Floyd takes aim at Florida

■ Evacuations are ordered in the face of the mammoth hurricane, which is larger than 1992's Andrew.

By Tracy Fields
Associated Press

MIAMI — More than 1 million people were told to evacuate the Atlantic coast Monday, and NASA all but abandoned Cape Canaveral as Hurricane Floyd — one of the most powerful storms ever to threaten the United States — charged toward Florida with potentially catastrophic 155 mph winds.

Floyd was much larger than Hurricane Andrew, which smashed into South Florida in 1992, causing $25 billion in damage, killing 26 people and leaving 160,000 homeless.

The hurricane was on the verge of becoming a Category 5 storm — the most powerful designation for a hurricane — which features top sustained winds of at least 156 mph with higher gusts.

"It's capable of almost catastrophic destruction," said Todd Kimberlain, a forecaster at the U.S. National Hurricane Center.

Forecasters said Floyd would brush past the Bahamas overnight and could hit land in the next couple of days between central Florida and South Carolina. They predicted it was capable of causing enormous damage.

"It's scary. It's very scary," said Gov. Jeb Bush, who declared a state of emergency Monday night. "Andrew hit Miami in the middle of the night, and it was haunting. This is as strong and ... three times bigger."

The storm could be dangerous even if it does not come ashore. Floyd's hurricane-force winds — at least 74 mph — extended for 125 miles.

Andrew's hurricane-force winds extended approximately 25-30 miles.

In the Bahamas Monday, panicked residents abandoned beachfront homes and scrambled for emergency supplies as the mammoth hurricane bore down on the vulnerable, low-lying archipelago.

Heavy winds and rain pelted the Bahamian capital of Nassau late Monday, even with the storm's center still 200 miles away. It was moving on a path that could deliver Florida its hardest storm strike in years by Wednesday.

The strong winds rocked moving cars and kicked up sand and surf that delighted some die-hards still frolicking in the waves.

"I have never been this scared about a storm," said shopkeeper Angel Chea as she hastily boarded up her windows.

Loan debt dropping at UI

■ Student-loan debt at the UI has been decreasing the past few years, while it's been increasing at ISU and UNI.

By Chao Xiong
The Daily Iowan

Student-loan debt at the UI is at least $3,000 less than that at Iowa State University and $1,500 less than the debt at the University of Northern Iowa.

This is despite the UI's trend of tuition increase in the last 10 years and last week's proposal to raise tuition and fees by 6.9 percent.

UI President Mary Sue Coleman said a combination of financial-aid counseling and an increase in the number of scholarships offered has played an important role in decreasing student-loan debt.

"Our financial-aid people have worked really hard with students in financing their college education," she said. "One of my main goals is to raise more money for scholarships."

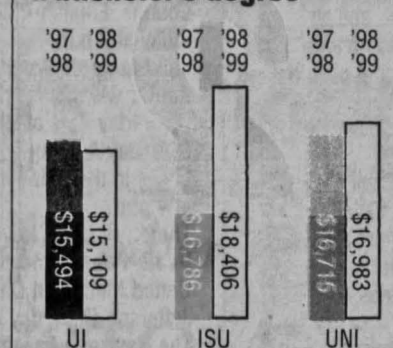

Coleman said fund-raising for scholarships is being implemented at all Big Ten schools and will ensure that students receive what they want.

"We're proposing to pull out the money that pays for student services and activities and pay it as a fee," Coleman said.

A report by the office of the Iowa state Board of Regents released last week showed that student-loan debt at the UI for students graduating with bachelor's degrees decreased from $15,494 in 1997 to $15,109 in 1998. At Iowa State, debt increased

School Board hopefuls face election day

■ Iowa City voters decide the fate of the six candidates today.

By Anne Huyck
The Daily Iowan

School Board candidates Lauren Reece and Don Jackson sat with the audience at Monday night's Iowa City School Board meeting, hoping that two of the board's seats would belong to them after today's election.

After the meeting, Reece and Jackson mingled with board members, laughing at jokes, sharing ideas and talking about the election.

"I am not really nervous," Jackson said. "It is easy to see where I can help and where I can lead — but whether or not I am elected, I will still be very involved."

Along with Tom Thrans and Dale Schultz, as well as incumbents Susan Mims and Cindy Parsons, Reece and Jackson are vying for three seats on the board.

Reece said she found the meeting informative. She learned a lot from parents and board members who discussed part-time teachers at three elementary schools, she said.

Six concerned parents of Longfellow Elementary students talked to the board about a third- and fourth-grade class at the school being taught by one teacher in the morning and other teachers in the afternoon.

In her report to the board, Marla Swesey, Iowa City Educators Association president, also raised the issue of teacher morale, which, she said, is low in the Iowa City School District. She suggested that board members look at a Hawaii school board's approach to the issue.

This was important to Iowa City resident Rachelle Tsachor, who said she has seen low teacher morale at Longfellow, where her child is in the third grade.

"We have fabulous teachers; we need to make sure that we keep them," she said.

Reece predicted that today's vote will be a close one; both Reece and Jackson hope people will turn out to cast their votes.

"It is important that people vote if they really believe that child development is important," Jackson said. "It is important for them to understand they have a choice and to exercise that power to choose."

Laundry hike creates tide of protest

■ Although the dormitories charge less than city laundries, most students aren't happy about a 50-cent increase.

By Ryan Foley
The Daily Iowan

The cost of doing laundry in UI dormitories went up a coin or two over the summer, and some UI students are not feeling so fluffy soft about the change.

Washing a load of laundry in the dorms' laundry facilities now costs $1.50, a 25- to 50-cent increase from a year ago. Dryers are still free.

"I'm livid!" said UI sophomore Gwen Cassidy, saying that many times the dorm laundry rooms are overcrowded. "We should get free laundry in the dorms; even $1 per load was too much."

Maggie Van Oel, director of residence services, said the purpose of the increase is to help keep the cost of room and board down.

"Any profit residence halls make goes to offset the cost of room and board increase," she said. "It all goes back into the pot."

Van Oel said the money generated in UI laundry rooms will help fund future residence hall projects, such as wiring dorms for the Internet, updating room furniture and modernizing food service.

Despite the increase, the UI dorm laundry is still the cheapest way of cleaning clothes in the city.

"I still think it's pretty reasonable," UI freshman Jon Howell said. "And the drying is free."

The going rate in city laundries can run $2 per load. Duds 'n' Suds, 5 Sturgis Corner Drive, charges $1.25 for washing and 75 cents for 45 minutes of drying. Sunshine Laundry and Tanning, 218 E. Market St., charges the same.

Van Oel said the UI wants to offer the least-expensive laundry service in the community.

"We're still under the market cost," she said. "I hate to point this out, though, because we already have too many outsiders coming in."

Because of the low cost, many community members, especially UI students who do not live in dorms, do

UI grad sees Timor terror

■ Dr. Dan Murphy's experiences in East Timor have left him disgusted with the roles of the U.N. and the U.S.

By Glen Leyden
The Daily Iowan

Nine months ago, Dr. Dan Murphy traveled to East Timor in hopes of fulfilling his dream of improving the territory's health-care services.

Instead, Murphy said, he found himself thrust into a daily fight for survival as the pro-Indonesian militias and Indonesian troops brutalized the people of East Timor.

Murphy, a UI medical school graduate and Alton, Iowa, native, worked in an East Timor clinic equipped to deal with various tropical illnesses. But as violence in the country increased, the clinic was filled with gunshot and beating victims.

With the help of a handful of reporters and a book titled Field Treatment of War Wounds as his guide, Murphy treated as many East Timorese as his small, outpatient clinic could accommodate.

"I am out of words to describe this," he said. "We are experiencing

Dem: Waco evidence overlooked

■ The Justice Department did disclose the use of pyrotechnic tear gas, a Democrat says.

By Michelle Mittelstadt

WASHINGTON — The congressional Republican leading an inquiry into the 1993 Waco siege overlooked evidence that the Justice Department sent his committee four years ago showing federal agents had used potentially incendiary tear gas near the fiery end of the Branch Davidian standoff, a House Democrat said Monday.

"Contrary to the allegations of cover-up, substantial evidence of the use of military tear gas rounds was, in fact, provided to Congress in 1995," said Waxman, D-Calif., the committee's top Democrat.

Separately, the Texas Rangers issued a report Monday indicating that a house near the Davidians' compound occupied by federal

Faculty absent at finance hearing

A committee to review the UI Office of the Vice President for Finance held a hearing Monday on faculty concerns, but no faculty members made an appearance.

