E. Timor fears massacre

The United Nations delays its mission's withdrawal from Dili

By John Martinkus
Associated Press

DILI, Indonesia — The United Nations heeded the pleas of East Timorese refugees Wednesday and delayed the evacuation of its mission in the Indonesian province, fearing that withdrawal could end in mass bloodshed.

As the refugees streamed out of the embattled territory to escape rampaging militias, witnesses charged that soldiers were looting throughout Dili. Rumors of mass slaughters swept through refugee camps.

Witnesses who ventured onto the mostly deserted streets said Indonesian soldiers were "looting everything in sight," carrying furniture out of abandoned houses and loading it onto trucks.

"They are trying to kill all the educated people so we cannot develop our country," said a pro-independence activist who reached the U.N. compound Wednesday. "This is a goodbye operation."

Refugees streamed out of East Timor as troops and militiamen continued to terrorize the population. U.N. officials estimated that up to 200,000 people — a quarter of the territory's population — have fled in the past several days.

International efforts to resolve the crisis moved ahead, with a meeting between a high-level U.N. delegation and Indonesia's foreign minister.

The Vatican endorsed a proposal for a U.N. peacekeeping force, though U.S. officials appeared hesitant. Britain said it is sending a warship and approximately a dozen military planners to the region.

The Clinton administration Wednesday ruled out the use of U.S. troops in any international force that might go to East Timor and said Indonesia will be courting economic disaster unless it restores law and order to the troubled province.

The idea of an international force appeared to be gaining momentum. On the table thus far were an offer by Australia to send 2,000 troops to East Timor and a promise of troops by New Zealand as well.

But the Clinton administration, just three months after the conclusion of the U.S.-led humanitarian intervention in Kosovo, seemed determined to limit the U.S. role in East Timor.

Officials said a U.S. contribution to a U.N. peacekeeping effort could include logistics, communications, intelligence and possibly an airlift. But they said no U.N. peacekeepers would be sent to Indonesia unless the Indonesians themselves endorse the idea.

On Capitol Hill, a group of Senate Democrats proposed legislation that would suspend all U.S. mili-

UISG sets up tuition feedback system

■ A new UISG plan will allow students to give input on rising tuition and UI spending.

By Heather Reed
The Daily Iowan

When the Iowa state Board of Regents announces its proposal for a tuition increase today, UI students will have the chance to respond with their own proposals.

Last year, even though a 5.2 percent increase proposal favored by UI President Mary Sue Coleman in 1998 was dropped to a 4.5 increase, students were still concerned that their opinions were not being heard.

In response, the UI Student Government is working to set up a system, directed at the regents, through which students can give input about the amount and uses for tuition by voting through letters, e-mail, video postcards and phone messages, said UISG President Lana Zak.

"Our intent is to make the regents fully aware of the position of the students," Zak said.

The Higher Education Price Index suggests approximately a 3 percent increase to maintain current conditions, but UI President Mary Sue Coleman has in the past suggested a higher increase to the board. She declined to be specific about her suggestions for this year, pending the board's announcement.

Coleman said that she has told the regents that more money is needed to improve the libraries and the computer systems, among other things.

"We not only want to maintain, but we want to increase quality," she said. "And quality costs money."

Regent Ellengray Kennedy echoed Coleman's sentiments.

"If we want to do the extra things, it's going to take more than the cost-of-living increase," she said.

"We consider their (the students') point of view," said Kennedy, who voted for the 4.5 percent increase last year.

The regents' decision will be based on how much money comes from other sources, including the state Legislature, she said.

Reno taps Danforth to head Waco probe

■ The move comes as the lead Senate Republican calls for the attorney general's resignation.

By Pete Yost
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Former Republican Sen. John Danforth agreed Wednesday to oversee an independent review of the 1993 government standoff with the Branch Davidians, government officials said.

Attorney General Janet Reno was to announce the appointment today. Reno's decision to tap Danforth came as the top Republican in the Senate said he now has doubts about who started the fire that ended the fatal siege in Waco, Texas, and believes it is time for Reno to step down.

Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott said new revelations that the government withheld evidence about its use of force in the raid add to a "pattern" of refusing to cooperate with congressional requests.

"There are doubts because questions have been raised," Lott told reporters. Those new questions and what Lott called a history of Reno's not cooperating with Congress "... leads me to conclude that the attorney general should resign."

His comments fueled a new GOP campaign against Reno that began two weeks ago with the belated revelation that the FBI fired incendiary tear gas grenades at the Davidian compound on the day a fire killed 80 members of the sect. The government continues to maintain the fire was started by sect members, not federal agents.

Reno, nonetheless, moved forward with her plans to launch an independent inquiry headed by Danforth, who left the Senate in 1995 and is respected by members of both parties for his stubborn independence and reputation for integrity.

Reno selected Danforth, and he accepted the offer during several days of negotiations, said government officials, who spoke only on condition of anonymity.

Town mourns victims of explosion

■ Around 500 people turn out for a vigil honoring the victims of a house explosion Monday.

By Heather Pavnica
The Daily Iowan

RICHLAND, Iowa — Members of a Christian community clung together and bowed their heads. Some sobbed lightly during the final prayer at a vigil for the seven who died Monday in a house explosion in this small town.

Approximately 500 supporters, family members and friends listened to religious songs, prayers and hymns during the vigil service held Wednesday night in Richland.

"We are focusing on two needs," said Mayor Byron Kimble. "The religious side and the psychological side. Tonight we took care of the religious side."

Kimble said the community will pull together and look to a bright future.

"I'm sure the community is going to carry scars," he said. "The town has a tremendous amount of spirit and pride. It will be the driving force in the healing."

Joann VanBlaricom embraced her husband, Paul, as she wept for Juanita Usovsky, her friend for 17 years, who died in the blast.

"We cry and try to remember the good times," said Paul VanBlaricom.

"They would do anything for anybody."

The blast occurred about 3:35 p.m. Monday during a Labor Day barbecue; officials believe that the cause was a ruptured liquid propane gas line.

Carol Anderson came to the service to support the community and lend a hand to those in need.

She has been collecting names of those in the community who are willing to make meals for the victims when they return from the hospital. They are also collecting donations for clothing, she said.

"It is a tragedy, but it is bringing (the community) a lot closer," Anderson said. "Good things do come out of tragedies."

Anderson's children and the Usovsky children played together at school and knew each other well.

Facing 9/9/99, UI students yawn

■ Today's potential computer glitch doesn't seem to faze the university community.

By Chao Xiong
The Daily Iowan

The potential for major computer glitch today, similar to the Y2K bug, gets no respect at the UI, as students and faculty dismiss its seriousness.

"It's not going to be the apocalypse," said UI junior Elisabeth Eusley. "I think people just like to create chaos. It gives them something to do with their free time."

The number 9999, the equivalent of today's date, has been used by some software programmers as a stop flag to end a computer's operation, said Steven Bruell, chairman of the UI computer science department. "My expectation is that very, very few computers have that," he said. "It's not going to cause any problems."

Only some older computer systems are at risk to the bug at the stroke of midnight, he said.

"There's a potential for problems, but it's a good deal smaller than the Y2K problem," said Duane DeRaad, director of utilities in the facility services group. "There's not a high level of concern."

In the rare event that anything did happen today, a power outage would be most likely, he said.

completely replaced." is a player's off day at headquarters in San Francisco. Hanks wasn't immediately available for comment. Hanks established himself as the game's best free agent. Hanks has 31 career interceptions, including 29 since he became a fulltime starter in 1993. Hanks celebrated his picks by running into a dance, punctuated by a celebration with a wig on his neck. Hanks' season was a tough one for the Packers, though. He was beaten out of the lineup by Green Bay's Antonio Freeman, who zipped past him and ran for an 80-yard touchdown on the first play of the game. Hanks' loss to the Packers last year was also involved in the team's decision to trade him to San Francisco. Anderson bowled him over on the field in the team's 20-18 playoff victory over the 49ers.

Hanks, who traded his veteran status for a Pro Bowl guard Kevin Smith in the cap purge, openly said he would deal or release himself because of the team's economic concerns before the sides agreed to his contract.

The continued strong play of Anderson and a poor preseason performance made his release more likely to San Francisco.

charges

Schlichter admitted to an investigation by a State police investigator that he "had a relapse and needed help," according to a published Aug. 26 in the Bulletin of Anderson.

Schlichter, who won early release by earning two college credits behind bars through a program at the Madison County Jail by posting $5,000 bond, was released.

A charge of check deception carries a maximum sentence of one year. Each of the gambling charges could carry a maximum sentence of 30 days. If convicted, Schlichter could be ordered to serve consecutive sentences.

In 1997, Schlichter was sentenced to four years in prison for charges of theft, forgery and possession of a handgun in connection with the $800,000 to support his gambling habit. Before beginning his Indiana prison term, Schlichter served a federal sentence in Kentucky for a probation violation. He surrendered to Indiana authorities in 1998.

Plant goes whoosh in the night

■ A computer shutdown at the UI facility causes a loud aural incident.

By Ryan Foley
The Daily Iowan

Shortly before midnight Tuesday, steam rushing out of a safety valve at the UI Power Plant caused a noise so loud that concerned and curious area residents went to investigate.

"It was a very loud noise, like steam was being pushed out," said Sherrine Schulz, an Iowa City resident who heard the noise while at a friend's house near downtown. Schulz and three friends followed the noise to see where it was coming from.

was kind of disturbing, because we had no idea what was going on."

Schulz thought the noise may have been caused by a computer problem, especially with the problems predicted for 9/9/99, she said.

But the incident at the Power Plant had nothing to do with 9/9/99 or Y2K; it was caused by a power failure in one of the plant's seven central computers, said Ferman Milster, plant manager.

"We had computer-control problems," he said. "A lot of energy was suddenly released into the air, which resulted in the noise."

When the computer shut down, several pressure-reducing valves also closed down, causing steam to build up and the boiler's pressure to get high. This triggered the safety valves, opening them and causing the loud noise, which lasted almost 45 minutes, Milster said.

The few calls received by Iowa City police described the noise "like a vacuum cleaner" and a "loud rushing noise."

This is the first time something like this has happened at the plant; a backup power system was installed Wednesday to ensure safety if there's a future power-supply failure, Milster said.

UI faculty group OKs GEP streamlining

■ A new committee will focus on reviewing the General Education Program courses.

By Meg Neary
The Daily Iowan

The UI will create a six-member committee in an effort to streamline the approval and review of General Education Program courses, a faculty group decided Wednesday.

The committee will work with the UI Educational Policy Committee to establish procedures for the approval of GEP courses, said Rick Fumerton, a philosophy professor and committee member.

The new committee was approved by the UI Faculty Assembly during a meeting Wednesday afternoon.

The committee will also review courses already approved for the GEP and advise the UI on GEP curriculum issues, Fumerton said.

"A single committee over all GEP course review will have a broader, more coherent perspective and consistently apply the same criteria," he said.

The proposal was passed by a unanimous vote after the addition of an amendment requiring that one student member be appointed to the committee. The appointed student must have completed her or his GEP requirement.

"The first thing faculty members do is forget what it's like to be a student," said John Nelson, a political science professor, who proposed the amendment on the student member.

"Students have a valuable perspective on understanding what the challenges are and how you might meet them," he said.

Three additional amendments were made to the proposal regarding the specific language of the document.

The Faculty Assembly also passed a motion to change the name of the Department of Sports, Health, Leisure and Physical Studies to the Department of Health, Leisure and Sport Studies.

The new name will better illustrate the department's focus and mission, said Carolyn Lara-Braud, an associate professor in the department. The new name will reflect that a teacher-education major is no longer offered, she said.

The UI Provost and the Board of Regents must also approve the name change; ideally, it will be in effect by fall 2000, Lara-Braud said.

Citizen King has seen 'Better Days'

Because of low ticket sales, SCOPE announced Wednesday the cancellation of its upcoming Citizen King concert.

