Air workers busted

■ Three dozen American Airlines employees are arrested in drug probe in Miami and New York.

By Meg Richards
Associated Press

MIAMI — Dozens of American Airlines ramp workers and contract employees were arrested and charged Wednesday in a drug ring that investigators said smuggled cocaine and marijuana into the United States in food carts, garbage bags and carry-on luggage.

The bust is believed to be the biggest set of drug arrests involving a U.S. airline.

The arrests resulted from two sting operations, one of which was prompted in part when a pilot complained last year that his coffee tasted weak. Investigators discovered 15 pounds of heroin in coffee packs aboard an American plane.

The drugs were put aboard American Airlines planes in Colombia and Central America, flown to Miami and then to Philadelphia, Washington, Baltimore and Cleveland, investigators said. The defendants also allegedly smuggled guns and explosives that undercover agents had given them.

At least 50 people were indicted on drug charges, including 30 American baggage handlers and ground crew workers at Miami International Airport, where American is the largest carrier. It is also the biggest U.S. airline serving Latin America.

Separately, eight people — including seven American employees — were indicted in New York in a similar case.

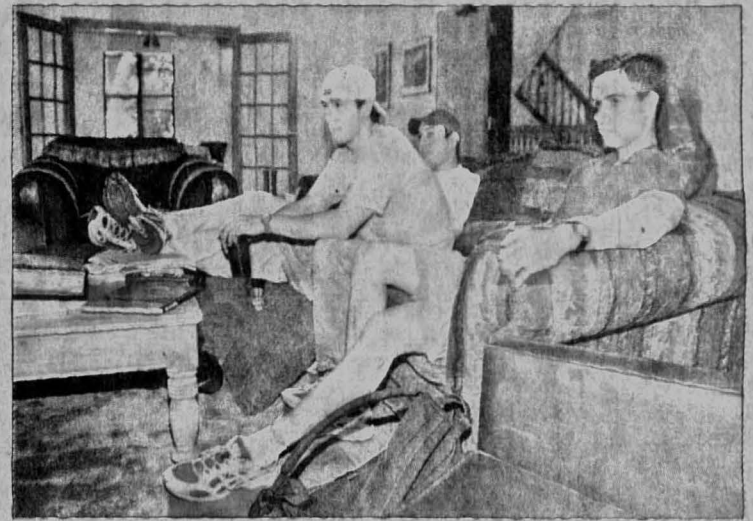

Also, officials in Colombia identified American as the airline used by 10 Colombians charged over the weekend with smuggling more than a half-ton of heroin to Miami.

"Greed is the bottom line. They did it all for a price," said Ed Halley, a spokesman for the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

In the Miami and New York cases, no one in management was arrested, and no American pilots or flight attendants were indicted.

American said it has cooperated with investigators and blamed the problem on a "small group of

Future of ex-Delta house uncertain

■ The UI is considering the purchase of the former fraternity house.

By Meg Neary
The Daily Iowan

The fate of the former Delta Tau Delta fraternity house, 322 S. Clinton St., may not be determined for quite some time.

The Omicron Holding Corp., which owns the house, is exploring options regarding the house's future, including leasing it for an extended period or selling it — possibly to the UI.

"We're looking at the best option for Omicron," said Mike Manfull, a corporate representative.

Delta Tau Delta's national headquarters suspended the UI chapter's charter in April for drug and alcohol violations. The fraternity will be able to start over at the UI after a minimum of four years.

Manfull said that if Omicron decides to sell, the fraternity will have to start over in a new location. However, selling would save the fraternity money because the house's location is valuable, he said.

Matt Dill, a UI senior and former Delta Tau Delta member, would like to be able to return to his old fraternity house as an alumnus. He said he had assumed the house would be returned to the Deltas eventually.

"Going elsewhere would make it hard to start up again," Dill said.

The UI is very interested in purchasing the house, said Linda Annis, an administrative associate in the Business Office.

"The university in general has a critical need for space," she said.

Although the UI has not determined what the house would be

Study: Black students open to diversity

■ A UI study finds that black students' feelings toward diversity did not depend on which college they attended.

By Anne Huyck
The Daily Iowan

A study conducted by two UI researchers shows that black students at historically black colleges and universities are just as open to diversity as are blacks at the UI and other colleges.

Lamont Flowers, a graduate student, and Ernest Pascarella, a Peterson professor of higher education in planning, policy and leadership studies, tested diversity by following 402 black students at 18 four-year colleges for three years, Pascarella said.

"The year before they began college and for each year after for three years, we measured things that would show us how they felt about diversity," he said.

The researchers asked students eight questions, such as "Is it important to have contact with a person whose background is different than my own?" Then students would either respond that they strongly agreed, agreed, were neutral, disagreed or strongly disagreed with the question.

Flowers and Pascarella then compared how open to diversity students were at historically black colleges with students at other U.S. colleges and universities. The overall results were positive, Pascarella said.

"Students didn't change less than their counterparts, and for the most part, students would agree more strongly," he said.

The study showed that students became more open to diversity as they got older, which, UI sophomore Kate Gates said, she can relate to even though she is not black.

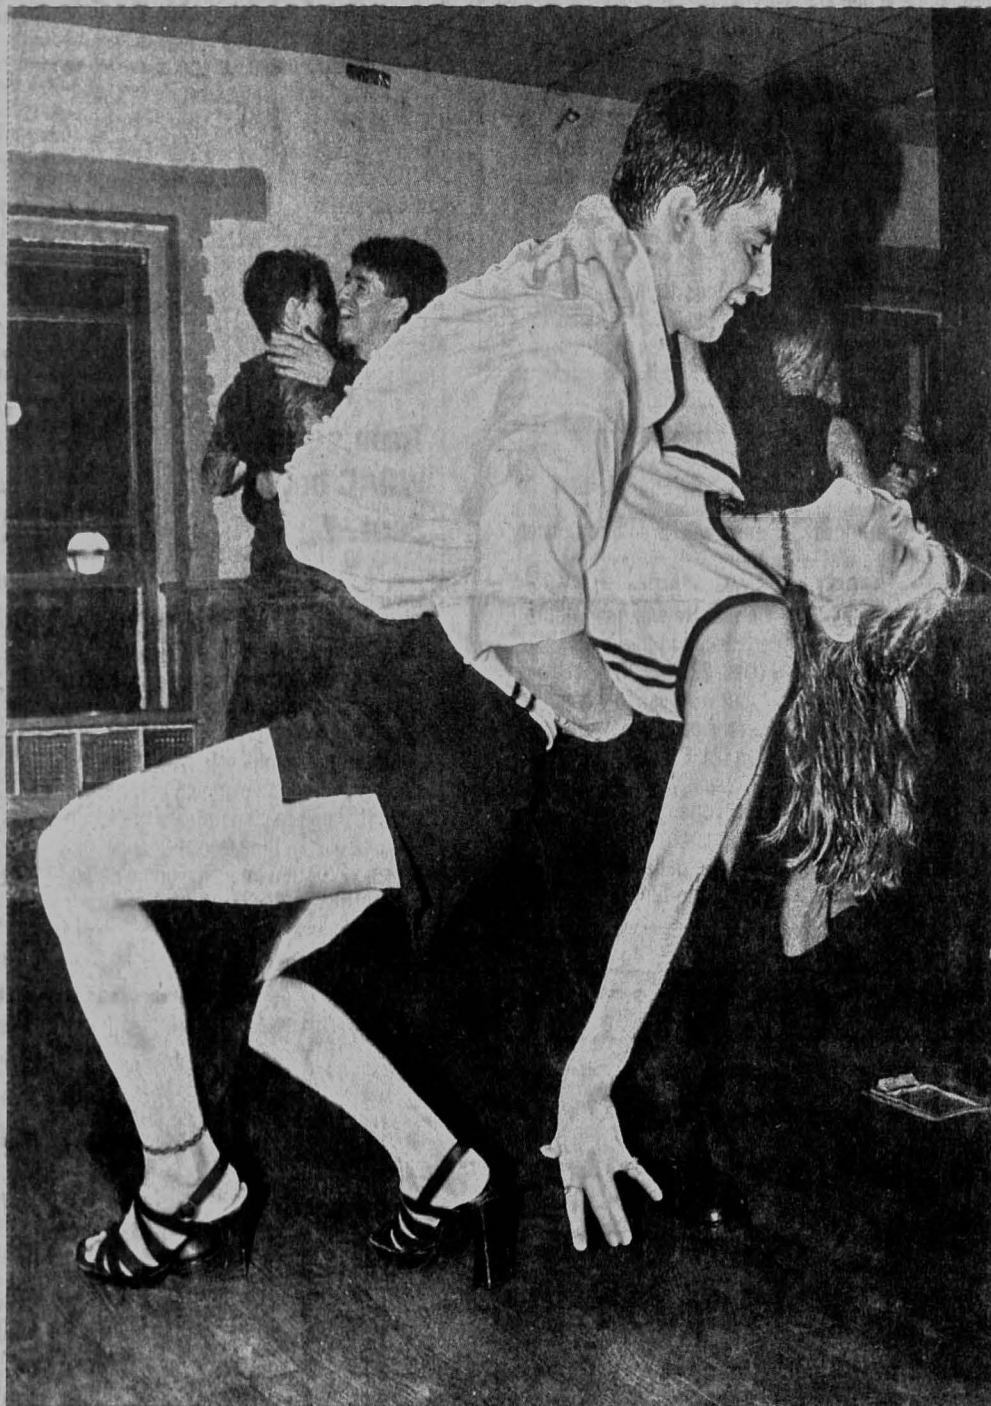

"As you get involved in different things, you become more open automatically because you are around more people," she said. "If you are not comfortable around all sorts of people at first, you get used to it. Then diversity kind of falls into play."

UI sophomore Dara Hickman feels that the study's results accurately portray her peers and herself.

"I think the majority of African Americans are open to diversity," she said. "There are a few who can be

Dancing Latino with gusto

■ Trend has students dancing up a tormenta.

By Heather Pavnica

The horns blare, the drums pound and the rhythm entices her to her feet.

Wearing high heels, a long, slit black skirt with a deep red sleeveless top, she snatches her partner and whirls onto the floor to intimately shake her hips to the Latin-American beat.

Kate Obert, a UI senior, is one of many who is not shy, can dance effortlessly to a six-count beat, and has fallen in love with the new Latin dance craze that has hit Iowa City.