Committee Chairman John Menninger, a professor of biology, said he wasn't disappointed that no one was present to offer her or his opinions.

Zak gets Glamourous award

■ UISG President Lana Zak is named one of Glamour magazine's top 10 college winners.

By Chao Xiong
The Daily Iowan

UI senior and Student Government President Lana Zak will be profiled in the pages of Glamour magazine's October issue as one of its 42nd annual "1999 Top 10 College Winners."

"I just think it's really great that a fashion magazine that tailors to women actually cares about female achievement," said Zak, a political science and journalism major who will graduate in

Zak

May. "I'm just really proud to be a part of that."

Ten female, full-time undergraduate students were picked nationwide after an application review, extensive questioning of family, friends and professors of semifinalists and an interview with Glamour competition director Karen Lubeck.

The application process consisted of an essay answering questions on her experiences, a resumé and a full-body photo, Zak said.

Lubeck said the magazine received 500-700 applications this year; all were screened by a 10-person committee.

"We look for real vision and leadership both on and off campus," she said. "We're always trying to celebrate women, always trying to feature women worthy of praise."

Among the winners are students from Stanford, Yale, the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and Harvard. Zak said the UI's presence among Ivy League schools is a testament to its quality of education.

"That speaks very highly of our university," she said. "One thing I've always been proud of is our university."

Zak, a native of Bettendorf, has been active in the Honors Program, the Iowa City Foreign Relations Council and environmental issues. She also founded a literary group and was awarded a Truman Scholarship earlier this year.

"She's just absolutely outstanding," said Ann Rhodes, the vice president for university relations. "She's bright; she's articulate. She's got all the potential in the world."

The winners will spend a week in New York City, during which they will each be awarded $1,000 at a Sept. 22 ceremony sponsored by Nike, attend a Broadway show and press conference, go to a spa, and meet with women they admire.

UI looks to expand building boom

■ The 2001-05 five-year plan will include the construction of new Journalism and Art buildings.

By Chris Rasmussen
The Daily Iowan

Based on the UI's new five-year plan, which will be presented to the Iowa state Board of Regents this week, more construction is expected on campus in the near future.

"You can just look around campus — we've got four major projects going on," said Richard Gibson, associate vice president for the Facilities Services Group. "There are three major capital projects on the next five-year plan."

The four ongoing projects are the construction of the new Engineering, Biology and Medical Education buildings and renovations to residence halls. The 2001-05 five-year plan will include constructing new Journalism and Art buildings and renovating the existing biology building, Gibson said.

Though the docket for the regents meeting Wednesday says the UI is experiencing one of the most active improvement periods in its history, both Gibson and Steve Parrott, UI director of public relations, said construction has remained fairly stable.

"The UI has many buildings that need improvement, said Regent Ellengray Kennedy.

"I do think we have a lot of old buildings that are in need of remodeling and renovation," she said. "If you were to take a tour, you'd be surprised. The UI has a lot of catching up to do."

We're talking with people and touching base. If someone walks in with a $5 million check, we'll take it.

— John Soloski,

director of the School of Journalism and Mass Communications

The new Journalism Building is the last of the three new projects. Currently, most journalism classes are being held in the aging Seashore Hall; the others are scattered all over campus.

The building has not gone much beyond the planning stage, said John Soloski, director of the School of Journalism and Mass Communication.

"We're talking with people and touching base," he said. "If someone walks in with a $5 million check, we'll take it."

The UI is requesting that the regents fund the $12.3 million cost of building, Gibson said.

The building will comprise 65,000 square feet, compared with the 33,000 square feet at the Communications Center, in which the school was housed before its temporary location at Seashore Hall. Not all of the space in the new building, though, will be exclusively for the journalism school.

"A big portion will be for general assignment classrooms," Soloski said. "The UI has a shortage of general assignment classrooms."

The ongoing construction of the new Biology Building is in Phase I of the plan. Phase II, which is being proposed, will focus on the renovations to the existing Biology Building.

"Once they finish with the new Biology Building, they're going to completely gut the old building and remodel it," Parrott said.

The new Art Building, which will be built across Riverside Drive from the current one, will have an area of 80,000 square feet and a price tag of $25 million to $27 million, Gibson said.

"This request got turned into a 'cash flow' type request," he said.

A cash-flow request means that the UI will request a different sum of money for each fiscal year, based on its construction needs.

The requests made to the regents are not always the most realistic, Gibson said.

"Capital requests move more rapidly than reality," he said. "Generally, we ask for more in the request. It's very surprising to see that an entire request is funded as we asked."

The regents office in Des Moines has pared down the amount the UI had originally asked for as part of its five-year plan from $175 million to $118 million.

There should be little or no debate over this figure at the regents' meeting, Kennedy said.

"We have done some discussing of priorities," she said. "But I don't think there will be any problems with approval."

Faculty absent at finance hearing

A committee to review the UI Office of the Vice President for Finance held a hearing Monday on faculty concerns, but no faculty members made an appearance.

Committee Chairman John Menninger, a professor of biology, said he wasn't disappointed that no one was present to offer her or his opinions.

"We already received a lot of communication from faculty in other forms," he said.

The ongoing, 10-month process of reviewing the office is part of a regular review cycle for all six vice presidents' offices and the president's office, said Steve Collins, a professor of engineering and a committee member.

Every seven years, the UI Office for Finance is evaluated to make recommendations for improvements in its administrative structure and performance and to facilitate communications between the office and its clients, faculty, staff and students, Menninger said.

A hearing on staff concerns is scheduled for 11:30 a.m. on Sept. 17 at the UI Hospitals and Clinics, Room C315; a hearing on student concerns is set for 10:30 a.m. on Sept. 22 in the IMU, Room 343.

The review committee writes reports of its evaluations, Menninger said. Outside specialists then review the reports, which will be made public at the end of this semester or in May, Collins said.

The review committee consists of eight faculty members who represent different colleges and are involved in UI affairs, he said.

UI student files sexual-assault suit

A UI sophomore has filed a civil lawsuit against a former UI student, alleging sexual assault and battery.

Carly Tegt filed the suit against Xenon Varvel in Johnson County District Court on Sept. 10. Both were UI students at the time of the alleged attack.

The suit alleges that while a UI freshman, Tegt sustained injuries as a result of Varvel's assaulting her in her dormitory room early on Nov. 20, 1998.

Tegt is seeking a judgment against Varvel "to compensate her for the injuries and damages she suffered as a result of the defendant's actions," the suit said.

The injuries are unspecified in the suit. Neither Tegt, Varvel nor his attorney, John Beasley, could be reached for comment.

Tegt's attorney, Jaci Schaneman of Lincoln, Neb., would not comment on the case. Tegt is originally from Lincoln, in Lancaster County. Varvel is also from Lancaster County.

A temporary and permanent injunction also sought in the suit requested that Varvel have no contact with Tegt, the suit said. The suit alleges that Varvel "has attempted to or has made" contact with Tegt.

In 1998, there were nine cases of sexual abuse and two attempted sexual abuse cases reported to the UI Department of Public Safety. In 1997, there were two reported cases of sexual abuse.

If sexual abuse occurs in the residence halls, students usually go to their resident assistant or to the hall managers, said Maggie Van Oel, director of residence services.

The dormitories work with the Rape Victim Advocacy Program and call the police at the student's request, said Baycan Fideli, hall manager for Hillcrest and Slater residence halls.

"It could happen, and we have to be alert at all times," Fideli said.

Fifth suit filed in Thomson case

■ Another lawsuit was filed against the School District.

By Gil Levy
The Daily Iowan

A fifth lawsuit related to a case involving photographs taken at Lucas Elementary School, 830 Southlawn Drive, was filed against the Iowa City School District Monday at the Johnson County Court-house.

The suit is being filed anonymously by the parent of a girl who was allegedly photographed in an improper fashion by Roland Thomson, a former Lucas school volunteer.

While Roland Thomson is not named in the lawsuit, his wife, Shirley, a former teacher at Lucas, is accused in the suit of actively providing a way for her husband to meet female students alone and unsupervised.

Former school Superintendent Barb Grohe and Lucas Principal Brian Lehmann are also listed as defendants.

Roland Thomson is facing state and federal charges of child endangerment, indecent contact with a child and possession of child pornography.

In 1985, Roland Thomson was charged and convicted of wanton neglect for taking sexually suggestive photographs in the Iowa City School District, court documents said.

Roland Thomson's one-year sentence was suspended, and he was put on two years' probation in 1985.

The new suit charges the three with negligence and child endangerment, based on allegations that the parties knew Roland Thomson's history and allowed the photographs to take place.

