "This certainly has to be the most historic telephone call ever made. For every American, this has to be the proudest day of our lives... The heavens have become a part of man's world. For one priceless moment, in the whole history of man, all the people on this Earth are truly one."

NASA calls off launch

By Marcia Dunn
Associated Press

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — A potentially dangerous buildup of hydrogen gas in space shuttle Columbia's engine compartment stopped the countdown early Tuesday with just 6½ seconds remaining.

The increased concentration of gas was detected just before the three main engines ignited.

"Cutoff!" a launch controller shouted. "Cutoff was given," another replied.

NASA commentator Bruce Buckingham said there was no indication of any fire in the shuttle, and that the hydrogen buildup quickly subsided.

Eileen Collins, the first female space shuttle commander, and the four other astronauts were safe, but rushed nonetheless to turn off all the shuttle systems and get out of the rocket.

There was no immediate word on when NASA might try again to launch Columbia, but it was expected to be a lengthy delay.

"Engineers in the firing room will continue to monitor the situation and strive to understand exactly what happened that caused this abort," Buckingham said.

The shuttle was to have blasted off at 11:36 a.m. CST with the world's most powerful X-ray telescope.

The U.S. women's soccer team, as well as Hillary Rodham Clinton, her daughter Chelsea and Sally Ride, America's first woman in space, had gathered to cheer Collins on. A sign held by a female space worker summed up the mood on the 30th anniversary of the first manned moon landing, by Apollo 11: "Eileen — You go girl!!!"

"This really is the last barrier to be broken," observed Ride. She had called Collins earlier to wish her good luck.

The lengthy VIP list also included Health and Human Services Secretary Donna Shalala; 15 members of Congress, 13 of them women; and Judy Collins, who wrote a song for the occasion.

Columbia's five crew members were scheduled to eject the $1.5 billion Chandra X-ray Observatory

Delta house resurfaces as men's dorm

■ The acting manager of the house plans to generate funds for the fraternity's return.

By Glen Leyden
The Daily Iowan

After three months during which broken glass and holes in the wall were repaired, the former Delta Tau Delta fraternity house will reopen as an all-male dormitory.

The Omicron Holding Corp., which owns the building, will open the Varsity House until the fraternity has the option of returning to campus, said John Phipps, acting manager of the dorm.

"In order for it to keep the house and generate money to 'recolonize' in the future, we recommended it open as a male dormitory," he said.

By becoming a dorm, the house will be able to generate money, which keeps the option open for Delta Tau Delta's return, Phipps said.

The Varsity House will act as a quiet dorm during the week, giving students an alternative to the traditional dorms. It will house 20-25 students; eight have already signed a contract. Phipps said he expects to fill the dorm by fall.

Students sign contracts that outline the Varsity House's expectations, which include no alcohol or smoking and an overall commitment toward creating an environment in which education is the primary objective, he said. Also, unlike standard dorm rules, women will be allowed only on the first floor of the Varsity House.

"It's a unique place in which the housing acts as an enhancement towards education, not a deterrence," Phipps said.

The dorm has made a successful transformation following about $30,000 in repairs and furnishings, he said. Phipps and his wife, Diana, have been involved in creating alternative residence halls after they became part owners of the Leighton House, which opened last fall.

The Leighton House is a women's dormitory, with goals much like those of the Varsity House.

"It is a house with a focus on leader-

■ The anniversary of man's first landing on the moon has many urging more accomplishments in space.

By Chris Rasmussen
The Daily Iowan

When Apollo 11 landed on the moon 30 years ago and Neil Armstrong took "one small step," many people thought that the U.S. space program would take more "giant leaps."

However, even with today's launch of the space shuttle Columbia, carrying the United States' first woman commander, some Iowa City residents say the space program has been merely taking baby steps.

"It's a terrible loss that there haven't been more missions," said UI junior and physics major Jack Fredregill. "I would have thought that by this point we'd have lunar colonies."

Former Iowa city resident Fred Lowery said he hopes people return to the moon soon.

"I would hope we do more with the moon," he said. "Whenever you look at the moon today, you look at it differently, knowing people have walked on its surface. It's part of that dream that we keep moving forward."

The space program has been progressing rapidly since the Apollo project ended in the early 1970s, but in a different direction, said Steven Spangler, a UI astronomy professor.

"One has to differentiate between unmanned and manned missions," he said. "The program of developing robotic spacecraft has gone forward at a tremendous rate; it's literally rewritten the textbooks we use at the university."

Manned missions may capture the imagination, but they have a big drawback: the expense, which is why the programs have "stagnated," Spangler said.

"In the '60s, people thought the Apollo program was the beginning of human expansion into space," he said. "The slowdown happened at the end of Apollo in the early '70s, when it was realized that the game just wasn't worth the candle."

He estimated that a manned mission cost 100 times more than an unmanned one.

"Keeping people alive in space is a real nu-

Former Hawkeye football players Richard Willock and Kerry Cooks are shown Monday at the offices of McGladrey and Pullen LLP, their accounting firm. The two, along with former football player Tavian Banks, plan to open a clothing store in downtown Iowa City.

Smooth urban rhythms, bright, colorful clothes and appearances by rapper Sean "Puffy" Combs are a few of the things that the "Goodfellaz" plan to offer in its new Iowa City clothing store.

Richard Willock, Tavian Banks and Kerry Cooks, all former Hawkeye football players, plan to open Goodfellaz Authentic Urban Wear near the Pedestrian Mall by the fall semester.

Willock, a 1998 UI graduate and former wide receiver for the Hawkeyes, and Cooks, also a 1998 UI graduate and a former defensive back for the Hawks, met with their accountants at McGladrey and Pullen LLP, 125 S. Dubuque St., Monday morning to discuss financial planning for the store.

"I'm very excited to be blessed with this opportunity," Cooks said. "I have no doubt it will work."

Willock said the trio is looking for a location for the store, which is expected to be approximately 1,500 square feet.

A night club, a sports bar and a beauty salon were some businesses that the men considered opening, Willock said, but they decided a clothing store that sold extra-large sizes was needed in Iowa City.

"We lived six good years in Iowa City but never had a place to shop," he said. "Extra-large sizes are not carried."

"We thought of 'Goodfellaz' because of the nice things we did for people," Willock said.

He said the store would carry such brands as FUBU, Sean John's, Phat Farm and DKNY, which are available at the Buckle, the store he shopped at while at the UI.

"(We expect) some competition, but we offer services that no other store offers," said Joel Kercheval, sales

In prison, you get three meals a day. At work, you only get a break for one meal, and you have to pay for that yourself.

In prison, you get time off for good behavior. At work, you get rewarded for good behavior with more work.

In prison, a guard locks and unlocks all the doors for you. At work, you must carry a security card and unlock and open all the doors yourself.

In prison, you can watch TV and play games. At work, you get fired for watching TV and playing games.

In prison, you get your own toilet. At work, you have to share.

In prison, they allow your family and friends to visit. At work, you can't even speak to your family and friends on the phone.

In prison, all expenses are paid by taxpayers with no work required. At work, you get to pay all the expenses to go to work, and then they deduct taxes from your salary to pay for prisoners.

In prison, you spend most of your life looking through bars from the inside, wanting to get out. At work, you spend most of your time wanting to get out and go to bars.

A steamy book with a steamy bath

NEW YORK (AP) — How does Britney Spears unwind? The 17-year-old singing superstar slips into a hot bath, lights some candles, and picks up a Jackie Collins novel.

"Every night, I have to read a book, so that my mind will stop thinking about things that I stress about," she said in the August issue of US magazine. "I focus on my book. Isn't that crazy?"

Collins' steamy novels include Thrill, Hollywood Wives and The World Is Full of Married Men.

Yaddo opens its books

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y. (AP) — The archives from Yaddo, the artists' colony once used by Langston Hughes, Leonard Bernstein and Sylvia Plath, are to be made public for the first time.

Yaddo is giving photographs, records, letters and other collectibles to the New York Public Library, which plans to make the materials available to researchers.

The archives have been kept in boxes, shelves, closets, drawers and loosely kept scrapbooks.

"We didn't have the proper storage, so there was some concern if we didn't do something, some of this material could be lost or destroyed," said Lesley Leduc, a spokeswoman for Yaddo.

Yaddo was founded 100 years ago at the home of Spencer and Katrina Trask. More than 5,500 artists have patronized the retreat, including James Baldwin, Ted Hughes and Truman Capote.

Peggy Lee hospitalized

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Peggy Lee was hospitalized with an irregular heartbeat but should be returning home soon to recuperate, her daughter said Monday.

Lee, 78, known for her smoky renditions of the tunes "Is That All There Is?" and "Fever," is still recovering from a stroke last year. She was taken to the hospital a few days ago, daughter Nicki Lee Foster said.

A diabetic, Lee has been troubled by several other health problems. In 1976, she had a near-fatal fall in a New York hotel and was seriously injured in a fall in Las Vegas in 1987. In 1985, she underwent four angioplasties — balloon surgery to open clogged arteries — and double-bypass heart surgery.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A former Mouseketeer lost her bid to delay a two-year federal prison sentence while she appeals her conviction for using bad checks to buy investments.

Darlene Fraschilla, formerly Darlene Gillespie, was ordered to surrender on July 26. She had asked federal Judge Lourdes G. Baird to delay prison, pending appeal, but the motion was denied without explanation.

She was convicted of helping her then-boyfriend, Jerry Fraschilla, in a scheme to buy stock valued at $827,000 in 1992 and 1993 by writing checks on closed and overdrawn accounts. Jerry Fraschilla, 61, was sentenced to 18 months in prison.

Fraschilla, 57, was one of the nine original Mouseketeers on the "Mickey Mouse Club" show from 1955-59.

Love's labor lost

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Tori Spelling says she's so unlucky in love she no longer cares if she has a boyfriend.

