Researchers laud 'cancer breakthrough'

■ Using gene engineering, scientists turn a normal human cell into a cancerous one.

Associated Press

For the first time, scientists have created a cancerous human cell by genetically altering a normal one in the laboratory — a breakthrough that could speed the development of drugs that wipe out tumors.

Researchers know that cancer is caused by genes turned bad, and they have been trying to develop drugs that fix these flaws.

But up to now, they have been fumbling in the dark: They aren't sure exactly which combinations of flaws cause the many types of cancer. Nor do they know precisely which drugs repair which faulty genes.

Now, with this latest breakthrough, they will be able to create specific genetic flaws in the lab and then try to find drugs that work.

Moreover, they can use this breakthrough to work backwards and determine which flaws cause which types of cancer.

The research was led by Dr. Robert Weinberg of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology's Whitehead Institute for Biomedical Research. It was reported in today's issue of Nature.

"This provides a laboratory tool, and it's a significant one," said Curt Harris, chief of the National Cancer Institute's human carcinogenesis lab.

Moshe Yaniv, a cancer researcher at France's Pasteur Institute, called Weinberg's work a landmark paper.

"I think this is an important step. Understanding cancer is an important step," Yaniv said. "But we should not give people the impression that we're going to cure cancer next year."

Scientists have previously been able to turn normal human cells cancerous using chemicals and X-rays. But that is a scattershot approach: The scientists have no idea exactly what kind of genetic flaws might result.

Weinberg's research is part of a relatively new approach to treating cancer that is more like a rifle than a

UI-Miller ad agreement goes flat

■ The UI nixes a contract that would have given Miller Brewing Co. rights to advertising time during coaches' TV shows.

By Gil Levy
 The Daily Iowan

UI officials announced Wednesday that a contract between the UI and the Miller Brewing Co. would not be approved.

Ann Rhodes, vice president for university relations, said UI President Mary Sue Coleman spoke with her and Athletics Director Bob Bowlsby, and all agreed that the contract would be a bad idea.

"In light of the university's position on drinking, I don't think it's something we should pursue," she said. "There was no difference of opinion among us."

The contract would have been signed by the UI and Miller, allowing the company the rights to advertising time during the UI coaches' TV shows.

A contract currently exists between Anheuser-Busch and Leerfield Communications, which was hired by the UI to handle the football and basketball game broadcasts, including the advertising.

Leerfield Communications pays for a UI package, which includes the use of the Tiger Hawk logo, said Mark Abbott, UI athletics licensing director.

"It doesn't make me happy that it's part of the contract," he said. "We want to send the right message to students and supporters that we are not promoting the use of alcohol."

In the past, the money generated from beer company sponsors was used in coaches' budgets — primarily for the weekly coaches' TV shows.

Two years ago, the UI began producing and distributing the shows, and the school now pays for the expenses with these funds, said Rick Klatt, assistant director of promotions for the Athletics Department.

Rhodes said the shows, which had previously been produced by a local television station, are now handled by the Athletics Department.

"They're being very good citizens about this," she said. "Although we're all in agreement, you always get nervous about a loss of income, but it's a tradeoff."

On Tuesday morning, Rhodes was unaware of the existence of a possible contract between the UI and Miller; that, she said, does not worry her.

"We would have found out down the line," she said. "Representatives of the Athletics Department were talking to representatives of Miller, but at some point, someone from central administration has to sign."

Athletics Department representatives said they were not upset about

GOP candidate wants to ditch ethanol subsidy

■ Presidential hopeful Sen. John McCain wants to end a program popular in Iowa in order to fund school vouchers.

By Mike Glover
 Associated Press

DES MOINES — Sen. John McCain Wednesday proposed eliminating the ethanol subsidy, a hugely popular program in Iowa, offering the first test of McCain's hopes for the Republican presidential nomination.

"If Iowa voters were in your mind, that wouldn't seem to be the place to be," said Dee Stewart, executive director of the Iowa Republican Party. "You wouldn't go to California and tell people to stay away from the beaches."

McCain, of Arizona, started the fray when he proposed an expensive new school-voucher program "paid for by eliminating ethanol, sugar, gas and oil subsidies."

To say the least, that's likely to cause McCain political headaches in politically sensitive Iowa.

Ethanol is alcohol distilled from corn and blended with gasoline. Its backers argue that it burns cleaner than traditional gasoline, a point disputed by critics.

The blended fuel gets both a federal and state subsidy.

While there is a big disagreement about whether ethanol is good for the environment, there is absolutely no doubt it's good economically for farmers. Ethanol-production facilities provide a big new market for corn at a time when prices are depressed.

Because it's very popular with farmers and Iowa is a farm state, it is a bipartisan crusade for the politicians, including both of Iowa's senators. Tom Harkin once went so far as to drink some ethanol during a congressional hearing to demonstrate its safety. Charles Grassley is a power on the Senate Finance Committee and a leading champion.

Democratic Gov. Tom Vilsack has asked the Legislature for a law requiring that all gasoline sold in the state be blended with ethanol.

Even Gov. George W. Bush of oil-rich Texas used his initial Iowa swing to pledge allegiance to ethanol.

"This is Iowa," Stewart said. "Iowa See ETHANOL, Page 5A

UI staff and students received $259.5 million in grants, gifts and contracts for the 1999 fiscal year, the largest year-to-year dollar increase ever.

And the 20 percent increase from the previous year is the largest the UI has seen in 10 years, said UI President Mary Sue Coleman.

Several things led to the increase, including higher federal and state appropriations, Coleman said. She also said faculty and staff efforts contributed to the amount.

"It takes excellent individual efforts from researchers to win grants and financial support in an increasingly competitive field," she said.

The increase will give a positive message to UI students and faculty, Coleman said.

"We are hopeful that the positive recognition for their efforts have paid off," she said. "It sends a message to students that there is a lot of opportunity to get involved."

The majority of funds came from federal institutions, whose funding increased by $28.5 million. There was also a large increase in funding from private industry.

It has been exactly a year since the Coral Ridge Mall opened, and area residents have felt the ramifications of its presence.

Some residents near the mall have undergone mixed feelings about their new neighbor.

"While we still enjoy having the mall near us, we find the traffic on 23rd Avenue to be bad," said Dave Severson, 2248 14th St. "We still don't believe a major entrance/exit in this neighborhood is necessary."

He said he was disappointed with the lack of improvements to accommodate the traffic. However, despite the traffic problems, he does not plan to sell his house, Severson said.

"We feel like the (Coralville) City Council ignored us," he said. "We went to many meetings, and none of them ever hesitated to not put it (the

The council was also approached by another resident, Tom Wheelock, 2250 14 St., who has watched cars zip by his house at speeds up to 60 mph.

"People don't stop at stop signs," he said. "It is really scary."

Sawyer begs off reasons for begging off

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Diane Sawyer says it wasn't grief that led her to beg off early coverage of John F. Kennedy Jr.'s plane crash.

However, she refused to say exactly why she missed two days as "Good Morning America" co-host.

Sawyer cited "personal considerations" for her absence following the death of Kennedy, his wife and sister-in-law off the Massachusetts coast on July 16. At the time, ABC cited her distress over the death of Kennedy, a personal friend.

"A lot of people in this country felt the weight of the tragedy," Sawyer told a gathering of TV writers Tuesday. "And I'm not saying I didn't, too, but that was not the reason ... I did have other personal considerations."

She would not elaborate.

Fraud pros give it up for McDougal

LAS VEGAS (AP) — The folks attending the 10th annual conference of the Association of Certified Fraud Examiners have a new star: Susan McDougal.

