UI may aid local Japanese program

Iowa City high schools may look to the UI to place students in its Japanese classes.

By Heather Reed
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa City School District's inability to find a new Japanese instructor may require high school students interested in learning the language to take classes at the UI.

But until the Department of Asian Languages and Literature knows the exact number of high school students who are serious about taking a class, it does not plan on going to the College of Liberal Arts with a request for more resources, said department chairman Philip Lutgendorf.

"We want to try to help, but (UI) students are our first priority," Lutgendorf said. "High school students get a reduced fee, and we don't want to bump out a university student who is paying tuition."

Local school districts are required to pay up to $250 of the student's tuition, while the university forgives the remainder of the bill, said Pam Ehly, director of instruction for Iowa City schools.

At this point, the exact number of students who would be taking Japanese classes at the UI this semester is unclear, but Ehly estimates that seven to nine students may enroll in the courses.

After Iowa City's previous Japanese teacher took a leave of absence, the district had a difficult time locating a new instructor.

"We did a pretty extensive search," said Dee Dee Walker, a foreign language teacher at Iowa City City High School. But no one to fill the position was found.

A recent decline in enrollment numbers for the district's Japanese program, combined with budget considerations, also contributed to the current situation, said Susan Mims, president of the Iowa City School Board.

"There seems to be a shortage of Japanese teachers mixed with low student enrollment," she said. "Which makes justifying a budget for the course hard."

In Iowa, the Post-Secondary Enrollment Option allows high school students to continue advanced study for courses not offered in their schools at area colleges or universities, Ehly said. The option is intended to offer students a more rigorous curriculum. Normally, approximately 55 to 60 Iowa City high school students take courses under the post-secondary education option. The students receive both high school and college credit.

While the students are usually upperclassmen, Ehly said, freshmen and sophomores can register if they are classified as "gifted and talented." She said students generally do "extremely well" in the courses.

Lutgendorf said the possibility of adding another afternoon session to accommodate the high schoolers has been discussed but nothing has been decided.

"It's kind of up in the air at this

Online retailers, including a UI online book service, may hurt small bookstores.

By Avian Carrasquillo
The Daily Iowan

The recent popularity of Internet book sales services, including the UI e-commerce site, may cause a financial strain for smaller local bookstores.

James Harris, manager of Prairie Lights Books, 15 S. Dubuque St., said that although his store is not yet facing any hardships, it may not be able to stay competitive with online book-sellers that have larger budgets.

"Right now, we haven't felt the impact too much, but at the end of the semester and as time goes on, who knows what could happen?" he said. "We really can't afford to compete with the big advertising campaigns put on by companies like varsitybooks.com, but we do offer competitive prices."

Jodi Gershoni, communications director for varsitybooks.com, said the many benefits of selling through the Internet allow companies to be competitive.

"By working through the Internet, operating costs are much lower than that of traditional bookstores, meaning we can afford to offer the consumer lower prices on the product," she said.

"In particular, we have seen a large increase of UI students purchasing books online this year as opposed to last year," Gershoni said.

In response to the growing Internet market, this week the University Book Store unveiled its latest weapon in the battle. Its new e-commerce Web site allows UI students to buy books and put them on hold. The service offers students a chance to purchase new and used books with no wait, said Paul Seelau, manager of the

Vaccinating against the Y2K bug

As the most famous computer glitch in history nears, some are stocking up, others are taking stock.

By Steve Schmadeke
The Daily Iowan

Fuel was added to the Y2K fire when the top presidential adviser on the issue advised people to stock three days' worth of supplies for the end of the year.

"Why only three days? Doesn't everybody have that?" said Iowa City resident Vince Hiser as he waited for a bus Thursday. "I don't think it's going to have a major effect on us. I'm worried there are a lot of dishonest people that will profit from Y2K. I hope people don't buy into any fool-proof Y2K solution scams."

"I can only come out ahead if all my financial records are destroyed," said Ben Jenkins, an Iowa City resident whose Y2K stance was "somewhere between being a freak and not caring."

"I think three days' worth of supplies is pretty useless. I mean, how can you prepare for something like this?" he said.

But others think John Koskinen, Clinton's adviser, may be onto something.

"I'm more worried about people's reaction to it," said Anne Kelleher, a UI sophomore. "People are going nuts. They'll be hiding in basements or praying in the middle of the lawn — things they normally wouldn't do." Others affirmed Kelleher's prediction.

"I do know some relatives of my friends in the library are very worried about it," said Randy Essing, a librarian assistant. "They're stockpiling firearms, guns and ammunition."

The timing of Y2K is what worries UI freshman Isaac Swansen the most. "I'm just worried about staying alive through the night," he said. "I'm worried about the drinking part of it — the party part."

One way the UI water plant may prepare for Y2K is by hosting a New Year's Eve party for its employees, said Tony Butz, an employee at the plant.

Female jogger escapes Ralston Creek attacker

Police advise people to take precautions when out at night.

By Gil Levy
The Daily Iowan

A female jogger escaped an attack by an unknown assailant Wednesday night.

Around 9 p.m., a 20-year-old woman was jogging near a pedestrian bridge across Ralston Creek at Maiden Lane when a man allegedly grabbed her from behind, said Iowa City police Sgt. Mike Lord.

"She paused, leaned up against a tree to tie her shoe, and that's when he came up behind and grabbed her," Lord said.

The attacker then tried to force the victim to come with him toward the bridge but became distracted by people heading in his direction.

"The group of people was approaching his direction, and he tried to force her off to the side," Lord said. "That's when she was able to get away."

Police do not have a good description of the assailant because he was behind the victim.

While there has not been a recent outbreak of attacks, there have been previous occasions in which similar incidents have occurred, Lord said.

He also urged people who go out at night to take precautions.

"We recommend people not go out after dark," he said. "Generally, there is more crime after dark, under the cover of darkness."

Walking in well-lit, well-populated areas with a companion and carrying a whistle or cell phone were also recommended by Lord.

"Iowa City is not a crime-ridden place," Lord said. "But people need to take precautions if they need to go out at night."

Police are urging anyone with information, specifically those who were walking in the vicinity of the attack last night, to call the police at 356-5275.

SCOPE takes the Backstreet approach

Tickets for upcoming SCOPE concerts Citizen King and Funky Meters will go on sale Saturday.

By Chao Xiong
The Daily Iowan

UI junior Ryan Barker says he loves music enough to take on the role as director of SCOPE two years in a row, while striving to make Iowa City a viable market for popular bands.

The Student Commission On Programming and Entertainment — SCOPE — is composed of 30 student volunteers and is the UI's foremost source of large-scale musical entertainment.

"If there's a band going on tour — you can bet we're going after it," said Ryan Harlacher, SCOPE assistant director and a UI senior.

SCOPE plans to bring Citizen King, best known for its Top 40 hit "Better Days," and the Funky Meters to the IMU Main Lounge on Sept. 13 and Oct. 18. Tickets for both events will go on sale Saturday.

Later this fall, a swarm of teen-age girls are expected to flood Carver-Hawkeye Arena to see the Backstreet Boys. The band will be brought to the UI on Nov. 2 as a result of SCOPE's work with the band's promoter, Barker said.

"Teen-age girls will be represented," he said. "But when tickets went on sale, we had 500 people in line and every age group was represented."

After being contacted by a group's promoter, SCOPE sends a bid laying out the expenses of renting Carver-Hawkeye Arena and the use of lights, sound equipment, or a union to set the stage if necessary, Barker said. Promoters then pick the most cost-effective arena.

"It's all about the business and the money. In some cases, it can be bad when it's all about the money," said Barker.

For shows in the IMU Main Lounge, SCOPE usually contacts a group's agent, helps set up the stage, and promotes the concert, Barker

Electronic backpacks weigh less and offer more.

By Lisa Hemann
The Daily Iowan

Storing projects and old papers in a beat-up file cabinet is now a thing of the past. This semester, students in the College of Education are being given electronic backpacks.

The backpacks, essentially Web space set aside for the students, are intended to be used for storing anything from class syllabi and sample lesson plans to video clips of student teaching.

From the electronic backpacks, students can pick and choose the best examples of their work to form an electronic portfolio.

"You take items that you have stored and actually start to build a Web portfolio where you have a Web site with all your work to later display to potential employers," said Rebecca Anthony, director of the educational placement office.

Anthony first began putting together the program for electronic portfolios in 1996.

The portfolios are not meant to replace a traditional résumé but to act as a supplement.

"We were noticing the Internet has a lot of power in communicating job skills information to employers," she said. "Some employers won't hire teachers until they've demonstrated their skills within a classroom. This provides documented evidence of those skills."

Anthony asked some educational recruiters in Texas to look at one of the electronic portfolios when the program first began.

"They were absolutely flabbergasted about the amount of material available on the site," she said. "In fact, they asked if that particular student was still available for hire."

Besides serving as a good format to store and present materials, backpacks can pick up technological skills that are becoming more important for teachers, said John Achrazoglou, coordinator of instructional technology for the College of Education.

"There is a really good market right now for teachers, but this will get them the jobs that they want," he said.

Achrazoglou, who helped Anthony put the program together, teaches Technology in the Classroom, a class that prepares students to create their own electronic backpacks.

"I know my students better through the electronic backpack than I do from the classroom because they are better able to articulate good questions, and then I can give better answers," Achrazoglou said.

