FDA OKs new test for pneumonia

■ The procedure could help identify bacteria in 15 minutes.

> By Lauran Neergaard Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Doctors strugding to decide whether a wheezing patient needs antibiotics to treat neumonia are about to get a simple, 15-minute test to help their diagnosis.

The Food and Drug Administration approved Binax Inc.'s first-of-a-kind pneumonia test Monday. It uses a patient's urine to detect a bacterium called Streptococcus pneumoniae, which is estimated to cause 500,000 cases of pneumonia a year.

The test should help doctors decide more quickly if a patient's pneumonia is caused by that bacteria and thus, what treatment is needed.

That's a crucial decision for today's doctors because of a growing army of supergerms," bacteria impervious to antibiotics. Just this month, the government announced that infections caused by antibiotic-resistant Strep pneumoniae are on the rise.

Antibiotics have no effect on viruses. They kill only bacteria. But symptoms alone don't let doctors tell if pneumonia is caused by a virus or bacteria. Conventional pneumonia tests analyze either phlegm or blood and can take two to three days to more than a week. Consequently, doctors often prescribe antibiotics to be safe the best decision for a patient with bacterial pneumonia but an unnecessary exposure to antibiotics for patients whose pneumonia was caused by a virus.

Why is that a problem? Unnecessary use of antibiotics leads other bacteria in the body to evolve resistance to the drugs. That could mean that if the patient were to contract a bacterial infection later, antibiotics might not help.

Binax's new pneumonia test detects an antigen - or protein - present on bacterial cells that gets into patients' urine soon after symptoms appear. The antigen acts as a marker for strep-caused pneumonia. Doctors simply stick a swab into a patient's urine sample and put it on a special reactive strip that within 15 minutes signals if it detects the strep

Elliott: Loftin case got out of hand

■ The UI's decisions in bringing charges against the ex-football player raise questions.

> By Zack Kucharski The Daily Iowan

Charges of extortion and theft against former UI football player Ryan Loftin have drawn criticism from former coaches in the Athletics Department.

Bob Elliott, now an assistant to the men's athletics director, was an assistant head coach and defensive coordinator for the team in 1998. He coached Loftin, who played in all 11 games last year.

"When he played for me, he was a hardworking, great guy," Elliott said. "I'm not involved in the day to day workings of the team, but I am surprised and very disappointed about the situation; it has just gotten way out of hand."

'It's college football'

The relationship Elliott has with Loftin has continued despite recent developments. Elliott had "personal" contact with Loftin in the days prior to the charges, he said.

The attention on the case has been brought by the UI itself, Elliott said. "This whole thing was finished last week after he left the team," he said.

"The program defended itself, and the players stood up for (football Coach) Kirk Ferentz. It was over. Ryan wasn't going anywhere, and this whole thing would have faded off into the sunset if we had let it."

The filing of extortion charges against Loftin is believed to be the first of its kind, said Ann Rhodes, vice president for university relations.

Rhodes said Elliott's feedback is not the only negative feedback she has received about the decision to file charges. She would not comment on any other feedback.

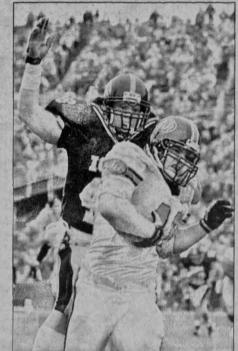

"There is turnover with any coaching change, and that's happened," Elliott said. "Now it's different. I've never seen a player charged with extortion before. This isn't IBM, it's not Microsoft or the NFL, it's college football. There are no surprises in college football."

Looking for other solutions

Dan Gable, former head wrestling coach and current assistant to the men's athletics director, has had little to do with the Loftin matter, but it wasn't his decision.

"This has been a matter between Mr. Bowlsby and Mrs. Rhodes," Gable said. "They have been keeping it out of the hands of the assistants. This is the football coach's initial season, and they are sensitive of that. This is being handled by the top brass at the highest level."

While Rhodes said she is disap-See LOFTIN, Page 4A

Sand and the art of blessing come to I.C.

A group of Tibetan nuns visits Iowa City while on a nationwide trip to raise awareness about Tibet.

> By Steve Schmadeke The Daily Iowan

Sitting cross-legged on a pillow, her face inches away from her work, a Tibetan nun uses a bronze funnel, called a chabu, and a rasp to create an intricate pattern in colored sand at the UI Museum of Art Monday.

Beside her, another nun begins singing softly, her voice reverberating in the room and combining with the scraping noises to create a certain harmony in the avant-garde surroundings.

The two are part of a group of 10 nuns traveling across the country to raise awareness about Tibet and money for their nunnery in Nepal, said Fran Mohoupt, the group's leader.

the group's driver

She said the nuns will spend between 60 and 70 hours on building a mandala, a geometric design etched in colored sand that represents compassion. Most people may see only one such sculpture in their lifetimes, Mohoupt said. The sand will become a blessing for the city by being poured into the Iowa River on

The nuns, who were chosen from the nunnery for their musical, chanting or English-speaking skills, are becoming accustomed to some aspects of Western culture.

They like pizza, Coke and ice cream, Mohoupt said. But the Colonel holds the most sway over the group.

"They really like Kentucky Fried Chicken because you get the macaroni and cheese and the other side dishes - it's more diversity," Mohoupt said.

One thing the nuns do not like, however, is American music.

This forces Dan Dorsa, the group's driver and a classic rock enthusiast, to listen to bands such as Def Leppard when the nuns are elsewhere. Dorsa has driven approximately

UI athletes score in grad rates

An NCAA report shows that Hawkeyes are above the national average in graduation rates.

Graduation rates among UI student athletes are the highest they have been in the 10 years since the UI first began tracking the informa-

Seventy-five percent of UI studentathletes who enrolled as freshmen in the fall of 1992 graduated within six years, according to a report by the NCAA - a 3.1 percent increase over the previous year.

While UI student-athletes experienced increased graduation rates, the NCAA as a whole saw lower graduation rates, especially among football and basketball students, whose rates were the lowest in seven

The study found that 41 percent of male basketball players and 50 percent of football players graduated in six years. The UI's rates were higher - 44.4 percent of male basketball players and 69.2 percent of football players from the 1992 class graduating within six years.

This is partly due to a philosophy that encourages both athletics and academics, said Fred Mims, men's associate athletics director.

"We try to promote a program that creates leaders where student-athletes strive to graduate and be involved in the community," he said.

The study tracked 64 UI studentathletes who entered as freshmen in 1992 and received athletic scholarships, Mims said. Those who transferred and graduated elsewhere were not included in the study.

Women's athletics at the UI saw a graduation rate of 84.6 percent; the rate was 58 percent of women at other Division 1 schools.

program between a Ukrainian university and By Chris Rasmussen The Daily Iowan

The UI was awarded a $300,000 grant last week to create a faculty exchange program with a Ukrainian university, and the UI hopes the grant will help to build a more internationally oriented curriculum.

"This grant provides government support for an international curriculum at the UI, which is one of the university's long-term goals," said Vicki Hesli, an associate professor of political science.

Hesli will be directing and facilitating the exchange program, which began a week ago and will continue for three years. After that time, the UI hopes to have made some lasting connections with the Taras Shevchenko National University faculty and students that will continue past the life span of the grant, said John Reitz, one of four UI law professors who will be visiting the Ukraine.

The grant, which was awarded by the United States Information Agency, will be used to form a partnership with Shevchenko University of Kiev, Hesli said.

The program will allow UI professors from the colleges of Law, Education and Liberal Arts to travel to the Ukraine and work with Ukrainian professors to help update the university's curriculum.

"UI faculty will spend time in Ukraine and teach classes with Ukrainian professors," Hesli said.

"Every May (for the duration of the grant), one or two professors from law, education and political science will travel to the Ukraine," Reitz said.

The professors, including Reitz, will spend a month teaching in the Hesli cited contract law as an example of an area of study the Ukrainians want to improve.

"Contract law is a very important part of international law," she said. They (Ukrainians) are very interested in contract law.'

FORT MYERS, Fla. (AP) — Actress Sharon Stone took on the role of celebrity auctioneer and helped raise a record amount for an abused-women's shelter.

Stone was one of the auctioneers who helped sell dozens of pieces of donated art to raise money for Abuse Counseling and Treatment Inc. on Aug. 28.

The star of The Muse egged on the crowd of about 1,400 in Fort Myers to spend generously. Her appearance was a major reason for the large turnout, with many showing up in tuxedos and evening gowns. The event raised more than $250,000, nearly twice as much as last year's auction.

Hualing Nieh Engle will give a lecture on the original vision of the program, which was set up in 1967.

By Quinn O'Keefe The Daily Iowan

Following months of ups and downs with the UI International Writing Program, today, co-founder Hualing Nieh Engle will discuss her original vision for the program.

Engle, a UI professor emeritus, is scheduled to give a lecture titled "Reminiscences of the International Writing Program" at noon in the Fellowship Hall of the Congregational Church, 30 N. Clinton St.

The lecture will serve as the "kick-off" event for the Iowa City Foreign Relations Council's 1999-00 lecture series Engle, originally from China, founded the IWP with her husband, poet Paul Engle, in 1967, and the couple directed the program for 21 years. During that time, more than 700 international writers traveled to the UI to participate in the world-renowned program.