"Roland was allowed access to children through his wife," said James Weston II, lawyer for the plaintiffs. "Shirley Thomson suggested Roland be invited to school to photograph the kids for a specific project."

Roland Thomson is not included in the current suit because Weston feels the state and federal charges will adequately punish him, the lawyer said. But the concerned parties should be held accountable, he said.

"I don't see how it's possible she (Shirley Thomson) didn't know his history, being married to him and an employee of the school where it happened," Weston said. The suit claims that not only did Lehmann and Grohe allow Roland Thomson improper access to children, but, court documents said, they did so after being told of his history by teachers and the Iowa City police.

Court documents also said Widmer told Lehmann directly that Roland Thomson's access to female minors was improper.

Lehmann said he could not comment on the ongoing litigation. In August 1998, a film-processing lab in Wisconsin alerted the FBI after developing sexually suggestive photographs of minors belonging to Roland Thomson, court documents said.

The FBI then notified Iowa City police, who found two van loads of photographs, drawings and videotapes at the Thomson residence in Tipton, court documents said.

Lehmann is still the Lucas principal, but Grohe has moved to Kent, Wash., to take over as superintendent of Kent School District for reasons unrelated to the lawsuits.

Grohe could not be reached for comment.

Alley closing worries Southside businesses

■ The construction of an apartment complex may hamper deliveries to some South Gilbert Street shops.

By Heather Pavlica
The Daily Iowan

A plan by the Iowa City City Council to partially close a Southside alley for an apartment complex project is causing some concern among local businesses.

The alley, near Court and Linn streets, would be partially closed, allowing construction trucks to use the west half, which will be divided by a six-foot-high chain-link fence, said Chuck Schmadeke, director of public works.

Four businesses use this alley for deliveries and could be affected by its closing, said Iowa City attorney Jay Honohan.

"We suggest that you treat these businesses well," he told the council Monday night. "The project is expected to run until July of 2000. That is a year."

The three-week construction project that will affect the businesses will include burying utility cables and pipes underground, installing a new storm-sewer system and resurfacing the alley upon completion, Schmadeke said. The 48-unit apartment complex will be located on the corner of Court and Linn streets; it is expected to be completed in July 2000.

Delivery trucks are not allowed to use Gilbert Street to unload merchandise, which has businesses in the area without a place for deliveries, Honohan said.

The City Council will set a public hearing in two weeks to resolve the differences between Knutson Construction Services and the business owners on Gilbert and Linn streets.

"We will do everything in our power to make this work for these people," said Gene Kreoeger of Knutson.

Indonesian violence in East Timor escalated following the Timorese vote for independence in Aug. 30, an election sanctioned by the United Nations. Since that time — and especially after the announcement of the results on Sept. 4 — militias backed by the Indonesian military have been killing residents, looting, and driving tens of thousands of Timorese out of their homes.

"The military, approved by the United Nations to provide security for the vote, intimidated the people by telling them that if they voted for independence, they could be killed," Murphy said. "As the violence continued, the doctor and his colleagues were from $16,786 to $18,406, and at Northern Iowa, it increased from $16,715 to $16,893.

Iowa State freshman Aaron Murray said he didn't have a choice in taking out loans for college but thinks Iowa State has a good financial-aid department.

"I'm sure I would have taken out loans at either places (Iowa State or the UI)," he said. "It doesn't upset me."

Mark Warner, the director of UI student financial aid, said the university's philosophy — to help students with "any and all awards, grants and scholarships up front" and emphasis on using loans only when necessary — has possibly influenced the decline in loan debt.

"We're not quite sure why there's a decrease," he said. "We like to think that students and parents are borrowing more wisely, borrowing what they need and not what they want."

Regent Ellengray Kennedy said the issue of student-loan debt is a major concern of the board but is not scheduled to be discussed in this week's meeting, though the possibility does exist.

"We have talked about it and are constantly trying to balance the needs of the universities with student-loan debts," Kennedy said. "Anytime you can have the student-loan debt drop, it's significant."

UI senior George Galloway said that when it comes to student loans, he has only borrowed what he needed.

"I don't look forward to it, but I don't worry about not being able to pay back my loans," he said. "I'm sure there are people out there that may abuse the system, but all systems get abused by someone out there."

The loan debt decline is not new to the UI, which has seen a steady drop in such debt in the past few years. Some students believe that if the proposed 6.9 percent tuition and fees hike passes, it will stop the descent of loan debt.

"I think the reason it's been declining is that they haven't been raising tuition," said UI junior Laura Idle, who said she has never taken out any loans. "I actually know more people who don't have any loans and are trying to squeak by than people with loans."

Warner said the number of students employed in work-study and outside jobs is a possible factor in the low debt rates at the UI.

"One of the things that the UI is extremely positive at the UI is that we have a large number of students who choose to work while in school," he said.

Self-sufficiency is a rule for Galloway. "I figured if I needed more money, I'd work for it myself," he said.

Eleuthera Island at 4 a.m., meteorologists said — but residents there were feeling the effect by early evening.

"There's fruit flying all over the place, and it's already uprooted small trees in my garden," said Geoff Pearce of Eleuthera, before phone lines there went silent.

In Florida, there was a hurricane warning in effect Monday from Florida City, south of Miami, to Brunswick, Ga., and residents along 400 miles of coastline packed stores to stock up on canned food, bottled water, plywood and aluminum shutters. Navy ships left port to ride out the storm at sea, and aircraft were sent inland.

Officials said 1 million people were urged to evacuate in Florida.

Georgia was under a hurricane watch from Brunswick to Savannah, a 70-mile span, and forecasters said that likely would be extended into South Carolina overnight. Coastal residents in the Brunswick and Savannah areas were urged to evacuate.

"This is probably the most serious threat we've had to the Georgia coast this century," said Gary McConnell, director of the Georgia Emergency Management Agency.

South Carolina Gov. Jim Hodges ordered 600 National Guard troops and 500 state police to the coast to help in case an evacuation is ordered.

At Kennedy Space Center, which is just 9 feet above sea level, almost all of the 12,500 workers were leaving. A skeleton crew remained behind, but they, too, will evacuate if the wind is as fierce as predicted. That would be the first complete evacuation of the space center ever.

Three of NASA's space shuttles were in a hangar that was designed to withstand winds of only up to 105 mph. A fourth was in a building designed to stand winds of up to 125 mph. Four multimillion-dollar rockets were exposed on launch pads and could not be moved.

agents before and during the siege contained a dozen spent rifle cartridges preferred by sharpshooters — as well as by the FBI and the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms. The FBI has long denied firing a single shot during the standoff. ATF was involved in a deadly shootout with the Davidians on Feb. 28, 1993, which launched the 51-day confrontation.

The records Waxman cited, discovered among more than 40 boxes of material compiled during the House's 1995 hearings, include an FBI pilot's 1993 statement recalling a radio transmission in which agents had a conversation "relative to the utilization of some sort of military round ... on a concrete bunker."

And post-raid interview summaries include an unnamed FBI agent's explanation that smoke captured on film "came from (an) attempt to penetrate bunker with one military and two (non-incendiary) rounds."

In a letter to the special counsel investigating the controversy, Waxman wrote: "There is no indication that Chairman Burton or his staff thought to review these documents before accusing the attorney general of a cover-up."

Burton said the Justice Department buried the committee in an avalanche of documents shortly before the 1995 hearings began, and panel investigators depended on a Justice summary to guide them.

"The Justice Department dumped 100,000 documents on the committee three days before the hearings, knowing that they (committee aides) couldn't possibly go through them," Burton said in an interview.

Iowa doctor a witness to terror in East Timor the elimination of the East Timor force by the Indonesian military."

Indonesian violence in East Timor escalated following the Timorese vote for independence on Aug. 30, an election sanctioned by the United Nations. Since that time — and especially after the announcement of the results on Sept. 4 — militias backed by the Indonesian military have been filling residents, looting, and driving tens of thousands of Timorese out of their homes.

"The military, approved by the United Nations to provide security for the vote, intimidated the people by telling them that if they voted for independence, they would be killed," Murphy said.

As the violence continued, the doctor and his colleagues were increasingly threatened by the military. Gunshots echoed as Murphy was forced to travel in darkness through back alleys to reach his clinic.

Last month, authorities forced Murphy to leave the country for not having a proper visa.

The clinic was burned to the ground five days ago, the doctor found out. He is now left wondering about his colleagues.

"It is so horrible to get reports; I don't even know how many are still alive," Murphy said.