McDougal, who spent 18 months in jail for refusing to testify against President Clinton in the Whitewater probe, easily won over the 1,100 people in attendance.

Fraud investigators, auditors and attorneys mobbed her Tuesday, asking for autographs and pictures. McDougal, 45, waited until everyone who wanted an autograph got one.

"Overwhelming," she said outside a conference room at Caesar's Palace. "I think she has a lot of integrity,"

Ray Lichauer, a fraud analyst from Pittsfield, Mass., said.

Conference organizers invited McDougal to speak on "beating embezzlement charges." McDougal was acquitted in November of stealing $50,000 from famed conductor Zubin Mehta and his wife, Nancy.

Stephen King back on the laptop

BANGOR, Maine (AP) — Stephen King is writing again, when he's not tied up with physical therapy.

King suffered broken bones and a collapsed lung when he was struck by a minivan on June 19 while walking on a country road.

In a statement, King said he is using a laptop computer to write for an hour and a half each day. But he added that most of his time is devoted to rehabilitation.

"SK continues to work hard at his physical rehabilitation. He spends more time out of bed every day, using a walker or wheelchair," the horror writer said.

The note referred to King in the third person because he dictated the contents to his wife, Tabitha, spokeswoman Julie Eugley said Tuesday.

Seniors strut their stuff, fashionably

■ A meal complete with haute couture draws 40 more diners than normal to the Senior Dining Program.

By Steve Schmadeke
The Daily Iowan

Flashbulbs. Applause. Models sashayed to music down the aisle of the Iowa City Senior Center cafeteria Wednesday. Where was Cindy Crawford?

The 18 models — who had a few more years under their (trendy) belts than Crawford — strutted their stuff at a fashion show at the center, 28 S. Linn St.

The Johnson County Senior Dining Program organized the show, the first of its kind, in an effort to attract more people to the program.

The show attracted 40 more diners than usual, said Steven Kanner, the program's site manager. A group of 140 seniors turned from their spaghetti beef casseroles to admire the models.

The program provides approximately 200 meals a day at five different sites in Johnson County, Kanner said. It also delivers meals to homes, as a part of its aim to provide low-cost nutritious meals for senior citizens, he said.

The models took different approaches to treading the hardwood floor of the cafeteria that served as a runway. Some twirled around and waved to the crowd, a few stopped to talk to friends, some took a few dance steps, and others just walked.

"I can't jiggle it very good anymore," said 86-year-old Milo Pecina to diners as he made his way around. Pecina, dressed in a bright yellow shirt, suspenders and pushing a walker, said he was not nervous about his modeling debut.

"I think people got a kick out of it," he said.

Grover Rosenkild, 81, who pours milk for the patrons every Wednesday, said he enjoyed the event.

"I'm here to watch all the heartthrobs," he said, laughing as he dismissed the idea of modeling himself. "I'm so skinny, I think the clothes would fall off of me."

Other diners, such as Mary Lou Mead, said they attended the show to take a look at the latest fashions and to see their friends dressed up.

"I do like to keep up with fashion," Mead said. "The guys looked nice."

All the models were accompanied by semi-classical piano music played by Lucile Floyd, a UI graduate whose age is a closely guarded secret. Clothing was provided by Younkers, Old Capitol Mall.

The show was taped by Senior Citizen's Television for use on the public access channel in September, said Misha Burstein, SCTV production coordinator.

Some of the loudest applause was reserved for 73-year-old model Gean Shoots, whose recent heart problems forced her to use a wheelchair pushed by her friend. She stood up briefly.

"I got up on my cane and sashayed around and twirled for the audience," she said, shaking her head and laughing. "It was a joy."

Kanner said he would like to continue such events because he hoped to get more seniors included in the program.

Quietly, a UI program goes on suspension

■ The Third World Development and Support Program will learn its future this fall.

By Chris Rasmussen
The Daily Iowan

A two-year master's degree program in the UI Graduate College that brought diverse and energetic students to the UI has been suspended due to lack of faculty.

But unlike the International Writing Program, whose suspension in May stirred up nationwide controversy, the suspension of the Third World Development and Support Program in April went virtually unnoticed.

The program was instructed to stop all admissions by an Iowa state Board of Regents-mandated review, which is required of all new programs after their first five years, said Leslie Sims, vice president and dean of the Graduate College.

At the beginning, there were enough committed faculty members, he said.

"In five years, a number of faculty have retired, are in the process of retiring, have left the university or have taken administrative positions inside the university," Sims said.

The administration, however, does not want to end the program.

"No one wants to close the door on this program," Sims said.

Douglas Midgett, the program's director and an associate professor of anthropology, has been recruiting qualified faculty, he said.

The proposed faculty will be reviewed by Sims and Michael McNulty, associate provost and dean of international programs, who will then make a final decision on the program this fall.

Students in the program believe that UI faculty should keep the program going.

"I do think this is a very important program," said Anne Kiche, a student from Kenya. "We have people from Japan, Norway, Canada, Kenya and Zimbabwe coming to the UI to be taught."

Students choose their area of study from a combination of social sciences, said Karina Danielsen, a student from Norway.

"One of the strong points of the program is its versatility," she said.

Lightning may be cause of house blaze

■ A fire at a Butternut Lane residence is believed to have caused approximately $400,000 in damage.

By Troy Shoen
The Daily Iowan

The Tanners had lived in their new Parade of Homes house for just three weeks before having to move out quickly, following a fire that was reportedly caused by a lightning strike early Wednesday.

At 3:20 a.m., the Iowa City Fire Department was called to the house, 314 Butternut Lane, said Elmer Brenneman, department battalion chief. The fire resulted in approximately $400,000 in damage, he said.

"When we arrived on the scene, the house was filled with smoke, and the family was standing outside," Brenneman said. "When firefighters entered the house, they found fire in the upstairs and in the basement."

Firefighters discovered that multiple areas of the house were ablaze, a common occurrence with places that are struck by lightning, he said.

Fire departments from Iowa City, Coralville, West Branch, Solon and North Liberty worked for nearly four hours to extinguish the blaze, Brenneman said.

"The family members were pretty shaken from losing their house," he said.

The Grant Wood Chapter of the Red Cross is helping the Tanners with food, shelter and clothing, said Sara Cross, director of communications for the chapter.

"We were on the scene last night, getting food to the firefighters so they could continue to battle the fire," she said. "Right now, we are working with the family to provide for their immediate needs."

The Tanners were not injured in the fire; they could not be reached for comment.

Fighting the blaze was compounded by a diesel spill several miles away at 800 Webster St. The fire departments received alarms for the two incidents within a minute of each other.

"Having two incidences at one time taxes our ability to do things," said Lt. Brian Platz of the Iowa City Fire Department. "We called all of our off-duty firefighters to come and help out."

A worker who was transferring diesel from a semi-tanker to a train car owned by the Iowa Interstate Railroad failed to open a release valve, causing approximately 300 gallons of the fuel to spill onto the ground, Platz said.

"The spill followed the contour of the ground 100 feet to the west of the train car," he said. "About one gallon of diesel reached a storm sewer that empties into Ralston Creek."

Paul Brandt, environmental specialist in the Iowa Department of Natural Resources, said there would not be any health hazards as a result of the spill.

"Contaminated soil is being excavated and replaced," he said. "I don't think that any wildlife will be affected by the spill."

The Johnson County Hazardous Materials Unit created an earth dike to contain the spill, using machinery owned by the railroad, Platz said. Most of the spill was contained by the dike, he said.

NATO command shift exposes rifts

Outspoken Gen. Wesley Clark, who led NATO during the Kosovo campaign, will leave two months early.