Sarah Hoeck, a UI senior who recently attended Latin dance night at the Green Room, 509 S. Gilbert St., for the first time, said salsa dancing was different from the regular Iowa City dance scene.

"You are sitting in your chair, and it is enticing," she said. "The beat calls you out there, and you just want to dance. If it is becoming a craze, good. It is fun."

"I think in a few years, every club you go to will have Latin dance," said Martin Arellano, a Davenport

UI students going up in smoke, study finds

■ Iowa's college-age citizens are more likely to smoke than national citizens in the same age group.

By Dana Ritzmann
The Daily Iowan

Though there are fewer smokers in Iowa than in the rest of the nation, per capita, college-aged students are more apt to light up in the tall corn state.

A report released by the federal Centers for Disease Control Tuesday found that nationally, 24.7 percent of the population were smokers in 1997; 23.1 percent of Iowans smoked. However, 30.4 percent of Iowa's 18- to 24-year-olds were smokers in 1997, compared with 24.8 percent nationwide.

"I was quite taken aback," said Janet Zwick, director of substance abuse and health promotion of the Iowa Department of Public Health.

The rate is even higher for UI students — 41 percent, according to a 1997 health interest and practice survey of Health Iowa.

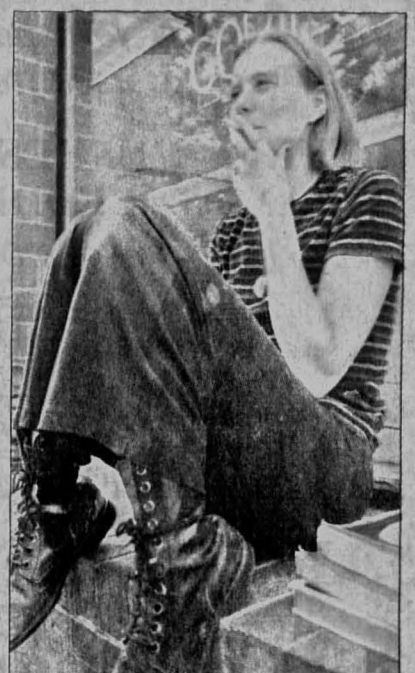

"Since I got here, I've seen a lot of people who smoke," said UI freshman Jerry Praynds, who is a smoker. "I guess it's probably because there are so many college students in Iowa City."

Zwick said she can't think of any specific reason for this problem but that there are several things that can be done.

"We clearly need to take a look at different things that could be responsible for the abuse," she said. "We have to make sure laws are enforced that limit access of teens buying tobacco. We also need to build smoking in a health curriculum in school and communities."

At the UI, Health Iowa is educating students about the hazards caused by smoking.

"We believe that people are aware of the harm that smoking does to their health," said Pat Ketcham, coordinator of Health Iowa.

Classes to aid in quitting smoking and talks in the residence halls are some things it is doing, she said.

"I know a lot of people who smoke," said UI junior Elizabeth Wehrle. "But I never saw the need to start smoking, so I don't have to battle with quitting."

By fall 2000, the UI is planning to implement a substance-free policy in its residence halls, which would include banning tobacco use. Currently 75 percent of dorm floors allow smoking, said Maggie Van Oel, director of the residence services.

"By next fall, they should be totally smoke-free," she said. "It becomes a concern of more and more students living next to smokers."

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Michael Bolton's charitable foundation has increased its rate of giving after criticism of its performance.

New financial reports show that

Michael Bolton Charities Inc. increased its rate of charitable giving to nearly 69 percent last year.

Financial statements had earlier revealed that only 15 percent of the $2.5 million collected after expenses in 1995 went directly to organizations the singer's charity was created to help.

"We're still a young organization, and we're still learning," said Jacqueline Smaga, the foundation's executive director.

The charity funded 18 nonprofit organizations whose mission is to serve women and children who are at-risk.

ShopKo wins gold for Olympics

The company raises more than $160,000 for Special Olympics Iowa.

By Leah Reinstein
The Daily Iowan

The 1999 ShopKo Golf Classic raised more than $2 million for Special Olympics this summer and donated some of it to Special Olympics Iowa Wednesday.

The check was presented by ShopKo store representatives from 13 states during a luncheon at the University Athletic Club, 1360 Melrose Ave., Wednesday.

Lyle Frondle, a Special Olympics Iowa participant and silver medal winner, was among those who accepted the $163,878 donation.

"It takes many people for this to become a reality," Frondle said. "Because ShopKo has continued to support the Special Olympics, I am able to have new uniforms and equipment."

Continued financial support has made it possible for Frondle and others to participate in the Special Olympics at no cost.

annual charity golf tournament in Green Bay, Wis., raises funds to distribute evenly among its stores in 19 states. This year marked the largest single contribution given in the history of Special Olympics Iowa.

"Twenty years ago, somebody said, 'Let's go play golf.' ShopKo's golf tournament is now the largest single fund-raiser for Special Olympics in the world," said Terry McDonald, the company's senior vice president of marketing.

UISG lays out plans for school year

The student government hopes to better utilize student input this year.

By Gil Levy
The Daily Iowan

In the upcoming year, UI Student Government members say they will be finding new and better ways to interact with the people they represent.

"We're all really excited about this year," said UISG President Lana Zak.

One of the most important issues the UISG is working on in addition to student-UISG relationships, Zak said, is strengthening the relationship between students and Iowa City.

"They're part of the community," she said. "We want to work closely with the city of Iowa City to help form a common bond between students and other Iowa City residents."

Relations between students and the community is only one of many projects for the upcoming year, Zak said.

Other projects on the year's agenda include enabling students to charge parking in UI ramps to their U-Bills, expanding registration on ISIS and making it more user-friendly, and a "save the libraries" campaign.

"There are a lot of things that will make student life easier," Zak said. "We want to be service-oriented and friendly."

Other students feel the UISG's desire to upgrade ISIS comes at a perfect time, said UI graduate student Kwesi Dunston.

"I think the student government should change policies to make computer resources readily accessible to a higher number of students," he said. "Better off-campus connections through the Web would be nice, too."

UI schmoozes international students

President Coleman and other officials welcome the students with a reception.

By Chris Rasmussen
The Daily Iowan

UI President Mary Sue Coleman played the role of host at the President's Reception for first-year international students Wednesday.

"She's very nice — like a mother," said graduate student Hind Al-Abadleh of Jordan.

First-year students and UI administrators mingled at Wednesday's informal reception, allowing students a rare opportunity to meet those who run the UI.

"It's just to welcome the students, and allow them the chance to get to know university officials and meet me," Coleman said.

Coleman circled the room, spoke individually to every student in attendance and posed for a number of photographs.

The students, like Shani Vishal of India, have been getting a feel for Iowa City since arriving in the area.

"I took a map from the IMU and got used to it after a couple of week," Vishal said.

The winter will cause a few transportation problems for Li Young of China.

"I ride my bicycle from Coralville; it's about 20 minutes," he said. "In the winter I will have to take a bus."

Both students said they like Iowa City so far.

In place of the "formalities" of orientation were jokes, refreshments and photographers. The UI had professional photographers on hand to take photos of students posing with Coleman.

CITY BRIEF

Suspect causes injury to public safety officer

A UI Public Safety officer was injured early Wednesday morning while trying to handcuff an allegedly intoxicated suspect.

Bradley Schnathorst, 20, was causing a disturbance at 100 S. Dubuque St., just before 2 a.m. Wednesday, according to court documents. When the Public Safety officer attempted to stop Schnathorst, he tried to run, the documents said.

After the officer caught Schnathorst and was attempting to handcuff him, he continued to resist, causing an injury to the officer's hand, said Chuck Green, director of Public Safety.

"The report doesn't say the extent of the officer's injury, but he will be off duty for a little while," Green said.

Schnathorst, 932 S. Van Buren St., was charged with interference with official acts, interference with official acts causing injury and public intoxication.

Schnathorst was unavailable for comment.

Top Bosnian Serb general arrested for war crimes

■ The Austrian police arrest the Bosnian Serb chief of staff in Vienna, where he was attending a conference.

By Anthony Deutsch
Associated Press

THE HAGUE, Netherlands — Austrian police arrested the top Bosnian Serb military commander Wednesday on U.N. charges of persecuting Bosnian Croats and Muslims in a bloody 1992 ethnic purge, the Yugoslav war crimes tribunal announced.

Gen. Momir Talic, chief of staff of the Bosnian Serb army, was charged in a sealed indictment with crimes against humanity, "namely persecutions on political, racial or religious grounds," tribunal chief prosecutor Louise Arbour told reporters in The Hague.

Talic would be the highest-ranking Serb military official tried by the tribunal, spokesman Jim Landale said. If convicted, he would face a maximum sentence of life imprisonment.

Austrian authorities made the arrest Wednesday after a tip from the tribunal that Talic was attending a conference at the Austrian National Defense Academy on how to merge Bosnian Serb forces and forces from the Muslim-Croat federation into a national army.

The indictment, which also charges former Bosnian Serb deputy prime minister Radislav Brdjanin, accuses the two of ordering, implementing and assisting "a plan designed to expel the Bosnian Muslim, Bosnian Croat and other non-Serb populations." Brdjanin was arrested on July 6 and is in the tribunal's custody.

The two men are charged with leading a campaign aimed at driving 100,000 non-Serbs from the Prijedor and Sanski Most regions of northwest Bosnia. Tribunal prosecutors allege that Serb forces under the command of Talic and Brdjanin terrorized Muslims and Croats into fleeing those areas and that those who didn't leave were driven out by force. Hundreds were killed.

"Some of the greatest ethnic cleansings were committed in Bosnia directly under Talic's command," Amor Masovic, head of the Muslim Commission for Missing Persons, told the Associated Press.

Masovic said his commission discovered the largest number of Bosnia's mass graves in Krajina in northwest Bosnia, an area controlled by Talic during the war.

The graves contained the remains of more than 1,500 Muslims. Another 188 bodies were found in a mass grave in one of Talic's wartime barracks in the village of Laniste, he said.

Masovic said the area had some of the most infamous concentration camps commanded by the Bosnian Serb troops.

Talic, appointed military chief of staff in February 1998, was a leading military commander during the Bosnian conflict.

Talic's indictment had been kept secret to give authorities a chance to arrest him, the tribunal said. It said it would unseal the indictment and make details public late Wednesday or today.

