Fed tries to cool economy

■ The central bank boosts interest rates slightly to fight perceived inflationary pressures.

By Martin Crutsinger
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Federal Reserve raised borrowing costs for millions of Americans for the second time this summer Tuesday, boosting two rates it controls by a quarter point in an effort to keep the economy from overheating.

The central bank said its actions "should markedly diminish the risk of rising inflation going forward" — a statement that some in the financial markets hoped would mean the Fed will stop with just the two rate increases. But many private economists said they were still looking for a third tightening move later this year because, in their view, the economy is still growing more rapidly than the Fed considers safe.

Wall Street, after a roller-coaster afternoon following the Fed announcement, closed with the Dow Jones industrial average down just 16.46 points from Monday's record high.

But economists suggested investors were being overly optimistic. "The market euphoria is not justified," said Sung Won Sohn, chief economist at Wells Fargo in Minneapolis. "This is not the end of the Fed rate hikes."

While Sohn said the central bank could move to increase rates for a third time at its next meeting — Oct. 5 — other analysts suggested that the central bank will now adopt a wait-and-see stance, watching to see whether the economy slows on its own.

The Fed left its policy directive, intended to signal future moves, at neutral. But analysts said this meant little because it had also moved to neutral after its last meeting on June 30, a change that did not stop it from raising rates this time around.

"The market has misjudged the Fed's determination to fight inflation," said David Jones, chief economist at Aubrey G. Lanston & Co. in New York. In its announcement, the Fed said it was increasing its target for the federal funds rate, the interest that banks charge on overnight loans, by a quarter point to 5.25 percent. The rate had been boosted — by the same amount — for the first time in two years on June 30.

The increase triggered a quick quarter-point increase to 8.25 percent by commercial banks in their prime lending rate, the benchmark rate for millions of consumer and business loans, ranging from home

Public Opinion holds sway

■ A new classroom was found to accommodate the number of students.

By Meg Neary

Students interested in political science Professor Art Miller's Public Opinion class can breathe easy now that they won't be turned away due to classroom size.

This semester, the course was moved to a smaller classroom, limiting the class to 49 students instead of the usual 60. Because the course conducts a project requiring 60 participants, students said they were disappointed and angered when they learned of the change.

"The university said there wasn't enough big classrooms, and I think that's lousy," said UI junior Liz Crokin. "This is a great class. It

IWP faces new year after summer of discontent

■ IWP writers will be arriving as early as Sept. 7 to begin their program at the UI.

By Steve Schmadeke
The Daily Iowan

Eight writers from around the globe are scheduled to arrive at the UI on Sept. 7 to participate in the International Writing Program.

IWP administrator David Skorton, the UI vice president for research, announced the date to the UI Faculty Council at a meeting Tuesday. In all, the program expects 13-14 writers to arrive.

The UI announced on May 25 that the IWP would go on hiatus because of lack of faculty and funding. The program was reinstated on July 9, with Skorton named as the new director.

"We spent a not inconsiderable amount of time convincing people overseas that there's something for them to come for."

— David Skorton, IWP administrator and UI vice president for research answered councilors' questions about the IWP and said the program was never in jeopardy.

"To be sure, the infrastructure will be different," Skorton said. "But I never saw any evidence, ever, that they were going to stop the program."

Amitava Bhattacharjee, a professor of physics and astronomy, said he wished the decision had had more public notice.

"We ought to know how the decisions get arrived at," he said. "There

Home sweet home in the land of Tempville

■ Temporary housing residents are dealing with their cramped living quarters.

By Lindsey McCune
The Daily Iowan

Five sets of bunk beds, eight sets of textbooks and more than 50 pairs of shoes may not seem like all the comforts of home.

But for the seven UI freshmen and one sophomore living in the 10th floor lounge at Stanley Residence Hall, that's all they've got.

As a result of their filing housing requests late and the overcrowding in the dorms, the women live in one of 20 lounges being used for temporary housing.

Their lounge, which is usually used for studying or recreation, has no partitions to separate the women from each other. The living quarters are cramped, and each woman is adapting to the lack of privacy in her own way.

Emily Moran, a UI freshman from Minneapolis, admitted that she's not really sure how to go about changing her clothes in the lounge.

"Changing is weird," she said. "You don't know if some people are going to be offended if you're standing there in your underwear."

"I cowered behind the dresser when I had to change my clothes," added lounge-mate Katie Schmeling, also a freshman.

Loungemate Christy Hansen from Tipton handled the problem a bit differently.

"There was really no hope of privacy, so I just changed right out in front of the window so that everyone could see me," the freshman said jokingly.

In addition to privacy, space is another thing that the lounge lacks. Each woman has a few drawers for her belongings, and the lounge-dwellers share the clothing racks. Bathrobes and laundry bags hang from the bunk beds lining the wall, and plastic crates full of textbooks are scattered on the floor.

The main problem, said freshman Shelby Rieck of Iowa City is that the lack of space means she can't get settled.

"My parents told me to leave as much stuff as possible at home because they didn't want to move me a second time when I get assigned to a room," she said.

"I'm frustrated because right now, I feel like I'm living out of suitcases."

Though Rieck's own bedroom is only across town, she said she didn't think she would get the full college experience by living there.

There is no TV in the lounge because each loungemate figured someone else would bring one. Without it, they have resorted to other forms of entertainment.

"We were thinking of having a wrestling match in the middle of the floor," UI freshman Emily Price said. "We thought that sounded like fun."

The only outside entertainment coming into the lounge is through the one telephone the women share. And it rings a lot.

"The phone rang every five minutes this afternoon," Price said. The phone calls are almost always for Rieck, who knows a lot of people at the UI, she said.

"I feel bad being on the phone, because there are so many people in here and I don't want anyone to get upset," Rieck said.

Iowa City's PAULA citations shoot up sharply from last year

■ Iowa City police say there are a number of reasons for the 412 percent increase.

By Ryan Foley and Gil Levy
The Daily Iowan

More UI students than in recent years were welcomed back to town with alcohol-related citations from the Iowa City police last weekend.

This year, police issued 41 citations for possession of alcohol under the legal age during the weekend before classes started. There were eight PAULAs during the same period last year and 19 in 1997.

Multiple causes have contributed to the 412 percent increase in the number of tickets, said Iowa City police Lt. Matt Johnson.

"There are officers specifically tasked to PAULA, although we've been doing that with pretty fair regularity," he said.

But specially assigned officers may not have been initiated at this time last year, he said.

The amount of attention given to the downtown bars is no less than they receive every year, said Police Chief R.J. Winklehake.

"You might get the perception that we're 'cracking down' because the students are back," he said. "We're enforcing the same as we were before, but now there's just a higher volume of people in the downtown area."

Even with the regular amount of patrols, the police want to influence young students to make the right decisions by setting a stern example, said Sgt. Bill Campbell.

"Typically, we step up enforcement of our alcohol policy at this time of year," he said. "So we do see a higher amount of citations this early. We try to send a message."

Possession of alcohol under the legal age carries a $100 fine, a $30 surcharge and $15 in court costs. For second and subsequent violations, an additional fine is determined by the court.

Some downtown bars have decided to allow entry to 18-year-olds possessing UI IDs, such as the Fieldhouse Restaurant & Bar, 111 E. College St. Three citations for underage drinking were issued there last weekend.

But Brett Skean, a Fieldhouse night manager, said underage drinking is not a great concern for the bar.

"I wouldn't call it a huge problem. The 18-year-olds will find a way to drink if they really want to," he said. "But they're taking their chances. They have to recognize that they'll have to pay the penalty and consequences for their actions."

Underage students aren't safe from penalties in UI residence halls, either. Offenders caught with alcohol in dorms are subject to punishments ranging from substance-abuse classes to university sanctions or possible expulsion from the dorms.

While some students may have been influenced by Iowa City police and expensive fines, others are not deterred from joining the bar scene.

"I'm just going to be more careful," said Nicole Lidman, a freshman ticketed on Aug. 20 at the Q Bar, 211 Iowa Ave. "I think I'll go out this weekend if I get the chance, but I might not drink again right away."

Council OKs deer-kill plan

■ With only Karen Kubby in dissent, the council votes to kill up to 733 deer.