"The idea was to bring distinguished writers to Iowa from all over the world and make a community of international imagina-

She made the program reality, and that reality is represented in every writer we host.

- Rowena Torrevillas, IWP program associate tions," Engle said.

Late last spring, the fate of the IWP was threatened when the UI announced that the program would go on a hiatus due to lack of funding and faculty. After a public outcry, the UI reinstated the program on July 9, with David Skorton, UI vice president for research, named as the new director.

Co-founder of IWP to speak

"We are all aware of the publicity the IWP has recently undergone," said Tom Baldridge, executive director of the foreign relations council. "But that is not at all connected to why we requested her (Engle) to talk - she is a presence in the community and has interesting things to say."

Engle's public appearance will represent a link to the IWP's original ideals and reinstate a sense of the program's worth to the UI and the community, said Rowena Torrevillas, IWP program associate.

"It is very appropriate that she will speak now of all times," Torrevillas said. "Hopefully, she will re-establish its importance and the fact that the program has existed longer than three decades."

Engle, the author of more than 20 books, lectures about the IWP all over the world. After her retirement in 1988, she devoted herself to writing; because of recent events concerning the IWP, she now serves on an advisory council for the program.

"I know the program very well," she said. "We discuss key activities of the IWP and the original call of the program.'

The IWP is scheduled to host 10 writers from eight countries during this semester, and at least four writers will visit the UI in the spring semester. This semester's group will include the first writer from the republic of Georgia.

'She made the program a reality, and that reality is represented in every writer we host," Torrevillas said.

UI students pine for new e-mail

In her first fireside chat, the UI president addresses technology issues.

> By Jerry Abejo The Daily Iowan

In her first fireside chat of the school year, UI President Mary Sue Coleman addressed student concerns about the convenience of the UI's current email system.

PINE, created by the University of Washington, was a major topic of discussion. Coleman spoke of the UI's plan for a new Web-based program, Web ISIS, which is scheduled to debut in October.

"We know we need to get rid of PINE, and we're alerted to the fact we need to change," she said.

The chat, held in the IMU North Room, allowed students to meet informally with the UI president and express their personal concerns.

Although 500 invitations were sent out, only about 25 students showed up - none of whom were freshmen.

Provost Jon Whitmore, Vice President for Student Services Phillip Jones and UI Student Government President Lana Zak also attended the chat.

Technical improvements in any UI computer program are coming at a strained time, especially because the university is spending millions of dollars fighting the Y2K bug. It is also taking up tremendous amounts of manpower, Coleman said.

"Programmers are going through lines of code to find glitches when they could be doing other stuff," she said.

In the meantime, the PINE system and its problems which one student in attendance said there was difficulty printing and the inability to view attached graphics - are what students will have to work with.

"We know how bad PINE is, but we've got to give you something for now," Whitmore said.

In other news, Coleman expressed interest in looking into a program that allows students in professional fields to graduate one year early in order to take part in postundergraduate studies.

One student suggested that other colleges have such programs for students on dental or medical tracks to apply for early graduation if they express unwavering interest in their field. While Coleman said the idea would only be appropriate for certain majors, she expressed interest in looking into it. "Anything to encourage students to graduate in a timely fashion," she said. DI reporter Jerry Abejo can be reached at:

The committee, which has been responsible for bringing such other well-known speakers as Carl Sagan and Maya Angelou to the UI, felt Wertheimer would add prominence to the series, Doobay said.

"It seems like there's a surprisingly large number of college students who listen to NPR," said Matt McDermott, vice chairman of the lecture committee.

Wertheimer was chosen to be a part of the lecture series because her name kept surfacing during the course of brainstorming last year, he said.

"We think she'd be a wonderful representative of our university's goals," said Doobay, who listed freedom of speech among those goals.

there was a bomb set to go off at 11 a.m. Monday, said police Sgt. Bill Campbell. The evacuation went smoothly, said City High Principal Trudy Day, but the disruption did not sit well with faculty and students. "Teachers and students were upset about missing an hour of school," she said. For some students, the bomb threat did not seem like an unusual occurrence.

"There are always a couple of bomb threats every year. It is almost like a fire drill, and we all just go sit outside," said Lacie Kalan, a City High senior. "The teachers tried to be serious about it, but the students weren't that anxious.'

Senior Mary Huyck agreed that students weren't overly affected by the bomb threat.

"Right after Littleton, there was a fire drill, and everyone was really scared," she said.

Police bomb technicians were involved with the evacuation, and students were able to return to the building by 9:34 a.m. without incident, Campbell said.

The caller was identified as an adolescent, Campbell said, but the caller's gender has not been determined.

pointed in how the situation has unraveled, Gable said other options could have avoided the large amount of media attention.

"I've had one conversation with Bob Bowlsby about the Loftin matter," he said. "When I left his office, I let him know if he needed my assistance in dealing with the situation, he had it.

"The route it has gone now is probably unfortunate. We would have used the low-key route if we had used me.

The "low-key" route would have drawn from Gable's coaching experiences and time on the mat, not court charges, he said.

The filing of charges against Loftin comes at a "very critical time," Gable said.

"The whole situation is just very poor timing," he said. "Football is a very important program at the opportune time this could have happened in this guy's career. The university is backing the entire program and the coaching staff."

The Investigation

The multi-page letter Ferentz received from Loftin on Aug. 21 included threats of exposing NCAA rules violations and sharing information about the football team to opponents if Loftin's scholarship were not restored.

The letter also said other players would unite in a negative campaign against Ferentz and the football program.

The letter contained, however,

"nothing very explicit," Rhodes said. Fred Mims, associate men's athletics director, would not comment on the specifics of the Loftin case but said leaving the team is a valid reason for the UI to revoke a scholarship.

Loftin's scholarship was lifted earlier this month.

While charges were filed by the Johnson County attorney's office Monday, the office has yet to receive the report from the Department of Public Safety, which was responsible for the investigation, said Johnson County Attorney Patrick White.

The department consulted with our office on Friday to talk about the merit of the charges," he said. "They needed to see if the evidence was sufficient enough to support charges.'

Loftin's attorney, Leon Spies, told the Associated Press Monday that Loftin would plead innocent to the charges.

Because the report has not been received, White said, it is too early to tell if Ferentz would need to testify if the charges came to trial. A witness list will be compiled when the county attorney's office files pre-trial information, he said.

The value of the stolen notebooks, which is under $200 according to court documents, was difficult to determine, White said.

"A playbook has a value that is difficult to determine by its very nature," he said. "There isn't an inherent market, so it's hard to construct a street value. In this case, it's figured to be the cost to purchase the items - in this case, notebooks."

The Registrar's Office confirmed Monday that Loftin is still enrolled at the UI. The preliminary hearing on extortion charges is set for Sept. 17.

Elliott and Gable say they have not had such serious or visible cases during their coaching careers, and both hope that the case comes to a quick close.

"The player needs to come out of it and strive for the highest goals," Gable said. "He doesn't need to carry this on his shoulder forever, and he doesn't need to hold a grudge forever."

N. Carolina relieved as Dennis goes to sea

NAGS HEAD, N.C. (AP) - People along the North Carolina coast breathed a sigh of relief Monday as Hurricane Dennis turned out to sea, sideswiping the shoreline with 112 mph gusts and a deluge that flooded streets and left tens of thousands without power

The storm's center started peeling away from the coast after getting no closer than 60 miles. Two traffic deaths early Monday were blamed on

"We are hoping it continues that offshore track," said Jim Jones, spokesman for the state Division of Emergency Management.

Storm damage was light. New Hanover's losses totaled $217,000, while in Brunswick County, the collapse of a beachfront house at Ocean Isle Beach was the worst property damage reported, said Cecil Logan of the county emergency management

"Unfortunately, one of our better models is showing that it comes back into the coast, not far from where it is right now, close to Norfolk or in that general vicinity," he said.

At 10 p.m. CDT Monday, Dennis was 145 miles east of Cape Hatteras, moving toward the east-northeast at 14 mph with maximum winds up to 90 mph. The hurricane warning was downgraded to a tropical storm warning for most of the North Carolina coastline, from Cape Lookout to the Virginia border.

that the emphasis is on academics," said Carol Gruber, director of student services in the women's Athletics Department.

The UI student services program ensures that student-athletes have all the tools necessary to achieve academically, said Christine Grant, UI women's athletics director.

We offer tutors to all studentathletes, not just those in academic risk, which is something a lot of schools don't do," she said.

NCAA findings among black student-athletes found that graduation rates were especially low. Only 40 percent of black male student-athletes graduated, the lowest figure since 1985, according to the report.

But among black male studentathletes at the UI, 72.7 percent of those entering in 1992 graduated within six years.

UI junior Dan Ralph, a member of the men's track team, said academics are continually emphasized by advisers and coaches.

Ralph said mandatory classroom attendance, study tables and close interaction with advisers ensure that student-athletes are able to balance sports and academics.

"It's a nice schedule where there is not a lot of time to waste on the couch watching TV," he said.