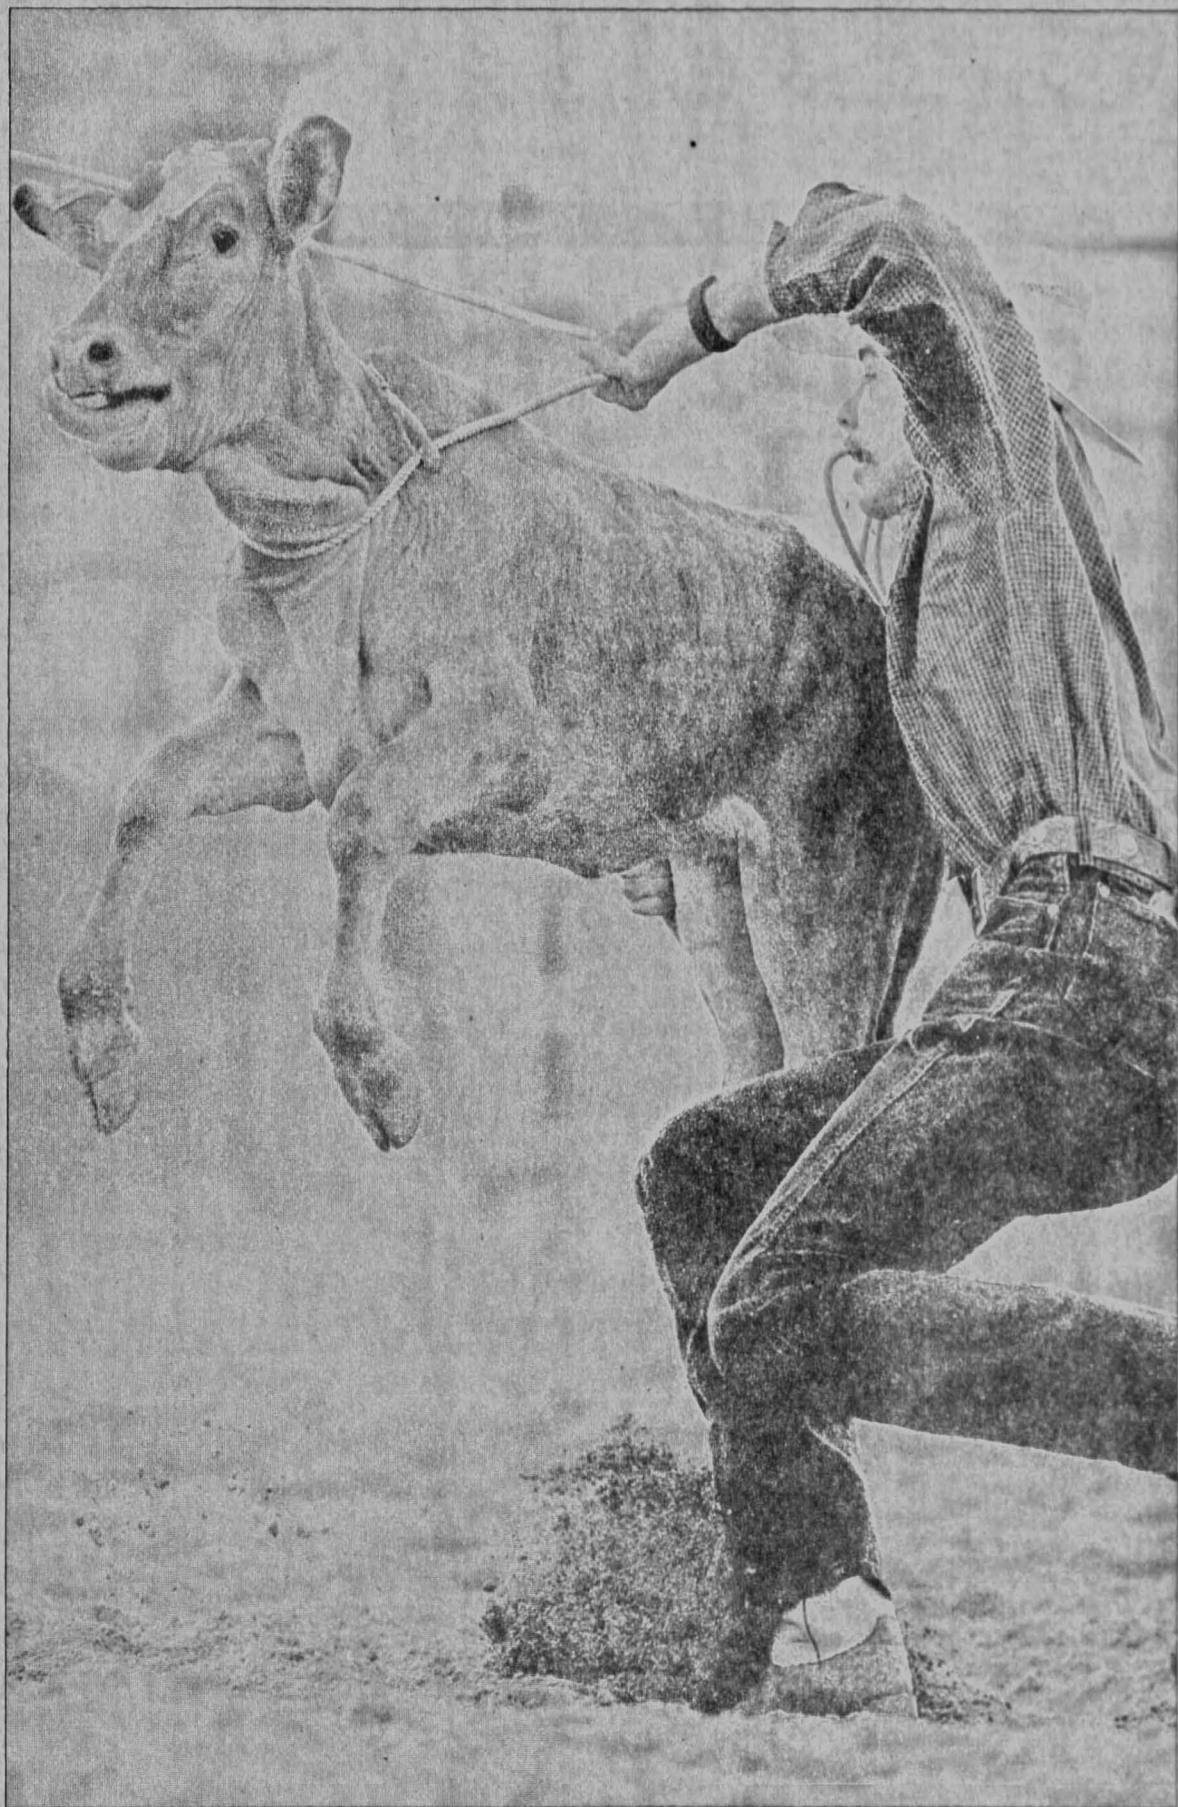

"I date once in a while, but it just never clicks," she told US magazine in the August issue.

"I just don't like anybody. I'm really, really picky. And then when I pick them, I usually pick the wrong ones. They're the worst ones I could pick. I ask myself, 'What was I so picky about?'"

But she says she hasn't given up on men. "I still love men," Spelling said. "I still believe in the fairy tale you have when you're a kid. I still believe in ultimate happiness."

Cancer Center researchers use seed grants to further ties with clinicians

Four UI Health Care researchers have received Cancer Center Seed Grant awards, designed to increase collaboration among members of the center's clinical and basic research programs. Taking research from the bench to the bedside is the theme of the center's new approach to cancer study. This strategy aims at keeping communication lines open — allowing clinicians and researchers to share information regarding new developments in cancer care and treatment. The grant recipients include: Elizabeth Field, associate professor of internal medicine; Roger Gingrich, professor of internal medicine; Frederick Goldman, associate professor of pediatrics; David Lubaroff, professor of urology and microbiology; and Larry Oberley, professor of radiology. Each grant recipient will receive $20,000 for use over 12 months. The Cancer Center Research Committee based its award decisions on the proposed projects' ability to enhance cross-disciplinary, translational research.

JFK Jr. plane fell 1,100 feet in 14 seconds

■ As the Kennedys release a statement, the safety board revises its original estimate of the speed at which the plane came down.

By Allen G. Breed
Associated Press

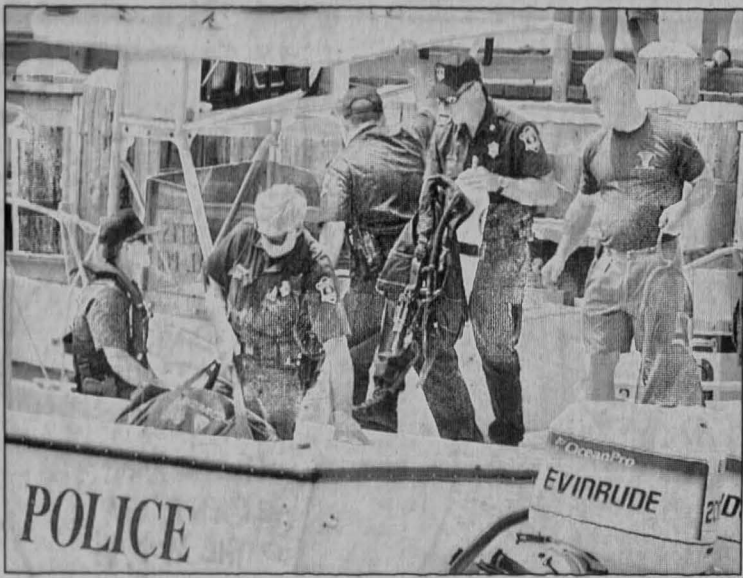

AQUINNAH, Mass. — As the Kennedy family broke its silence by expressing "unspeakable grief" Monday, federal investigators said John F. Kennedy Jr.'s plane dropped precipitously and faster than previously thought.

"We are filled with unspeakable grief and sadness by the loss of John and Carolyn and of Lauren Bessette," said a statement from Sen. Edward Kennedy. "John was a shining light in all our lives and in the lives of the nation and the world that first came to know him when he was a little boy."

The single-engine plane piloted by Kennedy took off from New Jersey on the night of July 16. Kennedy and his wife were headed to his cousin Rory's wedding July 17 on Cape Cod, and they planned to stop on Martha's Vineyard to drop off Lauren Bessette before continuing to the Cape.

After reviewing new radar data, investigators said the plane made a precipitous drop of 1,100 feet in 14 seconds as it approached Martha's Vineyard. That would mean the plane's rate of descent was 4,700 feet per minute.

"That airplane would not come down that fast in any normal configuration," said Warren Morningstar, spokesman for the Aircraft Owners and Pilots Association. "The normal rate of descent you're shooting for as a pilot is 500 to 700 feet per minute for passenger comfort."

Robert Pearce, heading the investigation for the National Transportation Safety Board, was reluctant to characterize the drop as unusual, but experts said the high-performance Piper Saratoga 32 generally cannot handle a descent faster than 1,500 feet per minute. The plane's gauge shows a maximum of 2,000 feet per minute.

Officials had said Sunday that the plane lost 700 feet in altitude within 30 seconds — or 1,400 feet per minute. The reason for the drop is unknown.

The safety board said maintenance records show the plane was inspected on June 28 — less than three weeks before the crash.

John F. Kennedy Jr. and his wife, Carolyn, dearly wanted children but held back because of the media maelstrom that swirled around them, a friend wrote in a farewell piece published Monday.

Another friend, who shared a house with Kennedy in her college days and taught him to clean toilets, said, "We all agree that to know him is really to love him."

Writing Monday in the Daily Telegraph, journalist Christa D'Souza said she sat with the couple at the wedding of CNN correspondent Christiane Amanpour and State Department spokesman James P. Rubin in Italy last year.

Kennedy "told me he very much wanted to have children," she wrote in the London-based newspaper. "He had even thought of a name if he and Carolyn had a boy (he was in favor of the name Flynn, but she wasn't)."