By Quinn O'Keefe
The Daily Iowan

After hearing from concerned Iowa City residents on both sides of the proposed deer kill, the Iowa City Council voted Tuesday night to move ahead with its Deer Management Plan.

The council voted 6-1, with Councilor Karen Kubby dissenting, to approve the measure, which could kill up to 733 deer this fall.

"This is no disrespect to the committee," Kubby said. "I base my decision on two feelings. One is kind of a gut feeling, more of a religious one. The other is more academic and wanting to understand the problem more."

Other councilors felt differently about the current deer situation.

"I will support the measure reluctantly," said Mayor Ernie Lehman. "The study has been so extensively done. After looking at all the possible alternatives — which I believe the committee has done — the current plan appears to be the best choice."

The council's approval means that the deer plan will be reviewed by the Iowa Natural Resources Commission on Sept. 9. If approved by the panel, shooting could begin as early as Oct. 15.

More than 15 residents spoke during the meeting, most of whom were in favor of the plan. Several cited the increase in the number of automobile accidents, erosion, property damage and the unhealthiness of the herd as their main reasons for favoring the plan.

"The deer have gotten so prolific that it is a frightening situation," Iowa City resident Carol Seindell said. "I am in the area where the sharpshooting will take place, and I am all for it."

After calling her backyard "deer-party central," Iowa City resident Deb Green said she sympathizes with the deer but that the future of the city and the deer population must be taken into consideration.

"I urge people to think about the future needs of deer control. The idea of killing deer does upset me — I see deer everyday," she said. "But I would also urge people to understand that we must learn to coexist."

DeNicola's White Buffalo Inc. of Hamden, Conn., a nonprofit animal conservation and preservation contractor, will handle the culling of the herd if the plan is approved by the state commission.

Local woman charged in alleged jewelry scheme

An Iowa City woman was charged with extortion after allegedly threatening a woman who has Down's syndrome with physical harm or death.

Thereasa Stockstell, 1958 Broadway 8A, allegedly told the victim in July that if she didn't write checks to "buy" jewelry, Stockstell would harm or kill her, said Iowa City police Detective Deb Protasky.

The victim wrote checks for costume jewelry totaling $1,285, according to a police report.

"The jewelry is valued at approximately $25," Protasky said.

Stockstell, 39, allegedly had the victim address some of the checks to other people because "it might have looked suspicious to see so many checks written out to me," the defendant stated in a police report.

Those "other" people reportedly cashed the checks and gave the money to the defendant court documents said.

Stockstell is being held in the Johnson County Jail on $7,500 bond. Her preliminary hearing has been set for Sept. 3 at 2 p.m.

The Johnson County Board of Supervisors is asking for citizen involvement and ideas concerning the county jail's overcrowding.

The board is currently accepting applications for the Jail Overcrowding Committee, which will assist the sheriff in examining the overcrowding and send its recommendations to the board, said Supervisor Carol Thompson.

Fed tries to dampen U.S. economy

FEDERAL RESERVE

equity loans to some credit card debt.

The Fed's goal is to raise rates that it directly controls and thus influence those set by financial markets, such as 30-year mortgage rates, and in that way slow economic activity in such interest-sensitive sectors of the economy as auto and home sales.

The central bank also announced it was raising its largely symbolic discount rate, the interest it charges on direct loans to banks, by a quarter point to 4.75 percent.

Some economists saw the double move as an effort by Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan to underscore his resolve to fight inflation. He promised Congress in July that the Fed would move "promptly and forcefully" to keep prices stable.

Despite a sharp jump in energy costs, consumer prices so far this year have been rising at moderate 2.2 percent rate. But the Fed is concerned that the economy is still growing too strongly and that without some moderation, tight labor markets will begin to push wages higher and trigger overall price pressures. Unemployment has been hovering around a three-decade low of 4.3 percent all year.

"The Fed believes a little bit of pain now is the price the economy has to pay to keep inflation low," said Allen Sinai, chief economist at Primark Global Economics in New York.

But Fed critics complained that the central bank is overreacting and is running the risk of derailing a global recovery that is still struggling to emerge from two years of currency turmoil.

"To bring the global economy out of its slump, the United States needs to act as a locomotive, and a rate hike only steepens the grade up which we're pulling the global economy," said Jerry Jasinowski, president of the National Association of Manufacturers, whose members have been battered this year by falling export sales.

Sen. Byron Dorgan, D-N.D., complained, "The Fed seems determined to slow the economy down, without regard to the costs it imposes on average Americans, and despite evidence that it has been wrong, time after time, about inflation."

IWP

were a lot of questions that we are not getting answered. Why do we have these committees?"

Skorton said committees were part of the bureaucratic process and the best way to make decisions about the IWP's future. The decision is difficult, he said, because the program does not fall into the strict teaching confines of the UI.

"The further out you go on the spectrum, the more you're going to scratch your head about how much taxpayer money you're going to spend," he said.

And while those administering the IWP say the program will definitely continue, questions remain about what happened over the summer. When the IWP's office equipment was moved to other departments, it was viewed as signaling an end to the program.

Equipment was redistributed to other departments so it would not go unused during the transition period, said Sandra Barkan, assistant dean of the Graduate College and IWP program administrator.

Another concern was the removal of Provost Office funds designated for the IWP.

UI Provost Jon Whitmore said his office only provided stopgap funds for the program because its funding fluctuated from year to year; there was never a concrete outline for how the program would be funded. Coming up with stable funding would depend on the recommendations of the dean's task force, he said. The report is expected to be given to President Mary Sue Coleman on Oct. 1.

Because the IWP's events will begin in a few weeks, the program's administrators hope that questions about its problems will be left behind.

"I'd compare it to reporters asking President Clinton about his sex life while he was overseas," Barkan said. "It's just airing our dirty laundry. I hope that what people wanted was international writers to come and that they will give writers a warm welcome."

She won't have to worry for long if the hopes of Maggie Van Oel, residence services director, become reality. Her goal is to place the 88 men and 90 women currently assigned to 20 lounges in Burge and Stanley residence halls in permanent rooms by Oct. 1.

"It may be possible to have everyone moved out by then, considering we have half as many temporary residents as last year," she said Monday.

The number of temporary housing residents in 1998 topped 300,

It's good for people like me who don't know anyone at all.

— Katie Schmeling, UI freshman

the highest in five years, said Dicta Schoenfelder, residence services housing manager.

Despite the inconveniences, temporary housing may be a blessing in disguise.

"It's good for people like me who don't know anyone at all," said Schmeling, who came from Milwaukee knowing no one at the UI. Despite her initial qualms about temporary housing, Rieck is now optimistic that the arrangement will work.

"We haven't had any major personality clashes yet," she said. "So far everyone's been polite. I guess you just make the best of things."

"Yeah," Price agreed with a laugh. "But we've only been here for a couple of days. In a month, everything might be a different story."

does great projects, and it gets great results and actually addresses issues that need to be addressed."

Students arrived to protest the smaller class size at 1:05 p.m. Tuesday but were interrupted 10 minutes later by a phone call from the office of Linda Maxson, dean of liberal arts, informing them of the larger location.

"We found another room as soon as we realized a problem," Maxson said.

Sixty students — including the 48 registered for the course — were on hand for the protest, along with the course's teaching assistants, Peter Matthes, Jaclyn Schmitt and Ellen Gergits.

After the announcement of the new location, the students went to Maxson's office to thank her in person, where she apologized for the difficulty students may have had getting into the course.

"This is a great first day," Crokin said. "I think I learned the most today than I will all semester."

The class ended with Miller signing add slips for students who will now be able to enroll in the course.

Approximately two-thirds of the UI classrooms are assigned through the Facilities Services Group, including all the classrooms in Schaeffer Hall, said Richard Gibson, associate vice president for the group. The other third are assigned by individual colleges and departments, he said.

"We try to honor what people ask for," he said. "But no one is guaranteed a room."

The new room, with the capacity and media capability needed for Public Opinion, was arranged by Karen Stewart, an administrative assistant in political science. She called economics Professor Forrest Nelson Tuesday around 11 a.m., and he agreed to switch classrooms with Miller for that time, he said.

Mental distress dogs bomb survivors

■ Almost half of the Oklahoma City bombing survivors have developed stress disorders.