By Russ Bynum Associated Press

ATLANTA - The drop-off in AIDS deaths since the introduction of powerful drug cocktails has slowed dramatically, raising questions about whether the combination of medicines is reaching the limits of what it can do.

Last year, researchers were stunned to learn that AIDS deaths nationwide dropped 42 percent from 1996 to 1997 - a drop attributed to the potent drug cocktails that can subdue

On Monday, however, statistics released at the first national conference on AIDS prevention showed the decline in deaths slowed to 20 percent from 1997 to 1998, when AIDS killed 17,047 people.

"As we anticipated, we are now seeing the first signs of a slowing in this trend," Dr. Helene Gayle, director of HIV prevention at the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, said during the National HIV Prevention Conference.

"In a period of only two years, new combination therapies cut the annual level of death in half. But for the time being it appears that much of the benefit of these new therapies has been real-

The CDC blamed the slowdown on three factors:

· Some people still aren't getting tested and treated for the

Some are finding it difficult to stick to the complicated regimen of pills, which must be taken at certain times of the day, sometimes with food, sometimes without.

· Drug-resistant strains of the virus are emerging as patients fail to keep on schedule with their

Officials at the CDC, which released the numbers, said it's still too early to tell if the current treatments have pushed AIDS deaths as low as they can go.

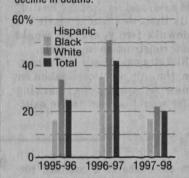

But one worrisome sign is that the decline in deaths last year occurred mostly in the first three months of 1998. After that, deaths leveled off for the rest of the year.

"We might continue to see that decline," Gayle said. "But it is at least a concern that most declines were in the first quarter of 1998 and not in the last quarter."

After AIDS killed 49,351 in 1995, deaths dropped 25 percent in 1996 to 36,792. They then plummeted to 21,222 deaths in 1997, a drop of 42 percent.

Health officials say the decline in AIDS deaths has slowed dramatically. So questions are being raised about whether the drugs introduced two years ago are losing their punch. Here's a look at the decline in deaths.

Supremacist arraigned in Los Angeles shooting

LOS ANGELES (AP) - With the family of a slain postman looking on, an innocent plea was entered today for Buford O. Furrow Jr., the white supremacist who allegedly confessed to killing the Filipino-American postman and shooting up a Jewish community center.

Stephen Hillman, the magistrate presiding over the federal arraignment, assigned the murder case to veteran federal Judge Richard Paez, with a tentative trial date of Oct. 12.

Furrow, clad in an orange prison jumpsuit and wearing eyeglasses, stood between his public defenders, Sean Kennedy and Marilyn Bednarski. He quietly answered "yes" when asked if he understood his rights and had read the indictment

Furrow did not look at the audience, which included the sisters and a nephew of postal worker Joseph lleto. lleto, 39, was fatally shot on Aug. 10. Although the arraignment was for that killing only, the government could add hate-crime allegations that would include the wounding of five people, including three children, earlier the same day at the Jewish Community Center in suburban Granada Hills. Furrow faces state charges of attempted murder in the Jewish center shooting.

With no money to pay his own counsel, Furrow became a client of the federal public defender's office.

Furrow turned himself in to the FBI in Las Vegas the day after the attacks and allegedly told authorities the shooting was "a wake-up call to America to kill Jews."

The U.S. attorney's office has assigned a veteran of its major crimes unit, Michael Terrell, to the case, along with the head of the civil rights division, Michael Gennaco.

Lack of Burge handicapped parking vexes some

■ UI officials say the campus is generally accessible, though it may not always be convenient.

By Chao Xiong The Daily Iowan

Student Disability Services in Burge Residence Hall received four complaints in the last week about the lack of handicapped parking spaces in front of the building on Clinton Street.

"It's a long-term problem that is currently being discussed very actively. It is a university-wide responsibility," said Susan Vess, the director of the disability services, who is beginning her first year at the UI.

Approximately 50 of the 700 students with learning and physical disabilities who use the facility's counseling and testing services have handicapped parking permits. A June 30 survey showed that 33 students had mobility problems, 14 used wheelchairs, and 12 used canes, braces or crutches.

Vess said there have been incidents of students arriving late for tests and that many others with chronic health problems make use of the handicapped parking spaces that are available in the north campus parking ramp and in an alley behind Daum Residence Hall.

"Those spaces in the alley and on the ramp are generally not full," said Dave Ricketts, the director of parking and trans-

The Americans with Disabilities Act requires five feet of space between a parallel-parked car and the traffic lane, he said. Coupled with an ADA compliant ramp, putting in one parking space would force drastic cuts in the curb and could cost $8,000.

"It's not just an ordinary parking space. The ADA has very specific design requirements," Ricketts said, adding that the heating coils installed underneath the sidewalk two years ago would make construction impossible.

Ricketts said that in the shortrun, the only practical location for a new ADA-compliant parking space would be next to the existing space behind Daum at a cost of a few hundred dollars.

All expenses for changes in parking are funded by parking revenues, he said.

"We're exploring the possibilities," said Phillip Jones, vice president for student services. "There are many factors. It is not a given that more parking will be available.

The disability services office and most buildings on the UI campus are accessible to handicapped students, he said.

"It's inappropriate to say the campus is inaccessible. It may not be as convenient as we all like, but accessibility is available, Jones said.

Millennial mathematics and other tidbits of Kansan wisdom

o we've made it past the first week of classes, and everything is as it should be. Dean Linda Maxson had her first PR gaffe of the school year, the football team is still undefeated, and roughly half of the members of the freshmen class have notched their first PAULA. All of which must mean we're ready to plunge bravely toward the new millennium.

There's one small glitch on the road to the New Age, and we're not talking the Y2K bug here — though the Y2K bug is a colorful little character, even if no one has actually seen it yet. For instance, on the one hand you've got the U.S. government assuring everyone that there's nothing to worry about. Just go about your partying as usual, officials say, and try to wake up from your hangovers in time for the Rose Bowl. On the other hand, the U.S. government says it would be wise to have a three-day supply of food around come Dec. 31.

Well, OK. I don't know about you, but I'm quite used to the government talking out of both sides of its mouth. But it does make you wonder — if the power does go off at midnight on Jan. 1, how are you going to cook that three-day supply of food? Camp fires on the linoleum? That'll annoy those pesky neighbors who keep yammering on and on and on about a smoke-free environment.

The small glitch on the rush to the new millennium goes like this: People are rushing it. At least those people who can't perform the highly technical mathematical task of adding 1 plus 100 — which seems to include just about everybody these days.

Those who can add know that the new millennium starts on Jan. 1, 2001, not this coming Jan. 1, as is widely assumed by those who add 1 to 100 and come up with 100. Or add 1 to 1000 and come up with 1000. Even the good folks at Hancher, cultural icons that they are, have fallen prey to the New Math and are celebrating the millennium a year early. You expect more from the folks who bring you Yo-Yo Ma and Wynton Marsallis.

But, the millennium-rushers say, everybody believes that the new century — and the millennium — will arrive on Jan. 1. Yeah, well, everybody in the time of Copernicus believed that the universe revolved around the Earth. So following the logic of the millennium-rushers, that's exactly what the universe did.

And 500 years ago, everybody believed that the Earth was flat. Those who believe the millennium is three months away are in some pretty good company.

Speaking of flat-Earth societies, there's Kansas. The Cornflower State, as you no doubt have heard, recently decided to drive a wooden stake through the heart of that evil vampire Charles Darwin. Apparently, watching "Buffy" is the height of cultural experience down there.

No longer will the Kansas Board of Education (just about the best oxymoron around) allow evolution to be taught as science; from now on, it's on par with some creature called creationism, which is to science what coloring-by-numbers is to art. The whole thing is more or less like requiring French restaurants to serve macaroni and cheese. Not that Kansas has heard of French restaurants yet.

Kansas has heard of French restaurants yet. Reportedly, the next targets of the Kansas board are Einstein (his physics promote "relativism" instead of straight-ahead Christian logic) and astronomers (astronomers have this nasty habit of proving the universe is 15 billion years old, rather than the 6,000 years derived from Old Testament astrophysicists). Kansans, by the way, continually add 1 plus 100 and come up with 100.

And so we rush to the new millennium. But in our rush, we should remember this: The toothbrush was invented in Kansas.

Anywhere else, it would've been called the teethbrush.

UI, children paying the costs for child care

Labor Day presents us with a prime opportunity to evaluate the UI's own labor movement: COGS. Since its inception, the union has brought both good and bad consequences to the UI campus. COGS' bargaining raised TA salaries for fiscal year 1998. But it also takes positions, as do many labor unions, that are nothing more than an attempt to shift responsibilities from their own shoulders onto those of the rest of society.

A clear example is COGS' drive for university-funded child care for graduate employees. At the COGS Web site, Doug Anderson argues in "Facing the Child Care Crisis Together" that "the problems of child care ... cannot be solved by individual parents and families." He claims that there are compelling economic reasons that parents must have someone else care for their children. He cites "declining real wages, an increase in single-parent households and expanding career opportunities for women."

