■ The task force will investigate Waco, Clinton-Gore fund raising and Chinese spying, Republican leaders say.

By Laurie Kellman
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Senate Republicans Thursday created a task force to investigate how President Clinton's Justice Department handled inquiries into the Waco standoff, campaign finance abuses and nuclear espionage.

A key Democrat scoffed, questioning the Republicans' motives and saying he wouldn't participate.

Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott said the task force would be chaired by Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., and would focus on "what in the world is happening at the Justice Department? Why is there no justice at the Justice Department?"

Lott said the five-member task force would be bipartisan with two more Republicans and two Democrats in addition to Specter. But only one other Republican member, Sen. Charles Grassley of Iowa, was present at Thursday's announcement; no Democrats attended.

"This is a Republican task force. No Democrats have been involved," said Sen. Patrick Leahy of Vermont, the senior Democrat on the Judiciary Committee. "I don't intend to be part of a Republican-organized, partisan investigation."

Specter, famous for defending the "magic bullet theory" before the Warren Commission in its probe into the assassination of President Kennedy, already has moved forward on his probe. He said that his aides had traveled to Texas to preserve evidence collected from the siege and found that only one of two possibly inflammable tear gas canisters that federal agents only recently admitted firing. "Nobody knows" what happened to the other one, Specter said.

He also confirmed he had talked with Charles LaBella about leading the panel's investigation. LaBella is a former Justice Department prosecutor who publicly disagreed with Attorney General Janet Reno's decision to not have an outside, independent counsel investigate fund-raising abuses by the Clinton-Gore campaign in the 1996 election.

"There are a great, great many questions that are left unanswered," Specter said.

"Things just aren't right," agreed Grassley. Sen. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina will round out the Republican side of the panel, Specter said.

Specter said that, at the request of former Sen. John Danforth, he will hold off for 30 days before talking to witnesses of the government's siege of the Branch Davidian compound. Reno named Danforth to head an independent investigation of the government's use of force during the 1993 standoff in Waco. The siege ended in a fire and the deaths of about 80 Davidians.

In a letter to the Judiciary Committee last week, Danforth complained that Specter's investigators already had interviewed witnesses. "In the interest of avoiding even the appearance of a turf battle," Specter told reporters Thursday, he agreed to hold off on interviews.

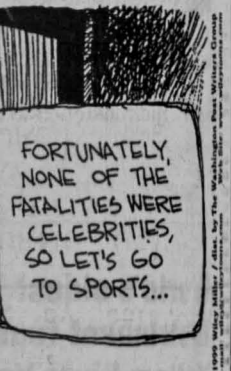

The probes were sparked by revelations last month that the FBI used potentially incendiary tear gas on the final day of the siege. The bureau had denied the use of such devices for years and failed to turn over to Congress videotapes that may have pointed to such use.

Supremacist gets death in killing

■ The second white defendant in the Texas dragging death will face lethal injection.

By C. Bryson Hull
Associated Press

BRYAN, Texas — A white supremacist was sentenced Thursday to die by lethal injection for dragging a black man to his death on a rural road.

Lawrence Russell Brewer is the second man to get the death penalty for the June 7, 1998, killing of James Byrd Jr., who was chained to the bumper of a pickup truck and dragged for three miles along a bumpy country road northeast of Jasper.

Byrd's sister, Mary Verrett, said her family was relieved.

"He had his day in court," she said. "The jurors said what we want to say to him."

Brewer, 32, joins John William King, who was convicted in February, on death row. A third white supremacist, 24-year-old Shawn Allen Berry, will be tried next month.

The Brazos County jury that convicted Brewer Monday deliberated for 14 hours Wednesday and Thursday before deciding on a punishment.

State District Judge Monte Lawlis pronounced the sentence as Brewer's mother, seated behind her son in the courtroom, dabbed her eye with a tissue.

Brewer's attorney, Doug Barlow, said his client "had resigned himself to this."

"He said to me, 'I'll be all right,'"

Community rallies to end sexual assault

■ The Rape Victim Advocacy Program calls for a 24-hour "truce" to raise awareness of rape.

By Robin Wright
The Daily Iowan

Members of the UI community congregated on the Pentacrest Thursday afternoon to raise consciousness and opposition to sexual assault with chant and a march.

The Rape Victim Advocacy Program sponsored a 24-hour "truce" during which no rape, sexual assault or violence should occur.

The group kicked off the day's events with a rally in front of the steps of the Old Capitol at 12:30 p.m. Community leaders, advocacy program volunteers, UI and Iowa City officials presented an itinerary that focused on the prevention of rape throughout the year and reviewed the organization's purpose.

Karen Kubby, an Iowa City City Councilor, cited statistics reporting that one-third of women and one-sixth of men experience sexual violence at some point in their lives. She spoke on behalf of Iowa City Mayor Ernie Lehman, who proclaimed Thursday to be a sexual-assault-free day.

Kubby also led the crowd in applause, cheering the advocacy program's serving 550 sexual abuse survivors and their significant others during the past year.

Advocacy program volunteers shared their experiences in assisting others. They expressed support for the cause by reading

Dole schools UI audience on her plans for education

■ Speaking on her version of the three R's, the Republican presidential candidate made an appearance at the UI.

By Dana Ritzmann
The Daily Iowan

Though she was approximately 15 minutes late hitting the stage, Republican presidential candidate Elizabeth Dole did make it to the UI Thursday to lecture on education.

Dole spoke about education to nearly 200 UI students, faculty and staff in the IMU R. Wayne Richey Ballroom. She highlighted the low math and science test scores of American high school students when compared with students from other industrial nations before making her promise to re-invent the American school system.

"Today, I want to share my philosophy for restoring our public schools for greatness," Dole said. "We have the power to brighten the deepening shadows in our classrooms — to rocket our education scores back into world leadership — by focusing on the same ideas of freedom, competition and the rights of the individuals that have made us the greatest nation on earth."

UI students are interested in education issues and proved that they are interested in politics, Dole said after the lecture.

"The audience was wonderful — very responsive," she said.

Dole had been scheduled to speak at the UI on April 22, but bad weather stranded her in Chicago's O'Hare Airport — which left 1,400 UI students, faculty and community members waiting for her. She ended up phoning in her speech to Macbride Auditorium.

Dole, who has worked as a teacher in Melrose, Mass. — where Wednesday she presented her education speech for the first time — talked about returning control to states and local school districts, restoring discipline in the classroom and respect for teachers, and reinforcing parents' control over their child's education.

"Return, restore, reinforce — simply put, these are my three R's," she said. "Only by implementing these three R's will we ensure that our children are learning the other three R's."

Introducing a "zero-tolerance policy for disruptive students" concerning drugs, weapons and disobedience was Dole's answer to restoring discipline in schools.

Much ado about Web noting

■ Online class notes may be free, but professors warn that the notes may not be a bargain.

By Steve Schmadeke
The Daily Iowan

Oran Wolf is feeling pretty good about life. At 27, he already has had the success that most students can only dream about — and it has college professors across the country up in arms.

Two weeks ago, Wolf launched a Web site called studentu.com that provides free, online lecture notes for 109 colleges across the country, setting off a wave of controversy and landing him on the front page of the New York Times.

Interviews on "Good Morning America," "The Today Show" and MSNBC, as well as articles in papers across the country, questioned whether the site would promote student laziness or merely provide a study aid.

The immediate impact of all this media attention has been an economic windfall for Wolf.

"We're doing better than expected," he said in a telephone interview from his office at Study-Free, the Houston-based company he created. "We're not having a problem finding advertisers."

Study-Free pays students up to $300 a semester to take class notes and post them on the Internet so that they are available 24 hours, Wolf said. Note-takers have been hired for 47 UI classes.

They are doing so well that other businesses selling class notes will soon be obsolete or at least incorporated into an online service such as studentu.com, he said.

"It's inevitable that these shops are going to close down," Wolf said. "Why would anyone pay $30 for it if they can get them for free?"

Study-Free is able to provide the notes online for free because it receives advertising revenue.

But I-Notes, a local business that sells lecture notes, has not suffered the economic drop Wolf spoke of, said Jim Chung, the manager of the enterprise.

"It's a little slow, but it always is at the beginning of the semester," he said. "We haven't been affected at all."

But this new dimension to the note-taking business has some UI professors

Bono teams up with pope for debt relief

CASTEL GANDOLFO, Italy (AP) — U2 singer Bono, Quincy Jones and Bob Geldof joined Pope John Paul II Thursday to support his call for canceling the debts of the world's poorest countries.

The three met with the pope for 20 minutes at his residence outside Rome. He welcomed them as delegates of the group known as Jubilee 2000, which is seeking the cancellation of debts as a fitting gesture to mark the new year.

The pope speaks out frequently on the issue, calling for at least a substantial reduction in the debt burden facing developing countries.

'Sable in the Raw' skins Playboy

NEW YORK (AP) — Playboy magazine will have to do some retouching for an upcoming issue featuring the wrestler Sable.

U.S. District Judge Loretta Preska on Wednesday said the Oct. 19 edition, which features nude pictures of Rena Mero, the ex-World Wrestling Federation women's champion, infringes on WWF trademark rights.

An attorney for the WWF, Terrence Budd, said the magazine headline — "The woman you loved as Sable in the Raw" — was an obvious reference to the WWF's trademarked and copyrighted "Raw" cable television program.

A lawyer for Playboy said the judge's decision means the magazine will have to reprint 500,000 copies.

"We were very disappointed with the judge's ruling," Playboy lawyer David Francescani said.

Fisher, Buttafuoco forgive, if not forget

NEW YORK (AP) — Amy Fisher says she has reached a sense of peace with Mary Jo Buttafuoco, the woman she shot in the head in a jealous rage seven years ago.

"She's a very nice person," Fisher said of Buttafuoco during an interview on CNN's "Larry King Live" Wednesday.

She also called Buttafuoco, who has publicly forgiven Fisher and was instrumental in getting her paroled from prison this year, an "amazing" woman.

"I'm grateful for what she did. Words can't express it," said Fisher, now 24.

Seven years ago, she was dubbed the "Long Island Lolita" when she shot Buttafuoco, the wife of her then-lover, Joey Buttafuoco. She was recently released from jail.

"I actually was thinking about writing a book. If they want to know what I have to say, I will ... it would be interesting," she said.

Eco-activist challenges community

■ The youngest-ever president of the Sierra Club, says the future of environmentalism is now.

By Lisa Hemann
The Daily Iowan

The first time Adam Werbach, former president of the Sierra Club, asked the crowd to clap its hands, only a few people responded.

"OK, let's try this again," he said. "If you're happy, and you know it, clap your hands."

This time more responded, clapping twice to finish the rhyme. "Environmentalists don't laugh enough," he said.

Werbach, speaking to approximately 200 audience members in Macbride Auditorium Thursday night as a part of the UI Lecture Series, didn't talk about specific environmental issues. Instead, he talked about finding the motivation to change.

"How do we move conversation from debate about recycling to debate about our future," he said.

Werbach, 26, was elected three years ago to be the 46th president of the Sierra Club, making him the youngest president of the oldest and largest grassroots environmental organization in America.

Wearing a brown blazer and jeans, Werbach told jokes and stories about when he was president of the organization.

"I was really expecting to come and hear a real cut-and-dried lecture," UI junior Amy Blair said. "But he made it very entertaining and still got his points across."

Being angry about environmental problems is not as effective as being optimistic, Werbach said.