By Jay Hughes
Associated Press

OKLAHOMA CITY — A study of the survivors of the Oklahoma City bombing found that nearly half developed post-traumatic stress disorder or had other psychiatric illnesses, such as depression or problems with drugs and alcohol.

The researchers said they were surprised by the degree of suffering and hope the results will help mental-health professionals focus their efforts after disasters.

The study, published in today's Journal of the American Medical Association, looked at 182 adults who were inside or just outside the federal building when the bomb went off in 1995, killing 168 people and injuring nearly 700. The survivors were interviewed six months after the blast.

Forty-five percent of those studied were found to suffer illnesses that included chronic depression and drug and alcohol problems. The largest single group of survivors — one out of three — had post-traumatic stress disorder, a condition often seen in Vietnam veterans. Its symptoms include flashbacks, angry outbursts, and sleep and concentration problems.

The study was conducted by researchers at Washington University, the Oklahoma State Department of Health and the University of Oklahoma Health Sciences.

Bombing survivors have described nightmares, a fear of entering tall buildings, loss of trust and flashbacks triggered by loud noises.

"I can still smell the smoke," said Martin Cash, a former benefits counselor with the Veterans Administration who lost an eye in the bombing. Once, when his wife was moving furniture at their home, she bumped the wall.

"That big thud, I came unglued," he said.

Charlie Younger, who was in a business meeting on the fourth floor when the bomb went off, said he hasn't been able to watch violent movies, finds it difficult to trust people, and doesn't like tall buildings.

"I'm nervous all the time, especially if I can't look out a window," he said.

Fifty-five percent of those studied needed only counseling, not psychiatric care, said Dr. Carol North, a psychiatrist at Washington University's School of Medicine in St. Louis and one of the study's authors.

"Nobody was untouched by this disaster, but different people were touched differently," she said. "Human distress is understandable after horrendous events such as this. We should not necessarily equate that with mental illness."

Those with more serious injuries were more prone to develop a disorder, as were those who had a family member seriously injured or killed. Survivors most at risk were those who refused to think about the event and felt isolated and uninterested in their surroundings.

Recognizing those symptoms immediately after a disaster could help identify those who need the most help, the researchers said.

A fly in development ointment

■ An endangered fly has stopped the bulldozers in Southern California.

By Chelsea J. Carter
Associated Press

COLTON, Calif. — Southern California construction projects worth hundreds of millions are being held up by a fly in the development.

The U.S. government has all but halted development across the sand dunes in the desert east of Los Angeles to protect the tiny Delhi Sands flower-loving fly — the only fly ever to make the Endangered Species List.

Some people can't believe the fuss being made over a bug.

"People feel like their community is being run by a fly. Where it can develop, when it can develop — all dictated by a fly," said Ray Bragg, a development official in Fontana, one of several small cities whose plans have been thwarted by the orange-brown insect the size of a straight pin.

The flies' only known breeding grounds are the Delhi Sands dunes, which stretch from San Bernardino to Riverside to Ontario, approximately 60 miles from Los Angeles. The fine dunes were created by Santa Ana winds carrying grit from the mountains and dropping it in the desert valley.

The Delhi Sands are the largest remaining sand dune system in the Los Angeles basin. But the few dunes that remain are surrounded by freeways and encroaching development. Most of them are held by private land owners.

Because the fly's habitat is disappearing, its numbers are down to just several thousand. In 1993 it was designated by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service as an endangered species.

"Any time there's a listed species that's warm and fuzzy and endearing, it's easier for people to rally around it and work together toward a common goal. But this is about more than just God's creatures great and small," said Jeff Newman of the Fish and Wildlife Service. "This is a unique system with unique species."

Afraid the Delhi Sands fly will go the way of the El Segundo fly, which disappeared when its breeding grounds were paved over for a tarmac at the Los Angeles International Airport, the Fish and Wildlife Service has all but halted development on the dunes until it can be determined how many flies there are and how best to protect them.

In Fontana, developers' vision of a $500 million project of single-family homes, shopping centers and strip malls has been dashed. Rancho Cucamonga, Ontario, Rialto and Hemet have had to delay housing projects, critical in a region absorbing residential overflow from Los Angeles. Colton had hoped to build a manufacturing plant.

Downpour, tremor rattle quake survivors

■ The death toll from last week's earthquake reaches 18,000, as the Turkish leader brushes aside criticism.

By Scheherezade Faramarzi
Associated Press

ISTANBUL, Turkey — Homeless earthquake survivors battled to keep their cardboard and blanket tents from collapsing in a downpour Tuesday, and a new tremor sent residents of Ankara running into the streets in panic.

While the death toll from last week's quake soared to nearly 18,000 people, there were no reports of casualties or damages from Tuesday's much weaker tremor. The 4.7-magnitude quake was centered near Haymana, 40 miles south of Ankara, the capital. A 4.2-magnitude aftershock followed.

Prime Minister Bulent Ecevit, whose government has been under fire for its slow response to the crisis, acknowledged Tuesday that there were delays in the rescue efforts.

But he said past governments bear some responsibility for allowing the shoddy construction that contributed to the high death toll. And he insisted that some of the delays were unavoidable due to severe damage to that telephones and roads suffered from the 7.4-magnitude quake, which struck before dawn on Aug. 17.

"Mistakes have been made," Ecevit said in an interview with CNN, adding that the government is already working on stricter measures to solve the problem.

Elephant to receive surgery after land-mine accident

■ A Thai pachyderm has received a tidal wave of support since her accident.

By Sakchai Lalit
Associated Press

LAMPANG, Thailand — Land-mine victims rarely receive much attention in Thailand, but Motola the elephant has received an outpouring of public support since her crippling accident last week.

Veterinarians prepared Tuesday to amputate the 38-year-old elephant's shattered limb, moving a crane into place to support her huge bulk during and after surgery at an elephant hospital in northern Thailand.

Motola's left front leg was shredded when she stepped on a land mine while foraging for food during a break from her work at a logging camp near the Thai-Burmese border — the site of decades of conflict between rebels and the government of Burma (which calls the country Myanmar).

The wound became badly infected during her hobbling, three-day trek to the Hang Chat Elephant Hospital in Lampang province, 317 miles north of Bangkok. Weeping when she arrived, Motola has been receiving jumbo-sized doses of painkillers.

Surgery was scheduled for today; veterinarians plan to remove the destroyed parts of her leg, possibly as high as the knee.

Veterinarian Preecha Paungkam told the ITV television network that Motola had received approximately four gallons of saline solution overnight in preparation for surgery and that her condition was improving.

A crane with a long cable and harness system will be used to suspend Motola above the ground to prevent her from putting her weight on the leg and to make it easier to treat for infection.

Vets hope to eventually fit

Motola with an artificial leg. Soraida Salvala of the Friends of the Asian Elephants Foundation said nearly $27,000 had been raised to pay for the operation; the cost of Motola's care could go much higher.

An outpouring of public support for a land-mine victim such as has been seen here is remarkable in Thailand, where thousands of amputees have taken refuge from wars in neighboring Burma and Cambodia.

2 die on amusement park rides

A man is killed on a Virginia roller coaster, and a boy is dead in a California accident.

Associated Press

DOSWELL, Va. — A New York man died in what was apparently an accident on a roller coaster ride in which riders stand through several loops that turn them upside down.

It was one of two fatal accidents in as many days. The other happened in California.

Timothy Fan, 20, was killed Monday night on the 50-mph Shockwave ride at the 400-acre Paramount King's Dominion theme park. Officials didn't have a hometown for Fan but said he lived on Long Island.

Officials at the park, located approximately 20 miles north of Richmond, released few details about the incident. Park spokeswoman Betsy Moss confirmed the fatality, which happened around 8:40 p.m., and said an investigation was under way.

Five people were slightly injured Monday when a piece of decorative wood came loose from the track of a Knotts Berry Farm roller coaster ride in Buena Park, Calif.

Also in California, a disabled 12-year-old boy died Sunday after plummeting from an amusement park ride that was about to be shut down for a safety check.

Park officials said Joshua Smurphat somehow slipped from a shoulder harness and fell from the Drop Zone ride at Paramount's Great America Theme Park in Santa Clara. A park spokesman said the accident had nothing to do with the boy's disability or the safety check.