"However, they were holding back because neither of them could bear the idea of all the media attention," D'Souza said.

D'Souza and Amanpour both met Kennedy when all were students in the early 1980s.

She and several other friends "all agree that to know him is really to love him. Because he's a good, funny, honest person, with flaws and foibles just like all of us have."

"And he loves you back," Amanpour said. "He's a good man and loves his family. He's devoted. He's a joy."

'Distance learning' takes one giant leap

■ New student-aid rules mean more learning on-line.

Associated Press

IOWA CITY — The first "distance learning" degree issued by Hamilton College will have Karen Duckett's name on it.

The Mount Pleasant woman is a full-time log verifier at Wal-Mart Transportation. She is married and has children. Yet she still finds time to go to college — via the computer.

Hamilton College and the American Institute of Commerce, both owned by Quest Education Corp., are among 118 schools in 17 states participating in a new government program that will make it easier for thousands of people to earn a degree over the Internet.

The government is making sure students who study on-line through distance-education programs have a fair shot at grants and loans. Previously, rules prohibited distance learners from tapping federal money for school.

"Distance education has great potential to broaden education opportunities universally — but especially for working parents, students who live in rural areas and students with disabilities," U.S. Education Secretary Richard W. Riley said.

In 1998, distance-education courses were offered by 90 percent of all higher education institutions with more than 10,000 students and 85 percent of schools with between 3,000 and 10,000 students.

Federal rules limit how much financial aid distance learners can get. The Iowa schools, Hamilton and the American Institute of Commerce, will get waivers from one or more of the rules to make student aid more accessible.

Duckett attended Miami University of Ohio and the UI. She said she found the greatest success at Hamilton and said some of the hardest coursework she has encountered has come through distance learning.

"It's fast paced," she said. "It's so jammed-packed so you don't have time to get behind."

Hamilton and the American Institute of Commerce offer two-year degrees, with tuition varying according to the program. Hamilton has campuses in Des Moines, Cedar Rapids and Mason City. The American Institute of Commerce has campuses in Davenport and Cedar Falls.

Two distance learning degrees — applied management and interdisciplinary studies — are accredited. In all, 42 courses are offered on-line to 408 students. The typical student is a 29-year-old woman who works at least part-time and lives in Iowa.

CITY BRIEF

Woman injured in alleged stabbing

A local woman attacked her sister following an argument Sunday, Iowa City police said.

Police Sgt. Mike Lord said police ended a confrontation between Deborah Chanell Paige, 19, 2100 Broadway, and her 16-year-old sister. Police arrived at the Cedarwood Apartment complex around 10 p.m., after Paige had allegedly stabbed her younger sister, causing a minor injury to her hand.

Lord said the sister was taken to the UI Hospitals and Clinics, where she was treated and released.

Paige has been charged with willful injury causing bodily injury, a felony. Police do not know what caused the fight, which took place outside Paige's apartment, Lord said. The alleged stabbing does not appear to be related to any other acts of violence that have recently occurred in the Iowa City area, he said.

"It was a situation between two sisters," Lord said. "We do think this was an isolated situation."

UI must help students prevent attacks

The recent sexual assaults in and around Iowa City have left many community members concerned. Many women on campus have been contemplating the necessity of buying pepper spray at the IMU and trying to figure out what action they might take if confronted by a strange man posing as a police officer.

However, there are many individuals on campus who may not be thinking about these recent events nearly enough. While education and counseling regarding sexual assaults is provided throughout Iowa City, the choice to attend is left to the individual.

For example, educators at the Rape Victim's Advocacy Program are able to gear their programs toward mostly male or all-male audiences. However, Michael Shaw, education coordinator for RVAP, notes that it is "very rare" that his employees and volunteers speak to such audiences.

Educating men is an integral part of rape prevention, as 90-95 percent of the perpetrators in sexual-assault crimes are men. To its credit, the UI is planning a large educational program in the residence halls for the upcoming academic year. Hopefully, many UI students, both male and female, will be in attendance.

However, students should be receiving information about sexual assault in a university community much earlier. While the UI is now openly emphasizing the consequences of irresponsible drinking and drug use—the moment Orientation students step foot on campus, we are not using the same strategy against sexual assault.

Alcohol, drugs and sexual assault are things that must be discussed in relation to one another. While we should provide students with a sense of security, it is more beneficial to them to discuss sexual assault on campus and the context in which it happens. Discussing sexual assault at length at Orientation in an honest way would allow the UI to reach nearly every student on campus with the message that sexual assault is intolerable and illegal.

OPINION

Moon landing was a spectacular — and unnecessary — achievement

I used to think that aliens never show themselves to normal, credible earthlings because they stopped off at the moon on the way here and saw Richard Nixon's signature on the Apollo 11 plaque.

They could only have considered that an improvement. The first strong television signal to emanate from our planet carried a speech by Adolf Hitler, and the first artifact to leave the Solar System contains a message of greeting from former Nazi officer Kurt Waldheim (with Galactic Standard Iconese instructions for playing the record).

Now, I wonder about something even more elusive than the aliens. Where has the sense of amazement at getting to the moon gone?

Everybody understood the goal: Get a white, heterosexual, Protestant male safely to the moon and back. In 1969, Americans not only got safely to the moon but did it on the most complicated machine ever conceived, with every part built by the lowest bidder. Once that was done, the space race ended, interest instantly dissipated, and the greatest stunt in history became a joke for selling decaffeinated coffee.

Don't scratch your head trying to find a topper for your 100 most spectacular achievements of all time list. That was it. The pyramids, the Great Wall, Bob Beamon's long jump — all very impressive, but until the ambassador from Planet Foobidy addresses the United Nations, we have a winner.

Neither scientific curiosity nor technological advances made the moon shot necessary. Only Cold War rivalry had the power to unite Congress over a budget item that dwarfed allocations for education and poverty. It was a childish international game, and everybody knew that unmanned exploration was safer and more cost effective, but it also meant a billion here and there that did no harm to Vietnamese civilians.

From the perspective of 30 years since that first lunar promenade, it looks scientifically superfluous and fiscally irresponsible. Compared with the '60s, we now have peace at home and abroad, while space travel is so routine that NASA has to launch geriatric reruns to make the cover of Time. Politicians argue over a budget surplus, and technology has advanced by giant leaps, but we lack a dramatic goal like the moon race to unify the nation's positive energy.

That's not entirely a bad thing. Making space travel routine itself represents quite a triumph. New space goals lack drama and are harder for us non-rocket scientists to understand, but these and other complicated efforts such as the human genome project will have more practical value in the long run.

Still, I hoped for a return to the moon or a permanent manned space station before Beamon's long-jump record fell. Now I hear they're refurbishing the pyramids.

If it was not the best possible use for $20 billion, it was far from the worst.

They no longer put humans on the moon, but we've made great strides in decaffeinated coffee. Just today I'll have Tang and a food stick.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

I.C. residents must take action to ensure local safety

We're writing to thank Glen ("When Hate Stalks the Streets," DI, July 9) for speaking out about the hate crimes that have been targeted at him over the past few months. It takes guts to put your face on the front page and tell the truth about your experience, especially in the face of communal denial.

It's a disturbing time to be "out" in America. Or to be a woman, or a person of color, or religious minority. Hate crimes are being leveled at innocent people, active members of their community (such as the male couple in Happy Valley, Calif., who were recently murdered), by people affiliated with groups such as the World Church of the Creator.

And then came a front page DI article — with a 48-point headline — in which several people stated outright that Iowa City is a safe place to live.

At the risk of sounding like alarmists, we'd like to say WAKE UP, IOWA CITY! It's so easy to feel "safe" if you haven't had your house broken into, your sister accosted in her apartment or your car vandalized because of the stickers on it.

We have to remember that, just because something bad hasn't happened to one of us, if it happens to someone in our community, it happens to all of us. We're in this together.

There are a lot of great things about our town, but the whole "not in my town" mentality is a dangerous one and puts those who are willing to speak out (such as Glen) at risk by not affirming that bad things can and do happen here — to good people. Tolerance is far from acceptance.

If you consider yourself to be a liberal, open-minded, gay or gay-friendly Iowa citizen who seriously believes there is no cause for alarm, we'd like to challenge you to put your money where your mouth is and volunteer for a community-service organization. There are a number of organizations dedicated to making Iowa City a safer place to live. Check your local paper, school, church or yellow pages. A community is only as strong as its active members.

And thanks again, Glen, for taking a risk and telling your story before heading to California. Hopefully, your experience will save someone else from having her or his windshield bashed in because of a rainbow sticker on the bumper. Or something worse.

The once and future puffery rears its chattering head

Things have been a little slow lately for the greasepaint-and-chatter crowd that inhabits TV Nation. When your whole purpose in life is to blabber endlessly about matter of great import, it rather helps to have some matter of great import upon which to intone.

And covering George W. Shrub raise another $1 million doesn't cut it.

Those of us who live far from the chattering crowd don't realize it, probably, but the talking heads who live in the air waves actually believe that they're providing us with a great service by yakking and yakking and yakking until we all feel that we've been plopped down in the middle of Tibet.

Last year, the Year of Monica&Bill, was like one long Christmas for these folks. The famous blue dress, the multifaceted uses for a cigar (were or were they not Havanas?), did she inhale?, what makes the Oval Office oval — all were like another shiny bauble under the tree each morning to be unwrapped and picked at and pored over. If you were in the business of chatter, it was like finding El Dorado.

And just when Monica&Bill faded off into the ionosphere, which is where old news (now, there's a delightful oxymoron) stories go to die, along came the war in Kosovo. High-tech fighting at its best — war as a video game is a war that TV can understand. It's on its intellectual level, if that's not another oxymoron. Oxymorons seem to be the flavor of the times; if it weren't for oxymorons, we wouldn't have any morons at all.

Yeah, right. We should be so lucky. The air war was perfect for TV Nation, with its green-screen battle fields and its miles and miles of footage of refugees (for that human touch) and its bombing of the Chinese embassy just when things were getting a little bit dull — the latter can only make you believe that Buster Keaton is alive and well and running the CIA.

But like all good things, the war in Kosovo had to end, and TV was left with peace in Kosovo, which, frankly, just doesn't cut it for the chattering crowd. Peace is too much like everyday life, and that's not suitable fare for TV. I mean, any old fool can do everyday life. And does.

So thank god somebody famous died. And not just any old somebody famous, but a Kennedy.

TV Nation loves the Kennedys, and it loves nothing more than covering the trials and tribulations and tragedies of the Kennedys. It's almost hard to believe that a family could be both so blessed and so cursed, though if you read ancient Greek drama, you'd come to believe that being blessed is the way the gods do curse you. If you follow the arc of the Kennedys, you'd believe the same thing. And TV Nation revels in it. It eats this Kennedy stuff up by the steamshovel full. And, then, unfortunately, regurgitates it all upon us.