The show, which had been scheduled for Sept. 13 in the IMU Main Lounge, could have potentially accommodated 1,600 concert-goers, said Ryan Barker, director of SCOPE productions. The organization did not assume it would be able to sell all available tickets but had hoped to sell more than it did, he said.

"I'm kind of surprised, because it is kind of a big band right now," Barker said.

Although Barker would not disclose the exact number of tickets sold, he said, "It wasn't very many."

The lack of interest on the part of UI students and Iowa City residents for Citizen King will cost SCOPE money, but not as much as if it had brought the band in anyway, Barker said.

Citizen King had been paid a certain amount of money by

I would have considered buying tickets, but I didn't know about the show.

— Luke Ortmann,
UI sophomore

SCOPE to commit to the concert date in advance, Barker said. Canceling the show saves the student-run production agency money in the long run, he said.

"If we had had the show, we would have lost a lot more, due to expenses for the show," Barker said.

In addition to renting the room and stage, lights and sound for the concert would have cost between $2,500-$3,500, making it cheaper to cancel the show than to put it on for a small crowd, Barker said.

Had he only known about the concert, UI sophomore Luke Ortmann, said he might have gone.

"I would have considered buying tickets, but I didn't know about the show," Ortmann said. "I like the music; it's all right."

Others said they didn't want to spend money to see a "one-hit wonder" band.

UI sophomore Denise Coleman said she really only knows the band's song "Better Days," and, although she thinks it is decent to listen to, she would prefer not to attend an entire concert.

Tickets cost $12.50, and will be refunded, said Mike Lynskey, the director of public relations for SCOPE.

SCOPE doesn't plan to bring Citizen King back to the UI in the future, Lynskey said.

Energy company monitors complex

More tests will be conducted at Iowa Illinois Manor to check the level of contamination.

By Leah Reinstein
The Daily Iowan

Though MidAmerican Energy Co. says Iowa Illinois Manor residents don't have any health concerns to worry about, the company's decision to conduct environmental tests on the building site troubles some residents.

"I'm kind of concerned my kids might come out with like 1,200 toes," said Jill Trumm, a UI sophomore who lives in Iowa Illinois Manor, 505 E. Burlington St.

After announcing the finding of coal-tar contamination to residents last year, MidAmerican is scheduled to begin field work in October to sample the site's contents, said Dan Klimek, MidAmerican senior environmental coordinator.

"We don't believe anyone is being harmed by any exposure at the present time," he said.

The purpose of MidAmerican's fieldwork is to determine the nature and extent of coal-tar contamination and assess the threat to human health and the environment, said Diane Huffman, community involvement coordinator at the Environmental Protection Agency in Kansas City, Kan.

"It is hard to put into perspective how this contamination is affecting human health," she said.

Since 1997, the EPA has sampled soil, groundwater, air, sediment and water from the nearby Halston Creek that was contaminated by the Manufactured Gas Plant, which was formerly located on the Iowa Illinois Manor site. Coal-tar contaminants, byproducts of the gas plant, were found in the soil on and off the site, said Diana Engeman, project manager for the site. The contaminants included lead, cyanide and arsenic.

The preliminary research on the site has led the EPA to further investigate through Superfund, a program created to address releases of substances into the environment and hazardous-waste sites.

Klimek said MidAmerican will attempt to get the work done as quickly as possible.

"The work done on the shoulder of the road may reduce traffic flow on Van Buren and possibly Johnson. Nothing will be done inside of the apartments," he said.

The work that has been done on the site in the past has not bothered UI senior Leah Stiller, who is spending her third year in the building.

The fieldwork will cost $100,000 to $150,000 and will be funded by MidAmerican, Klimek said. If more work is necessary, MidAmerican will be liable for the costs.

Greg Hall, a representative of Iowa Illinois Manor, is eager to see the work completed.

"I'm concerned about the tenants' well-being. It's been about 10 years' worth of testing," he said. "The EPA is optimistic; I like to hear that."

Board forum focuses on cutting budget

Approximately 30 people attended the forum as election day, Sept. 14, draws near.

By Anne Huyck
The Daily Iowan

Changes in the Iowa City School District's budget, as well as changes in the School Board's role itself, were the focus of a School Board candidates' forum Wednesday night.

Six candidates are vying for three board seats in the Sept. 14 election. Incumbents Susan Mims and Cindy Parsons, and challengers Don Jackson, Lauren Reece, Dale Shultz and Tom Thrans all said board members need to work on communication.

"The community needs to trust the board," Reece said. "Communication is a natural flow from there."

From talking to residents, Shultz said, discontent that had been building for years surfaced when the board started a series of district-wide budget cuts two years ago.

Candidates also spoke about ideas they had regarding budget cuts and how to improve communication with citizens. All six candidates offered suggestions for increased student leadership.

Parsons said she would like to see the board work with government classes more; Thrans suggested inviting students to talk about issues; Reece suggested students preparing lunch for their school once a month to learn about sharing, working together and organizing.

In the face of $700,000 in budget cuts that the board must make, whom the board should listen to about the cutbacks was also an issue.

Wendy Allen, an Iowa City resident, said she agreed with Reece and Shultz, who stressed that the teachers' suggestions for budget cuts needed to be considered.

"Teachers know how to teach, and (the board) ought to listen," she said. "Parents know what they want for their kids, and the superintendent works for us. There should be some collaboration, but there needs to be more listening."

Inmates fighting transfer on religious grounds

NEWTON, Iowa (AP) — Some inmates about to be transferred out of the medium-security prison here are claiming that the move, claiming that they are victims of religious discrimination.

Approximately 140 inmates were moved out of the Newton Correctional Facility and replaced by inmates elsewhere in the prison system have enrolled in a Christian-values program.

The program, sponsored by Fellowship Ministries, will start Oct. 1 with support from up to 200 religious volunteers from throughout Iowa.

Jammie Berry of Des Moines, common-law husband, Leon Sheppard, scheduled to be moved, said he believes that the transfers violate the constitutional separation of church and state.

CITY BRIEFS

Lawsuit filed in 1997 football injury

A former City High student who broke his neck in a 1997 football game filed a lawsuit Tuesday against the Iowa City School District and several members of the City High football staff.

Sean Roberts broke his neck in a September 1997 game, but the coaching staff allegedly misdiagnosed the injury as a pulled muscle and urged Roberts to continue playing, court documents said.

When Roberts was later examined at a local hospital, X-rays confirmed that his neck had been broken in three places during the game, court documents said.

The lawsuit names the City High football coach, assistant coaches, trainers, as well as the manufacturer of the helmet. The lawsuit claims that coaches and trainers failed to properly identify the injury and failed to provide adequate equipment for their players.

Neither the plaintiff nor school officials could be reached for comment.

Fire Department joins the Jet Ski set

The Iowa City Fire Department has added a popular piece of equipment to its water-rescue inventory.

A Jet Ski was loaned to the Fire Department by Iowa City Motorsports, 1800 Stevens Drive, in cooperation with Kawasaki Motorsports USA.

A Kawasaki program started in 1989 allows local dealers to loan Jet Skis to fire departments for a one-year period, after which the departments can trade them in for new ones.

"It's an extremely good program," said Terry Vargason, co-owner of Iowa City Motorsports.

The Jet Ski, which normally sells for $6,700, operates in as little as 18 in. of water and actually runs better in cold water, Vargason said, making it an asset.

Kawasaki officials say the watercraft are ideal for water rescue because of their maneuverability, speed and lack of a propeller.

The Iowa Department of Natural Resources has been using a Jet Ski from Iowa City Motorsports at the Coralville Reservoir for enforcement, as well as on rivers and streams during duck-hunting season, Vargason said.

The Fire Department is training firefighters to handle the watercraft; it held a demonstration at City Park Wednesday.

STATE BRIEF

Inmates fighting transfer on religious grounds

NEWTON, Iowa (AP) — Some inmates about to be transferred out of the state's medium-security prison here are contesting the move, claiming that they are victims of religious discrimination.
 Approximately 140 inmates will be moved out of the Newton Correctional Facility and replaced by inmates from elsewhere in the prison system who have enrolled in a Christian-oriented values program.
 The program, sponsored by Prison Fellowship Ministries, will start on Oct. 1 with support from up to 200 religious volunteers from throughout Iowa.
 Jammie Berry of Des Moines, whose common-law husband, Leon Sheley, is scheduled to be moved, said the inmates believe that the transfers violate the constitutional separation of church and state.

Berry has two children, ages 2 and 5, with Sheley, who is behind bars at Newton for aiding and abetting forgery.
 "They are transferring the inmates who do not choose to be involved in the new Christianity program," she said. "They are not telling them when they are going to send them or where they are going to send them."
 Sheley is among about 40 Newton inmates who have appealed their transfers. One of those protesting inmates — not Sheley — will remain at the prison, said Newton Warden John Mathes.
 Layne Lindebak, an assistant Iowa attorney general, contends that the transfers do not violate the separation of church and state. Courts have repeatedly ruled that prison officials have the authority to assign inmates wherever the prison administration chooses, he said.
 "Inmates have no right to be in a particular facility," Lindebak said.
 Mathes said most of the 140 inmates will be transported to similar medium-security facilities elsewhere in Iowa's prison system.

"The Indonesian government clearly has not lived up to its commitment to maintain security and is openly supporting the militia violence," said Sen. Russ Feingold, D-Wis., the prime sponsor. The measure drew the support of Sen. Joseph Biden of Delaware and John Kerry of Massachusetts, both senior members of the Foreign Relations Committee. East Timorese activist Jose Ramos Horta, who shared a 1996 Nobel Peace Prize for his work on behalf of his people, has said strong American participation in a peacekeeping force was essential. "No force can be really effective in the area without strong U.S. participation," he told ABC's "Nightline" Tuesday.

As the security situation in East Timor continued to deteriorate, the Clinton administration still held out hope that Indonesian authorities could rein in anti-independence militias who have killed countless East Timorese in recent days and laid waste to much of the province.

President Clinton discussed ways to encourage Indonesian action in a round of phone calls Wednesday with U.N. Secretary General Kofi Annan and the prime ministers of Australia, New Zealand and Britain.

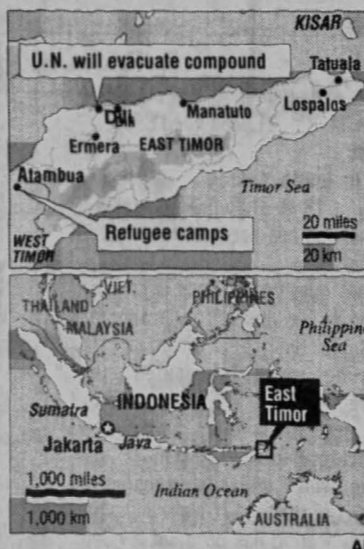

Clinton wanted the countries to employ coordinated diplomatic overtures "urging the Indonesian government to bring the situation under control or agree to an international security force," National Security Council spokesman Mike Hammer said.

In the provincial capital of Dili, more than 2,000 people have crowded into the U.N. compound. Many said pro-Indonesian militias would kill them if the U.N. workers left.

At U.N. headquarters in New York, Secretary-General Kofi Annan said the pullout of the remaining 206 international officials and 167 East Timorese working for the world body would be delayed 24 hours. He also said he is trying to keep a small U.N. presence in the violence-torn province.

"It will be the holocaust here" if U.N. workers leave, said a prominent student leader in the com-

"They kept to themselves," she said. "They were devoted to each other and their children." The half-hour service was provided by Women's Aglow in Iowa, an organization that assists those in need. The organization has started a fund for the victims; it will have a network of community assistance after the survivors return home.

"The entire community went to the site to help out," said Kerry Hadley, vice president of the east-area board of Women's Aglow. "That's just the way we work around here."

The Solid Rock Fellowship in Richland supplied a mobile sound system for the service.

The songs — about healing, peace and being close to the Lord — were chosen because of their religious meaning, said Pat McReynolds of the Solid Rock Fellowship.

A counseling session was provided by the Red Cross of Ottumwa, Iowa, for the firefighters and rescuers who helped at the explosion, McReynolds said.