Turkey to revamp building codes

■ In the wake of last week's devastating earthquake, the government promises tighter controls.

By Selcan Hacaoglu
Associated Press

ISTANBUL, Turkey — Turkey's prime minister has promised stricter building rules to prevent any more of the shoddy construction that has been blamed for the thousands of deaths from last week's massive earthquake.

Meanwhile, eight days after the powerful 7.4-magnitude temblor reduced a wide swath of western Turkey to rubble, searchers said they still held out hopes — though slim — that more people could be found alive. The government said Tuesday the death toll rose to 17,997 but revised that figure to 12,514 early Wednesday.

In Cinarcik, a suburb of the resort town of Yalova, rescuers rushed to the site of a collapsed building after residents reported hearing sounds from under the crushed concrete.

Lt. Col. Numan Arslanyer, head of the crisis center in Yalova, said four brothers were believed buried in the building, and that Turkish, Bulgarian and German rescuers were working intensively to dig them out.

"We have not lost hope to find people alive, and we will not lose hope," he said Wednesday. The last live rescue was Monday, when a 4-year-old boy was saved.

Even more than a week after the quake, counting the dead was proving a difficult task. An official at the government's crisis center in Ankara, speaking on condition of anonymity, said a mistake had been made while entering data into a computer, resulting in the erroneous report that nearly 18,000 people had died.

Two days of rain have deepened the misery of the estimated 200,000 people left homeless by the quake, many of whom have complained bitterly that the government has been slow in responding to the crisis. Turkey's leaders defended their actions.

Many of the buildings that collapsed like houses of cards in the quake were built with concrete that had been mixed with ordinary sea sand.

"Mistakes have been made in the past with regard to the unofficial control of constructions ... and we are determined as a government to take the necessary steps," said the prime minister, without elaborating.

Wednesday, the Anatolia news agency quoted one major building contractor as acknowledging he used sea sand in his concrete. He said he hadn't understood the dangers.

"I don't have a contractor's license — I am not a builder," the report quoted contractor Veli Gocer as saying. He said nearly one-sixth of the 3,000 apartment units he built had collapsed in the quake.

Veli spoke to Anatolia from in hiding, but told the agency he would surrender to police when passions calmed.

Overwhelmed by the crisis, Turkey has appealed for aid, including disinfectants, tetanus vaccines, bungalows, tents, flashlights, blankets, heavy machinery for clearing rubble and garbage trucks.

FBI admits using incendiary tear gas at Waco

■ The agency still maintains that the Branch Davidians started the fire that ended the 51-day standoff.

By Alice Ann Love
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The FBI, reversing a 6-year-old course, admitted Wednesday night that its agents may have fired some potentially inflammable tear gas canisters on the final day of the 1993 standoff with the Branch Davidian cult near Waco, Texas.

"We continue to believe that law enforcement did not start the fire," said FBI spokesman John Collingwood. "But we regret previous answers to Congress and to the public (about possible use of inflammatory devices) ultimately may prove to be inaccurate."

Although some questions remain unanswered, Collingwood said, "all available indications are that those rounds were not directed at the main, wooden compound" in which cult leader David Koresh and many of his followers died during a fire that broke out about noon during the FBI's final assault on April 19, 1993.

"The rounds did not land near the wooden compound, and they were discharged several hours before the fire started," Collingwood said.

Attorney General Janet Reno and FBI Director Louis J. Freeh ordered an inquiry into the circumstances under which military-type tear gas canisters were fired. Freeh assigned 40 FBI agents to the review and ordered everyone at the Waco scene re-interviewed. Collingwood said the inquiry could be completed in weeks.

Two officials, speaking on the condition of anonymity, suggested that the information about the military canisters might not have been relayed to top FBI and Justice officials earlier because the original questions about Waco concerned the fire in the wooden main building and the canisters were fired long before the fire broke out. They also were fired almost 180 degrees away from the building that burned.

On Capitol Hill, Republicans promised new congressional inquiries.

"If federal officials have been lying about these elements of the siege, their testimony on other matters should also be examined," said Rep. Bob Barr, R-Ga., who called for hearings by House Government Reform Committee.

That panel's chairman, Rep. Dan Burton, R-Ind., said, "I am deeply concerned by these inconsistencies ... I intend for the committee to get to the bottom of this."

Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, who chairs a subcommittee that oversees the FBI, said, "This is a serious development in terms of further erosion of the FBI's credibility."

Answers prepared by the FBI's Hostage Rescue Team to questions submitted recently by lawyers for Waco families and survivors suing the government "suggest pyrotechnic devices may have been used in the early morning of April 19, 1993," Collingwood said.

"The FBI may have used a very limited number of military-type CS gas canisters on the morning of April 19 in an attempt to penetrate the roof of an underground bunker 30 to 40 yards away from the main Branch Davidian compound," he said.

"Unlike the civilian tear gas that was used by the FBI in far greater quantities that day, the military canisters may have contained a substance that is designed to disperse the gas using a pyrotechnic mixture," Collingwood said.

For six years, the FBI and top Justice Department officials have categorically insisted that no incendiary devices were used by the FBI on April 19.

Tourist jumps to his death

■ The third suicide in eight days has some talking about the connection between suicide and gambling.

By John Curran
Associated Press

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — A German tourist jumped to his death off a 10-story casino parking garage Wednesday in the third such suicide in Atlantic City in eight days.

The man, whose name was not immediately released, resisted the pleas of a security guard who tried to talk him down from the ledge of the Resorts Atlantic City garage.

On Aug. 17, a gambler who had lost $87,000 jumped to his death off a Trump Plaza roof. On Monday, a dealer at Caesars Atlantic City Hotel Casino committed suicide by leaping off the casino's parking garage.

It wasn't clear if the most recent victim had been gambling. He left no suicide note.

Some experts blame casino gambling for higher suicide rates.

In 1997, a University of California-San Diego sociology professor issued a report linking gambling to suicides. But the pro-casino American Gaming Association responded with a study asserting that suicides in Atlantic City, Las Vegas and other gambling resorts "are about average compared with non-gaming areas."

Edward Looney, executive director of the New Jersey Council on Compulsive Gambling, said problem gamblers sometimes see suicide as the only way out.

"There are two things that happen to a compulsive gambler in the desperation stage," he said. "One is illegal activity, or stealing to get money or writing bad checks. Once they go through that money and can't gamble anymore, suicide becomes an alternative."

White man beaten, dragged in S.D.

■ The local sheriff labels it a hate crime; relatives of the victims don't seem to know for sure.

By Joe Kafka
Associated Press

MARTIN, S.D. — A white man was beaten, kicked in the head, and left for dead with a rope around his neck on an Indian reservation in what the sheriff described as a hate crime. Three American Indians were arrested.

The FBI and federal prosecutors said it was too early to label the assault a hate crime, though they're not ruling it out. Relatives of the victim and one of the suspects blamed alcohol, not race.

Brad Young, 21, lay in critical condition Wednesday. He was found early on Aug. 22, approximately seven hours after he was beaten on the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation.

Louis Means and Byron Bissonette, both 18, pleaded innocent Wednesday to federal charges of assault resulting in serious bodily injury. The charges are federal because the crime happened on the reservation.

A 17-year-old juvenile was also taken into custody. Sheriff Russel Waterbury told Brad was well-liked by Indians and whites. They were out doing things they shouldn't have been doing. It's the times. Kids are out doing things they shouldn't do.

— Nancy Neuharth,
Young's aunt

local newspapers and TV that the crime was racially motivated; he did not return calls Wednesday to the Associated Press.

Waterbury said Young had been pulled around a field by the rope around his neck and was severely cut and barely recognizable because he had been kicked in the face by people wearing steel-toe boots.

The sheriff said the three suspects had been partying with Young the night of the attack and that Young had bought them alcohol.

Young's mother, Carol Bucholz of Lexington, Neb., said her son's left ear was almost torn off and his right ear badly damaged. She said that he suffered head injuries but that there was no sign of brain damage.

"They dragged him all over that field and left him to die," said Lila York, Young's cousin. "It's out of hatredness. Why else would anybody do that?"

But Young's aunt, Nancy Neuharth, said she doubts whether the assault was race-related.

"Brad was well-liked by Indians and whites," she said. "They were out doing things they shouldn't have been doing. It's the times. Kids are out doing things they shouldn't do."

The three had been drinking and got into an argument, said Bissonette's uncle, Arthur Has No Horses, who said he had talked to his nephew. "He said it all started from an argument over Brad's wife," he said.

In 1998, a black man was chained to a pickup truck and dragged to death along a road in Jasper, Texas. Three white men were charged with killing James Byrd Jr.

NATION BRIEF

Letter carriers cited for rescues

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Massachusetts mail carrier who rescued an elderly man being attacked by two dogs was named Hero of the Year by the National Association of Letter Carriers.

The award, which was announced Wednesday, will be presented to Donna Cutler of Sudbury on Sept. 14. On Nov. 25, 1998, Cutler turned a corner in her mail truck and saw two dogs atop Joseph Klein, who had suffered a dozen bites to his head, arms and legs, the union reported. Cutler used a mail tray to push the dogs away and free Klein.

The union also announced three regional heroes:

- Brenda Waldon of Dallas, Ga., who used a broomstick to rescue a toddler from an attacking dog in Smyrna, Ga., last October.

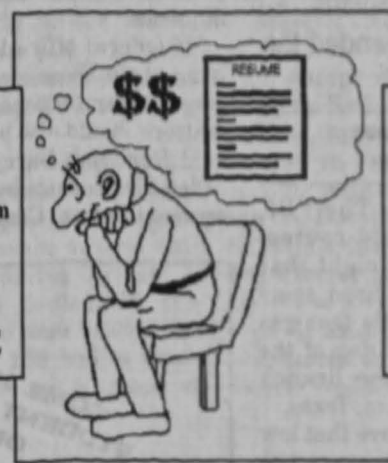

- Patrick Kowalczyk of Waterloo, Ill., who grabbed a 5-year-old boy from the path of a driverless runaway car in St. Louis on Jan. 27.

- Paul Romero of Amarillo, Texas, who ran to the scene of a highway accident on April 12 and pulled an injured motorcyclist from beneath his bike just before it was engulfed in flames.

Drug bust hits airline workers employees." "This is a company with zero tolerance for illegal drugs," said Larry Wansley, American's managing director of corporate security. Many of the defendants face life in prison if convicted. In the past several months, the airline has also suffered a fatal crash in Arkansas that raised safety questions, been sued for predatory pricing, and been hit with labor unrest that inconvenienced thousands of passengers. American officials admit to feeling besieged, but defend their performance.