By John Diamond
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Clinton administration decision to accelerate the replacement of Gen. Wesley Clark as NATO commander next year exposes rifts in the U.S. high command that persist despite the allied victory in the Kosovo campaign.

Pushing Clark aside paves the way to install Air Force Gen. Joseph Ralston, now vice chairman of the Joint Chiefs and a confidant of Defense Secretary William Cohen.

The administration was putting the best face possible on the abrupt change of command, praising Clark and saying that moving up the four-star Army general's departure by two months — from July to May next year — was done to accommodate Ralston, who must leave his Joint Chiefs post by early next year. By law, he must get a new four-star position within 60 days or retire.

"General Clark is a superb commander. The president has the highest degree of confidence in him," Sandy Berger, the national security adviser, said Wednesday at a White House news conference. "He did a superb job in the prosecution of the campaign in Kosovo. Witness the fact that we won."

Berger left open the possibility that Clark might serve his country in "other ways" after leaving the NATO post.

The victory in Yugoslavia apparently was not enough to earn Clark a second extension of his term as the supreme allied commander in Europe. Of the 10 previous officers to hold the job — all Americans — only three served shorter terms than the two years, 10 months Clark will have served by next May. One of those, Gen. John Shalikashvili, left the European command in 1993 because Clinton named him chairman of the Joint Chiefs.

Clark appeared to take the decision in stride. But officials close to him said he was miffed at how he was informed of it in a telephone call Tuesday from the current Joint Chiefs chairman, Army Gen. Hugh Shelton.

"When a soldier's journey is over, it's over," Clark said Wednesday, describing the action as a routine staff change.

"I am very proud of wearing this uniform. I love my job," he said in Vilnius, Lithuania, after a meeting with Lithuanian President Valdas Adamkus, according to Baltic News Service.

UI sees largest increase in funding ever

FUNDING

their field, and the UI is lucky to have drawn an increase in interest," said David Skorton, vice president for research.

That interest was reflected in almost all UI colleges, but at $167.5 million, the College of Medicine received the bulk of funding, he said.

The funding increase was due in large part to a rise in federal spending on research, he said. "There is a large field open for clinical trials for medicine, and we have seen a strong growth in the medical faculty," Skorton said.

The Iowa Department of Public Health, which gave extensive funding in several areas of medical studies, is confident the research will lead to better health protection for Iowans, said Tom Carney, a representative for the department.

"The UI is the principal institution doing health-care research. To get good research data, you need to have the money to have it done correctly," he said.

Arthur Arnone, a professor of biochemistry, experienced the growth firsthand after receiving almost $1.6 million in grants.

The awards are difficult to obtain and reflect well on the UI's quality of education, Arnone said.

"The grants come through intensive peer reviews and are very competitive," he said. "So, that such a large increase occurred speaks to the fact that the quality of research is increasing rapidly."

Skorton said the increase will benefit all areas of the UI.

"All ships rose with the tide this year, and all will share in the robust increase in award money," he said.

Coral Ridge anniversary draws mixed feelings

MALL

be expected when a large business moves into a residential area, said John Weihe, Coralville councilor.

"Anytime there are a million visitors, there is more activity," he said. The council has been looking into ways to improve the traffic situation, Weihe said.

A traffic study of Coralville, done by the Johnson County Council of Government, stated that crashes at the intersection of 23rd Avenue and 10th Street are 4-1 compared with those at the Highway 6 and First Street intersection, said resident Mary McCarthy, 1200 23rd Ave.

Deanna Trumbull, general manager of Coral Ridge, said the mall is willing to cooperate with any changes the city would like to implement.

"The city of Coralville is investigating the traffic problems and is prepared to look at the numbers and do the investigative work," she said. "We will respond to whatever decision it comes to."

Trumbull said the mall's management is planning to further develop the surrounding area of Coral Ridge. "We're going to see a tremendous growth in the area," she said.

Among some new businesses in the area are Pier 1 Imports, Chili's Restaurant, an Amoco gas station and the soon-to-open Policari's, an Italian restaurant.

The growth in the area has resulted in increased law enforcement. There has been an 8 percent increase in total calls for police services, said Lt. Terry Koehn, of the Coralville Police Department. The 2,200 calls include assistance for accidents, car unlocks and store theft, he said.

Meanwhile, it's business as usual at Coral Ridge. Trumbull said the mall's businesses have made sizable profits thus far.

"It's been a fabulous year," she said. "We've met all of the expectations in sales; in fact, we've exceeded those expectations by about 15 percent."

However, this "fabulous year" has affected downtown Iowa City, say some people.

It would be nice to bring businesses back to the downtown area, said UI junior Joseph Stern.

"It (the mall) seems to have stolen a lot of business," he said. "Just look around at all the empty buildings."

But some businesses say they are doing just fine despite competition from Coral Ridge.

"For this store, people come here for one reason to find something particular," said Melody Maxted, a sales associate at Treasures, 125 S. Dubuque St., a gift shop. "The type of people we get in here are not traditional mall shoppers."

Amy Svoboda, a saleswoman at Dobby's, 128 E. Washington St., said the clothing store has also not been affected by Coral Ridge.

"I think people appreciate the downtown atmosphere," she said. "Especially with the improvements they are making in the Ped Mall."

the loss of funds and that they were not trying to hide anything from the UI administration.

"What's more important is for the university and community to realize the Athletics Department wants to work as closely as possible on issues of responsible drinking," Klatt said. "It's not an issue of being upset."

The contract was almost ready to be sent to the UI administration, he said.

Klatt said there is concern that the Athletics Department may not be able to find another sponsor at this late time in the sales season. But, Rhodes said, the department will come up with internal funds.

Representatives from Miller were unavailable for comment, but Todd Ebelsheiser, a distributor of Miller products, said he was disappointed.

"I'd heard nothing about it being kiboshed; last Friday they were doing the finishing touches," he said. "It think it would be a shame for us."

McCain wants to kill ethanol subsidy

ETHANOL

is known for corn."

But McCain sees things differently.

He wants a new school-voucher program to offer educational opportunities for disadvantaged children, paying for that three-year effort with what he sees as a special-interest government subsidy.

Many ethanol critics argue that the overwhelming bulk of government subsidies goes to a few giant producers, such as Illinois-based Archer Daniels Midland Co. Backers insist there's a growing legion of smaller producers.

"We shouldn't have special interest giveaways at the expense of our neediest children," McCain said in proposing his education program.

His proposal couldn't come at a worse time for farmers. Commodity prices are at historic lows, and there are fears of a new wave of farm foreclosures. Congressional Democrats have proposed a $10 billion emergency farm bailout.

"Oh, sure — at a time of crisis in farming, take away the one thing that offers a possible solution, and that's ethanol," said Paula Chizek, of the Iowa Corn Growers Association.

"We support education, but not at the expense of ethanol," Chizek said.

Ethanol producers get tax breaks of $1.5 billion a year for producing the fuel.

Researchers turn cell cancerous

CANCER

shotgun. Scientists believe that attacking the underlying genetic flaws would not only be more effective but would also spare patients the side effects caused by today's chemotherapy drugs, which assault both cancerous cells and healthy ones.

Approximately two dozen gene-targeting drugs are already in the testing pipeline. Earlier research by Weinberg helped pave the way for Herceptin, a government-approved drug that targets the genetic flaws that cause breast cancer.

Genes are the blueprints that tell a cell when to divide and when to die. Often, when a gene turns bad, it triggers uncontrolled growth, but genes called tumor suppressors step in to stop it. It's when these tumor suppressors also turn bad that tumors develop.