On the Drop Zone, riders are harnessed into six four-person coaches, sitting upright with their feet dangling. They are hoisted 200 feet up a tower and free-fall approximately two-thirds of the way down, reaching speeds of 62 mph before braking.

In Kings Mills, Ohio, the Paramount's Kings Island amusement park closed two rides similar to the ones involved in the fatal accidents at two other Paramount parks, a spokesman said Tuesday.

STATE BRIEFS

Paintball survives its Waterloo

WATERLOO (AP) — The City Council has approved a variance to the city's firearm/pellet gun ordinance that will allow a proposed paintball area to go forward, despite concerns it could promote violence.

The measure had failed, 3-2, on Aug. 12, but Councilor Jerry Anders, who missed the first vote, asked that it be reconsidered. It edged by on a 4-3 vote.

The vote was preceded by a lengthy debate over the need to protect society from what some perceive to be dangerous influences.

"I think this council needs to think about how we want to promote violence, potential violence in the community," said Scott Jordan, one of three councilors voting against the variance.

Resident Gerry Shatzer told councilors they were overplaying the violence angle.

"You will not find one person associated with paintball involved in any killing in the schools," he said. "Don't get out of balance here because of what's going on around the world."

"I'm afraid to let my sons play basketball because they might turn out like Dennis Rodman," he quipped.

But Mayor John Roof said the issue of promoting violence should be taken seriously.

"Philosophically, it's a big deal," he said. "I personally think it sends the wrong message, and I'm not afraid to say that."

Police focus on school speeders

WEST DES MOINES (AP) — More than 50 speeding tickets were issued in West Des Moines in the first two days of a back-to-school speeding crackdown. Police are hoping to promote a conditioned reflex to ease up on the accelerator.

The idea is to slow traffic in areas around schools, where children walk and are vulnerable.

I think it's wonderful Ames made the list, but there are a lot of stresses in Ames for young people.

— George Belitsos, director of Youth and Shelter Services in Ames, responding to a Seventeen magazine survey reporting the city as one of the nation's most stress-free places to live, as told to the Associated Press.

Bush's constituency not so stupid as he thinks

When George W. Bush joined the GOP race for president, he fully intended to have his cake and eat it, too. Unfortunately, he underestimated the intelligence of his constituency.

Bush has spent the last several weeks deflecting rumors that, during his 20s, he used cocaine. Up until now, Bush has been firm in his refusals to answer such questions, blaming the press for propagating an environment of political blackballing. Bush may act indignant in the face of accusations of personal misconduct, but he is to blame for his current situation.

From the first moments of his bid for the presidency, Bush made his personal life Issue One. As have many of his GOP comrades, Bush portrayed himself as the Anti-Clinton, citing his virtues of his marriage. Moreover, Bush has spent a good portion of his campaign citing his battles with alcohol and his current sobriety. Now that the media have begun to question vices of another variety, voters are right to demand a better answer than "none of your business."

Students should be especially unwilling to accept such an answer. With local and state officials more than willing to throw students in jail for possession of alcohol, let alone drugs, young adults deserve more from their president than "do what I say, not what I do." Even the noted Republican and author of The Death of Outrage, William Bennett, would like answers. In an Aug. 23 op-ed piece in the Wall Street Journal, he said, "While granting (Bush's right to privacy), I still think Mr. Bush ought to answer the question. While Americans may or may not take issue with allowing a possible former substance-abuser to become the nation's chief law enforcement officer, they do have a right to at least know his background."

Would Johnson County voters allow a former cocaine addict to serve as sheriff? Probably not. Would those same voters allow a known cocaine user to control the nation's nuclear stockpiles or even allow him to enforce the nation's drug laws? Whether they would or not, they deserve to know the truth before they cast their ballots. Bush's supporters also deserve to share the shame. Republicans who had a collective brain aneurysm upon hearing that Bill Clinton "smoked but didn't inhale" now seem perfectly content that their candidate for president may have spent his formative years using cocaine.

George W. Bush wants to be known as the Anti-Clinton but only on his terms. GOP voters loathe an admitted marijuana experimenter but are more than willing to replace him with a man with a comparably shady past. If either of these parties wishes to retain any semblance of credibility, perhaps they should take a long look in the mirror, and soon.

Turkey's tragedy contrasts with our good fortune

The earthquake that Turkey suffered last week underscored starkly the fragility of human life. News reports list current death totals as nearing the 18,000 mark. The images of mothers, fathers, husbands and wives grimly waiting to provide a dignified burial for their crushed loved ones is heart-rending. And despite the shoddy construction of most of these buildings, when the earth opens up and gapes, no technology and no prosperity can withstand its awesome force.

A world away, most of us live lives of complete security and peace. No foreign war has been fought on this soil for almost 200 years. No famine has emaciated our children as do the ones that decimate poorer nations. No pogroms or persecutions have rampaged through society since slavery heard its death knell. A few hurricanes and droughts, and occasional tremors and twisters, spell the extent of our national disasters.

In fact, most of us are so flush with prosperity, so sated with material goods and endless entertainment, that it is easy to believe this near-utopia could last forever.

Measured merely in economic terms, perhaps it can. Inflation is low. Pocketbooks are full. The Dow is up most days. The economy keeps humming and chugging along steadily.

But can we measure ourselves merely in economic terms? Ought the sum of our existence to be weighed and valued by our net worth? If the recent impeachment debacle demonstrated anything, it showed that when Americans have enough prosperity, they will overlook felony in the commander-in-chief of the most powerful military instrument the world has ever known, where moral judgment and discernment are indispensable.

Early in his career, Abraham Lincoln mused about this country's future. He asked, "At what point then is the approach of danger to be expected? I answer, if it ever reach us, it must spring up amongst us. It cannot come from abroad. If destruction be our lot, we must ourselves be its author and finisher. As a nation of freemen, we must live through all time, or die by suicide."

Lincoln knew that any real threat to our liberty would never come from natural disaster or war. With penetrating insight, he realized what so many of us seem tempted to forget in the midst of all our wealth: that a nation that is premised upon respect for life and the right to responsible self-government derived from it will destroy itself when it has flushed these principles down the drain. Lincoln fought a war to preserve those principles.

Life is fragile, liberty is fragile, and the responsible pursuit of happiness is quickly slipping from our grasp.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Bush should come clean on drug question

What are we to believe? First, Bush Jr. said it had been seven years since he had used illegal drugs. Then, it was 25 years. What is it going to be next — that he wandered by a party when he was just a kid that he heard later there had been cocaine at?

De-evolution at work in Kansas schools

Two weeks ago, the Kansas state Board of Education took a "step forward" by ruling that its schools need not include the teaching of evolution in their science classrooms.

At least according to Scott Hill, a Kansas farmer and member of the prestigious board. Another voting member, Steve Abrams, astutely informed the Associated Press that "it is not good science to teach evolution as fact." So good science, thank God, is back in Kansas schools.

Why, then, was the board's decision awash in controversy? For one, it could set the state of scientific education in Kansas' schools back about 100 years — provided, of course, that educators in the area's school districts comply with the plan and leave scientific fact out of their lesson plans. God-fearing proponents of creationism in Kansas should start praying long and hard, because only divine intervention will help their kids get through the science section on the SATs after this.

What should we expect next in Kansas' school curricula? The re-emergence of the flat-earth theory? Belt-whippings for disobedient students? Bloodletting as a form of medical treatment? The scene in Kansas ERs could indeed be a messy one:

"We've got drug overdose victim going into shock here! Get me some sort of sharp object, STAT! If we drill a couple holes above his temples, that should do the trick."

Understandably, the Kansas decision has drawn a mix of criticism and surprise. It is not often, after all, that an elected group of academic officials reject an educational concept that is well-rooted in fact. Even Bill Graves, the Kansas governor, was taken aback, declaring the judgment to be "out of sync with reality." The ACLU, meanwhile, has threatened to sue the board, citing the obvious intrusion of religious values into public institutions. And why not take action? Who are these wackos running the Board of Education, anyway? Perhaps these holdovers from a bygone era are evidence that the theory of evolution really is bogus, thereby substantiating their claims.

It would be simple to make this argument if recent proceedings in Kansas were some strange anomaly and the individuals involved were just a few fringe members of Kansas society. But according to a survey by the National Science Foundation, the Kansas administrators have plenty of company. More than half of American adults favor creationism over evolution, and 52 percent believe that humans roamed alongside dinosaurs back in the good old days. Sixty-five percent don't believe the Big Bang theory, and only 35 percent find truth in the idea that humans evolved from other animals.