"It would be totally unfair to draw any conclusions by linking any of these events," spokesman John Hotard said. "This is an industry, and an airline that lends itself to always being in the public eye, and many times, not in a favorable light."

In addition to 30 American employees, 13 current or former employees of LSG/Sky Chefs, a food service contractor owned by Lufthansa Airlines, were indicted in the sting. Also indicted were an Immigration and Naturalization Service agent, an inspector with the U.S. Department of Agriculture and a Broward County sheriff's deputy who worked part-time as a baggage handler.

"Because it was an undercover operation, it's hard to judge, but they were making lots of money doing this, more than their salaries," said Drug Enforcement Administration spokesman Brent Eaton.

The drugs, which included bogus cocaine and heroin supplied by agents, were smuggled in airline food carts, garbage bags and backpacks by uniformed workers who eluded metal detectors and airport X-rays.

Having chosen to attend the UI instead of Howard University, a predominately black school, freshman Crystal Brayboy said she had her doubts about the study's findings.

"People are really open here, always talking and smiling," she said. "I heard that (Howard) wasn't diverse, which is too bad, because I think diversity can only make life better."

The Flowers' and Pascarella's results were published in the July/August issue of the Journal of College Student Development. Flowers will have another study published in an upcoming issue of the same journal comparing students at historically black colleges with students at other schools for cognitive growth.

The house is currently leased by John Phipps, operator of the Varsity House. Nine students live in the private dormitory, he said.

Phipps said he hopes Omicron will lease the building to him until the Delta Tau Delta chapter is able to start over.

The residents of Varsity House will not be homeless, regardless of the house's future. Manfull said that if Omicron decides to sell, it would be months before the sale closes.

Phipps said Varsity House will exist, either in its current location or somewhere else.

Latin dance trend sweeps I.C. off its feet

resident who has been dancing for 12 years.

Some say this year's craze is not unlike last year's swing dance trend. They say increased interest in Latin dance could be attributed to singers Jennifer Lopez and Ricky Martin.

Obert, who was inspired to learn how to Latin dance after watching the movie Dance with Me, agreed that Latino pop singers have inspired the new trend.

Some hot spots for Latin dancing in Iowa City include the Green Room on Tuesday nights and Maxie's, 1920 Keokuk St., on Thursday nights.

Many who have fallen in love with Latin dance after visiting these bars turned to Modei Akyea, a UI senior and Latin dance instructor who teaches free Latin dance lessons on Sundays from 6-8 p.m. in Room 462, Field House, as part of the UI Latin American Dance Club.

Akyea, who teaches such dances as the salsa, samba and bachata, leads a 20-person class. Participants do not need a partner or dance shoes, he said.

At a Sunday dance lesson, beginning dancer Mike Rupert said salsa dancing is an addiction.

"Salsa is a lot of fun, but it is like dancing with your sister," he said. "Salsa has the same energy, but it is more sensual. (With swing) there is a little bit of flirtation, but salsa is a lot more intimate."

Akyea agreed that Latin dancing is a social endeavor.

"In the salsa culture, if you ask a person to dance twice in a row, that means you are interested in that person," he said. "You speak through body language, hand movement and eye contact. You make them (your dance partner) feel like you are dancing with only them."

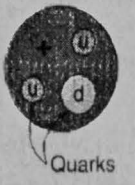

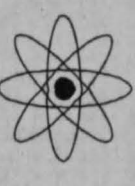

Although there is no particular Latin dance attire, Amanda Sanchez, a participant in the Latin American Dance Club, said clothes make a difference during a night on the town.

"The first time I went, I dressed in jeans, and everybody at Maxie's was dressed up like they were going to prom or homecoming," she said.

Sanchez said most people get hooked on Latin dance from the start. "If you watch it, you'll know why. It is so fun."

What's in a name? - drug mix-ups

■ The FDA has received nearly 100 reports of errors by health professionals because of drug names.

By Phil Galewitz
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Celebrex, the hot-selling new arthritis pill, sounds a lot like Celexa, a depression treatment, and Cerebyx, an anti-seizure drug. And it's not just patients who are confused.

Since Celebrex was launched in January, federal regulators have received 95 reports of errors by doctors and pharmacists in dispensing Celebrex — problems blamed on health professionals confusing the painkiller with similarly named drugs.

None of the cases involve serious injury or death. But the two companies who jointly sell Celebrex — Monsanto Co. and Pfizer Inc. — have recently started trying to clear up the confusion with an educational campaign aimed at doctors and pharmacists.

"This is an accident waiting to happen," said Hedy Cohen, vice president of nursing at the Institute for Safe Medication Practices, a Huntington Valley, Pa., nonprofit group that tracks medication errors. "It's a matter of time until a person that is already sick gets the wrong drug and the chance for a serious injury can occur."

This spring, Celebrex became the fastest-selling new drug ever, with approximately 9.3 million prescriptions written so far. It is on track to have more than $1 billion in sales this year and upwards of $4 billion by 2002, analysts say.

— Hedy Cohen,

Administration, only 22 cases involved a patient actually taking the wrong drug. With the rest, someone caught the error in time.

At the urging of the FDA, Monsanto and Pfizer have paid for advertisements in major medical journals to ensure doctors and pharmacists understand the difference between the sound-alike drugs and the need to verify they are giving out the right pill. The companies' marketing representatives are reinforcing the message during visits to doctors.

If the problem does not improve, the FDA could make the companies change the drug's name, which, analysts say, could threaten sales. Monsanto has already changed the drug's name once, from Celebra, after federal regulators said it sounded too much like other medications.

"We are still concerned about the problem," said Jerry Phillips, an FDA official who assesses the risk of drugs that already have reached the market. "This is a significant number of errors."

Medical experts say reports to the FDA generally represent a small proportion of the errors that occur because the reporting system is voluntary. But Monsanto officials said more mixups occur with Celebrex because the drug is so popular, and they stressed the number of actual medication errors is a very small percentage of the prescriptions written.

Celexa is made by Forest Laboratories and Cerebyx by Warner-Lambert.

Heroin passes cocaine in abuse centers

■ According to a report, heroin use is up 29 percent, and cocaine use is down 17 percent.

By Laura Meckler
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The number of Americans checking into treatment centers for heroin and other opiates has surpassed those seeking help for cocaine, the government reported Wednesday, offering further evidence of heroin's spread.

The rise is fueled by users who snort and smoke heroin — proof, experts say, these methods can be just as addictive as injecting the drug with needles.

The number of treatment center admissions for heroin and other opiates rose by 29 percent — from 180,000 to 232,000 — between 1992 and 1997, the report found.

But there was some good news about cocaine: In the same five-year period, admissions for the drug declined by 17 percent, from 267,000 to 222,000, the report said.

Alcohol abuse remains the most common reason people seek help, although it is not as dominant as it once was, according to the annual report of treatment trends by the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration, a branch of the Department of Health and Human Services.

While other surveys indicate that marijuana is by far the most popular illegal drug, it accounted for just 13 percent of admissions to treatment centers in 1997.

The report, which includes data from nearly two-thirds of the nation's drug and alcohol admissions, also details demographic and geographic trends. It found that heroin treatments were concentrated in the Far West and Northeast. Methamphetamine, meanwhile, has spread from the West into the nation's heartland.

Approximately 16 percent of the 1.5 million treatment admissions in 1997 were for heroin and other opiates, compared with 15 percent for cocaine, marking the first time since 1992 that heroin surpassed cocaine.

"People who are using heroin are discovering it is, in fact, a dangerous drug," said Dr. H. Westley Clark, director of the Center for Substance Abuse Treatment at the health department.

ISU prof loses on damaged house

While the professor was on leave, his house was rented to two students.

Associated Press

AMES — Story County supervisors say they will not pay for $5,000 in damages that an Iowa State University professor says were done to his home by police during a drug raid.

Supervisors said Scott Consigny should ask someone else to pay for the damage from the raid by the Central Iowa Drug Task Force, which includes a Story County sheriff's deputy.

Consigny says police kicked in the doors of his home, smashed doorknobs, and tossed his furniture in search of drugs. He had rented his home to two tenants while he was on academic leave in the spring.

Officials say Consigny is not under investigation.

Consigny didn't know about the raid or the damage until he returned home in early June. The house was "a complete shambles," he said.

Papers filed in Story County District Court said the tenants, who have since moved, were under investigation for distributing cocaine. Neither has been arrested.

Members of the Central Iowa Drug Task Force defended their actions. A search warrant allowed them to break into the home — a common practice during drug raids.

Court records show police found a gun, a marijuana pipe and evidence of a marijuana-growing operation when they raided the home on April 14.

Supervisor Fred Mathison said Consigny should talk to members of the Ames City Council because his home is in the city and Ames officers are on the task force.

Assistant County Attorney Rod Reynolds encouraged supervisors to wait for the Iowa Supreme Court to decide a similar case that also is from Story County.

That case involves Ames landlord Jim Kelley, who said the county should pay for more than $1,000 in damage caused in 1997 when deputies damaged doors during a search of a house he owns.

While on leave, Consigny turned his home over to CyCom Property Management in Ames. The company rented the house, which Consigny has owned for 21 years in a neighborhood popular among ISU professors.

Williams would find missing time costly

Ricky Williams is not deterred by his recent injury and hopes to play in the Saints' season opener.

By Mary Foster
Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — When Ricky Williams signed an incentive-laden contract with the New Orleans Saints, doubters scoffed at his ever reaching the levels that would trigger big payoffs. And that was before the Heisman Trophy winner pulled up lame in the first exhibition game.

Williams will miss Saturday's exhibition game against Green Bay with what doctors call a "high left ankle sprain" suffered Aug. 13 against Miami. Coach Mike Ditka said he expects Williams to be ready for the season opener Sept. 12 against Carolina.

But even if he isn't healthy for that game, Williams said Wednesday, he isn't worried about his chances of meeting the goals in his contract. "Not at all," Williams he said. "Fourteen games, 16 games, it doesn't matter."

Williams got an $8.8 million signing bonus, but earning the bulk of the $68.4 million available in his seven-year contract will require seven huge seasons. This year alone, he would have to rush for more than 1,600 yards and score 24 touchdowns — half rushing, half receiving. He would have to average 4.5 yards a carry.