The electronic backpacks are only offered to students in the College of Education, he said.

Over the summer, Achrazoglou and Anthony taught a class using the electronic portfolios. The class attracted students from many different majors, Anthony said.

"There is just no limit to what all the academic areas would be able to do with this," she said.

Memorial service to honor UI's deeded bodies

Sixty-five donors to the UI program will be honored.

By Heather Pavnica
The Daily Iowan

Marion Huit, UI dean of students from 1954 to 1978, was always committed to educating students — even after his death.

Huit, who died of a heart attack at age 86, is one of 65 people who have donated their bodies to the UI Deeded Body Program and who will be honored with a memorial service today at 1 p.m. in Oakland Cemetery, 1000 Brown St.

Approximately 500 international physicians and UI students in medicine, dentistry, nursing and athletic training have benefited from donations to one of the nation's largest deeded-body programs, said Darrell Wilkins, director of the Deeded Body Program.

Five students who have worked with these cadavers will speak at the service, Wilkins said.

Nicholas Szumski, a second-year medical student, plans to thank the family members for their loved one's donations.

"It is pretty rare for someone to use their body for a learning purpose," he said.

Szumski said his experience in the cadaver lab instilled a sense of commitment to helping others.

"It is such a selfless act, and it is so generous (to give this donation)," he said.

The most important thing gained from working with the cadavers is knowledge about the human body, said Ryan Dahlby Albright, a second-year medical student.

"The only other way to learn anatomy is through trial and error with live bodies; the second-best way is to dissect animals," he said.

Cinnamon Sullivan, also a second-year medical student who plans to speak at the memorial service, said her experience with the cadavers was personal and meaningful.

"I look to the cadavers as teachers," she said. "Not everyone will let you go in and look at their body."

CITY BRIEF

UI student killed in accident

Lindsay Gibbs, a 19-year-old UI student, was killed on Aug. 14 in an automobile accident in her hometown of Bellevue, Iowa.

Gibbs, who would have been a sophomore this year, was a passenger in a car that went off the road and rolled twice. The accident also killed another passenger and injured the driver and a third passenger.

"It was a rollover accident, and she was in her truck," said Nicole Pfeiffer, Gibbs' older sister. "She died at 1:30 in the morning."

Approximately 1,500 friends and family attended the wake in Bellevue, Pfeiffer said.

Gibbs, the youngest of three girls in her family, was especially close to her sisters and e-mailed them often, Pfeiffer said.

"My sister Stefanie and I loved Lindsay like a best friend, more than a sister," she said.

During Gibbs' freshman year at the UI, she was a math major and worked as an office assistant in the finance department, said Bev Berg, department secretary.

"She was like our daughter," she said. "She was very outgoing, reliable, fun-loving."

The College of Business also had employed Pfeiffer while she was a UI student, Berg said.

"Her sister used to work in the marketing department, so we kind of knew the whole family," she said.

In addition to spending time with friends and family, Gibbs enjoyed playing softball, volleyball and running, Pfeiffer said. While in high school, Gibbs was student body president, a state track participant and an All-American Scholar.

"She was the best person we ever met," Berg said.

Students find getting a job a piece of cake

More than 1,500 students turned out to search for jobs at this year's UI Job Fair.

By Anne Huyck
The Daily Iowan

Students could have found their callings at the 1999 Student Job Fair Thursday — anything from monitoring a computer lab to singing the National Anthem.

Fifty on-campus employers and other nonprofit employers from around the community were on hand to advertise jobs to UI students in the IMU Main Lounge. Students could chat with department representatives and fill out applications.

"I heard you were usually guaranteed a job, either on the spot or through interviews," said UI freshman Kristin Baker. "They all seem pretty flexible. It is definitely easier than pounding the pavement."

Approximately 1,570 students turned up at the event, said Cindy Seyfer, assistant director of student financial aid.

"That is what it has been in the past, but the job market has changed," she said. "There are more jobs in the community, so fewer students may be looking."

Cambus was one UI employer looking for some help. UI senior Ethan Bade was handing out candy and calming the fears of job-seeking students.

"A lot of them are afraid they can't (drive a Cambus), so they just kind of walk by," he said. "I have talked to several students who were very interested, though."

Veronica Simpson, a UI sophomore, is on the other side, trying to find a job to suit her interests and schedule. She said she attended the fair last year but no job came out of it. This year, she is confident she will find a job after having watched her friend get hired on the spot.

"Everyone here is nice and said they would work around my schedule, which is good, because I have a crazy schedule," she said.

All UI freshman Xiaoming Tan had to do was turn in an application, and he was hired on the spot. "They interviewed me real quick, and everything is all set up for me," he said. "I will be cooking at Union Station. This is the first time I've had a job, so I'm excited."

There are still plenty of jobs available for students, Seyfer said. She encouraged students who are serious to check Jobnet, the UI's online job source (<http://www.bo.uiowa.edu/~finaid/jobform.cfm>) daily because there are always new listings.

Virtual Bookstore.

"The Web is here to stay, and that's the motivation behind our new online book service, but that's only the beginning," he said. "In later months, we'll be offering apparel, electronics and school supplies. Students can begin seeing more advertisements for e-commerce beginning next semester."

A secure transaction feature makes it safe for students to charge on their credit cards for delivery or to reserve books for an in-store pickup. Future options will include a chance for students to charge their purchases to their U-Bills, Seelau said.

Online purchases began Monday even though the site has been around for about five years, said George Herbert, manager of the bookstore.

"We feel that it provides students with a great deal of convenience to be able to shop 24 hours a day, seven days a week," he said.

Students can purchase books while at home on break so they can have them when they return to school; books can also be back-ordered if they are not available in the physical store, Herbert said.

I really liked it; it was convenient. I decided to pick it up and save the shipping cost. When I went to the bookstore and saw the crazy mess of long lines, I knew I had made the right decision.

— Andy Stoll, UI Student Government vice president

UI Student Government Vice President Andy Stoll was the first to test the Web site.

"I really liked it; it was convenient," he said. "I decided to pick it up and save the shipping cost. When I went to the bookstore and saw the crazy mess of long lines, I knew I had made the right decision."

But UI senior Erin Breen said she would be wary of purchasing books via the Internet because she's not comfortable with the technology.

"I wouldn't bother with the Internet. There's just too much of a risk," she said. "I'd rather just walk to the bookstore and deal with the lines."

The e-commerce Web site is available at www.book.uiowa.edu.

"We want to let people know that at Carver, they can have the biggest show in Iowa. We'll give them a break on the rent — give them an incentive to bring shows here — to help us down the line," said Harlacher.

Despite all the work required to bring bands to the UI, the result is quite rewarding.

Cyclist receives minor injuries in accident

An Iowa City bicyclist sustained minor injuries when he was hit by a car shortly after 6 p.m. Thursday, according to a police report.

The accident occurred at the intersection of Burlington and Madison streets, the report said.

Zhan Hui was driving a 1988 Toyota Camry southbound on Madison Street. After attempting a right turn onto Burlington Street, Hui ran into bicyclist David Funck, who was traveling west on Burlington Street, said Iowa City police Officer Terry Tack.

Funck sustained minor scratches and was treated on the scene. Funck and his bicycle were later driven home by an Iowa City community officer.

"It was sort of my fault; I should've paid more attention to him," Hui said.

Hui, who was issued a license on March 3, said he was still unsure of his driving skills.

Australian for deer

WELLMAN, Iowa (AP) — A woman who lives near this small Iowa town has a message for Mary Stangl of Ottumwa:

You really did see a kangaroo.

Lois Eckhardt, 68, said she was checking cattle on her farm Aug. 4 when she saw it, too.

"I noticed this tan thing standing on the hill, looking at me," she said. "It looked like a deer, but it had a bigger belly and a boxy nose. The tail was too long for a deer."

Eckhardt believes she surprised the animal because she approached quietly on a motorized electric cart. "Those are pretty quiet," she said. "After a few seconds, this thing took off with sort of a long, low hop."

She didn't even think of reporting it until she read newspaper reports about Mary Stangl's having seen a kangaroo last week in the countryside south of Ottumwa.

Skeptical authorities said they had received no reports of a runaway kangaroo.

"When I saw that story in the paper, it just sort of clicked," Eckhardt said. "I want that woman to know she wasn't seeing things."

Eckhardt lives about 25 miles south of Iowa City. Ottumwa is approximately 85 miles southwest of Iowa City.

Reno vows to find Waco truth

■ The attorney general, describing herself as "troubled and frustrated," launches a new probe.

By Michael J. Sniffen
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Upset and frustrated, Attorney General Janet Reno pledged Thursday that a new investigation of the Waco, Texas, siege will "get to the bottom" of how FBI agents used potentially inflammable tear gas grenades against her wishes and why the bureau took six years to admit it.

"I have no reason at this point to believe the FBI is responsible for the deaths of those people," Reno said of Branch Davidian cult leader David Koresh and some 80 followers who died during a fire that broke out as FBI tanks pumped tear gas into their compound outside Waco on April 19, 1993.

The episode — which began 51 days earlier with a deadly shootout as federal agents tried to arrest Koresh on weapons charges — has become a rallying cry for anti-government and militia movements across the United States.