Weinberg built his cancer cell by first inserting a gene-turned-bad called ras that causes cells to grow incessantly. Then he disabled two tumor-suppressing proteins with another bad gene. Finally, he added a telomerase catalyst, which allows cells to continue dividing indefinitely.

Researchers can now look for drugs that would, for example, restore the tumor suppressors or intercept the telomerase catalyst.

"One can use this model now to identify in a rational way drugs that are targeted to those pathways," Harris said.

In creating this cancer cell, the researchers started with skin and kidney tissue, but they do not believe it is like any cancer that exists in humans.

Local group goes on the warpath over 'violent' games

While some complain of censorship, others talk of responsibility to the community.

By Steve Schmadeke
The Daily Iowan

Iowans for the Prevention of Gun Violence have been contacting local businesses recently, asking them to remove "violent" video games from their premises.

The Eastern Iowa Airport, located between Iowa City and Cedar Rapids, is the first business to voluntarily remove a video game that the non-profit organization objected to.

It was the first time someone had complained, said Keith Johnson, airport manager of engineering, maintenance and operations.

"We like to be good neighbors ... so we asked our tenant to take it out," he said, noting that only one of the six video games at the airport was thought by the group to be violent. The video-game vendor replaced it with a golfing game, Johnson said.

Video arcades in Iowa City and Coralville have also been targeted by the group for their alleged violent video games.

Both Time Out, 1451 Coral Ridge Ave., and Alladin's Castle Inc., Old Capitol Mall, have received letters from the organization requesting various games be removed.

"I've looked at the video games we have in that location, and I have no idea what (the group) is talking about," said Vaneta Rogers, director of marketing for Namco Cyberertainment, owner of both arcades.

Rogers said the games at each location change monthly and that her company, which owns 300 arcades across the United States, tries to keep a variety of games that appeal to families.

The fact is that some customers like so-called violent games, and these are stocked at certain locations, Rogers said. A ratings system indicates the level of mature content; most players spend only one minute at each game, she said.

But Dennis Smith, executive director of the anti-violence group, said that what he considered to be violent video games were still in the Time Out arcade when he visited a month ago.

"I'm not a prude," he said. "We're not in the censorship business. We want these businesses to know that there are voices out there that are opposed to this."

Yet some businesses do see the group's efforts as attempted censorship.

"They're a bunch of 'kooks,'" said Clarence Hagen, owner of Hawkeye Amusement Co., 150 Stevens Road, "Good grief, where does this end? If they had their way, old-time books like the Wizard of Oz would be outlawed. It's stupidity what they're doing."

Hagen's company provides video games to more than 300 locations in Iowa; so-called violent games compose no more than 1.5 percent of his inventory, he said. His company was not sent a letter by the group, he added.

The anti-violence group said the video-game effort is only a part of its agenda, which also includes a study into the warning signs of suicide.

"We basically just took a dim view of businesses that claimed to be family oriented peddling hard-core violence to young kids," Smith said.

Group urges ban on Midwest pesticide

An environmental group says there are high levels of the herbicide in the water, posing a danger to babies.

By Libby Quaid
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Tap water across the Midwest is contaminated by dangerously high levels of a popular weed killer, a situation posing a cancer risk to bottle-fed babies, an environmental group said Wednesday.

The group's president urged the Environmental Protection Agency to ban atrazine and noted that water utilities are spending millions to clean chemicals from drinking water.

"It shouldn't be in our water to begin with," said Ken Cook of the Environmental Working Group.

Atrazine, a chemical sprayed on corn, was found in tap water in 796 towns and cities in the nation's Corn Belt, according to the group's report. Atrazine, in high doses, has been linked to cancer.

The EPA is studying exposure to atrazine as part of a pesticide review program and is set to complete its work by next summer, the agency said in a statement. The results will help determine whether tighter drinking water standards are needed.

"We are on schedule to meet all deadlines for reviewing pesticides under the new law," the agency said.

Cook's organization placed a full-page ad in the New York Times asking Vice President Al Gore's help in banning the pesticide. The group also said the EPA has not abided by a new food-quality law that required the agency to keep children in mind when setting new standards.

The group said babies consume an average of three 8-ounce bottles each day. A mother would have to drink 33 8-ounce glasses of water to get the same dose of atrazine, the group said.

Surgeon general points finger at suicide

David Satcher says the nation must confront suicide, the eighth-leading cause of death in the U.S.

By Laura Meckler
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Suicide, once only whispered about, must be boldly confronted by the nation's parents and children, doctors and schools, baseball coaches and hairdressers, Surgeon General David Satcher said Wednesday as he declared suicide a serious national threat.

Suicide is the eighth-leading cause of death, claiming approximately 30,000 lives each year. There are fewer than 19,000 homicides per year. And more than a half million Americans attempt suicide each year but survive.

"People should not be afraid or ashamed to seek help," Satcher said, putting his first stamp on mental-health issues. "Suicide is a serious public health problem."

He issued 15 public recommendations for increasing awareness about suicide, stepping up research and encouraging intervention with people at risk. Early next year, Satcher plans to present a "national strategy" toward suicide prevention that will offer more specific ideas for helping particular groups.

Older Americans, particularly men, are most likely to take their own lives. Also at heightened risk are American Indians and gay and lesbian youth.

Satcher plans a full report reviewing the science and treatments for mental illness, a first for the surgeon general's office.

Tipper Gore, the vice president's wife and a longtime advocate for mental-health issues, joined Satcher to release the report and said that too often, mental illness leads to suicide.

"Millions of Americans and their families face mental illness, often alone and sometimes in fear. Too often suicide is the result," Gore said.

Parents, teachers and others who interact with people at risk of suicide often do not realize that they can help, the report concludes.

Public health threat

Suicide was ranked eighth among the top 10 leading causes of death in 1997. Here's a look at the causes of death.

New Israeli premier stumbles out of the gate

Ehud Barak has quickly disappointed Palestinians.

By Karin Laub
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — For Ehud Barak, peace negotiator, it was not an auspicious beginning.

Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat became deeply suspicious of the Israeli prime minister after their first working meeting, and Barak's main objective in the talks — persuading Arafat to accept a delay in a partial Israeli troop withdrawal from the West Bank — remains elusive.

Arafat fears that Barak, just like his hard-line predecessor Benjamin Netanyahu, is playing for time and trying to cheat him out of large chunks of the West Bank promised in U.S.-backed agreements.

The Palestinians' initial relief over Netanyahu's ouster in May quickly turned to concern when German Foreign Minister Joschka Fischer, right, shakes hands with Israeli Prime Minister Ehud Barak before a meeting Wednesday.

Barak began floating the idea of skipping parts of the interim Wye River agreement under which Israel must hand over 13.1 percent of the West Bank.

The disappointment deepened Tuesday when Barak pressed Arafat to accept a plan that would blend parts of Wye into talks on a permanent peace accord. Arafat insisted throughout the two-hour meeting that Wye must be implemented in full and told Barak he won't get a different answer after the two-week review period the Palestinians reluctantly agreed to.

At first glance, Barak's moves appeared puzzling, especially for a former army chief of staff known as a brilliant tactician.

Just when he needed to win the Palestinians' trust in order to move toward his key policy goal — a comprehensive Mideast peace agreement — he made proposals sure to raise their hackles.

Barak also knew that his plan of skipping one of the two remaining troop pullbacks mandated by Wye was sure to be rejected by Arafat, who is eager to show his constituents some tangible gains after three years of deadlock.

With his desire gone, Sanders retires

Stunningly, Barry Sanders confirmed Wednesday that he is retiring from the Detroit Lions and the NFL.