The high cost of child care, he argues, results from the fact that it is labor intensive ("so far, no machines have been invented that can take children for a walk"). This leads to "low-wage child care workers and rapid turnover rates among child-care providers, which breaks the stable relationship that children need to have with their caregivers to feel safe and segure (CDF)"

The problem, however, is not economics. Even as real wages have declined for some, staple items have decreased in price, and luxury items unheard of a century ago now fill the homes of the poorest of the poor (there are seven TVs for every 10 people in America). And expanding career opportunities for women, though laudable, are not economically compelling. It does not take a village to realize that revenue (i.e., tuition) would have to be increased to meet the increased expenditures that university-funded child care represents.

Should one segment of the student body pay baby-sitting for another?

But beyond economics, the real problem is the basic assumption that someone other than parents ought to have the first responsibility in caring for children. Have we come to the point where we will no longer admit that it is a necessary evil to have someone other than mothers, fathers or grandmas burping, feeding and bathing their little ones? Can we not see that children raised by strangers, with high turnover rates, will inevitably grow up feeling abandoned, isolated, angry and alone?

Some students truly need non-family child care as a matter of survival. But this is a small minority. More often it results from a mentality that children are an inconvenience to be minimized, a career obstacle or a drain on energy. Delaying the gratification of a prestigious degree to raise your own children is a sacrifice, and advanced education undoubtedly leads to higher incomes and better material prosperity for the children of those earners. But children care little for extra TVs, VCRs and SUVs if strangers are operating them.

Y2K has company on the list of 'apocalyptic' events

Now that everyone is all worked up about stuff like air traffic control failures and the coming of the Antichrist, the biggest real problem we face is the inevitable anticlimax when billions of bloodshot eyes creak open on the afternoon of Jan. 1 to discover what all five of the designated drivers will already know:

Nothing happened.

From one day to the next, 1,000 years of build-up will end in the biggest letdown since the release of Waterworld. The last word will go not to the author of Revelations, but to 1934 Wolverine MVP Gerald Ford, who once observed, "Things are more like they are now than they've ever been."

Cosmically speaking, the millennium deserves less surprise, excitement and attention than the day the odometer on your Dodge turns over 100,000 miles. I feel obliged to diffuse the hype so we can refocus on real issues, lest while we're distracted waiting for Armageddon, something far more insidious happens, such as another Ollie North Senate campaign or the revival of disco. Besides, those of us who were paying attention know that the world really ended in 1968, and the subsequent 31 years have been nothing more than a conspiracy engineered by Madison Ave. ad execs who refuse to give up their pre-paid timeshares in the Keys.

First, lets dispense with the Y2K computer bug panic. As a journalist, I work intimately with computers, and I can bear witness to the boon that programs such as the spell checker provide our profession. I am personally satisfied that our modern equipment is virtually foolpoof.

As for the literal end of the world — well, that's the last thing anybody needs to worry about.

Nor is Jan. 1 necessarily the true millennium, and I'm not talking about pedantic geeks who keep pointing out that the 21st century really starts in 2001 and who would rather miss the biggest kegger in history than give up the right to spend 12 months correcting people who don't care.

It's just that the number 2000 owes its illusion of importance to the accidental prevalence of 10-fingered life forms among calendar makers. In every culture through history, their egocentrism has kept them from admitting that nothing about the cycle of Nile floods, the movements of the planets or the NCAA playoff schedule has anything to do with base 10. And as Stephen J. Gould would no doubt remind us, giant pandas don't get to celebrate the millennium for another 1,456 years, although at this rate none of them will be around to worry about it.

But even humans have other ways of marking time. For example, computer nerds say "Y2K" doesn't really roll around until 2048, binarily speaking. My personal favorite alternative doomsday comes at the end of 2011, when the current cycle of the Aztec Sun Calendar runs out and a bunch of Grumpy Gods of Destruction wake up from a 1,000-year snooze to find all their loyal worshippers wiped out by the ancestors of America's current majority.

The whole 2000 thing

thus depends on when Christians started counting and means nothing to users of other calendars, including Muslims, Jews, Hindus

... in fact, most of the people on Earth.
For that matter, even 6th century
Christians realized that year 1 was four years off the presumed birth of Jesus, but they decided it was too late to do anything about it and turned their attention to inventing music you can't dance but why quibble over a few decades more or less when we're talking about a span of 20 centuries? It puts me in mind of my friend Ernie the bandleader, who begins every gig by signaling for a tuning note. Exactly why he does this remains unclear, because he invariably gets back half a dozen mutually incompatible pitches, shrugs his shoulders, and says, "Close enough for polka."

I won't say the digit thing is utterly without interest. After all, 2000 will be the first double zero leap year since America adopted the Gregorian calendar in the mid-18th century. Also, this year's graduates get to call themselves "the class of aught aught aught," although the rest of us will probably take to referring to them by the more felicitous phrase, "people of zero class."

ple of zero class."

There's nothing wrong with picking a meaningless theme for your New Year's party, but let's keep some perspective and call it something that reflects its true basis in an insignificant detail of human anatomy. How about "Digit Day," or maybe "The Great Finger Festival?"

Just find yourself a good party, and be sure to change the oil in your dayminder.

DILI, Indonesia - Independence activists claimed victory Monday in a referendum on East Timor's future, buoyed by long lines of people who defied the threat of violence to vote in the U.N.-sponsored ballot.

The claim came even though not a single vote from Monday's election had been counted yet the result will not be known for days, Sept. 7 at the latest.

WORLD BRIEF

Mideast leaders optimistic about agreement

JERUSALEM (AP) - With pressure mounting for a peace deal before this week's arrival of U.S. Secretary of State Madeleine Albright, Israeli and Palestinian negotiators said they were on the verge of agreement Monday.

For the first time in months, the two sides spoke optimistically of carrying out the long-delayed Wye River peace accord.

But in a development that could complicate negotiations, the bodies of an Israeli couple were found in a forest on the border with the West Bank Monday. Police suspected they were killed by Palestinians, raising worries of a resurgence of anti-Israeli violence.

Earlier, Prime Minister Ehud Barak said he believed that "within two or three days we will reach a conclusion" in the talks on Wye.

Gains were made on two issues that have deadlocked the sides until now: a timetable for an Israeli withdrawal from the West Bank and the release of Palestinians jailed for anti-Israel acts.

Albright, who is due in the region Thursday, expects an agreement to be sealed before her arrival, a State Department spokesman said. "We've seen evidence that each side is eager," said James B. Foley.

Egypt, another broker in the talks, hopes to host a signing ceremony in Albright's presence to re-launch the Wye peace agreement.

The peace deal, signed last October, called for three Israeli withdrawals from the West Bank in return for security measures by Yasser Arafat's Palestinian government.

But after a single pullback in December 1998, former Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu froze the deal, alleging Palestinian noncompliance.

FIELD HOCKEY

Hawkeyes take two in Invite

■ The lowa field hockey team defeated Ohio on Monday to finish the Hawkeye Invitational undefeated.

By Robert Yarborough The Daily Iowan

It did not take long for senior Leslie Irvine to get used to the style of American field hockey.

In just her first year as a member of the Iowa field hockey team, the native of Northants, England, scored three goals as the Hawkeyes defeated the Ohio Bobcats 5-1 on Monday at Grant Field.

Iowa countered an Ohio goal in the first half by scoring three goals in the second. Irvine scored her second goal off a long pass from senior Quan Nim to seal the victory.

"Leslie had some beautiful finishes inside the cage today," coach Beth Beglin said. "Quan's setup inside to her at the end was done to perfection. I could not have asked for a better passing shot."

Ohio got off to an early lead as junior Andrea Pettinato scored nearly 10 minutes into the game. Iowa raised the tempo of the game and was rewarded when Irvine scored off a deflection from a Bobcat player minutes later.

With 14:37 left in the first half, Iowa senior Kelly Dolan passed to Alveyn Freet for the second goal of the game. After that point, Irvine took over with two goals in the second half.

"I was thrilled to be able to score one goal, much less three goals," Irvine said. "I think it was the product of an overall team effort and I was lucky enough to be in the right place at the right time.

Entering the game, Beglin wanted better team defense to help Freet. Saturday, the few times that Maine had an opportunity to score, Freet was left as the lone defender.

"Aly and Sarah (Thorn), were lucky enough to come up with the ball on Saturday, because we really did not give them much help at all," Beglin said. "Today, the mid-fielders and backs were quick downfield and it made an enormous difference in our ability to stop the goal and then distribute the ball down the field for shot opportunities."

After starting the season 2-0 at Grant Field, Iowa now must focus on winning on the road. The Hawkeyes will spend nearly a month on the road before returning to Grant Field on Sept. 24th for the Big Ten opener against Ohio State. The road trip begins this weekend with a game against Stanford on Friday.

"You want to grow from game to game and this win was a step in the right direction," Beglin said. "I expect Stanford to be the best team that we have played so far. So, that will be a good test for us to see where we stand at this point."

Game Breakdown

Shots on goal...

lowa outshot Ohio 19-6 in goal opportunities.

Easy opportunities...

lowa had the opportunity for more scoring opportunities by forcing Ohio into eight penalty corners. Penalty corners are caused when the opponent hits the ball off the foot of the other team. Unfortunately, lowa did not take advantage of any of the eight scoring chances.