Reno described herself as "very, very troubled," "very, very frustrated" and "very, very upset" by the FBI's admission Wednesday night that such devices probably were used nearby earlier that day.

Reno — who learned about the use of the military-type tear gas grenades this week — and other top FBI and Justice officials had denied such use for six years.

She ordered the new investigation late Wednesday, and FBI Director Louis Freeh assigned 40 FBI agents to re-interview everyone who was at the scene. Reno planned to discuss with Freeh, who is on vacation, whether an outsider should supervise their probe. Freeh became FBI director some four months after the siege ended.

With Republicans in Congress moving toward new hearings on the siege, Reno told her weekly news conference, "It is absolutely critical that we do everything humanly possible to learn all the facts as accurately as possible and make them available to the Congress and public ... I will not stop until I get to the bottom of this."

NATION BRIEF

Norplant maker agrees to settle lawsuits

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — The maker of Norplant will pay a reported $50 million-plus to more than 36,000 women to settle claims that the contraceptive device caused headaches, irregular menstrual bleeding, nausea and depression.

American Home Products Corp., the parent company of Wyeth-Ayerst Laboratories, the maker of the implant-contraceptive, called the move to end five years of litigation "purely a business decision." It did not admit any wrongdoing.

The company Thursday would not specify the amount of the settlement, but lawyers told the Dallas Morning News that American Home will pay $1,500 to every woman who sued before March 1, adding up to more than $54 million.

The settlement would resolve cases consolidated before a federal judge in Texas. It covers most of the thousands of lawsuits filed against American Home over Norplant. It does not cover claims by hundreds of other women who had different types of injuries.

American Home, which also makes Advil and Robitussin, also must contend with thousands of lawsuits by former users of the fen-phen diet-drug combination, which, plaintiffs say, caused heart valve damage and a potentially fatal lung disorder.

'Jenny Jones' slaying no crime-of-passion

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — A man who killed a gay acquaintance who had revealed a crush on him during a "Jenny Jones Show" taping was convicted of murder Thursday for the second time in a case that threw a spotlight on daytime TV's titillating fare.

The jury rejected the crime-of-passion defense of Jonathan Schmitz, who three days after the taping in 1995 shot Scott Amedure at his trailer home and then called police and confessed.

Schmitz, 29, could get life in prison at the sentencing on Sept. 14.

As the verdict was announced, Schmitz hung his head, stared down and clasped his hands under his chin.

The jury deliberated fewer than three hours over two days, asking at one point to see a suggestive note, with a blinking construction light attached, left by Amedure on Schmitz's door the night before the shooting.

Amedure, 32, revealed his crush on Schmitz on a "Jenny Jones" segment titled "Same-Sex Secret Crushes." As the audience whooped with delight, Jones elicited Amedure's whipped cream-and-strawberries fantasy involving Schmitz. Amedure put an arm around Schmitz, who turned away.

Schmitz, who has said he is heterosexual, later claimed he was humiliated. Schmitz said he had been led to believe the secret admirer he was going to meet would be a woman.

The verdict Thursday marked the third time a jury has considered who was responsible for the slaying, which led to debate over ambush tactics sometimes used by talk shows such as Jones'.

Schmitz was convicted of murder in 1996 and sentenced to 25 to 50 years in prison, but the verdict was overturned on appeal because of errors in jury selection. Then, last April, a jury in a lawsuit brought by Amedure's family ordered the producers of "The Jenny Jones Show" to pay $25 million.

Liquor, not racism, fueled reservation assault, say relatives

MARTIN, S.D. (AP) — The brutal beating of a white man was the result of alcohol and an argument, not racial animosity, said relatives of the victim and one of the three American Indian suspects.

Louis Means and Byron Bissonette, both 18, pleaded innocent Wednesday to federal charges of assault resulting in serious bodily injury.

A 17-year-old juvenile also was taken into custody.

The four had driven to an abandoned house to party, according to a statement by William Grode, an FBI special agent in Minneapolis.

Means told tribal police that he, Bissonette and the juvenile had beaten Young, "dragged him across a field, thrown him into a house crawl space, dragged him out and then kicked him numerous times in the head," according to the FBI statement.

Local newspapers and TV had reported Wednesday that Sheriff Russel Waterbury said the crime was racially motivated.

"I've got a lot of calls on that, and that was my opinion, to do something that horrible to somebody else," he told KWSN on Wednesday. "I didn't mean the actual hate crime, so I don't know where they come up with where I was quoted as saying that. But that was my opinion."

Milosevic blasts U.S. conspiracy

■ The Serb leader also says opposition to his rule is linked to an American campaign.

By Melissa Eddy
Associated Press

GNJILANE, Yugoslavia — President Slobodan Milosevic Thursday accused the United States of conspiring with the Kosovars in targeting Kosovo's minority Serbs, charging that America was responsible for a mass grave in the U.S. sector of Kosovo.

As Serbs identified kin in the grave discovered last month, Milosevic issued a statement alleging the Americans were in "alliance with murderers, drug traffickers and terrorists of the Kosovo Liberation Army." It suggested that opposition leaders demanding Milosevic's resignation were linked to the alleged American campaign against Kosovo's Serbs.

In issuing the statement — the strongest attack yet on the U.S. administration's role in the province — Milosevic was apparently trying to galvanize public opinion in Serbia and defuse growing protests against his rule.

The Milosevic camp also is attempting to exploit the rash of hate killings and related violence committed by ethnic Albanians against Serbs in retaliation for a 1½-year crackdown by Serb forces on Kosovars seeking independence.

An estimated 10,000 or more Kosovars were killed and hundreds of thousands more temporarily fled the province this spring. NATO-led peacekeepers arrived in June to try to restore order after a 78-day NATO bombing campaign forced Milosevic to accept a Kosovo peace settlement, including a pullout of his forces.

His statement Thursday accused the United States of being behind the "massacre" of Serbs found in a mass grave near Gnjilane, in the American sector of Kosovo. Three of the 11 victims — all thought to be Serbs — were identified Thursday, and the bodies were brought to the main morgue in Gnjilane, 20 miles southeast of Pristina, Kosovo's capital.

The Serbs were apparently killed in late July. But the NATO-led peace force announced the discovery of their grave — along with the bodies of four other victims nearby — only this week.

In a statement Thursday, the peace force said forensic experts with the U.N. war crimes tribunal were informed immediately after the bodies were found on July 24 and began investigations shortly afterward.

But the Yugoslav statement said the delay meant "this crime was ... hidden for more than a month." That "proves (U.S.) protection of the criminals, which by all standards amounts to being an accomplice," Milosevic's statement said.

At Gnjilane, Valentina Zdravkovic sobbed after identifying her husband and father-in-law as two of the Serb victims and expressed anger over the delay between finding the grave and informing the public, including relatives.

"I feel betrayed by KFOR," she said, using the acronym for the NATO-led Kosovo Force.

Turks pass quake tax

■ The move is met with skepticism by those who are leery of corrupt contractors and officials.

By Louis Meixler
Associated Press

ISTANBUL, Turkey — A parliamentary committee has approved new taxes to help pay for the earthquake that struck Turkey's industrial heartland, but some Turks worried Thursday that the funds will be siphoned off by corrupt builders and officials.

Worried investors dumped shares in Turkish companies Thursday, sending the stock market index plummeting about 10 percent on its first day of trading since the Aug. 17 earthquake. Such falls, however, are not unusual during major crises in Turkey and experts expected shares to recover.

The death toll in the quake rose to 13,040 dead and 26,630 injured Thursday. Thousands of people are believed still buried underneath the rubble; few, if any, more survivors are expected to be found.

Desperate for cash, the government proposed a 5 percent tax hike on corporations, the self-employed and the wealthy late Wednesday, as well as a 25 percent monthly surcharge on cellular telephones. Some experts estimate the measures could raise $20 billion a year.

The proposal would also give the government the authority to increase taxes on gasoline, tobacco and alcohol, but it does not immediately call for such increases. The proposals have been passed by a parliamentary committee and are widely expected to be approved by the full assembly. The government holds a strong majority.

The new taxes were immediately met with suspicion. Although Prime Minister Bulent Ecevit is widely considered to be honest, many previous Turkish governments were plagued by allegations of corruption.

"Take Your Hands Off," the pro-Islamic Yeni Safak said in a front-page editorial. "Levy your taxes not on the people, but on those who swindle the state."

"The people do not trust the state on the issue of the new taxes," the paper added, a position also reflected in other newspapers.

The Hurriyet newspaper said some customers were returning their cellular phones because of the tax proposals but gave no figures.

Many experts, though, said they expect the new taxes to help the recovery effort. They noted that Turkey also approved a controversial measure to boost the retirement age from 45 to 58 for women and 50 to 60 for men, a belt-tightening move considered crucial for securing loans from the International Monetary Fund.

"Taxes are always an ugly issue," said Tefvik Aksoy, chief economist at Istanbul's Bank Ekspres. But he added that the taxes would mostly hurt the wealthy and would help pave the way for an IMF deal.

Taking recovery efforts into their own hands, Turkey's main media groups opened their "Lay a Brick Yourself" campaign Thursday to raise money.

Five media conglomerates kicked off the campaign by donating $500,000 each. The pop star popularly known as Parkan donated $60,000, Hurriyet said.

How to be a successful TV viewer

■ As the new fall TV season nears, here's a quick run-down to prepare yourself.