The experience has turned Murphy bitter about the apathy of the United States and the United Nations.

"America's role has been disgusting," he said.

Murphy said the United States has not taken enough action against the violence. While the United Nations supported the referendum, its failure to provide security for the East Timorese is deplorable, he said.

"The international community set them up and then abandoned them," he said. "It was like leading the lambs to slaughter."

Murphy urges the immediate recognition of East Timor as an independent nation and an investigation into charges of crimes against humanity.

Since his return, he has spoken with the media to educate the public on the situation in East Timor. The more people know, the more pressure will be put on leaders to enact change, Murphy said.

He is scheduled to speak at the International Center lounge today at noon. The UI Lecture Committee will sponsor another lecture in the English-Philosophy Building, Room 107, at 1:30 p.m.

Punting along the political river

As we go slouching toward the millennium — either a year early or four years late, depending on how you're keeping score — there's little that's more fun, just for comic relief, than watching the various political players posture and position themselves for the circus that will be the Y2K election season.

Especially around these parts. Now that the Big Game against the junior college to the west has come and gone, it's pretty clear that the local football team is going to have what is euphemistically called a "rebuilding year." This means, for those of you not well-versed in football lore, that the local team spends a lot of time lining up in punt formation and the opponents spend a lot of time chewing up more yardage than Gen. Sherman did against the American Indians (which was known as a blowout in football lore).

Thank god (and Kansans, if that's not the same thing) for politics. We going to need the laughter.

BEAU ELLIOT

There's the president, of course. Yes, we still have Bill to kick around, though a lot of people, it seems, put him out of mind once he dodged the Monica bullet.

Speaking of Monica, when last seen, she was running around hawking indelible cosmetics or edible coat hangers or something. Some people just never seem to know when their 15 minutes are up. Besides, if she insists upon selling something, she should bring out a line of stained, famous blue dresses — the kind that never need dry cleaning. Or maybe a brand of cigars that have multiple uses and a smooth, easy draw. The key to success is sticking with what you know.

Bill, meanwhile, is still trying to ensure his place in history. He just doesn't get it. He will always be known as the president who dallied in the Oval Office with a young woman whose IQ would embarrass a bimbo. He escaped being run out of office only because his political opponents were somewhere to the right of Genghis Khan and the special prosecutor would have been perfectly at home in the Spanish Inquisition.

He will also be known as the man who turned the Democratic Party into Republican-Lite. Historians will note that the 1990s was the period in which the United States moved from a two-party system to a one-and-a-half-party system. Maybe that's one and a quarter.

Bill's latest foray into history was to pardon some Puerto Rican nationalists. It was a rather surprising move, given that Bill had never shown much interest in Puerto Rico before, except to ensure that U.S. corporations could do business there. Of course, that's Bill's major talent (some would say his only talent): making the world safe for corporate profits. Not to mention making it safe for corporate campaign donations.

Of course, that's Bill's major talent (some would say his only talent): making the world safe for corporate profits. Not to mention making it safe for corporate campaign donations.

The Puerto Rican gambit immediately blew up in his face, as Republicans and the chattering crowd on TV accused him of trying to sway the sizable Puerto Rican vote in New York City for his wife's Senate campaign.

Ridiculous, of course. Bill would never do anything like that. He was just trying to ensure a steady supply of cigars, for which he has multiple uses, as history will record. Hillary Rodham Clinton then came out against the pardons, giving us the vastly edifying experience of watching the First Couple stage a food fight. Ah, politics. Ah, autumn. Isn't it time for the Hawks to line up in punt formation?

Or maybe Hillary and Bill could line up in punt formation. There'll be more political high jinks to come, what with George W. Shrub and George W. Gore as the major players. It's enough to make you wish that, if there really is such a creature as the Y2K bug, it would cancel the Y2K political season. And then punt.

East Timor intervention is not up to president

The strife in East Timor will inevitably bring the United States to the brink of a constitutional crisis. Or at least it should.

The reason is simple: As the president ponders U.S. intervention, will he respect the prerogative of the sovereign people of this country, guaranteed in the Constitution (Article I, Section 8), to declare war through their representatives?

If the president refuses to answer this question in the affirmative, we ought to insist our representatives protect that prerogative against executive encroachment. Were they to do so, they would demonstrate their commitment to the Constitution and ultimately to all the freedoms we enjoy.

This is so because, as the founders understood, a state of war is the perfect pretext for the suspension of civil rights, the confiscation of property and the inauguration of tyranny. They had read the history of the Roman Republic, to cite one example, and had seen the wisdom of popular control of the military (cedant arma togae). When that control is yielded to an individual or clique, there are no checks upon abuse and no way to ensure our sons and daughters die only in wars that are just and serve the national interest. That is why the founders insisted that only the legislature can expend blood and treasure. This measure protects us against the executive using warfare as a means to satisfy his ambitions.

In the last 50 years, however, as we became engaged in more and more "police actions," the willingness of our executives to obey this injunction began to erode. As a patch-up procedure, Congress passed the War Powers Act, which granted the executive some leeway, yet reaffirmed the need for congressional approval.

In the recently-concluded Kosovo fiasco, President Clinton completely ignored this act, claiming that it was not a war (tell that one to the Serb and Kosovar civilians we murdered). The courts backed him up: Judge Friedman of the U.S. District Court of Columbia granted Clinton's motion to dismiss the suit filed by 31 members of Congress who rightly saw continued involvement as a violation of the act. The basis of Friedman's judgment was that Congress had already appropriated funds for the war, despite the fact that the act specifically forbids construing funds as a resolution of support.

Now the War Powers Act is a dead letter that no future executive will likely respect. The Band-Aid approach has been ripped off, and it is the safety of the people that will live with that gaping wound. Judge for yourselves in the next few weeks, as the president, Albright and Cohen contemplate involvement in East Timor, any respect is shown for the people's prerogative beyond citing opinion polls. And if we do not insist that our representatives defend us against these abuses, we can enjoy sitting by submissively as we watch freedom go gently into the night.

Laundry price hike nothing to complain about

All the dorm dwellers who are still sobbing over the increase in laundry prices need to stop, evaluate the situation, wipe their eyes, and get over it.

It currently costs $1.50 to do a load of laundry in the residence halls. Last year the price was $1. The increase might seem like a lot, but the last price increase was in 1995, when laundry prices went from 75 cents to $1.

People complain that the laundry increase would not be so bad if there were small price raises each year, but that isn't probable. The machines are not equipped to take any other form of money besides quarters. Paying $1.03, $1.17 or $1.33 is not possible. Instead of making laundry prices odd numbers each year, it makes more sense to hold off on price increases for a few years and increase the cost by a 50-cent increment.

Dorm residents could protest the price increase and take their business elsewhere, but would they get free drying at a local laundry? Not likely. $1.50 is a steal for a load of wash plus free drying — perhaps the best deal in town. The UI could very well charge for drying, but it doesn't.

Another perk about dorm laundry is location. No car is necessary to drive to a laundry room. The extent of transportation is an elevator.

It is a shame that some dorm residents are unaware of what a great deal they are getting. Not only is the laundry room located in their residence hall, but washing is a mere $1.50 with free drying.

Everyone who has allowed words of complaints to flow from their lips about the laundry increase should hang their heads in shame and be thankful for the great laundry system that the UI provides.

No banana slugs here, but Iowa City can still be a strange place

I've met a lot of former Santa Cruzans in Iowa City, sort of the way Dante kept running into Italian politicians in hell but less explicable.

For those who haven't been there, Santa Cruz, Calif., sits perched on the north end of Monterey Bay, where giant redwood forests overlook the Pacific along a stretch of pale beaches and dramatically sculpted rock formations that glow in 365 sunsets per year.

The University of California set up a campus there in the '60s, and it never left. The school colors are tie-dye, and the mascot is the banana slug, a slimy, phlegmatic creature that took the defeat for official state mollusk in gastro-stride. (The California Assembly ignored my protest that the abalone, its eventual choice, actually dwells offshore, and therefore has no business representing the landlubbing majority.)

Yes, I spent several years there, equipped with a futon, a kayak and a research fellowship that never had a chance against the power of trees and surf to dissipate academic ambition into a mellow conga drum dialogue with the passing whales. The only trend Santa Cruz got ahead of in the last 30 years was gourmet coffee, which you could buy at every bus stop there before Seattle had its own ZIP code. The steady supply of caffeine keeps the population on the safe side of "laid back" from "comatose" so that essential services, such as coffee roasting, keep going.