"All the firefighters were close to the families," she said. "This is a small town, and everybody knows everybody. Something as simple as that could have happened to anybody."

Survivors include Jerry Usovsky, his daughter Marlena Usovsky, Barb Dyer of Richland, Bev Gartner of Iowa City, Trey Gartner, 10, Iowa City, and Josh Kleinmeyer, 10, also of Iowa City.

Express food becomes 1-stop shopping for some students get fruit anymore," said Corbin, who stores the extra food in her refrigerator. "I think it's really great."

The express line is open from 7 a.m. to 3 p.m. and works with students' regular meal plans. It was created for those who don't have time to wait in line or those who just want to grab food quickly, said Gerry Stoner, the Burge food service manager.

The option includes the choice of two main dishes and four sides, and Stoner said she knows students use it for more than a meal.

"We're aware that it happens; it's a big problem," she said. "It's not meant to be an all-you-can-eat grocery store."

At Burge, Stoner said, food service has been trying to combat the problem by using smaller bags and reversing the line flow so that students have to walk by the checker.

"We've already noticed a difference in how often we have to restock," she said.

Taking excess food from the cafeterias is not a new occurrence. Students have been sneaking away with items from the hot-food lines for years, Stoner said.

Now in its third week, the express line serves as many as 500 students a day. Though students were able to get sack lunches in the past, it was never this popular, Stoner said. Connie Murray, the Quadrangle food service manager, said 260 students came through on the busiest day last week.

UI sophomore Cynthia Lira goes through the express line when she wants to avoid the noise of the cafeterias.

"I can eat while I'm doing homework in my room," she said, leaving the Burge cafeteria with her brown bag.

Checker Rebecca Hooper, a UI senior, said some students who come through the line get lunch and dinner at the same time. Students are able to get all three meals on the same trip.

"The people who come through seem to really like it," she said. "It's a really good idea. I wish they had it before, when I lived here."

UI freshman Brian McGowan was also impressed by the line's speed during his first trip Tuesday.

"You don't have to wait in line as long," said McGowan, who rated the food as "pretty good."

That possibility doesn't concern most students.

"I guess the worse that could happen is the university shuts down, and we all have a free day," said UI sophomore Veronica Simpson.

Tim Grabinski, manager of communications services for MidAmerican Energy Co., said that with its "all encompassing" Y2K plan, it is not expecting any problems with providing electricity.

"We feel that we've done everything we can," he said.

DeRaad is confident the UI is prepared for Y2K.

"The work preparing for Y2K has been going on for a long time," he said. "We've looked at anything that could have a microchip in it."

Since Jan. 1, the UI has undergone "major control system replacement," DeRaad said, installing Y2K-compatible systems and developing procedures to operate manually in case of a power outage.

UISG plans system for tuition feedback

Not surprisingly, tuition is a continuing concern of students, particularly those who pay their own.

"I think it would be good for the university to have student input when they're looking at things such as that," said UI junior Wendy Cullinan.

Students have 30 days from today to get their messages out through the voting plan. Zak said UISG plans to publicize the tuition referendum so that any student who wants to give input will be given the chance.

The regents will meet Sept. 15-16 in Cedar Falls.

could create a concentrated target for harassment or violence.

The Society Hill Synagogue in Philadelphia will hire an armed, off-duty police officer to stand guard during services, and ushers will check visitors for membership cards and watch for suspicious-looking bags, said executive director Evelyn Segal.

"It's very expensive, and we can't afford it, but we're taking it out of the budget because we feel that we can't afford not to," she said.

Chicago's Temple Shalom will hire security guards — some armed — for services, and also has surveillance cameras, Alpert said. The temple has banned briefcases, tote bags and backpacks.

Other synagogues will assign seats and have doors that open only from the inside during services. Police will increase their presence around many synagogues, and worshippers will be instructed not to gather in large crowds outside.

NATION BRIEF

Congress returns, ready for gridlock

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Republican-controlled Congress returned to work Wednesday, tugged by conflicting forces of compromise and confrontation with the White House on tax cuts, spending, health care, gun control and other issues that are likely to dominate the final months of the year.

"I don't see any indication the president wants to work with us," Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., told reporters after smilingly predicting an "action-packed" September and October. "What the president wants is more spending, more spending, more spending for everything."

Senate Democratic leader Tom Daschle sounded only slightly less pessimistic about the prospects for compromise. He said he had talked with Lott, and he expressed the hope they could work together.

But, he quickly added, "Clearly we (Democrats) will fight and we will aggressively pursue" an agenda that includes gun control, education, legislation relating to HMOs, an increase in minimum wage and money for hard-hit farmers.

Both sides immediately began jockeying for position on education. Daschle, D-S.D., listed the issue as part of the Democrats' fall agenda, and House Speaker Dennis Hastert traveled to an elementary school to underscore Republican support. There, he issued a call to President Clinton to "work together in education. Let's take steps today that will make our nation's schools better."

Clinton, too, talked of compromise during the day, while at the same time he prodded Republicans to move legislation on health care.

"Ever since we've had this divided government, we normally have to wait till the 11th hour for really good things to happen ... As I said a couple of days ago, it is now 10:30; we're ready for the 11th hour," he said.

The House and Senate both spent the day debating routine spending measures, preludes to larger clashes looming just over the horizon.

Lott said tax cut legislation approved before Congress' break would go to the White House next week for its threatened veto.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

U.S.: Friend or foe or both to East Timor?

U.S. hypocrisy is once again highlighted by what is taking place in East Timor. Having aided the Indonesian army for more than 25 years, supplying it with guns, ammunition and helicopters, the United States, under President Clinton, has attempted to conceal its role in the genocide of the East Timorese by feigning concern for the violence in that part of the region.

If it's true that the United States is concerned about violence in East Timor, this is a recent development. But it can't be taken at face value, because the record shows that the United States has been complicit in genocide in that part of the world since 1975.

The mass killings of East Timorese by Indonesia is not a recent phenomenon. After the '75 invasion, a third of the population was butchered, leaving close to 200,000 dead. What has been the U.S. reaction to the butchery? It voted against a Security Council resolution condemning the invasion and demanding the removal of Indonesian troops from the region, and Congress since the '75 invasion has voted for bill after bill authorizing

SCOPE deserves applause for improvements

Congratulations to SCOPE for breathing some life into the Iowa City music scene this fall.

On Sept. 3, it announced that it is bringing yet another concert to the UI campus with the mp3.com tour featuring the Goo Goo Dolls. Although live music is easy to find in Iowa City on nearly any given night, SCOPE is filling the gap left by the local bars by courting national acts and larger shows.

SCOPE is also bringing in a variety of different acts, which is important on a campus of around 30,000 students that is surrounded by a diverse community. While SCOPE might be funded by students, its services, like those provided by many other organizations on campus, need not be aimed only at students.

While music can be promoted with a general target audience in mind, there is a tendency for it to cross barriers of age, race and gender. Yet there are few concerts that would have universal appeal for every single UI student and member of the community. Walk through the halls of any dorm on campus, or any apartment building in town, and you will quickly see that not every college student is sitting around listening to the same CD.

It would be impossible for SCOPE to please everyone on campus, but it appears to be working hard to provide the UI with a range of choices, and, perhaps more importantly, it is doing it successfully. It shouldn't matter if 13-year-olds, 20-year-olds or 50-year-olds are buying tickets to SCOPE's productions. The UI does not exist in a vacuum; it is a vital part of the Iowa City community. Any organization or event on campus that can continue to promote a positive relationship between the two should be encouraged.

In order to reach wider audiences, SCOPE must continue to bring in more shows to the UI. Carver Hawkeye Arena has only recently been re-opened to concerts, and it will take time to get its name out there again. But if SCOPE can draw more acts along the lines of Elton John and the Backstreet Boys, which sell out the arena, then it won't be a long wait.

In the world of concert promotion and the rules of the UI, there is only so much that can be done and offered to prospective performers. The accomplishments of SCOPE should not be underestimated or diminished; one can only imagine what concerts have yet to come to the UI.

Waco reinforces ideas of corruption

More than almost any time in American history, the last year has shown us that half-truths or, in most cases, out and out lies, can be the stuff of resignations and impeachments in Washington. Yet, it is almost what we come to expect from those in our nation's capital. Last week's findings of previously unreleased FBI videotape of the attack on the Branch Davidian compound in Waco, Texas, reinforced this notion.

The new video, released more than six years after the attack on April 19, 1993, contains FBI agents giving orders to shoot inflammable, military-style tear gas containers into a concrete bunker near the compound's main building. The footage also contains the actual firing of the containers, which the FBI and Attorney General Janet Reno previously denied had been used.

Even after the new footage was released, there was still no evidence that the FBI's tear gas actually started the fire that killed 80 Davidians. Why, then, didn't the FBI release the information of the incendiary tear gas until last week? The new video was taken between 6-8 a.m. on the day of the attack. Why did the FBI previously release sworn affidavits stating that it had no video before 10:42 a.m.? These are questions that Reno, who is ultimately in charge of the FBI, should have to answer. She originally ordered that only non-incendiary tear gas be used, and she is now ordering an investigation into the matter.

But is it reasonable to think that Reno, who ordered agents into Waco in the first place, never had any clue about what weapons were used in the attack? Especially after she conducted what she called a "thorough review" of the attack in 1993. One of two conclusions can be made about the attorney general from this — either she didn't want to disclose information of the tear gas canisters to save her reputation and/or job, or she simply didn't do her job in her initial review of the attack. In either case, a wave of public distrust is bound to follow Reno, who suddenly seems quite unfit to hold the office of attorney general.

Considering the revelations of the past week, it makes one wonder what other facts of the Waco case and beyond have been kept secret for more than six years. As of now, the FBI is still believed not to be responsible for starting the fire. The only concern now should be the one surrounding the credibility of our nation's top investigative organization and its unsteady boss.

Emphasis on research leaves classrooms lacking

In July, the UI announced that it had received a record $259.5 million in research-related grants, "gifts" and contracts. President Mary Sue Coleman gushed that this "sends a message to students that there is a lot of opportunity to get involved."

Similarly, David Skorton, vice president for research, remarked that "all will share in the robust increase in reward money." The reality behind these vague assurances, however, is disturbing, especially for the undergraduate population the UI purportedly serves.

There is no evidence that research funding benefits students, even indirectly. On the contrary, grants and contracts for research from external sources significantly reduce the quality of undergraduate education, for while professors are off in the research lab or turning consulting tricks for businesses, teaching assistants are left to teach what are often entire courses. While TAs work very hard at what they do, their classroom efforts can scarcely match those of a seasoned scholar.

Research and the lure of easy money from consulting have become a serious impediment to the quality of undergraduate education at both private and public universities. Faculty appointments and tenure can hinge not so much on teaching expertise as on the amount of grant money an individual has solicited from foreign sources. Increasingly, these sources are for-profit corporations.

Corporate America is fully aware that its research dollars go much further when commingled with the abundance of state and federal taxpayer money available at universities. In fact, most corporations would find research prohibitively expensive if they had to hire their own professional research staff rather than pull them out of the classroom at public expense. Not only does the present system permit this activity, it reserves the most effusive praise and lavish rewards for it.

Universities' covetous relationships with the private sector can be traced to the University and Small Business Patent Procedure Act of 1980, which enables universities to sell the rights to patents developed at public expense to the highest bidder. This law sparked an unprecedented race by universities to obtain patents on their research discoveries. Private corporations then purchase the rights to pharmaceutical formulas and other types of intellectual property at a fraction of what it would cost to develop them in-house. The UI has its own elaborate "Technology Transfer" program for this very purpose.

A closer look at the UI's financial records provides startling evidence of the university's preoccupation with such activities and how instruction has become, at best, a secondary concern since the Patent Procedure Act became law. Over the past 18 years, the amount of money funneled into Iowa for research has increased a whopping 600 percent, from $33 million for fiscal year 1980-81 to more than $215 million for the 1998-99 fiscal year.