Evolution is still sort of a wild concept to many, as it turns out. Even some of our esteemed officials in Washington can't grasp the idea. Texas Rep. Tom DeLay, reflecting on recent school killings, told the Associated Press on Aug. 13 that these sort of things happen when schools "teach the children that they are nothing but glorified apes who are evolu-tionized out of some primordial mud."

While Kansas has taken some dramatic measures to prevent these filthy teachings, it is not striking out on its own. Several other states have taken measures to remove evolution from their classrooms or at least de-emphasize it. Alabama, Texas, Georgia, New Mexico, Nebraska and Illinois, among others, are all on the list.

While Charles Darwin turned in his grave, Scott Hill, the aforementioned Kansas farmer/philosopher, quipped to the Associated Press that "there is a liberal agenda to build up or glorify evolution in our schools."

You said it, Scott. But while everybody seems to be veering to their respective right or left sides, scientists and theologians alike are drifting toward a middle ground. Members of both camps acknowledge that religion and science can indeed coexist and that a divine power could be playing a hand in the evolutionary process.

Some Board of Education members in Kansas wouldn't buy this explanation, though, and the result has been a transgression of dinosaur-like proportions. The vote was part of a negative, yet popular, trend that one should hope will stop before students in Kansas are stuck using typewriters and slide rules.

It took us billions of years to emerge from the primordial mess we were originally in, and Lord knows that we don't want to slip back into another.

Jesse Ammerman is the DI Viewpoints editor.

Buddhist mandala comes to museum

Ten Tibetan nuns will construct a sand mandala on the UI campus.

By T.J. Besler
 The Daily Iowan

In a first for the UI, 10 nuns from the Khachoe Ghakyil Nunnery of Kathmandu, Nepal are building a sand mandala in the Museum of Art. An opening reception will be held today at 1 p.m. for the construction, which began Tuesday and will last through Sept. 7. Upon completion, the structure, which will measure 5 feet by 5 feet, will be ritually swept up and scattered, probably into the Iowa River.

A sand mandala, made of brightly colored sand, is a two-dimensional representation of a place in which the Buddha is said to reside. In this case, the representation will be for the Buddha of compassion.

The center of the mandala is believed to be a type of paradise. Because a Buddha has perfected his mind, ridding himself of anger, jealousy, hate and the other pollutants of the mind, he must live in a perfect universe, which the mandala provides.

Diana Velez, an associate professor of Spanish and Portuguese and a Buddhist, says asking the nuns to come to the UI served two purposes.

I would recommend that people try to watch the construction from the beginning.

—Diana Velez,
 associate professor of Spanish and Portuguese

"First of all, I wanted to inform people about the situation in Tibet," she said. "They are living in a culture that is slowly being distinguished. This is a horrible situation to suffer, and I wanted to let the public here know about it."

"Also, this is a fund-raising tour for the nuns. They are trying to raise enough money so that they can add space to their nunnery. Because of the situation in Tibet, a lot of people are fleeing Tibet and going to Nepal, and monasteries are housing and clothing them. So this is an attempt to raise money so they can expand that space in their monasteries."

While the event will take place over many days, Velez believes that the public should try to observe it a little each day.

"Although the structure itself will be more interesting later on, I would recommend that people try to watch the construction from the beginning, so that they can observe step by step how this is being constructed," she said.

Following the building and scattering of the mandala, the nuns will perform sacred music and dance at Macbride Hall Auditorium — a part of the event that Velez believes will be a hit.

"The music will be lively, and it is always neat to expose yourself to ways other cultures do things," she said. "I just think people will get a kick out of it."

Tickets for the concert are $10 for adults and $5 for children and are available at Prairie Lights Books, 15 S. Dubuque St. Tickets will also be available at the door on the night of the concert.

Kato Kaelin debunks accusatory headline

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Kato Kaelin won a round in his $15 million lawsuit against a tabloid over the headline: "Cops Think Kato Did It!"

A federal judge Monday rejected the National Examiner's argument that the headline wasn't malicious because its lawyers approved it. A declaration of malice would open the tabloid to punitive damages.

The Examiner's story itself didn't accuse Kaelin of killing Nicole Brown Simpson and Ron Goldman. The tabloid's news editor said the headline referred to perjury, not murder.

Akili Smith gets seven-year deal from Bengals

By Joe Kay
 Associated Press

CINCINNATI — Now that he's got a seven-year deal worth as much as $56 million, Akili Smith has a lot of catching up to do.

The Cincinnati Bengals quarterback of the future took an overnight flight and arrived for what's left of training camp today, less than three weeks before the season opener.

Smith, the last unsigned member of the celebrated quarterback class of '99, agreed to a contract Monday evening.

"I think I've missed 20 to 25 practices. It's definitely going to hurt me, but I'm still optimistic about this year," said Smith, looking tired from the lack of sleep. "I want to salvage some of it."

He got about two hours of sleep overnight, attended a brief news conference after signing his contract, then headed for training camp and an afternoon workout in Georgetown, Ky.

"General manager Mike Brown said, 'I don't care about you sleeping, I don't care about you eating. We want you in there practicing,'" Smith said.

Brown talked all offseason about acquiring a quarterback to pull his team out of a decade-long rut. He's still hopeful that Smith can pick up the offense quickly enough to make an impact this season.

"It is a good time for him to be in Cincinnati, with our new stadium coming out of the ground," Brown said. "It will be ready next year and maybe he'll be ready sooner than that."

Iowa's ace pitcher signs with Devil Rays, leaves school

Fact: Jim Magrane signed as a free agent with the Devil Rays.

Impact: The late signing leaves the Hawkeyes with a large pitching void.

By Greg Wallace
 The Daily Iowan

Jim Magrane will be getting instruction of a far different kind this fall. Instead of starting his senior year of college, the former Iowa pitcher will be in Florida, beginning his career with the Tampa Bay Devil Rays.

Tuesday, Magrane announced that he had signed a free-agent contract to play for Tampa Bay, ending his Iowa career. He will report to the Devil Rays' instructional league team for six weeks this fall, and begin his pro career with Class A St. Petersburg next spring.

Last season, Magrane emerged as the ace of Iowa's staff, going 6-4, and setting school records for strikeouts in a season (110) and a game (17, against Western Illinois).

"It was something that happened fast," Magrane said. "(Pro ball) was something that I always wanted to do."

Iowa coach Scott Broghamer was happy for Magrane, but was not thrilled about the timing of his decision. Magrane was not drafted in the June free agent draft as a junior, and would have been ineligible to become a pro until June 2000 once he attended his first class this fall.

"The timing isn't good," Broghamer said. "Once we got a couple weeks into August, I thought we were in the clear. If someone was going to sign him, I thought they would have by then."

The decision wasn't an easy one for Magrane. He was close to finishing his degree in Communications Studies. And he wanted to help Iowa get out of the Big Ten cellar.

"Definitely," Magrane said when asked if the decision was a tough one. "Especially being in Iowa City just a couple days before I left. It's tough leaving a place I've been for three years and had a good time at."

Magrane played this summer for the Waterloo Bucks of the Northwoods League, a collegiate summer team. While pitching for the Bucks, his fastball was clocked at 90 m.p.h., up from 86 to 88 in the spring, which caught pro scouts' attention.

Magrane will be starting off in a good spot with the Devil Rays. St.

Hard hits, soft heart push Davison to success

Molly Thomas
 The Daily Iowan

Derrick Davison loves the intimidation that comes along with being a big, bad linebacker for the Iowa football team. The 6-foot-2, 235 lb. junior college transfer quickly commanded the attention of the Iowa staff and players when he moved to Iowa City in the spring.

He captured an early starting role and hopes to become one of Iowa's most solid defenders in the fall. However, when he sheds the uniform after practice, Davison also leaves the attitude behind.

His warm personality shines through on a tattoo on his right bicep. The tattoo is of an angel praying and the name Beverly is inscribed below the picture.

"Beverly is my four-year-old sister," Davison said. "She is my only sibling and I picture her as a little angel with a little heart, so that is where the idea for my tattoo came from."