Newcombe to start for Nebraska

By Kevin O'Hanlon Associated Press

LINCOLN, Neb. - Saying it was the hardest decision of his career, Nebraska head coach Frank Solich said Monday that quarterback Bobby Newcombe would start instead of Eric Crouch this Saturday when the Husker open the season at Iowa.

"It was probably the hardest coaching decision I've made personnel-wise in my 30 years in coaching," Solich said of the quarterback choice. "And I had a lot of tough ones to make as the running backs coach here at Nebraska."

He also gave the starting nod at Iback to DeAngelo Evans over Dan

Solich tried to squelch rumors that Crouch, a sophomore, left the team when told he was not the starter. "Certainly he took it hard," Solich said. "He's a tremendous competitor. .. There's a lot of emotion that runs through young people, and it's very, very tough on them.'

Rosenfels wins starting role for Cyclones

■ Iowa State coach Dan McCarney plans to use both Sage Rosenfels and Derrick Walker on Thursday.

By Greg Wallace

AMES - Iowa State fans need not fear when starting quarterback Sage Rosenfels is pulled from the game Thursday night. It's all part of Dan McCarney's plan.

The Iowa State coach announced Monday at his weekly press conference that Rosenfels would be his starting quarterback Thursday night against Indiana State. The news came with a catch, though. lowa State's number two quarterback, Derrick Walker, will get playing time in the first half no matter how well Rosenfels performs.

"In the end, Sage was just a little more consistent," McCarney said. "There weren't any major differences.

Rosenfels understood that his hold was anything but definite.

"I wouldn't say it's relief," Rosenfels said. "Derrick and I know that we're both going to be playing a lot in this football ame, and probably all season. It's a good feeling to know that the coaches have confidence in me to do a good job and lead the team out there and I'm really excited to do it."

Neither Rosenfels nor Walker have much experience as a Division quarterback. Rosenfels, a junior, has 19 attempts over two seasons and one touchdown as a backup to the graduated Todd Bandhauer.

Walker, also a junior, is a transfer from Blinn Junior College in Texas, where he completed 66 passes for 898 yards and five ouchdowns over two seasons.

■ Ben Sobieski? He was a projected starter at tackle, but is out for the season after shoulder surgery.

■ Matt Rogers? Another of last year's starters transferred to Washington, but not before claiming Ferentz had taken away his scholarship without cause.

■ Matt Markway? He's gone, too, having transferred after injuring his knee in preseason drills.

In addition, backup right guard Kyle Trippeer is questionable for the opener after shoulder surgery. Right guard Chad Deal is the only player with more than six games of starting experience; if he goes down, the nextmost-experienced is right tackle Alonzo Cunningham, who started six games last year.

Half of the two-deep is comprised of freshmen or sophomores; and Bruce Nelson, the starter at left tackle, is a redshirt freshman who is a converted tight end.

"I hope nothing more happens," Deal said. "I've had enough. If someone gets injured, or someone can't play, or someone leaves - you hate to see it happen — but when it happens, you've got to let it go quick."

Deal will need to be the rock for the young line. The 6-foot-4, 285 pound senior has 18 starts in 21 games, dat-

The Daily Iowan

When Iowa's coaching staff moved Bruce Nelson from tight end to tackle, his dreams of catching the winning touchdown in the Rose Bowl were dashed.

The former walk-on from Emmetsburg, Iowa, has not had time to think about that though. He has to learn a new position where he will start against the ferocious Nebraska pass rush in the season opener.

"I haven't had time to miss the glory," Nelson said. "All I had to do was switch who my hero is, it's no longer Marv Cook, it has to be Mike

LAS VEGAS (AP) - More than five months after they met in a controversial heavyweight unification title fight, Evander Holyfield and Lennox Lewis will get together once again Tuesday to discuss their rematch.

The fighters are scheduled to be at a news conference at the Las Vegas Hilton to formally announce the Nov. 13 rematch.

Both will reportedly get about $15 million for the rematch, which will be held at the UNLV campus arena.

Their first fight March 13 ended in a draw, despite the opinion of most ringside observers that Lewis won the fight. It sparked several investigations into the scoring, particularly that of the one judge who favored Holyfield.

Shurmur remembered as passionate innovator

GREEN BAY, Wis. — Fritz Shurmur dedicated his life to studying, teaching and changing football. His imprint on the game and the men he taught to play it will be slow to fade.

Shurmur, the Seattle Seahawks' defensive coordinator and the architect of the defense that led the Green Bay Packers to their 1997 Super Bowl victory, died of cancer at his home Monday. He was 67.

Shurmur spent two decades as a defensive coordinator for five teams and had the longest continuous tenure of any coordinator. He joined Holmgren in Seattle in January when Holmgren was hired as the Seahawks' coach and GM after seven seasons in Green Bay.

The selection was no surprise to those who know Taylor, considered one of the top high school point guards in the country. But he tried to build the suspense among reporters and students excused from class to attend the

Priority: Seating priority is based on the number of consecutive years tickets have been purchased. Group orders will be seated according to the student with the lowest priority in the group.

DUPLICATE TICKETS CAN NOT BE ISSUED FOR LOST OR STOLEN TICKETS.

* Remember, if you want to sit with a group of your friends, you must return all your order forms in the SAME envelope! •

More magic might await Johnson

■ Even though he has already set two world records, Michael Johnson's career is far from finished.

By Bert Rosenthal
Associated Press

SEVILLE, Spain — The magic of Michael Johnson's 400-meter world record was the defining moment of the World Championships. There could be more magic in his future.

While Johnson has accomplished more than any track and field athlete during the '90s, his career is far from over at 31.

He still has some big goals, including dropping the 400 record below 43 seconds and winning an unprecedented second 200-400 double at the Sydney Olympics.

"I never put limits on myself," said Johnson, who shattered Butch Reynolds' 11-year-old 400 record of 43.29 seconds with an electrifying time of 43.18.

Johnson ran the first 200 in 21.0 and the second 200 in 22.2, a pattern that other 400 runners cannot match. For the average quarter-miler, the difference between the first half of the race and the second is two seconds.

"Getting to 300, he was very relaxed," coach Clyde Hart said. "Patience was very important. He showed that 31.6 was like a walk in the park."

"He looks like he can do anything he wants," 1992 Olympic coach Mel Rosen said of Johnson.

coach Mel Rosen said of Johnson.

As long as injuries don't interfere.

When Johnson is healthy there

When Johnson is healthy, there doesn't appear to be a 200 or 400 runner who can cope with his remarkable combination of speed and power.

When he set the 200 record of 19.32 at the 1996 Olympics, slicing an astonishing .34 seconds off his previous mark, second-place finisher Frankie Fredericks of Namibia was about five meters back, a huge margin in such a short race. And to think, Fredericks had come within .02 seconds of Johnson's previous record of 19.66, running 19.68.

When Johnson smashed the 400 record, runner-up Sanderlei Parrela of Brazil set a South American record of 44.29 and still was about 15 meters behind.

Johnson is aware that no one can seriously push him, and to continue breaking records he'll have to do it running alone down the stretch. It's not the ideal situation, but one Johnson has learned to cope with.

"I realized long ago that I wouldn't be pushed," he said.

In the 200, Johnson's major opposition in recent years has come from Fredericks and 1997 world 200 champion Ato Boldon of Trinidad and Tobago.

Now, Maurice Greene, the 100 and 200 gold medalist at the championships that ended Sunday, poses another threat, but he is still learning the techniques of running the 200 and might need a couple of more years to catch Johnson.

In the 400, the only active runners to have broken 44 seconds are Reynolds and 1988 Olympic gold medalist Steve Lewis. And neither is very active, leaving Johnson the undisputed ruler of the event.

There has been some clamor for a 150-meter match race between Johnson and Greene to determine the "world's fastest human." Johnson will have no part of it, not after his disastrous confrontation with Canada's Donovan Bailey in 1997, when he tore his right quadriceps.

A Johnson-Greene showdown over 200 meters probably will come next year at the U.S. Olympic trials at Sacramento, Calif.

Johnson capped the World Championships with another milestone, anchoring the U.S. 1,600-meter relay team to victory for his ninth career gold medal at the worlds, the most by any athlete, one more than Carl Lewis.

"It's an honor," Johnson said.
"It's a testament to what I've tried to do in my career: to be consistent and go into every championships on the top of my game and go in to win."

He now has won four straight 400 world titles, three relay gold medals and two 200 championships.

Johnson also has three Olympic gold medals, ran on the U.S. team that set the world 1,600 relay record last year and owns the world indoor record for 400

Nicklaus comparisons arise again

■ After winning for the fifth time this year, Tiger Woods has been likened to the Golden Bear.

By Doug Ferguson
Associated Press

AKRON, Ohio — Tiger Woods used to keep a list taped to his bedroom wall of all Jack Nicklaus accomplished, such as his U.S. Amateur victories, his NCAA title and above all the 18 professional majors that serve as a benchmark to the greatest career in golf.

Here's one Woods probably didn't include.

With his victory Sunday in the NEC Invitational on Sunday, Woods became the youngest player to win five times in one year since Nicklaus won his fifth tournament of 1963 in the Sahara Invitational at the same age — 23 years, 8 months, 30 days.

