Joie Ruth Armstrong, 26, whose decapitated body was found near her Yosemite housing on July 22. The 37year-old man was arrested on July 24 at a nudist colony and is expected to be arraigned today on a charge of murder in a national park, the FBI said.

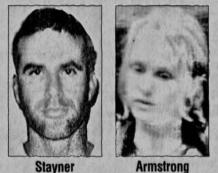

Stayner, who was questioned at the time of the three previous slayings but ruled out as a suspect, is now believed to have played a role in those crimes, said James M. Maddock, the FBI's special agent in charge. The bodies of Carole Sund, her daughter Juli, and family friend Silvina Pelosso, of Argentina, were discovered in March.

We have developed specific information linking Stayner to the Sund-Pelosso murders," Maddock said.

The Stayner name already is indelibly etched in the annals of California crime.

His brother, Steven Stayner, was a sexually abused kidnap victim who was abducted off a Merced street in 1972. The boy was reunited with his family seven years later. But, as if he lived his short life under a cloud,

Road races to run for schools

Iowa City Road Races and two local school foundations announce a new partnership.

By Troy Shoen The Daily Iowan

The Iowa City Community School District Foundation and the Regina Foundation will be the new beneficiaries for funds raised by Iowa City Road Races.

On July 23, race officials announced the decision to fill the recent partnership vacancy that was left when the United Way decided to break its ties with the road races earlier this month.

Both foundations were chosen to receive the funds that will be raised in the Oct. 17 race because they met the criteria that the road races directors were looking for, said Lori Riley, the director of the races.

"Iowa City Road Races went looking for organizations that had a need and would be able to increase participation," she said. "We already had good support from the schools, so they were the first group we approached."

The Community School District Foundation, established in 1982, raises money for Iowa City public schools. In the past, the foundation has given money to support such things as portable stages, science kits and calculaties for the area schools, said Kathy Moyers, president of the foundation.

"Money raised through this event will make a significant impact on education in Iowa City," she said. We are really looking forward to it."

This is the first time that the two school foundations will be working together, said Mike O'Hara, Regina foundation president.

Treasury Secretary Lawrence Summers and National Economic Council Chairman Gene Sperling, on separate news programs, made it clear that a $500 billion figure being offered as middle ground between the White House and congressional Republicans is unacceptable.

The president will veto a tax cut of $800 billion or $500 billion because it threatens our ability to secure Medicare and Social Security and pay down out national debt," Sperling said on "Fox News Sunday."

Republicans insisted that projected budget surpluses - estimated at almost $3 trillion over the next decade - ensure they can meet the goals of saving Social Security and Medicare and reducing the debt while also giving Americans a needed tax break.

"The question is who spends the surplus, and the president has taken on almost a reckless approach to the facts," Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, said on CBS' "Face the Nation."

"You guys are shameless," Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, said to Sperling. Gramm said the GOP's pro-

The Johnson County Fair will begin today, and it is expected to draw a crowd of 60,000, in spite of the predicted high temperatures and humidity.

Temperatures for the fair are expected to be in the 80s and 90s, which is milder than the 100-degree days of last week. Still, it will be warm enough that precautions must be taken to keep animals cool.

"They'll have lots of water to spray on the animals and lots of fans to keep them cool, and they're in the shade as much as possible," said Mark Stutsman, fair superintendent. If the animals are properly cooled, they should not have any problems, he said.

"Very rarely have we had an ani-mal overheat," Stutsman said. "They're sent home if that's the case."

Whatever the temperature, fairgoers will be able to appreciate the handiwork and skills of Johnson County's 4-H community.

Some exhibits, such as 12-year-old Kirsten Reiman's gardening project, have been under preparation for a long time.

"This is my third year in 4-H," said Reiman, a 4-H member and an Iowa City resident. "I've been working on my gardening project all summer.'

She is also putting together a 5foot-tall scarecrow for the scarecrow contest, which is scheduled for 5 p.m. today. "We put up most of our stuff on Saturday," she said. "But not the scarecrow; we're still working on it."

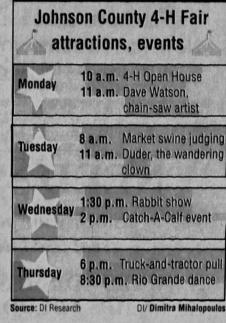

Though the fair is intended for participants such as Reiman, said Gene Mohling, the Johnson County fair board secretary, it also attracts a diverse crowd.

"Our primary focus is on the 4-H'ers we have here in Johnson County, but we do pride ourselves in the variety of entertainment and crowds we attract," he said.

The size of the crowd coming to the fair has not dropped in recent years, but the make-up of it has, said Steve Haman, the fair board president.

"The numbers are holding steady," he said. "The percentage of town kids is much greater now then before."

"We get approximately 60,000 people a year," Mohling said. "It's a combination of both the animal shows and the entertainment acts that draws the big crowds.

"Most important, this is an absolutely free fair. The only things that will cost you are the food and the

NEW YORK (AP) - Michelle Williams has appeared on stage naked and has been on her own since age 15.

On top of that, she plays a bad girl on 'Dawson's Creek.' Still, when the teenage actress saw a sexy photo of her on a magazine cover, she was horrified. "Those pictures are not me, Williams says in Williams Sunday's Daily News, referring to the cover shot and other photos in Maxim. "You should see me in flannel pajamas and greasy hair.

"It upsets me to see those pictures. I hate the fact that the girls who watch 'Dawson's Creek' will see them. I have a 15-year-old sister. I don't want to be an unhealthy role model. More than a year after the drugrelated beating death of Frank Lee Boyd, 43, a Johnson County District Court judge has sentenced one of four men accused in the murder.

On July 23, Carlos D. Morris, 22, agreed to a plea bargain in which he pleaded guilty to class B felony charges for the ongoing criminal conduct of trafficking cocaine and distributing cocaine to minors, said Jerald Kinnamon, Morris's attorney. During the plea and sentencing on July 23, Morris was sentenced attempting to conceal the death by to a maximum of 27 years in prison, Kinnamon said. Morris served nine months while waiting for trial; if he gets good-time credit, he could be held responsible for 121/2 years with the possibility of parole after a five-year minimum sentence, he said.

In addition, Morris pleaded guilty to two aggravated misdemeanor charges. The first is an obstructing prosecution charge for cleaning up blood in a 630 S. Capitol St. apartment and altering a crime scene. The second is an accessory-after-the-fact charge for helping to take Boyd's body out of the apartment, discarding it in a ditch east of Iowa City, and setting the body aflame.

Morris agreed to the sentence after the charges of first-degree murder, which carry a life sentence, were dismissed, Kinnamon said.

"He was initially charged with first-degree murder, and it was only after the discovery that certain statements previously made were not true that the focus of the investigation shifted from him to others," he said.

But that happened only after investigators discovered that Morris was not involved in the actual murder of Boyd.

"His participation with regard to the murder has turned out to be minimal. But his involvement with drugs carries very substantial penalties under Iowa law, and he's being held responsible for those actions," Kinnamon said.

Prosecutors are still pursuing the three other men suspected in the case, said Karen Egerton, an assistant county attorney. Clifton Trevial Walker, 17, is charged with ongoing criminal conduct, willful injury and accessory after the fact; James Frank Miller, 16, is charged with first-degree murder; and there is a warrant out for the arrest of Jason Christopher Lack, 19, she said.

The case is taking a long time to prosecute because there are many factors that must be accounted for, Egerton said.

JFK Jr. search raises questions of privilege

Some wonder whether the government would go to such lengths to find "John F. Smith" if his plane went down.

By Chelsea J. Carter Associated Press

LOS ANGELES - Ron Trenton took off in a Piper Cherokee from San Diego's Montgomery Field and headed toward the beach, waggling his wings at his fellow lifeguards below.

It was his routine goodbye before heading out over the Pacific Ocean on whale-watching expeditions.

It turned out to be Trenton's last goodbye. Within hours, he had become the object of one of the hundreds of searches the Coast Guard conducts every year for missing planes.

Most of these draw little notice from the general public. Not so the extensive search for John F. Kennedy Jr., his wife and sisterin-law, and many wonder whether the government would go to equal lengths for someone who wasn't the celebrity son of an assassinated president.

President Clinton assured the country that the initial efforts were consistent with what would have been done in any other case.

But a review of rescue-andrecovery efforts in two singleengine airplane crashes off the California coast demonstrates the difficulty of setting a uniform standard for a search. Trenton's family has no complaints. But the sister of Robert Beach, who died with three friends in the other crash in question, sees a "difference between celebrity and civilian."