Conversely, the amount of money apportioned by the administration for instruction has grown at a far more modest rate, from $86.7 million in 1981 to $219 million for the 1997-98 fiscal year, the last year for which these particular figures are available. In 1980-81, the UI employed only 43 research assistants. By 1997-98, that number had grown to 651. Conversely, the amount of funds the university puts toward public service has been cut by more than half, from more than $120 million spent in 1980-81 to less than $59 million in 1997-1998.

We may conclude, then, that the administration's main interest is not fulfilling the important public service of educating the young men and women of Iowa. Instead, the university acts as a site where employees on the public payroll produce knowledge at a discounted rate for the benefit of private corporations. If the administration were as concerned about education as it is about research, every class at the UI would contain no more than 30 students and would be team-taught by two or more tenured professors.

Students should be apprised of the reason they don't receive the education they deserve instead of being pandered to by the self-serving statements of administrators. Professors won't raise such questions because they either directly benefit from research or they fear that what meager resources their departments are afforded will be scaled back or taken away. In the College of Liberal Arts, where scholarship can't be packaged and sold so easily, departments are left to fight over what scraps are thrown to them after the hard sciences have devoured most of the fiscal carcass. In light of the above, it is indeed odd that Iowa touts itself as the premier liberal-arts institution.

Undergraduate students should organize and demand that the university's administration privilege instruction over research and public service over corporate graft. Professors cannot adequately serve both students and mammon, even with the help of TAs.

U.S.: Friend or foe or both to East Timor?

U.S. hypocrisy is once again highlighted by what is taking place in East Timor. Having aided the Indonesian army for more than 25 years, supplying it with guns, ammunition and helicopters, the United States, under President Clinton, has attempted to conceal its role in the genocide of the East Timorese by feigning concern for the violence in that part of the region.

If it's true that the United States is concerned about violence in East Timor, this is a recent development. But it can't be taken at face value, because the record shows that the United States has been complicit in genocide in that part of the world since 1975.

The mass killings of East Timorese by Indonesia is not a recent phenomenon. After the '75 invasion, a third of the population was butchered, leaving close to 200,000 dead. What has been the U.S. reaction to the butchery? It voted against a Security Council resolution condemning the invasion and demanding the removal of Indonesian troops from the region, and Congress since the '75 invasion has voted for bill after bill authorizing guns and ammunition to the dictator Suharto and his thugs. So much for concern for human rights.

Why this cynicism on the part of the United States? Why the lack of concern for human rights such as, say, the right of East Timorese not to be decapitated by machete-wielding Indonesian army thugs?

The United States has very strong commercial ties to Indonesia, with notable multinational corporations such as Mobil and Nike operating in the region. The U.S. government, then, careful not to alienate its political allies who have been so reliable in protecting the interests of U.S. corporations, has been very soft in response to the latest violence. Clinton's threats to cut off IMF loans is merely a pat on the hand, to put it mildly. The atrocities in East Timor are far greater than what took place in Kosovo.

Second, the United States calling for Indonesia to "restore order" is nothing short of outrageous. The only order Indonesia has restored in East Timor up to this point has resulted in 200,000 dead East Timorese. Calling on Indonesia to "restore order" is kind of like calling on Saddam Hussein to restore order in Northern Iraq, where the Kurds have been the victims of his grisly brutality.

Why the violent reaction by Indonesia to East Timor independence? The island of Timor is endowed with abundant resources: billions of dollars in raw materials. Imagine how well the East Timorese could live if these resources were divided up evenly among the population. The island would turn into a veritable paradise on earth, and successful democracy and socialism would reign.

That is exactly what the elites fear and why the latest violence in East Timor expresses the interests of the wealthy in the region. If democracy and socialism were to succeed in East Timor, it could begin a chain reaction, enveloping the whole area and putting an end to the suffering of the majority, who live in slave-like working conditions for the benefit of a few blood suckers.

The best possible outcome in East Timor is for the Indonesian army and its paramilitary goons, along with its M-16s supplied by the United States, to quit the island and leave the people there in peace, with the United Nations monitoring the withdrawal.

Israeli Parliament OKs peace deal

■ The Cabinet moves quickly, authorizing the release of Palestinian prisoners a day earlier than promised.

By Mark Lavie
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — The Israeli Parliament Wednesday approved Prime Minister Ehud Barak's new peace deal with the Palestinians, hours after he asked them to "give peace a chance" despite security risks and the heartbreak over giving up parts of the biblical land of Israel.

Israel moved quickly to implement the agreement, authorizing the first release of Palestinians from Israeli jails today, a day ahead of schedule.

During his speech to the Knesset, Barak was repeatedly heckled by legislators from the hawkish opposition, but the interruptions were mild by the standards of the Israeli Parliament. After seven hours of debate, the peace agreement was approved by a vote of 54-23, with two abstentions. "We are setting out on a new road that could lead us to an era of peace, to the end of the wars," Barak said.

Opposition leader Ariel Sharon warned that the accord, under which Israel hands over 11 percent of the West Bank in three stages by Jan. 20, 2000, endangered Israel's security. "It's an opening for endless bloodshed," he warned.

Earlier in the day, the Cabinet voted 17-1, with one abstention, to approve the first stage of the agreement, the handover of 7 percent of the West Bank to Palestinian civilian control. The withdrawal was expected to take place by Sept. 13, the date for the start of talks on a permanent peace accord.

Ahmed Tibi, an Israeli Arab legislator and former adviser to Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat, said the handover was "a milestone in the building of a Palestinian state."

The agreement is a revision of the Wye River accord signed by Barak's predecessor, Benjamin Netanyahu, a year ago. The new deal sets Feb. 15 as the target date for negotiating an outline for a final peace accord. September 2000 was introduced as the new deadline for a full agreement.

Barak Wednesday presented the new deal as a major achievement of his young government, saying he had kept his promise to make real progress in Mideast peacemaking within 60 days of coming to power. He also reiterated a pledge to bring a final peace accord to a national referendum.

Barak said the new agreement gives Israel extra time — five months instead of two months — to carry out the troop pullbacks and defuses the threat of a unilateral Palestinian declaration of statehood.

Death toll rises to 64 in Athens temblor

■ Greeks and Turks are working together to clean up the earthquake damage.

By Brian Murphy
Associated Press

ATHENS, Greece — As the death toll from the quake that rocked Athens Tuesday rose above 60 Wednesday, Greek and Turkish rescuers again found themselves in a position they would have found unusual before last month: working side-by-side.

Elsewhere, inspectors began assessing fractured buildings that could leave thousands homeless. On a brighter note, archaeologists said Athens' famed monuments, including the Acropolis and the Temple of Zeus, sustained no major damage.

Twenty Turks were the first foreign rescue team to reach the city's most battered areas. As hundreds looked on, they joined Greeks — their longtime arch-rivals — in slowly chipping through concrete at a collapsed cleaning products factory in search of 30 trapped workers.

Turks had praised Greece for the quick and extensive help following the Aug. 17 earthquake in Turkey that claimed more than 15,000 lives. Their teamwork caused political leaders on both sides to rethink their stances toward territorial disputes.

"It is good. This is the second time we meet the Greeks ... Now it is our turn," said Iskender Egeir of Turkey.

Fire and health officials said Wednesday that at least 64 people died in Tuesday's quake and more than 2,000 were injured. Dozens more were reported missing from working-class apartment blocks and Gypsy camps in the Athens area, where the magnitude 5.9 quake sent residents racing from homes and offices as glass and debris rained down on them.

Tens of thousands of people have refused to go back indoors, fearful of aftershocks, which have hit with magnitudes as strong as 4.7. Plazas, parking lots and sidewalks have become makeshift camps. State-run beaches were opened for those needing a place to spend the night.

Officials declared a one-day state of emergency in the Athens metropolitan area, closing all schools and warning people to stay out of even slightly damaged homes until they were inspected.

Greece's deputy interior minister, Yiannis Florides, estimated that up to 16,000 people were homeless. Yet that number could swell significantly if building inspectors condemn scores of sites. Some buildings — especially in the city's poorest sections — suffered serious cracks and damage.

Prosecutors launched probes into possible shortcuts by contractors trying to bypass Greece's strict anti-quake building codes — laws that were credited for the small amount of damage in central Athens and other places.

Irish prepare for Brees onslaught

■ Last season, Notre Dame upset Purdue, 31-30, and Irish are ready to do it again.

By J.R. Ross
Associated Press

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — Jefferson knows Drew Brees is the pick on Notre Dame's second-string quarterback, but he says bring it on.

"We're going to have to step up to show the whole NC State we're high-caliber team," the cornerback said as the 16th-ranked Irish prepare for No. 20 Purdue. "Some teams, they don't respect our secondary."

And for good reason. Irish defensive backs have been shaky and not a good sign with Purdue waiting in West Lafayette Saturday. Don't expect Jefferson to be intimidated on Saturday. "They know they can't afford to win likely to put up 50-60 passes."

"This is a secondary's job," said Jefferson, the least-expected starter in the Irish secondary.

Brees still hasn't forgotten interceptions he threw last year. He handed Notre Dame a 31-27 victory. The more damage came on third-and-long from Purdue territory with less than a minute to go. Rather than sack, he threw across the field where Tony Driver intercepted the ball and returned it to the end zone to set up the game-winning goal.

"There were some mistakes in that game that I made that cost us the game toward the end," Brees said. "What I learned from that was to throw late across the middle again."

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — Clifford Jefferson knows Drew Brees will pick on Notre Dame's secondary. He says bring it on.

"We're going to have to step up our game to show the whole NCAA that we're high-caliber team," the cornerback said as the 16th-ranked Irish prepare for No. 20 Purdue. "Some teams, they don't respect our secondary."

And for good reason. Irish defensive backs have been shaky at times, not a good sign with pass-happy Purdue waiting in West Lafayette on Saturday. Don't expect Jefferson or any of his fellow defensive backs to be intimidated on Saturday. They know they can't afford to with Brees likely to put up 50-60 passes.

"This is a secondary's dream," said Jefferson, the least experienced starter in the Irish secondary.

Brees still hasn't forgotten the two interceptions he threw last year to hand Notre Dame a 31-30 last-minute victory. Serena Williams upsets No. 4 Seles Serena Williams must get past defending champion Lindsay Davenport to set up a possible sister duel in the U.S. Open finals.

By Steve Wilstein Associated Press

NEW YORK — Serena Williams out-slugged, out-hustled and out-grunted two-time champion Monica Seles, serving 15 aces Wednesday night to reach the semifinals of the U.S. Open in only her second year as a pro.

The 17-year-old Williams stayed on track to fulfill her father's prophecy of a final against her big sister Venus, but first has to get past defending champion Lindsay Davenport.

In beating the No. 4 Seles for the third time in three matches, 4-6, 6-3, 6-2, and gaining a Grand Slam semifinal spot for the first time, the seventh-seeded Williams showed a wealth of power, speed and cleverness.

She blended crushing serves and groundstrokes with deft drops and lobs, raced down virtually every drop Seles sent her way, and matched her stroke for stroke from the baseline. Even when it came to grunting, Williams proved louder than Seles.

Williams ran her ace total for the tournament to 42, more than any other woman, while serving at speeds of up to 116 mph against Seles.

"It was always a goal," Williams said of closing in on the title. "But it's really coming true. I'm so excited that my work is paying off."

Seles said she has come to accept that she had her time as a champion and "now it's Venus' and Serena's time."

"The desire is still there," she said, "but physically I can't cover the court as well."

Davenport barely clung to her reign as U.S. Open champion, thanks to the most auspicious shower and a double fault on match point by Mary Pierce that made a packed stadium groan.

Davenport survived two match points against her, then came back from the rain break to beat Pierce 6-2, 3-6, 7-5.

"I should have been on my way to Manhattan and started packing to go home tomorrow morning," Davenport said. "I'm just lucky to be here. Sometimes it just turns the tournament around. You play even better after that."

Amy Sancetta/Associated Press Serena Williams returns the ball to Monica Seles Wednesday in New York.