Inspid, banal, trite — it's hard to find enough words to describe TV Nation's coverage of JFK Jr.'s death. But this is TV, and this is what TV does.

The lowlights are too many to enumerate. There was the CNN "reporter" who, as a line of thunderstorms moved in, somberly intoned that the weather was "dampening the spirits" of the mourners at Hyannisport. Uh-huh.

And there was the panel of aviation experts, one of whom helpfully told us that it was quite unusual for all the engines of a plane to fail at the same time. The expert next to him agreed, and then pointed out that, in this case, there was only one engine to fail at the same time.

And on and on, ad nauseam, ad nauseam, ad nauseam. One of the enduring photos of my childhood was that of 3-year-old John-John saluting his father's coffin as it went by. After the 2 millionth time of seeing it in the last few days, I hope they burn the damn thing.

There are only two things that TV is any good at.

One is wrapping the trivial in enough glitz so that we'll notice it and believe it important. The other, as it proved over and over in the last few days, is to trivialize the important, to bring it down to the level of a stock market report or a deodorant commercial.

The NAACP recently blasted TV Nation for not including minority characters in its prime-time programming. While that policy certainly shows the bias inherent in the industry, you have to ask yourself why anyone would want to be involved in such a purveyor of pap.

To steal a line from an old blues song, the chattering crowd stands before us with a handful of gimme and a mouthful of much obliged.

Beau Elliot is a DI columnist.

The Piano Lesson to play tonight

■ Summer Rep '99 closes with a staged reading of Wilson's The Piano Lesson.

By Nellie Stensvaag
 The Daily Iowan

Wilson

A one-time-only staged reading of August Wilson's Pulitzer Prize-winning play The Piano Lesson will be held this evening as part of the 1999 Iowa Summer Rep festival.

Eric Forsythe, artistic director of the festival, said the staged readings have become a Summer Rep tradition.

"We try to supplement (our regular season) for people who are interested in seeing other kinds of works," he said. "We try to choose a play that's quite different from the others, so that our audiences can have a more complete view of what the playwright's done."

In this case, Summer Rep was seeking to fill out yet another decade in Wilson's cycle of plays, uled to be performed as the staged reading. However, due to unfinished re-writing of the script, the play was removed from the Summer Rep line-up and replaced with The Piano Lesson, Forsythe said.

The Piano Lesson tells the story of a brother and a sister and their struggle over a piano that has been in their family since the time of slavery.

"(The piano) becomes a kind of metaphor for African-American culture and what to do in the 1930s," Forsythe said. "Do you sell the piano and look towards the future, or do you hold onto the piano and your heritage and your roots?"

The Piano Lesson will be performed at 8 p.m. in the David Thayer Theatre. Although the show is sold-out, additional tickets may be available at the door.

For further information, call the Hancher Box office at 1-800-Hancher.

DI reporter Nellie Stensvaag can be reached at: nmstensvaag@juno.com

Forsythe said.

Harriett Pierce, director of the staged reading, described what the audience has to look forward to — not a polished performance but a twice-rehearsed reading without the aid of costumes, props or staging.

"It's really structured like a reading, so when you come in there are chairs onstage for the actors, and there's a reader who will read the stage directions," she said.

Young Lopez thrives in the hot spot

■ Jennifer Lopez is a star with, ahem, unending appeal.

By Judie Glave
 Associated Press

NEW YORK — Temperatures inside the Manhattan studio where Jennifer Lopez is shooting yet another magazine cover inch toward 100 degrees.

Cheese cubes on a nearby table have mutated into indistinguishable blobs of cholesterol, and the day's stash of soda bobs idly in a bucket of melted ice.

Lopez doesn't complain as she's poked, prodded and slimed by her team of professional handmaidens and assistants.

"Never complain, never explain," Lopez says after finishing the first photo shoot and going through a 90-minute process of washing and straightening her hair, changing and posing for another round of photographs.

It's late in the day, and she still has the movie premiere for Spike Lee's Summer of Sam to go to and an early morning trip to the Adirondack Mountains for an outing with underprivileged children at a summer camp.

A true diva would have blown off the interview. Instead, a wilted Lopez apologizes for the delay — a clearly undiva-like thing to do.

Lopez is a woman who's been asked umpteen questions about her voluptuous anatomy, posed in her old Catholic high school uniform, and been hit on by male interviewers.

"Sometimes the questions are a little way out ... but that's just part of what this is," she says, shrugging. "In return I get to do what I love. I get to act. I get to sing. I get to perform in great movies. I'm not complaining about that part."

What she doesn't like are the many pop judgments about her.

"Someone comes in and talks to you for half an hour, and they write their impression of you, and that's what the world goes by. Then when some people meet me they say, 'You're not so bad. You're just a regular girl, like me.'"

That seems true enough of this Catholic-bred young woman from working-class Castle Hill in the Bronx who doesn't drink or smoke. She is the product of a stable and loving Puerto Rican family that includes her father, a computer technician, her mother, a kindergarten teacher, and two sisters.

She is — excuse the pop judgment — what every mother would like her daughter to be: secure, grounded, in control, talented and ambitious.

But fame was more than just a dream for Lopez, who began her career dancing as a Fly Girl on Fox's "In Living Color" in 1990.

It was, she says in earnest, her destiny: "The closest I can get to explain it is to tell you I have this thing inside me that tells me I'm going to do this or die trying."

ARTS BRIEFS

Barry White inspired by the King

NEW YORK (AP) — Barry White says spending six months in jail for stealing tires in 1960 helped him stay away from a life of violence and turn toward a life of music.

"I had to make a decision about whether I was going to continue fighting and all this other stuff, or try to do something positive with my life," White told TV Guide in its July 24 issue.

White said it was an Elvis Presley song, "It's Now or Never," that helped him decide.

"The only thing I knew something about was music and that's the way I went," he said.

On the set of Fox's "Ally McBeal," where he recently had a recurring role, he was asked for his autograph more than 60 times.

White is best known for his soul seduction songs of the 1970s, including "Love's Theme," "I've Got So Much to Give," and "Can't Get Enough of Your Love, Babe."

Arthur Mitchell is inducted into the Dance Hall of Fame

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y. (AP) — Arthur Mitchell isn't wholly comfortable with the idea of being a dance "Hall of Famer."

"I've always thought those things were for the old and dead," Mitchell said. "But I'm glad to get the honor while I'm still alive and kicking. Although I'm not kicking as high these days."

Mitchell, who became the first black male principal dancer of a major ballet company in 1955 and went on to found the Dance Theatre of Harlem, was inducted Sunday into the Dance Hall of Fame.

He broke the traditionally white ballet mold when he joined the New York City Ballet, under the direction of George Balanchine.

Mitchell quickly gained fame for roles that Balanchine choreographed especially for him, including the ballet Agon and the role of Puck in A Midsummer Night's Dream.

NASA calls off Columbia shuttle launch

LAUNCH

from the shuttle. For five years, it was to have scrutinized stars, galaxies and quasars, searched for black holes and studied the so-called black matter that fills the cosmos.

Collins, 42, an Air Force colonel and a former test pilot, has flown before as a shuttle co-pilot. This week's flight would have been her third.

Collins has said that she is honored to be the first woman to command a mission in 38 years of U.S. human space-flight, and that a female commander is long overdue.

But she said she sometimes wonders: "Why would anyone be interested in hearing about me when the science and the exploration part of our mission, to me, is so exciting?"

The 45-foot Chandra is the biggest X-ray telescope ever built and the heaviest payload ever put aboard a space shuttle. With its attached rocket motor and support gear, Chandra weighs 50,000 pounds.

Columbia is the only shuttle big enough to hold it. NASA ran extra engineering studies to make sure the shuttle could sustain the weight if, because of some problem, it had to return to Earth with the telescope still on board.

NASA's top managers granted permission for the shuttle to carry the observatory after the space agency stripped 7,000 pounds from Columbia by using lighter engines and discarding unnecessary gear.

After decades of working on the program, dozens of scientists gathered at the launch site in anticipation. The telescope should have flown last August but was grounded first by software problems, then bad circuit boards, then a suspect rocket motor.

Martin Weisskopf, a NASA astrophysicist in charge of the project, said he was nervous. "There are hundreds of things you can worry about if you want to," he said, "but I think we've done everything we can do."

NASA's top space scientist, Ed Weiler, noted that like the Hubble Space Telescope, Chandra has 1 million parts. Hubble was launched in 1990 with a flawed mirror that wasn't discovered until the telescope was in orbit.

The entire Chandra project, including the shuttle ride and five years of orbital operations, comes in at $2.8 billion.

Joining the team's scientists for the launch was the 88-year-old widow of the Nobel Prize-winning astrophysicist for whom the telescope is named, Subrahmanyan Chandrasekhar. The University of Chicago professor was known as Chandra, which is Sanskrit for "moon" or "luminous."

Columbia also contained a slew of secondary experiments and memorabilia, some with a female motif.

The U.S. Mint was to have sent up 12 new gold coins bearing the image of Sacagawea, the Indian guide who accompanied Lewis and Clark on their Northwest expedition. Also on board are ladybugs and Painted Lady butterflies for school experiments. The astronauts named the four ladybugs John, Paul, George and Ringo.

sance," he said. "You have to install zero-gravity toilets and everything else."

In the next 30 years, Fredregill said, more manned missions should be on tap. "I'd say that there will be regular flights to the space station in 30 years," he said.

"Someday, we'll probably make it to the Oort cloud," Fredregill added jokingly, referring to the cloud of debris that surrounds the Solar System.

The future is full of changes but not in space exploration, said Iowa City resident Monica Freet.

"I think there will be big changes, but they will not involve space colonies," she said.

The changes will help the environment, such as the development of cars that emit less-harmful gases, Freet added.

"Maybe we'll have flying cars," said Shari Rardin, an incoming UI freshman who also expressed dismay at the lack of action in the space program.

Spangler, though, does not think the focus of space missions will change in the near future.

"In my opinion, and in the opinion of most scientists, the space station will only soak up a lot of money," he said. "The next 30 years will see many unmanned missions to put more communications satellites in orbit, rather than sending people to Mars."

ship and education, where women can be supported and have a nice, clean place to live," said Diana Phipps, director of Leighton House.

Maggie Van Oel, director of the UI Residence Services, compares the alternative housing with that of a large family with common goals.

"If you want a small community with a single sex and high-quality services at a higher price, it would be an interesting option," she said. Incoming freshman Kari Roe, who is waiting for her UI housing contract, agreed that living in close-knit housing during one's freshman year would be a benefit.

"I would like a smaller surrounding because I don't want to be distracted during my first semester," she said.

However, incoming UI freshman Dustin Nohr said smaller housing could play a negative role in a freshman's social life.

"It's important to meet people in your first year, and I feel that this type of house would be too strict and limit the people you meet," he said.

associate for the Buckle, Old Capitol Mall.