Not so, says Larry Hall of the U.S. Coast Guard, who oversaw

It doesn't matter to us if you are John F. Kennedy Jr. or John Q. Citizen, we are in the business to save lives.

- Larry Hall U.S. Coast Guard spokesman

the search for Beach's plane.

"It doesn't matter to us if you are John F. Kennedy Jr. or John Q. Citizen, we are in the business of saving lives," Hall said. 'We will launch whatever resources it takes. Only when we have ruled out any chance of a survivor - and usually it's reluctantly - will we suspend the search.

But the recovery efforts of bodies and wreckage vary, as does the number of people assigned to investigate the accidents, said Keith Holloway of the National Transportation Safety Board,

Last year, the board investigated 1,907 private airplane accidents, including 361 fatal crashes.

As in Kennedy's case, neither pilot in the California crashes was trained on instruments, and both were flying in less-thandesirable conditions. Neither filed a flight plan, nor did they signal possible engine problems over the radio.

One important difference is water depth.

Kennedy crashed in about 180 feet of Atlantic Ocean off Martha's Vineyard. Beach is presumed to have gone down in 5,000 feet of water, Trenton in a two-mile deep canyon on the ocean floor.

We, of course, want to find out what caused the plane to crash," Holloway said. "But it has to be within realistic limits of what can actually be accomplished."

But not all the pitchers were as sober

"About the only player on our team who's drunk is our pitcher, but his nickname is 'Drunk Phil.'" said Brad Norton, assistant manager at One-Eyed Jakes.

Although most players said they were playing to have fun, some were taking it more seriously. The Union Bar announced it was "an equal opportunity ass-kicker" in an ad taken out in the July 23 Daily Iowan.

"A lot of teams are gunnin' for the Union," Norton said. "Most teams are here to have fun, but a few people take it more seriously."

Republican tax cut is a bad idea

Last week, the House of Representatives approved a $792 billion tax-cutting bill that does all the wrong things at the wrong times. The economy is so great that it makes people a little nervous, wondering when the bubble is going to pop. Americans in all income brackets feel as if they actually have more money because wages are rising, unemployment is low, and costs are falling. The people who are really having a good time, however, are the richest Americans, who have made fortunes from the stock-market boom.

So what are Republicans planning to do? They have decided that taxpayers need a break. This is wrong. The last thing that the highly stimulated U.S. economy needs is a tax cut to further stimulate it. It would be like giving coffee to a hyper-active child. Tax cuts encourage people and businesses to spend more and invest more. This should be saved for times of financial trouble, to boost the economy.

Not only is it the wrong time for a tax cut, the Republican plan gives the most money back to people who need it the least right now: rich investors. The bill lowers the capital-gains tax rate on investment profits for individuals to 15 percent from 20 percent and for corporations to 30 percent from 35 percent. The people who pay capital-gains taxes already benefit the most during a booming economy; slashing their taxes now would only increase the gap between the rich and poor.

Last week, the House heard from Alan Greenspan, the widely respected economist who chairs the Federal Reserve Board. He said very clearly that now was not the time for tax cuts. His suggestion was to use the surplus to pay down the national debt instead of using it for either tax cuts or spending. Republicans smiled and nodded and didn't pay any attention. The bill is now with the Senate, and when that body is done with it, President Clinton.

Hopefully, the Senate will be more economically responsible than the House was.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

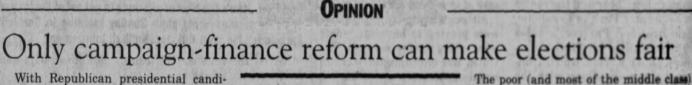

Make campaign-finance reform an issue in 2000 election

Mega-kudos to the only two presidential candidates who have the guts to make campaignfinance reform a top priority issue in their bids for their party's nomination: Democrat Bill Bradley and Republican Sen. John McCain. They know that democracy will continue to decline in our country if the corrupting influence of money in politics is not harnessed.

McCain's Republican Party is campaign reform's biggest obstacle. Reform would already be law if it weren't for key Republican senators. Majority Leader Trent Lott of Mississippi and Mitch McConnell of Kentucky, who filibuster it to death every time it comes before the Senate. The majority - the middle class and poor - do not share equal voice with the rich few who own the "doctors of plu-"tocracy," Lott and McConnell. McConnell is known to have smugly said that no election has ever been won or lost on the issue, and the electorate doesn't care about it. In the campaign debates to come, Bradley and McCain will effectively articulate why campaign reform is crucial to saving democracy.

If Republican presidential candidate George W. Bush is serious about promoting compassionate conservatism, he must first persuade Lott and McConnell to stop killing campaign reform that will better allow the voice of society's most vulnerable to be heard. If he can't do it, he lacks credibility on the compassion issue. Is it really possible to love money and power and still be compassionate toward our neighbors who live in poverty, don't have health-care coverage, and can't even scrape up a dollar of "speech" to contribute to a political candidate?

> Paul L. Whiteley Sr. Louisville, Ky.

With Republican presidential candidate George W. Bush having raised a record $37 million (and rising) for his campaign, and Democrats aiming for a record amount of party donations by November 2000, we are eerily reminded that campaign-finance reform is way overdue.

SURPLUS

Because all of the candidates and parties are worried about money, the real issues at hand are being set aside.

Despite all of the clouded perceptions, reform is needed.

Because all of the candidates and parties are worried about money, the real issues at hand are being set aside. Instead of talk on education, crime, taxes or any other staple issues, candidates keep looking at their checkbooks and talking about them, too. In addition, the amount of money that needs to be raised to run for president limits the discussion within the country. And it does it in at least two ways. First, the money must come from somewhere.

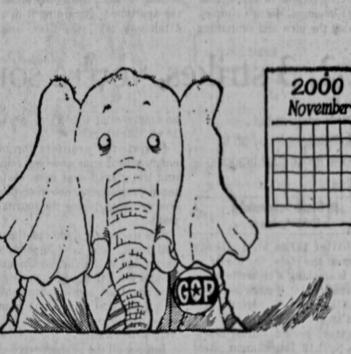

didates and push their agendas. Second, very few people are capable of raising the incredible amounts of money needed to compete in a campaign. As a result, the number of voices heard is once again limited. Freedom isn't so free when you can't be heard because you don't have the money. The question shouldn't be whether we need campaign-finance reform, the question is what form it should take. And if reform takes place within the next four years, expect campaign 2004 to look and sound nothing like campaign 2000.

For years, Democrats have seemed to push for reform, but with their new goal of raising as much as $200 million, their position seems hypocritical, especially because they plan to use soft money for the majority of the contributions.

Republicans have seemed to fight reform ever since Democrats have pushed for it, and their current position hasn't changed. And with their favorite candidate rolling in money, they seem to dislike the idea of reform even more.

Absorbing the slings and arrows of the reading public ou know, I don't really care much for summer. I don't like the heat and humidity, I hate the bugs, and I hate the frustration of having to comb through what is essentially a coolweather wardrobe to find stuff to wear every day.

Besides ... with summer comes swamp-ass. Don't pretend you don't know what I'm talking about. You know.

But as(s)ide from all that, I thought that because there's almost nobody in town this time of year - which is good, considering the mood everybody's in and nothing much is happening that might inspire a full-blooded holler from yours truly, I might take this time to answer some mail sent in by you, The People. This fine nation was founded on the concept of folks being able to speak their mind, and in observance of this past Fourth of July holiday, I hereby attempt to go quid pro quo with the masses:

Why are you so pissy all the time?

Did you have a rough childhood? Did you spend a lot of your time alone, or maybe locked in an attic somewhere? Yours truly, Wondering In Mount Pleasant

Dear WIMP, No, I've never been locked in an attic. I did spend a lot of time by myself as a kid, but that was only until my sisters were born - then I had real, live small children to harass. As to why I'm so pissy ... see the above remarks regard-

A Concerned Northern European Dear ACNE,

I don't know what to say. I mean, certainly I've never actually called anyone an ignorant, ill-clad, socially inept lunkhead-rutabaga-whatever in the column - have I? That's why we have copy editors here at the paper. If I cross the line from biting commentary into libelous slander, the copy crew will rein me in.

Of course, Beau Elliot's the copy chief ... so who knows. Maybe something slipped by. But regardless, if I go after people and call them nasty names, rest assured that they probably asked for it.

Dear Hannah,

I'd just like to say that I think your writing sucks, and so do you. You're arrogant and self-righteous, and judging from your June 28 piece, you're schizophrenic to boot! Hang it up and quit monopolizing everybody's time on Monday! Signed,

Give up this crazy dream. Yeah. But I'll take one more letter before I go.