And that's not all, the contract has 25 other performance targets worth $50,000 each, up to a $500,000 cap.

Rushing for 1,601 yards would earn Williams $1 million. That mark has only been reached nine times in the NFL in this decade, by five players — Terrell Davis, Jamal

McCann to start against Nebraska

Iowa sophomore Kyle McCann has edged out Scott Mullen and Randy Reiners for Iowa's top spot this fall.

By Greg Wallace
The Daily Iowan

Coach Kirk Ferentz announced Wednesday that he has selected Kyle McCann to be the team's starting quarterback for Iowa's Sept. 4 opener against Nebraska.

"I'm real excited and happy," McCann said. "I put a lot of time and effort into this."

The 6-foot-5 sophomore played in eight games last season, starting five of them. He completed 54-percent of his passes for 1,179 yards and two scores, becoming the first freshman to lead Iowa in passing since quarterback coach Chuck Long in 1982. He moved into the starter's role after being listed second on the depth chart following the spring game.

"Kyle McCann has emerged as our number one quarterback," Ferentz said. "We have been impressed with the way all four of our upperclass quarterbacks have learned the offense, competed, and performed."

McCann won a three-way battle with junior Scott Mullen and senior Randy Reiners for the job. Mullen will back up McCann for the Nebraska game while Reiners serves an alcohol-related suspension. However, Reiners will step in as backup once his one-game suspension has ended.

McCann burst onto the scene last season with a 5-of-7, 148 yard, one touchdown performance against

Paterno's offense on rise

Penn State's voluntary practices have boosted its offense to another level this season.

By David Kinney
Associated Press

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. — Every Tuesday and Thursday night this summer on Penn State's outdoor practice turf, Drill 6 was serious business.

So serious that just about every player showed up for a voluntary passing drill they had skipped in summers past. So serious that players reported no-shows to Joe Paterno. "I've been here four years, and this is the best summer by far," said senior Derek Fox. "We had some summers, we'd cancel it, say 'We don't have enough guys, we don't have enough wideouts.'"

That kind of intensity is to be expected the year after your offense scores all of 12 points in three losses to Top-25 teams, after you score a meager six passing touchdowns all season long — and when your first opponent is No. 4 Arizona.

In Saturday's Pigskin Classic, the No. 3 Nittany Lions find out whether all the work pays off against a team returning nine starters from a defense that was the Pac-10's best.

Paterno said his offense had a good training camp.

"But I think it remains to be seen

Tarig Holman is ready for his final go on Iowa's veteran secondary

By Troy Shoem
The Daily Iowan

Tarig Holman already has mixed emotions about entering his senior year. He can't believe it'll be his last year in a Hawkeye uniform, but he's ready to get the year underway.

"This is my last go around and I don't want to have any regrets when the season is over," Holman said.

Holman is one of three seniors expected to start in the secondary. He intercepted three passes a year ago, including two against Michigan.

The season turned out to be his best, after overcoming a rocky start in college.

"I didn't know what to expect when I first came to Iowa," Holman said. "I wasn't sure how I would fit in."

One thing Holman didn't expect was sitting out his first two years after arriving at Iowa from Randolph, N.J. After redshirting in 1995, Holman injured his knee and didn't compete his freshman season.

"Having a lot of teammates from New Jersey helped me to adjust," he said.

He saw his first action in 1997. He played in all 12 games and collected 18 solo stops and six assists. His biggest game came in Iowa's 66-0 trouncing of Northern Iowa. Holman intercepted two passes to tie a single-game school record.

In 1998, Holman established himself as a mainstay in Iowa's starting lineup. He started 10 games at cornerback and finished sixth on the team with 60 tackles, including 47 solo stops and 13 assists.

He led the team with 10 pass breakups and tied for the team lead with three interceptions — two came against Michigan.

"I try to lead by example and just do what I have always done," Holman said. "We have had some great leaders the last couple of years."

Holman will be joined in the secondary with seniors Matt Bowen and Joe Slattery. The trio provide the most experienced unit on the Iowa team this season.

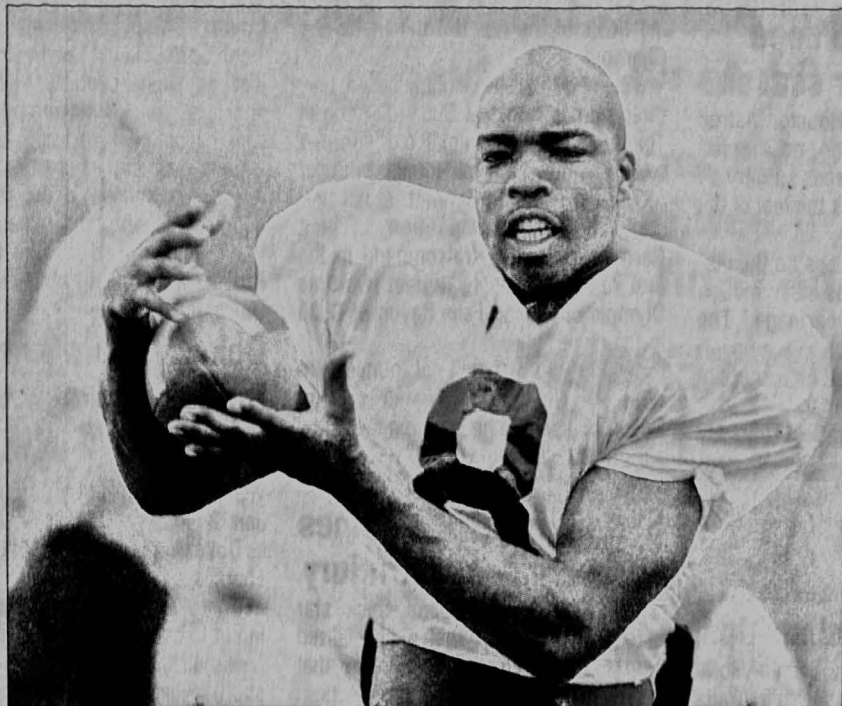

Junior Matt Stockdale is expected to be the only non-senior to start in the secondary. Last season, he started two games at cornerback and recorded 21 tackles. Surrounded by more experienced players, Stockdale has used them as motivation.

"Holman helps me a lot by putting pressure on me," Stockdale said. "He lets me know if I screw up."

Holman's duties will not be limited to defense. He will do most of the kick returning this year after the suspension of Kahlil Hill, last year's leading kick returner. Holman is ready for the extra responsibility.

"Having to stay on the field to return a punt after making a good defensive stand takes some getting used to, but I am looking forward to returning kicks," Holman said. "Special teams is one of the most important parts of the game. They win and lose ballgames."

Seles advances in straight sets; Novotna ousted

■ The third-ranked Seles needed just 12 minutes to win the first set.

By Donna Tommello
Associated Press

NEW HAVEN, Conn. — Monica Seles barely broke a sweat Wednesday in her first set against Elena Likhovtseva, then had to hang on against the Russian for a 6-0, 7-6 (8-6) second-round win at the Pilot Pen.

The 25-year-old Seles had a 3-1 edge over Likhovtseva in her career entering Wednesday and needed just 12 minutes to win the first set. But Likhovtseva found her touch and her legs in the second match, running down Seles cross-court returns and scoring on several drop shots.

"I knew Elena is a fighter. I knew she would come out," said Seles. "We could have gone to three sets very easily."

Seles, the third-seeded player and No. 5 in the world, said her biggest advantage was "not getting really frustrated when I let her back in the game."

Without a permanent coach since her father, Karolj, died last year, Seles has turned to a number of people to work on her game. The most recent is former pro Jimmy Arias, who lives about 25 minutes from Seles in Florida.

"He can relate to a lot of things," she said. "As a player he knows so much about the game. He also knows how my dad worked."

There were a couple of upsets on the day. Ruxandra Dragomir, of Romania, eliminated fourth-seed Jana Novotna 7-6 (7-5), 6-0.

Unseeded Amelie Mauresmo, of France, upset countrywoman and sixth-seeded player Julie Halard-Decugis, 6-1, 6-2 in their second round match. Fifth-seeded Amanda Coetzer advanced into the quarterfinals when Sabine Applemans retired due to a stomach virus.

Novotna has had few matches since the French Open, where she sprained her right ankle. She attributed the loss to lack of match play, limited movement and "a very poor variety of shots."

"I never gave her the opportunity to make a mistake," said Novotna. Dragomir saw things differently. "It was a good match, a lot of ups and downs," said Dragomir. "I think I won because I won all the important points."

Ludmila Engquist won her heat at the World Championships Wednesday.

Engquist keeps winning

By Howard Fendrich
Associated Press

SEVILLE, Spain — Among those most surprised by the success of hurdler Ludmila Engquist is the world and Olympic champion herself.

"I don't know how I got this far," the 35-year-old cancer patient said Wednesday after winning one of six heats at the World Championships and posting the best time of the day.

Still, the Russian-born Swede thinks a demanding schedule of four races in five days and the hearing Andalusian heat will take a toll on her. The quarterfinals are Thursday, with the semifinals Friday and the final Sunday.

"I am very realistic. I will try, but I don't think I can win," Engquist said of her prospects for a gold medal. "I would just like to be on the podium."

Competing between chemotherapy treatments for breast cancer, the two-time world champion and 1996 Olympic gold medalist had the fastest time in heats for the 100-meter hurdles.

That sounds amazing, and while Engquist sometimes wonders how she succeeds, part of her prescription is following orders — and that's not so difficult.

"Like my doctor said, 'You must lead your normal life,'" she said. "Normal life for me is to train and compete, and I did it."

The cancer was diagnosed in late March, and Engquist had surgery to remove her right breast on her birthday, April 21.

Doctors said it would be about six weeks before she could start exercising. But Engquist couldn't wait to return to her sanctuary — the track.

She continued to train through four chemotherapy sessions, and has two remaining — including one slated for next week.

Atlanta erases Cincinnati's momentum, completes the series sweep

Alan Mothner/Associated Press

Atlanta's Andruw Jones is congratulated at home plate by teammate Gerald Williams after his home run Wednesday.

ATLANTA (AP) — The Cincinnati Reds came to Atlanta as one of the NL's hottest teams. They aren't anymore.

Andruw Jones hit a three-run homer and Tom Glavine pitched seven strong innings as the Braves continued to dominate the Reds, competing a three-game sweep with a 5-2 victory.