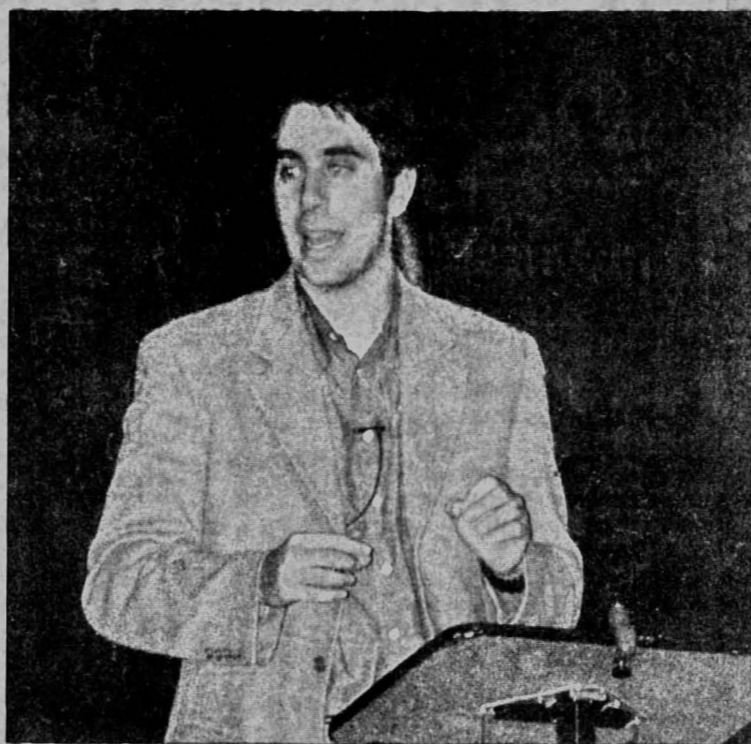

"We've lost the faith that tomorrow, the next day or 10 years from now will get better," he said.

Werbach asked the audience several questions throughout the speech, making points out of their answers.

"He did a great job of mixing political and environmental views, and keeping the audience involved," said Erin Crawford, a UI junior and the media director for the Lecture Committee. "It wasn't a canned speech — it was very fresh."

Werbach said the main challenge was to get the community involved.

"We're going to need a new branch of activism that goes beyond personal change," he said. "The challenge is how do we figure out how to take the power we do have and wield it." Telling people to change how they act toward nature is not enough, Werbach said. They need to get outside and see everything nature has to offer so people will want to preserve the environment. "Tomorrow is in our hands now," he said.

UI begins search for new librarian

■ The candidates must have a knowledge of traditional library roles and electronic media, officials say.

By Meg Neary
The Daily Iowan

The search to find a new UI librarian is under way to fill the position that will be left vacant at the end of this semester.

Current UI Librarian Sheila Creth, who has held the position since January 1986, is leaving in December to do consulting work, said Barbara Eckstein, a UI associate professor of English.

A search committee, headed by Eckstein, will review applicants for first consideration until Sept. 30, said Carol Hughes, a UI libraries administrator.

The number of applicants to date is unavailable because it is still early in the search, said Kim Carter, a secretary in the Office of the Provost.

"I think that in this next month, we'll see a rapid rise in the application pool," Hughes said.

The UI librarian has a multitude of responsibilities, Eckstein said; the selected applicant will be in charge of all UI libraries, with the exception of the law library.

Applicants should have a broad range of skills, she said, including experience in fostering faculty, staff and student relations, an understanding of new technologies, budgetary and fund-raising techniques and tremendous librarian experience.

The UI prefers that applicants have a M.L.S. or Ph.D. in an appropriate subject or the equivalent experience.

"We need someone with a vision of what a top research library should be," Eckstein said.

A successful UI librarian also should be able to decide what is in the best interest of the academic community and the state, Hughes said.

"We need someone who knows what will help us grow," she said.

A search committee will conduct personal interviews with each candidate and make recommendations to the Office of the Provost, which will make the final decision.

"We're looking for leadership ability, a vision for the library and the skills to implement that vision," said Jon Whitmore, the UI provost.

Hiring a new UI librarian is one of Whitmore's initiatives for the 1999-00 school year.

Whitmore said the new librarian should have both an understanding of the traditional role of a library, which includes collecting and supplying information, and the newer role of using electronic media to access information located in other places.

"We're all thinking hard of people whose judgments we trust to nominate candidates, even if they can't be on the search committee," Hughes said.

The new UI librarian should begin work in January, Eckstein said.

A room of one's own isn't enough

Some new UI students are still adjusting to life here, away from friends and family.

By Anne Huyck
The Daily Iowan

When students packed up their belongings to come to the UI this fall, many could not bring along the things they wanted most — friends and family.

For Hae Won Lee, a UI junior, home is thousands of miles away, in Seoul, South Korea. Every year, when she leaves home to come to school, she cannot help but get a little homesick.

"I miss my friends, the food, just the whole culture," Lee said. "I spend my summers there, then when I get here it is sad at first."

Feeling homesick is normal, said Julie Corkery, an assistant director of University Counseling Service.

"Early in the fall, we see several students with concerns about homesickness and problems adjusting," she said. "They are leaving their family and going to a new place. It's hard for some people to learn their way around and meet new people."

While Corkery assures students that sadness and anxiety are normal while attending college, UI freshman Cathy Miller doesn't care.

"I only cared that it was happening to me," said Miller, a native of Aurora, Ill.

For the first two weeks of classes, she said she was ready to pack up and leave.

"It was horrible. I wanted to go home so badly," Miller said. "I just sat in my room and cried, waiting for someone to call me. I hated it here."

But things got better for her. "Joining the Greek system and getting closer to the people I met made me feel better," Miller said. "I still miss my mom and my favorite restaurant, but it got more fun here."

She is going home to this weekend, then will fly to Boston to visit her brother.

"I can't wait. I am going to see people and go to my favorite restaurant, La Cabana," Miller said.

Lee is starting to feel better, also. She says she distracts herself by exercising and studying when she feels sad.

"I try to look at the good sides of things," she said. "I enjoy the laid-back atmosphere here and the fall weather."

Students should keep themselves busy to combat homesickness, Corkery said.

UI freshman Steve Marrs hopes that going home to Crystal Lake, Ill., this weekend will make him feel better.

"I never used e-mail before, but now I use it three times a day," he said. "I stay in touch with everyone, but it will be good to actually see people."

Marrs said he likes it here and thinks everything will turn out for the better.

"It's just the little things here: The food is worse, the bathrooms are more questionable," he said.

For those who are still miserable after two or three more months, Corkery recommends counseling.

"You have to give yourself time to adjust," she said. "Homesickness is normal, but sometimes, it is more than that, and Iowa is not the best place for those students."

Hot times in Paducah

A Kentucky community worries about the effects of a uranium plant.

By James Prichard
Associated Press

PADUCAH, Ky. — The way the employees tell it, the Paducah Gaseous Diffusion Plant sometimes operated as if Homer Simpson were running the place. Except that what happened there wasn't funny.

Workers used to wipe "green salt" off the plant lunch tables, fully aware it was a radioactive byproduct of the plant's main task — enriching uranium for use as fuel in nuclear reactors.

They would bury truckloads of uranium shavings that ignited and burned upon being exposed to the air. They would dump thousands of barrels filled with radioactive contaminants into ponds and bury them in the ground. All the while, they were told they were working with materials that were "safe enough to eat."

Now the employees and many other people in Paducah fear they are dying because of what happened at the 47-year-old plant, McCracken County's biggest source of jobs.

Chris Naas, a heavy-equipment operator who has worked at the plant for 25 years, told Senate investigators this week that he was taken off a job in 1974 after being told he was "hot" — meaning, he assumed, that he had been exposed to too much radiation.

Naas said his father turned up "hot" on several occasions during the 20 years he worked at the plant.

"Today, he has a form of terminal cancer — lymphoma. We will never know what was the cause," Naas said. "My question is: Will I turn up the same, and what recourse will I have?"

In June, three plant employees filed a federal lawsuit alleging that workers unwittingly were exposed to plutonium and other highly toxic substances from 1953 to 1976. The lawsuit is sealed.

The Energy Department, which owns the plant and is overseeing a $1 billion cleanup, later acknowledged that 103,000 tons of recycled uranium containing a total of 12 ounces of plutonium were handled in Paducah during the period.

Plutonium is much more potent than uranium — it can cause cancer if ingested in quantities as small as one-millionth of an ounce. The Energy Department is investigating why workers were exposed to plutonium and whether contractors who operated the plant covered it up.

"We were told that the uranium substances we were working with were safe and posed no threat to our health, or to the health of our families," Garland "Bud" Jenkins, who worked there for 30 years, told a House committee Wednesday in Washington. "We were even told the materials were safe enough to eat."

Study finds high radon levels in Iowa

IOWA CITY (AP) — A study has detected high radon levels in Iowa, a UI researcher says.

The report provides the foundation for a study, due out next year, that connects outdoor radon with indoor radon levels. Similar radon levels were found in Minnesota.

Researchers at Iowa State University in Ames, Minn., were partners in the study.

Iowa was chosen because of the highest indoor radon concentration of any state, said William A. Miller, a UI associate research professor of preventive medicine and mental health.

No big surprise; Clinton vetoes GOP tax bill

The president ends a months-long dance.

By Terence Hunt
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton vetoed the Republicans' $792 billion tax cut bill Thursday, calling it "too big, too bloated" — apparently dooming any chances for sweeping tax reduction this year. Republicans fumed that Clinton "has stolen this tax cut from working American families."

With his signature in a Rose Garden ceremony, Clinton guaranteed an election-year tax argument between Republicans and Democrats as they fight for control of the White House and Congress.

"At a time when America is moving in the right direction," the president said, "this bill would turn us back to the failed policies of the past." Republicans shot back that taxes are too high and that Americans deserve a break. House Speaker Dennis Hastert, R-Ill., said it was "kind of a sad day."

Clinton signed the veto message on a wooden desk on a warm, sunny autumn morning, before an audience of Cabinet members, White House staff and Democratic allies from health and minority groups. The Marine Band's brass quintet entertained the crowd with George Gershwin's "Summertime" and other melodies.

Clinton's veto ceremony was the final act in a months-long political drama. The Republican-controlled Congress completed action on the tax bill on Aug. 5 but did not send it to Clinton for his promised veto, using the time to try to rally support. But with Americans enjoying economic prosperity, the GOP publicity blitz failed to produce a groundswell of voter support.

Chiding Republicans, Clinton said that "many in Congress seem ready to throw in the towel" after his veto. "That would be a disservice to the American people. They sent us all here to get things done." He challenged Congress not to go home until it reaches agreements with the White House on Social Security, Medicare, debt reduction and education.

"If we can work together to meet these objectives," he said, "we can also work together to pass tax relief we can afford."

After months of White House warnings, there was no suspense about Clinton's veto, the 26th of his presidency. With Congress struggling to adjourn by Oct. 29, it appeared highly unlikely that Republicans would accept Clinton's suggestion to send him a smaller tax bill, in the $300 billion range that he had proposed.

NASA meets Hitchcock: The orbiter vanishes

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — A $125 million NASA spacecraft that had traveled 416 million miles to Mars vanished Thursday as it was about to go into orbit around the Red Planet. Space officials fear that it has been destroyed.

It was the second time in six years that a NASA spaceship was lost just as it reached Mars.

The Mars Climate Orbiter, on a mission to study the planet's weather and look for signs of water, apparently flew too close to the Martian atmosphere and broke apart or burned up, the space agency said.

Human or software error was probably to blame. NASA said mechanical problems were ruled out.

The apparent loss, after the $1 billion Mars Observer probe disappeared in 1993, comes as Congress is threatening to cut a large portion of NASA's space exploration budget and the agency is trying to show that it can design "faster, cheaper and better" missions.

NASA officials said failures are to be expected, because probes are now being launched every 26 months.

He said the notes service ages students not to pay attention to class. The Web site contains notes for his class, Q: Human Destiny.

And, Holstein said, he thought that paying students to take notes of his class was offensive and possibly illegal.

UI General Counsel Mark S. said that because the student is paraphrasing the lecturer's words, there are no copyright laws that apply on the service. But he said that alternative solutions have been discussed, such as required attendance, for class participation and ex-

Three ways to beat the high cost of college.

1. The Montgomery GI Bill
2. Student loan repayment
3. Part-time income

The Army Reserve Alternate Training Program is a smart way to pay for college. First, if you qualify, the Montgomery GI Bill can provide you with over $9,000 for current college expenses or approved vo/tech training.

Second, if you have or obtain a qualified student loan not in default, you may get it paid off at the rate of 15% per year or $1,500, whichever is greater, up to a maximum of $10,000. Selected military skills can double that maximum.