Dear Hannah,

I just had to write you to tell you that your column is what gets me through my day. You see, some years ago I was backpacking through Costa Rica and was attacked by a roving band of wild bush-pigs. I lay bleeding in a culvert for six days before a peasant family rescued me and nursed me back to health. Since returning to the States, I've been plagued with bouts of acute porcine agoraphobia and can't leave my house. Your column is my link with the outside world. I'm sure you get fan mail all the time, but I just wanted to let you know how much your humor and feistiness means to someone who's been savaged by wild bush-pigs. Thanks so much.

Admiringly yours, Faceless in Seattle

HA! See? Reader response like that makes it all worthwhile! If I can reach out and positively affect even one soul, then all the snatchy hate-mail is worth it! Critics be damned - someone digs me in Seattle! With that, I bid you ciao ... and I'll see you next month, swampass permitting.

House uses 'emergency' powers to pad budget

If census is an "emergency," then it must be crunch time for the budget on Capitol Hill.

By Alan Fram Associated Press

WASHINGTON - First, House Republicans declared next year's census an emergency. Never mind that the Constitution has required the national head count every decade for the past two centuries.

This week they plan to do the same with veterans' health care ---even though it is little surprise that many of the nation's 26 million veterans periodically require medical attention.

As Congress hits crunch time, these are just two gimmicks Republicans are using to spend billions of dollars beyond budget spending limits while asserting they remain as fiscally conservative as ever. Despite big federal surpluses, the spending limits are forcing lawmakers to be frugal, or at least appear to be.

Under budget law, declaring an item an emergency means spending limits can be ignored and projected surpluses can be spent. That is what Republicans are doing amid the political reality that they lack the votes to pass spending measures without the extra money

"You do what you have to do," said Rep. Ralph Regula, R-Ohio, a senior member of the House Appropriations Committee, which is churning out the 13 annual bills for fiscal year 2000, which starts on Oct. 1

Republicans are not the only ones to resort to sleight-of-hand, an age-old feature of the annual budget fight.

Earlier this year, President Clinton proposed spending $30 billion above budget limits while claiming he was heeding them. He proposed to pay for the extra spending with tax increases on cigarettes and other items ideas with virtually no chance of passing a Republican-controlled Congress.

"They're doing the same sort of budget tricks with a surplus they used to do with deficits," said Peter Sperry, who follows the federal budget for the conservative Heritage Foundation.

Nonetheless, the House GOP's comes after many Republicans accused Clinton and their own leaders of using the designation to stuff unneeded expenditures into a big disaster bill this spring and an omnibus spending measure last fall.

The savings on paper that Republicans are creating by using budget contrivances are beginning to add up.

Declaring the 2000 census an emergency gets them $4.5 billion.

Aides say when a subcommittee of the House Appropriations Committee votes today on a bill for veterans and other programs, lawmakers plan to designate an emergency for billions more in veterans' health care and disaster relief spending.

Calling disaster relief an emergency is not an original GOP idea. Clinton proposed the same thing in his budget.

Republicans also may claim another $3 billion in savings in that same bill by lowering the Tennessee Valley Authority's borrowing authority. Barring the unforeseen, TVA was not planning on the additional borrowing anyway.

In several instances this year, embrace of emergency spending Republicans also have found money by ordering Congress' accountants to use more generous savings estimates than they had planned.

> Members of the Appropriations Committee say House GOP leaders told them to use the savings techniques

John Feehery, spokesman for House Speaker Dennis Hastert, R-Ill., said leaders have two main goals: getting the spending bills to the House floor, and not spending the portion of the surplus that comes from Social Security.

"This is part of the process," Feehery said.

But it is unclear how smoothly the process will go.

Conservative Republicans may oppose some gimmicks, especially if they feel the emergency declarations have gone too far. With the slim GOP House margin, that could force leaders to find savings elsewhere.

Whatever happens, analysts say Republicans probably won't pay politically for their budget games. The sound economy and summer distractions have few Americans paying attention to the capital.

In a predominately urban county of more than 100,000 residents, the attendance at the fair demonstrates that it appeals to urban as well as rural people, Mohling said.

UI students will be attracted to the craft shows and entertainment venues that the fair offers, Haman said.

"Agricultural events might not attract students, but that's not all there is at the fair," he said.

Some agricultural events are quite entertaining too, Haman said.

"On Wednesday, we have the Catch-a-Calf, where there are three riders on horses and 21 head of cattle, which are all numbered. Three have the same number and the horsemen have to sort them out from the rest. It's a great opportunity to just watch these guys work."

The truck-and-tractor pull and the musical performances Thursday should also bring out the crowds, Haman said.

The fairgrounds are located just south of the Iowa City Municipal Airport on Riverside Drive and will open at 10 a.m. today.

General registration for all students

The University of Iowa requires that all vehicles operated on campus by students, including those not owned by students, be registered with the Parking road races if this fall's race is successful, O'Hara said.

"We always look for new ways to raise money," he said. "The funds raised by the road race will be very helpful to our foundations." In the past, the road races have raised more than $100,000 for the United Way agencies, half of which went to Iowa City Hospice.

The races started looking for a new beneficiary for its fall event after the United Way dropped its connection on July 2. The United Way no longer wanted to be affiliated with the event due to unanswered questions that arose after a check for $97,000 written by road races to United Way bounced.

The Community School Foundation did have some concerns over how the road races have handled money in the past, Moyers said. But the foundation was willing to take a chance on the races. she said.

"We wanted to be cautious," Moyers said. "The directors all seemed like dedicated people who wanted to continue the tradition of the race.'

In an effort to avoid past problems, pledge money will no longer be handled by race officials, Riley said.

"All the pledge money will be handled by a financial institution," she said. Participants who raise pledge money will be able to indicate which foundation they want the money to go to, Riley said. The money will then be sent directly to a fund set up by the financial institution, she said.

The entry fee for the Oct. 17 "Hawkeye Medical Supply Iowa City Road Races Run for the Schools" will be reduced in an effort to increase participation, Riley said.

In some cases, the government will not give disability benefits to people who earn more than $700 a month through employment because the government believes that if a person is able to work, he or she should not be considered disabled, Pederson said.

Iowa City City Councilor Dee Norton, who participated in the parade, agreed with Pederson.

"There is still a lot that needs to be done for people with disabilities, especially with private enterprise," he said. "People with disabilities are losing benefits once they get employed.

"That's a real problem," Belman said. "Employers don't want to hire people with disabilities because they can raise the premiums (on employers' health plans)."

These problems have discouraged a lot of people from seeking employment in Iowa's job market in the past, she said. But slowly, people with disabilities are gaining opportunities to find employment

"A lot of people with disabilities have moved into the work place in the last nine years, but some are still discouraged," Pederson said. "They have a unique opportunity in Iowa because of the low unemployment.'

Iowa is enjoying a record low of 2.6 percent unemployment. As a result, more jobs are available to people with disabilities.

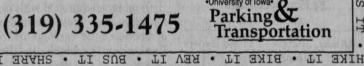

Other parade participants included some Iowa Special Olympians. Jon Meskimen, Special Olympics facilitator for the Iowa City schools and a parade participant, agreed that opportunities for the disabled have improved over the last nine years but also sees room for improvement.

"I think there will continue to be improvement in the number of opportunities available to people with disabilities," he said. "I have seen that in the school system." DI reporters Chris Rasmussen and Troy Shoen

El Portal is also the town in which the victims in the previous slayings were last seen alive in February during a sightseeing trip. The three women stayed at the Cedar Lodge, where Stayner has rented a room above the restaurant for the past two years.

He was hired there in August 1997 and was laid off in January of this year because of a slowdown in business

He was rehired on March 20, a day after Carole Sund's and Silvina's bodies were found in the trunk of their rental car. Juli Sund's body was later found hidden off a lightly traveled highway. The parents of Carole Sund, Carole and Francis Carrington, were at the FBI's press conference Sunday.

"We're happy that it looks like maybe the case is over," Carole Carrington said after the press conference.

"It brings some closure, no question," her husband said.

FBI agents had previously said they had zeroed in on a loose-knit group of methamphetamine users in connection with the sightseers case and were confident that some of those responsible are already behind bars on unrelated charges. In light of the new development, Maddock said, the FBI would be re-evaluating the possible roles of others who have come under scrutiny in the sightseers case. There is no evidence linking Stayner to those people.

"We are looking at whether (Stayner) is solely responsible (for the sightseers murders) or if others are involved," Maddock said.

Maddock also said he has asked himself if the FBI could have done anything to prevent Armstrong's killing.