Commercials featuring Combs and hip-hop music will be played in the store while NFL pictures of Cooks and Banks, a 1997 UI graduate and former running back for the Hawkeyes, will line the walls behind the counter, Willock said.

"The atmosphere will be one that you can feel the hip-hop culture and music," he said. "You'll understand what you are buying as far as the clothing line."

Apart from appearances by players from the Green Bay Packers and the Jacksonville Jaguars, some designers, such as Russell Simmons of Phat Farm, will also visit the store for autographs and support, Cooks said.

"We are able to make connections," he said. "I actually talked to Russell Simmons on the phone for a hour."

The trio also plans to design its own line of clothing and open another store in Cooks' home town of Dallas in approximately four years.

Andy Wollenzien, a UI senior, said that he probably would not shop at Goodfellaz because of the potential high prices. He also expressed doubts about the ability of the men to live up to their promises.

"I don't think there is a way in the world that he (Puffy) would come to Iowa City," he said.

However, he believes Goodfellaz will be successful even without such guest appearances because there are enough people in Iowa City to patronize such a store.

The store will be managed full-time by Willock, who lives in Iowa City; Banks is in Jacksonville, Fla., playing for the Jaguars.

Cooks said he will work at the store from March through June only, because he is not playing for the Packers then.

"Football ... that's my love," he said. "I have to take care of football first."

Serial killer haunts Chicago's South Side

In a downtrodden Englewood, another killer is murdering women.

By Evelyn Girardet
Associated Press

CHICAGO — Constance Bailey was found slain last month in an abandoned tire shop down the street from Fairfield Baptist Church.

Sheryl Johnson was found strangled two months earlier, in a vacant building a block away.

Cheryl Cotton-Cross was killed a couple of weeks before Christmas, her body found in another abandoned building a quarter-mile from the others.

A serial killer is preying on women in Chicago's Englewood neighborhood. Six victims, all with histories of drug abuse or prostitution, all slain since 1995, have been linked by DNA to the same killer.

If that seems sadly unremarkable for inner-city America, consider this: It's the third time in eight years that a serial killer has stalked the streets of this impoverished, drug-ridden section of Chicago's South Side.

"There is so much confusion here, so much catastrophe," the Rev. Thomas Varughese said during a recent Sunday service at Fairfield Baptist. "There is so much emptiness, rape and murder in this neighborhood. A young girl was murdered across the street from here, yet nobody does anything."

His congregation of 80, orderly and clean like the storefront church, swayed and nodded. Some wept.

"This is our neighborhood, and we feel its pain," Varughese declared.

In the last eight years, police have arrested two other men in connection with multiple slayings of women in Englewood and the adjacent New City neighborhood. Hubert Gerald Jr. was sentenced to death two years ago for killing six women in Englewood in 1994 and 1995; Gregory Clepper is awaiting trial on charges he killed 14 women in the area from 1991 to 1996.

"It's the place, the time and the opportunity — you have all that here," said police Cmdr. Maurice Ford. "This couldn't happen on the North Side. You don't have the abandoned buildings there, you don't have the chronic use of narcotics problem, and you don't have the prostitution problem."

At least one-third of the area's residents are thought to be unemployed. The area is dotted by garbage-strewn vacant lots, crumbling single-family homes, abandoned buildings and boarded-up businesses.

Police believe the victims were lured into vacant buildings by the promise of drugs.

"People are overwhelmed by their struggle for survival. They don't have the time to pay attention to what is happening in their community," said Josephine Robinson, area director of the Chicago Commons Mary McDowell Settlement House.

CITY BRIEF

Truck mishap causes diesel fuel spill

The Johnson County Hazardous Materials Team was called Monday around 9:30 p.m. to Moore Business Forms, where a diesel fuel spill occurred.

Fire Chief Ron Stutzman said the driver of a semi-truck did not put the brakes on during the loading process at the business, 1960 S. Riverside Drive. This caused the truck to roll from the loading dock to the bank of the Iowa River, he said.

Stutzman said the truck had two full tanks of diesel fuel, each holding 150 gallons. The left tank was punctured at the river bank, allowing approximately 30 gallons to spill before the hazardous materials team arrived, he said.

"We got about 130 gallons of it siphoned out of the tank into containers — meaning about 30 gallons is either in the river or on the bank," Stutzman said.

Because of the height and speed of the river, Stutzman said, the hazardous materials team could not do much about the contaminated water. The Iowa Department of Natural Resources will be called to clean up the soil on the bank, he said.

49ers sign Owens, court Phillips

By Rob Gloster
 Associated Press

SANTA CLARA, Calif. — The San Francisco 49ers signed wide receiver Terrell Owens to a long-term contract Monday and moved closer to making a much more controversial move — signing troubled tailback Lawrence Phillips.

Owens, who had a team-high 14 touchdown catches last season while surpassing Jerry Rice as the 49ers' go-to receiver, signed a seven-year, $34.2 million contract extension that includes a $7.5 million signing bonus.

With the team's situation at running back uncertain due to Garrison Hearst's serious ankle injury, Owens said he knows the passing game will be the focus of the San Francisco offense.

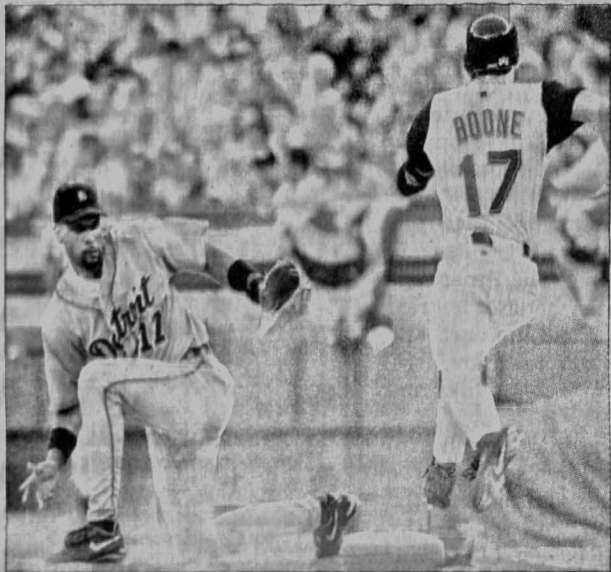

"We've got to pick up the slack, the receivers, with Garrison out," Owens said. "We are going to have to carry the team, along with the defense."

With Hearst out until at least late in the season, the 49ers are negotiating with Phillips — who has had extensive off-field problems including domestic violence and drunken driving, and lost jobs with the St. Louis Rams and Miami Dolphins — to take his place in the backfield.

The 49ers talked with Phillips' agent again on Monday after holding discussions last Friday and during the weekend. General manager Bill Walsh said the 49ers have completed their examination of Phillips' off-field problems and could sign him soon.

First double by a Detroit pitcher in 27 years leads Tigers

Al Behrman/Associated Press

Cincinnati's Aaron Boone is safe at first as the ball gets by Detroit's Tony Clark in the fifth inning Monday.

CINCINNATI (AP) — Jeff Weaver hit the first double by a Detroit pitcher in 27 years and Damion Easley hit a tiebreaking homer as the Tigers beat the Cincinnati Reds 7-6.

One day after the Tigers blew a six-run lead before rallying to win, they wasted a three-run lead before Easley rallied them with a solo homer in the seventh off Scott Sullivan (3-1). Deivi Cruz added an RBI double later in the inning.

Weaver's big offensive game — his first two major league hits, two runs scored — couldn't pull him out of his torturous rut of no wins since May 27. He repeatedly dropped his head in frustration as the Reds scored three times in the sixth, tying it with the help of a bad-hop double and three infield singles.

Weaver, the Tigers' top draft pick last year, has two losses and seven no-decisions since his last win.

Dodgers 12, Pirates 7

PITTSBURGH — Todd Hundley's grand slam highlighted a four-homer night for the Los Angeles Dodgers, who built a three-run lead before Pittsburgh got an out in beating the Pirates 12-7 Monday night.

Eric Karros, Todd Hollandsworth and Raul Mondesi also homered as the Dodgers worked over the Pirates' two most disappointing pitchers, Jose Silva and Pete Schourek, for 12 runs and 12 hits in seven innings.

Mets 4, Orioles 1

BALTIMORE — Rookie Octavio Dolel pitched seven innings of three-hit ball and the streaking New York Mets got homers from Edgardo Alfonzo and Robin Ventura in a 4-1 victory over the Baltimore Orioles on Monday night.

Dolel (2-1), called up from Triple-A Norfolk earlier in the day, allowed one run to earn his second victory in four major league starts. He struck out five, walked two and reduced his ERA from 6.61 to 5.06.

Phillies 16, Devil Rays 3

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Scott Rolan homered twice for the second straight day and the Philadelphia Phillies beat the Tampa Bay Devil Rays 16-3 Monday night to climb nine games over .500 for the first time in nearly four years.

Rolan, who homered in his last at-bat Sunday to give the Phillies a 3-2 victory in the series opener, hit a two-run homer in the first and a solo shot in the third.

Expos 6, Yankees 4

NEW YORK — Brad Fullmer homered, doubled twice and singled as the Montreal Expos, victimized by David Cone's perfect game a day earlier, beat the New York Yankees 6-4 Monday night to end their losing streak at six.

Fullmer went 4-for-4 and doubled to set up Shane Andrews' tiebreaking, two-run single with two outs in the eighth inning. The Expos got 12

PRIME TIME LEAGUE

Fieldhouse/Gringo's wins regular season on coin flip

■ Deli-Mart/Iowa City Ready Mix fell from first place to fifth as the regular season ended.

By Todd Hefferman
 The Daily Iowan

After 11 games and a regular season spanning just over a month, the Monday mystery came down to three teams and a coin toss.

With five teams stuck at the top of the standings at 6-4, entering the last day of the season, two teams were assured of tying for the top seed of the Prime Time League playoffs. Three teams would tie for first if Fitzpatrick's Steakhouse could edge Merrill Lynch/Nike in last night's nightcap.

The Fieldhouse/Gringo's won the top seed on a coin flip, and will meet Merrill Lynch at 7:30 p.m.

Prime Time League director Randy Larson decided to split the tie with a coin toss, rather than making the decision based on head-to-head competition.

"This was the best way," Larson said. "Any other way would be a representation of who showed up on a particular day."

Fitzpatrick's beat Merrill Lynch 120-96 to make the top seed a three-team race, but fell to third after the deciding coin flip.

Mike Gatens Real Estate opens the playoffs Thursday night in North Liberty with a game against Lepic-Kroeger Realtors/Active Endeavors. Fitzpatrick's follows against Goodfellow, and the nightcap is Imprinted Sportswear/Goodfellow Printing against Deli-Mart/Iowa City Ready Mix.