DREW HERMAN

But as charming as Santa Cruz is, something must explain the presence of so many exiles in Iowa City, which counts as a forested Eden by the ocean in the same way that David Duke counts as a closet liberal. There's always the old Paradise Paradox: As soon as word gets around that someplace is wonderful to live in, the place fills up with the people whose absence had until then made it so wonderful. Personally, I tired of paying $800 rent to a sheltie named Windsong for a converted kennel.

I also had an ongoing beef with the City Council over misleading signs posted along the coastal cliffs. They warn, "Cliff edges may be dangerous." As someone who went on and over those edges several times, I can attest that they are perfectly safe. However, the rocks 30 feet directly below the cliff edges can hurt like hell.

But I had set the human migration question aside until the butterflies got me thinking. Last week thousands of monarchs stopped off in Iowa City on their way to Santa Cruz, where they gather from all over America on the same four trees every October and, with brains the size of Albania's budget surplus, try to remember the names of 2.3 million cousins.

Last week thousands of monarchs stopped off in Iowa City on their way to Santa Cruz, where they gather from all over America on the same four trees every October and, with brains the size of Albania's budget surplus, try to remember the names of 2.3 million cousins.

on my latte, and suddenly all made sense. The key lies in Homer, Alaska, hub of the Pacific commercial halibut fishery. The mystery there is that Homer is another genuine flower child holdover in a state whose congressional delegation makes Strom Thurmond look like a Sierra Club stooge. As I see it, some dudes from SC ran out of highway there one summer about 25 years ago.

They got work pitching fish, and what with the slime, the trees and the spectacular coastal formations, didn't notice they had left SC until winter, when their VW bus would no longer start and it was too late to leave. They succeeded in converting the town to their ways so well that it ultimately produced Jewel, although when she lived there she still had a last name and most of her nose cartilage.

So now I can unmask the conspiracy and explain what a wild and crazy town like Iowa City is doing in the heart of Midwest farming country. Like They did in Homer, They are slowly turning this into another Santa Cruz.

Behold the evidence: First, Iowa City's liberal bent and the local youth's predilection for tie-dye, Phish and organic cigarettes. Second, the unreliability of roofs, with tornadoes standing in for plate tectonics. Third, the butterfly fly-by. And finally, the floods of '93.

Maybe I'm being paranoid, but I'll keep my ear to the ground and try to warn you before They make another attempt to turn North Gilbert into ocean front property.

Russia begins manhunt after blast

■ Many are reported missing in the building explosion Monday that killed 73 people.

By Judith Ingram
Associated Press

MOSCOW — Dozens of people were missing and believed buried under tons of wreckage Monday after a suspected bomb pulverized an eight-story apartment building in Moscow, killing at least 73 people.

Authorities blamed terrorists for the pre-dawn blast and appealed for help finding a man who allegedly rented space in that building and another that was blown up four days earlier. More than 200 people have died in explosions in Russia during the past two weeks.

The government ordered a massive security operation in the capital and other cities. Police checked people's identity papers at metro stations and other crowded areas and searched for stores of explosives in buildings across Moscow.

Russian leaders promised to deal harshly with whoever was responsible for the explosions, although no one immediately claimed responsibility.

President Boris Yeltsin said terrorists had declared war on the country.

"Terrorists are trying to scare the Russian people. They are trying to demoralize the state," he declared in a nationally televised address.

Yeltsin ordered tight security at airports, nuclear power stations, oil pipelines and other possible targets across the country. He gave Moscow Mayor Yuri Luzhkov 24 hours to have all 30,000 residential buildings in the city searched for explosives.

Luzhkov said crowded areas such as markets and public transportation vehicles would be patrolled more tightly and hinted that the capital's "guests," or travelers — especially those not registered with the police — could be evicted.

He linked the two latest blasts to fighting in the southern Russian region of Dagestan, where

New aftershock kills seven in Turkey

■ Four hundred people are injured in an area that has not recovered from the Aug. 17 earthquake.

By Harmonie Toros
Associated Press

GOLCUK, Turkey — Terrified residents jumped from windows Monday as a strong aftershock jolted the same area of western Turkey where 15,000 people died in an earthquake last month. At least seven people were killed, and more than 420 were injured.

In the hard-hit coastal town of Golcuk, one building damaged in the Aug. 17 temblor slid into the sea, apparently trapping four people who had gone inside to salvage their belongings.

Rescue workers from the civil defense, the military and a civilian rescue group were on a 6-foot corner section of the building jutting from the water, pulling at the rubble. Navy divers searched the water.

"Our only chance is that they are out of the water," said rescue worker Emre Ayan.

Rescue workers also were pulling debris from at least one other site in Golcuk where survivors might be trapped.

The quake had a preliminary magnitude of 5.8 and was centered in Izmit, just northeast of Golcuk, some 50 miles southeast of Istanbul, the city's Kandilli Observatory reported.

"It was very disorienting," said John Augsburg, a structural engineer from Harrisonburg, Va., who was in Golcuk at the time of the aftershock. "We were right next to a building. It moved so much, it looked like rubber."

Most of the injured suffered broken bones after jumping from buildings.

Isa Ersozer was in a second-floor barbershop in Izmit when the building began to shake.

"The stairs were full of people trying to get out, so I just jumped," he said, sitting in a wheelchair in a field hospital, his foot covered in bandages.

Throughout the town, people rushed to hospitals, desperate for news about their loved ones.

Three people were killed in nearby Kocaeli when a building fell on their car, said Ali Cafer Akyuz, the deputy governor of Istanbul. Another three were killed in that town when the building they were in collapsed, he said.

A woman in the town of Adapazari died of a heart attack, state-owned TRT television reported.

More than 420 people were being treated for injuries or severe psychological trauma, state-owned TRT television reported.

The area hit by the quake has not recovered from the devastating Aug. 17 quake. Thousands of residents are living in makeshift huts or in cold, soggy tents. Piles of twisted wreckage mark sites that were once apartment blocks.

Many residents appeared in shock Monday and were unable to speak. Some stared forward with blank eyes. Others clenched their teeth.

"Life goes on despite everything," said Handan Akcay, who has been living in a tent city since the August earthquake destroyed her home. "But unfortunately, we don't get used to this."

Parents rushed to schools following the aftershock — Monday was the first day back to school after summer recess — and grabbed their children in tears, hugging and kissing them.

Many parents had been reluctant to send their kids to school. Some teachers earlier had agreed to meet with students in the playgrounds and not in the buildings, which some parents feared were unsafe.

Prime Minister Bulent Ecevit immediately suspended classes in the area following the aftershock.

"These aftershocks may continue," he cautioned residents. "We hope that none are as powerful as this one. We unfortunately have to live with them."

Indonesia drops peace-force objections

■ The foreign minister says his country will put no conditions on the makeup of the peacekeepers.

By Edith M. Lederer
Associated Press

UNITED NATIONS — Indonesia wants an international peacekeeping force to be sent to violence-ravaged East Timor as quickly as possible, and it is putting no conditions on which countries' forces should be included, Indonesian Foreign Minister Ali Alatas said Monday.

The statement seemed to open the way for Australia to play a leading role in the peacekeeping operation. A top Indonesian military official had said earlier that the military won't accept Australian involvement in the East Timor force, but, Alatas said, "it's all up to the United Nations to determine the composition."

Putting to rest what could have been a serious problem, Alatas said Indonesia was prepared to turn over responsibility for security in East Timor to the international peacekeeping force.

After meeting with U.N. Secretary-General Kofi Annan, Alatas said further talks were needed today so he could hear the United Nations' plans. He said Indonesia would prefer to have Asian countries in the force and admitted to some problems with Australia but insisted that these were not conditions.

In New Zealand, meanwhile, President Clinton expressed confidence earlier today that Congress will support the international peacekeeping force for East Timor, which will probably include "a few hundred" Americans. He said he hoped the mission could begin in a matter of days.

"Until the international peacekeeping force deploys, it is essential that Indonesia works to prevent further violence," he said. "It must facilitate efforts to quickly bring humanitarian assistance to the people who have suffered so very greatly."

Clinton said U.S. participation would probably consist of "a few hundred people rather than 1,000 on the ground." He had called about 10 members of Congress, and others in the administration were busy conferring with leaders on Capitol Hill.

Also Monday, the U.N. Security Council met to hear a report from the five ambassadors it had sent to Indonesia.

The ambassadors helped pressure Jakarta to accept outside military help to halt widespread violence in East Timor. Pro-Indonesian militias and Indonesian soldiers have been killing Timorese residents and driving thousands from their homes since Aug. 30, when the territory voted to become independent from Indonesia.