"I struggled with that issue for the last 24 hours, and I continue to do so," he said. "I'm confident we've done everything that rea-posed $800 billion tax cut was outstripped by administration plans for more than $1 trillion in new spending.

The Senate this week is expected to approve its version of the 10year, $792 billion tax cut. The House last week, in a vote that broke largely along party lines, passed its bill that matched the Senate's version in size but differed in the nature of some of the cuts.

Clinton repeatedly has attacked the size of the cuts. At a Democratic fund-raiser in Colorado on July 24, the president said it would "imperil the future stability of the country."

Sen. John Breaux, a moderate Democrat from Louisiana, said he planned to offer a compromise that would combine a tax cut of around $500 billion with a Medicarereform bill including the president's goal of extending Medicare coverage to prescription drugs.

"If we don't get together, we are heading for a major train wreck, which I think would be terrible for the American people," Breaux said on CBS.

He suggested the House and Senate put off sending a bill to the president, "take a breath of fresh air" over the August vacation period and return in September ready to talk taxes and Medicare with the White House.

Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., said last week he would be open to a compromise in the $500 billion to $600 billion range. In any case, it is likely the GOP bill would not go to the White House until after Labor Day, so Clinton could not veto it when Republicans are away from the capital on vacation.

The Haunting scares with clichés

By John Mullin The Daily Iowan

It's odd that The Haunting should come out so close to The Blair Witch Project. Both movies are ghost stories, and both play off of the long-standing traditions of the genre in addition to a variety of myths, legends and other things that go bump in the night.

They are, however, very different movies. Blair Witch was made for around $30,000; The Haunting clocked in at just over $70 million. Blair Witch uses documentary style photography and naturalsounding dialogue to persuade you that what's happening is real, while The Haunting employs state-of-the-art visual and aural effects to try to do the same thing. That considered, Blair Witch is probably the more effective movie, but that's not to say that The Haunting isn't scary itself. The story is based on The Haunting of Hill House, by Shirley Jackson, and was filmed once before, by director Robert Wise in 1963. Wise's movie was highly esteemed for creatively using sound effects and music to pesuade audiences that they were seeing and hearing things that weren't really there.

The new movie makes full use of present-day Dolby digital sound, computer effects and some old-fashioned props and puppetry to make your flesh rouse and stir. In addition, there's some really amazing production design by Eugenio Zanetti, who also did last year's What Dreams May Come.

Eleanor (Lili Taylor) examines creepy woodwork of the haunted Hill House.

The story follows Eleanor (Lili Taylor), who goes to Hill House to take part in what she thinks is an insomnia study run by Haunting the well-meaning Dr. Marrow (Liam Neeson). When: 12:45, 3:45, Soon, Catherine Zeta-6:45 and 9:45 Jones (and her breasts) arrives, as do the awkward Luke (Owen Wilson, who co-wrote and $\star \star$ and 1/2 out produced Rushmore) and a few other guests.

In actuality, Neeson is running an experiment on how people respond to fear, and it's amusing to see him pull out many old haunted house clichés in an attempt to put his subjects on edge

Sadly, however, the movie itself quickly becomes a pastiche of clichés. It has fun with a number of the genre's conventions at first. There's the maid who gives long and drawn-out warnings about how they will be all alone at night, and there's the ridiculously exaggerated Gothic architecture. There are a number of genuinely creepy moments, and then halfway through, the movie bursts into a collage of mildly cheesy computer-generated effects by Phil Tippet and the fine folks at Industrial Light and Magic.

The movie is entertaining (and sometimes scary), but in ways that might not have been intended. The ghosts of the dead children who haunt Hill House are vaguely reminiscent of that dancing baby from "Ally McBeal," and there's at least one plot revelation two-thirds of the way through the movie that legitimately shocked me with how stupid it was.

In the end, Blair Witch seems to know something that The Haunting doesn't: Thinking that there's something terrifying right around the corner is often more effective than actually seeing what's around the corner.

The movie was directed by former cinematographer Jan de Bont (Speed, Twister). Steven Spielberg was an uncredited executive producer.

Inspiring generations through stories of courage

Kiana Davenport will read from her latest novel, Song of the Exile tonight.

By Tyler Steward The Daily Iowan

In 1993, as she was finishing her novel Shark Dialogues, Kiana Davenport discovered the seeds of her most recent novel, Song of the Exile, at, of all places, a lecture at Harvard. "It was a long talk given by these former comfort women,' Davenport said in a telephone interview with The Daily Iowan. "They didn't want to die without people knowing their story."

The comfort women told of being held captive as sex slaves at Japanese army bases during World War II, the fate of thousands of women during those years. The lecture, which Davenport said had much of the audience sobbing, so moved her that she felt compelled to learn more of the comfort women, and eventually to tell their story.

That story occupies the center of Song of the Exile. Davenport is scheduled to read from her book tonight at 8 at Prairie Lights Books, 15 S. Dubuque St.

The Harvard lecture was the beginning of five years of intensive research for Davenport. After speaking with the women who gave the lecture, she began traveling around the South Pacific, seeking out former comfort women and interviewing those willing to talk.

"One woman in Hong Kong I had to interview in a dark room," Davenport said. "I never saw her face - that's how great her shame was.

Though Davenport had heard pieces of stories about comfort women as she was growing up in her native Hawaii, she described herself as "in no way prepared" for what she was told in her interviews. Even as she was writing her book, she hesitated about including the more horrific atrocities.

"I had to cut a lot," she said. "I think you always have to remember that your reader doesn't need to know every detail.

"For a while, the horror stopped me from writing the book," she added, saying that only with the encouragement of the women she interviewed was she able to go on.

The book that emerged tells the story of Sunny, a Hawaiian woman enslaved by the Japanese, and of her boyfriend, Keo, a journeyman jazz trumpeter who finds himself in Paris playing in clubs for Nazi soldiers before learning of Sunny's fate. Davenport addresses not only the plight of comfort women, but the experience of Hawaiians during and following the attack on Pearl Harbor, as well as the effects of war on individuals.

As part of her research, Davenport also interviewed men who had been officers and enlisted men in the Japanese army during the war. Doing so, she said, helped to develop her compassion for the perpetrators of the atrocities she was researching "Especially the enlisted men - they were trained to be killing machines, they were trained to be cruel," she said. "It's how the war and combat can warp a man.

Still, Davenport emerged from her research and writing an optimist.

"The writing of this, talking to these women - it just taught me that the most magnificent thing about human beings is the will to survive and go on," she said.

Though Davenport addresses several concerns in her book, it and much of her writing for the past several years has been fueled by her need to record the stories she heard growing up in Hawaii. The state's oral tradition, kept alive in part by Davenport's elders, was too precious to lose, she thought.

"In the mid and late '80s, I began to realize my elders were dying," she said. "I began to realize how important it was to write their stories down.

Davenport, who grew up in Kalihi, the working class section of Honolulu, hopes her success as a writer will have a similar effect on younger Hawaiians that her elders' storytelling had on her.

"I think when you have a little success in life, it's then important to inspire the generation behind you," she said.

More than a million Moroccans jam into the capital to mourn their leader.

By Mort Rosenblum Associated Press

RABAT, Morocco - World leaders walked solemnly through this ancient North African capital Sunday to honor Hassan II, who for 38 years was the king and spiritual father of a poor-but-placid nation committed to peace in a tumultuous region.

Huge crowds of Moroccans, wailing and chanting in the July sun, watched the royal cortege and its escort of Western, European, Middle Eastern, African and Asian heads of state, including President Clinton.

Hassan, who died on July 23 at 70, was seen as a persuasive broker of compromise, an Arab moderate who calmed waters much in the way of King Hussein of Jordan, who died less than six months earlier.

Israeli Prime Minister Ehud Barak and President Ezer Weizman joined Arab leaders at the funeral, signaling confidence that Hassan's 35-year-old son, now King Mohamed VI, would follow his lead as peacemaker.

Hassan's coffin rolled slowly atop an army truck, under a rich green cloth embroided in gold with praise for Allah. Four white horses drew a symbolic empty carriage in front, flanked by the black-clad Royal Guard.

Family members, heads of state and guests walked slowly behind along the two and a half mile route from the Royal Palace to the Mausoleum, where Hassan's remains joined those of his father, Mohamed V.

Human tides had blocked the roads into Rabat, as mourners walked through the night from outlying cities and distant villages. Police estimated that more than a million people headed toward the capital in buses or on foot.

From the high-rise port of Casablanca to the old walled cities of Fez and Marrakesh, to oases half-lost in the Sahara Desert, Moroccans chanted their grief, waving portraits of Hassan II and their new king. In Rabat, volunteer teams scrambled to collect fainting victims, overcome by emotion and heat.