Third, you can earn part-time money in college, and here's how it works: One summer you take Basic Training, and the next summer you receive skill training at an Army school. You'll earn over $2,000 for Basic and even more for skill training. Then you'll attend monthly meetings at an Army Reserve unit near your college, usually one weekend a month plus two weeks a year. You'll be paid over $118 a weekend to start. It's worth thinking about. Give us a call:

STATE BRIEF

Study finds high radon levels in Iowa

IOWA CITY (AP) — A two-year study has detected high radon levels in Iowa, a UI researcher says. The report provides the foundation for a study, due out later this year, that connects outdoor levels of the invisible gas to lung cancer. Similar radon levels were detected in Minnesota. Researchers at Iowa and St. John's University in Collegeville, Minn., were partners in the study. Iowa was chosen because it has the highest indoor radon concentration of any state, said William Field, an UI associate research scientist in preventive medicine and environmental health.

The Environmental Protection Agency estimates the average outdoor level at 0.4 pCi/L per liter, a unit of measurement of radioactive concentration. Field said the state average from 111 locations in Iowa was twice the national average. In Minnesota, where researchers sampled 64 locations, radon levels averaged 0.6 to more than 1.5 pCi/L per liter. In the Midwest, radon comes primarily from glacial deposits that were left here more than 10,000 years ago. It rises from the ground and can concentrate in low-lying areas until stirred up by wind. Radon decays into solid particles that can either be directly inhaled or become attached to dust and inhaled into the lungs.

poetry in which butterflies symbolized a rape survivor who "found new color to add to their wings." Emily, a two-year volunteer for the advocacy program, recalled the images about women she had as a child. "Growing up," she said, "I had the image that women were inferior to men. Volunteering at RVAP has been, to me, a way of saying, 'No, we are not inferior.'" Another volunteer, Kevin, noted that he was one of a small number of men to become involved in the cause. "Personally, it's high time for men to use their power in a positive way," he said. "They can do this by becoming part of the solution instead of part of the problem." The last names of the volunteers were not released because of confidentiality. Both volunteers concluded their remarks by inviting rally attendees to become active in their opposition to sexual assault by serving as volunteers at the advocacy program. There were a few males in the crowd besides Kevin, but they were far outnumbered by females. UI graduate student Scott Fitzgerald carried a sign that stated: "We need more men against rape." He said, "In order to end sexual assault, men need to take a stand and realize that this isn't just a women's issue." Monique DiCarlo, the director of the Women's Resource and Action Center, outlined ways in which a wide variety of community members could assist in the prevention of rape. "If you're a student, use your rhetoric assignments to learn about laws about rape and how these laws affect victims," she said. "If you're a statistics professor, teach your students the statistics of women raped. If you're a member of the media, ask how to cover these issues. If you plan parties for fraternities or sororities, how do you ensure that members will be safe at these parties?" Later on Thursday, approximately 50 people gathered on the Pedestrian Mall to attend Singing Out Loud!, an event of songs and skits presented by local performers to raise rape awareness. The event was organized to "take back the night" and to celebrate the freedom from violence, said Liz Fitzgerald, the advocacy program's director of education.

Barlow said. Approximately an hour into their discussion Thursday, jurors asked to see photos of Brewer's tattoos, which include a burning cross, SS lightning bolts and Ku Klux Klan symbols. They also wanted a photo of Brewer with his family. The jury Wednesday reviewed some of Brewer's letters and a portion of his testimony that described events immediately preceding Byrd's death. In his closing argument Wednesday, District Attorney Guy James Gray said the facts of the slaying showed Brewer is a continuing danger and should be condemned. "The degree of pain they were willing to inflict on this man is an indication of the degree of racial commitment," Gray said. A defense attorney argued that Brewer, a convicted burglar, had no history of violence in prison and should get a life term.

Dole also wants to return flexibility to local school districts, teachers, administrators and parents in deciding how federal money is spent, as long as they reach goals for student achievement. "You can't manage schools by remote control from Washington," she said, after which the audience applauded. After Dole's 20-minute speech, students had the chance to talk to the presidential candidate. "I told her that it was good to hear her view on education," said Jill Beauregard, a UI junior, who had previously met Dole at the Republican straw poll in August. "She presented some new plans for education, which I think would be very progressive," said Mary Ramsey, a UI alumna. Jennie Gaunt, resident field manager for Students For Dole, said that though the lecture was planned at the last minute, she was happy with the turnout. "I think she is really charismatic, and I'm really excited that a woman is running for president," she said. Not all attendants were Dole supporters. "I didn't agree with her policy on education," said Sean Dunjai, a UI junior. "She's got some good thoughts, but they are unrealistic." He came into the lecture undecided, Dunjai said, and he is now leaning away from Dole and more toward George W. Bush. "I don't know if she has what it takes to run the nation," he said. DI reporter Dana Ritzmann can be reached at: dana.ritzmann@gmx.net

He said the notes service encourages students not to pay attention if they do come to class. The Web site contains notes for his class Quest for Human Destiny. And, Holstein said, he thought that paying students to take notes of his class was offensive and possibly illegal. UI General Counsel Mark Schantz said that because the student is paraphrasing the lecturer's words, there are no copyright laws that bear on the service. But he said alternative solutions have been discussed, such as required attendance, a grade for class participation and exclusion of people not registered for the class. Still, some professors, such as Eugene Spaziani of biology, said Wolf's company should share whatever profit it makes with the affected university departments, because the notes cover the departments' intellectual property. The biology department is in the planning stages of distributing the class notes for free to students in order to counteract the Web site, Spaziani said. Other professors are more concerned about the quality of the notes. "I'd caution students not to trust some other student whom you don't know and you don't know what grade they're getting to help you pass the class," said Cary Covington, an associate professor of political science. Wolf said he realized quality control was an issue but said his staff of seven is working to put a ratings system on the site so that students could vote on how good the notes were. Note-takers who consistently received poor ratings would be fired, he said. Other UI professors were a bit amused that their notes could be viewed by anyone, anywhere in the world. "They could have saved themselves a lot of trouble by putting a link to my (class home) page," said Steven Bruell, the chairman of the computer science department. Wyatt Hadley, a UI senior, said that although the site was a "good deal," it would not keep him from going to class. "Personally, I always go to class," he said. But it would be good to have as a study aid to supplement his own notes, he said. DI reporter Steve Schmadeke can be reached at: steven-schmadeke@uiowa.edu

Buchanan nomination would hurt Reform Party

While the first stage of next year's presidential election is still a ways off, parties and their potential nominees have revved up their political machines in an attempt to determine whose campaign sounds the strongest. An eager and passionate Pat Buchanan, having already heard the sound of defeat from the Republican side, is courting a second option: riding to victory with the fledgling Reform Party. However, allowing Buchanan such a ride next year could have an effect completely contrary to what the young party desires.

With or without Buchanan, the 2000 election does not look bright for the Reform Party. Realists aren't expecting a win; they are simply hoping for a strong showing. If its 2000 candidate does well enough, the party would be guaranteed a substantial sum of money for the 2004 nominee. Some think Jesse Ventura or Ross Perot (depending on which one is in charge) would then use the funds in a presidential bid of his own.

But regardless of its 2004 candidate, if the Reform Party wants to become a major political player, it will need the financial support.

Buchanan seems to have a greater potential to send the party down in flames, however, than he does to build the support it needs. While he brings some desired aspects to the party's mission (name recognition, agreement on trade issues), there are others who have the same qualities and fit into every issue of the Reform Party's platform, not just a select few.

This is why accepting Buchanan could backfire. While such a run would bring the Reform Party the votes of his supporters, it could very easily drive away the votes of its own supporters.

Buchanan's conservative social values contrast sharply with the beliefs of many party members. For instance, the Reform Party supports a woman's right to choose on abortion, while Buchanan is staunchly opposed to abortion. In addition, Buchanan's level of tolerance for diversity is simply much too low to sit well with Reform supporters. According to their Constitutional Principles, party members "celebrate our heritage of individual liberty, recognizing that one of our greatest strengths is our diversity; and we will foster tolerance of the customs, beliefs and private actions of all persons which do not infringe upon the rights of others."

Buchanan's stated views are quite different. In his September 1993 speech to the Christian Coalition, he first described multiculturalism as "an across-the-board assault on our Anglo-American heritage." Buchanan then claimed that "our culture is superior. Our culture is superior because our religion is Christianity, and that is the truth that makes men free."

These are hardly the remarks of a man who will "foster tolerance." Nor are they the remarks of man who can successfully lead the Reform Party.

U.S. should handle Arab/Israeli conflict delicately

The Arab/Israeli conflict has long seemed a fact of life — one of those difficult problems that will never go away. One bright light is the beginning of final status negotiations.

In the history of Arab/Israeli negotiation, the easy questions are often tackled first, and the hard questions are continually pushed off into the nebulous future.

Finally, some of the hard questions may at least be addressed, even if they can't be solved. These include whether Palestinian refugees will be allowed to return to their ancestral homes, or even if they can at least return to another part of Palestine or Israel, whether Palestine will be an independent state and be allowed to have an army, what will happen to Jewish citizens who have settled in what may become Palestine and, perhaps the most difficult question of all, Jerusalem.

This city, which is so important in all three of the major monotheistic religions — Judaism, Christianity and Islam — is an extremely sensitive area of dispute. Israel claims it as its undivided capital. The Palestinians claim East Jerusalem for their future capital. In the view of some European countries, it should be an international enclave.

Discussion of the status of Jerusalem is also controversial in the United States. Last week, a dispute erupted over a Disney exhibit that portrayed Jerusalem as the political capital of Israel. The "Millennium Village" at Walt Disney World's Epcot Center will contain an Israel Pavilion.

After Arab and Moslem groups complained, heads of state on both sides of the issue weighed in on the controversy. The Arab League and Disney's Saudi investors protested. The United Arab Emirates threatened a Disney boycott, and Israeli Prime Minister Ehud Barak expressed dismay when Disney responded by announcing that it would remove references to Jerusalem as Israel's capital.

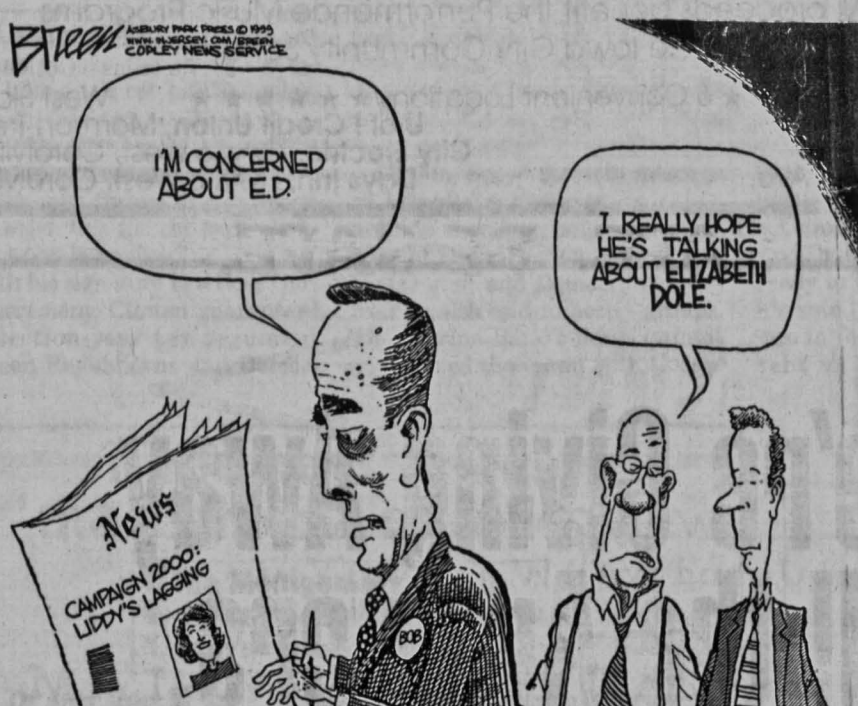

That wasn't the only indication last week of how sensitive the issue is. A poll showed that though 68 percent of Palestinians in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip are in favor of the peace process, more than 93 percent would oppose making Jerusalem the Israeli capital — even if that was the only issue standing in the way of a deal with Israel.

At the same time, Israeli groups claim that Jerusalem is far more important to Jews than it is to Arabs. They point to the fact that Jews face Jerusalem when they pray, while Arabs face Mecca.