To get to the top seed, The Fieldhouse had to go through Deli-Mart first. The winner could expect a seed no lower than second, while the loser could fall from first all the way to sixth depending on how the tie-breaker formula worked out. The Fieldhouse withstood a late full-court press by Deli-Mart to escape with a 112-107 win and the top seed after a lucky slip of the coin.

"We just had to make sure to have the ballhandlers in the backcourt and spread the court," Fieldhouse coach Ron Nove said. "We'd lost three in a row, so it was critical that we get a win to have some confidence."

Brad Joens of The Fieldhouse later made two free throws to put the game out of reach for Deli-Mart. Joens finished with 39 points, including six three-pointers.

Deli-Mart was led by Madole's 33 points and 19 apiece from Ryan Luehrsmann and Bruce Sain. Luehrsmann is off to a Nike camp and will not be with Deli-Mart for the playoffs.

Mike Gatens Real Estate 98, Imprinted Sportswear/Goodfellow Printing 84

Gatens Real Estate got 32 points from Kyle Galloway and 25 from Brad Lohaus in a win over Imprinted Sportswear.

Gatens again showed the perseverance that allowed them to edge The Fieldhouse last Thursday after going down 19-2 to start the game. With 3:12 to go in the game against Imprinted, Lohaus connected on his seventh three-pointer to put Gatens up to stay 90-77.

"We were so busy covering the perimeter that we lost track of the cutters," Imprinted's Vernon Simmons said. "In the first half they weren't cutting to the hoop, they were relying on jumpshots. In the second half they were cutting to the hoop and looking for the jumper second."

Lepic-Kroeger Realtors/Active Endeavors 94, Goodfellow 80

In a shocker, Lepic-Kroeger grabbed just their third win of the season with a win for the second time over Goodfellow. Acie Earl did not have a repeat performance of last week's 42-point effort, finishing with 22, but got the victory anyway. Lepic-Kroeger also got 26 from Craig Callahan and 21 from Kevin Washpun.

"It was nice to finally put one together," Lepic-Kroeger's Jeff See said. "Other games we were a little more stagnant on offense, tonight we moved the ball around."

Goodfellow was led by Malcolm Brown's 26 points.

Fitzpatrick's Steakhouse 120, Merrill Lynch/Nike 96

Fitzpatrick's was without Dean Oliver, Jess Settles and Dontay Harris, but was still able to hold off Merrill Lynch. Ryan Hogan scored 26, Joe Ferrino scored 20, and Corey Hahn added another 20 to lift Fitzpatrick's to a first-place tie with Gatens Real Estate and The Fieldhouse.

The smallest market in Class A struggling to survive

Daily Iowan sportswriter Greg Wallace's tour of area minor league parks takes him to Burlington, where he looks at the beleaguered Bees.

At its lowest minor levels, baseball isn't glamorous. The bus rides are too long, the pay is poor, and job security is nonexistent. And no place typifies the low minors better than Burlington, Iowa, home of the Burlington Bees, Class A affiliate of the Chicago White Sox.

The Bees players didn't expect much when they were assigned to Burlington, but somehow, this town of 28,000 on the Mississippi River has managed to fall below even their expectations.

When asked to describe his experience in Burlington, pitcher Mark Buehrle sums his feelings up in one word.

"Shitty," Buehrle says. "Not many people come to games, and the field isn't that nice — it's not even like a Midwest League field."

Buehrle may be only 2-2, with an ERA of 5.09, but don't take his words as sour grapes. The park is truly the worst setting for minor league baseball that I have ever witnessed. The entire stadium is covered in a fresh coat of forest green paint, which sounds good unless you've seen it. Fans sit in either metal bleachers or chipped, green fiberglass box seats. And speaking of fans, there aren't many. Burlington averages only 900 fans per game, third from the bottom in the Midwest League.

In the town's defense, it is the smallest city in America to have full-season baseball, according to assistant general manager and UI grad Cliff Willey.

On this evening, the Bees draw only about 300 on "Halloween in July," which few fans even bother to dress up for. The Bees pitchers are optimistic about their fan support for upcoming games, however.

"We'll have a lot more people tomorrow," Buehrle said. "It's Thirsty Thursday, dollar beer — all the drunks come here."

The bleak situation for baseball in Burlington isn't due to lack of effort from the team's management, though. Their enthusiasm is a bright spot in the otherwise dreary atmosphere. On this evening, they are dressed up as Gilligan, Pocahontas, a gangster and a prison inmate as part of the team's Halloween promotion.

Willey is as passionate about his job as the team's players are in their distaste for the town.

"I like working in a sports atmosphere," Willey says. "It's fun. Just like these kids out here playing, I have Bees players congregate in the shabby bullpen at a home game. Burlington did not even have a full-time groundskeeper until May and averages 900 fans per game.

dreams of moving up, too. We can do something for anybody. Most of the fans don't come here to see baseball, they come to be entertained. We provide a nice, relaxing family atmosphere." He knows that he can't compete with a powerhouse like Lansing, which averages 6500 fans a night, or even Quad City, 60 miles up the road. "It's not possible," Willey said. "We're trying to compete with

Dominican Republic no match for U.S.

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — Gary Payton made 11 layups and scored 25 points, the most by any American in the Olympic qualifying tournament, as the United States defeated the Dominican Republic 107-71 Monday night.

Payton played just 21 minutes and shot 11-for-13 with five steals and four assists. He missed his only two jumpers, but it hardly mattered as the United States outscored the Dominicans 59-35 when Payton was on the court.

This was the first game of the second round for the Americans, who concentrated on stopping Felipe Lopez, the Dominicans' only NBA player.

The strategy worked, too, as Lopez was held to 15 points on 5-for-16 shooting. The Americans trapped Lopez whenever he tried to bring the ball upcourt and intimidated him down low, forcing him to miss two dunks and two layups.

The Dominicans expected to have Mark Jackson of the Indiana Pacers join them for the second round, but FIBA, the international basketball federation, refused to allow him to be added to the roster. Jackson's grandmother is Dominican.

Jason Kidd and Tim Duncan added 13 points apiece. Duncan grabbed 16 rebounds for the Americans, who led by as many as 37 points.

Payton played the first 12:04 and scored 15 points, making seven layups and a free throw. Coach Larry Brown did not make a substitution in the first nine minutes as the United States jumped to a 27-11 lead.

hits, drew two walks and were not retired in order until the ninth.

Blue Jays 8, Braves 7, 10 innings

TORONTO — Tony Batista led off the 10th inning with a home run, as the Toronto Blue Jays fought back from an early four-run deficit to beat the Atlanta Braves 8-7 Monday night.

Shawn Green hit a grand slam and Carlos Delgado hit two solo homers for the Blue Jays, who have won three straight. Delgado's 24th homer tied the game at 7 in the eighth inning.

Toronto had runners on first and third with no outs in the ninth inning but failed to score. Left-fielder Gerald Williams made a lunging grab at the wall to rob Tony Fernandez of a game-winning hit to send the game to extras.

Cardinals 8, Twins 4

ST. LOUIS — Fernando Tatís hit two two-run homers to lead the St. Louis Cardinals to an 8-4 victory over the Minnesota Twins on Monday night.

It was the second two-homer game of the season for Tatís, who hit two grand slams in one inning against the Los Angeles Dodgers on April 23.

Kent Mercker (3-4) allowed three runs, six hits, struck out two and walked four in six innings for the Cardinals. Mercker won for the first time since April 20 — a span of 17 appearances.

Marlins 10, Red Sox 7

BOSTON — Preston Wilson went 4-for-5 with his club rookie-record 18th homer and the Florida Marlins continued their inter-league success Monday night by beating the Boston Red Sox 10-7.

* A day after pounding out 14 hits in an 11-9 loss, the Marlins had 16 to improve to 31-17 since interleague play began three years ago.

And that's not counting a 4-3 edge over Cleveland in the 1997 World Series.

Royals 10, Cubs 2

CHICAGO — Mike Sweeney had a career-high four hits and drove in three, and Jay Witasick won for the first time in nearly a month as the Kansas City Royals beat the Chicago Cubs 10-2 Monday night.

Joe Randa homered to extend his hitting streak to 16 games for the Royals.

Astros 3, Indians 2, 11 innings

HOUSTON — Tom Candiotti's wild pitch in the bottom of the 11th inning allowed the winning run to score, giving the Houston Astros their eighth straight win, 3-2 over the Cleveland Indians on Monday night.

The Astros improved to 12-2 in interleague play after winning the first two games between the Central Division leaders. Cleveland has lost a season-high four straight.

The Astros, who had had only four hits, scored the winning run in the 11th without a hit. Candiotti (4-6) walked Bill Spiers and hit Tim Bogar with a pitch to start the inning.

Rangers 14, Giants 7

ARLINGTON, Texas — Ruben Mateo went 4-for-5 and Mark McLemore had three hits and three RBIs as the Texas Rangers beat the San Francisco Giants 14-7 Monday night.

Ivan Rodriguez also had three hits. Juan Gonzalez, Rusty Greer, Lee Stevens and Mateo all drove in two runs apiece to help the Rangers to their fourth victory in five games.

San Francisco has dropped five of six after winning 10 of 12.

The Rangers fell behind when rookie Ryan Glynn allowed a three-run homer to Barry Bonds in the first inning. After the Rangers rallied, Glynn took a 7-3 lead into the fifth, but did not qualify for the victory because he was lifted after consecutive walks with one out.

Burlington still the attainment of a dream for some

BURLINGTON

Clinton, Beloit, even Cedar Rapids."

Wiley will be lucky to even have a job in Burlington beyond the next decade, if for some reason he chooses to stay with the club. The economics of baseball and the changing face of the Midwest League make it unlikely that the team will be in Burlington much longer. All it will take is for the city of Burlington, who owns the team and stadium, to get an offer it can't refuse, and the team will likely be gone.

For now, he will concentrate on making Burlington a more pleasing atmosphere for the players and fans alike.

The players I talked to had one specific complaint; the playing field itself. The field is in less than perfect condition, due to the fact that the team didn't even have a groundskeeper until May. Until a full-time man was hired, the Bees staff was pressed into action as a grounds crew, and the field suffered.

"I joined the team in Michigan, the best field in the league," Buehrle said. "This place looked like shit, 20 times worse than Lansing."

Brannon Whatley, a Bees reliever, claimed the field wasn't even as nice as his college facility at Kennesaw State, located in central Georgia.

"The playing field is bumpy," Whatley said. "Lots of bare spots. There's not much of a pro baseball atmosphere here."

"It's pretty much the worst, as in town wise and in field wise," Buehrle said. "We look forward to going to away games, to get out of this town."

The only positive response from the group of pitchers I talked to were from the newest Bees, Jason Stumm and Matt Ginter. Both were first round picks in the June draft, and had just arrived from the Sox's rookie-league team in Tucson, Arizona. There, they played in front of no fans on a practice field, and started their games at 10 AM each morning, in order to beat the desert heat.

"At least they have a scoreboard here," Ginter said. "Not to mention fans and a grandstand."

