Supremacist gets death in killing

The second white defendant in Texas dragging death will face lethal injection.

By C. Bryant Hull

BROWNSVILLE, Texas — A white supremacist convicted and sentenced Thursday to death in a Texas prison for helping to drag an African-American man to his death on a rural road.

LAWRENCE BUSSER The Brownsville Herald

The Brownsville County jury that convicted Shawn Berry, 23, and John William King, 21, last December, sentenced them to death Thursday. A third white defendant, 18-year-old Allen Berry, will be tried next month.

Byrd's sister, Mary Verrett, said her family was relieved.

"He had the hate in there," she said. "The prayers and what we want really came true.

The youngest-ever president of the Sierra Club, says the future of environmentalism is uncertain.

By Jim Book

The Daily Iowan

The first time Adam Wobach, former president of the Sierra Club, asked the crowd to stay in line, only a few people responded.

"Is it cool?" he asked. "I'm happy, and you?"

This time more responded, clapping, to finish the cheers. "Environmentalists don't laugh enough," he said.

Wobach, speaking to approximately 200 audience members in Macbride Auditorium Thursday night as a part of the UI Lectures Series, didn't talk about specific environmental issues. Instead, he talked about finding the audibility to change.

"How do we remove reservations from debate about recycling to debate about our future," he said.

"We're finding the courage to be the 46th president of the Sierra Club, making him the youngest president of the oldest and largest-generation environmental organization in America.

Wearing a brown blazer and tie, Wobach held a few slides and stories about when he was president of the organization.

"It was really exciting to move and hear a real outsider sost in," UI junior Amy Blatt said.

"It was sick to see how many people were like us," said Wobach.

Wobach being airy about environmental problems requires being optimistic, Wobach said.

"We've had the Folsom Seminar, the next day 20 years from now, back the plan," he said.

Wobach asked the audience several questions throughout the speech, making points out of their answers.

Wobach said the main challenge was to get the community involved.

"It's been a great job of turning political and environmental views, and keeping the audience involved," said Erin Crowther, a UI junior and the media director for the Lecture Committee. "It wasn't a named speech — it was very funny.

Wobach wanted to end the talk by asking the audience questions about their future. "We don't have to do this," he said.

"It's important to know," Wobach said.

An editorial writer for The Daily Iowan, a student newspaper at the University of Iowa, has been gunned down by a student named John Swanne.

The writer, James Carville, was the editor-in-chief of the newspaper and a member of the editorial board. He is the son of former President Jimmy Carter and the brother of former Secretary of State James A. Carville.

The shooting occurred at about 10:30 p.m. on Friday evening in downtown Iowa City. According to witnesses, Carville was shot while he was walking down the street with his girlfriend.

Carville was transported to the hospital by ambulance and is in serious but stable condition. His girlfriend, Rachel Jones, was also shot and is in critical condition.

Carville is a 21-year-old senior at the University of Iowa, where he is a member of Phi Delta Theta fraternity. He is majoring in political science and is a member of the editorial board of The Daily Iowan.

The shooting is being investigated by the Iowa City Police Department. No suspects have been identified at this time.

The shooting shocked the Iowa City community and the University of Iowa. President Mary Sue Coleman released a statement expressing her sympathy and support for the victims and their families.

"This is a tragic loss for our community and our university," Coleman said. "Our prayers are with James and Rachel and their families."
Buchanan nomination would hurt Reform Party

While the first surge of anti-incumbent sentiment and the potential successes have revealed their political machines in action to defend the Republican majority, Buchanan, a Moor, and pacey, are getting the same. With a shockingly strong showing, if the 2000 candidate does well, the party would be guaranteed a substantial margin of victory for the 2000 elections. Dean plans to continue his campaign despite the Obama-Clinton advantage, which one in a charge would then use the funds to a generous bid of his own. But in any event, if 2000 candidate, if the Reform Party to become a major political player, it will need the financial support.

Buchanan seems to have a greater potential in the party and down the fever, how-the death do us part. But the death do us part. It includes both for post-1960, however, how allowing the favor of the caption, is doing so much to help the Reform Buchanan.

Buchanan's reserved social values contrast sharply with the beliefs of many party members. For instance, the Reform Party supports a woman's right to choose on abortion, while Buchanan is staunchly pro-life. In addition, Buchanan's pragmatism for diversity is simply too much at all well with Reform supporters. According to their Conservative Principles, party, Buchanan believes in individual liberty, recognizing that one of our greatest strengths is our diversity, and we will be balanced tolerance of all cultures.

Buchanan's stated views are quite different. In his September 1989 speech to the Christian Coalition, he first described non-traditionals on an "on Anglo-American" heritage. Buchanan then claimed that "our culture is superior. Our culture is superior because our religion is Christianity, and that is the truth that makes men free."

These are hardly the remarks a person who wants to "be like" Buchanan. For they are the remarks of a man who wants to honestly defend the Reform Party.

Quake leaves Taipei city of leaning towers

Shoddy construction on the island of Taiwan contributed to the quake casualties.