Atlanta has a staggering 22-4 record against Cincinnati over the last three seasons, including six straight victories this year. Overall, the Braves have won seven in a row — their longest streak of the season.

The surprising Reds had won nine straight series before they arrived at Turner Field.

Mike Cameron led off the game with his 17th homer, but that was one of the few highlights for the Reds. Glavine (11-9) allowed just five hits — all singles — before Mike Remlinger and John Rocker each pitched a scoreless inning. Rocker earned his 28th save.

Phillies 15, Padres 1

PHILADELPHIA — Rico Brogna homered twice and had a career-high seven RBIs on Wednesday as Philadelphia routed San Diego for the second straight game.

Brogna was 4-for-5 for the second straight day and is 20-for-35 (.571) with 15 RBIs during an eight-game hitting streak. He is batting .359 in his last 34 games.

Mike Lieberthal hit his 27th homer, tying Darren Daulton's 1992 club record for a catcher.

Brewers 9, Dodgers 7

MILWAUKEE — David Nilsson hit a tiebreaking two-run double in the seventh inning, and the Milwaukee Brewers beat the Los Angeles Dodgers 9-7 Wednesday to stop a five-game losing streak.

After Eric Young's sacrifice fly and Mark Grudzielanek's RBI single off Erik Plunk (3-3) tied the score 7-all in the seventh, Mark Loretta doubled off Pedro Borbon (3-2) leading off the bottom half. Jeromy Burnitz walked and Nilsson doubled to right-center.

Giants 11, Cubs 5

CHICAGO — Barry Bonds homered three times as the San Francisco Giants swept the Chicago Cubs 11-5 and 6-5 Wednesday despite Sammy Sosa's major league-leading 52nd homer.

Bonds homered twice and drove in four runs in the opener, then added his 25th homer of the season, his eighth in the last 10 games. Marvin Benard and J.T. Snow also homered in the second game as the Giants extended their winning streak to seven.

Indians 12, Athletics 4

OAKLAND, Calif. — Manny Ramirez hit three of Cleveland's five home runs, and the Indians rebounded from a tough loss to beat Oakland 12-4.

Ramirez, who had 36 homers and a major league-leading 130 RBIs, had the second career three-homer game of his career. He hit solo shots off Mike Oquist (9-9) in the third and seventh innings, then hit a two-run shot off Jimmy Haynes in the eighth, a drive that landed in the second deck.

Omar Vizquel homered and doubled to drive in four runs, matching a season-high, and Jim Thome homered for the second time in as many games.

Mets 4, Astros 0

NEW YORK — Kenny Rogers won his 17th straight home decision and Robin Ventura hit a go-ahead, two-run single in the sixth inning to carry the New York Mets over the Houston Astros 4-0 Wednesday night.

Rogers (3-0) allowed seven hits in 8 1-3 innings, struck out five and walked two before Dennis Cook finished for his third save.

Rogers' streak dates to June 28, 1997, and is the longest since Frank Viola won 19 straight at Minnesota in 1987-88. Rogers' streak spans three teams — the New York Yankees, Oakland Athletics and Mets.

The Mets, who won for the 11th time in 15 games, remained 1 1/2 games behind Atlanta in the NL East but increased their lead to 3 1/2 games over Cincinnati in the wild-card race. Houston's NL Central lead over the Reds remained at 1 1/2 games.

Blue Jays 7, Angels 2

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Shannon Stewart extended his hitting streak to 23 games with a go-ahead single in the seventh inning and Jacob Brumfield added a three-run homer Wednesday to lead Toronto over Anaheim.

Carlos Delgado had a two-run homer for the Blue Jays, who began the day two games behind Boston and Oakland in the AL wild-card race.

Joey Hamilton (7-7) allowed both runs and four hits in seven innings, struck out five and walked three.

Expos 4, Cardinals 1

MONTREAL — Vladimir Guerrero hit his 31st homer to extend his hitting streak to 30 games — tying Arizona's Luis Gonzalez for the longest in the majors this season — as Montreal beat St. Louis 4-1 Wednesday night to complete a three-game sweep.

With Jose Vidro on second, Guerrero hit a 396-foot shot off Larry Luebbers (1-3) with one out in the first. After returning to the dugout, Guerrero came back on the field and tipped his cap to the crowd of 15,322 to acknowledge a lengthy standing ovation.

Diamondbacks 7, Marlins 2

MIAMI — Todd Stottlemyre got his first victory since coming back from a rotator cuff injury, scattering five hits over seven innings as the Arizona Diamondbacks beat Florida's Marlins 7-2 in the sixth inning, capped by a two-run single by Hanley Frias. Erubiel Durazo hit a solo homer and Jay Bell added two sacrifice flies as Arizona won its fifth straight game.

Arizona has won nine of 10 overall and 17 of 20 on the road. The NL West leaders are 26-7 since July 20, the best record in the majors during that span.

White Sox 6, Devil Rays 1

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Ray Durham went 4-for-5 with three doubles and three RBIs Wednesday night to lead the Chicago White Sox over the Tampa Bay Devil Rays 6-1.

Durham's two-run double off the top of the right-field wall gave the White Sox a 2-0 lead in the second. He added an RBI double in the fourth that made it 3-0.

Magglio Ordonez hit a two-run single in the eighth inning, giving him a team-high 99 RBIs. Chicago won for the 10th time in 14 games.

Loss of Hill not a hindrance

■ With last season's leading kick returner gone, Hawkeye coaches are looking for veterans to fill the void.

By Troy Shoen
The Daily Iowan

In a year full of question marks, one thing Kirk Ferentz feels pretty confident about is his special teams play.

Even with the absence of Kahlil Hill, last year's leading kick returner, the special teams should be one of the most solid corps of players on the field.

"We'll miss Kahlil's presence, and I hope upperclassmen can handle the kick return job," assistant coach Pat Flaherty said. "It is really a wide open area and when there is an opportunity like this one, good players will be ones who take advantage of that."

Hill, who was suspended for one year for an undisclosed violation of NCAA rules.

Ferentz was tight-lipped about the suspension, preferring to focus on Hill's replacement.

"Our players have dealt with the suspension," Ferentz said. "I want our team's focus to be on this year's team, and who we have playing."

The suspension has left Iowa without much experience at kick returner.

After Hill, the leading kick returner from a year ago is senior Tarig Holman. Holman returned six punts last year, averaging 10.8 yards each.

Flaherty will look at several veteran players including Holman, Joe Slattery, Matt Stockdale and Tim Dodge to fill the void left by Hill.

Although lack of experience may plague Iowa's returners, experience will not be a concern for Hawkeye punters.

"Special teams are a key segment for our team," Ferentz said. "We feel comfortable with the two kickers we have coming back."

Junior punter Jason Baker averaged 39.8 yards a punt a year ago and broke his own team record by kicking a 79-yard punt against Illinois.

While he feels comfortable in sending Baker out on the field, Ferentz hopes opponents don't force Iowa to punt the ball very often.

Both Baker and place kicker Tim Douglas are ready for whatever the season brings. Baker said he expects the kicking game to be even better than it was a year ago.

"Over the summer, the kickers and snappers have spent more time together as a group, and hopefully that will turn into more made field goals," Baker said. "Both Hayden Fry and Kirk Ferentz have placed a lot of importance on special teams."

Douglas also saw action on the field a year ago, sharing the field goal duties with Zach Bromert, who graduated in May.

Flaherty will look to Douglas to kick all of Iowa's field goals this season.

"Tim has a good mental frame of mind," Flaherty said. "He also has game experience which is very important for kickers to have."

Douglas tied an NCAA record last year by making three field goals of longer than 50-yards (58, 51, 51) during Iowa's win at Illinois last year.

He set a school record with the 58-yard kick in that game. In only one season, Douglas recorded three of the eight longest kicks in school history. He finished the season 6-of-11.

Marion Jones grimaces in pain as she lies on the track after pulling up injured in the 200-meter semifinal Wednesday.

No more gold for Jones

Marion Jones hurt her back during a race at the World Championships.

By Bert Rosenthal
Associated Press

SEVILLE, Spain — The World Championships are over for Marion Jones. The rest of the season could be in jeopardy, too.

Track and field's most high-profile woman's athlete crumbled on the track in agony Wednesday night, with serious back spasms and cramps.

As she fell during a semifinal heat of the 200 meters, a hush came over the crowd of 38,633 at Olympic Stadium.

Jones went down about 50 meters from the finish, clutching her lower back with her left hand, her face contorted in pain. From a sitting position, she rolled onto her back and was motionless before two doctors rushed to her aid.

She was placed on a gurney and rolled in the medical area. Her husband, C.J. Hunter, came down from the stands after slapping the air in anger over the injury.

Doctors worked over Jones at the stadium for about 2 1/2 hours, before she walked out slowly under her own power without speaking to the media. Plans to take her to a hospital were scrapped and she returned to her hotel, asking not to be disturbed.

Jones has captivated fans with her brilliant performances, her engaging personality, her determination to win an unprecedented four gold medals in this year's championships and her plan to win five golds in next year's Olympics.

Those championship aspirations got off to a rousing start when she won her second straight 100-meter title with the year's fastest time, 10.70 seconds. She had to settle for the bronze in the long jump, dashing her hope of four golds. She was the favorite in the 200 and was going to run a relay later in the week.

The daily grind of competing so often on the hard Mondo track might have taken a toll.

"It's a track built for one race," Emmanuel Hudson, manager of men's 100-meter champion Maurice Greene, said. "It's not a practice track. Marion hadn't had a day off since the championships began (last Saturday). That's a lot of work."

"She's been taking a beating on the track. It's for sure a long jump injury. Everyone forgets she's been training for the long jump all week."

The hot ticket

Movies set to begin fall blitz.

By Jeremy Erwin and Chris Hoffmann
The Daily Iowan

As the winds of change blow through to cool our evenings, the tendency for entertainment seekers is to head to the theater. And Hollywood has not let us down — with potential blockbusters appealing to viewers of all ages and ways of life.

The Muse
Aug. 27

A new, witty social satire from writer/director Albert Brooks. In addition to Brooks, the movie also stars Sharon Stone and Jeff Bridges, with music composed and performed by Elton John.

Prediction: It should leave a lasting impression in the hearts of romantic-comedy fans, especially with the sweet sounds of Elton John's boyish voice.