English blood, Hawkeye heart

Lesley Irvine, of England, has adjusted quickly to field hockey in the United States.

By Robert Yarborough The Daily Iowan

It is funny to hear that Lesley Irvine was worried about adapting to the fast style of American field hockey during the start of this year.

If the beginning of the Iowa season is any indication, the field hockey standout seems to have been playing that way for years in her native England.

The senior transfer has raised some eyebrows in helping the Hawkeyes to a 5-0 record and is currently second on the team with five goals. After being named Big Ten Offensive Player of the Week in August after her first two games, Irvine has become the solid finisher coach Beth Beglin was looking for.

"I have been very impressed by Leslie since she has been here," Beglin said. "She has become a powerful offensive force for us and has adjusted to everything around her very well."

Irvine is used to adapting to change quickly. In 1997, with no previous experience in the sport, Irvine was hired as a tennis coach at a camp in Maine for three months. The job was her first stint in the United States.

"I have absolutely no idea how I was hired for that job, but I wanted to go to the U.S. to see what my options were," Irvine said. "I decided I wanted to return to the States after meeting some great people at the camp, so it took about two years for me to organize my return this year to Iowa."

Field hockey is not a mandatory sport in most physical education curriculums around the United States, however Irvine was forced to play the sport whether she liked it or not at age 11. In England, field hockey is one sport played consistently in grade schools across the country. Soon after Irvine was introduced to the sport, she fell in love with it and began playing for a local club team.

The sport proved to have a snowballing effect. Irvine rose from becoming a solid player for her club team to becoming a solid player for her club team.

Iowa men's golf team on the rise

Adam Turner will be the lone senior on a young and experienced team this season.

By Todd Brommelkamp The Daily Iowan

Rock bottom. That's where the UI men's golf team is after the last three seasons, according to coach Terry Anderson. However, he and his team are confident they will be on their way up soon.

Anderson's squad returns everyone except for Chris Englund, who won the individual title at the Hawkeye Intercollegiate last season.

Surprisingly, he says the loss of Englund will not be a hindrance to the young squad.

"Nothing against Chris, but I'm happy with the guys I've got now," Anderson said.

The squad now looks remarkably similar to last year's. Once again the team will feature only one senior while being comprised mostly of underclassmen. However, the younger players who toiled last year now have a season of collegiate experience under their belts and a summer to work out kinks in their games.

Senior Adam Turner looks to help lead the team. He has shot an even-par qualifying round of 288 and will provide veteran leadership on the squad.

"This has been enjoyable so far," he said. "We're having a lot of fun and playing some good golf now."

Along with Turner, Anderson looks for junior Matt Stutzman to contribute in a big way. Stutzman is the Hawkeyes' leading qualifier heading into the season opener this weekend, shooting nine-under-par for a score of

Deep team ready for big things

The Iowa women's golf team will start its season Friday at the Myrtle Beach Invitational.

By Julie Matolo The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's golf team has depth for the first time in years. And the Hawkeyes have the solid team they need to become one of the top contenders in the Big Ten.

Three promising freshmen will join senior veterans Kelli Carney and M.C. Mullen along with junior Meghan Spero. With the Myrtle Beach Invitational this weekend, the Hawkeyes are hungry for a team title and all players are capable of winning an individual title.

Thomason

Mullen won the Myrtle Beach Invitational last spring, and Spero took the Invitational's title in the fall.

"If we all pull together, we can definitely win it as a team this year," said Mullen.

It is too early in the season to make strong predictions for the team, but everyone has high hopes because of the solid play they've seen from each member of the team.

"It's going to be a lot easier this year," said Spero. "Our mental outlook and attitudes have improved 100 percent. We have been able to come together as a team. With an improved mental state we can expect to do better."

Iowa had its best finish last fall, when Spero paced the team with the title and Iowa took home second place at the Unlimited

McCarney finds friend on Iowa sideline

By Chuck Schoffner
 Associated Press

McCarney Ferentz

AMES — Iowa State coach Dan McCarney just can't avoid facing a good friend when his Cyclones play Iowa.

In his first four years at Iowa State, he went against Hayden Fry, his boss for 11 years while McCarney was an assistant at Iowa. Fry is now retired and has been replaced by Kirk Ferentz, who was on the Iowa staff for the last nine seasons McCarney was there.

And those were nine memorable seasons. Iowa went to a bowl game in eight of those years, including two Rose Bowls, and had a 73-33-4 record. McCarney was the defensive line coach for most of that time. Ferentz coached the offensive line.

They'll face each other as rivals for the first time when Iowa visits Jack Trice Stadium on Saturday night.

"We were very, very close," McCarney said. "As offensive and defensive line coaches, you're in there together every day, going one-on-one, inside drills, pass rush. I loved recruiting with him, loved working with him, loved coaching with him.

"Iowa is really lucky to have Kirk Ferentz as a head coach. I mean that from the bottom of my heart."

That doesn't mean McCarney is going to take it easy on his old friend.

"We're going to do everything we can to win this game Saturday night and he's going to do the same thing," McCarney said. "Other than that, if I've got a problem outside football, I can call him and talk to him about it. I think he feels the same way."

SAD WHAT?

"Where do people predict we'll finish? They don't predict we'll finish near the top. We're not particularly interested in what other people think. We're only interested in what we as a team think and feel. We'll see where their predictions are at the end of the year."

— Bears coach Dick Jauron, on what he thinks of dismal preseason predictions for his team.

Baylor suspends quarterback for UNLV game

WACO, Texas (AP) — Baylor coach Kevin Steele said Wednesday night he suspended quarterback Odell James and defensive end Charles Foster for Saturday's game against Nevada-Las Vegas.

Steele, who is in his debut season, said the players violated team policies but would not elaborate. The Baylor athletic department did not return a call from The Associated Press.

James, 6-3, 226-pound junior, has been competing for the starting spot against senior Jermaine Alfred, but Alfred started in Saturday's 30-29 season-opening overtime loss at Boston College.

Spivey pleads guilty to statutory rape

AMES, Iowa — Former Iowa State basketball player Travis Spivey will be sentenced in November after pleading guilty to having sex with a 15-year-old girl.

In exchange for his guilty plea to one of the two counts of third-degree sexual assault against him, prosecutors will recommend that Spivey be given a suspended five-year sentence.

Spivey, 21, will have to register as a sexual offender in Iowa for 10 years.

Boxer pleads innocent to assault charges

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. — Undeclared International Boxing Federation junior middleweight champion Fernando Vargas and four other men pleaded innocent Wednesday at their arraignment on assault charges.

Vargas, 21, and the others are charged with assault with a deadly weapon and conspiracy to commit a crime stemming from a July 25 altercation at a Summerland home.

Conviction could carry a prison term of almost eight years, deputy district attorney Hilary Dozier said.

Solich: Buckhalter still missing in practices

LINCOLN, Neb. — Nebraska I-back Correll Buckhalter missed practice Wednesday for the third time this week, leaving coach Frank Solich up in the air on the player's status.

"I don't know a great deal about the situation with Correll," Solich said after Nebraska's practice Wednesday. "I've tried to reach him on several occasions and I've been unsuccessful with that. I expected to see him prior to this, so how it will play from here, I guess I'm not quite sure."

Brewers admit Miller Park will not open soon

MILWAUKEE — It's almost as if the Milwaukee Brewers can't believe what's happening to them.

Nearly two months after a 2,100-ton crane collapsed onto a wall and killed three workers at Miller Park, the Brewers finally have admitted their new stadium's scheduled April 2000 opening will be delayed.

Alexander keeping knees up in practice
 LINCOLN, Neb. — Nebraska running back Dan Alexander is doing a little high stepping this week in practice.

The backup I-back doesn't want any more slip-ups like last Saturday, when he had some trouble running on the grass at Iowa's Kinnick Stadium. Alexander still led the Cornhuskers with 95 rushing yards, but easily could have topped 100 if he hadn't tripped himself up on several runs.

"I don't want to be known as the clumsiest back in the United States, but after those missed opportunities I wouldn't blame anybody if they thought that," Alexander said with a smile.

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. — Aaron Harris' smile said it all. After nearly two years rehabilitating a blown-out knee, Penn State's most experienced runner — once considered as tough as Curtis Enis — was finally back.

Harris' smile showed the pleasure of his first big-time run in a while. Bursting off the right tackle in the Nittany Lions' opener, he lowered a shoulder and pounded Arizona defensive back Leland Gayles into the end zone from one yard out.

The grin showed the satisfaction of getting his NFL hopes back on track, and the happiness of a guy who can run the way he did when he was a kid — without knee braces and worries of a crippling injury.

5.6 yards in 1996 (for 587 yards) and 6.2 yards in five games in 1997 (for 261 yards) before his injury.

He looked nothing like the rough-and-tumble back who had made his mark as Enis' lead blocker his first two seasons. By the time Harris bounced off three tacklers for a 51-yard TD in Penn State's 31-27 victory over Ohio State, he was considered nearly as talented Enis, who would be the fifth pick in the 1998 NFL draft.

Wiggins waives right to preliminary hearing

■ The suspended Nebraska receiver will stand before a district court Sept. 22.

By Kevin O'Hanlon
Associated Press

LINCOLN, Neb. — Suspended Nebraska receiver Shevin Wiggins, charged with fondling a 14-year-old girl, waived his preliminary court hearing Wednesday.

The hearing, in which prosecutors must convince a judge there is sufficient evidence to proceed, was scheduled before Lancaster County Judge Mary Doyle.

Wiggins is now scheduled to appear for arraignment in Lancaster County District Court on Sept. 22.

Wiggins' lawyer, Terry Dougherty, said he agreed to waive the preliminary hearing after prosecutors agreed to provide him with "a complete set of investigatory reports."

Wiggins, 24, is accused of fondling the girl outside a foster home where she lived late July 25 or early July 26.

Another man, Floyd Brown III, 22, is accused of touching the girl and her twin sister.

Sexual assault of a child is a felony punishable up to 5 years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Wiggins and Brown are free on $10,000 bonds.

Wiggins was slated to start this year for the Cornhuskers but was suspended from the team until the case is resolved.

He is best known for kicking a football into the arms of teammate Matt Davison for a last-second touchdown as the Cornhuskers rallied to beat Missouri 45-38 in overtime in 1997.

Women ready to see first action at Myrtle Beach

WOMEN'S GOLF

Potential/Cougar Fall Invitational in Myrtle Beach, S.C. Last spring, the Hawks finished in second place again at Myrtle Beach in March, while Mullen took home the individual title. The Hawkeyes capped off the season with a disappointing ninth-place finish at the Big Ten Championships.

However, the year of the millennium brings a fresh start for the optimistic team and coach. "I'm excited to see them play," said coach Diane Thomason. "It's one thing to practice on your own course, but we look forward to playing with different people on a different course. We are excited to play at Myrtle Beach. We like the Myrtle Beach set up. We just have to play."

Newcomers include three-time Wisconsin state champion Heather Suhr, Minnesota state champion Melissa Harjes and Leslie Gumm.

With the addition of the freshmen and the experience of the returnees, Iowa may crack the top 50 teams in the nation. Mullen won the Iowa Women's State Amateur by 19 strokes at the end of July and Carney took eighth. The Hawkeyes have reasons to be confident with the current roster's potential.

"It is a lot different then when I first came in when it was mostly sophomores and freshmen," said Spero. "There is a lot more depth than there used to be. There are no excuses this year."

Hawkeyes to be more conservative this year

MEN'S GOLF

279. Ian Brendel and Tyler Stith have both shot one-under scores of 287. Junior Jason Wombacher rounds out the current top five with a two-over score of 290.

Anderson is pleased with the way the team has shot so early. The scores are an indication to him this team will be different than recent ones. In the past, schools have relied on Hawkeye miscues rather than their own games.

"If we keep shooting these kind of numbers," he said, "it will take a very good team to beat us, rather than ourselves."