By Frazier Moore
Associated Press

NEW YORK — With the fall TV season in sight, you probably have a few ideas about what would make it a good one.

Well, so do the networks as they roll out their 38 new prime-time series.

But while you're thinking, "I'd like more comedies," or, "Let's have some new dramas," the networks are wondering if you have what it takes to make the season a success.

The networks' fall schedules say a lot about the audience they are seeking. Now they need you to be that kind of viewer.

Here's a handy check list:

- Be white.

Last month, the NAACP condemned the dearth of minority characters on broadcast television. The chairman of cable's Black Entertainment Television termed television "a vast white land."

- Be young.

White performers are overwhelmingly who viewers see, and who they will continue to see this fall.

• Be young.

Adults 35 and beyond may despair that not only is youth wasted on the young, so is television.

As TV will remind you again this season, young people have all the power worth having in society.

Young people get to be vampire slayers or witches or (on the WB's new "Roswell") good-looking aliens.

- Be a guy.

Guys belch, they scratch and they love TV. This season they continue to prosper, whether in packs (such as the three housemates on ABC's "Oh Grow Up") or surrounded by females, as is the guy on CBS' "Ladies Man."

TV tells you that if you're a guy, you thrive in a state of adolescent immunity, no matter how old you are.

- Be devout.

Stop thinking of what you watch this fall as shows. The proper word is content (that's CONTENT, not cONTENT).

No matter if the name it goes by is "The X-Files" or "Barney and His Friends," so-called "branded content" that succeeds on TV needn't stop there. It can be reconfigured for a feature film or a stage musical, or a magazine.

It's the culture's new religion, and Television is doing its part to spread the gospel. So prepare yourself to receive the new season. Bow your heads. Let us pray.

ARTS BRIEF

Slap happy and on its own, L7 is coming to town

Iowa City is in store for some name-brand punk with almost 11 years' experience to make it all legit. L7 will be rolling into town Saturday night at Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St., with a little more up-beat momentum than traditionally would be expected.

The lovely ladies of L7 are on tour to support their newly released Slap-Happy, but that's only half the story. The record, released Tuesday, is the first from the group's own label, Wax Tadpole Records. The label is a joint venture between the group and L.A.-based independent label Bong Load Records. L7 will have complete control over its releases and future projects. Bong Load will provide licensing, marketing and distribution.

As far as labels go, the switch to having its own label will complete the label-cycle L7 has been on since its inception. The group has gone from indie to mid-size to major in a text-book process that has finally put it right where the members want — on their own.

The group has down sized a bit, losing bassist, Gail Greenwood. The loss will not be a drastic change for L7, however, as its critically acclaimed 1997 release, The Beauty Process: Triple Platinum, also went out without a bassist.

The recent release, Slap-Happy, promises to be rooted in traditional L7 style with raucous guitars and slick deliveries laced with humor. The 12-song album will even feature a hip-hop track, "Freeway."

L7 will be bringing all this positive energy to Gabe's at 9 p.m. for a $12 cover-charge. Honkey and Squidboy will open for the all-ages show. For more information call Gabe's at 354-4788.

Drop/Add process could be made easier

At the start of every semester, the complaints begin. Starting on the first day of class, students can no longer register over the computer using ISIS. Instead, they have to run all over campus with little green cards, getting signatures to add or drop courses. It is a pain, and what is worse is that it seems unnecessary.

Parents will tell you that it could be worse. After all, they had to stand in line for hours to register, getting to the front of the line only to find out that all of the classes they wanted were full. But it is such a shame that with the technology already in place, we have to put up arbitrary hurdles to make things harder.

It is true that adding or dropping classes shouldn't be a frivolous thing. By the first day, professors may want a clear indication of the number of students that will be attending their class. But what if the time to use ISIS was extended just a little, maybe through the first week of class? Then students would have a small window of time to actually attend classes, get an idea of what the homework load would be and how well they will get along with the professor. If they try this now, they are faced with standing in line for a green slip, standing in line for the professor's signature for each class, standing in line to talk to their advisers and standing in line at the registration desk.

Allowing students to drop classes over ISIS during the first week might encourage people who tend to procrastinate. As it is now, there are no advantages to officially dropping during the first week instead of waiting until the drop deadline. This would help students who are waiting to add a full class.

Maybe the ISIS policy was put in place so that students would be forced to discuss schedule changes with their advisers. But the first week is one of the busiest for student advisers, and many advisers trust the judgment of the student and simply sign the green card without paying too much attention or asking any questions. And because students can change their schedules any time before the first day of class without the permission of their adviser, the deadline seems arbitrary.

Allowing students to change their schedules using ISIS through the first week of class would give students more flexibility. It's hard to plan a schedule until you have a chance to actually experience it. Students would be able to save a lot of time at the beginning of the semester with this simple change.

A week one survival guide for those who might need the help

Ha! You knew it was coming. Lurking on the horizon like so many would-be Republican Party nominees. The one, the only, the great — the Obligatory First Week Coverage.

Oh please, like I was going to waste this valuable space to prognosticate on the state of the world or current events in politics? Sure, and pass up the priceless opportunity to orate? I don't think so.

So, everyone feeling all right? The first week wasn't so horrid that you've already decided to cut your losses, take your 75 percent of refundable tuition and split, right? I should hope not, for the first week is only a little introduction to college. Don't worry, it's only going to get much, much worse. That's speaking, of course, to those who don't already know, the "fresher" members of the student body. Hee hee!

Freshman! Oh, but don't begrudge me an insolent cackle. For we were all once where you are right now. Stumbling around campus, trying in vain to find the IMU, Phillips Hall, anything. This location anxiety troubles you, because you swore you knew where these buildings were during Orientation. Campus seemed simple when you walked around with your family, toting your bright yellow bag that just screamed "FRESHMAN, RIGHT HERE!" OK, for the last time, just take Burlington and follow it all the way until it curves ... No, just consult a map.

But what will make this year stand out from all the other repetitive and tedious back-to-school beginnings? Well, for one thing, this is the last semester before the year before the millennium. So, if calculations are correct, when we return from the winter interlude, our courses will be instructed by robots, and our homework will be entirely online. We will receive a daily ration of food capsules, and the downtown parking problem will be eliminated, as transportation will have been completely monopolized by teleports. It'll be the future, after all.

As a small and hopefully non-threatening Public Service Announcement, I would also like to gently suggest that everyone adopt a cheery, or at least, not totally malevolent attitude. After all, everyone else is just as miffed that their summer is over. Not too many folks were anxiously counting the days until that darn summer break would finally be over, and they could make a blissful return to school. Do not walk around glaring and smashing into people. This just makes for a hostile, not to mention dangerous, school atmosphere. Now, if you run into one of those individuals who is just bursting to the seams with excitement over their 20-hour schedule, that's a different story.

And, for a point of common interest, isn't it rather amazing how, on the first day of classes, people milling around in the hall waiting for their rooms to open up can seem very threatening? But once inside the pseudo-friendly confines of the classroom, those same people start to take on an entirely more human aspect. The fright factor is eliminated, and those people become your allies, your partners in academic endeavors. Of course, this phenomenon usually only occurs in smaller-sized classes.

Lecture classes are another story. Your long-lost, separated at birth, twin brother could step from the same lecture hall as you on the last day of class, and you would have had no clue as to his presence. There is something distinctly dehumanizing about huge lecture classes. General rule of thumb: Stay awake, and try to find one or two nice people who can help you with the former and who might be gracious enough to share notes once in a while.

This year, as always, I look forward to the new semester with a renewed sense of hope. The hope that maybe this semester things really will be different, maybe this will be the semester to pull it all together, to find out what it is you really want to get out of school, and then actually accomplish it. The smell of new notebooks and folders always shakes up my cynical exterior, at least for a few days. So friends, good luck as you begin to re-adjust to the school mode. Everyone's parents wanted me to pass on the message that they want you to eat well and study hard. Of course, the list goes on and on, but I'll stop at No. 12: Make sure you wear clean underwear. Ah, finally a mantra to live by.

CAMPUS VIEWS

Bush must admit to mistakes

George W. Bush seems adamant — there is no way he will be more explicit with the media about his rumored cocaine use as a youth.

"I have told the American people all I'm going to tell them ... I don't want to send a signal to children that whatever I may have done is OK," Bush said at a news conference on Aug. 19.

Strange words for someone who has been more than forthcoming about his past as a heavy drinker, his fidelity as a spouse and his religious conversion. His admission of his drinking past — Bush drinks no alcohol today — seems not to have hurt him in the Iowa straw poll. Yet, there is much hesitation in the Bush camp to come completely clean and confess a felony such as drug use.

Certainly, the politics of personal destruction should come to an end. Presidential candidates deserve private lives, just as their constituents do. But any candidate for an important federal job is subject to questions regarding drug use. Any member of a Secret Service detail, the FBI, indeed, the presidential Cabinet, must give a detailed history of drug use. Why shouldn't a candidate for what is regarded as the most important federal job in the nation?

Not saying anything smacks of hypocrisy. Further, it speaks volumes about the type of campaign and the type of candidate Bush represents. Not only might many people simply assume that he did use cocaine at one point, some of them will be offended that Bush did not have the backbone to be honest and straightforward about past transgressions.