The conflict is very bitter, and a solution that will satisfy everyone seems impossible. The United States should keep this in mind and absolutely refuse to take any position on the issue. During his first presidential campaign, Clinton said Jerusalem should be Israel's capital, and many politicians, including his wife, have taken the same position. In July, Congress passed a resolution that would have moved the American Embassy in Israel, currently in Tel Aviv, to Jerusalem, effectively recognizing Jerusalem as the capital city.

Fortunately, Clinton changed his earlier tune and refused to do this, claiming that it would be harmful to national security. The issue is very sensitive, and U.S. involvement would only make things worse. Hopefully, politicians who observed the Disney controversy last week will come to the same conclusion.

Crocodile hunter reminds us of the writhing, clawing beauty of nature

In life, you learn to appreciate the important things. Flowers. Birdies. Occasional bursts of total happiness. Grown men in tight khaki shorts jabbing at crocodiles.

What the...? Thanks to Aussie Steve and his Yankee wife, we are able to witness this kind of event almost daily. God love 'im, that wacky Crocodile Hunter.

The first time someone mentioned this goofball to me, I had no idea what she was talking about. Kind of like in high school, when someone sold you an elevator pass, ensuring you a quick detour of the crowded staircases. Only too late did you realize your school didn't even have an elevator. In fact, it was a one-floor building. Duh.

But, wounded pride aside, I soon discovered that this man, this grown, adult man, was for real. And truly, there is nothing more life-affirming than seeing him chase after the week's featured animal, yelling excitedly at his crew to follow him in pursuit. Here's a guy who is obviously in love with his work.

When I finally saw him in as close as you can get to the flesh on TV, it was indeed an experience. That first show I saw involved snakes, and I remember staring, agape, as he yelled, "There's one," with that irrepressible Australian accent and went bounding off into the desert. I'm not sure what kind of eagle vision this man has, but his eyes must be sharp, because he had waved non-committally to some spot on the horizon.

Unencumbered by 400 pounds of recording equipment, and fueled by the anticipatory excitement of tangling with a highly poisonous snake, he easily out-distanced his crew. They wisely cut for a station break. I always wonder if, during the commercial, all the crew members nimbly jump into a Land Rover and drive after Steve. Then, with their pre-caged snake, they quickly set up for the next shot while one guy harasses the snake, and someone else runs around misting everyone to make the "chase" seem all the more realistic. Whaddya mean, it probably isn't filmed live? Don't rain on my parade, damnit.

But when the show resumed, there was the Croc Hunter, holding a huge, writhing snake and grinning ecstatically. Steve was grinning ecstatically, that is; the snake was doing its best to bite the crap out of Steve. And really, all Steve was trying to do was tell people what a "beautiful animal" it was, so raking him with its razor sharp fangs would have really been an overreaction on the snake's part. Just watching Steve made me want to go root around in the woods, maybe overturn a log or two, really get back to nature. But I settled for watching The Edge.

After careful, repeated viewings, I have come to the logical conclusion that this man is completely insane. But he has a huge cult following, at least on this campus. A lot of folks I know plan their day around when "Crocodile Hunter" is scheduled. For some, this may be due to a semi-voyeuristic lean of their personalities. I'm not sure what kind of time delay the show functions under, but I know that many people wait with baited breath to see this man get eaten. Or at least mauled.

Yes, I'm sure a good mauling would satisfy many people's blood lust. And, because it's Steve, it would have to happen in a truly Steve-like manner. With sharks, he's fine. Man-eating gators, no problem. But it would be the split second that he turned his back on that ordinary looking Ruby-Throated Hummingbird that disaster would strike.

LEAH KIND

Within seconds, a swarm of the little buggers would be upon him, gouging him mercilessly with their sharp little beaks. Sure, they use those snouts to "gather pollen from flowers," but in their natural territories, there are at least 20 unattributed disappearances every year. Coincidence? I think not.

And the man really, honestly, from the bottom of his Australian heart, loves all these critters, no matter how slimy, dangerous or totally unphotogenic they are. He uses the word "beautiful" to describe an animal anywhere from 90 to 238 times a show. Can't you just picture him and his wife going out for a romantic night on the town, her dressed in a fashionable cocktail dress, him in his khakis? "Love, you look absolutely... spiffy? Nice? Damn, what's the word I'm looking for?" He never tires of lauding the particular traits of any creature. If a pair of rabid weasels were engaged in a death-squirm in his shorts, I believe he would launch into a discourse on their playful natures. Today, he and his wife went on a "camel muster." Maybe tomorrow he'll go on a "musk ox assembly" or a "piranha convention." It's all so exciting.

Now, if you pay close attention, you'll notice that the "Crocodile Hunter" episodes you see on Animal Planet are all from a few years back. There is an underground rumor that some irate animal star has in fact, consumed Steve, but I don't believe it. That cute baby daughter that he dangled precariously over a bear den is probably just taking some time to learn the ropes from dad. So, think of him planning new escapades somewhere; do NOT let the image of a python burping khaki or a Komodo Dragon wearing size 11 boots enter your mind.

If you must, picture Steve in a better place — a happy Utopian society, surrounded by all of his "beautiful animals." I know I do.

Quake leaves Taipei city of leaning towers

Shoddy construction on the lower floors may have contributed to the quake casualties.

By Annie Huang
Associated Press

TAIPEI, Taiwan — They didn't pancake or even topple over. Many of Taiwan's high-rise buildings rocked by a powerful earthquake simply leaned, hanging precariously in space at improbable angles and curves.

Why? Weak, shoddy construction at the bottom but enough stout support overall to prevent the total collapse that mark many tragic earthquakes, some experts say.

"This was built strong," said American rescuer James Walsh, pointing to solid, steel bars protruding from one of Taiwan's leaning towers.

The bottom four floors of the 16-story apartment building in the town of Toliu had been compressed into 10 feet of rubble, but the structure above remained standing, dangling at a 45-degree angle.

Quake experts say building designs, the enforcement of construction codes and the quality of land that buildings rest upon all likely contributed to the way the structures were damaged in the magnitude-7.6 earthquake that struck Taiwan Tuesday.

Taiwan's Disaster Management Center said Thursday night that 2,109 people had been killed, 7,800 injured and 1,844 remained unaccounted for, including those buried under rubble and landslides.

Prosecutors also announced the arrest of a contractor responsible for three buildings that collapsed, burying approximately 100 people. The buildings had been made with substandard steel rods, and authorities found crumpled vegetable oil cans had been used in place of bricks.

A total of 2,268 people have been rescued since the quake struck, many of them extracted from more than 6,000 totally destroyed housing units across the island, the disaster center said.

Engineers and seismologists from around the world are flying to Taiwan to find out why some buildings failed while others survived.

"It appears that in many cases in Taiwan, the ground floor of buildings was very weak structurally because there was a garage or a

Scott, famous for Patton, dead at 71

George C. Scott refused the Oscar for his role as the general.

By Cynthia L. Webb
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — George C. Scott, the forbidding-looking, gravel-voiced actor who turned in an Oscar-winning performance as the profane and patriotic Gen. George S. Patton then declined the honor, has died at 71.

Scott died Wednesday of a ruptured abdominal aortic aneurysm at his home, 40 miles northwest of Los Angeles.

With his imperious presence, curled lip, animated eyebrows and the broken-nose profile of a Roman consul, Scott seemed born to play the role of the legendary World War II general in Patton in 1970.

His memorable roles also included Gen. Buck Turgidson, the fatuous blowhard in Stanley Kubrick's Dr. Strangelove; the pool-hall bookie who menaces Paul Newman in The Hustler; the high-powered ringer who worked to destroy small-town lawyer James Stewart in Anatomy of a Murder; and the dedicated doctor surrounded by incompetence in The Hospital.

"He made every actor proud to say that they were in the same profession," said actor Jack Lemmon.

Scott dismissed moviemaking as tedious and said he only made films for the money. "I have to work in the theater to stay sane," he once said. "You can attack the stage fresh every night."

He made his Broadway debut in Comes a Day in 1958, quickly earning his first of four Tony nominations. The others were for The Andersonville Trial in 1959, Uncle Vanya in 1974 and Death of a Salesman in 1975.

Patton

He also won three Emmys — the most recent last year as a supporting actor in a remake of 12 Angry Men — and was nominated for four Oscars.

It was the award he wouldn't accept, the Oscar for Patton, that cemented his reputation as a Hollywood outsider.

He had been nominated for Anatomy of a Murder in 1959 and said nothing about it. But then he tried to decline the nomination for The Hustler in 1962, calling the Academy Awards a meaningless popularity contest.

When he was nominated for Patton, he again tried to drop out, dismissing the awards as a "meat parade."

"Oh my God!" Oscar presenter Goldie Hawm exclaimed that night. "The winner is George C. Scott!" As the film collected seven Academy Awards, Scott spent the evening watching hockey.

Despite his very public snub, Scott was nominated the following year for The Hospital. He didn't win.

In private life, Scott was a bellicose drinker whose nose was broken five times in four barroom brawls and one mugging. He was married five times — twice to actress Colleen Dewhurst.

Florida A&M University tense after 2 bombs

Many fear a racist bomber has targeted their school.

By David Royce
Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Two apparently racist pipe bombings at predominantly black Florida A&M University have spread fear on campus and prompted school administrators to add security cameras and dozens of uniformed police officers.

Classes were mostly full, and students milled about the quadrangle Thursday, one day after the second pipe bomb exploded. Despite the security measures, many were uneasy.

"Telling a freshman to not be afraid as they lay their head down for the night is something I can't see," said Nekeisha Briggs, a senior from New York City.

Neither pipe bomb caused significant damage, but an anonymous call to a Tallahassee television station threatening that the blast was "just the beginning" has many fearing that a racist serial bomber is on the loose.

"It's playing with the very life of our university," said Frederick Humphries, president of the 12,000-student school.

Investigators wouldn't say Thursday if they have any suspects or even if the two bombings are con-ected, but they acknowledged similarities between the Aug. 31 explosion in an administration building restroom and Wednesday's explosion in the restroom in a classroom building.

In the first explosion, a caller used racial slurs and indicated he wanted to "get rid of" some of the people at Florida A&M. On Wednesday, a caller told ABC affiliate WTXL-TV that students at Florida A&M didn't need a university and that the explosion was "just the beginning, brother."

Authorities said anonymous calls were made about the time of both explosions and both pipe bombs were small. A $16,000 award was offered for information leading to an arrest and conviction.

To prevent further problems, the school announced Thursday it was adding a system of surveillance cameras and had hired an outside security firm. It also is adding 50 uniformed police officers from the city and county to its campus patrol.

While administrators tried to calm worried parents, Derrick Heck, the student government vice president, urged students not to succumb to threats.

"Let them know that our education cannot be stopped," Heck told fellow students from the university's library steps Wednesday evening.

China criticizes U.S. on embassy bombing

The Chinese foreign minister also condemns charges that the Chinese stole U.S. nuclear secrets.

By Barry Schweid
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Even as the Clinton administration sought to improve relations, China Thursday condemned a widening U.S. inquiry into allegations of nuclear espionage and insisted anew that NATO intentionally bombed the Chinese Embassy in Yugoslavia.

Turning a joint news conference with Secretary of State Madeleine

Albright into a public lecture, Foreign Minister Tang Jiaxuan said he hoped the United States would take "effective measures" on the bombing.

Albright seemed at a loss to counter Tang's rejection of the U.S. explanation that the embassy bombing was a mistake. "I must say it's difficult when one is giving the true explanation for a situation when the other side does not accept it," she said.

Tang also assailed the president of Taiwan, Lee Teng-hui, as a troublemaker for trying to promote a special state-to-state relationship with China.

"We hope the United States will face the dangerous nature of his separatist remarks squarely and do nothing to puff him up," Tang said. "For instance, no arms should be sold to Taiwan."

The Chinese official's jabs at the news conference with Albright contrasted with the announcement in Washington of a renewed effort to bring China into the World Trade Organization and Albright's own emphasis on U.S.-Chinese cooperation on East Timor, North Korea and in Asia generally.

The United States last month gave China $4.5 million in compensation intended for the families of the three people killed and 27 injured in the bombing, which occurred May 7 during NATO's conflict with Yugoslavia.