Other players looking to push the starting five will be redshirt freshmen Mike Tapper, Aaron

Krueger and Bo Anderson as well as true first-year shooters Jeff Chapman, Matt Larson and Eric Feldick. With their hunger, they should push for spots on the traveling team all season, according to Anderson.

"We have a lot of competitors on this team who have the desire and will to do well," he said.

Fans should look for the Hawkeyes to be more conservative than past teams. Iowa aims to play "smart golf." While in the past players have tried for long drives and every birdie, this year's team will focus more on hitting fairways and putting the ball on the greens when capable.

"Par is a good score on any hole," Anderson said. "We're going to try to hit a good percentage of fairways and greens and sink the longer putts when we need to."

Many players spent the summer working to improve their games. Turner won the Illinois Open in Oswego, Ill. in a field that contained many pro golfers. Other golfers played the Hawkeyes' home course daily, learning the intricacies of Finkbine Golf Course.

"We all worked hard this summer," said Wombacher. "We all want to do well for ourselves, our fans, the university and for each other."

The team kicks off their season this weekend by hosting the Hawkeye Intercollegiate at Finkbine Golf Course at 9:00 a.m. It will be the only time the team is at home this fall.

to becoming a representative of the English National Team before coming to Iowa. The senior also achieved the honor of playing in the National Premier League, the top level of play in England.

"My experience playing for the National Team was amazing," Irvine said. "In one tournament we defeated some of the top teams in Europe to finish with a bronze medal, moments like that will always stick with me."

Irvine is in her first and last year of eligibility at Iowa. The Northants, England native came to Iowa to pursue her love of sports and business with a degree in Sports and Leisure Management and received only one year of eligibility. At the end of this season, Irvine will turn her focus solely to her studies at the UI.

"Finishing my degree is very important to me and also gives me a lot of different options for a career," Irvine said. "I have worked as a sales executive in the past and one day, hopefully, I can work for a big company like Nike or in sports administration."

"In some way, I will be involved with sports all of my life." With the Sydney Olympics right around the corner, Irvine has not given up on the idea of possibly making the Olympic team for England if the opportunity presents itself.

"It would be really hard, but I would love to go the Games," Irvine said. "I have already gone through the right ranks, however with me taking a couple of years off to come to America, we will have to see what happens. I am always leaving that door open."

Miami coach Jimmy Johnson has his way, 1999 will mark

Air offense the past

Miami is hoping to run a nonexistent running game this season.

By Steven Wine
 Associated Press

MIAMI — If Jimmy Johnson has his way, this season mark the end of an era for Miami Dolphins.

The perennial sputtering ground attack, feeble yardage offense and reliance on Dan Marino to win games of the past, Johnson said, has been our running game for many years, he said. "Everybody knows the running game has been our running game for many years," he said. "I determined we're going to change the football."

That mantra is a predictable part of each Miami training camp, but this season there's reason to believe Johnson's pledge might be fulfilled. He drafted two running backs and a fullback and acquired a veteran guard and tight end, all with the goal of bolstering the ground game.

The Dolphins average yards per carry last year, with the NFL, and at that rate never get to the Super Bowl. Short-yardage situations especially vexing, so Johnson added some muscle, and the Dolphins say they're ready to fight.

"We need a personality we're much more aggressive people get away from thinking the Miami Dolphins exclude as a passing team," guard Donnalley said. "It's time ourselves in another category. Rookie running back Cedric Benson is the new Diesel." Collins created the biggest buzz in training but Miami's success or failure hinges on what happens up front. And the

Moss: Vikings have lost last year's magic

■ After a lackluster preseason, the Vikings receiver lashed out.

By Arnie Stapleton
Associated Press

EDEN PRAIRIE, Minn. — Randy Moss sounded the alarm. The star receiver says the Minnesota Vikings don't have that special feeling they did last year.

He sees evidence everywhere — from the mood in the locker room to the play on the field. Things just aren't the same for this new cast of Vikings.

"I think it's probably something we probably could recapture," Moss said Wednesday. "But last year, it was something special. It was something inside that knew the '98 Minnesota Vikings were something special. And this year, we lost a lot of guys on defense. We have our whole offense back (but) we lost our offensive coordinator. ... So, there's a lot of things that we have to get used to." Moss's worries stem from a lackluster exhibition season in which the Vikings looked nothing like the team that went 15-1 last season.

They lost eight free agents in the offseason and failed on draft day to shore up the holes left by the departures of defensive stars Jerry Ball, Derrick Alexander and Corey Fuller.

Despite returning all 11 starters, the offense, under new coordinator Ray Sherman, has yet to get untracked.

Moss, who set a rookie record with 17 TD catches last season, alternately proclaimed his team ready to put its troubles behind and bemoaned its many inadequacies.

"It's going to be hard. It's going to be a struggle this year," he said. "You know there's a lot of high expectations this year for us to go out here and try to duplicate last season and I don't think there's any way possible — well, I wouldn't say any way possible that we can do that again — but it's going to be very hard to do."

Moss said he was shocked by the shoddy preseason play of the veteran offensive line that was so integral to last season's success.

After the Vikings lost to the New York Jets last week, coach Dennis Green assailed the pass protection and said he counted three mental mistakes from the first-team offensive line.

Miami coach Jimmy Johnson looks on during training camp July 28. If he has his way, 1999 will mark the end of an era for the Miami Dolphins.

Air offense a thing of the past for Dolphins

■ Miami is hoping to revive a nonexistent running game this season.

By Steven Wine
Associated Press

MIAMI — If Jimmy Johnson has his way, this season will mark the end of an era for the Miami Dolphins.

The perennial sputtering ground attack, feeble short-yardage offense and reliance on Dan Marino to win games are things of the past, Johnson says.

"Everybody knows the running game has been our downfall for many years," he said. "We're determined we're going to run the football."

That mantra is a predictable part of each Miami training camp, but this season there's reason to believe Johnson's pledge might be fulfilled. He drafted two running backs and a fullback and acquired a veteran guard and tight end, all with the goal of bolstering the ground game.

The Dolphins averaged 3.4 yards per carry last year, worst in the NFL, and at that rate they'll never get to the Super Bowl. Short-yardage situations were especially vexing, so Johnson added some muscle, and the Dolphins say they're ready to flex it.

"We need a personality where we're much more aggressive, so people get away from thinking of the Miami Dolphins exclusively as a passing team," guard Kevin Donnalley said. "It's time to put ourselves in another category."

Rookie running back Cecil "the Diesel" Collins created the biggest buzz in training camp, but Miami's success or failure on the ground likely hinges on what happens up front. And the offensive line could be the deepest and most talented in Johnson's four years as coach.

Donnalley and guard Mark Dixon are beginning their second season in Miami and have settled into the offense. Three-time Pro Bowl guard Kevin Gogan and veteran tight end Hunter Goodwin, a fierce blocker, were acquired in the offseason. Despite the absence of tackle Richmond Webb, who sat out all four exhibition games before signing a new contract, improvement was noticeable in training camp.

"No question they're much better as a group than last year," defensive end Trace Armstrong said. "They're really coming after guys and opening up seams and breaking runs on us in practice. A year ago it was unusual to see them break a big run against our group in practice."

"On paper, I'd say they can be as good as anybody."

The backfield should be better, too. Collins, running back J.J. Johnson and fullback Rob Konrad were all acquired in the April draft.

"We've added size and power to the offensive line, tight end, fullback and running back," coach Johnson said.

Collins, who played just six games in college because of drug and legal problems, may supplant three-year starter Karim Abdul-Jabbar. But Johnson said there will be plenty of carries for two or even three running backs to share.

Marino goes into his 17th season, and Johnson wants the most prolific passer in NFL history handing off. The plan is for Miami to develop a reputation as a smashmouth team, like the championship Dolphins of the early 1970s.

Donnalley and Gogan can help, because they've long been known for aggressive — some would say dirty — play.

"I don't think it's anything dirty," Donnalley said. "It's just staying after people. It's a guy hustling on the back side of a play, cutting off the safety or a linebacker coming across. It's that extra aggressiveness that turns a 4-yard run into 40."

Captain McEnroe gets his Davis Cup wish

NEW YORK (AP) — Just call John McEnroe captain now. McEnroe, perhaps the most successful player in Davis Cup history, got his wish Wednesday when he was appointed captain of a U.S. team that has not won the title since 1995. "It's one of the proudest moments of my life," McEnroe said. "Apparently it took this wonderful lady to show some guts finally, and I appreciate that." The woman is Judy Levering, president of the U.S. Tennis Association. She selected McEnroe after meeting with Pete Sampras, Andre Agassi, Todd Martin and Jim Courier. "Basically, I wanted to show the players that I was responsive to their needs and would not make a decision about the future of Davis Cup without their consent," Levering said. McEnroe succeeds Tom Gullikson, who had been U.S. Davis Cup captain since 1994 and compiled a 13-5 record, including the last championship in 1995. Gullikson will remain as director of coaching of the USTA's Player Development Program. McEnroe has been passionate about this international event. The 40-year-old Hall of Famer played on five U.S. Davis Cup championship teams and has a 59-10 record. He competed in Davis Cup for 12 years and still holds six U.S. records, including most singles (41) and total victories (59). "I think he will be just as successful as captain, bringing that same passion and energy he did as a player," Levering said.

Despite a shaky bullpen, Mets hang on to beat San Francisco, 7-5

NEW YORK (AP) — Mike Piazza hit a three-run home run and Octavio Dotel won his seventh consecutive decision as the New York Mets beat the San Francisco Giants 7-5 Wednesday for their 18th win in 27 games.

The Mets, who began the day 3 1/2 games behind Atlanta in the NL East and 3 1/2 ahead of Cincinnati for the wild card, go on the road for 13 of their next 16 games.

The Giants, who started the day 6 1/2 games behind Arizona, had won six consecutive series before losing two of three at Shea Stadium.

Dotel (7-1) allowed one run and four hits in seven innings and has not lost since his major league debut against Atlanta on June 26. He struck out nine.

The Mets shut down Barry Bonds once again. After hitting 14 homers in 21 games, Bonds went 1-for-11 with five strikeouts in the series.

New York won seven of nine games overall against San Francisco, holding Bonds and Ellis Burks — the Giants' two best home run hitters — to six hits and two homers in 52 at-bats.

Burks did hit a three-run homer off Dennis Cook in the Giants' four-run eighth to bring San Francisco within two runs. Armando Benitez got four outs for his 18th save in 23 chances.

Padres 7, Pirates 4, 10 innings

PITTSBURGH — Wiki Gonzalez's two-run single in the 10th capped San Diego's third comeback of the game and the Padres scored their final five runs following Pittsburgh errors to beat the Pirates 7-4 Wednesday.

The Padres, whose 26-46 road record is the worst in the NL, finished 4-2 on their first winning road trip of the season.

Trevor Hoffman got the final four outs for the victory as San Diego won the season series from Pittsburgh 6-3.

Reds 6, Cubs 4

CHICAGO — Greg Vaughn powered

Cincinnati again, hitting his fourth homer in two games as the Reds beat the Chicago Cubs 6-4 Wednesday.

Vaughn, who hit three homers in the second game of a Tuesday doubleheader, connected for his 35th of the season, a two-run shot in the fifth off Andrew Lorraine (1-4). Vaughn's drive was Cincinnati's 22nd homer in the last six games.

Cincinnati began the day three games behind Houston in the NL Central. The Reds remained 3 1/2 games back of New York, which beat San Francisco 7-5, for the wild card.

Sammy Sosa went homerless for a third straight game.

Rockies 5, Expos 1

MONTREAL — Todd Helton homered twice to reach 30 for the first time in his career and drove in three runs Wednesday to lead the Colorado Rockies over the Montreal Expos 5-1.

A day after Rockies manager Jim Leyland confirmed he will retire following the season, Colorado dominated with the long ball. Larry Walker hit his 35th home run, going 2-for-3 to raise his league-leading batting average to .368.

Helton hit a solo homer in the fourth off Dan Smith (4-8) and a two-run drive in the sixth, giving him five multihomer games this season and seven in his career.