The president of the United States is, in fact, a serious job, Mr. Bush. Privacy is not a relevant defense when laws have potentially been broken.

Bush has a point: A presidential candidate who used drugs is not a good example for the kids. But admitting his error and explaining his mistake will show quality of character on Bush's part. Indeed, it's not admitting drug use that seems to show that you can, as one Ohio ninth-grader said, "Do drugs and get away with it."

Staying silent on the issue only fuels the fires of rumor and hearsay — Bush can put those flames out, but it's up to him.

Staff editorial from The Daily Illini, University of Illinois.

Louisiana needs more money, not manners

This June, Mike Foster, governor of the state of Louisiana, signed into law legislation that will require the girls and boys of that state's elementary schools to show the respect due to the men and women who teach them.

Believed to be the first U.S. law mandating respectful conversation, it requires students, kindergarten through fifth grade, to address teachers and other school employees as "ma'am" or "sir," "Mr." or "Ms." as the case may be.

Students who fail to show the appropriate respect can be punished, though the law leaves enforcement of the rule in the hands of each of the 66 public school systems — with the only restriction being that students cannot be suspended or expelled for failing to comply.

At last the citizens of Louisiana can rest easy. No longer will they be terrorized in the night by 10-year-olds packing pistols. Oh no. The law didn't take guns out of the hands of children, did it? Just put words in their mouths.

Well, at least Louisianians won't have to worry about their kids growing up to be loud and surly like New Yorkers or lax and familiar like those kids in California. Not that Louisiana's problem (and every state has some) has ever been rudeness. Quite the contrary.

Louisianians are already more likely to address older people or people in authority with the appropriate titles than your average Wisconsinite. In fact — and just going by the prevailing stereotypes (as we have been in comparing Louisiana with the other great states we've been maligning) — the sons and daughters of Louisiana have been thought of as ignorant, backward hicks, a conception totally at odds with the real facts of the majority of Louisianians, but there you are.

This somewhat more significant image problem could possibly be rectified if the Legislature of that worthy state would spend more money and time actually improving the education their little tykes are to receive, rather than burdening the already bloated statute books with one more useless, featherweight law. Just a thought.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Deer kill plan a good idea

Ken Wessels' letter regarding Wednesday's DI story "Council OKs Deer Kill Plan" suffers from a lack of direct experience of the deer overpopulation problem in Iowa City. The deer problem in Iowa City is so bad, in fact, that I have to drive a tank of a car to class every day just to ensure that I won't be killed or mangled by the many deer that stray onto East Rochester Avenue. These deer live and graze in the woods (Ken calls them "harvested fields") along Interstate 80 and frequently interfere with traffic on east-west thoroughfares.

What I don't understand about Wessels' reasoning is that he notes where the deer are (next to the interstate) but fails to see the direct consequence of this: Deer, not the world's smartest animals, are prone to getting smashed into the fire-wall of a passing Honda. How much more dangerous should the situation get before we start solving the problem?

It should also be noted that these deer are not all fawns. As with all mammals, there are adult males in this group, and they are large. They are big, dangerous bucks that become aggressive around mating season — the fall. As I said before, these are not the world's smartest animals, and they are going to become aggressive toward anything that moves, including people walking their dogs or jogging. So let's try to stop imagining the deer population as "Bambi" and start understanding why killing them is sometimes necessary.

Politicians don't need raise

There must be a party going on in Washington, and they have no idea what is going on elsewhere in the country. The Republican Congress has talked big about giving the American people a tax cut, but did they do it? No!

What they did instead was give themselves a raise. But some are already making in excess of $100,000, which is quite a bit. This brings the pay of a regular congressman to more than $141,000, while the speaker of the House and other leaders receive more. The measure will also increase the president's salary from $200,000 per year to $400,000 per year. I don't see how a president can get by on $400,000 per year while you and I pay for his room and board, guards, an airplane to fly all over the world and all the parties he gives to foreign dignitaries. We also have to pay for the beds that he rents out to people who pad his pockets well.

Just like Atlanta: Johnson smashes record

Michael Johnson broke the 11-year-old 400-meter dash record by .11 seconds Thursday.

By Bert Rosenthal
 Associated Press

SEVILLE, Spain — With his churning legs a blur and his feet flashing gold, Michael Johnson did it again.

Johnson shattered another world record Thursday night — this time, breaking the 400-meter mark with a sensational clocking of 43.18 seconds at the World Championships.

In clipping .11 seconds off the record of 43.29 set by Butch Reynolds in 1988, the confident, highly focused Johnson gave a performance reminiscent of his 200-meter triumph at the 1996 Olympics. With his all-gold shoes flashing on the Atlanta track, he clocked an astounding 19.32, cracking his 200 world record by .34 seconds.

Though the difference was not as huge this time, Johnson and his black-and-gold shoes still left his pursuers far behind, with runner-up Sanderlei Parrela of Brazil more than one second back at 44.29.

But just like Atlanta, as Johnson crossed the finish line, he spread both hands out toward the crowd and smiled broadly. Then, he stood next to the field clock that showed his time.

After receiving congratulations from the other runners, he lay down on the track for a minute, soaking up the applause. He then rose and began his victory lap, carrying an American flag, by slapping hands with fans.

Afterward, Johnson said he could run even faster.

"I can do better, but it's a world record. I broke the world record in the 200 and then shattered it," he said, referring first to his 19.66 at the 1996 U.S. championships at Atlanta. "I think I can do the same thing in the 400."

"With the kind of shape I'm in, I know I can run 42 seconds. I refuse to believe I can't do that."

It was only the second time in 31 years that the 400 record has been broken. Lee Evans' record of 43.86, set in the 1968 Mexico Olympics, stood for 20 years before Reynolds

IOWA FIELD HOCKEY 1999

Justin O'Brien/
 The Daily Iowan

Fifth-year senior Quan Nim, also called "Nana Nim," is the emotional leader on a young Hawkeye squad. Nim was a second-team All-Big Ten selection last season. She had eight goals and two assists, and was Iowa's second-leading scorer.

Nebraska to choose quarterback

Today's Husker scrimmage will determine the starting quarterback for the Sept. 4 opener in Iowa City.

By Doug Alden
 Associated Press

LINCOLN, Neb. — The battle between Bobby Newcombe and Eric Crouch over who will be the starting quarterback in Nebraska's season opener will end today during a team scrimmage, coach Frank Solich said. After that, it's up to the coaches.

"Basically it will be settled (Friday) and announced on Monday," Solich said Thursday.

Newcombe, who started last year's season opener but missed more than half the season with a knee injury, and Crouch have been sharing time with the first-team offense during preseason drills. Today they will make their final case for the top spot in the No. 6 Cornhuskers' season opener next Saturday at Iowa.

Newcombe was considered the frontrunner when preseason practices began, but Solich said the final decision won't be made until after today's scrimmage, where the top offensive and defensive teams will each face scout teams.

The starting I-back job is also still open, Solich said, with DeAngelo Evans, Dan Alexander and Correll Buckhalter contending. Buckhalter was the Cornhuskers' leading rusher a year ago, starting seven games after Evans and Alexander were sidelined with injuries.

Solich gave the Cornhuskers a bit of a break Thursday with a helmets-only practice at Memorial Stadium. He hopes the lighter workout gets them primed for a game-like situation today.

"The game is basically a week away and so the excitement is starting to build. They'll be anxious for it," he said.

Solich said Nebraska has been reasonably lucky so far in terms of injuries and doesn't want to risk that by going too long in today's scrimmage. He expects the Huskers to play at least two quarters in the scrimmage.

"I think we need to work on everything. I don't think we're anywhere near where we need to be in terms of our offense or defense, execution wise. We need to really start setting a game tempo," he said. "Practice is always different from a game."

Minnesota may be in trouble again

The men's athletic department failed to offer violence awareness training for its athletes.

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The University of Minnesota failed to provide sexual violence awareness training for its male athletes last year, one year after a series of alleged assaults by star athletes, a report said Thursday.

The Star Tribune said in a copyright story that even when training was provided in past years, administrators ignored warnings that coaches and athletes were not taking it seriously.

Jamie Tiedemann, director of the campus Program Against Sexual Violence, told the Star Tribune she raised the issue more than once with an assistant to McKinley Boston, vice president of student development and athletics, who oversees Tiedemann's program, but got nowhere.

The newspaper said university president Mark Yudof appeared surprised and troubled by the allegations when asked about them Wednesday. He said the men's athletics department appears to have "a management problem."

Two advocates for PASV told the Star Tribune some athletes were so hostile during training sessions that program officials no longer wanted to conduct the sessions, and tried to bring in a nationally known outside group instead.

With a disappointing start last year, the Iowa field hockey team is looking for early wins when it hosts the Hawkeye Invitational this weekend.

By Robert Yarborough
 The Daily Iowan

After struggling to a mid-season 5-8 record, Iowa field hockey coach Beth Beglin told her players to take a long look in the mirror during the course of last season.

The team had dropped its first three games of the season and No. 5 Penn State was coming to town.

No one expected that game would be the spark that resurrected one of the biggest comebacks in the proud tradition of Iowa field hockey.

Iowa defeated Penn State 4-2.

"Last season, the Penn State game was a turning point for us in many ways," Beglin said. "It was our first home game in a long time and it also was the point where this team began to gel."