By Harry Atkins
 Associated Press

PONTIAC, Mich. — Barry Sanders always had eye-popping moves, dazzling and dazzling NFL defenders for 10 years. Now comes the move of all moves, and like the others, no one saw this coming.

Sanders retired on the eve of the Detroit Lions' training camp, a shocking decision that prevents him from becoming the NFL's career rushing leader this season.

In a statement released Wednesday, the game's most explosive running back said he was leaving because, "My desire to exit the game is greater than my desire to remain in it."

The news stunned the Lions, who left the door open for him to return. That didn't appear likely, however. "Ten years is a lot of football," the 31-year-old Sanders said at Gatwick Airport after arriving on a flight from Detroit to London. "I'm just really not feeling like playing. It's not the same game. ... As I've gotten older, the game has changed in my mind."

"I'm thinking about doing other things," he added. "It's still fun, but not as fun. It just felt like it was time."

Asked if he might change his mind, he shook his head.

"I don't think that's going to happen," he said.

Sanders becomes the fourth superstar to retire since January, joining John Elway, Wayne Gretzky and Michael Jordan. Unlike those three, Sanders leaves while at the top of his game, much the same as Jim Brown, who retired from the NFL in 1966 at age 30.

Why now, especially since he's only 1,458 yards shy of breaking Walter Payton's NFL career rushing record of 16,726 yards?

UI gymnast places well at Pan Am Games

Shane de Freitas placed 18th in the all-around competition at the Pan Am Games in Winnipeg, Manitoba.

By Mike Kelly
 The Daily Iowan

Iowa gymnast Shane de Freitas knows there is a lot more about the Pan American games than just the "American."

The sophomore recently competed for his home country of Barbados, placing 18th in the all-around competition, at the Pan Am games in Winnipeg, Manitoba.

With a Canadian mother and citizenship in Barbados, de Freitas could have competed for either country. He chose Barbados because he did not have to qualify for their national team, like he would have had to do in order to compete for Canada.

"I feel an allegiance to Barbados," de Freitas said. "It is where I will probably live when I am older. I feel like it is home."

Barbados, a small island nation 1600 miles southwest of Miami, does not have an official gymnastics team.

de Freitas was born in Barbados and came to the United States with his family when he was 11. He trained in Orlando, and eventually landed a gymnastics scholarship to Iowa.

To compete for his homeland, de Freitas had to petition the Pan American officials to allow him to participate. He cited his previous international competition and collegiate scores as indicators of his ability.

The judges granted his request and suddenly, the country of 260,000 had a gymnastics team.

"I was proud to compete for Barbados and promote gymnastics," de Freitas said. "There are only about 100 gymnasts there now and I want to help the sport there."

At the Pan Am games, de Freitas did well enough to make it to the finals. The highlight of his trip to Winnipeg was landing a move that he had been trying to register.

Registering a move is similar to patenting an invention.

Reiners suspended for opener

By Mike Kelly
 The Daily Iowan

Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz suspended senior quarterback Randy Reiners for the season-opening game against Nebraska.

On June 29, Reiners was charged with public intoxication after he was found "sleeping or passed out," according to the police report, in the parking lot of the UI Hospitals and Clinics.

"As a result of violating a departmental policy last month, Randy Reiners will serve a one-game suspension and also receive appropriate counseling," Ferentz said in a statement released Wednesday.

Reiners, a Fort Dodge, Ia., native, was expected to battle Scott Mullen and Kyle McCann for the starting quarterback spot this fall.

Reiners did not compete in the spring game due to a knee injury, but was expected to be back by the time fall practice started.

Iowa sports information director Phil Haddy said Reiners was unavailable for comment on the situation.

The public intoxication charge is Reiners' second alcohol-related offense. In January of 1998, Reiners was charged with operating a motor vehicle while intoxicated.

Ferentz said Reiners can participate in all team practices and functions, but cannot be on the sidelines for the opening game.

"Randy recognizes the mistake he has made and has reacted in a favorable manner since the incident," Ferentz said. "As stated previously, Randy will pay the prescribed penalty and we will move forward from that point."

Americans stun Cubans in baseball

WINNIPEG, Manitoba (AP) — For one day, Cuba was conquered in baseball. By a group of minor leaguers from the United States, no less. By guys who've been playing together for all of two weeks.

Marcus Jensen's three-run homer sparked a five-run ninth Wednesday as the U.S. team stunned Cuba 10-5 in the pool round of the Pan American Games. It was the Americans' first victory over the world power in a major competition in 12 years.

"Right now the guys are finally understanding the importance of these games. Each one is so critical. This is the way baseball should be played on a regular basis," Jensen said after the U.S. clinched a berth in the quarterfinals.

The victory also soothed some of the pain from an opening 7-6 loss to Canada, a game the Americans led 6-3 in the 11th inning. And it showed the United States has as good a shot as anyone to make the baseball finals here, which would secure a berth in the 2000 Olympics.

The Americans and Cubans are both 2-1 in the four-game pool series, with the quarterfinals set for Saturday. Canada leads the group with a 3-0 mark after beating Mexico 3-1.

Had the U.S. team lost Wednesday, it probably would have faced Cuba again before next Monday's finals.

Fishing a hidden pleasure for many Iowa students

Many UI students know that a great way to relax is to grab that rod and reel and head for water.

By Matt Bowen
 The Daily Iowan

Picture this. It is a gorgeous summer day in Iowa City, and you're sitting in your air conditioned apartment watching MTV's "Fanatic," featuring "NSync," when you realize how nice it looks outside.

You flip the channel over to a terrible "Hawaii Five-O" re-run and decide it might be time to venture out into the summer air. You flip the channel one more time and find some cheap guy on "Love Connection" talking about all the girls he can get and you decide enough is enough.

Now, what to do with this glorious day?

How about grabbing a fishing pole and heading down to the water's edge?

For many UI students and Iowa City residents, fishing is a everyday hobby.

Fin and Feather in Iowa City is one of the most popular places in Iowa City to get fishing supplies. The outdoor store is filled with everything a rookie or veteran fisher might need to catch that one "prize" fish.

UI junior Corey Leo works at Fin and Feather, and says the store is very busy during the spring and summer.

"On afternoons during the school year and the summer both guys and girls come in on a nice day to go fishing," Leo said. "The store is within a bike ride of campus and the more people coming through, the better."

Although a store like Fin and Feather can supply the equipment, it cannot guarantee catching a fish.

UI senior Ed Saidat has been fishing for years, and claims to be a strong fisherman with plenty of experience.

"The handed down tradition of father to son, father to son, has brought me years of experience," Saidat said. "Let's just say I'll challenge anyone out there."

The cost of fishing around the area varies from place to place, but the sport remains accessible for UI students.

Hooks usually run from 79 cents to a $1.00 for a pack of ten at Fin and Feather. Sinker weights run at 79 cents and a good old bobber can be purchased for around 29 cents.

Fin and Feather sells what is called a "combo," or in layman's terms, a rod and a reel as a package. They go from $12.99 to around $600 to $700.

Unless you are Huck Finn, you can't catch anything without bait, and you have many choices, both live and plastic.

Lions upset that Sanders gave no hint of retirement

SANDERS

Sanders has never thought much of such records.

Payton, who suffers from a rare liver disease and is awaiting a transplant, said he understood Sanders' decision.

"It is not about money. It is not about statistics. It is about the romance kindled by playing the game the way it was supposed to be played," Payton said. "As I am engulfed in my personal trials, my family, friends and life are more important than any yard of touchdown ever scored. And in a sense, Barry is fighting for the same."

Sanders, who planned to spend about two weeks in Europe, said he was leaving football before he became "old and gray and can't run" and got "kicked out."