"It is worse than losing a father," said Hafid Marroushe, 23, resting under a palm tree by the royal palace, with three friends who shared his thought.

As with most of 30 million Morocco's inhabitants, their mood was mixed. Sadness was tinged with anxiety over the future in the hands of an untried successor.

A familiar king died with the Middle East and North Africa headed down promising new paths. The battered Moroccan economy faces new pressures, with debt, drought and crippling underemployment.

We have lost a king, but we have a king," said Marroushe's friend, Youssef Narlaou. "He will follow in his father's steps, and the government remains stable." Still, he added, "He is young, and the problems are great.'

Among intellectuals and political dissidents, this worry seemed intense. In private homes, critics offered harsh assessments of Hassan II's stern rule. But few spoke for the record in the face of mass mourning.

There are tens of thousands of refugees like them throughout Colombia, seeking haven from the country's four-decade-old civil conflict.

They are largely forgotten, until someone such as Olara Otunnu, the U.N. special envoy for children and armed conflict, visits and puts put them briefly in the limelight.

"I feel ashamed. We have no excuses," Otunnu said after viewing the squalid conditions of the refugees at Quibdo hall. "I understand the problem of resources, but I cannot explain what I have seen today."

Nearly a million Colombians say shocks more than the vision have been displaced. In 1998 alone, more than 300,000 fled their homes after incursions by the army, leftist guerrillas or paramilitary death squads.

It is a war where a knock on the door in the middle of the night heralds death. Armed irregulars with lists in hand, most often paramilitary fighters looking for alleged rebel sympathizers, are most frequently the killers.

Otunnu sat on the grimy arena floor surrounded by people who have lost everything. He listened in silence as they explained how it happened.

Benjamin Palacios' story is typical. He and his wife, Florentina, came to Quibdo in late 1996 after their eldest son was killed by gunmen. When they heard rumors they would be the next to die, they fled

In the past two years, approximately 23,000 people have sought refuge in Quibdo, which has been hard-pressed to cope. Although the region is rich in gold and other minerals, Choco is the poorest state in Colombia - there are just six miles of paved roads in its 18,000 square miles of dense jungle, home to 400,000 people.

The refugees crammed into the sports arena are the lucky ones. Others have had to build rough shacks in slums. When it rains, the slum dwellers shelter under improvised roofs of plastic sheeting. Under the scorching midday sun, the shanties grow hot as ovens.

While happy to medal, Beyer said the meet showed him he's capable of throwing even better.

"This was a great experience, but I know that I'm on the edge of hitting some big-time marks," said Beyer, who'll be a senior in the fall. "I was a little disappointed. I had two throws over 20 meters, which would have been a personal best, but I fouled."

Twenty meters is about 66 feet, a distance that would have given Beyer the gold. Still, he said was enjoying himself in Winnipeg.

"The whole Pan Am Games have been exciting," Beyer said. "Just to participate in the opening ceremonies was overwhelming."

The silver medal capped a solid season for Beyer. He was the Big 12 outdoor champion in both the shot and the discus, finished second in the shot at the NCAA indoor meet and was fourth outdoors.

With his performance here, Beyer beat one of the throwers who finished ahead of him at the NCAA outdoor. Brad Snyder, competing for Canada, won the bronze with a throw of 61-5³. Snyder had been the NCAA runnerup

"It's too bad the season is over," Beyer said. "But in the same breath, it has been a long season."

Armstrong rode to victory in the Tour de France on Sunday just three years after he was diagnosed with testicular cancer that spread to his brain and lungs.

Thousands of fans lined the route to cheer him as he finished one of the most grueling tests in all of sports and became only the second American to win cycling's showcase race.

"This is an awesome day," the 27-yearold Texan said. "This is beyond belief."

Armstrong dedicated his victory to cancer survivors around the world.

"I hope it sends out a fantastic message," he said. "We can return to what we were before - and even better."

Many watching him said that's just the message they got. "He definitely embodies the American

"He definitely embodies the American spirit," said Rebecca Robertson, a Californian who watched the riders whiz by in their fluorescent gear. "I mean, he's overcome cancer and he's fought his way back to be a champion. And that is definitely what America is all about."

Armstrong's victory marked the second time this month that the United States won in a sport usually dominated by other countries. The U.S. women's soccer team beat China for the World Cup on July 10.

The cyclist's triumph also could help remove some of the stain from the Tour de France, which nearly ended last year because of a drug scandal. race was Greg LeMond, a three-time champion whose last victory was in 1990. Armstrong was diagnosed with cancer in 1996 and doctors gave him about a 50 percent chance of survival. After four rounds of chemotherapy and two operations — one to remove a testicle and one for brain lesions — he began his comeback early last year. His doctors say there is a tiny chance the cancer will return.

One of the keys to Armstrong's cycling victory was his ability to master the mountain climbs that had always given him trouble. After he easily won the first stage in the Alps, he became the prohibitive favorite.

Still, he said he'd never imagined this moment, even before he got sick.

"I never expected to be here," he said, after "The Star-Spangled Banner" had echoed across the Champs-Elysees and Texas Gov. George Bush called on the cell phone.

"Even in my first career, I never had plans for this."

The finish under brilliant skies couldn't have been more different from last year's. The 1998 race ended in rain after the drug scandal placed the entire sport under suspicion.

In fact, Armstrong was dogged by accusations in the French media that he used performance-enhancing drugs. Many people couldn't believe that a cyclist recovering from cancer could prevail in the brutal three-week event.

There was no proof, however. The sport's ruling body, which tests cyclists during the race, said the only drug COOPERSTOWN, N.Y. — George Brett never hit exceptionally well against Nolan Ryan. Still, that proved a lot easier than following him on the Hall of Fame podium.

Wiping away tears, one of baseball's best pressure hitters in history broke down several times during his speech at Sunday's induction ceremonies.

"Today concludes a long journey," Brett said, choking up. "I stand humbly before you in Cooperstown." A record crowd estimated at 50,000 jammed an open field a few miles from the shrine, watching the largest Hall class since 1972.

Robin Yount, Orlando Cepeda and Ryan preceded Brett on the stage. Late umpire Nestor Chylak, Negro leagues pitcher Smokey Joe Williams and turn-of-the-century manager Frank Selee also were honored.

Ryan spent most of his 16-minute speech thanking those who had made his career possible. Along with family members and friends, the man whose Hall plaque praised him as a "Texas legend" paid tribute to Marvin Miller, the founder of the players' union, and all fans.

"I always thought there was going to be life after baseball," the greatest power pitcher ever said, evenly. "I didn't realize the grip baseball had on me. It took me two full years to get over the fact that I was no longer a baseball player."

Ryan, 52, played a record 27 seasons and holds major league marks of seven no-hitters and 5,714 strikeouts.

"A fierce competitor and one of baseball's most intimidating figures on the pitching mound," read his bronze plaque, which bears a "T" for the Texas Rangers.

Brett and Yount each topped 3,000 hits and Cepeda hit 379 home runs. All three were Ryan strikeout victims - Brett was 29-for-101 (.287) with no home runs and 18 strikeouts against him.

They quickly extended that margin to 66-53, but Fitzpatrick's, even without point guard Dean Oliver and forward Jess Settles, wasn't done yet.

Shooting guard Ryan Hogan keyed a 17-5 Fitzy's run, as they pulled to within one, 83-82. They would get no closer, however. With his team clinging to a 90-87

ered. "It was hard for us to put an offensive stretch together where we could pull away from their lead," Hogan said. Hogan scored 17 of his 22 in the second half. Fermino added 26 points and nine rebounds. Kyle Galloway netted 26 points and 10 rebounds for Gatens.

"We consistently get the same players here and early in the season. I ask players to play unselfishly. But nothing is more important than draft night, when I pick unselfish players. That takes me a long way to playing the kind of ball I want to play." One thing is clear after Saturday's games- the champi-a title is lined with drops of sweat. "A couple of times, we've thought this could be our last game." Windhorst said. "But we'll always have a chance because our guys play hard."

Hall of Fame true' for Yount

HALL OF FAME

Ted Williams, the oldest at 80. stayed more than a hour in the sweltering heat before leaving in a wheelchair.

Williams, the hero of the recent All-Star Game at Fenway Park, and Willie Mays, who made a rare return to see former teammate Cepeda, got some of the biggest ovations.

Also receiving a huge cheer was Texas Gov. George W. Bush, the former owner of the Texas Rangers. New York Gov. George Pataki, mentioned as a possible running mate on a presidential ticket with Bush, implored, "Let's have another great New York welcome for Governor Bush!"