Iowa will kick off its new season tomorrow against Maine at Grant Field as the Hawkeyes host the Iowa Invitational. The match is scheduled to begin at 1 p.m.

Everyone still has last year in their minds. Following the upset against Penn State, Iowa continued the momentum to win four out of the next five regular season games.

"We are a far different team than what people saw at the beginning of last year," Beglin said. "One of the biggest changes this season is that we are starting the season where we left off last year. United, enthusiastic and with everybody on the same page."

This season, Beglin will have a few more athletes joining her in what has become tough competition just for playing time. A talented freshman class dubbed the "Fab 11" by Beglin, has joined the seven returning starters from last season.

Fifth-year senior Quan Nim returns to the lineup as the emotional leader and second-leading scorer from a year ago. Nim should ease the pain of losing top scorer Kerry Lessard, a first team All-Big Ten selection in 1998.

Complementing Nim in the backfield will be two of the better defensive players in the conference. Senior Sarah Thorn was a West Regional All-American a season ago and senior Alynyn Freet led the Hawkeyes with 14 assists last season.

Due to the largest recruiting class in Iowa history, depth will not be a problem like it has been for the last two seasons.

"Ever since I have been here, we have had no depth," Freet said. "The new recruits have been great. If someone is having an off-day it makes you work that much harder. There is someone behind you to push you all the time."

Nim agreed that the depth has added a more competitive atmosphere this year, but also added that a key to the season is starting strong.

"We worked on strategy early this year and defensive communication is much better," Nim said. "We cannot start off 0-3 again, that cannot happen if we are going to be successful."

Beglin expects the toughest competition to come from Big Ten defending champion Penn State, Michigan and possibly Ohio State. However, this team also has something to prove to its naysayers.

"It has been a long, rebuilding process to get where we are. This team is hungry, and think the team is also sick of people wondering if we will be good again," Beglin said. "We want to leave no doubts at the end of this year."

First a five-hour flight, then Penn State for Arizona

By David Kinney
 Associated Press Writer

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — Joe Paterno just about fell off his chair when he heard the question: Would he have agreed to play Arizona in Saturday's Pigskin Classic if the game were in Tucson?

"In Arizona? In August? Sure I would," the coach said, his Brooklyn accent steeped in sarcasm as he pondered a sweltering afternoon in Arizona Stadium. "We woulda played 'em anywhere."

OK, maybe not. That Dick Tomey is flying his fourth-ranked Wildcats 1,918 miles east to play No. 3 Penn State in Beaver Stadium says a lot: He must think he has quite a football team.

Risking a season-opening loss is always scary for a team with national championship dreams. Risking one of these games on the road against a Top 5 opponent? That just isn't done.

"They have a lot of confidence in their program and a lot of respect for the Penn State players to come into this area and play us," Paterno said with sincerity.

Most of Tomey's players have never been closer to Pennsylvania than the Rockies. Arizona has never even taken a team farther east than Miami. And add a dash of jetlag to the novelty factor: The players will have lost two hours by the time they arrive in State College Friday afternoon after a five-hour charter.

As Hawaii's coach for a decade, Tomey knows better than most how to handle a football team on a marathon trip, and he said he is making no special preparations. At Hawaii, "we traveled west to east quite a bit to play in our conference, and those trips are more arduous and difficult than any anybody could possibly make on the mainland," Tomey said. "The biggest thing is you have to go with a good team."

Policeman who defended Knight faces charges

INDIANAPOLIS — A state police sergeant faces internal charges that he improperly interviewed a witness and then disclosed that information to Bob Knight during a police investigation of a restaurant fight involving the Indiana coach. Sgt. J.D. Maxwell, who is a friend of Knight and has refereed games at the coach's basketball camp for four years, will answer the charges at a disciplinary hearing Sept. 2.

In June, Maxwell spoke at a news conference with Knight, who had been accused by another man of making racist remarks during dinner and then choking him during a confrontation in the restaurant parking lot. The county prosecutor declined to file charges, saying it appeared Knight had been provoked.

But state police this week notified Maxwell, an evidence technician at the Bloomington post, that he faces charges of insubordination, conduct unbecoming an officer and disclosing confidential information.

Ogunleye gives up big bucks to help Hoosiers

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. — The big money will still be there next year. This year is Adewale Ogunleye's last chance to help Indiana get to a bowl game.

Iowa Soccer

This Week: The Iowa women's soccer team opens the season against St. Louis tomorrow at 7 p.m. Last year: The teams did not play each other.

Last season: The Hawkeyes finished 6-10-2 and 1-7-1 in the Big Ten. Standout Statistic: Darkness has not been to kind to Iowa during their two years of existence. They lost their only night game to Illinois 5-0 last year.

Iowa's Key: Whoever steps in at goalkeeper needs to be solid in her baptism of fire. The two candidates for the job are redshirt freshman, Elizabeth Hendel and sophomore Melissa Wickart. They will replace Gabe Mauren who played the majority of the games the last two years.

Coach's Comment: "I know a lot of their players are from the St. Louis area," Iowa coach Stephanie Gabbert said. "I know that they are a middle of the pack team in Conference USA and it should be a pretty even match."

Next Week: The Hawkeyes host Wisconsin-Green Bay at home next Wednesday at 4 p.m.

Projected as a possible first-round draft pick, the fifth-year Indiana senior defensive end decided to put the NFL off one more season. He still has some unfinished business in college. "I didn't come back just to hang out and play 11 games," said Ogunleye, already the Indiana career leader in sacks (26 1/2) and tackles for loss (53). "We know what we can do," he said of the Hoosiers in 1999. "Personally, I am excited. We have a lot of new guys. I think you'll see a lot of difference with our coverages. We'll play a lot of man-to-man this year. It'll put a lot more pressure on the guys up front in order to hurry the quarterbacks."

SAID WHAT?

"I don't know what I'll be doing during the off day. Maybe play video games or something."

Davenport, Williams, Seles advance

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — In her third try, Lindsay Davenport finally figured out Amelie Mauresmo and advanced to the semifinals of the Pilot Pen with a 6-1, 6-2 victory Thursday night.

Mauresmo held a 2-0 edge in their brief series, including a semifinal upset in the Australian Open this year. The top-seeded Davenport gave the hard-hitting Frenchwoman little opportunity for a repeat.

"It was one of the best matches I've played in the last few months. I've been trying to play very aggressive," Davenport said.

Davenport said her game plan, a week before defense of her U.S. Open title, is starting to come together.

"Going into the U.S. Open, I really want to take short balls, come in and hit second serve and go for winners," she said.

After losing the first game of the opening set, Davenport went on a six-game tear featuring crisp returns from

Rain washes out first round of NEC Invite

AKRON, Ohio — The tournament with a different name, different field a much different purse couldn't shake the same old weather problems Thursday when storms washed out much of the first round in the NEC Invitational.

After a three-hour delay, lightning, rain and the threat of more storms forced officials to suspend the first round at 5:30 p.m.

The early leaders included John Huston, who was at 2-under and standing over a 3-foot par putt on the 15th hole when the sirens sounded the first time.

Former ISU coach to plead guilty

AMES, Iowa — Former Iowa State volleyball coach Kerry Miller, facing a charge of lying about her credentials, has agreed to plead guilty and will be sentenced next week. Her agreement with the Story County attorney's office avoided a trial that was to have started Thursday in district associate court. She is to enter the plea by next Tuesday and will be sentenced at that time.

Harris battling cancer

AMES — Danny Harris, who took on the world's top runners as a hurdler and later fought a drug habit, now faces another battle.

Harris, a three-time NCAA champion at Iowa State in the 1980s and an Olympic silver medalist, underwent surgery in Des Moines last week for colon cancer.

He came out of the operation in good shape but still has to undergo eight or nine more sessions of chemotherapy, Iowa State coach Steve Lynn said.

Jones declared out of the championships

TRACK & FIELD

Johnson is only the second runner to hold both long sprint records at the same time. The other was Tommie Smith, who owned the 220-yard record from 1966-68 and the 440-yard mark from 1967-68.

Michael Conley, the 1992 Olympic triple jump champion and now elite athlete coordinator for USA Track and Field, thinks Johnson can break the 43-second barrier — and in the not too distant future.

"I think he'll go 42.90-something this year," Conley said. "You get a meet where he doesn't have to run rounds and he can do it."

The 400 record was one Johnson had been chasing nearly his entire career, and after overcoming health problems this year, including a misalignment of his hips, he ran it down.

The world record had been a long time in coming," Johnson said. "This was the perfect setting. I wanted the medal, but I also wondered how many more times I would have to lower the record."

Johnson probably ranks as the most dominating track and field athlete of the 1990s. The record capped a remarkable decade in which he broke two records, became the first man to sweep the 200 and 400 at the same Olympic Games (1996), and the first to sweep both long sprints at the World Championships (1995). He also won four consecutive world titles in the 400 and he won two 200 world titles.

"He's superhuman, he's phenomenal," U.S. long jumper Erick Walder said.

"He's my hero," third-place finisher Alejandro Cardenas of Mexico said.

Johnson was so confident that he felt he would be running alone near the finish.

"I felt like running 21 flat for 200," he said. "I didn't feel like any of the other guys were going to do that. I knew I was going to have a lead. I had to make sure I didn't panic having that kind of lead and back off. I had to trust in my ability to finish strong."