Lions general manager Chuck Schmidt said Sanders would be welcome back any time.

"He's on the 'Reserve: Did Not Report' list, not the 'Reserve: Retired' list," Schmidt said. That means Sanders can be activated any time this season until Dec. 5. If he joins the team before then, he can play in the playoffs.

Schmidt said the Lions have no intention of trying to trade Sanders.

"If Barry comes back, we would want him to come back to the Detroit Lions," he said.

Still, Schmidt said he intends to talk with Sanders' agents about repaying $7.3 million of the unearned signing bonus on the $36 million contract extension Sanders signed two years ago.

His agents — David Ware of Atlanta and Lamont Smith of Denver — said they tried to talk Sanders out of retiring. They had no more luck than a defender trying to arm-tackle the one-man highlight film.

Sanders retired without speaking to Detroit coach Bobby Ross or anyone else on the team. Yet he said he leaves "on good terms with everyone in the organization."

"Obviously, this doesn't come at the greatest time," Ross said. "What we have to do is move on, and that's what we'll do."

He refused to speculate on why Sanders retired.

"I don't feel Barry left because of me," Ross said. "I don't feel that way at all."

That was the popular wisdom, however, especially after Sanders' father, William, of Wichita, Kan., said a few weeks ago that his son was tired of the Lions.

"He's sick of losing," William Sanders said in May.

During Sanders' 10 seasons in Detroit, the Lions had a 78-82 regular-season record and made the playoffs five times, winning one playoff game. Recently, they've had two 5-11 seasons sandwiched around a 9-7 record in 1997 that earned a wild-card spot.

But Sanders said in London he wasn't especially concerned about not playing in the Super Bowl.

"It didn't happen," he said. "I didn't play in the Super Bowl, but I can still sleep at night."

That is probably more than the Lions can say. The surprising loss of Sanders leaves the team — which reports to camp at Saginaw Valley State University on Thursday — without a running back.

Ron Rivers had 19 carries last year and Cory Schlesinger five. Sedrick Irvin, a rookie from Michigan State, was a fourth-round draft pick. Tom Lewand, the Lions' salary cap director, said the club would try to sign a running back in the next few days.

Sanders was a training-camp holdout in 1989, 1991 and 1997, all related to contract negotiations.

"I am not involved in a salary dispute of any kind," Sanders said in his statement. "If I had played this season, I would have earned a more than satisfactory salary."

All the more reason why some of his ex-teammates were dismayed.

"It kind of pulls the rug out from under everybody," wide receiver Johnnie Morton said. "We've got to redo about a year's worth of work in only a few days now. We have to scramble all our plays now, and put in a whole new package tomorrow."

Hernandez beaten in debut

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Livan Hernandez got beaten in his Giants' debut, Mark McGwire got ejected for disputing a strikeout and the St. Louis Cardinals avoided a series sweep with a 6-3 win over San Francisco on Wednesday.

Fernando Tatis had a three-run triple, J.D. Drew added a solo homer and Alberto Castillo had an RBI single for the Cardinals. McGwire, who leads the majors with 37 home runs, went 0-for-2 before getting tossed out in the fourth inning.

Hernandez (5-10), obtained by the Giants last Saturday from the Florida Marlins for two minor leaguers, allowed six runs and seven hits in seven innings.

Hernandez, greeted by a fan waving a Cuban flag and serenaded by the Elton John song "Levon," allowed just one hit in the first four innings, but gave up six runs and six hits in the next three innings.

Twins 5, Athletics 3
MINNEAPOLIS— Corey Koskie hit a go-ahead single in the fifth inning and Mike Trombley worked out of a jam in the ninth as the Minnesota Twins beat the Oakland Athletics 5-3 Wednesday.

Twins starter LaTroy Hawkins (7-8) allowed three runs and four hits in 5 1-3 innings, but just one run was earned.

Mets 9, Pirates 2
NEW YORK — Kenny Rogers' debut with the New York Mets ended the way most of his starts in Oakland did — with a no-decision.

Rogers allowed one hit in six innings and Edgardo Alfonzo went 3-for-4 with three RBIs as the Mets used a seven-run eighth inning to beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 9-2 Wednesday.

The only thing that went wrong from Rogers' standpoint was slight tightness in his right hamstring that forced him out with a 2-1 lead after six innings and a pinch-hit homer by John Wehner off Dennis Cook (9-2) in the eighth that cost Rogers a win. He has 12 no-decisions in 20 starts this year.

Expos 8, Cubs 2
MONTREAL — Javier Vazquez pitched a three-hitter for his second straight complete game, as the Montreal Expos overcame Sammy Sosa's 37th home run to beat the Chicago Cubs 8-2 Wednesday night.

Vazquez (4-5), who retired the first 14 batters in his previous start en route to his first career complete game, retired his first 13 hitters before Glenallen Hill's one-out double in the fifth. Vazquez struck out six and walked none.

Atlanta's Bret Boone forces out Milwaukee's Geoff Jenkins as he tries to turn a double play on a Jose Valentin ground ball during the third inning Wednesday.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Wade Boggs went 3-for-4 to move within eight hits of 3,000, and the Tampa Bay Devil Rays beat Anaheim 4-1 Wednesday night, the Angels' 12th loss in 13 games.

Boggs singled in the second, fifth and seventh innings for his 220th three-hit game.

Indians 7, Tigers 2

CLEVELAND — Dwight Gooden gave the Indians reason to consider putting him back in the starting rotation and Manny Ramirez raised his major league-leading RBI total to 106 Wednesday night in Cleveland's 7-2 win over the Detroit Tigers.

Gooden (3-3) made the most of his first start since July 2, limiting the Tigers to five hits in seven innings for his first win since May 18. The right-hander hasn't been happy pitching out of the bullpen and was further miffed last week when he lost a chance to start in New York when Indians manager Mike Hargrove changed his mind.

Red Sox 8, Blue Jays 0

TORONTO — Butch Huskey starred in his second game for Boston, hitting a grand slam and a solo home run Wednesday night to lead Pat Rapp and the Red Sox over the Toronto Blue Jays 8-0.

Huskey was acquired Monday from Seattle and went 3-for-5 Tuesday night in his Red Sox debut. He came back to break open a scoreless game in the sixth inning with his second slam this year, and hit his 17th homer in the ninth.

Rapp and Tim Wakefield combined on a two-hitter as the Red Sox improved to 8-1 against the Blue Jays this season. Boston had lost 12 of 18 before sweeping the two-game series and moving ahead of the Blue Jays in the AL wild-card race.

Phillies 9, Marlins 4

PHILADELPHIA — Steve Schrenk, making an emergency start in place of Curt Schilling, pitched six scoreless innings for his first major league victory Wednesday night as the Philadelphia Phillies beat Florida 9-4.

Schrenk (1-1), pressed into service because Schilling had tendinitis in his right biceps, had never started in the majors. He had not been a starter since 1997 for Triple-A Rochester.

Brewers 10, Braves 4

ATLANTA — Geoff Jenkins drove in four runs and Jeff Cirillo homered and scored four times, leading the Milwaukee Brewers over the Atlanta Braves 10-4 Wednesday night and ending their five-game losing streak.

Jenkins, who tripled, and Cirillo each had three hits. The Brewers stopped Atlanta's three-game winning streak.

Royals 5, Mariners 3

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Carlos Beltran hit his second two-run homer in two days and Jose Rosado survived a shaky beginning to win his first game in more than a month as Kansas City beat Seattle 5-3 Wednesday night.

Rosado (6-8) went seven innings and gave up three runs on five hits. He walked five and tied his season high with seven strikeouts in his first win since June 22, a span of five starts that included three no-decisions.