The Mississippi State alum knows that whining about his situation will just be counterproductive. Instead, he chooses to look on the bright side of things.

"It's better than sitting at home and working on the farm," Ginter said. "It's a lifetime dream, I'm getting paid to play."

San Francisco closer and closer to signing Phillips

49ERS

"We're continuing to explore it, more and more intensively," Walsh said. "We're alert and sensitive to the feelings of the public. I'm sure there would be some adverse commentary if we were to sign Lawrence Phillips, and some of it would be valid. But if he can live within the normal framework of our society, then maybe we would take that risk."

Walsh and 49ers coach Steve Mariucci said they hoped the veteran leadership of teammates such as Rice and Steve Young would provide a good atmosphere for Phillips.

"It's very important that the mood in your locker room is right. The chemistry of this team is always a concern of mine. We are in the process of researching this one very thoroughly," Mariucci said. "We have a strong feeling that one of the strengths of this team is bringing new players along. They have to get with it and learn the 49er way. We feel good about being able to do that."

Walsh said the 49ers will not baby-sit Phillips or fine him repeatedly, as the Rams did, for missing practices or violating team rules.

"There would be no fines here; the relationship wouldn't continue.

He wouldn't be lectured every day by a different resource," Walsh said. "Continued counseling and following him around in a different automobile every night, those kind of things aren't going to happen. If the guy is late to meetings continuously, then he's history."

Mariucci said Hearst, who has encountered circulatory complications in his recovery from a broken ankle, was scheduled for another MRI on Monday and that a decision could come as early as Tuesday on whether to have surgery to try to increase blood flow to the damaged area.

"I would hope to have him back by the end of the season," Mariucci said. "Maybe that's being optimistic. Maybe we'll have to play without him this season."

The 49ers already have agreed to terms with former Philadelphia running back Charlie Garner, but believe Phillips would be better suited to take over as the team's No. 1 back.

NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue last Wednesday cleared Phillips to play, but warned he will have to pay a substantial fine for violating the league's violent-crime policy if signed by a team.

"The times change and he's changed, and we have a need," Walsh said. "We're seeking a back, the best talent available, and Lawrence is a very good back."

At a farm in the middle of Pennsylvania, former players get a chance to relive their glory days.

By Claude R. Marx

LANDISBURG, Pa. — Jim Fuller admits his baseball talent is limited.

"I can't throw, can't hit, can't judge a ball. But other than that, I'm OK," he said.

Those liabilities didn't prevent the baseball fan from driving an hour on a recent evening to relive his youth on a ball field adjacent to a cornfield about 40 miles west of Harrisburg. He even got to meet Bill Mazeroski, a hero to many Pennsylvanians.

About 2,000 people are expected to visit the 90-acre farm this summer, hoping to have similar experiences.

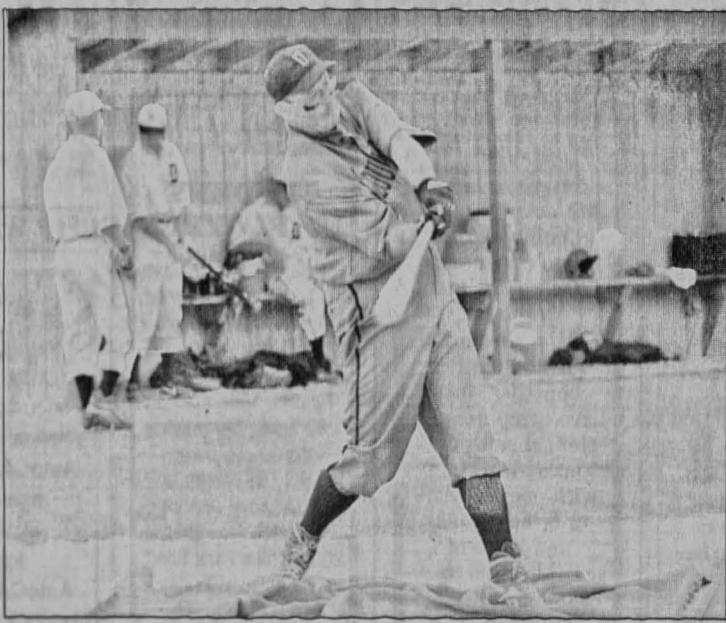

Brad Shover is counting on that.

The baseball coach at Dickinson College in nearby Carlisle and former minor league team owner bought the farm three years ago with the idea of giving people a chance to relax, relive memories and have fun.

He was inspired by the 1988 movie "Field of Dreams," in which a farmer builds a baseball diamond in a cornfield and a group of oldtime baseball players appear. The film played on nostalgia, which is what Shover does, such as providing wool uniforms like those worn in the 1930s.

"I thought the guys would come out here and say, 'I remember when.' They remember their playing days, they remember the old players," Shover said.

To further emphasize the historical ties, Shover's resort is called the Doubleday Country

Paul Vathis/Associated Press

Bob Fankulewski takes a swing before a baseball game at the Doubleday Country Inn and Farm adult baseball camp in Landisburg, Pa., Friday.

Inn & Farm, named for Abner Doubleday, who is credited by some with inventing the game. And to help visitors remember yesteryear's players, a different one comes each weekend to tell stories and, occasionally, give lessons and play ball.

Mazeroski, the former Pittsburgh Pirates second baseman, chatted, posed for pictures and signed autographs on the night Fuller attended.

Almost all the fans talked about Mazeroski's game-winning home run in the bottom of the ninth inning of the seventh game of the 1960 World Series. He said beating the Yankees — who have won more world championships than any other team — was especially satisfying.

Gary Clay of Lancaster, who plays outfield on a softball team and pitched for Grove City College, grew up in McKeesport near Pittsburgh and had fond memories of Mazeroski and his teammates. "The local police chief used to rent buses six or seven times a summer and take us to watch the Pirates. So this is special," Clay said. "When Mazeroski hit the home run I was in school, the teachers let us listen while working on a project. The whole city was listening to the game."

Scott Bishop, a 42-year old former college infielder from Mechanicsburg, was more interested in his own game and revisiting his glory days at the cornfield-turned-ball field. He said "age is a factor" in his not playing much any more, but he has fond memories of his days on the Clarion University of Pennsylvania team.

Joe Joyce Sr. of Philadelphia and his son Joe Joyce Jr. of Harrisburg played infield together at Shover's field and saw it as a way to reconnect with the ball playing they did when they were both younger.

Minor league ump's voice complaints

The minor league umpires don't like the "second-rate" hotels they must stay in.

By Ronald Blum
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Amid reports that some American League umpires are trying to rescind their resignations, minor league umpires postponed a decision on a strike date Monday but still had plenty of complaints.

Two high-ranking baseball officials, speaking on the condition they not be identified, said they were told some AL umpires either attempted to rescind their resignations or discussed the possibility with the AL office.

AL president Gene Budig declined comment. Umpires union head Richie Phillips said: "You'll have to talk to them about that."

Phillips said last week that 57 of the 68 major league umpires had resigned, effective Sept. 2, and that he expected most of the remaining nine members of his union to do the same. Two umpires who were hired during the 1979 strike are not union members.

Phillips hasn't released a list of the umpires who are quitting.

Commissioner Bud Selig isn't expected to respond to the resignations until perhaps later this week. His advisers said he will accept the resignations and instruct his staff to hire new umpires to complete the season and officiate the postseason.

Umpires think that by walking out at the season's most critical time, they will put pressure on baseball to negotiate a new labor contract to replace the deal that expires Dec. 31.

Minor league umpires who claim to have formed a union — management has refused to recognize it — didn't set a strike date during their two-hour conference call. Phillips said they will hold another conference call Tuesday, but he didn't know if a strike date would be set then.

"We talked over a lot of issues," he said. "As far as decisions and strategies, they deferred any decision until sometime tomorrow afternoon."

Nineteen umpires from 16 minor leagues, a group headed by Mike Billings of the Triple-A International League, issued a statement calling conditions "deplorable."

"The Minor League Umpires Union supports the major league umpires, but certainly does not exist for that purpose," said the statement, released by Phillips' office.

Billings said issues included salary: $4,500 for first-year umpires in Rookie League and $12,500 for starting ump's at Triple-A. He compared that to the American Hockey League, which pays starting linesmen $41,000.

Minor league ump's get $15-to-$20 in meal money, he said, a $2 decrease from last year. AHL officials get $62 in meal and tip money.

He also said that while AHL officials get private rooms at Marriotts and Hiltons, minor league umpires are "ordered to sleep two to a room in second-rate motor lodges."

Pat O'Connor, a vice president with the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues, the governing body of the minors, refuted some of Billings' complaints.

"There are inaccuracies in the numbers that are designed to mislead public opinion," O'Connor said.

Triple-A umpires received an 11 percent increase in meal money and Double-A ump's received just over 6 percent, he said, and that per diem was not cut at any level.

He also said minor league umpires in full-season leagues get year-round medical benefits, and that Rookie League umpires worked just 2 1/2 months a year.

As for the hotel room complaints, he said:

"We take particular exception, as we are sure our host cities do, to the references to 'second-rate motels' where our umpires stay. Minor league baseball is played in 160 cities and towns across the country, many of them in grassroots communities that do not have the benefit of luxury hotels."

Iowa women's swimming names coach

Garland O'Keefe has been named the new assistant swimming and diving coach at Iowa.

O'Keefe has been the head women's swimming coach at St. Bonaventure University since 1997, where she won an Atlantic 10 title in 1998.

"I'm extremely happy to be back in the Midwest and the Big Ten," O'Keefe said. She graduated from Indiana in 1994.

where she was a three-time All-Big Ten selection. She was named the conference's High Point Swimmer in 1990.

"We are very happy to have the caliber of coach of Garland at Iowa," Iowa coach Mary Bolich said. "The combination of her head coaching experience and competition at the elite level will have a direct impact on our program. We're excited about her knowledge and experience blending in our program."

Iowa finished seventh at the Big Ten Championships last season.

Tour de France leader denies drug abuse

American Lance Armstrong vehemently denies accusations that he used performance enhancing drugs.

By Ian Phillips
Associated Press

TARBES, France — Lance Armstrong should be savoring every moment.

He is the overwhelming favorite to capture the Tour de France with six days to go. He is cheered along the country roads, his remarkable comeback from testicular cancer, which had spread to his brain and lungs, a source of inspiration.

Instead, Armstrong is troubled. He has been subjected to unfounded accusations of drug use that have "taken away from what has happened so far."

"What can I do?" he said at a news conference. "I've been on my deathbed, and I'm not stupid."

"I have never tested positive and have never been caught with anything," he said. "France is a very strict country in terms of doping. I am always in France, and if I had something to hide, I would stay away."

Armstrong's performance the past two weeks have won rave reviews. But they also have aroused suspicion in some French newspapers, with such headlines as "Stupefying Armstrong" and "Hallucinating Armstrong."