That he did, powering away from the field down the final straightaway as the crowd of 41,515 stood and cheered.

Johnson's splits for each 100 were approximately 10.9, 10.1, 11.3 and 11.9.

Johnson and his coach of 14 years, Clyde Hart, had planned to chase Reynolds' mark this season.

"My coach and I sat down at the beginning of the year and he asked me what I wanted to do," Johnson said. "I said, 'I want to break the world record in the 400.'"

"I knew the opportunity was there to get the world record because I'm in great shape. It's a World Championships and the motivation was there, I just wanted to make sure I didn't mess up the opportunity."

It was the first world record broken at the championships and earned Johnson a $100,000 bonus, on top of the $60,000 for the victory.

In winning, Johnson also tied Carl Lewis for the most gold medals at the championships with eight. He can break that record Sunday as the anchor on the United States' 1,600-meter relay team in the final event.

Thursday's other three finals produced two championship records.

Maksim Tarasov extended Russia's domination of the men's pole vault — Sergei Bubka won the event at the first six championships — by winning at 19 feet, 9 inches.

Ethiopia's Gete Wami, the 1996 Olympic bronze medalist in the women's 10,000 meters, took 16 seconds off the championship record, beating Britain's Paula Radcliffe by more than two seconds at 30:24.56.

In Thursday's other final, Australia's Cathy Freeman, who in 1997 became the first aboriginal to win a world title, won the women's 400 again at 49.67, the second-fastest in the world this year.

Meanwhile, Marion Jones, the women's 100-meter gold medalist and long jump bronze medalist, was declared out of the championships one day after pulling up in the semifinals of the 200 with back pain and spasms. Jones, who had declared her intention of winning an unprecedented four golds, was to have been a member of one of the U.S. relay teams.

Sammy blasts 53rd, Cubs finally win

CHICAGO (AP) — Sammy Sosa hit his major league-leading 53rd home run and the Chicago Cubs rallied from five runs down to beat the San Francisco Giants 11-10 on Mickey Morandini's RBI double in the ninth inning.

The Cubs trailed 7-2 after three innings before rallying behind Sosa and Mark Grace, who hit consecutive solo homers in the fifth inning. Sosa has 10 homers in the last 12 games for the Cubs, who are just 5-20 in August.

Sosa, who has nearly one-third of the Cubs 160 homers, connected on a 1-1 pitch from Livan Hernandez in the fifth. Sosa is nine games ahead of last year's pace, when he hit No. 53 in the Cubs' 135th game and ended with 66.

The Cubs won the game in the ninth. Jeff Reed hit a leadoff double off Robb Nen (3-7) and two outs later Morandini doubled to left-center to give the Cubs their first win in eight games this season against the Giants.

Pirates 8, Rockies 4

PITTSBURGH — Brian Giles drove in four runs as the Pittsburgh Pirates roughed up Colorado ace Pedro Astacio for six runs in the first two innings of an 8-4 victory over the Rockies on Thursday.

Al Martin had three hits and two RBIs to back rookie left-hander Jimmy Anderson (2-1), who retired the first 10 hitters before being lifted after 5 2-3 innings in his third career start.

Diamondbacks 12, Marlins 2

MIAMI — Even among strikeout pitchers, Randy Johnson is the fastest ever.

Johnson reached 300 strikeouts in record time, notching nine in seven innings Thursday to help the streaking Arizona Diamondbacks beat the Florida Marlins, 12-2.

Johnson (14-8) achieved the milestone in his 29th start. The previous best was Pedro Martinez, who reached 300 in 31 starts in 1997.

Devil Rays 9, White Sox 7

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Bubba

Michael S. Green/Associated Press

Chicago's Sammy Sosa follows through on his 53rd home run of the season during the fifth inning against San Francisco Thursday.

Trammell hit a three-run homer and Jose Guillen had a two-run shot as the Tampa Bay Devil Rays beat the Chicago White Sox 9-7 Thursday.

Trammell homered during a four-run, fifth-inning that put the Devil Rays ahead 8-1. Guillen, acquired from the Pittsburgh Pirates in a four-player trade on July 23, hit his first Tampa Bay homer in the fourth.

Padres 4, Brewers 3

SAN DIEGO — Reggie Sanders hit a go-ahead, two-run triple in the seventh inning to back Andy Ashby and lift San Diego.

The Padres, who were outscored 33-3 by the Phillies in the last two games of their six-game road trip, got a strong start from Ashby in their return home.

Ashby (12-7) allowed three runs — one earned — on eight hits in seven innings. The right-hander struck out six and did not walk a batter.

Reds 10, Expos 4

MONTREAL — Montreal's Vladimir Guerrero hit a two-run homer in his second at-bat to extend his hitting streak to 31 games — the longest in the majors in 12 years — in the Expos loss to Cincinnati.

Guerrero drove the first pitch he saw in the fourth inning from Juan Guzman (4-1) over the wall in right center for his 32nd homer for the longest streak in the majors since San Diego's Benito Santiago's 34-game streak from Aug. 25-Oct. 2, 1987.

Milwaukee's Paul Molitor had a 39-gamer earlier the same season.

Japan advances to Little League final

■ Toms River will have to wait a day to see if they can get to the championship.

By Jeffery Bair
Associated Press

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. — Japan will have a shot at redemption in the Little League World Series.

The team from Osaka defeated poor-fielding Yabucoa, Puerto Rico 12-2 Thursday to advance to Saturday's championship game.

Toms River, N.J.'s game with Phenix City, Ala., in the U.S. final was suspended in the top of the second inning because of rain with Toms River leading 2-0. It will resume at 11 a.m. EDT Friday with Toms River's Chris Cunningham on first base, no outs and Bryan Woodall having come in to replace Colby Rasmus at pitcher for Phenix City.

Eric Campesi walked to start the game, took two bases on wild pitches and then scored on Casey Gaynor's grounder, and Derrick Egan later scored on Mike Casale's grounder. In the next half-inning, Toms River manager Mike Gaynor started Zack Del Vento but pulled him after a walk and replaced him with Casey Gaynor, his son, who then struck out the side.

Japan has a team in the final for the second consecutive year. Kashima lost 12-9 to Toms River last year in a game with 11 home runs.

Osaka's players avenged a 3-1 loss to Yabucoa on Tuesday mostly by hitting singles and taking extra bases when Yabucoa's fielders faltered.

"Our pitching was what got us here, and that broke down a bit, and our defense definitely broke down," Yabucoa manager Edwin Carrasquillo said through interpreter Micah Hughes.

Sho Nishida ended the game when a two-run single in the bottom of the fifth gave Osaka a 12-2 lead. Little League games end when the margin reaches 10 runs. Relief pitcher Kazutoshi Adachi left because of stomach pains in the fourth inning.

With two outs in the first, short-stop Josue Rivera let Sho Nishida's grounder skip over his glove. Two batters later, Kazutoshi Adachi drove home Kazuki Sumiyama with a single to kick off an seven-run inning off losing pitcher Cristian Gonzalez and Francisco DeJesus.

All the runs were unearned, and Puerto Rico's outfielders consistently missed their cutoff men and threw wildly.

With the large lead, starting pitcher and staff ace Sumiyama was replaced, keeping him eligible for Saturday's championship. He had a two-run homer in the third off Jose Casanova, the last of four Puerto Rico pitchers.

"I am excited about pitching in the Little League final, and I hope someday to pitch for the Hanshin Tigers," a professional team in Osaka, Sumiyama said through interpreter Bill Lundy.

Manager Tsutomu Kameyama said he couldn't get comfortable even with the lead.

"With kids, you never know what is going to happen," Kameyama, a former player for the Hanshin Tigers, said through the interpreter. "Maybe if I was up by 100 runs, well, then I would feel comfortable."

The series' smallest player — 4-foot-7, 74-pound Takashi Sakurai — had a pinch-hit bunt for a base hit in the first and jumped around like a sweetstakes winner afterward.

Gonzalez hit a two-run homer in the third for Yabucoa, Puerto Rico's first team in the series in 20 years.

A new Clemente plays in Pittsburgh

Colorado's Edgard Clemente played in the same outfield his uncle graced 27 years ago.

By Alan Robinson
Associated Press

Gene J. Puskar/Associated Press
Colorado's Edgard Clemente leads off second base Thursday.

PITTSBURGH — The number isn't quite the same — it's 12, or 21 turned backward — but the name is: Clemente. In Pittsburgh, there is no more famous name in sports — or a name more difficult to live up to.

Even for a visiting player. Even for Roberto Clemente's own nephew.

For the first time in 27 years, a player named Clemente played major league baseball in Pittsburgh, catching fly balls in the very outfield where Roberto played, batting in the very batter's box where Roberto Clemente stood before getting his 3,000th hit nearly 27 years ago.

To rookie center fielder Edgard Clemente of the Colorado Rockies, playing this week in the city where his uncle is revered, in the stadium where his uncle played his final three seasons, was an ethereal, unforgettable experience.

"I saw his statue outside the stadium. I walked across the bridge that is named after him," Clemente said. "The park outside the stadium is named for him, too. He is still a hero in Pittsburgh. How many players have statues? To have a statue, you must be a big player."

Roberto Clemente remains very big in Pittsburgh, where there were more "Clemente 21" jerseys in the stands for Thursday's Rockies-Pirates game than for any current Pirates player.