A band that can cut the ska mustard

Mustard Plug brings a creative blend of punk and ska in its upcoming show.

By Chris Hoffmann
The Daily Iowan

Get ready, all you mother-punkin' ska fans, because Iowa City has got a treat for you. Mustard Plug is coming to Gabe's on Sept. 26 with NILE, Straight Legged Kick and Shiloh Church opening. The big show kicks off at 6:30 p.m., and there is a $6 cover charge.

Mustard Plug, with its creative blend of punk and ska, released its third album in March — the second on Hopeless Records — Pray For Mojo.

Many of you may not have heard the word "ska" since the Reel Big Fish was begging you to sell out with it, but ska is still here, and it was here before the Reel Big Fish swam its way into the mainstream.

After eight years, Mustard Plug continues to do what it has always done: make music because the members love it, not because they want it to get on MTV.

The Daily Iowan recently had the opportunity to ask Mustard Plug's Dave Kirchgessner a few questions.

DI: In terms of ska music, you guys have a unique sound; you guys don't play that trendy ska that the radio got sick of. I was wondering what some of your influences were in creating the sound?

DK: The majority of the band came from a punk-rock background. We started in 1991, and in that time, ska music was pretty underground. There were not many bands that were big at all. We were into a lot of the old two-tone stuff and just started combining everything. Basically, the idea from the start was to create our own sound, something that was a little bit different from what everybody else was doing.

DI: How did everything go with the release of your third album, Pray For Mojo, and the tour? How did it fare in comparison with the others?

DK: Yeah, it's been really good. It was released in March, and, basically, the three months after March, we went out and played the whole United States and a big part of Canada. So far, the response has been very good, and the crowds have been great. No complaints. We actually made it over to Europe for the first time, in July, so that was kind of exciting, too.

DI: You guys are truly a symbol of success in the ska community. Where do you guys see the new year taking this continuing success?

DK: It is kind of weird, because the way ska got really big and now kind of died out... It's weeding out a lot of the fans that were more into it for the fashion or because it was the cool thing to do. And the people who are still going to be into it are because they like the music. As far as bands go, I think that there were a lot of bands that started out maybe three years ago that really didn't have to struggle very hard to get shows, or an album put out, and now they're going to have to struggle. So, I think a lot of them are going to give up, because it's not easy anymore. Whereas we've been into it for eight years, and for the first four years that we were around, it was a struggle to get anyone to listen to it or to get a show... So it's not something that we're not used to. Now it's like the backlash has subsided, and whoever is into it is into it, and whoever is not is not.

DI: One last thing — where the hell did you come up with Mustard Plug?

DK: Basically, one of our old members was making bologna sandwiches, and the mustard bottle was plugged, and it was, "Yeah, sure whatever." We didn't think we would have to live with the name for eight years. It was a spur of the moment thing.

Protests shake Indonesia; police kill 3

Students rally against a law allowing the army to suspend all civil liberties.

By Slobodan Lekic
Associated Press

JAKARTA, Indonesia — Violence broke out Thursday as a wave of violent student protests swept across Indonesia after Parliament rubber-stamped a bill allowing the military to revoke civil liberties in "emergency situations."

Reporters and protesters said three demonstrators were killed in clashes with riot police in the capital, Jakarta. Officials and hospitals could not confirm the death toll.

A total of 53 people were injured, the SCTV network reported. At least four were rushed to hospitals with bullet wounds, while other bloodstained protesters were taken to a makeshift clinic at nearby Atma Jaya University.

"This government wants the military to take over everything," said Dani Syahrir, a 21-year-old computer technology student. "We, the students of Indonesia, absolutely reject that, because it means the death of democracy."

Approximately 5,000 protesters clashed with police on a highway leading to Parliament. Cordons of riot police, carrying shields and wearing cumbersome protective gear, fired rubber bullets and volleys of tear-gas canisters, clubbing demonstrators and passers-by whom they managed to corner.

Protesters pelted police with stones, bottles and firebombs, and at least five officers reportedly suffered burns. Several police cars were torched. Demonstrators also ripped out metal highway dividers, bending them to block one of the city's main arteries.

"We must destroy the Suharto-Habibie-Wiranto regime!" shouted a student who only gave his name as Handono.

President Suharto, who ruled with an iron fist for 32 years, was ousted last year amid massive pro-democracy protests and was replaced by protégé B.J. Habibie. Army commander Gen. Wiranto sponsored the new security bill.

U.N. forces move in as gunfire peppers razed Dili

DILI, East Timor (AP) — Gunfire cracked across East Timor's chaotic capital Thursday, sending civilians scrambling for shelter and peacekeepers for their rifles in what was seen as a test of multinational authority in the province.

Though the shooting was not an attack, it prompted the commander of the peace mission, Maj. Gen. Peter Cosgrove, to warn that his men would use "lethal force" against anyone who even pointed a weapon at them.

The Indonesian army, which invaded East Timor in 1975 after Portugal abandoned its former colony and killed upwards of 200,000 Timorese in the ensuing 24 years, is now evacuating and handing control over to the multinational force.

Evidence of atrocities was beginning to emerge in Dili, which has been virtually razed.

In central Dili, reporters were shown a water well where eight dismembered bodies were found. Residents said as many as 30 victims were thrown in the well after being tortured.

Ryder Cup a pressure-cooker for U.S. team

The best players on both sides of the Atlantic Ocean will match their games this weekend in Massachusetts.

By Doug Ferguson
Associated Press

BROOKLINE, Mass. — Imagine facing a 3-2 pitch in the bottom of the ninth in the World Series. Standing at the free throw line with the score tied and one second left in the NBA Finals. Starting at a 6-foot putt to win the Masters.

Pressure in the Ryder Cup is every bit of that.

"It's like playing golf in the middle of the Super Bowl," Sweden's Jesper Parnevik said of the biennial matches between the United States and Europe, which start today at The Country Club.

The pulse quickens, legs turn to mush, palms get clammy — and that's just when flags are raised and anthems are played during the opening ceremony. Walk to the first tee to hit the first shot in the first match, and the pressure gets insufferable.

"The only thing that stands still is the shaft of the club, and that's before you take the club out of the bag," two-time Masters champion Jose Maria Olazabal said. "Everything shakes — hands, legs, everything. There's nothing you can do to avoid that."

"That's what makes it so special." Tom Lehman played his first Ryder Cup in 1995 and was called upon to hit the first shot of the matches. He used a 3-wood, which goes about 250 yards under normal circumstances.

"It went 320," Lehman said. "So, where was my blood pressure? You figure it out."

In a most complicated game, played this week in the most unpredictable format, understanding what is at stake for the U.S. team in the next three days is simple.

"We need to win," Lehman said.

Never mind that the British invented the game, or that an English seed merchant named Samuel Ryder dreamed up this con-

Daly says drinking is "in my blood"

NEW YORK (AP) — John Daly is drinking and gambling again, not sure where it will lead but offering no regrets for losing an endorsement with Callaway Golf that had been his primary source of income.

"It's sad, but I think it's great to be free," Daly told Golf World magazine in this week's issue. "Granted, I could go out and lose everything (by) gambling and drinking, but there's no sense in denying it. It's in my blood."

Daly, a recovering alcoholic who has twice been in rehabilitation clinics since his surprising victory in the 1991 PGA Championship, said he ended 26 months of sobriety June 11 after missing the cut in the St. Jude Classic.

"I was just feeling down," he told the magazine. "I got in my Jeep, went in a store, bought a 12-pack of Miller Lite, and drank it all by the time I got to Dardanelle (Ark.). That's when I relapsed."

Daly's five-year deal with Callaway, signed after he left rehab in April 1997, included a provision that he not drink or gamble. Chairman Ely Callaway offered to send Daly to an addictions specialist nearly two weeks ago. Daly got to the undisclosed clinic and left.

"The people were nice," Daly told Golf World. "But it just wasn't for me."

Callaway said he had no choice but to drop Daly, who stood to earn about $3 million over the final two years of the contract.

It's sad, but I think it's great to be free. Granted, I could go out and lose everything (by) gambling and drinking, but there's no sense in denying it. It's in my blood.

To be the best...

The Iowa field hockey team looks to upset No. 5 Ohio State and No. 2 Penn State at Grant Field this weekend.

By Robert Yarborough
The Daily Iowan

Preparation is over and the quest for a Big Ten championship begins immediately for the Iowa field hockey team.

The No. 10 Hawkeyes will begin conference play at 4 p.m. today when they play host to No. 5 Ohio State, and then renew an intense rivalry with No. 2 Penn State at noon on Sunday. Both games will be held at Grant Field.

"The team is feeling really good about where we are right now and everyone is really sticking together," junior Susan Gibson said. "We don't want to be overconfident, but we know what we have to do to win and are more than capable of doing it."

Iowa is riding a wave of confidence after defeating No. 20 Delaware 3-1 this past weekend, despite not playing up to potential according to Beglin. After an off week before the Delaware game, the team showed the effects of the last time.

"In the Delaware game, I felt like we were just flat. We had been off for a whole weekend and did not get to play Rutgers as scheduled because of Hurricane Floyd," Beglin said. "This weekend after winning against a top 20 team, we should be better prepared."

With a school record 7-0 start, Ohio State earned its highest ranking ever in the national coaches' poll this week at No. 5. One player that Iowa will focus on is sophomore Marije van Nouhuys, who is currently third on the Buckeyes in scoring. "Marije van Nouhuys has great individual skills and she is a handful to deal with," coach Beglin said. "She has done the prominent amount of field goal scoring for their team and is a real dangerous threat."

Penn State, on the other hand, was knocked out of the No. 1 spot this week after the team was edged by Connecticut 1-0 at home last Friday. The loss ended the Nittany Lions' 25-game winning streak at home.

Last season, Penn State defeated Iowa 3-2 in the Big Ten tournament on its way to winning the conference championship. Revenge is not on the minds of the Hawkeyes, but most admit they will play with a bit more intensity because of the competition.

"We have the hugest rivalry with Penn State every year," senior Kelly Dolan said. "Your blood boils every time you step on the field to play them."

Iowa comes into both games as the underdog. However, Beglin feels that if last year was any indication, the Hawkeyes could surprise.

"This is a huge weekend in Iowa City," Beglin said. "Penn State and Ohio State came out here last year when we were 0-4. Both of those teams went home with losses."

DI sports writer Robert Yarborough can be reached at ryarboro@blue.weeg.uiowa.edu

THE GOALIE

With talk surrounding the graduation of All-American goalie Lisa Celluci this season, senior Kelly Druley has quietly become one of the dominant goalkeepers in the Big Ten this season. Druley currently owns a 6-0 record and is third in the Big Ten in save percentage at .800.

NIMNOTES

With two goals and one assist, senior Quan Nim's impact has not been evident in her numbers. Beglin has been thrilled with Nim's ability to maintain the offensive attack and dominate possession against Iowa's opponents.

THE SERIES

Iowa has dominated Ohio State over the years with a 36-3 record against the Buckeyes and an undefeated record at Grant Field.

Penn State has been a challenge for the Hawkeyes who own a 16-11-2 record against the Nittany Lions.

Tough conference schedule looms for Iowa

The Iowa volleyball team will host Purdue tonight and Wisconsin on Saturday night in Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

By Jeremy Schnitker
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's volleyball team, coming off its toughest non-conference schedule since coach Rita Crockett's arrival, starts a tough Big Ten schedule tonight.

After Iowa's non-conference schedule left them 1-6, Crockett said the young Hawkeyes can make some noise against tough Big Ten opponents.

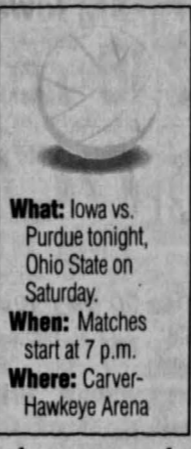

"Everyone in the Big Ten is tough," said Crockett. "We think we can play with anybody, though."

After a weaker non-conference schedule last year, and starting the Big Ten undefeated, Crockett said her team gained more experience from the losses against tough teams than wins against mediocre teams.