"Of course, this has been heard about in the United States and has been in the headlines of my hometown paper," Armstrong said.

The 27-year-old rider from Austin, Texas, said there is a burden in wearing the leader's yellow jersey. The attention, he said, means less time on the massage table or downtime after the race.

"That starts to wear on you," he said, resting his head on his arm.

Armstrong undoubtedly has benefited from the absence this year of last year's winner, Italy's Marco Pantani, a climbing specialist who has come under suspicion for using performance-enhancing drugs, and 1997 winner Jan Ullrich of Germany, out with a knee injury. Armstrong said he was disappointed Ullrich had withdrawn.

"It was definitely detrimental to the race," he said.

Patrick Boutroux/Associated Press

Ludo Dierckxsens, of Belgium, rides to victory in the eleventh stage of the Tour de France cycling race in central France Thursday.

In October 1996, Armstrong was diagnosed with testicular cancer. He called his recovery "a miracle."

"Fifteen or 20 years ago I would not have been alive at this stage, never mind riding a bike or participating in the Tour de France," he said.

Armstrong had surgery to remove his right testicle and brain lesions. He returned to racing last year.

Even after he won a key time trial, many thought he would falter in the Alps. But that was where he looked stronger than ever, powering past rivals to forge a commanding lead.

Now comes his big test — two days in the Pyrenees beginning Tuesday. This time, his rivals say they will attack.

"Otherwise, we're going to carry Armstrong all the way to Paris in an armchair," French rider Richard Virenque said.

Armstrong, appearing relaxed on a day where there was no riding, wore a white U.S. Postal Service team T-shirt and sweat pants. He was confident about the mountain stages but warned of pitfalls.

"The mountains can crack you when you become really isolated," he said.

So he'll be looking for more support from his teammates. So often during the first two weeks they have protected him in their slipstream and kept tabs on his rivals.

"I have to give credit to my team," Armstrong said. "They've been strong riding out at the front of the pack every day."

"When you have a strong team, it makes it very difficult for the dangerous ones to get away," he said.

Armstrong leads Spain's Abraham Olano by 7 minutes, 44 seconds, with Switzerland's Alex Zülle another three seconds behind.

But a number of riders will try to reel him in during the mountain stages. Armstrong thinks the Spanish teams, as they approach their home country, will be aggressive Tuesday and break early.

"We'll keep together as a team so we can see what they do," he said.

So he remains cautious about the prospect of becoming only the second American — after three-time winner Greg LeMond — to win cycling's showcase race.

"I'm not the 'boss,' or the 'patron' of the race," he said, using the French words that have been used to describe his position. "I'm just part of the overall show."

World Cup team feted at White House

President Clinton and Al Gore reminisced about their own athletic experiences during the ceremony.

By Sonya Ross
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — With dozens of young girls, soccer moms and dads watching, President Clinton praised the U.S. women's soccer team Monday for a World Cup victory that seized the nation's attention.

"Their triumph has surely become America's triumph," he said.

The president, joined by his wife Hillary, Vice President Al Gore and Gore's wife, Tipper, saluted the team that won the Women's World Cup by beating China on July 10 in Los Angeles.

Clinton was there for the victory, a fact Mrs. Clinton said she and daughter Chelsea envied. He recalled being so thrilled when Brandi Chastain made the winning penalty kick he "almost fell out of the sky box."

"The day after the game, a lot of us who aren't so young anymore were trying to search the whole, cluttered attic of our memories to try to think if there was ever a time when there had been a more exciting climax to an athletic event that meant as much to so many," Clinton said. "I'm not sure that, in my lifetime, there has been."

The team, clad in pink short-sleeved shirts and black pants, was gripped by touristlike excitement for their White House visit. One member, standing on a platform behind Clinton, captured the event with her camcorder.

Clinton called the ceremony "a moment of celebration and a moment of sadness," and paused to remember John F. Kennedy Jr., his wife Carolyn Bessette Kennedy and her sister Lauren Bessette, presumed dead in a plane crash off the coast of Martha's Vineyard, Mass.

The players also were thinking of the Kennedy and Bessette families.

"Obviously, it's a horrible day for America," said team co-captain

Carla Overbeck. "We weren't really sure if we were going to be able to go here today just because of the tragedy. If we can bring a glimmer of hope or a smile to someone's face, then that would be great."

Gore, describing himself as a "soccer dad" who watched all three of his daughters play the game, jokingly told how he kept a world leader, "who shall remain nameless," waiting because his daughter's soccer match went to double overtime.

He said he stayed until the game ended.

"I just said, 'Oh, the heck with it,'" he said. "I gave the interpreter quite a workout that day."

Cubans defected for political freedom

One of the defectors' father was the head of the Cuban Basketball Federation.

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico — Quietly, privately, the Cuban basketball players talked about their escape. There were secret phone calls from a Puerto Rican hotel room. There were whispers and fears.

And then Saturday night, centers Lazaro Borrel and Hector Pino, guards Roberto Herrera and Angel Caballero, and a team masseur, Armando Rodriguez, said they were going out for some fresh air.

"We left the hotel and didn't go back," Borrel said Monday as the men held a news conference to announce their defections to the United States. "We wanted to be free."

U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service spokesman Ivan Ortiz said the men had not formally applied for political asylum, but noted that Cubans who defect after legally reaching U.S. soil are not returned to Cuba, unlike refugees found at sea.

The men left hours before their team was to face the U.S. team in the Olympic qualifying tournament. The Cuban team, missing its stars, lost 88-52 and was eliminated from the tournament.

Borrel, 26, said he had long hoped to leave Cuba and saw the trip to Puerto Rico as "the perfect opportunity." It wasn't hard, he said, to find Cuban exiles willing to help him escape.

"I tried to make the contacts, we talked and we made plans," Borrel said. "On Saturday, they communicated with us and told us if we wanted to, we could do it that night."

Herrera, 24, said the decision was especially painful because his father, Ruperto Herrera, is the president of the Cuban Basketball Federation. His brother, Ruperto Jr., defected in Argentina in May. Herrera said he hoped his father would not be punished for the defections.

"It was a difficult decision, but I had to do it," Herrera said. "They treated me well there (in Cuba), but I wanted freedom, I wanted to make my own choices."

His father, in San Juan for the tournament, told The Associated Press. "It's the hardest blow I have ever received in my life. It's the worst thing of my life ..."

"My son has deserted the team and his country ... He's a traitor because he failed his country."

He said his son was a "national idol" who "enjoyed special treatment, he had everything ..."

The defectors said that as top athletes they had lived more comfortably than most in Cuba. Borrel was even a member of Cuba's Popular Assembly, the country's parliament.

"To me, they seemed like (politically) disciplined players, but people grow up, they think and they realize the situation they're in," said Andres Guibert, a Cuban player who defected in 1993 with 42 other athletes during the Central American and Caribbean Games in southern Ponce, Puerto Rico. He now plays in Europe and was attending the tournament in San Juan.

Dozens of Cuba's top athletes have defected during international competitions in recent years.

Garnett stealing the show in San Juan

Kevin Garnett is turning himself into America's basketball ambassador at the Tournament of the Americas.

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico — Of the 20 or so oohs and aahs the Americans have produced at the Tournament of the Americas, one player — Kevin Garnett — has been responsible for just about all of them.

There have been alley-oop dunks with Garnett catching a ball tossed 13 feet in the air, get-that-stuff-outta-here rejections into the stands and more alley-oop dunks.

Boy, does this team love the alley-oop dunk. "What he's doing, he's putting flair into the game," said teammate Gary Payton, the only holdover from the 1996 Olympic team. "He gets them dunks, getting those young legs into it, blocking shots, keeping it high-performance."

Garnett is the leading scorer for the Americans, averaging 16.5 a game. He's first on the team in blocks (2.25), second in rebounds (7.0), tied for third in steals (1.25) and the runaway leader in high-light tape appearances.

"It's a team of predators," he said.

The players from Uruguay were so awestruck that one of them walked up to Garnett at the free throw line and asked if he could take a photograph together after the game. Another said it was such an honor to have his shot blocked by Garnett that he'd one day tell his grandchildren about it.

Teams are at a loss as to how to stop Garnett, especially in transition when the United States tries to put on a show.

The lobbed passes to Garnett have gotten higher and higher. Against Canada, he sprinted full speed, left his feet and caught the ball over his shoulder, a la Willie Mays, and finished with a high-velocity slam.

"If I've got a layup, I'm going to throw it back to Kevin because I want to see him dunk. Jason (Kidd) and Gary are the same way," teammate Steve Smith said. "The thing is, Kevin's a dunker. And you're going to get the high-light when you dunk."

"He's a major player, a great basketball player. He's maturing daily, and all the older players like how he handles himself on the court," Vin Baker said. "A lot of people look at his age and think he's not a leader. But he's demonstrated that he can be a great player and a leader also."

The United States won its four games in the first round by an average of 36.8 points, and now moves on to the second round. The Dominican Republic was the opponent Monday night.

Puerto Rico was the only other undefeated team in the first round and plays the United States before their boisterous fans Thursday night.

Larry Brown has added a new coaching twist to this version of the Dream Team, setting up a caste system in which the three rookies — Wally Szcerbiak, Elton Brand and Richard Hamilton — are definitely second-class citizens.

Brown has given the bulk of the playing time to the nine NBA veterans who will be on the 2000 Olympic team, holding the others until garbage time. Hamilton hasn't played at all because of a sprained ankle.

The U.S. team doesn't have a true center, but it hasn't mattered. Garnett has shot nearly 70 percent while Baker is at 86 percent and Duncan at 75 percent.

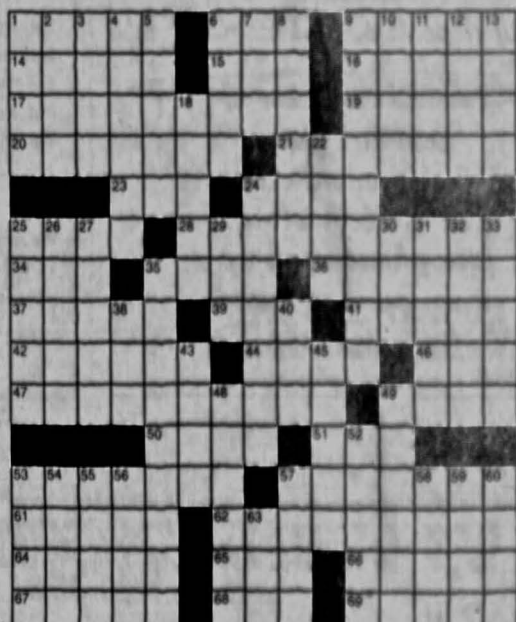

"Nobody grabs a stat sheet," said Smith, who might be surprised to learn he's averaging only 5.5 points a game while shooting just 45 percent — second lowest on the team behind Szcerbiak.