Paul Molitor, Ralph Branca, umpire Rich Garcia and several team executives attended.

The only boos of the afternoon came for commissioner Bud Selig. He was met with calls of "Where's Pete Rose?" and "How about Charlie Hustle?"

Rose, as has become his custom, was on Main Street, signing autographs just blocks from the Hall. Banned from baseball, he's ineligible for Hall election.

'I've expressed my opinion to Mr. Selig. My thoughts are Pete Rose should be in the Hall of Fame," Ryan said later. "Pete Rose should be judged on his merits as a player."

This year's inductees increased the Hall membership to 244 with space for only 240 plaques in the main gallery, extra room was found in an adjacent rotunda.

Next year, first-time candidates include Jack Morris, Goose Gossage and Kent Hrbek. Tony Perez and Carlton Fisk will again appear on the Baseball Writers' Association of America ballot.

Brett had 3,154 hits and batted .305 in a 21-year career with Kansas City. "Played each game with ceaseless intensity and unbridled passion," his plaque read.

Brett, 46, brought his family, including son Robin - named for league pitcher and Bobby was a minor leaguer. Crying, George Brett looked at his older brothers and said, "Sometimes I wonder why all this happened to me and not you. All I ever wanted to do was be as good as you." Yount, a two-time AL MVP, had

Yount — and two of his three brothers. Ken was a former big

3,142 hits in a 20-year career with the Milwaukee Brewers.

"A bastion of consistency and durability," read his plaque, which also denoted his "stoic demeanor."

Yount, 43, was afraid his emotions might get the best of him. So he called Hall officials about three weeks ago and asked to speak first.

"I never dreamed of being in the Hall of Fame," he said. "And with all due respect, Mr. Gehrig, today I consider myself the luckiest man on the face of the earth."

Cepeda, 61, was the second player from Puerto Rico to be elected, following Roberto Clemente.

"His ability to drive the ball with authority was respected and feared by the opposition," his plaque read. Cepeda rose to stardom with the San Francisco Giants, and entered the Hall wearing their cap. His final season was 1974, when he played two months with Brett for the Royals.

"This kid is never going to make it," Cepeda recalled himself thinking, drawing a laugh from Brett. "Sometimes, you make mistakes."

Chylak, who worked in the AL from 1954-78, was only the eighth umpire elected. Accepting on his behalf was his son, Bob - Chylak was working when Bob was born, learning of the birth on the Yankee Stadium scoreboard.

Williams played in the Negro leagues from 1910-32. In a 1952 poll by the Pittsburgh Courier, he beat out Satchel Paige as black baseball's best pitcher.

Selee managed the Boston Beaneaters and Chicago Cubs from 1890-1905. He is credited with turning catcher Frank Chance into a first baseman, creating the Tinkerto-Evers-to-Chance infield.

Armstrong completes his grand Tour Sunday

TOUR DE FRANCE

Armstrong used was an approved prescription cream for saddle sores.

The victory was simply a remarkable example of grit, courage and preparation. He'd visited and tested nearly every stage months earlier.

"It's nice to see the wonderful image of Lance Armstrong pedaling through the Arc de Triomphe,' said Dr. Lawrence Einhorn, who helped remove the cancer from Armstrong at Indiana University Medical Center in Indianapolis. "We take great pride in all of the patients that we treat who successfully recover, whether they go back to be accountants or lawyers or journalists. This just happens to be something on the world stage."

Armstrong's triumphant day began with a laugh. On the riders' high-speed train to Arpajon, the starting point, Armstrong was given a few moments at the controls.

"Hello peleton (pack)," he called out. "I'm here driving. I'm a bit hung over from a couple of beers last night, but everything is fine. I'll get us there as fast as possible." The train arrived early.

The stage was a fairly easy 89mile ride from Arpajon up to Paris, and then past many of the city's grandest sights: the Louvre, the Tuileries Gardens with their giant summer ferris wheel, the arcaded Rue de Rivoli, the Place de la Concorde with its Egyptian obelisk, and then up the Champs-Elysees to the Arc de Triomphe for a loop that was repeated 10 times. French national champion Francois Simon dyed his hair the red-white-and-blue of his jersey. And not only was Armstrong clad in the yellow shirt of the race's leader, his wheel was yellow, too, spokes and all.

Later, Armstrong was to lose that newly decorated wheel to a puncture, but his loyal teammates from the U.S. Postal Service helped him back to the pack.

Armstrong's victory could be a big boost for American cycling, much as the success of the U.S. women's soccer team has inspired many in the United States. Although LeMond won the race, it was not with an American team.

For the host country, the race was a disaster. For the first time since 1926, a French cyclist failed to win a stage.

The 4-year-old U.S. Postal Service team was euphoric throughout the race. Early on, team managing director Mark Gorski compared an Armstrong victory to a team of French players winning the Super Bowl. Armstrong's mother, Linda, shaking with emotion, was waving a small U.S. flag as she watched her son wave from the podium.

She called his cancer a "minor setback," and said "it was never in our minds" that he wouldn't recover.

Armstrong then went into the audience to hug and kiss his wife, Kristin.

"He worked so hard to get this," she said. "He deserves it, every last bit."

Belle, hit by a pitch in the 11th, wanted to stay at the plate to take a few more swings. But he was finally convinced to take the base, and Ripken ultimately delivered with two outs to give the Oriole's their sixth straight victory

Belle's third homer of the game and 24th of the season, an opposite-field drive to right with two outs in the bottom of the ninth, made it 7-7. The shot came on the first pitch from Troy Percival, who was trying to record the Angels' first save since July 9.

Belle also hit a two-run homer in the first and pulled the Orioles to 7-6 in the seventh with a three-run shot off Mark Petkovsek. It was the third three-homer game of Belle's career and the six RBIs tied a career high, reached four times previously.

Tigers 9, Red Sox 1

DETROIT - Tony Clark homered twice and had four RBIs, and Dave Mlicki pitched a six-hitter as the Detroit Tigers beat the Boston Red Sox for the 500th time, 9-1 Sunday. Clark hit a three-run homer batting left-handed in the sixth and a solo shot batting right-handed in the seventh. Dean Palmer also had a threerun homer and Gabe Alvarez a solo

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. - Todd Zeile and Rafael Palmeiro homered as the Texas Rangers stretched their winning streak to eight by beating the Tampa Bay Devil Rays 4-3 Sunday. Rick Helling (8-7) didn't allow a run until Fred McGriff's two-run homer with one out in the ninth.

John Wetteland relieved and allowed a single to Bubba Trammell and a triple to Wade Boggs. Wetteland a career high five RBIs for Kansas City, which trailed 11-5 in the eighth. John Jaha homered twice and drove in five runs for Oakland, including the A's second grand slam of the series.

Blue Jays 11, White Sox 3

CHICAGO - Chris Carpenter shut down Chicago on two hits in eight innings and Shawn Green hit a threerun homer that extended his hitting streak to 23 games, leading the Toronto Blue Jays over the White Sox 11-3 Sunday

Carpenter (7-5) allowed a single in the second to Paul Konerko and a triple in the fourth to Magglio Ordonez, who scored on Carlos Lee's aroundout.

Astros 5, Padres 2

HOUSTON - Lance Berkman got his first two major league RBIs and the Houston Astros beat San Diego 5-2 Sunday for their second sweep of the Padres this season. Shane Reynolds (12-7) allowed one run and five hits in seven innings as Houston swept the four-game series, including the completion of the game suspended when Astros manager Larry Dieker collapsed June 13.

SAN FRANCISCO - Michael Tucker homered in the top of the 14th inning off struggling closer Robb Nen, lifting the Cincinnati Reds past the San Francisco Giants 2-1 Sunday. Nen (3-5), who blew his sixth save Saturday when he gave up three ninth-inning runs to the Reds, retired the first two batters he faced but Tucker then drove an 0-1 offering over the center field wall for the game win-

It was the Reds' second straight win over San Francisco after losing their first four games of the year to the Giants.

NEW YORK- Rickey Henderson homered for his 1,000th RBI and Al Leiter shut down Chicago for eight innings as the New York Mets beat the Cubs 5-1 Sunday night and extended their winning streak to five.

Cubs starter Dan Serafini (2-2) walked five in the first inning, and the Mets took a 3-0 lead without even getting a hit.

Henderson went 3-for-3 with a walk and two RBIs. He homered in the second to reach 1,000 RBIs, drove in another run with an infield single in the fourth and doubled in the seventh.

Team USA capped an easy run through the Tournament of the Americas with a win over Canada.

By Chris Sheridan Associated Press

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico -Just when it looked like the United States might have to work for its gold medal, the Americans began stealing passes left and right from Canada to turn a close game into a blowout 92-66 victory Sunday night.