"Last year at this time we were 6-0," Crockett explained. "We kind of hid behind our shadow last year, didn't really learn a lot from the weaker opponents. We woke our players up early with the tough competition this year."

agreed that the tough non-conference schedule has helped the Hawkeyes more than it has hurt them.

The Hawkeyes ended their losing ways with a victory over Drake on Tuesday, and hope their success will carry over into tonight's game against Purdue and Saturday's matchup versus Wisconsin. Both games are scheduled to start at 7 p.m. in Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

Blues owners spend $200 million for Grizzlies

New owners of the Grizzlies will not guarantee the team will stay in Vancouver.

By Chris Sheridan
Associated Press

VANCOUVER, British Columbia — The NBA league meetings opened Thursday with the host city in shock after the Vancouver Grizzlies were sold to an owner who could try to move the team to St. Louis.

Bill and Nancy Laurie, heirs to the Wal-Mart fortune, agreed to pay John McCaw about $200 million for the Grizzlies, who entered the NBA four years ago when the league expanded into Canada.

The Lauries, who earlier this year tried to purchase the Denver Nuggets, own the NHL Blues and the new Kiel Center arena in downtown St. Louis.

"We have no current plan to move the Grizzlies," said Laurie, who nonetheless refused to give any assurances to Grizzlies fans that he won't try to move the team in the next year or two.

Franchises wanting to relocate must submit a petition to the league before March 1 in order to move for the following season. The Grizzlies are prohibited by their expansion agreement from making such an application before May 15, 2000 — a rule that would seem to ensure they will continue to be based in Vancouver for the next two seasons.

St. Louis hasn't had an NBA team since the Hawks left in 1968.

Commissioner David Stern voiced his personal opposition to a relocation, citing the league's record of not having any franchise migrations since the Clippers moved from San Diego to Los Angeles in 1984.

"It's my goal to see the Grizzlies stay and succeed in Vancouver," he said.

The decision on whether to allow the team to move, however, would ultimately be made by the league's Board of Governors.

Ticket sales wind to close today

Students will have until 4:30 p.m. today to secure a seat in the student's section.

By Todd Brommelkamp
 The Daily Iowan

Got tickets? That's the question being asked by UI Sports Marketing and the Carver-Hawkeye Arena ticket office as the time for students to purchase season tickets draws to a close.

Tickets are available for students in either an eight-game plan for $56 or in an 11-game package for $77. Ticket Manager Pam Finke said her office has not been overwhelmed by requests but has been encouraged by the pace of sales. By Wednesday, her office will know just how many of the roughly 5,000 student seats have been sold. Students and faculty will have until the end of today to purchase their tickets.

While many people perceived tickets were being marketed heavily this season because of new Iowa coach Steve Alford, Iowa's schedule had more of an effect. The Hawkeyes pushed up their exhibition schedule for this season, making early sales necessary.

Much of the interest around Hawkeye basketball this year has been created by Alford. In his short stint at Iowa, he has brought sweeping changes to the program, many of which have made things more student-friendly. One of Alford's first priorities was to move students closer to the floor and to get them involved in the action. A limited number of students will now be seated at court level and the majority of the student section will now be located behind the south basket. "I think the new student section will make Carver a more imposing place to play," said UI sophomore and season ticket holder B.J. Kluesner. "Hopefully more students will get involved and make things more exciting." Alford has also worked with the marketing department to bring a "Midnight Madness" event to Iowa City on Oct. 15. Many other big time schools hold similar events to kick off their seasons, but Iowa's is expected to be unique. The Hawkeyes plan to hold shooting contests in conjunction with the intramural department as well as giving away trips and bringing in a band. The main purpose of the event is to bring students closer to the team.

"Steve wanted to do something different at the start of the season," said Assistant Athletic Director for External Affairs Rick Klatt. "He is really interested in bringing in the student body and excited about the changes." DI sportswriter Todd Brommelkamp can be reached at tbrommel@blue.weeg.uiowa.edu

Cleveland forced to withdraw from National tournament

Just when he was about to make a splash on the collegiate tennis scene, Tyler Cleveland pulled a hip flexor and had to default—just as he did at the NCAA Tournament last year.

The Iowa tennis star had to quit his first match at the National Clay Court Championship, one of four Grand Slams on the collegiate tennis circuit. Cleveland came into the match ranked 38th in the nation and after two All-Reigon selections, was ready to make a name for himself at the national level. "It is really frustrating for him," Iowa assistant coach Charlie Darley said. "It was sort of a freak thing, it might have had something to do with the surface." After he won the first set against Virginia Commonwealth's Frank Mozier, Cleveland pulled up and injured after a point and was forced to default. Darley said he did not know how long Cleveland would be out of action. —By Mike Kelly

Iowa rowing looks to repeat at Des Moines

■ Coach Mandi Kowal looks for better results from her more experienced team.

By Julie Matolo
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's rowing team opens the season in Des Moines to race in the 16th annual Head of the Des Moines Regatta Saturday.

The Iowa Hawkeyes are looking for a third consecutive win in the Women's Open 8 this weekend.

Iowa will start in the No. 1 position in the Open 8 because of last year's title. In 1998, Iowa beat Kansas State by 16 seconds to take the title. One other boat will be entered in the Open 8 along with three Iowa boats racing in the Open 4. The three-mile course will have the new addition of pairs racing this year, with five Hawkeye pairs entered in the race.

"The newest factor of this race will be racing pairs," said coach Mandi Kowal. "They will have to stir and maneuver themselves through the whole race. So that will be interesting. It is a smaller boat, more sensitive. The more practice in pairs, the better boatmanship skills we have."

The Head of the Des Moines Regatta will begin the fall season in preparation for the Spring season. With a good turnout of fans supporting the Hawkeyes, the rowing team is looking to take home another first place title.

"This year my expectations for this years race are higher because we have more experience on the team and we've really learned from last spring to execute our routine on a daily basis so that when we get to race day we are not doing something brand new," said Kowal.

Determination on the team is not a problem. While the rest of the world is meeting the sandman, Iowa rowers are beating the sunrise, rowing at 5:30 in the morning.

Senior Lauri Geers believes the Hawkeyes are performing at a level much higher than last year.

"We have a different format this year," said Geers. "It has been going really well and people have been putting forth their best effort. We have been doing things which were unheard of last year."

Kowal said she likes her team's chances in competition this season.

"I'm excited to have a competition this early in the season," said Kowal. "We will use this to really get the kinks out of our system for the upcoming season. I'm just excited about our new team and I can't wait to see what we can do. We are a more experienced team than last year."

HAWKEYE ROAD BRIEFS

Women's Soccer

This Weekend: The Iowa women's soccer team will look for its first road win this season, as they head to Valparaiso, Ind. for a non-conference matchup with Valparaiso (1-4) Friday at 4 p.m. Sunday at Noon, the Hawkeyes will resume conference play against Michigan (4-2-1) in Ann Arbor.

Standout Statistics: Freshmen Sarah Lynch and Julie Atkocaitis are nationally ranked through Sept. 19. Lynch is tied for fourth in the country in points per game (1.29) and tied for second in goals per game (1.29). Atkocaitis is tied for eighth nationally in assists per game (0.86). Iowa's offense is also tied at 12 in the nation in goals per game (3.14).

Coach's comment: "Every conference game is important. On the road we have to be as prepared, if not more, than at home," coach Stephanie Gabbert said. "Most of our conference games are away so winning on the road will be an important factor."

Iowa's key: Success starts with the Hawkeye defense. When the Iowa defense stays organized and strong, the offense is more relaxed and generates more attacks on goal.

Next Week: Iowa continues its schedule on the road. The Hawkeyes travel to Evanston, Ill., to take on Northwestern Friday. They'll pack up and head to East Lansing, Mich., to play Michigan State Sunday.

-Melinda Mawdsley

Women's tennis

This week: The Iowa women's tennis team will compete for the first time this fall at the Furman Fall Classic Tennis Tournament in Spartanburg, S.C. The tournament will run today through Sunday and be composed of individual and doubles flights.

Standout statistic: Last spring, Iowa finished ranked No. 25 in the country and competed in the NCAA tournament, making it to the Sweet-16 round. The finish was the best in Iowa tennis history.

Iowa's key: The Hawkeyes return six of eight players from last year's squad who are determined to repeat last year's success. The doubles team of Shera Wiegler and Toni Neykova is ranked No. 6 in the nation and Neykova also holds a No. 95 singles ranking.

Player comment: "Coming off a year like last year the returners have a lot of confidence going in," senior Shera Wiegler said. "We know we can compete with the best. For the new players, they'll be getting their feet in the water and see what college tennis is like."

-Lisa Colonna

Men's Cross Country

This week: The Iowa men's cross country team travels to Minneapolis, Minn. for the Roy Griak Invitational. The men will run at 11:00 a.m. at the Les Bolstad Golf Course.

Pick to click: Nick Nordheim will be running in his first meet this year. The junior was an all-region selection a year ago. Nordheim has impressed Coach Larry Wiecek so far in practice.

Iowa's key: With 25 teams expected to compete in the meet, getting out fast could be the key to Iowa being among the top teams. Iowa will need to challenge the leaders early on in the race if they expect to be with them at the finish.

Competition: This will be a good early test for Iowa. Among the national powers expected to be at the meet are Wisconsin, Illinois State, Oregon, and Providence. Many of these same teams will be competing for the national title come November.

Coach's comment: "This is a meet that can help our chances of getting an at large bid for the NCAA meet," Wiecek said. "We need to run the best race we are capable of by putting our best self out on the field."

Next week: Iowa will be competing in the Loyola Lakefront Invitational at Chicago, Ill. on October 2.

Women's Cross Country

This week: The Iowa women's cross country team travels north to the Roy Griak Invitational in Minneapolis, Minn. on September 25. The women will run at 12:00 p.m. at the Les Bolstad Golf Course.

Pick to click: Sophomore Amy Murphy was the only non-freshman among Iowa's top eight runners at the Iowa State Open. Murphy has big meet experience and is poised for a breakout meet.

Iowa's key: Running together will help the young Iowa runners adjust to the big meet situation.

Coach's comment: "This is a very high quality meet and we are shooting for an upper division finish," Swalls said. "I told our team to not be intimidated because we are good enough to run with this competition."

Next week: Iowa will travel to Champaign, Ill. for the Pre-Meet on October 2.

Hawkeyes at a crossroads, Ferentz optimistic

■ Iowa has a chance to regroup and refocus with no opponent to prepare for this week.

By Mike Kelly
The Daily Iowan

As it turns out, Iowa's off week came at an opportune time for a team in transition.

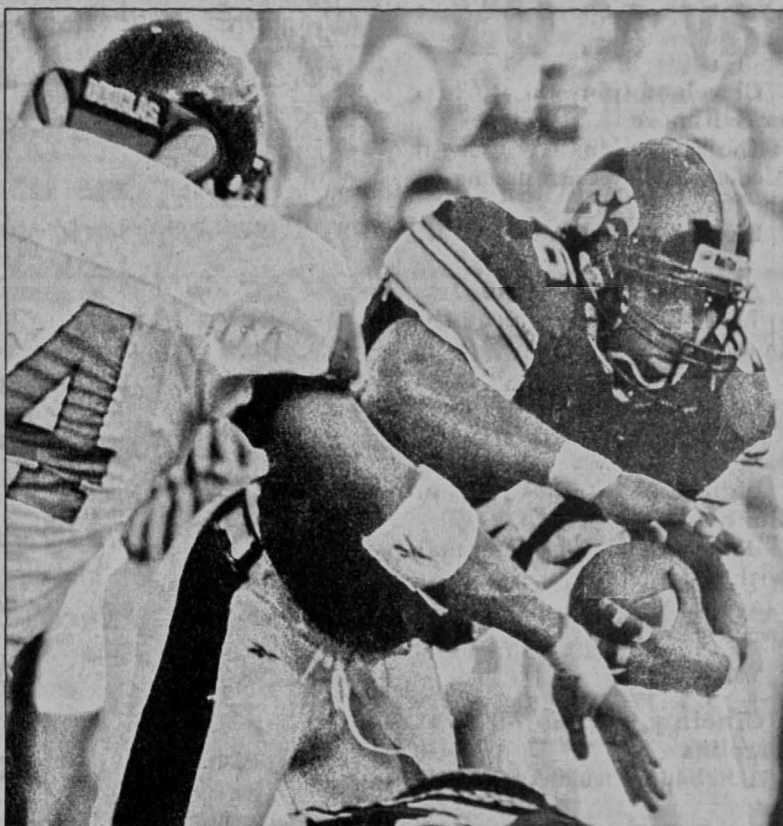

After showing signs of offensive life in last week's 24-0 win over Northern Illinois, the team has the opportunity to get back to the drawing board and iron out some wrinkles before they take on Michigan State Oct. 2.