Davison transferred to Iowa from the North Dakota College of Science. The 21-year-old from Cincinnati, Ohio, didn't play defense in high school. He was the team's starting running back and clocked a 4.5 in the 40-yard dash.

"Coming out of high school I wasn't getting very many looks," Davison said. "I either wanted to go SEC or Big Ten so I thought if I went to a junior college for two years I might have a better chance."

According to linebackers coach Brett Bielema, Davison was a surprise to the coaching staff. He came to Iowa as a safety but was too big for the position and quickly got a linebacker number.

"Derrick is a kid who loves to play the game of football, he loves contact

Season of change for Iowa's defense

Defensive coordinator Norm Parker has changed the face of the Hawkeye defense.

By Greg Wallace
 The Daily Iowan

The 4-3 defense installed by new defensive coordinator Norm Parker has brought radical changes for the Iowa defense, both on and off the field.

Gone is the 5-2 style of defense that the Hawkeyes ran last season, along with some key personnel:

- Lineman Skip Miller quit the team in July and transferred to South Dakota.
- Linebacker Raj Clark transferred in April to South Dakota.
- And just last week, three-year starter Ryan Loftin quit the team, citing personal reasons.

Loftin had been moved from a first-team end to a second-string linebacker because of the change from a 5-2 to a 4-3 defense.

The 4-3 will be attack-oriented, a welcome change from last season's format. In the 5-2, defenders reacted to the offense; in the 4-3, the offense will have to react to them. The system is set up something like this: four-down linemen, with the defen-

Iowa keeps Nebraska guessing

Coach Frank Solich is still trying to prepare for the Huskers trip to Iowa City on Sept. 4.

By Doug Alden
 Associated Press

LINCOLN, Neb. — About the only thing Nebraska coach Frank Solich can be sure about as he prepares to face Iowa is that the Hawkeyes have a new coaching staff.

Everything else is a guessing game at this point, Solich said.

"We've collected as much film as we can to study what those coaches have done in the past — which is no guarantee that that's how it's going to fit for them this fall. They could come out with something completely different," Solich said after a two-hour practice Tuesday at Memorial Stadium.

Films of last year's Iowa team won't do Solich and his squad much good. Last year, the Hawkeyes were coached by Hayden Fry, who retired after 20 years at Iowa. Former Iowa assistant Kirk Ferentz has taken over with a new staff, leaving Solich and company wondering what's ahead of them Sept. 4 when the No. 6 Cornhuskers visit Iowa City.

"We're trying to touch on as much as we can," Solich said.

Defensive coordinator Charlie McBride grimaced when asked how the defense is preparing for the Hawkeyes.

"We don't have anything to prepare for, so we're preparing for everything," he said. "There's not a whole

Richmond is highest paid shooting guard

WASHINGTON (AP) — For much of the summer, Mitch Richmond's future seemed to lie almost anywhere but Washington. That changed Tuesday as he signed a four-year, $40-million contract with the Wizards to become the highest-paid shooting guard in the NBA.

"Hopefully my jersey is washed," Richmond joked to assistant equipment manager Jerry Walter after he returned to the MCI Center.

The Wizards and Richmond's agent reached agreement last week after stalled negotiations, which puts Richmond ahead of shooting guards Reggie Miller, Kobe Bryant, Latrell Sprewell and Ray Allen — each of whom will make about $9 million this season.

"What can you say?" Richmond said. "I thought that I played a lot of years in this league. You never know when it's going to come, but you want to keep playing and let things handle themselves."

Last season, Richmond's first with the Wizards, the 34-year-old guard led the team in scoring, averaging 19.7 points a game.

Christiansen placed on disabled list again

PITTSBURGH — The Pittsburgh Pirates placed left-handed pitcher Jason Christiansen on the 15-day disabled list for the third time this season on Tuesday.

Christiansen has a cervical strain and is due to see a neurologist within the next few days. The problem first flared up while he was sitting on the bullpen bench during Sunday's game against Arizona.

"I wasn't jumping off the bench or wrestling or doing anything stupid," he said. "My neck just tightened up on me."

Christiansen was called into Sunday's game but was unable to pitch. In 35 relief appearances this season, he is 2-3 with a 4.46 ERA and three saves.

Christiansen was on the disabled list from May 13-28 with a neck strain and again from July 31 to Aug. 21 with lower back inflammation.

Indians put Lofton on disabled list again

CLEVELAND — The Cleveland Indians placed outfielder Kenny Lofton on the disabled list today for the second time due to a lingering right hamstring injury.

The assignment is retroactive to Aug. 16. Lofton will join the Akron Aeros of the Class AA Eastern League Tuesday in Altoona, Pa., to begin a playing rehabilitation program for his injury.

Third baseman Travis Fryman, who has been on the disabled list since July 4 because of an injured right knee, also has been assigned to rehab with Akron starting Tuesday in Altoona.

The Indians recalled Jolbert Cabrera from Buffalo of the Class AAA International League to fill Lofton's roster spot.

Mickelson steams about Crenshaw

ALOHA, Ore. — Phil Mickelson was in a good mood when he came into the clubhouse.

He had just shot a terrific round on an easy course at the Fred Meyer Challenge, a low-pressure charity tournament.

Walking up the 18th fairway, Mickelson waved to a group of fans in the grandstand after they yelled, "How's the baby?" in reference to his daughter Amanda, born the day after the U.S. Open two months ago.

But Mickelson's demeanor quickly changed when he was asked about the lingering controversy over whether Ryder Cup players should be paid.

During the PGA Championship earlier this month, American team captain Ben Crenshaw angrily picked out Mickelson, along with David Duval, Tiger Woods and Mark O'Meara as players who wanted a say in how the PGA of America spends its profits from the Ryder Cup.

"I did not say anything to the media. I did not say a word," Mickelson said Monday. "I didn't say what my views were. All Ben said was he was disappointed in me. That was a confidential meeting. He was out of line. "And you'll have to ask him why he was disappointed in me."

Martin awaits verdict after closing arguments

MIAMI — Miami Dolphins receiver Tony Martin never made any effort to hide a series of cash repayments and simply was trying to help a longtime friend through troubled times, his lawyer told jurors today.

In his closing statement, attorney Howard Srebnick said that although Martin has had problems managing his own finances, he would not risk his career by laundering drug money.

"Tony may have been financially irresponsible. He may have made terrible investment decisions. But he's not a money launderer," Srebnick said.

"Tony is a loyal, trusting friend. He believes in the man he believed in him. He gave Rickey Brownlee the benefit of the doubt that the government won't."

Martin faces five federal charges of money laundering. He is being tried alongside Brownlee, who served seven years in prison for two 1980s drug convictions, in a case largely focusing on Brownlee's alleged narcotics activities from 1994 to 1997.

New coach, changes at Northwestern

EVANSTON, Ill. — Gary Barnett is long gone. Four years after taking Northwestern to the Rose Bowl and numerous coaching flirtations later, he's returned to Colorado.

He wasn't the only one to leave. Quarterback Gavin Hoffmann, who struggled last season during on-the-job training, took off for Penn.

Now the Wildcats start a new era under new coach Randy Walker with an untested quarterback and 13 starters returning from a team that was 3-9 and winless in the Big Ten.

"Last year was garbage," said senior defensive tackle Jeff Dyra. "Let's face it." What the Wildcats will face this season is a schedule that in other years would be deemed favorable because it doesn't include Penn State and Ohio State.

SAID WHAT?

"We like sushi. We always have it after a game and Dave's mom is bringing some down. So maybe it is good luck."

— Toms River little league player Chris Fontenelli, discussing the defending champions traditional postgame meal. Toms River advanced to the U.S. Championship game Tuesday with a 3-1 win over Brownsburg, Ind.

Retirement not on Paterno's priority list

Penn State coach Joe Paterno is a paragon of collegiate coaching. Entering his 50th year with the Nittany Lions as either an assistant or a head coach, Paterno may be fielding one of his strongest teams yet. His third-ranked Nittany Lions have a tough test early though when they go up against the No. 4 Arizona Wildcats, Saturday in the Kickoff Classic. DI sportswriter Mike Kelly sat down with the legendary coach at Big Ten media day and talked about the evolution of the coach and athletes' discipline.