Jamey Wright (2-2) allowed one run and four hits in seven innings to win for the second time in three decisions since he was recalled from Triple-A Colorado Springs on Aug. 2.

Athletics 6, Red Sox 2

OAKLAND, Calif. — Kevin Appier pitched six strong innings and Oakland benefited from three Boston errors leading to four unearned runs as the Athletics beat the Red Sox 6-2 Wednesday in the final meeting between the wild-card rivals.

Olmedo Saenz homered, John Jaha hit a two-run double and Matt Stairs had a go-ahead RBI single for Oakland. The A's gained a split of the two-game set and cut Boston's lead in the AL wild-card race to three games with 22 remaining.

Appier (14-12) allowed two runs on four hits. He struck out seven and walked five to improve to 5-3 since Oakland acquired him in a July 31 trade with Kansas City. It was Appier's first win in three starts against Boston this season.

Braves 5, Cardinals 4

ATLANTA — Mark McGwire was held to a harmless single on the one-year anniversary of his record-breaking 62nd home run, and Kevin Millwood pitched the Atlanta Braves past the St. Louis Cardinals 5-4 Wednesday night.

Atlanta completed a three-game sweep and maintained its 3 1/2-game lead in the NL East over the New York Mets, who beat San Francisco 7-5.

Chipper Jones hit his 39th homer, and fourth in four games, as the Braves won for the 16th time in 19 games.

McGwire went 1-for-3 against Millwood (16-7) and struck out against reliever Russ Springer. Last Sept. 8, McGwire broke Roger Maris' single-season homer record when he connected at Busch Stadium off the Cubs' Steve Trachsel.

Tigers 5, Devil Rays 1

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Dave Micki won his seventh straight start and Deivi Cruz had three RBIs, leading the Detroit Tigers over the Tampa Bay Devil Rays 5-1 Wednesday night for their third straight win.

Micki (12-10) allowed one run and six hits in eight-plus innings. He struck out seven and walking one — Fred McGriff, leading off the ninth — his first walk in 33 2-3 innings.

Todd Jones finished with one-hit relief for his 25th save in 28 opportunities.

Astros 10, Phillies 2

PHILADELPHIA — Jeff Bagwell's 40th homer capped a nine-run sixth inning and Mike Hampton earned his 19th victory Wednesday night as the Houston Astros defeated the Philadelphia Phillies 10-2.

The Astros' biggest inning since 1995 helped Hampton (19-3) tie teammate Jose Lima for the NL lead in wins. Hampton has a 10-game winning streak.

Houston won its sixth in a row and held its three-game lead in the NL Central over Cincinnati, which beat Cincinnati's Aaron Boone slides safely into home plate ahead of the tag by Chicago Cubs catcher Jeff Reed, as umpire Ed Montague, right, watches Wednesday in Chicago. The Reds won the game, 6-4.

Orioles 10, Twins 0

MINNEAPOLIS — Brady Anderson homered twice, including his 36th lead-off shot of his career, and the Baltimore Orioles shut out the Minnesota Twins for the second straight night, 10-0 Wednesday.

Anderson led off a game with a home run for the seventh time this year, then hit a two-run homer in the seventh, both off LaTroy Hawkins (9-12). Anderson moved past Bobby Bonds for the second-most leadoff homers and trails only Rickey Henderson of the New York Mets, who has 75.

Anderson, 2-for-3 with four RBIs, also had a second-inning sacrifice fly as Baltimore improved to 7-1 against the Twins this year.

Jason Johnson (6-7), Gabe Molina and B.J. Ryan combined on a six-hitter, getting defensive help from four double plays.

D'Backs 9, Brewers 1

MILWAUKEE — Steve Finley hit three home runs — the first Arizona player to accomplish the feat — and drave in six runs to lead the Diamondbacks over the Milwaukee Brewers 9-1 Wednesday night.

Arizona increased its lead in the NL West to 7 1/2 games over San Francisco, which lost to the New York Mets, 7-5.

Finley had the third three-homer game of his career. It also was the 15th three-homer game in the majors this season, matching the mark set in 1997 and tied in 1996.

Finley had a two-run homer in the sixth inning off Hideo Nomo and a three-run drive in the seventh off Mike Myers. Finley sliced a solo shot to left in the ninth, his 29th homer of the season.

With six RBIs, Finley tied his single-game high and matched the Arizona mark. He has eight hits in his last four games — four homers, a triple and three doubles.

Daal (14-8), who had lost his last two starts, gave up a leadoff homer to Marquis Grissom. But that was the only run allowed in six innings by Daal, who gave up five hits.

Football hard sell in LA

■ The NFL faces a tough opponent — soccer, in the battle to bring football back to LA.

By Michael White
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — On the lawns outside Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum, the game of choice is not football but futbol — soccer.

And that's just one obstacle in bringing an NFL expansion team to Los Angeles, where the entertainment options are nearly as diverse as the city.

There are beaches, mountains and theme parks, not to mention a professional soccer team and two popular college football teams to compete with the NFL for money and attention.

"People who want recreation in LA don't want for options," said Allen Sanderson, a University of Chicago economist who follows the sports business. "If people won't have an NFL team, so what? It's different than, say, Green Bay."

Negotiations to bring a team to the Coliseum hit a stumbling block last month when the city refused to kick in $150 million to build a garage the NFL wants next to the stadium.

The City Council reiterated its position Tuesday by passing a resolution against using any existing tax money. However, the council left a loophole that could allow the city to finance the garage with future revenues that would be generated by NFL games.

The NFL's expansion committee was scheduled to discuss the Coliseum bid when it meets in Washington on Thursday.

Even with the loophole in the council's latest vote, the use of tax revenue will be a tough sell, said David Carter of the Sports Business Group consulting firm.

"No matter how much the NFL tells us we need a team, we are standing here saying we would like that, but not at all cost. I don't think the NFL is accustomed to that kind of response," he said.

The panel is not expected to make a recommendation on which city should get the team. The NFL has given Los Angeles promoters until Sept. 15 to come up with an acceptable plan.

If Los Angeles fails to meet the Sept. 15 deadline, the NFL says it will take another look at Houston, the LA's principal rival.

"We've been focusing on LA," NFL spokesman Greg Aiello said.

Alive and Riking distinct

The UI Museum of Arts has a fresh fall line-up.

By Jeremy Erwin
The Daily Iowan

As every fall semester brings a sense of renewal and discovery, the UI Museum of Arts offers much of the same with this year's fall exhibitions. Presenting exhibits from a number of artists, including Dieter Roth and Honoré Daumier, as well as three-time Pulitzer Prize winner and former Daily Iowan cartoonist Paul Conrad, an astounding variety of work will be on display.

EXHIBITS Fall openings

When:
Saturday at noon

Where:
UI Museum of Art

What:

"Art is Life/Life is Art: The Graphic Work of Dieter Roth," "Buzz Spector: Authors and Thinkers," "Paul Conrad: Drawing the Line," "Honoré Daumier: Chronicle of His Time" and "Different Stokes: International Woodfire Ceramics" well as a concert presented by the Center for New Music at 2 p.m.

The Roth gallery tour, accompanying lecture and exhibit are heavily anticipated because they will "present a relatively unexamined artist to a community notably engaged with writing and visual arts," said Kathleen Edwards, museum curator.

The following is a list of the exhibitions on display at the Museum of Art beginning Saturday, a short summation of the works on display and background information on the artists.

Art is Life/Life is Art: The Graphic Work of Dieter Roth

Born in Hanover, Germany, in 1930, Roth's use of vulgar language and sexual innuendoes, compounded with the use of unstable materials, made most of his art impossible to institutionalize during his lifetime. Regarded as one of the world's most reclusive artistic talents, his work was rarely shown in American museums. "He frequently refused offers to exhibit, lecture or teach when he doubted the motivations of those issuing the invitations," Spector said.

Since his death in 1998, Roth has been regarded as one of the 20th century's most influential artists. He is recognized as the first to consider the book within a process, uniting form and content fully. Many of the pieces on display were largely inaccessible during the life of the artist, and the exhibit marks the first of his work organized in the United States since 1984.

In addition to Spector's gallery tour and lecture, Edwards will speak on Roth during one of the museum's weekly perspective programs on Sept. 15 at 12:30 p.m.

Authors and Thinkers

Spector will be a visiting professor for printmaking at the UI from Sept. 13-15. Most noted for his method of deconstruction and reconstruction seen frequently in his art, he incorporates texts and photos of other authors in his pieces. He has explored the subject of knowledge, specifically the knowledge contained in books, for more than 20 years.

Spector will speak on his own work and give a slide presentation in Room E109, Art Building, on Sept.

13 at 8 p.m.

Paul Conrad: Drawing the Line
UI alumnus Conrad began his cartooning career with The Daily Iowan before receiving his bachelor's degree in 1950. He then worked on the Denver Post for 14 years before becoming chief editorial cartoonist for the Los Angeles Times, where he won the Pulitzer Prize in 1964, 1971 and 1984.

Conrad often uses his cartoons to attack hypocrisy in politics. He has never been afraid to express opinions in his cartoons, which at times has caused editors to refuse to publish them. This exhibit includes several of Conrad's cartoons that were declined by major American newspapers.

The exhibition is meant to coincide with the 75th-anniversary celebration

Diversity is the word at the IWP

The program is host this fall to the some of the best writers from many different cultures.

By Tyler Steward
The Daily Iowan

The paths to the International Writing Program are as varied as the writers who walk them.

Many are sponsored by the U.S. Information Agency, others by writers' organizations in their home countries. Some even compete in national writing competitions — first prize is a visit to Iowa.

As a result, writers in residence this fall compose "a group of young writers showing promise and a group of sophisticated and experienced older writers," said Sandra Barkan, assistant dean of the graduate college.

In addition to being of varied ages, the 10 writers in residency hail from eight different countries. Eight arrived within the last week and are scheduled to present two readings, the first Friday at 7 p.m., the second on Sept. 12 at 4 p.m. Both readings will be held at Prairie Lights Books, 15 S. Dubuque St.

Several of the writers in attendance this fall are young, accomplished writers. Titilolah Shoneyin, for example, is 25 years old and has received four national awards from the Association of Nigerian Authors. A poetry and fiction writer, she writes out of deep political conviction.

"I write primarily for the woman: the woman in Africa and the woman everywhere," she said.

Still, she rejects the idea that she is concerned only about women's rights.

"Some people call me a feminist; I call myself a humanist," she said.

Several other writers in their middle and late 20s are also in residence at the IWP this fall. Moscow-born Gleb Shulpyakov is considered one of his country's most promising young poets,

The production will include dance, music, theater and innovative stagecraft to examine the influence of Wright's third wife, Olgivanna, and her beliefs in the mystic George Gurdjieff. Geometry of Miracles attempts to view Wright through the eyes of Gurdjieff, family members and Wright's apprentices.

As one Toronto reviewer said, "Geometry of Miracles contains imagery so intense it's breathtaking."

Cable TV goes back to school

■ Cable TV celebrates 10 years of infiltrating nation's classrooms.

By David Bauder
Associated Press

NEW YORK — As millions of children head back to school, so do more than 40 cable television networks.

This month marks the 10th year of the Cable in the Classroom program, which has quietly wired schools across the country for free or low-cost cable TV service and provided programming for teachers to supplement their curriculum.

More than 40 networks participate, most airing educationally oriented shows without commercials in pre-dawn hours for teachers to tape and use later. Such networks as CNN, Discovery and the Weather Channel produce shows specifically for students.

"The industry estimates it has spent $1 billion on Cable in the Classroom."

"This is the best use of television," said Judith McHale, president of Discovery Communications Inc. "It is an incredibly powerful medium. If used appropriately, it can really enhance a child's experience in the classroom."

The motives aren't entirely altruistic. If a network's programming piques a young consumer's interest, it might create a fan for life. Free hookups at schools seem a worthwhile investment.