David Kelley holds his two Emmys during the 51st annual Primetime Emmy Awards at the Shrine Auditorium in Los Angeles Sunday.

LOS ANGELES — The lawyers walked away with the Emmy Awards verdict, while the dysfunctional mobsters from "The Sopranos," who had the most nominations, got little respect.

John Larroquette, who had won four years in a row as best supporting actor for "Night Court."

John Lithgow won best actor in a comedy for "3rd Rock From the Sun," Edie Falco, the long-suffering wife of a mobster, won best dramatic actress for "The Sopranos," and Dennis Franz won his fourth award for best actor in a drama for "NYPD Blue."

Earlier in the evening, Michael Badalucco and Holland Taylor, "Practice" regulars who won awards for best supporting actor and actress in a drama, sang his praises, while Kelley returned the kind words to his casts and crew.

After the show, Kelley said he had thought HBO's critically and popularly acclaimed mob series might walk away with the award for best drama.

"If someone was going to ask me the fastest or best way to win an Emmy, I'd say write a script and get Calista Flockhart to say the words," Kelley said of his "Ally McBeal" star.

Kelley has a track record to back up the assertion: He was executive producer of "L.A. Law" and creator of "Picket Fences," past winners of the drama series Emmy.

Supremacist proud of Texas killing

The trial of the second white supremacist gets under way in the Jasper, Texas, dragging death.

By Michael Graczyk Associated Press

BRYAN, Texas — A white supremacist charged with dragging a black man to his death was so proud of his participation in the gruesome act that he bragged in a jailhouse letter that it was a "rush" and "I'm still licking my lips for more," a prosecutor said Monday as the man's murder trial began.

"I'm the ... hero of the day," Lawrence Russell Brewer wrote to another inmate while being held at the Jasper County Jail for the June 1998 slaying.

Brewer is the second of three white men charged with killing James Byrd Jr., 49, by dragging him behind a pickup truck. One of the men has already been convicted and sentenced to death.

"Well, I did it," Brewer wrote in the July 1998 letter, which was intercepted by a deputy. "And no longer am I a virgin. It was a rush, and I'm still licking my lips for more."

In the letter, Brewer referred to "rolling a tire." A witness described "tire" as a derogatory jailhouse term for a black person.

"He sees himself as a hero, a star, that he's really accomplished," Jasper District Attorney Guy James Gray said in his opening statement.

Defense attorney Doug Barlow, who declined to make an opening statement, said Brewer was writing about sex and not a slaying.

A Texas Department of Criminal Justice gang intelligence officer, however, insisted in testimony that the message was prison code.

"To me, it sounds like he's stating he's physically assaulted a member of the black race in one form or another," William Kirk said.

A prison inmate who shared a cellblock wing with Brewer testified that Brewer was not remorseful.

"If it was up to them, they would like to take the whole black population and shoot them behind the head — men, women and children — and get rid of them," said Jesus Moran, who is serving time for burglary and theft.

Brewer, 32, could get the death penalty if convicted.

Brewer and John William King and Shawn Allen Berry, both 24, writing and two in technical categories.

When Kelley accepted the award for best comedy, he even joked that he thought his previous prize for best drama might be handed to the HBO series instead.

"They said backstage, 'You got to go back out, you got to go back out,'" Kelley said. "And I thought there had been a mistake, 'The Sopranos' had won drama."

Both Holland and Badalucco gushed about Kelley in accepting their awards for supporting actress and actor.

"The words of David Kelley are an inspiration to me," said Badalucco, who plays lawyer Jimmy Berluti in "The Practice." "Thank you, David, for Jimmy and for being such a nice guy."

Kristen Johnston of "3rd Rock From the Sun" was named best supporting actress in a comedy, and David Hyde Pierce won the supporting actor's honor for "Frasier."

Scientists restore old brain cells

WASHINGTON (AP) — Aged brains have been restored to youthful vigor in a gene-therapy experiment with monkeys that may soon be tested in humans with Alzheimer's disease, researchers report. Scientists hope the treatment will reinvigorate thinking and memory.

The studies reinforce a new understanding of how the brain ages and suggest that neurons in the older brain don't die at first but go into shrunken atrophy, he said.

"We've all heard the dogma that we lose 10,000 neurons a day after the age of 20," Tuszynski said. "Well, that is false. That doesn't happen."

An actual count of the cells in the cortex, a key area in the thinking part of the brain, shows that very few cells are lost with age, he said.

Instead, he said, his team found that it was control neurons in another part of the brain, called the basal forebrain, that were most dramatically affected by aging. These cells, Tuszynski said, had shrunk in size and had stopped making some regulatory chemicals, a change that seriously affects the thinking cortex.

"These cells are like the air traffic controllers of the brain," said the researcher. "They are on the ground, deeper in the brain, controlling the activities of cells up there in the cortex. They control the flow of information in the cortex."

The researchers found that approximately 40 percent of the basal forebrain cells could not be detected in old monkeys, and the other 60 percent had shrunk in size by 10 percent.

But the cells were not dead, Tuszynski said. By inserting genes for nerve growth factor into the brain, he said, the cells were revived and restored to nearly full vigor.

"We restored the number of cells we could detect to about 92 percent of normal for a young monkey, and size of the cells was restored to within 3 percent," he said.

Injury slows Dwight in Falcon opener

A pulled hamstring has former Hawkeye Tim Dwight questionable for the Atlanta-Dallas game on Monday.

By Megan Manfull The Daily Iowan

Atlanta's Tim Dwight did not kick his second season in the NFL on a positive note. Now the former Hawkeye is questionable for the Falcons' game Monday against Dallas.

Dwight injured his hamstring during the pregame warmup Sunday, prior to the Falcons' game against the Vikings. The injury kept Dwight out of the offense but he still returned kicks in the 17-14 Vikings win.

"Hopefully, Tim will be ready to go for Dallas," Reeves said during his postgame press conference. "You just don't know about those things until you start to try to move around in it. A lot of treatment could make a difference, but I have to say he is questionable right now."

Dwight is one of the Falcons' receivers and main kick return specialists. He was a game captain Sunday, and returned three kicks for a total of 67 yards.

Dwight fumbled a kickoff in second quarter when Minnesota was on its scoring rampage. The Vikings recovered the ball on Atlanta's side and added a field goal four plays later to extend their lead to 10-0.

The Iowa City native has been known in the NFL for returning kicks deep out of the end zone, but Reeves said Dwight's attempts with a strained hamstring were too costly. "You shouldn't bring it out if you're not 100-percent healthy," Reeves said. "Any time they kick it, it's particularly with that kind of height, that he should have stayed in the end zone. That was not a good decision. I think we will learn from that and make better decisions."

Last season, Dwight led the league in kick returns as a rookie. He finished the season with 343 yards after returning a kick 94 yards for a touchdown in the Super Bowl.

Cincinnati is red hot, but gains no ground

The Reds defeated the Marlins, 7-4, to win their seventh straight on Monday afternoon.

By Terry Kinney
Associated Press

CINCINNATI — Greg Vaughn is ready for the stretch run. Vaughn's solo homer started a three-run sixth inning Monday that gave the Cincinnati Reds their seventh straight win, 7-4 over the Florida Marlins.

"I got a pitch to drive, a slider that stayed over the plate a little bit," Vaughn said. "It brought us within one and got the momentum back for us a little bit."

Cincinnati, which has 31 homers in 11 games, began the day three games behind division-leading Houston in the NL Central and 2½ games back of New York in the wild-card race.

"You know that Houston is going to be there right until the end," Vaughn said. "All we can worry about is the Cincinnati Reds and everything else will fall into place. I still see us being there right at the end."

Vaughn's 38 home runs are the most by a Reds player since George Foster hit 40 in 1978. His 101 RBIs are the most for Cincinnati since Eric Davis drove in 101 in 1989.

Steve Parris (9-2) gave up four runs and eight hits in six innings, helping Cincinnati win its 10th straight over Florida. Danny Graves pitched the ninth for his 23rd save in 30 chances.

"That's a nice vulture win for the starter there," Parris said. "You come out of the game losing and you get a win out of it. I'll take one of those. I haven't had one of those in a while."

Marlins starter Brian Meadows gave up four runs and five hits in 5 1-3 innings. Derek Lee went 4-for-4 with a two-run homer to raise his average 19 points to .202.

With Florida ahead 4-2 in the sixth, Vaughn homered and Eddie Taubensee singled. Jesus Sanchez (5-7) hit Michael Tucker with a pitch and Chris Stynes hit a game-tying single to center. The go-ahead run scored when Julio Ramirez bobbled the ball for an error.