White Sox 11, Yankees 3

CHICAGO — Magglio Ordonez and Ray Durham homered in a six-run fifth inning as the Chicago White Sox snapped the New York Yankees' seven-game winning streak with an 11-3 victory Wednesday night.

Ordonez, who had two home runs Tuesday night, hit his 24th over the center-field fence off Dan Naulty to open the fifth.

The defense never rests with Seau

■ The All-Pro linebacker is expected to play linebacker and tight end this year.

By Bernie Wilson
Associated Press

SAN DIEGO — Every so often during San Diego Chargers practices, Junior Seau switches sides, pulls on a white jersey and, presto, the All-Pro linebacker turns into a tight end.

Sometimes he makes great catches. Other times, he simply looks like a linebacker trying to catch the ball.

What in the name of Polynesia are the Chargers doing? The team now has what it calls its "coconut package" in which Seau, from Samoa, and tight end Alfred Pupunu, from Tonga, would be on the field at the same time.

After losing 31 games in three seasons, the Chargers think they can only gain from experimenting with their best player.

"I guarantee you if we had the No. 1 offense, this would never come up," said Seau, the Chargers' live-wire leader who's entering his 10th NFL season. "The fact here is we need identity on offense. If I can add a spark to the offense, then let's do it. I have no problems about it. We're going to put the best players on the field."

The Chargers had the 24th-ranked offense and the overwhelming number of blunders by quarterbacks Ryan Leaf and Craig Whelihan repeatedly undid the work of the NFL's top-ranked defense.

After the Chargers' 5-11 debacle, Seau urged the team to sign a veteran quarterback.

Then he played some tight end during his eighth straight Pro Bowl appearance. He was the primary receiver on the play during which John Elway threw his final scoring pass, but couldn't get open and Elway dumped off a 3-yarder to Sam Gash.

Seau later spoke to new coach Mike Riley, who wants to have some fun while trying to win. Riley agreed to give him a look at tight end beginning with minicamps.

"Athletically, you can do nothing but agree with him," said Riley, who made the jump from Oregon State to his first NFL job. "I think he'd be great. If he played that full time, he'd probably be

The Chargers are considering using Junior Seau on offense as a tight end as well as a linebacker on defense.

Pro Bowl at it." Technically, Seau is being used as an H-back, a hybrid tight end/fullback who lines up in different spots and goes in motion a lot more. He is used as a receiver and blocker.

If this experiment works, Seau can expect to be in for about 10 plays on offense during the regular season. The way he looks at it, an improved offense will mean the defense will be on the field for 12-14 fewer plays this year.

New starting quarterback Jim Harbaugh had his doubts during spring workouts.

"I'm really taking it a lot more seriously now," Harbaugh said. "He can really make us better on offense. We've got good tight ends, don't get me wrong, but Junior, he just has a spark to him or something. He comes over there and he just makes plays."

"We're firing all our bullets, and damn the torpedoes. I kind of like it."

Harbaugh then uttered these magic words: "We've got an open-minded coach."

Seau knows this never would have been possible under Kevin Gilbride, the stubborn former head coach who was 6-16 when he was fired six games into last season.

About the only one not excited about seeing Seau at tight end is defensive coordinator Joe Pascale, who doesn't want the two-way duties interfering with his concentration and zest on defense.

"Believe me, I'm the first to say that if it deteriorates what I've done, and the bread and butter of who I am and what I stand for, I'll definitely step aside," Seau said. And what if Seau gets hurt playing offense? The coaching staff is all too familiar with New York Giants cornerback Jason Sehorn. He injured his knee on a kickoff return during an exhibition game last year and was out for the season.

SPORTS BRIEFS

UCLA athletes plead no contest

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Disabled activists booted outside as nine UCLA football players apologized in court for using handicapped permits to get better parking spots around campus.

"We did not realize the seriousness of our actions," linebacker Ali Abdul Azziz said outside court after nine of 14 Bruins charged in the case entered pleas.

Five more current and former members of the team face arraignment Aug. 25. Duval Hicks and Craig Walendy, two of the players, are in NFL training camps.

"Our faces have been posted on television and newspapers and we know we have embarrassed our school, our families and ourselves," Azziz said. "We realize we exercised bad judgment and we're anxious to make amends for what we've done."

Two more Cubans seek asylum

WINNIPEG, Manitoba — Two more Cubans — a shooter and a softball coach — have sought asylum in Canada, sources close to the Cuban team told The Associated Press on Wednesday.

The two members of the Cuban delegation to the Pan American Games left the team earlier this week, according to the sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Kansas State's Murphy injured

MANHATTAN, Kan. — Kansas State running back Frank Murphy will be out four to eight weeks with a foot injury, the school said Wednesday.

Murphy broke a bone in his foot Monday during conditioning drills, the school said.

Murphy, a 6-foot-1, 205-pound senior, played in eight regular-season games and the Wildcats' Alamo Bowl loss last year.

As a junior, he ran for 257 yards and five touchdowns on 55 carries and caught three passes for 91 yards and another score. Murphy also averaged 26.3 yards on eight kickoff returns.

Blue Jays acquire David Segui

TORONTO — First baseman David Segui was dealt from the Seattle Mariners to the Toronto Blue Jays on Wednesday for pitchers Tom Davey and Steve Sinclair.

Segui, 33, is hitting .293 this season in 90 games with 22 doubles, three triples, nine home runs and 39 RBIs.

"Clearly he's going to help our lineup," Blue Jays general manager

Gord Ash said. "He's an experienced bat, an experienced player and anytime you can add that kind of experience as you go along down the stretch that's a very positive thing," Blue Jays general manager Gord Ash said.

Segui, in Kansas City where the Mariners were playing the Royals, refused to talk to reporters as he left the clubhouse.

NFL owners mixed on Los Angeles

ROSEMONT, Ill. — Los Angeles wants a football team and the NFL wants to accommodate the second-largest TV market in the country. But owners and commissioner Paul Tagliabue wouldn't commit Wednesday to placing a team in the city.

Developers and representatives from Los Angeles presented a proposal that would bring a team to Los Angeles, but in the end Tagliabue chose not to sign it, despite its non-binding nature. Owners and representatives from NFL teams met Wednesday at a suburban Chicago hotel.

Though Tagliabue said the agreement could be used as "framework for negotiations," he cited economic questions about how to finance a new stadium in Los Angeles that would have to be addressed to get the team.

'Weening' people from boring music

■ Ween will bring its multi-talented, multi-layered, sometimes-bizarre sound to the Union Bar tonight.

By Jeremy Erwin
The Daily Iowan

To say that Ween is bizarre would be an understatement. Just as it would be to call it innovative, hilarious and one of the most prodigiously talented bands in the business. Despite its mastery of seemingly every mutation of the musical spectrum, Ween refuses to play it straight, instead, making a name for itself by gleefully kicking dirt in the face of the pop world around it. Creating music that teeters along, and often crosses over, the fine line between pure sarcasm and pure genius, the brothers Ween (Gene and Dean) are often known as contemporary music's finest satirists and two of its most amphibious talents.

With the band having recently released its first live album, Paintin' the Town Brown: Ween Live '90-98, the astounding diversity of Ween can now be fully appreciated.

It spans a career that began with the band performing as a duo, accompanied only by a cassette deck and often under the influence of inhaled Scotchguard, and evolves to its surprisingly affectionate jab at country music with the "12 Golden Country Greats" tour, on which the brothers employed Nashville's finest studio musicians as their back-up band. Paintin' the Town Brown is a mere taste from the musical smorgasbord that Ween will display tonight at the Union Bar, 121 E. College St.