"I think we boked a lot more like a Big Ten lie (against Northern Illinois), Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz said on his weekly radio show. "This week we got to target in on the areas we needed to work on. We have not turned the corner yet, but the guys put in three good days of practice this week."

Iowa comes into Big Ten conference play with a 1-2 record and a daunting schedule ahead. They take on four ranked opponents including Ohio State, Penn State, Wisconsin and Michigan State.

Ferentz said despite the imposing schedule, he won't write off his first season at Iowa as a failure just yet.

"Saying that the cupboard is

bare is like giving up on the season," Ferentz said. "We are not prepared to do that."

His optimistic philosophies may not be entirely unfounded after Iowa's second half against Northern Illinois. His team showed mettle and determination on its first substantiated scoring drive of the season.

He said when Northern Illinois downed the ball at the Iowa 1, he thought briefly about the possibility of a scoring drive, then changed his mind.

"I thought, 'Gee, wouldn't it be great to go 99 yards and get a touchdown," Ferentz said. "Then I just wanted to get a couple of first downs and play good defense."

When we look back on our season, that may end up a real turning point."

With no opponent to prepare for, the coaching staff's attention this Friday night turns to recruiting.

All seven Iowa coaches are in the midst of recruiting the best in-state prospects. The coaches can be seen around area high school gridirons tomorrow, with Ferentz heading to the Iowa City West and Dubuque Senior matchup.

The coach also said on his radio show that his staff will continue to recruit in Florida with line-backers coach Bret Bielema and recruiting coordinator Pat Flaherty combing the state for talent.

Ferentz said with only four Division I universities in Florida, there is enough talent to go around.

He cited the success teams like Penn and Ohio State have had recruiting players from the Sunshine State.

Defensive lineman Colin Cole and linebacker Fred Barr are the only two Florida natives in the 1999 recruiting class. Cole and Barr are also the only two true freshmen to have seen any action this season.

It's a Davis battle for ISU records

Darren Davis is challenging his brother Troy's ISU rushing records.

By Chuck Schoffner
Associated Press

AMES, Iowa — By the end of the season, a Davis will still sit atop Iowa State's career rushing list.

The question is, which Davis? Troy Davis, now with the New Orleans Saints, is the current leader with 4,382 yards. But little brother Darren is gaining ground quickly.

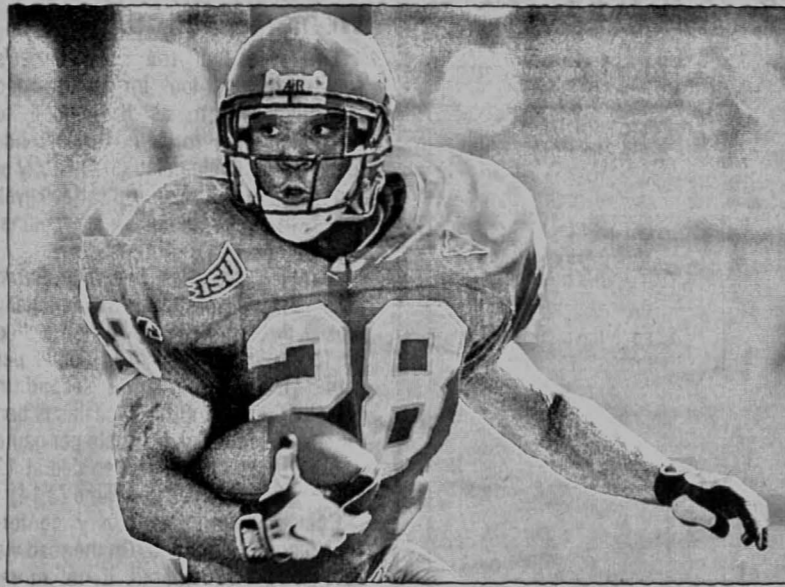

Darren Davis, a senior with the Cyclones, has 2,930 yards, and while he once thought Troy's mark was unattainable, he's thinking differently after leading Iowa State (3-0) to its best start since 1981.

"Now I feel it's in reach," Davis said. "And my guys up front have had a few words about it. Now I can look at it and reach it."

If he keeps running at his current pace, he will. Davis is second nationally in rushing with an average of 185 yards a game. He needs to average just over 181.5 yards in the final eight games to pass Troy.

But it won't be easy. Iowa State is just now entering the toughest part of its schedule, starting with Saturday's visit by No. 15 Kansas State, which has given up only 94 yards rushing in two games. Five more teams that went to bowls last season follow the Wildcats on Iowa State's schedule.

But a guy can dream, can't he? Besides, Iowa State leads the nation in rushing at 354.3 yards a game and is playing with the confidence that comes from winning.

Charlie Neibergall/Associated Press

Darren Davis runs for yardage against Ball State, Sept. 19, 1998 in Ames. The Cyclones feel they can run the ball on anyone.

"That's the mentality we have as an offensive line," tackle Marcel Howard said. "You put anybody in front of us, we're going to do our best to block for Darren. We're not going to back down from anybody."

Troy Davis played at Iowa State from 1994-96 and is the only back in NCAA Division I with two 2,000-yard seasons. Darren hasn't reached 2,000 in a season yet, but he's well on his way to becoming the first Iowa State back with three 1,000-yard seasons.

He has 555 already and has topped 200 in his last two games, getting 235 against Iowa and 208 against UNLV. Davis might have had 200 yards in the opener with Indiana State if he hadn't been sidelined by a cramp early in the second half after gaining 112 yards in just 13 carries.

Bufs can't wait for Neuheisel

Colorado is upset about Rick Neuheisel leaving after last season.

By Jim Cour
Associated Press

SEATTLE — It's time for Rick Neuheisel to face the situation.

On Saturday, some old friends arrive in town to play Neuheisel's new football team, the Washington Huskies. Only this time, his old friends, the Colorado Buffaloes, are enemies.

"I'm going to have to watch it because I'm going to be emotional," Colorado linebacker Ty Gregorak, recruited from Spokane to play football in Boulder, said. "It's a big game for me personally."

It's a big game for Colorado, which feels Neuheisel betrayed the Buffaloes for big bucks after a 51-43 victory over Oregon in the Aloha Bowl.

Washington was on that same bowl doubleheader in Honolulu last Christmas. The Huskies lost to Air Force 45-25 in the Oahu Bowl, a loss that probably cost coach Jim Lambright his job.

When Washington athletic director Barbara Hedges received permission from Colorado AD Dick Tharp to talk to Neuheisel in January, she sold him on the Huskies with a $997,000-a-season, five-year contract.

Many Colorado players felt Neuheisel had led them to believe he had made a lifetime

John Froschauer/Associated Press

commitment to stay in Boulder.

After accepting the Washington job, Neuheisel flew back to Colorado to talk to his former players. They were shook up.

"At the end of the speech, he said, 'Does anyone have anything to say?' It was silent for about a minute. I just said, 'See you the 25th,'" Gregorak said. "I can't believe it's already here."

"I felt like it just flew by. I can't wait for it to come."

The players Neuheisel recruited to Colorado could make Washington's worst start since 1985 even worse. A victory by the Buffaloes would make the Huskies 0-3 for the first time since 1969, when they lost their first nine games.

The Huskies, short on talent and depth, lost to Air Force 38-21 last Saturday for their first defeat in a home opener since 1985. They were beaten 35-28 in their opening game at BYU.

Colorado was upset by Colorado State 41-14 in its opener in Denver, then beat San Jose State 63-35 and Kansas 51-17.

"I knew it was coming," Neuheisel said. "If it helps them prepare for the game using a revenge factor of anything like that, 'Let's get the coach, he left us, that kind of a thing,' then I'm sure they'll try to use it."

Broncos not the same without Elway at QB

Denver will try to turn their 0-2 start around in Tampa.

By Dave Goldberg
Associated Press

Mike Shanahan is playing better defense than his defense these days, deflecting every question about why his two-time Super Bowl champion Broncos are 0-2. His players are more candid.

"What we need to do is put our rings away, put them in the safe and just go out and play. What we did in the past is what we did in the past," says linebacker Glenn Cadrez.

What's in the immediate future is a trip to Tampa to play the Bucs, who just happen to lead the league in defense, albeit against two non-threatening offenses, the Giants and the Eagles.

After the Bucs defense finishes with the Broncos, it could be Miller time.

ATLANTA (AP) — Atlanta Chipper Jones may have won the NL East.

Jones, his MVP credentials, hit his fourth home run shot in the fifth inning of the Atlanta Braves' 6-3 victory over the New York Mets.

The Braves, who began the season with a 6-3 victory, led the second-place Mets with only nine to play. More games next week that series could wind in the division race.

The Mets, meanwhile, are haunted by memories of last year. New York lost its first series in the playoffs, only one victory would have won the NL wild-card playoff for the NL wild-card race.

Cincinnati, which was the Mets' only two-game race.

Jones hit a pair of home runs, accounting for the 2-1 victory, and added Wednesday's 5-2 victory.

In the final game of the series, Jones hit a pair of home runs, accounting for the 2-1 victory, and added Wednesday's 5-2 victory.

That is the most home runs since Hank Aaron hit the franchise record series in 1953.

Jones has seven home runs against the Mets, hitting 448 (13-for-29) in seven of the nine months.

MIAMI — Marlins 2, Expos 1 straight start at the Florida Marlins' sloppy play Thursday.

Burnett (4-2) gave up seven innings, striking out the majors. Antonio Alfonseca's 19th save in 23 chances.

Florida took three of four games to win at least two to avoid consecutive 100-loss seasons.

Brewers 11, Phillies 5

MILWAUKEE — Ron Bellomy's four runs and Jeremy Burnette's four home runs scored each time Thursday's Brewers in a sappy 11-5 Philadelphia Phillies victory.

Jason Bere (4-0) won for the first time since Sept. 7. Cincinnati but was pleased with 6.85 ERA.

Bere allowed five runs, five hits and five walks.

Mike Grace (1-4) was the eighth hit in four-plus innings in Philadelphia's nine walks.

Blue Jays 7, Red Sox 5

BOSTON — Tony Bliziotis' ninth inning Thursday rally helped the Jays rally from a one-run deficit to a 7-5 victory.

Nomar Garciaparra hit a double in the seventh inning and gave Boston a 5-4 lead.

But Rod Beck (0-1) came in to pitch and gave up a home run to Willie Greene.

Brian McRae added an RBI in the eighth to make a winner of the Blue Jays.

The Blue Jays avoided a losing streak. One more loss and they would be 0-2.

The Red Sox have a magical wild-card race over the Baltimore later Thursday.

Wells allowed five runs in eight innings. Billy Koch pitched the final out of the 29th save.

Chipper finishes off Mets

ATLANTA (AP) — Almost single-handedly, Chipper Jones may have finished off the New York Mets in the NL East.

Jones, his MVP credentials growing by the day, hit his fourth homer in three games, a three-run shot in the fifth inning that helped the Atlanta Braves complete a sweep of New York with a 6-3 victory Thursday.

The Braves, who began the series with a scant one-game advantage in the East, now lead the second-place Mets by four games with only nine to play. The teams have three more games next week at Shea Stadium, but that series could wind up being meaningless in the division race.

The Mets, meanwhile, can't help but be haunted by memories of their collapse a year ago. New York lost its final five games, when only one victory would have put them in a playoff for the NL wild card, and three of those losses came in the season-ending series at Turner Field.

Cincinnati, which was off Thursday, trails the Mets by only two games in the wild-card race.

Jones hit a pair of solo homers Tuesday night, accounting for both Atlanta runs in a 2-1 victory, and added a two-run shot in Wednesday's 5-2 victory.