"Even after Vaughn's home run, we're still OK," Marlins manager John Boles said. "He's going to get his home runs, so you don't worry about that."

"But then things got away. We just couldn't get them out. We couldn't shut them down throughout the whole series. Every time we scored, they came back and scored."

Stynes hit a two-run single in the seventh off Reid Cornelius.

IOWA FOOTBALL

Outta his way

After only one start, Shane Hall is proving he fits at free safety

By Greg Wallace
The Daily Iowan

It's always unfortunate when a player goes down to injury. For Shane Hall, however, it was just the break he needed.

The sophomore free safety stepped into the lineup Saturday night against Iowa State, replacing the injured Matt Stockdale. And what a debut he had. Hall had six tackles, five unassisted, a fumble recovery and an interception in his first start as a Hawkeye. The interception gave Iowa a chance to win late in the game, though the offense failed to take advantage.

Despite the impressive statistics, Hall felt his performance could have been sharper.

"Average," Hall said. "I could have played better. But I played hard, and we played hard as a team."

Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz was impressed with Hall's improvement from the Iowa-Nebraska season opener to the Hawkeyes' game in Ames.

"We were a little concerned (after the Nebraska game.) I thought Shane could have played better," Ferentz said. "I think he buckled down and prepared better, and he made a beautiful play on that interception. We need everyone to do the same."

If Hall remains a fixture in the Hawkeye secondary, observers may point to Stockdale's injury against Nebraska as a key. Stockdale was hit in the chest by a Nebraska player, and suffered a bruised sternum. He was down on the field for 10 minutes, and was removed on a stretcher, spending two nights in the UI Hospitals.

Stockdale's status is day-to-day.

Hall made his case for a starting position soon after Stockdale went down in the third quarter against the Huskers by notching five tackles, four of which were unassisted. His two-game totals are especially impressive when you consider that most of them came against top-notch running backs like Iowa State's Darren Davis and Nebraska's DeAngelo Evans.

Hall keeps a cool demeanor, perhaps an important factor for someone that plays a pressure-filled position like defensive back, where one slip can mean giving up a huge play.

The Burnsville, Minn., native wasn't uptight about his first start, but the specter of the in-state rival Cyclones got his juices flowing.

"I wasn't that excited," Hall said of his debut atop the two-deep. "I was excited about playing Iowa State."

Excellence is a tradition in Hall's family. His father, Windlan Hall, played free safety in the NFL from 1972-77. After being drafted by the San Francisco 49ers in the fourth round in 1972, Windlan played four seasons as a 49er before moving to Minnesota to become a Viking in 1976. He played two seasons there before retiring in 1977. The family settled in Burnsville, a Minneapolis suburb, and it was there that Shane's football career took shape.

Hall was first-team all-Minnesota and Twin Cities his senior season. He was high on many recruit lists out of high school. In addition, he was named to the SuperPrep All-Midwest team and PrepStar Big Ten Super 26 elite team. He led Burnsville High School to a 9-2

Marino crushes Denver in season opener

Despite a halftime honoring former Denver quarterback John Elway, Miami's Dan Marino stole the show in a 38-21 victory.

By Dave Goldberg
Associated Press

DENVER — John Elway wouldn't have had it any other way.

If someone had to spoil his retirement party, it might as well be Dan Marino, the last quarterback left from that illustrious class of 1983.

With major help from the special teams, who blocked a punt and a field goal to set up 10 points, the Miami Dolphins beat Denver 38-21 Monday night, spoiling Brian Griese's coming out party as Elway's successor in the Broncos' first game in pursuit of a third straight Super Bowl title.

It also put a damper on the halftime ceremony in which Elway's name and number were placed in the Broncos' Ring of Fame.

Marino, who was 15-of-23 for 215 yards as he began what might be his final quest for an elusive Super Bowl ring, had a 12-yard TD pass to rookie fullback Rob Konrad and a 4-yarder to O.J. McDuffie.

Karim Abdul-Jabbar and another rookie, J.J. Johnson, had 1-yard TD runs and Olindo Mare added a 37-yard field goal as the Dolphins ended Denver's 24-game regular season home winning streak that extended back to December 1996.

Griese, selected over Bubby Brister by coach Mike Shanahan to start in Elway's place, wasn't bad, finishing 24-of-40 for 270 yards and throwing TD passes of 61, 11 and 4 yards to Ed McCaffrey, the last coming with 34 seconds to play. He also was sacked with about four minutes to play by Rich Owens and fumbled with Jason Taylor recovering in the end zone for the Dolphins' final score.

But his arm didn't present the fear factor Elway's did, allowing Miami to play eight men close to the line of scrimmage to shut down Terrell Davis, who finished with 61 yards on 19 carries.

Late in the first half, for example, Griese underthrew a wide-open McCaffrey, who had to come back for the ball and dropped it.

Griese started off like another Elway, hitting McCaffrey between Brock Marion and Shawn Wooden for the 61-yard score on the first series of the game.

The Broncos held their 7-0 lead into the second quarter and looked

Hanks heads to Seattle

The Seattle Seahawks announced the signing of former-Hawkeye safety Merton Hanks on Monday.

Hanks was a fifth-round draft choice for the San Francisco 49ers in 1991. He had been voted to four NFC Pro Bowl squads.

Earlier this month, the 49ers cut Hanks citing salary cap concerns. Last season, he started all 16 games and both post-season contests for the 49ers. He recorded 61 tackles and defended 21 passes, equaling a career high.

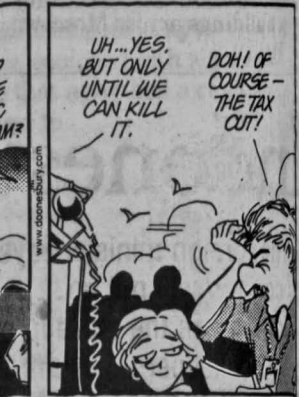

about to go ahead 10-0. But Lorenzo Bromell blocked Jason Elam's 44-yard field goal attempt and Terrell Buckley returned it 43 yards to the Denver 36. Four plays later, Abdul-Jabbar took it into the end zone to tie the score.

Then Marino took the Dolphins 80 yards in seven plays, highlighted by a 40-yard pass to Tony Martin, the new speed receiver signed as a free agent. Marino capped that one with a 12-yard pass to Konrad, all alone in the right flat.

POINTCOUNTERPOINT

Is the Cyclone football team for real this year?

If you had told anyone before the season began that the Iowa State/Kansas State game September 25 would be a matchup of undefeated teams, they might have thought you were crazy. But with ISU's win over Iowa Saturday, and a very winnable game against UNLV looming, that could be just the case for the Cyclones.

Don't be making plane reservations to a warm weather site the last week of the millennium just yet, Iowa State fans. Even though things are dandy in Cyclone land right now, take a step back and look who you beat. A Division I-AA team and Iowa. The Iowa win did more for in-state pride than national posterity, for the game was not even a glimmer in Sportscenter's eye on Saturday night.

Wells goes into Bronx and punishes Yankees, 2-1

TORONTO (AP) — David Wells pitched a four-hitter to beat his former team for the first time in four starts this season, as the Toronto Blue Jays beat New York to hand the Yankees their fourth straight loss.

The Yankees, coming off a three-game sweep by Boston, remained 3 1/2 games ahead of the Red Sox, who lost to Cleveland 11-7. New York was held to one run for the third time in four games.

Vernon Wells hit his first career homer for the Blue Jays, who entered the day 6 1/2 games behind Boston in the AL wild card race.

Wells (14-10), acquired in February in the Roger Clemens deal, was 0-3 with a 5.49 ERA against the Yankees this season before throwing his sixth complete game this season and the 35th of his career.

Indians 11, Red Sox 7

CLEVELAND — Kenny Lofton returned from a strained right hamstring to homer for the first time since June 11, driving in three runs to lead Cleveland.

Boston's lead over Oakland in the wild-card race slipped to two games.

Lofton, who had missed nine games, was 3-for-4, and Richie Sexson and Harold Baines each hit three-run homers.

Charles Nagy (16-9) allowed five runs and eight hits in 5 2-3 innings, improving to 7-1 against Boston since Aug. 13, 1992. Paul Shuey pitched two innings for his sixth save.

Athletics 8, Devil Rays 3

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Jason Giambi, Randy Velarde and Olmedo Saenz homered as Oakland won its fifth straight.

Miguel Tejada had a two-run single during a five-run, third inning against Bobby Witt (7-13) for Oakland, which has won 13 of its last 18 road games.