As Ween promises to be one of the top draws in what has been an exceptional summer for live music in Iowa City, the level of anticipation surrounding this event has been overwhelming since the date was announced.

"Ticket sales have been excellent," said Michelle Bradley, of Vibe's Records, 119 E. Washington St. "We sold about 150 tickets in the first two weeks... it's been pretty steady since then. They're still going like mad."

Curiosity is what seems to be drawing a majority of tonight's crowd, as this evening will not only be the first time for many to see this phenomenal act, but for a large number of those in attendance, this will be their first chance at hearing the band as well. "I've heard that the Ween brothers are pretty whacked-out dudes," said recent UI graduate and Phish-head Brian Hoke. "It's gonna be one interesting show."

With a consistently solid live show that goes far beyond re-creating its multi-layered, adventurously psychedelic studio efforts, Ween has managed to secure a spot as one of the finest bands of the decade as well as one with an incredibly solid fan base.

"To me, Ween is a delicate flower whose life-force depends on the maternal nurturing of dedicated Ween listeners," said Joe Stansbery, a UI student and Ween fiend. "It's just one of those things that no one can ever take from me."

The world is not enough - without Bond

■ The new Bond movie, slated for November, is complete with all the things that make Bond Bond — speed, explosions and beautiful women.

By Matt Wolf
Associated Press

LIVER HEATH, England — Agent 007 tumbles four stories down the outer skin of the huge Millennium Dome, chasing the Cigar Girl.

It has been a typical Bondian pursuit: first speedboats, then a hot-air balloon that explodes, landing the intrepid British agent on top of the Dome, where he rolls until he hits bottom and sprains his shoulder.

"Bam. Up pop the credits. Yes, James Bond is back, with some old familiar faces, a new director and a new villain in The World Is Not Enough."

The opening sequence, a show of derring-do crucial to establishing the film's pulsating tone, is being shot outside Pinewood Studios west of London on a rainy, late spring day.

The studio has constructed a scaled-down model of Britain's gargantuan Millennium Dome, which sits quite nicely by the Thames in Greenwich, southeast London, awaiting the coming of the millennium, at end of the year 2000.

"We could do with a bit less of this bloody weather," director Michael Apted said, while the sets get ever soggy. Apted is an Englishman, one of the classiest directors to do Bond, and is better known for guiding Sissy Spacek to an Academy Award for her portrayal of country music queen Loretta Lynn in Coal Miner's Daughter.

Meanwhile, Pierce Brosnan, now for the third time stepping into the 007 role immortalized by Sean Connery, is off keeping dry while stunt double Mark Mottram hurtles gamely down the Dome.

"I'm looking for a natural tumble rather than a contrived roll," said stunt coordinator Simon Crane. "We need to pretend Bond's shoulder has been, say, pulled out of joint."

And this, he said, is one of the easier stunts in a film that features boat chases, skiing sequences and a chain saw-wielding helicopter.

Brosnan is nearby in his Pinewood suite, looking as unruffled off-screen as on-screen. He is painting. A few of his pictures that are hanging on his dressing room walls show an artistic style that resembles a more florid Matisse. The fifth and latest Bond, his burnished tan a testament to his Malibu home, will turn 46 in a few days. The Bond franchise isn't much younger, dating back 37 years to Dr. No, in 1962.

Budgeted at around $110 million, The World Is Not Enough has been shot in Turkey, Spain, the French Alps and the Azerbaijani capital of Baku.

It will open on Nov. 19 in the United States.

Judi Dench and Samantha Bond are back for their third go-round as M and Moneypenny. Robert Carlyle, star of The Full Monty, is the villainous Renard. Sophie Marceau (Braueheart) and Denise Richards (Starship Troopers) are Bond's leading ladies. Marceau is Elektra King, daughter of a slain oil tycoon, while Richards plays a nuclear-weapons expert named Christmas.

All the ingredients that make Bond movies popular are there, Brosnan said — "Wit, naked ladies, titillation, and then Bond goes on a mission."

Brosnan shows up this month opposite Rene Russo in a remake of The Thomas Crown Affair, and, in September, he'll appear in director Richard Attenborough's Grey Owl, which was shot among the ice floes and snow of Quebec.

"For me as an actor, I've always felt I can do anything," Brosnan said. "Of course, you soon know your limitations, and people will impose limitations on you."

Is Bond a kind of straitjacket then? "Some of it is a pain in the neck," the actor said. "But the positive side is far more engaging and just fun, really."

The forgery is out there

LOS ANGELES (AP) — David Duchovny has lost his battle over what he believes is a real-life conspiracy to sell his forged signature.

Duchovny, a star of "The X-Files," and Dean Cain from the TV show "Lois & Clark: The New Adventures of Superman" filed separate lawsuits earlier this year against Truly Unique Collectibles, an Internet firm that sells signed celebrity photographs. The suits claimed New York-based Truly Unique was selling phony signatures of the actors and was "stealing fame" by using unauthorized photographs of them to promote its products in advertisements.

The company denied the charges, and U.S. District Judge Robert J. Kelleher agreed, ruling June 4 that the allegations were groundless.

Truly Unique Collectibles was selling

Duchovny's signed photo for $50. Other photos included those of Sean Connery ($95), Mel Gibson ($110) and the Spice Girls ($150).

Plaintiffs' attorney Farhad Novian said the actors will appear.

Trying to scare them straight again

■ Twenty years after the original, the classic Scared Straight! has been remade for the MTV generation.

By Amy Westfield
Associated Press

WOODBIDGE, N.J. — Kevin Stout came to East Jersey State prison 22 years ago. Convicted murderers spit profanities in his face, pushed him around, and told him never to come back.

"At that time, you couldn't have told me nothing," said Stout, who was 15 when he became one of the earliest participants in the Lifers' Program, which, first documented in the film Scared Straight!, is meant to keep juvenile delinquents such as him out of prison.

He came back to the same prison three years later, a murderer and robber, in for life. For years, he kept away from the Lifers.

Then he woke up one day and thought, "I don't want anybody to be like me."

Stout, 37, is one of a new group of Lifers who appear in Scared Straight! '99, an MTV remake of the gritty documentary that shocked the world in 1979 with convicts' explosive-filled, intimidating tirades about life in prison.

This Scared Straight!, which will air Sunday at 10 p.m. CDT, has a new cast of prisoners (those from 1979 are either dead, released or transferred), new delinquents and, because this is MTV, a rock soundtrack.

Mike Derer/Associated Press

Members of the Lifers' program at East Jersey State Prison watch the new documentary, Scared Straight! '99, a MTV remake of the 1979 Scared Straight!

MTV recruited Arnold Shapiro to make the sequel to an ongoing anti-violence campaign. Shapiro, who produced the original film, won an Academy Award for best documentary as well as an Emmy.

He realized he could reach a generation too young to remember the original film, while re-creating the tense confrontation between young criminals and the hardened convicts who want to stop them before it's too late.

"Not only is this great television, but it's great sociology," Shapiro said.

History appears to repeat itself for much of Scared Straight! '99. Twelve boys, ages 12 to 17, walk in cocky and walk out shaking, vowing never to return after convicts scream about prison rape, filth and lack of freedom.

"We will eat you alive," warned "Crazy Chris, the Nightmare Man," who is serving a double life sentence for murder.

But while they are younger — the youngest delinquent in the 1979 film was 15 — these kids seem a bit tougher. Not one shed a tear.

And the inmates are louder, a bit over-the-top and, if possible, more profane than in 1979. (MTV plans to air the expletives uncut, with warnings.)