Outside Providence
Sept. 3

From the makers of There's Something About Mary comes this hilarious and straight-to-the-point tale of a boy's experiences growing up and becoming a man. The film stars Shawn Hatosy and Alec Baldwin.

Prediction: Sure to be a hit from every high school to every dorm room. The next thing to talk about after the sexually frustrated American Pie becomes redundant.

American Beauty
Sept. 15

Kevin Spacey and Annette Bening head the cast of this often-times hilarious look at contemporary life in suburban America. The film by award-winning theater director Sam Mendes marks his film debut.

Prediction: Your parents will probably love this movie.

For Love of the Game

Sept. 17
Kevin Costner and Kelly Preston star in this romantic drama. The film takes a deep look at the professional and personal passions of a legendary baseball pitcher nearing the end of his career.

Prediction: Perhaps one too many romantic leads for Mr. Costner.

Jacob the Liar
Sept. 24

Robin Williams plays a poor Jewish cafe owner in Nazi-occupied Poland during WWII. Williams tells fictitious news bulletins of Allied advances to keep hope and humor alive in the ghetto inhabitants.

Prediction: A real feel-good flick.

Three Kings
Oct. 1

The story of a group of American soldiers out to recover a treasure of gold in Iraq at the end of the Gulf War. Starring George Clooney, Mark Wahlberg and Ice Cube.

Prediction: Well, let's think now — do Marky Mark, Ice Cube and Dr. Ross have what it takes to conquer the armed forces of Iraq? We'll let the box office answer this one.

The Bone Collector
Oct. 1

Denzel Washington stars as a paralyzed forensics detective hot on the trail of a brutal serial killer. Teaming up with Emmy Award winner Angelina Jolie, a street-smart policewoman who serves as his eyes and ears, the pair sets out to capture the killer before he strikes again.

Prediction: Think paralysis is going to stop Denzel from starring in his first film without a highly predictable romantic twist? Think again, pal.

Superstar
Oct. 8

In another attempt at turning one of their long-running skits into box office millions, the folks at "Saturday Night Live" have created another silver screen star out of the beloved Mary Katherine Gallagher.

Prediction: With an ingenious plot that centers on Gallagher's bid to win a talent competition sponsored by Catholic Teen Magazine, as well as her quest to procure her first French kiss, this could be ... dare I say ... bigger than A Night at the Roxbury.

Fight Club
Oct. 15

Jack (Ed Norton), a corporate worker who tires of the materialism he sees around him, finds himself drawn into a dark world in which disillusioned, angry white males beat the crap out of each other. This outfit is led by the charismatic Tyler (Brad Pitt). Pitt reteams with his Seven director, David Fincher. This film was reportedly delayed because of its violence; originally a summer flick, it got pushed back almost three months. Also starring the lovely Helena Bonham Carter.

Prediction: "We can't tell anyone about the fight club ..."

Bringing Out the Dead
Oct. 22

Martin Scorsese directs this tale of a paramedic (Nicholas Cage) who is haunted by visions of those that he could not save. Paul Schrader, who wrote Taxi Driver for Scorsese, teams with Scorsese again to cover familiar territory. John Goodman, Patricia Arquette and Ving Rhames also star.

Prediction: Your head will be spinning from the trippy visuals and neurotic undertakings of the characters.

Being John Malkovich
Oct. 29

We are not making this up: John Cusack plays Craig, a man who has the uncanny ability to (for 15 minutes at a time) tap into actor John Malkovich's head. Directed by first-timer Spike Jonze (he made the Beastie Boys' "Sabotage" and Weezer's "Buddy Holly" videos).

Prediction: Ummm ...

Pokemon
Nov. 12

The first in what will most likely be a series of movies based on the cartoon that has everybody over the age of 10 baffled. This epic takes place in a make-believe world populated by 150 imaginary characters all named Pokemon, each possessing her or his own unique special powers and abilities. Remember that Japanese cartoon that suddenly induced vomiting and seizures in thousands of its viewers a couple of years back? Well heeere's Pokemon!

Prediction: Theaters full of foul-mouthed brats and parking lots overflowing with Dodge minivans are to be expected.

The Legend of Sleepy Hollow
Nov. 19

Johnny Depp is the De Niro to Tim Burton's Scorsese. This is their film together after Edward Scissorhands and Ed Wood. Depp's character is not named Edward in this latest offering from the director of Pee-wee's Playhouse. Depp plays Ichabod Crane, who journeys to upstate New York to investigate a series of grizzly murders in which all the victims have been beheaded. Christina Ricci also stars.

Prediction: A sure-fire hit among fans of gothic medieval tales of terror and romance.

Toy Story 2
Nov. 24

Picking up where its 1995 predecessor left off, Toy Story 2 is another intimate look at what toys REALLY do when nobody's there to catch them in the act. This time around, our hero, Woody, is snatched up by an obsessive toy collector, leaving Buzz Lightyear, Slinky Dog and a brigade of little green army men to save him from becoming a museum piece.

Prediction: Theaters full of slightly younger foul-mouthed brats. Still a crapload of minivans in the parking lots.

The Million Dollar Hotel
Dec. 24

After 20 or so years of penning the lyrics for one of the greatest bands in music history, it should be interesting to see how U2's Bono fared in writing his first screenplay. Mel Gibson takes the role of a federal agent set out to investigate the mysterious death of a billionaire's son who dies in a skid-row hotel. Milla Jovovich and Jimmy Smits co-star.

Prediction: Let's hope Bono has decided to spice up this stale plot with a few musical numbers.

Man on the Moon
Dec. 25

Jim Carrey and Courtney Love team up to portray the life of Andy Kaufman — arguably the most innovative and unpredictable comedian the world has ever seen.

The studio selected the release date, reportedly, to push Carrey for an Oscar. See The Truman Show for the results of this sort of effort.

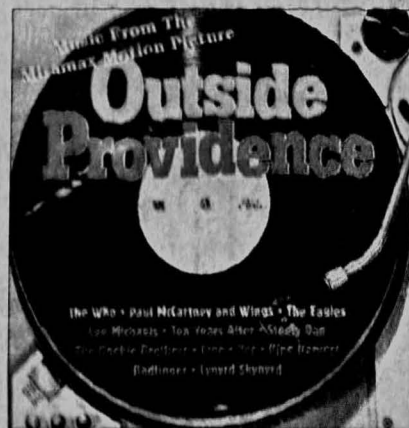

Prediction: A Merry Christmas for all moviegoers. Another great performance by Carrey, proving again his ability to play a serious role. As for Love ...

The 'tingle' of success

Kevin Williamson, the writer/director of Teaching Mrs. Tingle, rebounded from early disappointments.

By Ric Leyva
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Reliving his trauma has become a lucrative business for Kevin Williamson, the horror screenwriter and "Dawson's Creek" creator, who says much of his work is based on things that really happened to him.

It's definitely the case with his directorial debut, Teaching Mrs. Tingle. The fanciful tale of three high school students' revenge against a tyrannical teacher is based on a cruel school-marm who squashed Williamson's budding writing ambitions.

"She was so mean to me; she just hated me, and I never knew why," Williamson said. "She basically just tried to crush the dream, you know? She basically said, 'You'll never be a writer. Your voice should never be heard.'"

A similar academic drubbing a year or two later in a college writing class finished the job.

"They trashed me. And I said, 'There's the answer. No writing. I can't write.' And I gave up on it until, like, nine years later," said the 34-year-old Williamson, who bounced back to become one of the hottest screenwriters in Hollywood, penning Scream, I Know What You Did Last Summer, Scream 2, The Faculty and Halloween: H20.

But it was a long haul. He tried his hand at acting for a number of years before working on music videos, then was ready to give up on his Hollywood aspirations.

"I was severely unhappy because my life wasn't taking off, none of my dreams were coming true, nothing was happening for me," Williamson said. "So I made a deal with myself that I would leave the business and move out of L.A. and try to find something else to do."

"I was going to go take a real estate course, but before I did that I said I'd write a script and then just see. I always kept talking about it but I never did it, so I said, 'If you just write it and then fail, then there's your answer, yet again.' And I wrote Tingle. That's what happened."

He sold his first script, but it was never made into a movie — so it was a perfect choice for his directorial debut and a decided departure from horror for a storyteller eager to avoid type-casting.

"I certainly didn't want to be defined as the 'Horror Guy' the rest of my life," Williamson said. "And I also wanted to say to the world that I can create an adult character. I'm not just about teen-agers."

Furthering that effort, Williamson is writing an all-adult film he'll direct next year and has moved on from the WB network's "Dawson's Creek," which will continue without him, to a new TV series, the upcoming fall drama "Wasteland."

The politics of the Emmy

The presenters are winners in one high-profile show.

By Lynn Elber
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Let's say you're a star who failed to score an Emmy nomination. Or maybe, if you did, you're a long shot to win next month.

But you could at least serve as a presenter, for goodness sake, proving you have the stature to hold an Emmy statue even if you can't take it home with you.

You are Mr. or Ms. Television, and the show will not go on without you — unless Don Mischer decides it will.

Mischer, producer of the Sept. 12 awards for the Academy of Television Arts & Sciences, knows how much industry members long to be associated with the high-profile ceremony.

"I have had cables sent to me by people who've said, 'I've got the dress, I just need the invitation.' I've had big bouquets of flowers sent by artists who want to do something on the show. ... Some will get the heads of big agencies to call you."

"There are many people who deserve to be on the Emmy Awards who we simply don't have room for," said Mischer. "In the end, our job is to do what's best for the show."

A scant three weeks before the ceremony, he and his crew are balancing the big and small elements that can turn the three-hour broadcast on Fox (down from last year's four-hour, 50th anniversary blockbuster) into a thriller or a yawner.

There's the all-important display of stars, of course. Jenna Elfman ("Dharma & Greg") and David Hyde Pierce ("Frasier") were tapped this week as co-hosts. Presenters announced so far include Dennis Franz, Calista Flockhart, Sarah Michelle Gellar, David Spade, Dylan McDermott and Jon Stewart.

Decisions are being made about the show's theme (Mischer favors a millennium-tinged look to TV's future), comic relief and the clip packages for nominated series and performers.

It is a nonpaying gig. But Emmy does have some lovely gifts for her guests: "Treasure chests" filled with several thousand dollars worth of products will be bestowed on presenters and nominees.

Mere mortals can get their own taste of glamour, but for a price. An "Emmy experience" weekend, including two balcony seats at the Shrine Auditorium, was being sold to the public through the Los Angeles Sports & Entertainment Commission.