Only Woods isn't finished.

He still has at least three tournaments left this year, maybe more. The way he has played since May, it is not unreasonable to think Woods can win again — maybe win them all.

The NEC Invitational was his fifth victory in his last eight tournaments. Not even David Duval was this hot when he won four times in the eight tournaments leading to the Masters, in what now seems like an eternity ago.

"I'm playing well, but I kept thinking this week that it's just a culmination of hard work," Woods said after his one-stroke victory over Phil Mickelson in the World Golf Championship event for Ryder Cup and Presidents Cup players.

"I'm starting to reap dividends of a better game."

And all of a sudden, the comparisons to Nicklaus are starting to come into focus again.

They first surfaced when Woods overwhelmed Augusta National more than Nicklaus ever did, winning with a recordscore of 270 by a record-margin of 12 strokes.

Nicklaus even suggested that Woods might win 10 green jackets before he was done, which sounded like a stretch when Woods went 10 majors before winning another one. But while Woods has only two majors to three for Nicklaus when he was 23, he has won 12 times on the PGA Tour, compared to eight times by Nicklaus at this stage.

The way Woods has dominated the deep and talented pool of worldwide players can make one only wonder what the future holds.

He has been saying all along he is building a swing that will make him more consistent, more controlled. No one believed him, especially since he won only one time on the PGA Tour last year.

Nick Price saw it with his own eyes.

"I played with him in the U.S. Open in '95 at Shinnecock Hills, and there was a lot of raw talent there," Price said. "Over the last two or three years, every time I've played with him it seems like he's just rounding off an edge here or there. I think he's going to continue to improve, too."

Price's only concern is that Woods doesn't lose his edge. The pressure on him isn't as great as when Tigermania peaked in mid-1997, but it is still greater than what any other player faces.

Woods took home $1 million from Firestone Country Club, making him the first player to surpass $4 million in one season and giving him a more than $8.9 million in three full years on the PGA Tour, already good enough for 12th in career earnings.

He also is in the middle of renegotiating his contract with Nike, a five-year deal reported to be in the neighborhood of $80 million to $90 million. Woods said this week those figures were too high, but that was before he won yet again.

"By the time he gets to 25 or 26, he's going to have conquered a lot of mountains," Price said. "He'll have all the money in the world. He'll have probably won more majors in the next three years. It's just a question of can he keep going like Nicklaus did.

"The way he looks right now, he'll be able to," Price added. "My hat's off to him."

Woods became the first player to win five tournaments in a season since Price in 1994. Price, who won the British Open and the PGA Championship that year, remembers what it was like to show up at every tournament feeling that if he played well, he would win — or at least have a really good chance.

Brister replaced as Denver QB

Former Michigan star Brian Griese will get the starting nod for the Broncos.

> By Don Mitchell Associated Press

DENVER - Brian Griese is the new heir apparent to John Elway with his promotion Monday as the Denver Broncos' starting quarteroack ahead of Bubby Brister.

"It is not that Bubby Brister has not played at the level I think he can. It's that Brian Griese has played so well throughout camp and preseason games that I think he deserves that opportunity," coach Mike Shanahan said.

Brister inherited the job after winning four straight games as a starter last year when Elway was out with assorted injuries.

The 37-year-old Brister has struggled in the preseason, however, twice throwing interceptions on his first pass attempt of a game. The two-time Super Bowl champions are 2-2 in preseason play. "Of course, all the blame does not go to one person. You have to take a look at our offensive production," Shanahan said.

quarterback Bob Griese. Shanahan said the younger Griese has impressed him in everything he does ... How he handles himself on offense, running game, passing game, how he handles himself in the huddle, the way he understands defense, his protection scheme, how he handles himself with the blitz under fire."

The Broncos added quarterback insurance last spring by signing veteran Chris Miller who has been out of football for three years due to recurring concussions.

Browns' Spielman retires from football my arms," he said. "It's difficult.

 Chris Spielman's family convinced him playing football was not worth risking another neck injury.

> By Tom Withers Associated Press

BEREA, Ohio - Chris Spielman never wanted to quit, not as he fought to get the feeling back in his arms and legs, and not even when doctors told him to retire. Spielman never gave in. His body did. The intense Cleveland Browns inebacker, who postponed his omeback from neck surgery a year ago to care for his family, announced his retirement Monday, just two days after a violent hit left him momentar-ly paralyzed.

Without ever uttering the word "retired," Spielman, his wife, Stefanie sitting at his side, ended his stellar 10-year career in the same state where he was a household name before leaving high school.

"I would love to keep playing, but I can't jeopardize my legs and

To say no, no more, it's hard. But I don't have any regrets.

"I wish I could be playing but that's not possible. I've been very fortunate to be an NFL player. That's the hard part, to wake up tomorrow morning and know I'm not an NFL player anymore."

Spielman, who underwent neck fusion surgery in 1997, took a crushing, blindside hit from Bears center Casey Wiegmann on Saturday night while defending a screen pass in Cleveland's exhibition win over Chicago.

Face down in the grass, his body tingling from head to toe, Spielman said he had one thought: "Get up and get the play called," he said. "But I couldn't."

"He had that first hit in training camp and that scared me," said his brother, Rick, the Bears' director of pro personnel, who was in St. Louis that night. "I told him, 'One day you're going to take a hit and you're not going to be able to get up.'

Despite the second scare, Spielman thought he might be able to continue his comeback which he postponed last year while with the Buffalo Bills to help take care of his two children after Stefanie underwent breast cancer surgery. He began weighing his options Sunday morning, walking into office at 8 a.m. for a heart-to-heart talk. Convinced he could still play despite an MRI that showed he shouldn't, Spielman told Palmer: "I'm not retiring."

But after consulting with his family, Spielman came to one conclusion.

'Until you have pure medical evidence in front of you, as a player your mentality is, 'I'll beat this," he said. "But as they say in football, the films don't lie, and here the images of the MRI don't

And as Spielman showed last year when he stayed home, family comes before football.

"He told me his daughter was at the game and she's 4, 4 1/2," Rick Spielman said. "She knows that Daddy has a bad neck. When she saw him get hit, she just started crying and later she asked him, 'Daddy, if you're in a wheelchair, does that mean we can't go swimming anymore?' That's just the nail in the coffin."

The injury that forced him to retire is unrelated to the fusion surgery that interrupted his career in 1997, Spielman said.

Two vertebrae in Spielman's back are narrowing closer to his spinal cord, and each time he took a solid hit, he gets a tingling sensation. He had been having occasional bouts with numbness during training camp, but didn't tell team doctors.

NFL admits it withheld drug suspensions

Browns coach Chris Palmer's

By Dave Goldberg Associated Press

NEW YORK - The NFL said Monday that it deferred substance abuse suspensions for 16 players as part of 1993 negotiations with its players union on a new and stronger drug policy.

The league said the 16 would have been suspended had it not been for the negotiations. Instead, they were put into a mandatory counseling and treatment program when negotiations were completed in 1995. League spokesman Greg Aiello said six were eventually suspended for later violations.

In its statement, the league said that it agreed to withhold the suspensions in order to get the union to agree to a stronger policy. That policy was included in the 1995 agree-

"While the new policy was being negotiated, there were 16 players whose discipline under the old program was deferred pending completion of the negotiations,' the league said.

"In 1995, all 16 players were slotted into the new program, tested regularly, treated by professional counselors and physicians and subject to suspension for any further violations ... The 1995 program is the most comprehensive in professional sports,'

The deferrals were first disclosed by The New York Times, which reviewed 40 tapes from a NFL Players Association meeting in Hawaii in 1995. However, the film company sued the union in a dispute over payment, and the NFLPA never took control of the tapes.

The videotapes reportedly show Doug Allen, the union's assistant executive director, discussing differences between the new drug policy and the old one. Allen told the players that a number had failed drug tests and faced suspensions, but because of a private agreement with the NFL, the players would not be suspended.

Other discussions on the tapes include an offer by a union official to teach players ways to circumvent the salary cap and assertions that some union members believed racism was behind the league's push to ban players from wearing bandannas.

League sources told the AP that the two men behind the ban on bandannas are both black.

ing back to his sophomore season. If he doesn't perform or is injured, the results won't be pretty.

"He (Deal) can be a guy who can provide that leadership and that influence when things are going tough," offensive line coach Joe Phibin said. "He can hold the ship together, so to speak, and keep the ballclub focused on what it needs to be.

For the offense to succeed, much of the burden will rest on the line's not-so-broad (no one weighs more than 300 pounds) shoulders. Last year, Iowa ranked last in the Big Ten in rushing offense and total offense, 10th in scoring offense, and only sixth in passing offense.

"Our big motivation was to get better," Deal said. "We knew that some things happened that we didn't want to last year, and people blamed the offensive line.

The lineman will be guided by an entirely new coaching staff. In addition to Philbin, coach Kirk Ferentz's previous job was as a line coach for the Baltimore Ravens. He also coached the O-line at Iowa from 1981 to 1989, sending 11 players to the NFL.