ANNE HANNEFORD

TAIPEI, Taiwan — Their eight-story building knocked askew by a powerful earthquake and lookout became a monument to the folly of shoddy construction, the remains of the Taiwan Hai Napa building are a haunting reminder of the dangers of poor engineering.

The building was one of eight that collapsed in the 1999 earthquake, which killed more than 2,000 people and injured thousands more.

"We thought it was going to be safe," said the building's owner, who was spared injury but lost everything in the quake. "But it's not. It's a disaster."-

The building is located in the southern Taiwanese city of Tainan, which suffered some of the worst damage from the quake. The building was one of many that collapsed during the quake, which killed more than 2,000 people and injured thousands more.

In the weeks following the quake, authorities have been trying to identify the owners of the buildings that collapsed, and some have been arrested for failing to ensure the safety of their structures.

"We're going to make sure that this never happens again," said Tainan Mayor Chen Chi-mai. "We have to learn from this and make sure that our buildings are safe."-

Chen is one of several government officials who have been visiting the scene of the quake to assess the damage and to make plans for rebuilding.

A band that can cut the ska mustard

Mustard Plug brings a creative blend of punk and ska in its upcoming show.

By Chris Hoffmann

Get ready for it: you can’t pin down the band that has come to be known simply as Mustard Plug. Never mind that they are from Des Moines, they’re not even from the state of Iowa, they’re from Nebraska. They’re a four-piece ska band, and they’re growing in popularity.

Most people might think the name refers to the yellow condiment, but that’s not the case. The name is actually a play on words. It comes from the phrase “mustard plug,” which refers to a device used to stop up a hole in a pipe.

The band got its start in 1999 when three friends decided to play music together. They quickly realized they had a unique sound that set them apart from other bands.

The band’s music is a blend of reggae, punk, and ska. They have a strong following in the Midwest, particularly in Des Moines, where they often perform.

Their latest album, “Mustard Plug,” was released in 2022 and features a mix of upbeat ska and punk songs. The album includes tracks like “The Great Escape,” “Revolution,” and “Ska Style.”

Despite their relatively small size, Mustard Plug has made a name for themselves in the ska and punk scene. They’ve played at various festivals and concerts throughout the Midwest and have built a strong following among ska and punk fans.

Mustard Plug continues to make music that is both innovative and enjoyable. Keep an eye out for their next album, as they’re sure to continue pushing the boundaries of their genre.

For more information on Mustard Plug, check out their website at MustardPlug.com. You can also find them on social media platforms like Facebook and Twitter. They’re always posting updates about their upcoming shows, so be sure to follow them for the latest news.

Iowa Hawkeyes at a crossroads, Ferentz optimistic

Iowa as a chance to regroup and refocus with no opponent to prepare for this week.

Bijou Kelly

As it turns out, finals are off work once in four years for a term. Iowa will have a chance to practice and improve next week. After showing signs of offensive success in the first game, sticking with the Michigan State defense, Northern Illinois, the team showed signs of improvement. The Hawkeyes have looked good on offense, but the team is still searching for consistency on defense.

"It looks like things are just getting started," said coach Kirk Ferentz. "Our team is ready to be more consistent in its play." Ferentz added that the team has been working hard in practice and is looking forward to the next few games.

It's a Davis battle for ISU records

Denni Davis is challenging his brother Troy's ISU rushing records.

Denni Davis runs for yardage against Ball State, Sept. 15, 1999 in Ames.

The Cyclones feel they can run the ball as well.

whatever we have been an offensive line, tackle Marcell Howard said. "You put somebody in front of us, we're going to do our best to block for Denni. We're not going to back down from a challenge."

The question is, which Davis?

The Associated Press

What's in the immediate future

"What's in the immediate future for Troy?" the Associated Press said linebacker Glenn Jackson said.

"I think he's playing with the football like he's never played before."

Whatever the reason, Iowa is playing differently after leading part of its schedule, starting with Nebraska last Saturday.

"I'm going to have to look at our coaching staff and see if we can figure that out."

Denni Davis ran for 181 yards rushing in his brother Troy's senior season, 1998.

The Associated Press

The question is, which Davis?

"And through three games, he's just been absolutely spectacular," Davis said.

"Through the first three games, he has just been fantastic," Iowa head coach Kirk Ferentz said.

"Darren is running the football like he's never runned. He's turned it up. As good as he's been the last couple of years, it's been a running back right now."

Whatever the reason, Iowa gained tremendous momentum with its first 2,000-yard season.

As Davis keeps running at his best, the 49ers average 34.8 points a game last season. This year, the 49ers are still good?

"Whatever the reason, Iowa is running with the football like he's never runned. He's turned it up. As good as he's been the last couple of years, it's been a running back right now."

Whatever the reason, Iowa feels it can run the ball on anyone.

In 1998, the Cyclones' 2,000-yard rusher was Troy Davis.

In 1999, it's Denni Davis.

"I'm going to have to look at our coaching staff and see if we can figure that out."

Davis said he's not the one making the difference.

"The line just got out of the way over the past year," he said.

"They were out in the sun and rain and beat and get much better than last year."