The $499 package includes a "red carpet" arrival at the ceremony, parties and, for a change of pace, a Los Angeles Dodgers-New York Mets game. Including outsiders is a boost for the ceremony, according to Mischer.

"We want to try to get real television fans into the hall. It adds a real spark of energy that you don't have when you're playing in front of an exclusively industry audience," he said.

All his work notwithstanding, Mischer still counts on serendipity.

"It's the things you can't plan and you can't produce that makes these shows interesting. My friend Gil Cates, who produces the Oscars, has said when you do these kinds of shows the award gods are either with you or ignore you."

TITLE OF RECORD

Filter
"Hey man, nice shot" ... yeah, good try. That might be the only Filter song you've ever heard, and it quite possibly could stay that way.

Filter, restructured but the same, has reappeared four years after its debut Short Bus with its latest, Title of Record. As creative as that name sounds (sarcasm), the album just gets better, (again, I'm just kidding). So sorry to the Filter-followers, if there are any, but I'm just not impressed.

Title of Record, gosh what a great name, is lead singer/founder Richard Patrick's biography of the past couple years. My mom told me never to trust a guy with two first names and let me tell you, old Richard Patrick has some issues.

Unfortunately for him everything always goes wrong — his girlfriend dumps him, everyone hates him, he's a rich rock star — you know, bad things like that. The music's OK but nothing shocking. It comes complete with the weird sounds that everyone seems to be adding to her or his productions. By the 2010, every rock artist will probably have some kind of DJ mixing and sampling for her or him — maybe even Bob Dylan.

The hit-song candidates would have to be "The Best Things" and "I Will Lead You." And I'll have to blame that almost entirely on the music, although the repetitive lyrics in "The Best Things" seem like they could be catchy.

Patrick used to get made fun of and picked on in high school — that'll do it to ya every time.

BITTER
Meshell Ndegeocello

The title may be Bitter but the sound is anything but. If you didn't check out her previous albums, Plantation Lullabies or Peace Beyond Passion, you might remember her from John Mellencamp's rendition of "Wild Nights" (the dark, slender woman with a shaved head).

Meshell Ndegeocello reaffirms that she is a whole lot more than a sidekick with her latest production, Bitter. It's not as musically racy as you might expect from a fearless and outspoken woman, but the lyrics and vocals do nothing to disappoint.

Bitter at times but sweet all the way through. Ndegeocello embarks on a thought-provoking voyage that trudges through the rocky topics of love, relationships, religion and smoothies everything over.

The singer/songwriter/musician possesses an intriguing voice that is soft and light but capable of turning deep and hard at the drop of a dime. She is accompanied by a variety of guest musicians, who utilize an array of strings and percussion that complement her vocal efforts beautifully.

Streaming video still a trickle

Internet video technology is working on getting its surfing legs.

By Ric Leyva
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Progress isn't always pretty.

From the discovery of fire to the invention of the wheel to radio, television, computers and other modern technological wonders, there are always bugs to work out of any new breakthrough.

Live video — or even canned tape — on the Internet is a perfect example.

Streaming video, the Internet's highly touted attempt to be like television, burst on the scene a few years ago. It was plagued by digital flotsam and jetsam that turned the "stream" into a mere trickle, reducing the flow of motion pictures to a halting slide show.

Within a small square on the screen about the size of a postage stamp, frames froze at random, catching unsuspecting subjects in unflattering candid shots — mouths agape in midspeech or twisted in some ordinary expression made grotesque by the stop-action whimsy of snarled "streaming" images.

That was then. What about now? With more and more Internet "TV shows" and other video-based entertainment content coming to the World Wide Web at a furious pace, it seemed like a good time to test streaming video, using three different computers ranging from ancient (5 years old) to archaic (2 years) to brand-new.

There are a slew of sites that offer streaming video, many pornographic or voyeuristic, but a few focus entirely on presenting material via video. One is Alternative Entertainment Network TV (www.aentv.com), which offers such things as classic TV shows, historic sports moments, Hollywood behind-the-scenes footage and comedy, including live coverage of this year's Montreal International Comedy Festival.

Hosted by veteran comic actor Fred Willard, the multi-layered festival site-within-a-site fit the bill for some serious but unscientific testing, with lots of spots to explore and lots of comedy built in. Maybe too much.

From the beginning, the limitations of streaming video are part of the joke, with an intro announcer saying that 200 performers from around the world will fit their routines into a "screen the size of a ravioli." The opening message was blurry and the sound was out of synch.

Jumping to the festival's main page, the first of many delays cropped up: Momentum blocked by a message saying that the latest version of a certain "helper" program was needed. It had to be downloaded from a separate site, and then it had to be installed, which required restarting the machine.

Resistance was futile. There was no choice but to comply.

Crashes, mandatory downloads, tyrannical software. Was this all part of the gag?

"Yes," Willard deadpanned later in a telephone interview. "We were working in conjunction with the technical people to bring the jokes home, even if that meant having to call a computer repairman to your house."

The "Fernwood Tonight" actor is currently all over television, hawking one of those 10-10 phone numbers, and also had a small part in this summer's Austin Powers sequel. He said he was pleased with the outcome of the latest venture, despite the technical problems, even when he heard his face was a smeary, unrecognizable blur on much of his tape.

"It's the future," he said. "Radio and television had lots of glitches in the beginning, too."

Finally into the interview area, the segments revealed that many of streaming video's original shortcomings are still apparent, especially with a 56k modem connection. It's not fair to blame AENTV or any other individual streaming video provider, though — the problems are unavoidable because of the limited bandwidth connections to the Internet that most people have at home. There is just too much data trying to move through regular telephone wiring.

Someday, when bandwidth limitations are history, the Internet might just compete with television for the everyday entertainment audience. It can be fun now, as a novelty, but for most of the millions surfing the Web,

It's the future. Radio and television had lots of glitches in the beginning, too.

— Fred Willard, veteran comic actor and host of AENTV

Studiolo, foundation fête women

■ The Iowa Women's Foundation will celebrate its 5th birthday today.

The Iowa Women's Foundation is turning 5, and Studiolo is hosting an exhibit of work by the Central Iowa Women's Caucus for ART. So naturally these two organizations are joining to host a birthday party to honor the work of women from around Iowa and celebrate the successes of the non-profit organization.

"We are very excited to be involved with this great group of people in celebrating their birthday yet another year," said Louise Rauh, one of the owners of Studiolo, 415 S. Gilbert St.

EXHIBIT & FÊTE "Boxworks"

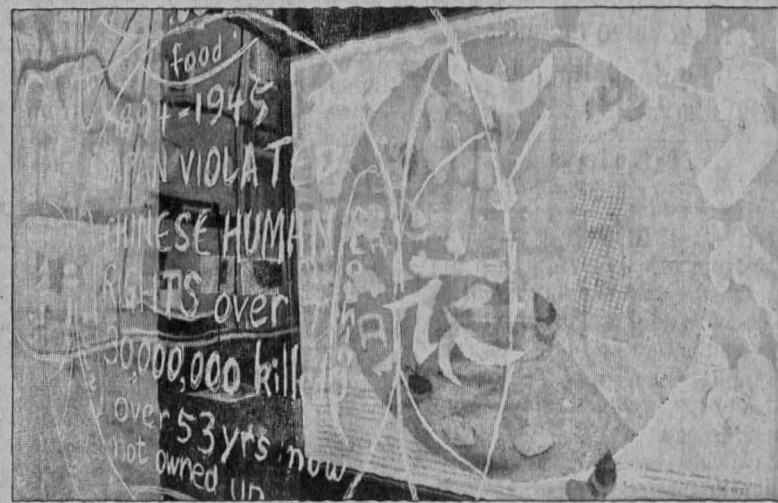

When: Through Saturday
Where: Studiolo, 415 S. Gilbert St.
Admission: Free

The women's foundation began when a group of women from Iowa City and Cedar Rapids started working to gain funds for programs that supported women throughout Iowa. With the stated mission of supporting the development of women through the help of women, the IWF has entered into its fourth grant cycle.

"I know people have heard of us, but this birthday celebration will be a great chance for people to learn more about us," said Regenia Bailey, the executive director of the organization.

"There are a lot of non-profit organizations that have supported us and women throughout Iowa City — plus the offer from Studiolo to let us have our birthday celebration there makes us absolutely delighted," she said.

Bailey is the lone office worker for the non-profit organization, which develops fund raising for many different statewide organizations.

Locally, the foundation has worked with the Women's Resource and Action Center to present its "Women and Money" series, designed to help women with different aspects of financial work.

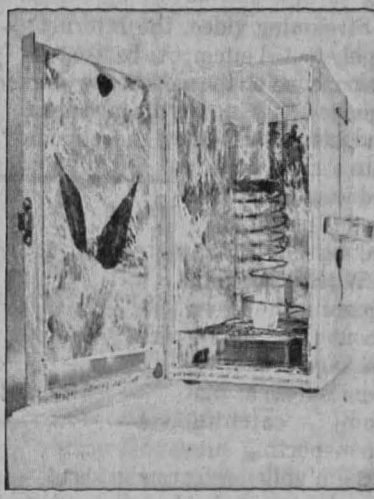

"We always encourage volunteers from the university and in the past have had a number of interns work for us from the UI," Bailey said. "So I would hope that people who are interested in the work of a non-profit organization would come to find out more about the (foundation)."

"Being at Studiolo will also offer a nice corollary to the 'Boxworks' exhibit, which features so much work from the women of Iowa."

"Boxworks" is a series of different art pieces that were developed and conceived by the Central Iowa Women's Caucus for ART. Made up of an eclectic gathering of women from all over the state, the caucus serves to support women artists in studio shows and to further discussions about gender through creative expression.

"The (caucus) wanted to make art that either referred to a box or could be contained in a box. The pieces being shown in 'Boxworks' show a range that is phenomenal; the only thing that hinders these women is their own imaginations," Studiolo's Rauh said.

vides a wonderful chance for the organizations to be shown off.

The foundation will host the Iowa City Area Chamber of Commerce Business PM today from 4:30 to 6:30 p.m. at Studiolo to highlight the celebration of its birthday. Other sponsors of the event include Devotay Inc., Hoppers & Brother Printers, Alternatives Conserve Preserve Et Al, Benson & Hepker Design, New Pioneer Co-op, Preferred Stock Outlet Clothing Co. and Vortex.