Philbin didn't waste any time building the line. He remodeled Iowa's weight room and instituted a rigorous off-season conditioning program, in hopes that summer sweat would turn into pancake blocks in the fall.

"When spring ball concluded, we told the team, especially the offensive line, that their success in 1999 was dependent on what they did in between April 18 and August 11," Philbin said. "And from all reports, they are in excellent condition. They've put themselves in a position to have a good season in 1999."

Certainly, a healthy and talented line would make Philbin's nights more restful, but he is going to focus on what he has rather than worrying about what could have been. It's the only approach possible.

"We'd love to be at full strength," Philbin said. "But there's only so much you can control. We really can't worry about that now. We have to worry about getting the guys we have ready to go and compete.

WNBA SEMIFINALS

New York, Houston to meet in WNBA Finals

By Melissa Murphy Associated Press

NEW YORK - The New York Liberty, behind Crystal Robinson's 18 points, advanced to the WNBA Finals with a 69-54 victory over the Charlotte Sting on Monday night.

Robinson was 7-for-8 from the field to help the Liberty clinch the Eastern Conference title in the decisive game of the best-of-3 series against the Sting.

New York advanced to the WNBA Finals, which begin Thursday, for the second time in three seasons. The Liberty will meet Houston, who defeated Los Angeles 72-62 on Monday night.

Robinson's 3-pointer, her fourth of the night, gave New York a 65-51 lead with just over a minute left and ignited the Madison Square Garden crowd of 12,929.

New York, which shot 54 percent, got 13 points from Vickie Johnson and 10 points apiece from Tamika Whitmore and Sophia Witherspoon.

Andrea Stinson, the only Sting player in double figures, had 24 points on 10-for-19 shooting. But the Sting shot just 37 percent and were outre-bounded 32-20.

Ahead 32-26 at halftime, New York extended the lead to 45-36 with 13:42 remaining behind eight points by Robinson, who scored consecutive 3-pointers and a basket.

Witherspoon added another 3-pointer for a 50-38 lead with 11:12 remaining.

Kym Hampton's jumper extended the margin to 60-43 with just over five minutes left in the game.

Charlotte applied a press, but could come no closer than 11 points in the final minutes.

U.S. OPEN

Williams romps in Open

By Steve Wilstein Associated Press

NEW YORK - Martina Hingis learned her lesson from a loss at Wimbledon, Venus Williams learned hers at the French, and both vowed not to make the same mistakes twice.

A first-round loser at Wimbledon after a declaration of independence from her mother and coach, Melanie Molitor, Hingis had her mom at courtside again Monday night in the first round of the U.S. Open.

Hingis raced through the first set, then survived three breaks of her service in the second set to beat No. 74-ranked Czech Kveta Hrdlickova 6-1, 7-5.

Hingis, 18, said she regretted the spat and split with her mother, especially the timing of it, and said, "I won't make that mistake again."

Since Wimbledon, Hingis won two of the three tournaments she entered, all with her mother at courtside.

"I just wanted to try it on my own," Hingis said of the ill-timed Wimbledon experiment. "It didn't work out. It's great that she wanted to do it with me again. I'm very happy about that, and that we found a way to come together. That's why I was able to win tournaments again-

"You can still get independent. I think I am pretty much. I can book my own flights. Sometimes you want to experience things on your own. It happens in any family. Almost the whole world was, watching what I was doing, every single step. The cameras were right there, stalking me. But if you're fine with yourself and the people around you, nobody can hurt you, nothing can bother you."

a redshirt freshman, aside and asked him if he would be interested in a position change.

Nelson waited a few days to tell the coaches his decision. But after consulting with the people that were most important in his life, he decided to give the offensive line a try.

"At first I did not want to give an answer," Nelson said. "I talked to everyone like my family and friends and everyone was real optimistic. I just decided to do whatever would help the team."

Nelson was moved to tackle in order to give depth to an offensive ine that has been depleted by injury.

Guards Ben Sobieski and Kyle Trippeer are both out with "He has met every one of our injuries and Matt Rogers has left expectations," Philbin said.

The offensive line was one of the eak spots last year for Iowa. The Hawkeyes ranked last in the Big Ten in rushing and total offense.

"Part of the reason we moved Bruce was out of need due to injury," offensive line coach Joe Philbin said. "We looked at him and he was a fine competitor and had a temperament for an offensive lineman. We've been delighted."

Nelson said one of the best things about being on the offensive line was the intense contact every play. For the aggressive 280pounder, it is also the thing that makes the position most difficult.

"Blocking is blocking, but I like to attack the run," Nelson said. "That's all we did in Emmetsburg in high school. Waiting for guys to come to me on the pass block has been the hardest part."

In the spring prospectus, Nelson was listed as being 6-foot-4 and only 210 pounds. Coming into the fall, Nelson is now listed at 270 pounds.

The increase in weight is just another indicator that Nelson is doing all he can to become an effective lineman in the Big Ten. His coaches have been pleased with his work ethic and determination during the off-season.

Nelson's approach to the season is fairly simple. He has already sacrificed individual glory for the betterment of the team, now he wants to stay in the right frame of mind.

"I'm just going to go out there and keep a positive attitude," Nelson said. "When I was a tight end, I would run my routes as hard as I can, now I block as hard as I can. All of this is new to me,

Tongues were wagging in bars, arber shops and on radio call-in hows Monday with the rumor that Crouch had decided to transfer.

The rumors appeared to be true hen Crouch was not on the field or the start of practice. He came a few minutes late, however, because of an afternoon class, said Sports Information Director Chris Anderson. Crouch was not available to speak with reporters after practice. But Solich said Crouch was scheduled to speak at Tuesday's weekly press conference. "That has to be a very, very tough thing when it is announced that you are not the guy," Solich said.

He expressed confidence that either quarterback could lead the

"If it was the reverse, I think we would get the same great play," Solich said. "I think we're as good as anybody in the country" at quarterback "and would not trade those two.'

Solich declined to give more details on any discussions he had with Crouch.

"That is really between the play-er and myself," Solich said. "There's no need for any of that information to be put out to the public."

Solich said both players would see significant playing time.

Newcombe, who dazzled fans with his athleticism and speed while playing wingback as a freshman in 1997, tore a knee ligament in last season's opener. He returned three games later but was not nearly as effective and opted for reconstructive surgery in December. He finished the season with just 228 yards rushing and was 50-of-79 passing.

Solich said before fall camp that Newcombe had a slight edge over

Crouch, who was 4-2 as a starter last year after Newcombe was injured, was Nebraska's second leading rusher (459 yards, five touchdowns) and completed nearly 49 percent of his passes.

Newcombe and Crouch have nearly identical skills and both were among the most highly recruited option quarterbacks in the nation out of high school.

Newcombe said he could empathize with Crouch. "I can understand why — it was real tough," Newcombe said. "I can put myself in his shoes. I'd be disappointed, too. But I also understand this is a team concept and no one individual is bigger than the program."

In a related note, Solich said junior walk-on quarterback Jay Runty had left the team. Runty has not thrown a pass in a game. He has rushed for 67 yards on seven carries.

Solich said, however, that he wanted to meet with Runty in the next day or so to see if he could persuade him to change his mind.

Nebraska fans are hoping that Evans, who had 776 yards as a freshman in 1996, has recovered from a rash of injuries.

After missing the 1997 season with a pelvic muscle injury, Evans had knee surgery a week before the 1998 season.

He returned against Washington with a 146-yard, three-touchdown effort before a tailbone injury suffered against Oklahoma State slowed him the rest of the season. Evans has said he is operating at full speed.

From Richard Linklater's Dazed and Confused to the Watergate comedy Dick, a new film genre has been born: the 1970s coming-ofage story. Here are the s basics: pot humor, pre-AIDS sex, post-Vietnam politics and a marathon of radio songs - a tease for that most timeless of commodities, the soundtrack album.

But each '70s film offers a different take. In Dick, Andrew Fleming imagined two girls bringing down the president. In Dazed and Confused, Linklater's suburbanites agonized over lost dideals. The teen-agers in Outside Providence, the new film from the Farrelly • brothers, are too stoned to know what ideals are.

Shawn Hatosy (left), Jack Ferver and Chris Jewett star in Outside Providence, a 1970s "coming-of-age" story. The film will open Wednesday at Coral Ridge 10 Theatres.

Farrellys, it's directed by Michael Corrente, whose previous movies include the dramas American Buffalo and Federal Hill.

Set indeed outside Providence, in Pawtucket, R.I., the film is based on Peter Farrelly's autobiographical novel. It features Tim and Jackie Dunphy (Shawn Hatosy and Tommy Bone),

It's a shouting, all-boys household the mother * and some typically dope-y died long ago - and wisdom is passed on from the father's ongoing card game. In the Dumb and Dumber tradition, Tim gets stoned and crashes the family car But Outside Providence is into a parked vehicle, a police car. Dad packs him off to an ultra-strict boarding school where even swearing gets you stuck with extra work duty. Tim will rake a lot of leaves in his spare time.

But Tim gradually finds his way among the rich kids, and most of this movie is pretty good boarding school humor: Authorities are razzed, drugs smuggled, beer guzzled. And, as in Something About Mary, the story is brightened by the leading man's love for a kind and beautiful blonde, played by the nicely named Amy Smart. In the Farrellys' hopeful world, a good heart (as opposed to money or a mind) is what you need to get the girl.