Three-quarters of 800 teachers surveyed last year said they used videos or television programs with their classes, just under the 79 percent who include computers. Two-thirds said they were aware of the cable service, and most of those use it, according to the survey paid for by Cable in the Classroom.

Programming from PBS, Discovery, the Learning Channel and CNN was among the most-widely sampled, the teachers said.

"C-SPAN has been popular among some of the teachers I've talked to," said Kathleen Lyons, a spokeswoman for the National Education Association in Washington. "Many are using the series on the American presidents. People like C-SPAN because they view it as nonbiased."

The teachers' union has worked with the cable industry to develop guidelines for appropriate programming and, in some cases, curriculum material to go with it.

"Television has been another arrow to put in a teacher's arsenal of teaching tools," Lyons said. "It's not something that should be overused, but it definitely has its place."

The programming specifically produced for students includes CNN's daily "Newsroom," which discusses current events, and the new "Sports-Figures," an ESPN2 show in which athletes such as Tiger Woods, Juwan Howard and Steve Young talk about the relationship of math and physics to sports.

Networks this month are showing some of their educational programming in prime time so that parents can see what is being made available to schools.

Blue Kings brings real music for real people

The band is promoting its third album, Live From Chicago, which many consider the group's best work yet.

By Chris Hoffmann
The Daily Iowan

The Mighty Blue Kings, rapidly becoming a legend, is rolling into town to share its exuberant, visible energy tonight at Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St.

The Chicago-based group of hipsters, with its unique blend of jazz, blues, gospel and soul, is steadily gaining success and popularity. Its third release, Live From Chicago, has been hailed as the band's best work to date. And in the midst of a tedious and demanding tour, the band is bringing its charismatic and versatile style to Iowa City.

The Daily Iowan recently had the opportunity to ask singer, songwriter and band leader Ross Bon a few questions.

DI: You guys have a unique sound, which appeals to an extremely diverse crowd. I was curious about some of the influences that contribute to the sound.

RB: A lot of guys I listen to, as far as vocalists go, are guys such as Jimmy Witherspoon, Ray Charles, Joe Williams and Count Basie. I have also gotten into some gospel and some soul. Basically, anything that is real.

The sound is really determined by the feeling you put into it. There are a lot of bands out there that are playing "rock 'n' roll" or "jazz" or "blues," but they're not really getting into the feel of the music, so it doesn't take on its character.

So, my influences came from many artists; those are just a few. But, it's more about the idea of how these people played music that I get more and more of my influence from.

DI: I saw you guys at Summerfest in Milwaukee, and I noticed that your July and August tour schedule was all festival dates. Do you guys prefer to play to that festival-style audience?

RB: They are cool because there are families out there. You get mom and dad, grandma and grandpa, everybody. It is a very eclectic audience, not just one demographic group of people. You get young, old, children, adults, and I like that feeling because it is its own energy. When we come to Gabe's, it's probably going to be a good, young energy happening there — people hootin' and hollerin', and I like that, too. I want them to be a part of our shows as well.

DI: I am also a native Chicagolander, and I have seen a bunch of shows there, especially small shows. It always seems as if the bands just love to play there, and the fans are really receptive. I was just wondering, because I have never had the opportunity to ask anyone, what was it like to get your start in the Windy City?

RB: It is a great place to start because, for one, I think Chicago is based off blue-collar people, real people. It seems like Chicago is based on the sweat of real people.

Five months of the year we are indoors, and when we get the chance to go outdoors, we really take advantage of it. It's like when you give something to the people of the Midwest, they are really appreciative of the things that you give. And if you do it well and are sincere with it, people like it that much more because it is like real people talking to real people.

I really try to get our audience at a conversation level, where it is very intimate, no matter how many people are there. And the best thing about it is, now you take that energy, that spirit, to the West Coast and give it to the people out there. No, but really, Chicago is a great town, one of the best I've ever been to.

DI: Your latest album, Live From Chicago, has received rave reviews. It got three stars from Down Beat. The Chicago Tribune said it was your best work to date, and it has also been compared with B.B. King's Live at the Regal. How does all of this make you guys feel? Do you think that it is your best work?

RB: Well, I'm flattered with all of that. I think that it was a good caption of where we were at that time. Since then, I've grown. You always walk away from an experience learning something. If I did it again, I'd do it differently. I think that the things that people are relating to are the innocence and the rawness of it.

We went in and did our thing; it was like taking pictures; we just captured a moment. We did it in one night, let the tape roll, and that was it. That was a challenge; it was kind of tough to do. I don't know any other bands that have really done that, other than a lot of the early players.

I think when people talk about comparing it with Live at the Regal, we were trying to come from that soul and school of thought, and that might be what people are identifying with. I by no means sing like B.B. King. My aspirations are to get a band that possess that energy and sound, not like B.B. King did, but as B.B. King did.

DI: It is apparent through everything you guys have accomplished and are continuing to accomplish that you are a band on the rise. Where do you guys see this increasing success taking you? Are you looking ahead or taking it day by day?

RB: This is something that I will be doing for the rest of my life. I'm in no hurry. My goal is to create a fan base one fan at a time. I don't want to get a single out there, and it becomes a hit single that everyone falls in love with and then falls out of love with just as quickly.

One thing that I see happening more and more at our festival shows is that you get these people to come out, and they are there with their kids, and I'm talking kids, like 9 or 10, and they love the band, and their family loves the band. It becomes very communal. When I see that, I see longevity. I'm in no hurry to get anywhere fast. The things that I'm going to do take a lifetime to do.

I'm not in the business of writing hits; I write songs. And if they become a hit, fantastic. If I can continue the life that I have now, that is success.

CD REVIEWS

THE BLACK HALOS
The Black Halos

Spikes, chains, tattoos, leather and a put-your-head-through-the-wall-and-like-it mentality.

Whoever said glam rock was dead, well, they probably were right, until these punk-rockers came around to make it glamorous again. The Black Halos, formerly the Black Market Babies, are pushing a late-70s punk rock, play-it-loud, play-it-hard style with its debut self-titled release.

The Halos comes across as more poppy punk than hard-core. Nothing too elaborate, though. It's textbook punk, rather than sporadic pop. The only thing truly intriguing are the scratchy, screaming vocals.

Lead singer Billy Hopeless funnels his vocals out of a smoky, extremely hoarse voice that is annoying at first but kind of grows on you after a while. It's kind of like your smoke-a-holic grandmother woke up and decided to yell at you. The music is traditional, chord-driven, which promotes a fast-paced, jump-around type of reaction.

The group is intent on making a statement audibly and visibly. It goes all out with the glam aspect — with the members wearing make-up, leather and other elaborate embellishments. The music fits right into its physical persona — fearless and filled with energy.

Obnoxious enough to give it a good listen — the Black Halos possesses enough texture to keep interest levels high. That is, of course, if you like loud music that, more often than not, has someone screaming in your face.

THE DAYS OF THE NEW
The Days of the New

Difficult to describe, but very easy to experience and appreciate.

Travis Meeks, founder of Days of the New, split from the original band but maintained the same name on the group's second album, the self-titled Days of the New.

The album's sound is difficult to convey in words, but I'd have to say it's orchestral with acoustic-guitar rock. To elaborate — Meeks tied in the powers of an orchestra along with his acoustic guitar and other traditional rock sounds.

Meeks' voice sounds very similar to that of the lead singer of Alice in Chains; he's capable of both high-pitched screams and low-key singing. Female vocals were also arranged in this unique sound blend, as Meeks recruited the talents of a young Hawaiian, Nicole Scherzinger.

The most remarkable aspect — and the No. 1 reason I'm going to praise this album — is that Meeks played most of the instruments and wrote everything on it.

His motives are a little far-fetched, however. He stresses the spiritual and philosophical aspects of his music by delving deep into nature, explaining his style starting from the womb.

Hey, that's just fine if that's what you have to do to make good music.

Aggressive acoustics with outlandish orchestral overtones, coupled with climatic choruses of pure vocal energy — these are the Days of the New.

Program includes Argentinian composer Osvaldo Golijov's The Dreams and Prayers of Isaac the Blind, with special guest clarinetist David Krakauer.

"...delightful, imaginative, out-of-the-way music played with the same loving care the group might lavish on a Beethoven quartet, if they ever decided to play one."

of the UI School of Journalism and Mass Communication, which will be marked by a symposium titled "Drawing the Line: Political Cartoonists Under Pressure." To open the symposium, Conrad will give a free public lecture in the IMU Main Lounge on Oct. 14 at 8 p.m.

Honoré Daumier: Chronicler of His Time

Considered to be one of the most prolific and popular cartoonists of his time, Daumier began publishing satirical periodicals around 1830, mocking French society and reflecting his left-wing political beliefs. He produced more than 6,000 works throughout his life, not only as a lithographer but also a painter and sculptor. Much of his technique he learned by copying works at the Louvre, in Paris.

The exhibit has been organized in conjunction with Conrad's "Drawing the Line: Political Cartoonists Under Pressure" in order to present political cartoons from two extremely different contexts and to provide reference points for stylistic comparisons.

Different Stokes: International Woodfire Ceramics

Timed to coincide with an international conference on woodfired ceramics, which will be held at the UI from Sept. 29 through Oct. 2, "Different Stokes" is one of several exhibitions that will be on display in Iowa City. With works from artists from around the globe, woodfire pottery on display will range from fully functional to strictly sculptural.

As a joint presentation of the museum and ceramics department of the School of Art and Art History, "Fired Up" and exhibition of works by UI students will be shown at the Arts Iowa City gallery in the Jefferson Building through Oct. 25.

and, at 28, he has already been published in several prestigious Russian literary journals.

Slawomir Pokraka, a fiction writer and essayist from Poland, has also been widely published in the literary journals of his home country. Like Shulpyakov, he is held to be representative of the best of his country's young literary generation.

And 24-year-old Nguyen Thi Chau Giang has published nine volumes of short stories in her native Vietnam — works that focus on generational conflicts and other complexities of modern society.

Also in attendance at the IWP are older, more established writers. From Poland, Jerzy Jarniewicz is a professor of English at Lodz University and Warsaw University. In addition to being an accomplished poet and literary critic, he has translated more than 20 books into Polish, a task he considers uniquely difficult.

"It's impossible, pretending things can be translated," he said. "What you have to do is write the poem anew in your language."

Still, the worth of translation as a bridge between literary traditions is enough to make it worthwhile.

"If you don't want to lose everything, you translate," he said.

Also from Poland, Halina Cieplinska-Bitner is a 51-year-old poet, playwright and essayist. In addition, she has translated into Polish works by such authors as Philip Roth and Henry David Thoreau.

Konstantine Kubaneishvili is the first writer from the Republic of Georgia to attend the IWP. A translator and playwright, he has recently emerged as one of the most outspoken poets in his country, particularly due to the strength of his book Reaktiuli Klubi (The Reactive Club).

Palestinian-born Zakaria Mahmoud is a highly respected writer and senior editor for Al Karmel, a cultural quarterly magazine. He is also part of a new generation of Palestinian poets focusing on personal rather than political experience.

The administration wants separate fees from tuition in order to hold the tuition at 4.3 percent.

By Lisa Hemann
The Daily Iowan

If a proposal by UI President Sue Coleman to separate student fees from tuition is approved, resident undergraduate students would see a 6.9 percent increase in total tuition and fees over this year's total.

In an effort to balance a $1.4 million deficit next year with the need for money at the UI, Coleman proposed that the current student fee be increased separately to cover activities and services that previously had been covered by tuition. Money from tuition would be used only for academic purposes.

Approximately $3.8 million would be generated by the plan, awaiting review by the Iowa Board of Regents on Sept. 16. "One of the things I've seen since being here is that so many different needs. They would give us a lot of bang for the buck," Coleman said. Tuition money normally b

Iowa and ISU fans celebrating rights with a gridiron win Saturday.

By Meg Neary
The Daily Iowan

Having wiped the floor with Iowa State football team, Iowa is looking to make a year's loss. And UI fans are doing the same. "I remember in '97, we were bad it was embarrassing," junior Josh Lukenbill. "It