In the final game of the series, the Braves trailed 2-1 in the fifth when Jones batted with two runners aboard and one out. On a 1-0 pitch, Mets starter Al Leiter tried to sneak a low fastball over the outside corner, but Jones sent it over the center-field wall for his 45th homer of the season.

That is the most homers by a Braves player since Hank Aaron hit 47 in 1971 to equal the franchise record set originally by Eddie Mathews in 1953.

Jones has seven homers and 14 RBIs in 29 at-bats against the Mets this season. He is hitting .448 (13-for-29), helping the Braves win seven of the nine meetings.

Marlins 2, Expos 1

MIAMI — Rookie A.J. Burnett won his second straight start as the Florida Marlins took advantage of Montreal's sloppy play to beat the Expos 2-1 Thursday.

Burnett (4-2) gave up one run and seven hits in seven innings, striking out six in his longest stint in the majors. Antonio Alfonseca pitched the ninth for his 19th save in 23 chances.

Florida took three of four from the Expos and needs to win at least two of its final nine games to avoid consecutive 100-loss seasons.

Brewers 11, Phillies 6

MILWAUKEE — Ron Belliard homered and drove in four runs and Jromy Burnitz drew four walks and scored each time Thursday for the Milwaukee Brewers in a sappy 11-6 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies.

Jason Bere (4-0) won for the first time since joining the Brewers on Sept. 7. He began the season with Cincinnati but was released Aug. 4 with a 3-0 record and 6.85 ERA.

Bere allowed five runs, two of them unearned, in five innings.

Mike Grace (1-4) was tagged for eight runs and eight hits in four-plus innings. He issued four of Philadelphia's nine walks.

Blue Jays 7, Red Sox 5

BOSTON — Tony Batista hit a two-run double in the ninth inning Thursday night as the Toronto Blue Jays rallied from a one-run deficit to beat the Boston Red Sox 7-5.

Nomar Garciaparra hit a two-run homer, then outran a double-play relay to drive in another run in the seventh inning and give Boston a 6-5 lead.

But Rod Beck (0-1) came out to start the ninth for the Red Sox and gave up two singles before Batista doubled to right-center, scoring Homer Bush and Willie Greene.

Brian McRae added an RBI groundout to make it 7-5 and make a winner of David Wells (15-10).

The Blue Jays avoided elimination in the AL playoff chase. One more loss or one Boston win will finish them.

The Red Sox have a magic number of seven in the AL wild-card race over the Oakland Athletics, who played Baltimore later Thursday.

Wells allowed five runs on 12 hits and a walk in eight innings. Billy Koch pitched the ninth for his 29th save.

Atlanta's Chipper Jones hits a three-run home run off New York Mets starting pitcher Al Leiter during the fifth inning in Atlanta Thursday. The homer was Jones' fourth of the three game series with the Mets.

Tigers 7, Indians 5

DETROIT — Tony Clark and Juan Encarnacion each had two RBIs to help the Detroit Tigers beat Cleveland 7-5 Thursday night and earn a split of their four-game series with the Indians.

Roberto Alomar, Travis Fryman, Wil Cordero and Jim Thome homered for the Indians.

Charles Nagy (17-10), seeking a career-best 18th win, gave up six runs on 10 hits with four walks and four strikeouts in five-plus innings. It was Nagy's first loss in five decisions.

Blair (3-11), making his sixth start, gave up four runs on four hits with four walks and six strikeouts in 6 1-3 innings to win his second game this month.

Todd Jones allowed Thome's 33rd homer leading off the ninth, but got the final three outs to earn his 26th save in 31 opportunities.

The Indians, who clinched the AL

Central title on Sept. 8, jumped on Blair for two runs in the first as Kenny Lofton started the game with a double and scored on Alomar's 24th homer, a shot into the second deck in left.

Athletics 9, Orioles 6

BALTIMORE — Miguel Tejada hit a tiebreaking homer in the eighth inning as the Oakland Athletics ended the Baltimore Orioles' 13-game winning streak with a 9-6 victory Thursday in the opener of a doubleheader.

Matt Stairs, Ben Grieve and Mike Macfarlane also homered for the A's, who moved within 4 1/2 games of Boston in the AL wild-card race. Boston was to play Toronto on Thursday night.

Albert Belle homered for the Orioles, whose 13-game streak was one short of the team record set in 1973.

The doubleheader was a makeup of two games washed out last week by Hurricane Floyd.

18-year-old leads Aussies in Davis Cup

(AP) — Lleyton Hewitt's inaugural Davis Cup year has been one surprise after another.

"It's been a dream," Hewitt said. "In Zimbabwe (in April) I was the hitting partner the whole time. Then there was an injury on the team and in Boston I won both my singles matches, so I was happy to get away with that."

"Now there is another injury on the team and Pat (Rafter) is out, so I have to step up again, and take a bit of a leadership role."

With both Rafter and Mark Philippoussis missing with injuries, the 18-year-old Hewitt will lead the Australians against Russia at Brisbane, Australia, this weekend in the Davis Cup semifinals.

The other semifinal, at Pau, France, will pit Belgium against France. The winners will meet for the Cup in late November.

On Friday, Hewitt will open the best-of-5 series against Russia's Marat Safin, 19, in a battle of teenagers. The second match will send Australia's Wayne Arthurs against Yevgeny Kafelnikov, who is ranked

No. 2 in the world.

Arthurs, at 29, will be one of the oldest players ever to make a Davis Cup debut for Australia. Until now, Arthurs never had been on a Davis Cup squad, even as a practice player.

The doubles on Saturday will send Mark Woodforde and Sandon Stolle against Kafelnikov and Andrei Olhovskiy, with the reverse singles to be played Sunday, with Hewitt facing Kafelnikov and Arthurs playing Safin.

Cooper keeps piling wins

Ohio State's John Cooper could win his 100th game during Saturday's game against Cincinnati.

By Rusty Miller Associated Press

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Ohio State's John Cooper has little interest in holding on to a coaching job just to reach career milestones.

"I'm not going to hunt down Paterno or Bowden or LaVell Edwards," he said as he prepared for what could be his 100th win with the Buckeyes on Saturday against Cincinnati.

At the same time, the 62-year-old Cooper isn't considering trading his office chair for a rocking chair.

"I feel good. I've got good young players in the program. So why not?" said Cooper, 99-34-4 in 12 years with the Buckeyes.

Not really. Cooper is comfortable financially and secure in his job — or at least as secure as an Ohio State football coach can be.

Cooper and his wife of 42 years, Helen, live in a huge home they built on a quiet, leafy street in suburban Upper Arlington.

home next door. His son John Jr., who played for him at Tulsa, also lives and works in Columbus.

In his at times rocky, frequently up and occasionally down tenure with the Buckeyes, the native Tennessean has come close to winning a couple of national championships — and also has come within a hair's breadth of being fired at least that many times.

He jokes that his theme songs are "Help Me Make It Through The Night" and "One Day At A Time."

Cooper has taken Buckeye teams to the No. 2 spot in the final polls in two of the last three years, yet still hasn't captured the hearts of many of those who dress and decorate in scarlet-and-gray. After the Buckeyes lost to Miami 23-12 in the Kickoff Classic, those phoning sports call-in shows and writing letters to the editor had a common refrain: "He can't win the big one."

The former Iowa State defensive back has never been forgiven for his 2-8-1 record against archrival Michigan and a 2-8 bowl mark with the Buckeyes.

Yet his team swept both of those games last year — the first time that's happened since he's been in Columbus — and he has made Ohio State a fixture in the top 25.

His job was in jeopardy after several of the Michigan losses and a couple of painful bowl defeats, including a shocker to Air Force in the 1990 Liberty Bowl. He flirted ry. Heading into its match against Purdue, Crockett remains confident.

"Purdue is tough," she said. "We have to work to win."

This will be the first extended stretch of home games for Iowa, who has only played three games in Carver all season. With the home crowd on Iowa's side, the Hawkeyes hope their tough schedule will result in more wins during their five-game homestand.

with leaving to take the LSU job in 1994, but was lured back with a multi-year contract that features rollover years for victories in those "big games."

He is close to signing another contract that will pay him in excess of $1 million a year, including ancillary agreements that include his TV and radio shows and other responsibilities.

No one doubts he rejuvenated a program that was in decline under Earle Bruce, let go in a messy firing at the end of the 1987 season.

Daly 'loves the action' of gambling

Earlier this year, Daly was working with Callaway officials in Palm Springs when he disappeared.

He later said he went to Las Vegas, where "I gambled, had a few pops and had a great time."

Daly's gambling has been as notorious as his drinking. Callaway cleaned up about $1.7 million in gambling debts when it signed Daly to a contract. Golf World reported that Daly lost about $500,000 during his gambling spree in Las Vegas.

After his split with Callaway, Daly said he gambled in a riverboat casino in Tunica, Miss., although he says he didn't drink alcohol.

Asked by the magazine why he continued to gamble even though he lost an estimated $12 million from 1993 to 1996, Daly said, "I love the action. I just love it."

Daly first went through alcohol rehab at the end of 1992. He won the British Open while sober in 1995, but resumed drinking a year later. He went on a drinking spree again during The Players Championship in 1997, trashed his hotel room and ultimately split with his wife.

Can he avoid that kind of situation this time?

"Honestly? Probably not," Daly told Golf World. "I want to gamble and I want to have a few drinks now and then. Basically, it (trying to stay sober) had taken over my life, and I was miserable. It's like I've said before, there's no way I'd never drink again."

Americans look to regain the Cup that includes Tiger Woods, David Duval, Davis Love III, Payne Stewart — no player lower than 28th in the world rankings.

"We've got the 12 best players in the world," Jeff Maggert said.

What they don't have is the cup. Europe has won or retained the Ryder Cup five times in the past seven matches. Still, it returns every year as the underdog. And even though it owns the cup, another victory would be considered another major upset.

That's just what Europe wants to hear.

"They must be under pressure, being the 12 best players in the world, according to themselves," England's Lee Westwood said.

"People at home are all hoping we're going to win, not expecting us to win," Darren Clarke of Northern Ireland said. "And that's a huge difference."

Adding to the pressure for the United States is the rift over Ryder Cup revenue, estimated at $63 million with a net profit of $23 million for the PGA of America. Woods and Duval led a faction of U.S. players who want some of that money, at least for charities of their choice.

The PGA says it will have such a plan in place by the end of the year, but the damage has been done. Another loss, and the Americans will look like greedy millionaires who have everything but a 17-inch gold chalice that money can't buy.

Perhaps the Americans can find the passion to win from captain Ben Crenshaw, who goes by the nickname "Gentle Ben" but who also broke his putter during a fit of rage during the 1987 Ryder Cup.

"It's terribly important for us," Crenshaw said. "I think everyone knows that for our side, not having success in the last few occasions. We've felt that sting twice."

Another loss surely is possible. After all, this is match play, the most fickle format in golf, especially over 18 holes. The match is decided by who wins the most holes, not who shoots the lowest score. All it takes is one player to make a couple of long putts, or hole a shot from the bunker, for momentum to shift and the lead to become insurmountable.

"I think we can beat anybody," Westwood said. "This format leads to shocks."

With 28 matches worth one point each over three days, no team has won by more than two points since 1987. In the past five Ryder Cups, the United States has won 70% points, compared with 69% for Europe.

"A few rolls of the ball here, a rub of the green there, a bit of luck in the middle, and the match can go either way," European captain Mark James said. "There's an element of luck, and I think you have to be aware of that."

Woods is regarded as one of the best in match play, particularly since he became the first man to win the U.S. Amateur three straight times. But as great as he is, Woods lost a crucial singles match to Costantino Rocca, a former factory worker in Italy, in the Ryder Cup at Valderrama, Spain, two years ago.

"In match play in 18 holes, all it takes is just one shot here and there, especially on the back nine," Woods said. "If we can make those putts at the crucial times, who knows? We could turn it around and get the cup back."

If not, the pressure will build with every shot on every hole. The teams are decided over a two-year process (one year for Europe), so some may not be playing at their best. Mark O'Meara, the Masters and British Open champion of 1998, hasn't won this year and has offered to sit out some of the matches.

"You can show up this week and play very bad, and that's when the pressure turns into fear and panic," Parnevik said. "And you don't want to be here."