DI: How do you think the game has changed since you entered coaching?
 JP: It is an extremely different world now than it was back in 1950. Especially with all the TV exposure and the agents. People still compet-

FACE

with Joe Paterno

ed with people for jobs and in games so that aspect is the same. Players are also exposed to more temptations now than when they were in the past, not that much more though.

DI: Do you think TV has had a positive or negative influence on the game of college football?
 JP: It has given everyone a chance for exposure. It has helped some schools get their alumni more interested.

DI: Is there such a thing as overexposure?
 JP: Too much media attention is part of the problem. Twenty years ago, a cop would call me at two in the morning when a guy had too much to drink and was yelling at his girlfriend. He would say "Joe, you've got to take this guy home." I got him and put him to bed. That would be that. Now it would be in the newspaper the next morning.

DI: Is there any chance Rashard Casey will see any time at quarterback this season?
 JP: Kevin Thompson is the No. 1 guy to start the year, but if Casey improves as much in the preseason as he did during the spring, he will have to play some.

DI: How are you addressing the question of retirement?
 JP: I'm going to coach until I want to retire. I talked to (Florida State coach) Bobby Bowden when we were on a trip together and I said "Bobby what are you going to do about this retirement business? Maybe we should get some young guys on that staff." And Bobby said to me, "Ah, the heck with that, I'm going to retire when I want to retire." And I told him, "Good, that's what I was thinking too."

DI: What kinds of things do you do to keep going during the rigors of the season?
 JP: I just try to eat well, and exercise and that's about it. I just really enjoy coaching.

Stinson's career night carries the Sting

Charlotte edged Detroit in the first night of WNBA play-off action.

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. (AP) — Midway through the second half of Tuesday's playoff game with the Detroit Shock, Charlotte Sting guard Andrea Stinson could sense her teammates starting to wilt. That's when she took over, leading her team to a 60-54 victory. "We came in here on a long losing streak, and we were trying to give up," said Stinson, who led Charlotte with 16 points and a career-high 14 rebounds. "We were starting to hang our heads a little, but I knew we were still in it. I really wanted this one, and once I got going, the rest of the team jumped on the bandwagon." The Shock led 42-36 with 9:30 left when Stinson blocked Wendy Palmer's layup. That seemed to wake up the team, and the Sting went on a 16-3 run over the next seven minutes.

"I challenged them to step up and win this game," Sting coach Dan Hughes said. "Neither team was getting anything offensively, so I told them to go out and make things happen on the other end of the floor."

Detroit missed six of seven shots during the Charlotte run, nearly all from outside.

"They played tough post defense to stop Wendy (Palmer), but that left the perimeter open," said Detroit point guard Jen Azzi, who was 2-of-13 from the floor. "I just couldn't knock down any of the shots."

The Sting lost the last five games of the regular season, but were able to earn a shot against New York in the second round, starting Friday in Charlotte. "We made some big strides tonight," Dawn Staley said. "We could have easily folded, especially once the crowd got into it, but we stuck together. That was huge."

Rhonda Mapp scored 16 points for Charlotte and Staley added 12 points and five assists.

Palmer led Detroit with 10 points and nine rebounds, the only Shock player to reach double figures.

"We had shots — really good shots," Detroit coach Nancy Lieberman-Cline said. "We just didn't knock them down. Charlotte played the percentages, and made us beat them from the outside. We just didn't do it."

Even after the Sting's 16-3 run, Detroit got back within two, but Mapp's short jumper made it a two-possession game and, after Palmer missed a 3-pointer, Charlotte iced the game from the free-throw line.

Records tumble in Sydney's Olympic pool

After six world records were set, Olympic organizers are hoping it's a sign of things to come.

By Dennis Pasa
Associated Press

SYDNEY, Australia — Sydney's Olympic organizers couldn't have asked for anything more.

Six world records have been broken in just three days at the Olympic pool in the first major test of a venue for next year's Games.

Based on the record-breaking performances in the pool at this week's Pan Pacific championships, next year's Sydney Games could set a world records benchmark for which future Olympics will be measured.

While the Sydney International Aquatic Center at Homebush in western Sydney has become the sport's newest speed palace, swimmers admit they are at a loss to explain whether it is the venue or just peak performances by the athletes.

Australian Susie O'Neill said it might be swimmers anxious to get acclimatized to the Olympic pool.

"It's probably just the atmosphere, I think, everyone just wants to swim well at this pool," O'Neill said Tuesday.

On Monday, American Jenny Thompson broke Mary T. Meagher's 18-year-old 100-meter butterfly record. Australia's Ian Thorpe broke his third world record of the meet Tuesday, again smashing the 200 freestyle, while South Africa's Penny Heyns also continued her remarkable run with a fifth world record in five races in the 100 breaststroke.

American Lenny Krayzelburg, who set a new mark in the 100-meter backstroke Tuesday night, breaking a record that had held since 1992, said the pool was the best "I've ever swum in."

This is the first major international meet at an Olympic venue, and although it is not an official Olympic test event, it provides an indication of what the pool could offer next year for the world's best swimmers.

Anti-wave lane ropes, a level wet-deck and water depth of 10 feet that reduces turbulence, angled starting blocks with handle bars, ozone-treated water, temperature controls of the air and water, vibrant colors around the pool and energetic music all play a part, according to pool general manager Jamie Barkley.

Lane ropes used to be strings of decorated wire, but now they are thick plastic devices that prevent water spilling from one lane into the next. Starting blocks, once flat, are angled slightly to hasten takeoffs, and they have FINA-approved handle bars which Thompson and Heyns are using.

COLLEGE FOOTBALL

Davison ready for crowds

DAVISON

and he's a good student of the game," Bielema said. "He is a guy we are really excited about and I think he's going to have a good regular season in the Big Ten."

During his junior college career, Davison was the team's defensive captain and most valuable player. He also led the team in tackles and interceptions.

Davison said he chose to come to Iowa because it was the only team that provided a challenge for him.

"During my visits, a lot of schools told me I could come on and start right away," Davison said. "I wanted to work for my position and gain the respect of my teammates and so I came here and have accomplished that."

Davison made a very strong showing in the spring season, and earned a starting linebacker spot. However, an injury kept him from participating in the spring game.

"I got injured during a screen play," Davison said. "I was covering my man and reading the play real well, but at the last minute someone came and wrapped up my ankle. But I'm ready to go now, and by September 4 I'll be out there."

Since moving to a Big Ten school, Davison said he has noticed many changes in the game of football.

"The biggest changes have been all of the hype, the media, and the fans," Davison said. "Back at the junior college level, the attendance at games was 50 people and here it is 63,000 people."

One of the things Davison enjoys most about the game of football is the contact involved with the sport. Back at the North Dakota junior college Davison was given the "Bloody Nose Award" several times for the best hit of the game.

"This award was basically for pancaking someone or making a person lay on their back for five minutes or more," Davison said.

Linebacker Aaron Kampman has noticed Davison's physical prowess and said he's been a positive addition to the team.

"Derrick is a great guy," said Kampman. "I like his attitude and I really like the way he hits. He's an extremely talented athlete and I think he'll make a great linebacker."

Davison said that he has settled in very well with the Hawkeyes.

"I love my teammates," said Davison. "They are real good guys and we've become really close."

According to Davison, his experience at Iowa has went well and he's looking forward to the future - Big Ten games. But he also can't forget the past. It's the tattoo on his bicep that keeps him grounded, and will forever remind him of the one person that has helped him through every hit he's taken in life - his mother.

"All through my down and out times she stuck with me, even when things weren't right," said Davison. "She molded me to be the person I am and taught me to never give up."

Lessons learned, Diggs ready to take command

■ Ohio State linebacker Na'il Diggs is prepared to fill the defensive voids for the Buckeyes this year.

By Rusty Miller
Associated Press

COLUMBUS, Ohio — A year ago, the kid wearing No. 32 was trying to make a name for himself while playing in the shadow cast by the take-charge guys who also played linebacker for Ohio State.

Now the role played by Na'il (pronounced NEYE'-ehl) Diggs has changed. Now he is the lynchpin of Ohio State's defense.

"I look at the younger guys and I see that I was them last year," the 6-foot-4, 235-pound junior said.

Andy Katzenmoyer was a

Buktus Award winner who drew extra attention off and on the field while earning All-American acclaim and getting on the cover of Sports Illustrated's 1998 college football preview issue.