Orioles 5, Mariners 4

BALTIMORE — Cal Ripken homered and drove in three runs, and B.J. Surhoff scored the winning run in the 10th inning on a throwing error by Jose Mesa (2-6) as Baltimore completed its first four-game sweep of Seattle.

Ripken hit a two-run homer in the second inning and a sacrifice fly in the sixth. He went 1-for-2 with two walks and needs 18 hits over his final 18 games to reach 3,000 career hits this season.

Tigers 3, White Sox 2

CHICAGO — Rob Fick had a three-run homer for his first hit of the season, and Dave Mlicki won his eighth straight start to lead Detroit.

Fick, who had not played since shoulder surgery in May, got his first hit in 12 at-bats since he was activated Sept. 8. It was his fourth homer in 36 career at-bats.

Mets 6, Rockies 5

DENVER — David Veres' wild pitch allowed Mike Piazza to score from third with the go-ahead run in the ninth inning, and the New York Mets beat the Colorado Rockies 6-5 Monday night for their eighth win in nine games.

With the score 5-4, John Olerud doubled off Veres (3-8) leading off the ninth, Piazza walked and Robin Ventura singled to right. Larry Walker threw out pinch-runner Melvin Mora at the plate, but Piazza scored on the wild pitch with one out and Darryl Hamilton batting.

Rickey Henderson hit a two-run homer for the Mets, who began the day two games behind first-place Atlanta in the NL East. New York remained 2 1/2 games ahead of Cincinnati in the wild-card race.

Astros 13, Phillies 2

HOUSTON — It only seems like an Astros pitcher gets his 20th win every night.

Mike Hampton joined teammate Jose Lima in the 20-win club, and the Houston Astros set a club record by winning their 11th straight game, 13-2 over the Philadelphia Phillies on Monday night.

Hampton (20-3) won his 11th consecutive decision since a June 24 loss to Cincinnati, allowing two runs and six hits in seven innings with six strikeouts.

Lima (20-7) got his 20th win Saturday against the Chicago Cubs. The last time teammates won 20 in the same season was in 1993, when Atlanta's Greg Maddux (20-10) and Tom Glavine (22-6) did it along with San Francisco's John Burkett (22-7) and Bill Swift (21-8).

Houston, which previously had six 10-game winning streaks, sent the Phillies to their 10th straight loss, their longest skid since an 11-gamer from June 24-July 4, 1997.

Brewers 4, Cardinals 3

ST. LOUIS — Rookie Kevin Barker hit a tiebreaking two-run homer in the fifth inning Monday night, leading the Milwaukee Brewers over the St. Louis Cardinals 4-3.

Mark McGwire strained his left groin and left after 4 1/2 innings. McGwire, second in the major leagues with 55 homers, grounded out in the first and walked in the third. St. Louis said he was day to day.

Rangers 8, Royals 4

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Roberto Kelly singled home the go-ahead run and the Texas Rangers scored four unearned runs in the 10th inning to beat the Kansas City Royals 8-4 Monday night.

Ivan Rodriguez went 2-for-5 with a two-run homer and three RBIs for the Rangers, who remained 5 1/2 games ahead of Oakland in the AL West.

With one out in the 10th, Juan Gonzalez reached on third baseman Joe Randa's throwing error. Todd Zeile singled off Jose Santiago (2-4) and Kelly followed with his RBI single.

Zeile scored when first baseman Mike Sweeney booted Lee Stevens' grounder for an error. Kelly came home on Brad Rigby's wild pitch and one out later Tom Goodwin added an RBI single.

Angels 6, Twins 5

MINNEAPOLIS — Mo Vaughn homered in his fourth straight game and drove in three runs as Anaheim won for the fifth time in six games. Vaughn had three hits to finish 8-for-11 with three homers and eight RBIs in the series.

Mike Magnante (5-2) pitched 2 2-3 scoreless innings of relief for the win. Shigetoshi Hasegawa got the final out for his first save.

U.N.C. Charlotte player loses fight against leukemia

■ North Carolina Charlotte basketball player Charles Hayward, 21, died Sunday after a two-year battle with leukemia.

By Joe Macenka
Associated Press

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Charles Hayward never got a chance to live up to his billing as the top basketball recruit ever at North Carolina Charlotte. Leukemia changed those plans, and now the disease has taken his life.

Hayward, 21, died late Sunday night at UNC Hospital in Chapel Hill, the school said Monday.

Hayward was admitted to the hospital in April and underwent a bone marrow transplant. The donor was Eric Hayward, his older brother and a former basketball player at Connecticut.

Complications arose in July when Hayward's body began rejecting the transplant, and his condition worsened considerably last Thursday, school officials said. Teammates, family members and coach Bobby Lutz spent the weekend visiting him in the hospital.

"We're all very deeply saddened by Charles' passing," Lutz said. "I'm personally thankful for the opportunity to have known him. He was one of the most courageous young men I've ever had the pleasure of being around, and he was an inspiration to all of us for the past two years and even in his passing."

The university planned a memorial service for Wednesday afternoon at Halton Arena, the 49ers' homecourt. A funeral is scheduled for Friday in Hayward's hometown of Alexandria, La.

When Hayward came out of Louisiana in 1997, he was the highest rated recruit ever to sign with the 49ers. But North Carolina Charlotte's coaching staff noticed in preseason drills that the 6-foot-8, 210-pound Hayward seemed constantly tired, so they sent him for a series of tests that showed the presence of acute myeloid leukemia.

Hayward missed his freshman season while undergoing a series of chemotherapy treatments. The 49ers, meantime, advanced to the NCAA tournament, dedicating their season to Hayward and keeping a plastic seat cover with his name and number 45 on their bench at games, symbolically reserving a spot for their teammate.

Hayward was declared in remission in April 1998 and cleared to rejoin his teammates. He celebrated by getting a tattoo of a wolf with the word "Survivor" inscribed on his right arm.

He regained the 70 or so pounds he lost during chemotherapy and spent countless hours in the weight room, bulking up to 220 pounds and working himself back into playing shape.

Hayward played 14 minutes in last year's season opener, scoring two points, grabbing four rebounds and blocking two shots. In the fourth game, Lutz increased Hayward's playing time to 24 minutes, and he responded with eight points, seven rebounds and a school freshman record six blocks.

But 10 games into the comeback, routine blood tests showed the leukemia had returned, and Hayward spent the Christmas holidays back in the hospital for more chemotherapy.

The sleeve on the bench returned, and the 49ers won the Conference USA championship to again advance to the NCAA tournament. But unlike the previous year, when Hayward occasionally felt well enough to join his teammates for games while watching in street clothes, he spent most of his remaining days in the hospital.

Hayward's final averages were 15.9 minutes, 2.9 points and 3.5 rebounds.

The university has set up a fund to help defray the medical expenses Hayward's family faces. Hayward's mother, Janice Harrell, lost her job because she spent so much time in North Carolina with her son.

Perhaps even more than Hall himself.

wouldn't be surprised to see him back there the rest of the season. He's a great player, but when you're a younger player you just need a good game under your belt. He's got that, and hopefully he can keep it the rest of the year."

If he does, though, he will be demanding of his teammates. The defense has played more solidly than the offense, but in Hall's eyes, there is still room for improvement.

"The secondary played well," Hall said Saturday. "We played a lot harder than we did last week, and I think we played hard. We need to step it up to another level. We're going to be coming into the Big Ten, so we need to step it up to another level."

UI changes release of campus crime stats

■ Data on crimes committed both on and off campus will now be released to students by the university.

By Chris Rasmussen
The Daily Iowan

Because of recent modifications to the Higher Education Act, the UI will be required to release information relating to graduation rates, financial aid and campus crime to enrolled and prospective students.

The Iowa state Board of Regents will review the guidelines set up by the U.S. Department of Education for the nation's universities to follow at its meeting today.

The guidelines were enacted to give current and future students a clearer picture of the UI campus and Iowa City. This will create changes in the way crime statistics are gathered and presented at the UI and at other universities, said Thomas Baker, associate counsel of student services.

The UI has been releasing some of this information on its own for a number of years, said Mark Warner, the director of UI student financial aid. "We've been releasing things like graduation rates for the last 10 years," he said.

The UI will continue to use Orientation to inform students, as well as allowing students to pick up information at certain locations on campus. However, the UI, as of yet, has no definite plan on how to get the information to all students, said Aron Rhoads, vice president for university relations.

The new policy requires that the UI now release statistics involving manslaughter, liquor violation, drug-related violations, weapon possession, and separate statistics