The statue. The bridge. The legacy. It's almost enough to make a promising young player who has yet to prove himself in the majors wish he had another name. Which Edgard Clemente might have next year.

He dropped his father's last name, Velazquez, to go by his mother's maiden name in tribute to his uncle, who died three years before he was born. But he may go back to Velazquez next year, now that he has returned the name Clemente to major league baseball.

"Maybe next year, maybe in two years, I will change back," induction. Edgard's mother, Carmen, who was Roberto's sister, and Roberto Clemente's sons also embraced the change. Luis Clemente called Edgard in Pittsburgh this week to wish him well.

"I was a little nervous, I was afraid that if I did not do well here that the fans might say something," Clemente said. "But they've been good. When they see my name, they are always very friendly."

A Rockies teammate, pitcher Roberto Ramirez, didn't realize that Edgard Clemente was related to Roberto, thinking he chose the name at random because Roberto Clemente is so revered in Latin American baseball.

"He thought I took it like I might have taken the name McGwire or Sosa because they are popular now," Clemente said. "Like I could have called myself Edgard Sosa."

L.A. cruises in WNBA playoffs

■ Lisa Leslie's big night leads the Sparks in Game 1 of the conference final.

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Lisa Leslie scored 15 of her 23 points in the first half as the Los Angeles Sparks overcame a slow start to defeat defending champion Houston 75-60 Thursday night in the opener of the best-of-3 WNBA Western Conference finals.

DeLisha Milton added 16 points and La'Keshia Frett had 11 for Los Angeles. Sheryl Swoopes had 17 points, Tina Thompson added 13 before fouling out and Cynthia Cooper contributed 12 for Houston, which has won both WNBA championships. The second and, if necessary, third games would be played at Houston, where the Comets were 15-1 this season.

The Western Conference winner faces the winner of the Eastern Conference series between New York and Charlotte in the best-of-3 title series.

Playing before a Forum crowd of 10,099, the Sparks led 33-29 at halftime. After an exchange of baskets to start the second half, Los Angeles scored nine consecutive points to lead 44-31.

Cooper ended the streak with a basket, but Los Angeles went on a 6-0 run for a 50-33 advantage with 14:48 left.

Thompson and Janeth Arcain hit consecutive 3-pointers to pull Houston to 11 points with 11:41 remaining. A 9-2 run helped cut the lead to 61-54 with 5:05 to play, but Los Angeles scored the next six points and led by at least 12 the rest of the game.

Breaking down the Big Ten

Compiled by Greg Wallace and Mike Kelly

Penn State

1998: 9-3 record. Beat Kentucky in the Outback Bowl. Ranked 17th by AP.

Departures: Floyd Wedderburn, an offensive tackle who was picked in the draft by Seattle, is the only significant loss. Otherwise, the Lions look like they're ready for a successful season.

Player to watch: Middle linebacker Brandon Short. He doesn't get the publicity that teammate LaVar Arrington receives, but he is just as potent of a player. The run-stuffing specialist was a 1998 Butkus Award candidate, and passed up the NFL to return to Happy Valley for his senior season.

Outlook: Nothing short of a Sugar Bowl should be expected from the Lions this year. The schedule is tough, with a visit from Arizona tomorrow and a trip to Miami. JoePa's first championship was in New Orleans; the Lions could give him reason to celebrate in the Superdome again.

Illinois

1998: 3-8 record. Last bowl in 1994, beat East Carolina in the Liberty Bowl.

Departures: Losing cornerback Bobby Jackson to a knee injury will hurt, badly. It would be nice if the Illini could have subtracted their defensive line; three starters return, but they combined for only six sacks last year.

Player to watch: Outside linebacker Danny Clark. He's a two-time All-Big Ten honorable mention, and led the team with 115 tackles last fall. He is a serious contender for All-American status.

Outlook: Not good. This team has a good attitude, but little else. By the time the Illini come to town on November 6th, they'll be desperate for a win to save Ron Turner's job.

Ohio State

1998: 11-1. Beat Texas A&M in the Sugar Bowl. Ranked 2nd by AP.

Departures: Plentiful. Lineman Rob Murphy, linebacker Andy Katzenmoyer, wideout Dee Miller. David Boston, Antoine Winfield, and Joe Germaine all departed for the NFL. Don't feel bad for the Buckeyes, though. Plenty of talent will replace them.

Player to watch: Outside linebacker Na'il Diggs will make everyone forget about Katzenmoyer. The first-team All-Big Ten pick will pick up the slack Big Kat left behind when he departed Columbus early.

Outlook: If Austin Moherman can fill Germaine's shoes, the Buckeyes should be pretty good. If they can stop Ron Dayne and survive a season-ending trip to the Big House at Michigan, they could be smelling roses come Y2K.

Michigan

1998: 10-3. Beat Arkansas in the Citrus Bowl. Ranked 12th by AP.

Departures: Tai Streets is gone from receiver, and the secondary is thin after losing safety Marcus Ray and corner Andre Weathers. Losing running back Justin Fargas to a broken leg will hurt the running and return games.

Player to watch: Wide receiver David Terrell. This sophomore is a fantastic athlete. His athleticism has evoked memories around Ann Arbor of Heisman winner Charles Woodson. Terrell may even see some time in Michigan's secondary.

Outlook: A solid team, but the schedule is just too tough and the running game too thin to expect Roses from the Wolverines. Trips to Syracuse, Penn State and Wisconsin, as well as visits from Notre Dame and Ohio State will spell doom. The Wolverines will go bowling, but they'll be home before New Year's.

Indiana

1998: 4-7. Last bowl in 1993, lost Independence Bowl to Virginia Tech.

Departures: Few. Nineteen starters return, including senior defensive end Adinwale Oguneye, who opted to come back to the team rather than go to the NFL. Cameron won't have to break in many new faces this year, surely a welcome thought.

Player to watch: Antwaan Randle El is the most exciting player to watch in the Big Ten. He is a threat to score every time he touches the ball, the latest in a line of mobile quarterbacks.

Outlook: This is a team that could go 7-4 or 4-7 without much leeway. Look for somewhere in between, and bet that Randle El will be hungry in 2000.

Wisconsin

1998: 11-1. Beat UCLA in the Rose Bowl. Ranked 6th by the AP.

Departures: Offensive lineman Aaron Gibson is a mammoth loss after being drafted; QB Mike Samuel is gone; K Matt

Davenport; defensive end Tom Burke.

Player to watch: Linebacker Donnell Thompson leads a linebacking corps that would be the best in the Big Ten if it were not for a couple of guys named Arrington and Short. Defense will carry the Badgers this year, so watch out for this All-American candidate.

Outlook: There is no big secret to the type of game plan the Badgers are going to implement this season. Give the ball to Ron Dayne and keep teams on the defense. If a quarterback emerges, Wisconsin could end up with another top 10 finish.

Purdue

1998: 9-3. Beat Kansas State in the Alamo Bowl. Ranked 22nd by AP.

Departures: Tough defensive end Roosevelt Coleman needs to be replaced, but he is the only real loss on this Purdue team.

Player to watch: J. Crabtree should be the happiest back in the country. He has all of his offensive linemen back and every opposing defense is focusing Purdue's spread offense. This should mean big gains for him on the ground.

Outlook: Even if they don't finish as well as they did last year, Purdue is still one of the most exciting teams in the nation to watch. If Drew Brees can exhibit some big-game mettle, the Boilermakers should be in the upper-ranks of the conference.

Northwestern

Last Season: 3-8. Last bowl game 1997, when they lost to Tennessee in the Citrus Bowl.

Departures: All-American D'Wayne Bates is gone on to play on Sundays; and last year's QB Gavin Hoffman has gone on to the Ivy League. Neither of those moves are as surprising as coach Gary Barnett leaving for Colorado.

Player to watch: Punter J.J. Standing will be the busiest man on the team this year. He should be on the field a lot while the team adjusts to a new quarterback and a new coach.

Outlook: Things are not looking good in Evanston as Northwestern may not win a Big Ten game for the second year in a row. They do play Illinois in the last game of the season, though.

Minnesota

1998: 5-6. Last bowl game 1986, lost to Tennessee in the Liberty Bowl.

Departures: Minnesota returns all 11 starters on offense and nine on defense so the Gophers did not lose much. They took a hit in the offseason though, when freshman sensation Thomas Tapeh only partially qualified.

Player to watch: QB Billy Cockerham is the key to Minnesota's success this year. If he can perform like the veteran quarterback he is, Minnesota could make a run at a bowl.

Outlook: Optimism is high in Viking country. Glen Mason is paroling this program from a life sentence in the Big Ten cellar. A bowl is possible if they can get three Big Ten wins.

Michigan State

1998: 6-6. Lost to Washington in the Oahu Bowl.

Departures: No one else but Sedrick Irvin has carried the ball much the past three seasons for the Spartans, but he is playing on Sundays now. No key losses on a defense that could be very good.

Player to Watch: Defensive end Robaire Smith is one of the best defensive ends in the Big Ten, but few know about him. If he can come up big in important games like he did against Ohio State last year, then the Spartans could be in the upper echelons of the conference.

Outlook: The Spartans are the dark horse of the conference this year. After last year's up and down campaign, the Spartans could garner some national attention if they get their act together and win at home against Michigan, Ohio