Playing Robin to his Batman was senior

Jerry

Rudzinski,

an introspective

five-time

scholar-athlete who captained the

Buckeyes to an 11-1 record and a

No. 2 ranking in the polls.

Diggs watched and learned.

He saw how Katzenmoyer and

Rudzinski prepared for games and how intense and intent they were once the games began. He took note of their work habits and dedication to conditioning.

This spring Diggs realized that, with both of his teammate-teachers gone, he had a responsibility to pass on what he had discovered.

"It's not easy. There's a lot to learn," he said of the process that all young players encounter. "You want to help them, to say, 'Are you getting this?' There's a lot to take in. You want to put a hand on their shoulder and say, 'You might want to try doing it this way,' or 'Here's how you ought to do that.'"

As Ohio State readies for Sunday's Kickoff Classic game against Miami, it's clear that Diggs is the fulcrum of a Buckeye defense that lost five central figures from last year's run for the national title. He is respected not only as a player but also as a quiet leader.

Diggs takes the job seriously. In a questionnaire, he said the best thing about being an Ohio State football player is "meaning so much to the people of Columbus."

"His job is elder statesman of the linebacker corps," defensive coordinator Fred Pagac said. "I think he's stepping up and being a little more vocal and also doing a little more leading by example."

Diggs played on the defensive line his first two years at Ohio State after Pagac stole the Los Angeles native away from Southern Cal.

Defensive end Rodney Bailey has noticed Diggs' growth.

"He's taken that leadership role," Bailey said. "He's shown that all of us who have played the last two or three years should do that."

Atlanta pitcher Odalis Perez is one of the Braves who has spent considerable time on the DL this year.

Braves walk wounded

Injuries have plagued the Braves all year, but they are still leading the NL East.

By Paul Newberry
Associated Press

ATLANTA — Maybe they should roll a few beds into the Atlanta Braves clubhouse and turn the place into a hospital.

Who would know the difference?

Every day seems to bring a discouraging medical report from the team seeking its eighth straight postseason appearance.

Greg Maddux: chipped bone in his pitching hand. Rudy Seanez: stress fracture in his pitching elbow. Kevin Millwood: sore back. Brian Jordan: aching wrist.

And those are the lucky ones. Andres Galarraga, Kerry Ligtenberg, Javy Lopez and Odalis Perez are done for the year, the first two without ever playing a game.

Yet, in what may be their most impressive performance since the worst-to-first of 1991, the Braves have remained one of the NL's strongest teams.

"We've lost some big parts of this team, but you've got to go on and play with what you've got," second baseman Bret Boone said. "Hopefully, we can keep winning."

Going into Tuesday's night game against Cincinnati, the Braves had won five in a row and 14 of their last 18 to remain a half-game ahead of the streaking New York Mets in the NL East.

"We've had our share of injuries, but you can't worry about it," Boone said. "Of course, if we had Andres Galarraga, Kerry Ligtenberg, Javy Lopez and Odalis Perez, we'd be a better team. But you can't control those things."

The Braves got an indication of what type of season it would be before it began.

Galarraga was diagnosed with cancer in his back just before the start of spring training. While expected to make a full recovery, the Big Cat had to sit out the year to undergo treatment.

Then, in the early days of spring training, Ligtenberg felt a twinge in his right elbow. Doctors discovered a partially torn ligament, meaning the Braves would have to replace the pitcher who became the first rookie in 12 years to save 30 games.

Extra inning rally lifts Houston over Mets

NEW YORK (AP) — Ricky Gutierrez singled in the go-ahead run in the 10th inning and Jeff Bagwell followed with a three-run homer, leading Houston over New York.

Bagwell's 38th homer made him the Astros' career RBIs leader with 943, one more than current Houston first-base coach Jose Cruz.

Mike Hampton and Billy Wagner (3-1) combined on a five-hitter for Houston, which went ahead in the second inning when Carl Everett homered off his former team. Mike Piazza's 31st homer tied it in the Mets seventh.

Houston increased its NL Central lead to 1½ games over second-place Cincinnati, which lost 6-4 at Atlanta.

New York dropped 1½ games behind the first-place Braves in the NL East but remained 2½ games ahead of Cincinnati in the wild-card race.

Tony Eusebio, who had been 0-for-6 as a pinch hitter this year, blooped a double down the right-field line against Dennis Cook (10-3) leading off the 10th and took third on Russ Johnson's fly to right, just beating Roger Cedeno's throw.

Giants 12, Cubs 4

CHICAGO — Charlie Hayes hit a three-run homer, J.T. Snow and Ellis Burks drove in three runs each and Chicago bobbled their way through another ugly day, losing 12-4 to San Francisco. The Cubs, who beat the Giants for the NL wild-card last year, have won just twice in the last 15 games. San Francisco, meanwhile, has won five in a row.

Shawn Estes (8-7) scattered three runs and six hits over seven innings, striking out six. Sammy Sosa broke up his shutout bid in the fourth inning with an RBI double that would have been a homer if the wind weren't blowing in.

Sosa, who leads Mark McGwire 51-50 in the home run race, finished the day 2-for-3.

Braves 6, Reds 4

ATLANTA — John Smoltz finally won. Pete Harnisch finally lost. Smoltz won for the first time in more than two months, allowing just four hits in eight innings to keep Atlanta atop the NL East with a victory over Cincinnati.

The Braves scored four runs in the sixth to overcome a 3-2 deficit and snap Harnisch's eight-game winning streak. Jose Hernandez atoned for a defensive miscue with a two-run double as Atlanta won its sixth in a row.

Atlanta was a half-game ahead of the New York Mets beginning the night, while Cincinnati was a half-game behind Houston in the NL Central.

Devil Rays 6, White Sox 5

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Wilson Alvarez won his third straight decision since coming off the disabled list and Jose Canseco had two RBIs as Tampa Bay beat Chicago.

Tampa Bay improved to 13-9 in August, setting a team record for wins in a single month. The Devil Rays, who have won eight of 10, need to win just two of their remaining six games this month to record their first-ever winning month.

Alvarez (8-6) allowed three runs — two earned — and four hits in seven innings. Alvarez, who struck out five and walked three, has allowed just five earned runs in 26 innings over four starts after being sidelined by left triceps inflammation.

Expos 8, Cardinals 4

MONTREAL — Mark McGwire hit his 51st home run, tying Sammy Sosa for the major league lead, but the Montreal Expos rallied to beat the St. Louis Cardinals 8-4 Tuesday night.

Vladimir Guerrero extended his Montreal record hitting streak to 29 games, one behind Arizona's Luis Gonzalez for the longest in the majors this year.

McGwire matched Lou Gehrig's record of 493 home runs by a first baseman. McGwire has hit 15 additional homers while playing other positions.

Phillies 18, Padres 2

PHILADELPHIA — Bobby Abreu homered twice and drove in six runs and Rob Ducey got a career-high five hits as the Philadelphia Phillies routed the San Diego Padres.

Scott Rolen, who tied the major league record with five strikeouts in a nine-inning game Monday night, whiffed again in the Phillies first for his sixth straight strikeout.

But Rolen doubled and scored to start a four-run third, then hit a three-run double in the sixth that made it 11-2.

Study: students to diversify

■ A UI study shows students' fees for diversity did not increase, which colleges are

By The Staff

A study by researchers at historical colleges and universities found that diversity as an option at other colleges.

Lamont Flowers, UI professor of planning, politics, and international studies, tested diversity among black students at eight colleges for three years.

"The year before and for each year, we would show the results of diversity," he said.

The researchers asked eight questions about diversity, including whether students' backgrounds were similar to their own. The researchers agreed, agreed or strongly agreed on the question.

Flowers and his colleagues compared how opinions were at historical colleges with students at historical colleges and universities.

"Students at their counterparts, students at historical colleges strongly," he said.

The study became more interesting when they got older. Kate Gates, UI sophomore, said, "I think Americans are more comfortable at first, you know, diversity kind of thing."

UI sophomore said that the study portrayed her as a person who is more comfortable at first, you know, diversity kind of thing.

"I think Americans are more comfortable at first, you know, diversity kind of thing," she said. "There are more people, comfortable at first, you know, diversity kind of thing."