The championship game of the Tournament of the Americas was getting a little too close for the Americans early in the second half as Canada pulled within 48-40.

The United States quickly ended any thought of an upset, using a trapping, gambling defense to intercept several passes that led to eight fastbreak points in a 15-0 run that put the Americans back in complete control.

Gary Payton had seven points in the pivotal run and finished with 19, giving him a team-leading average of 16.0 points in the tournament.

Tim Hardaway added 14 points, Tim Duncan had 12, Steve Smith 11 and Jason Kidd, Tom Gugliotta and Kevin Garnett 10 apiece. Kidd and Payton each had three of the Americans' 11 steals and Garnett had six blocks.

In the bronze medal game, Argentina edged Puerto Rico 103-101.

It was the 40th victory without a loss for the four Dream Teams comprised of NBA players that have competed in the 1992 and 1996 Olympics, the 1994 World Championships and this Olympic qualifying tournament.

The United States won its 10 games in this tournament by an average of 31.6 points, down slightly from the 1996 Olympians' average margin of 32.3. This, however, was at all times and aggressively when necessary. They never trailed Canada, opening their first 10-point lead just over five minutes into the game, going on cruise control for the rest of the first half and turning up their energy when they needed it.

The 15-0 run gave the United States a 63-40 lead, and the margin grew to 28 on a 3-pointer by Hardaway that made it 83-55 with 3:56 left. Smith scored the final points of the tournament on a 15-foot hook shot with 1 second left.

Among the few sore spots Sunday for the Americans were the non-appearance of Richard Hamilton, who sat out the entire tournament after spraining his ankle in the team's first practice in Puerto Rico, the second technical foul for Payton, who threw the ball at one of the referees following an out-ofbounds call, and the re-injuring of Tom Gugliotta's nose after he was inadvertently elbowed by teammate Wally Szczerbiak late in the second half.

For Canada, the lone bright spot Sunday was the play of center Todd MacCulloch, a second-round draft pick of the Philadelphia 76ers who had game-high totals of 22 points and 16 rebounds. Steve Nash of the Dallas Mavericks was held to 11 points and one assist.

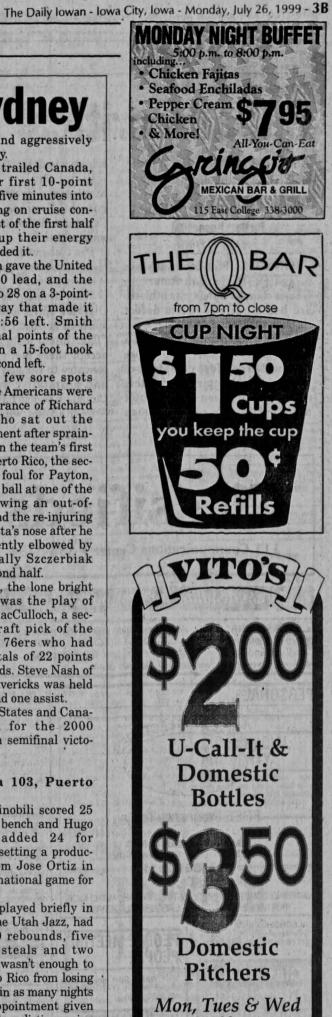

The United States and Canada qualified for the 2000 Olympics with semifinal victories Saturday.

Argentina 103, Puerto Rico 101

Emanuel Ginobili scored 25 points off the bench and Hugo Sconochini added 24 for Argentina, offsetting a productive night from Jose Ortiz in his final international game for the host team.

Ortiz, who played briefly in the NBA for the Utah Jazz, had 24 points, 10 rebounds, five assists, two steals and two blocks. But it wasn't enough to prevent Puerto Rico from losing its third game in as many nights

- a big disappointment given the team's bold predictions going into its final second-round game

ters over the minimum for his second complete game of the season. He didn't walk anyone and struck out four.

MINNEAPOLIS - Alex Rodriguez and Ken Griffey Jr. hit back-to-back home runs for the seventh time and the Seattle Mariners stopped a threegame losing streak with a 4-3 win over the Minnesota Twins on Sunday.

Rodriguez hit his 22nd homer in the first off Brad Radke (7-9) and Griffey followed with his American League-leading 32nd of the year.

Yankees 2, Indians 1

NEW YORK - After striking out in his first three at-bats, Ricky Ledee homered in the ninth inning Sunday to give the New York Yankees a 2-1 win over Cleveland and a three-game sweep of the Indians.

Ledee, a left-handed batter, appeared to be on the way to strikeout No. 4 with an 0-2 count and left-hander Ricardo Rincon (0-2) on the

Cardinals 6, Rockies 4

DENVER - Mark McGwire hit his 35th home run, pulling him within one of major league leader Sammy Sosa; and the St. Louis Cardinals beat the Colorado Rockies 6-4 Sunday for a three-game sweep.

McGwire homered in the seventh inning, his eighth in 11 games, then left with tightness in his back. McGwire has 12 homers in July but just two in 13 at-bats at Coors Field. His 492nd homer left him one behind Lou Gehrig, who is 16th on the career

Marlins 4, Brewers 3

MIAMI - Alex Gonzalez tripled home the go-ahead run in the seventh inning, and the Florida Marlins beat the Milwaukee Brewers 4-3 Sunday for their second series sweep of the season.

With the score 3-all, Luis Castillo singled with one out off David Weathers (6-4) and scored on Gonzalez' liner to right-center.

The Marlins have won five of six against Milwaukee after losing the first 12 games against the Brewers.

PHOENIX - Kevin Brown won a pitching duel with Randy Johnson and Eric Karros hit his 200th career home run Sunday night as the Los Angeles Dodgers snapped a fivegame losing streak by beating the Arizona Diamondbacks 2-1.

Brown (11-6) allowed just three hits and an unearned run over eight innings to end Arizona's five-game winning streak and prevent the Diamondbacks from sweeping three from the Dodgers. He struck out seven and walked three.

Jeff Shaw pitched a scoreless ninth for his 21st save in 22 opportunities.

Braves 5, Phillies 4

PHILADELPHIA — After blowing leads and losing to Philadelphia in two of the first three games of the series, it seemed like the Atlanta Braves were about to do it again.

But after Ron Gant's three-run double tied the score in the eighth inning, Chipper Jones homered in the 10th as Atlanta beat the Phillies 5-4 Sunday for a split of the four-game series.

"I was thinking, 'Here we go again, Jones said. "It's been a downhill spiral for this team lately but, hopefully, something like this can get us back in the right direction."

defensive team of the bunch, limiting opponents to 66.2 points per game — more than four points lower than the 1996 team's 70.3 points-against average.

Like most of their games over the past two weeks, the Americans played confidently against the United States. Argentina led for almost the entire second half and took a three-point lead on two foul shots by Ginobili with 17 seconds left. Orlando Santiago made one of two foul shots with two seconds left, missing the second intentionally.

PAN AMERICAN GAMES NOTES

Cubans critical of Canadian media after two defect at Games

A Cuban athlete and a journalist sought asylum shortly after arriving in Canada.

> By Bert Rosenthal Associated Press

WINNIPEG, Manitoba — Cuba's delegation to the Pan American Games claimed Sunday its athletes are being encouraged to defect through the Canadian media.

Already, a Cuban athlete and a journalist have defected, and Jose Ramon Fernandez, president of the Cuban Olympic Committee, said "our delegation is very upset about publications inciting Cuban athletes to desert."

Pistol shooter Abel Juncosa Reyes asked for asylum before the games. Sources said Lisette Cepero of Radio Rebelde also has sought asylum.

The Cubans are annoyed by stories that have appeared in the Winnipeg Sun.

"This situation is contrary to the Olympic spirit and to the sports spirit in general," Fernandez said. "The Cuban delegation does not accept these methods, which are contrary to the spirit of friendship and hospitality with which the Canadian people have received us." Fernandez was most angry about a statement signed by Enrico Blanco, a boxer who left Cuba in 1967.

"He is here now, inciting desertion," Fernandez said.

Security was expected to be tight for Cuba's powerful baseball team, which began play Sunday night against Mexico, and its boxers, who don't get started until Friday.

At the track Sunday, Meredith Rainey Valmon couldn't reach her Pan Am goal opening the way for Surinam to win its first track gold in the competition.

800-meter run.

"The whole reason I came here was to defend my title," Rainey Valmon said after finishing third. "I'm very disappointed."

Rainey Valmon, a two-time Olympian and a three-time U.S. champion, swept into the lead after 250 meters. Shortly afterward, her pace uncharateristically slackened and she fell back to sixth.