It's unlikely Outside Providence will catch on in the same way as Something About Mary or Dumb and Dumber. It's never that funny or that shocking. But it's also never condescending or mean, and when the Farrellys have a point to make, they know just the right language.

It isn't easy being Ozzie, the elder Dunphy reminds his sons, when you ain't got a Harriet.

A Miramax Films release, Outside Providence was produced by the Farrellys, Corrente and Randy Finch. The film is rated R, and the running time is 95 minutes.

Reds stop Atlanta's 10-game winning streak

CINCINNATI (AP) — Jeffrey Hammonds, Sean Casey and Jason LaRue hit two-run homers Monday night as the Cincinnati Reds pulled away to an 11-3 victory and ended the Atlanta Braves' 10-game winning streak.

Atlanta put together its longest winning streak in seven years with excellent pitching. It crashed when Tom Glavine (11-10) had trouble finding the strike zone.

The left-hander gave up eight hits, five walks and six runs in only four innings — he needed 99 pitches to make it that far — while losing for the first time since July 20.

Cincinnati got its first victory in seven games against the Braves this season, finally beating the team that it considers the measuring stick in the NL.

Until Monday night, the Reds had not come close measuring up. Cincinnati lost 10 of its last 12 against Atlanta and is only 5-22 against the Braves over the last three seasons.

Denny Neagle (4-5) gave up five hits in seven innings as he ended his personal streak of futility. The left-hander had been roughed up in two starts against his former team at Turner Field this season.

He had some troubling moments again — Walt Weiss hit a solo homer, his first since May 25, and Andruw Jones hit a tworun homer that cut the Reds'lead to 4-3 in the fourth. Jones is 7-for-11 career off Neagle with four homers.

Tigers 1, Rangers 0

DETROIT — Brian Moehler pitched a three-hitter for his first win since July 23 and Gabe Kapler homered as Detroit beat Texas stopping the Rangers' fourgame winning streak.

Moehler (9-14), who had been 0-5 in his previous six starts, got his sixth career shutout, his second this year. He struck out two and and walked two in his second complete game this season.

ond base against Moehler, who retired 12 of his last 13 batters.

Blue Jays 2, Twins 1

TORONTO — Pat Hentgen won consecutive starts for the first time since May and Toronto overcame a two-hitter by rookie Jason Ryan to beat Minnesota.

Hentgen (9-10) allowed just one run and five hits in 7 1-3 innings as Toronto stopped a nine-game home losing streak, the second-longest home skid in team history. He struck out four and walked none.

Ryan (1-1), making just his second career start in the majors, didn't allow many hits, but both drove in runs. The 23-year-old, right-hander struck out four and walked three.

Mariners 5, White Sox 2

CHICAGO — Russ Davis hit a goahead, two-run single and Edgar Martinez homered as Seattle snapped a three-game losing streak by beating Chicago in the first game of a doubleheader. Rookie Freddy Garcia (14-7) won his third straight start, allowing seven hits and two runs in 5 1-3 innings. Reliever Jose Paniagua pitched 2 2-3 innings, allowing one hit, and Jose Mesa pitched the ninth for his 30th save.

Chicago lefty Jim Parque (9-11) lost his fifth straight decision, allowing nine hits and four runs in 6 2-3 innings. He walked Martinez and Jay Buhner to start the sixth and Davis delivered a two-run single after a sacrifice by Dan Wilson for a 4-2 Seattle lead.

Indians 7, Angels 5

CLEVELAND — Roberto Alomar doubled to break a seventh-inning tie, leading Bartolo Colon and the Cleveland Indians over the Anaheim Angels 7-5 Monday night.

Colon (15-4) withstood homers by Garret Anderson, Mo Vaughn and Jim Edmonds to win his fifth straight start and extend the Angels' losing streak to Colon beat Anaheim for the third time this season, allowing five runs and six hits in seven innings, walked two and struck out six, including Vaughn twice on pitches clocked at 100 mph or more.

With Anaheim ahead 5-4, Dave Roberts doubled leading off the seventh and scored on a throwing error by Al Levine (1-1), who threw the ball down the right-field line after fielding Omar Vizquel's bunt single.

Red Sox 9, Royals 1

BOSTON — Pedro Martinez struck out 11 in six innings and Jose Offerman went 4-for-4 to lead Boston to a 9-1 victory over Kansas City.

Martinez (19-4) struck out 10 or more for a club-record 14th time this season and the 49th time in his career. He allowed one run on four hits and a walk to lower his major league-leading ERA to 2.36.

He will have his first chance to become the majors' first 20-game winner on Saturday in Seattle.

Yankees 7, Athletics 4

NEW YORK — Chuck Knoblauch homered and drove in four runs as the New York Yankees beat the Oakland Athletics 7-4 Monday night to move 2,000 games over .500 in their history. The Yankees, who trailed 4-0 in the fifth inning, rallied with four runs in the fifth and three in the eighth to improve to 8,475-6,475 since moving to New York before the 1903 season.

Oakland fell two games behind Boston in the AL wild-card race. The Red Sox beat Kansas City 9-1. The Yankees (81-49) remained one game ahead of Cleveland for the best record in the league.

T.J. Mathews (8-4) walked Bernie Williams leading off the eighth. Buddy Groom came in with one out and gave up a single to Chili Davis, who was in a 3-for-35 slump, and walked Ricky Ledee.

Marlins 4, Cardinals 2

ST. LOUIS — Rookie Vladimir Nunez outpitched 16-game winner Kent Bottenfield and Mike Lowell had a two-run double as the Florida Marlins beat St. Louis 4-2 Monday night, the Cardinals' seventh straight loss.

Mark McGwire went 1-for-2 and remained stuck on 51 homers, three behind Sammy Sosa, the major league leader. McGwire, who had a single, a strikeout and two walks, and hasn't homered in 21 at-bats over six games, getting just tree hits in that span.

Bottenfield (16-7) was the fourth 16-game winner the Marlins faced in five days. They lost to the other three: Randy Johnson on Thursday, Jose Lima on Friday and Mike Hampton on Sunday.

Mets 17, Astros 1

HOUSTON — Edgardo Affonzo went 6-for-6 with three homers as the New York Mets handed the Houston Astros their most lopsided home loss with a 17-1 victory Monday night.

Alfonzo, who also scored a teamrecord six times and drove in five runs, hit a solo homer in the first, singled and scored a run in the second, hit a two-run homer in the fourth and added a solo shot in the sixth.

He singled and scored in the eighth and got his final hit in the ninth with an RBI ground-rule double.

The second baseman entered New York's six-game road trip in a 2-for-25 slump. He has gone 10-for-19 through the first four games of the trip.

Raines battling lupus

NEW YORK (AP) — Tim Raines walked into the New York Yankees' clubhouse Monday a little lighter than usual and with the heavy weight of a chronic disease.

One by one, Yankees players and coaches walked up to their former teammate, who earlier this month revealed he had Lupus. They embraced him, expressed their sympathies and joked with him.

The player most responsible for keeping the Yankees' clubhouse loose and the players laughing during a record-setting season in 1998 needed his spirits lifted.

"It was emotional. Very emotional," Raines said before his Oakland Athletics played the New York Yankees. "This was my first time seeing these guys since this happened. It's my first time back in New York since the World Series parade. It's been an emotional day."

There have been a lot of emotional days recently for Raines, who has a disease with no known cure. Lupus is a connective tissue disease in which the immune system turns against a person's own body. It effects various parts of the body, especially the skin, joints, blood and kidneys.

Its symptoms can be treated and Raines is taking medication daily and intravenous treatment once a month. While his season is over, the 39-year-old Raines vows to return to baseball by spring training and still is committed to one day playing with his son, Tim-Jr., who is in the Baltimore Orioles' farm system.

"I'm going to play again," he said. "I know that. I can play five or six more years. I feel like a rookie again."

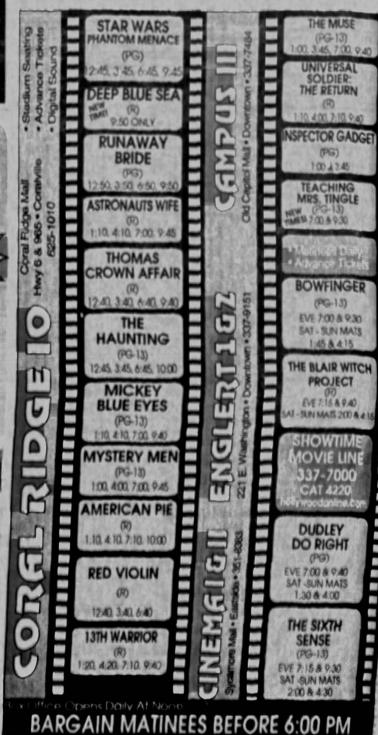

Raines became bloated and mysteriously gained 15 pounds near the All-Star break. A kidney biopsy was performed July 23 and he was diagnosed with Lupus.

Raines underwent four days of treatment in the hospital, where he was given doses of medications to relieve swelling in his kidneys.