"I felt a little tired after about 350 meters," she said.

That surprising lapse opened the way for Vriesde to surge to the front.

Vriesde, third in 1995, was timed in a season-best 1 minute, 59.95 seconds. Zulai Calatayud of Cuba finished second at 2:00.67 and Rainey Valmon rallied to get third at 2:01.51.

"In some ways I'm stil learning how to race after I took the year off (1997, for maternity)," Rainey Valmon said. "This is a little test to see how well I handle adversity." Games records were shattered in the women's marathon and women's javelin. HEL

Sunday's other early winners were Vanderlei Lima of Brazil in the men's marathon at 2:17:20, and Joel Bourgeois of Canada in the 3,000meter steeplechase at 8:35.03.

J.L. Lewis wins five-hole playoff

Lewis outlasted Mike Brisky to take home his first PGA crown.

COAL VALLEY, Ill. (AP) - Thefinal difference between J.L. Lewis and Mike Brisky was one stroke and a few thousand dollars. Both, however, felt like winners Sunday in the John Deere Classic.

Lewis caught Brisky with a birdie on the 72nd hole, stayed alive in a playoff by holing out a sand shot for birdie, and finally won the tournament with a birdie on the fifth extra hole.

"I wouldn't have felt like I lost" had Brisky won the playoff, Lewis said after his first PGA Tour victory, worth $360,000.

"I'm not disappointed in the least," said Brisky, who pocketed $216,000. "I look at the tournament, I look at the four rounds, and I played well."

Lewis got into the playoff after hitting a wedge to within four feet at the 18th hole and making the birdie putt for a closing 65. Brisky, who also shot a 65, and Lewis completed 72 holes at 261, 19 shots under par for the 6,762-yard Oakwood Country Club course.

Both players made pars on the first playoff hole, the 18th, birdies at the 16th and pars at the 17th as the playoff continued. Lewis appeared to have the tournament won when he holed a sand shot at the par-4 16th for a birdie, only to have Brisky drop his own 12-15 footer for a tying birdie.

"He hit just a great bunker shot," Brisky said. "How exciting to be in the playoff."

"I thought I could get the ball up and down" at the 16th, Lewis said. "When it came out, it took a little right kick and I knew it was in."

Both birdied the 18th, sending the playoff back to the 16th hole a second time.

Lewis drove into the left rough, but hit a sand wedge some four feet above the hole. Brisky drove down the middle, but his second shot was about 25 feet left of the pin. Brisky missed his birdie attempt and Lewis knocked in his winning putt.

"It's been a long haul," Lewis said. "I've improved a lot and I feel like the ability level is there. I just kept myself going. I kept believing I was a good player.

"I figured I had the game a long time ago, but I didn't have the experience. You have to keep believing you can do it. Now I know."

Brisky had a two-shot lead with two holes to play. But he threeputted the par-3 17th for a bogey and Lewis than got even with a birdie at the 18th.

Brisky, whose previous best finish was a second in the 1995 Buick Open, trailed third-round leader Brian Henninger by three strokes heading into Sunday's final round. He took the lead with a birdie at the par-3 12th

Lewis, whose $360,000 winner's share increased his earnings for the year to $478,378, is the 12th first-time winner since the tournament moved to Oakwood County Club in 1975.

Henninger (71) and Kirk Triplett (64) finished at 264.

Defending champion Steve Jones shot a closing 63 for 265, joined by Chris Perry, who had weekend rounds of 63 and 64, and Peter Jordan, who shot 66 on Sunday.

Gallagher-Smith attains first LPGA win

■ Jackie Gallagher-Smith shot a course record 199 at the Giant Eagle Classic.

HOWLAND, Ohio (AP) – Jackie Gallagher-Smith won her first LPGA tournament on Sunday, shooting a 7-under-par 65 for a three-stroke victory over Marnie McGuire in the Giant Eagle LPGA Classic.

Gallagher-Smith's final score of 199 was a tournament record for the 6,308-yard, par-72 Avalon Lakes Golf Course. Michelle McGuire, also seeking her first title, fell out of contention on the 360-yard, par-4 14th, after hitting her tee shot into the woods on the left and having to take a drop from an unplayable lie.

Defending champion Se Ri Pak finished at 11-under after shooting 68. McGann, the only twotime winner of the event, failed to make the cut. Marta Figueras-Dotti, who shared the lead with Gallagher-Smith after the opening round, finished 10 strokes McGuire led after two rounds at 11-under, one stroke ahead of Michele Redman, Missie McGeorge and Gallagher-Smith. Aside from that trio, there were 36 players within five strokes of the leader.

Gallagher-Smith, who won $150,000, had missed 11 of 19 cuts this year and had yet to crack the top 20 in a tournament. She was

Irwin wins Burnet Senior Classic

Hale Irwin fell apart late, but managed to hang on and win in Minnesota.

COON RAPIDS, Minn. (AP) – Hale Irwin survived two late bogeys to shoot 3-under-par 69 Sunday for a two-stroke victory over Jim Dent and Dale Douglass in the Burnet Senior Classic.

It was Irwin's fifth victory in his last eight starts.

Irwin, who won $225,000, finished at 15-under 201, despite bogeys at Nos. 15 and 17 that eroded a seemingly safe cushion. Irwin went to the par-5 18th hole with just a one-stroke lead over Dent and Douglass. Irwin chipped his third shot within 12 feet and sank the birdie putt.

Dent, who closed with a 66, and Douglass, who shot 65, finished at 13-under 203. Both had the best paydays of the year as they each won $120,000. Gil Morgan, who shot a 68, finished at 204 and Jim Colbert (69) and Allen Doyle (68) were at 205. David Graham, tied for the lead at 12-under through eight holes, bogeyed Nos. 15 and 17 and settled for a tie with Larry Nelson at 10-under 206.

Irwin became the first two-time winner in Burnet's seven-year history, his score falling two short of his 1997 record total of 17-under.

In the last three years, Irwin has won 21 of the 60 senior tournaments he's played. Sunday's victory moved him into second place in career victories with 25, three off Lee Trevino's record.

The $225,000 winner's purse improved Irwin's season total to more than $1,478,000. He trails only Bruce Fleisher, who has made just over $1.5 million.

Irwin held the lead after posting birdies on five of the first six holes in Friday's opening round. His lead peaked at six shots through 15 holes Saturday, but the final 21 holes were a battle.

Irwin overcame a dramatic swing in Saturday's final three holes. A five-stroke lead dwindled to one after he made two bogeys and Graham had two birdies. He was tied with Graham until birdies on Nos. 9-10 gave him a two-stroke lead.

Irwin also birdied No. 12 but bogeyed the par-4 15th after his tee shot landed squarely behind a tree and he had to chip back to the fairway. He answered with a birdie on No. 16 for a two-stroke cushion, but hit a poor drive on the par-3 17th and missed a 10foot par putt.

Dent, Douglass and Graham all had their best finishes of the season. Dent came in ranked 31st on the money list, Douglass was 64th with no top-10 finishes and Gra-

Outfielder has career-threatening wrist injury

By Bob Baum Associated Press

PHOENIX — David Dellucci, the promising young outfielder for the Arizona Diamondbacks, will undergo surgery on his left wrist this week to repair a rare, serious condition that threatens his career.

Even with the operation to shorten the radius bone in his forearm, tentatively scheduled for Tuesday, there is no certainty that Dellucci will be able to play professional baseball again.

"This is a very serious condition. This is not a minor problem," said Dr. Don Sheridan, an orthopedic wrist and hand surgeon who will perform the operation. "It's also one that is not easily fixable or 100 percent fixable. I think David has got about a 70 percent chance of having a good result."

His condition is a form of vascular necrosis similar to the hip disorder that ended Bo Jackson's football career and a condition that may be the cause of NFL running back Garrison Hearst's ankle ailment.

In the wrist, the condition is known as Kienbock's disease. If not corrected, it would result in the bone in Dellucci's left hand slowly dying and "turning to rubble," Sheridan said.

The condition, which Sheridan classified as an injury, was caused by the length of Dellucci's left radius bone combined with the repeated jarring that comes with playing baseball, especially at the high-octane intensity level that is Dellucci's trademark.

Dellucci, who was batting .394 in limited duty, had worked his way into the starting lineup in recent weeks. He was 16-for-32 in his last nine games.

Dellucci said Sunday that he did not announce he would have the surgery until he had a chance to talk to his family late Saturday night.

"I'm scared that there's a chance this may fail, but I can't look at it that way," he said. "I've been overcoming odds all my life to get here. This is just another bump in the road to get over." www.prairielights.com
