UI group cool on $5 million loss

■ Investing in smaller businesses contributed to the loss, a UI Foundation official says

By Avian Carrasquillo
The Daily Iowan

The UI Foundation, which raises funds for the university through alumni and organizations, has lost $5 million in investments during the last fiscal year.

The concentration of investments — from June 30, 1998, to June 30, 1999 — in smaller businesses contributed to the loss, said Alan Swanson, the foundation's vice president of communications, administration and corporate secretary.

"The investments themselves were placed by our Investment Advisory Committee, made up of volunteer alumni," he said. "They invested in small caps this year, which are small businesses. They did not see as much profit as large caps, which are large organizations such as Microsoft and IBM."

"Not to say that we didn't invest in large caps, but we didn't invest as heavily as we did the small caps."

The foundation's loss, the first since 1990, is small compared with the overall operations of the foundation, Swanson said. "The $5 million we lost only reflects about 1.4 percent of the $391 million we have in our endowment fund," he said. "Our endowment fund is set up permanently and will stay that way — it has to, by law."

Investments were made conservatively, with 75 percent in stocks and 25 percent in bonds, Swanson said.

He said Iowa law states that when a public institution receives a donation and puts that money towards an investment, it can spend only the earnings from the investment.

The funds that the foundation receives from alumni are directed to three fields — arts, athletics and health research, Swanson said. Donations range from $20 to $20 million, which usually go into the donor's area of concentration during her or his time at the UI, he said.

The foundation's loss hinged on the starting date of the UI's fiscal year, Swanson said.

"Had the fiscal year been looked at towards the end of December, it would've revealed that the UI Foundation was on a $25 million increase, whereas the end of June had them at a $5 million loss," he said.

Most other market indicators gained in the time that the foundation lost money. The Dow Jones and Standard & Poor 500 both gained more than 20 percent during the same period

Wall Street looks at more bad news

■ Investors are wondering, What's next? after a disastrous week.

By Eileen Glanton
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Last week, stocks tumbled under a staggering weight of bad news. The dollar was declining. A handful of companies said their profits were in trouble. And Microsoft's president deflated enthusiasm for beloved technology stocks, even his own.

This coming week, none of that bad news is likely to improve.

While some investors are likely to view the battered market as a fine place for bargain-hunting, many market analysts expect another rough week on Wall Street.

Last week, the Dow Jones industrial average fell a total of 524.30 points, tumbling more than 200 points in two separate sessions. The plunge left the Dow 1,046.71 points — 9.2 percent — below its record close of 11,326.04, set on Aug. 25.

Broader market indicators also fared poorly. The NASDAQ composite index, which lists most of the world's leading technology companies, lost 129.21 points over the course of the week.

The tumble surprised few Wall Street analysts. In recent weeks, even as the Dow and the NASDAQ hit new records, many market watchers remained troubled about signs of ill health in the market. Above all, analysts worried that the strong performance of the Dow's blue-chip stocks and technology leaders such as Intel and Microsoft wasn't shared by the broader market.

Last week, the market lost its last bastion of strength. Semiconductor stocks tumbled on Sept. 22, a day after an earthquake hit Taiwan, a major production center for the chips and components used in computers.

And on Sept. 23, Microsoft President Steve Ballmer sent the market spinning by telling reporters he believes technology stocks are too pricey.

"There is such an overvaluation of tech stocks that it's absurd," he said at a conference of the Society of American Business Editors and Writers. "I would put our company, and I would put most companies, in that category."

Fireworks explosion kills 56 in Mexico

■ Buildings were razed and the streets filled with bodies following the series of blasts.

By Lisa J. Adams
Associated Press

CELAYA, Mexico — A series of explosions ripped through a busy area of street stalls and shops across from a downtown bus station in the central Mexican city of Celaya Sunday, killing at least 56 people and injuring 348.

Interior Minister Diodoro Carrasco, who surveyed the blast area from a helicopter, said the explosions apparently began in the back of a candy store, where fireworks were sold.

News reports indicated other explosions followed in surrounding shops.

"It's a very big tragedy," Mayor Ricardo Suarez said on the national TV Azteca network.

At least 52 people died in the blasts, and another four died later in hospitals, Carrasco said. Officials said they expected to find more bodies under the rubble; they were digging cautiously for fear of setting off explosive powder that might be there.

The blasts injured 348 people, and 81 remained hospitalized Sunday night, Guanajuato Gov. Ramon Martin said.

Television footage showed some concrete buildings reduced to mounds of rubble, others with their fronts blown off. The streets were piled with debris and bodies as fire fighters sprayed water on the remnants of the fire caused by the blasts.

Electricity was cut to the city center, and gasoline sales were halted at several stations, local reporters said.

Troops were called in to help police evacuate residents and seal off an eight-block area around the explosions, as rescue workers searched for more victims.

According to media reports, the fireworks factory, across the street from the city bus station, exploded shortly before 10:30 a.m. Up to five tons of powder exploded, reports said.

A few minutes later there was a second large blast. Some reports said it was caused when gas tanks used for cooking exploded at a nearby restaurant, while others blamed more exploding fireworks. The second explosion apparently trapped some rescuers who had responded to the first blast.

Among those reported dead were a police officer, two Red Cross workers, two fire fighters, a photographer and four children.

'Weatherdance' can't weather Iowa winds

■ Wind speeds shut off Iowa City's new fountain a day after its inauguration.

By Tom Tortorich
The Daily Iowan

The showers of dedication that "Weatherdance" spouted on Sept. 25 were followed by a dry spell Sunday.

Despite its dry water cannons, Iowa City city officials said the new fountain is functioning properly.

"There is a device within the fountain that automatically shuts it down when high wind speeds are present," said City Manager Steve Atkins.

Sunday's winds peaked at 24 mph in Iowa City between 11 a.m. and noon, said Donna Dubberke, a National Weather Service meteorologist.

Apart from the occasional peaks, however, the speeds were fairly typical, ranging from 10-17 mph, she said.

"Average wind speeds for Iowa City have not been calculated because readings were not taken prior to 1995," she said.

Typical wind speeds on the plains range from 10-15 mph, according to Dubberke.

Fountain designers Andrea Myklebust and Stanton Sears could not be reached to verify the exact wind velocity at which "Weatherdance" is programmed to shut off.

If "Weatherdance" did not automatically shut off, blowing water from the fountain would be more annoying than pleasing, said Mayor Ernie Lehman.

"It's a matter of practicality," he said. "You wouldn't run out in the middle of the street in winter. Residents of Iowa City would not want a fountain operating in high winds."

While some marvel at the grandeur of "Weatherdance," others feel that it is a fair-weather fountain, noting nothing unusual about Sunday's winds.

Drug prevents spread of flu

■ Relenza will cut the chances of getting sick from a member of the family by 79 percent.

By Daniel Q. Haney
Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — An inhaled prescription drug being introduced next month is nearly 80 percent effective in keeping family members from getting the flu bug when a relative brings it home, according to a new study.

The medicine, called Relenza, is a powder spray inhaled through the mouth that has already been proven to reduce the duration of a bout of flu by a day or two. The study released Sunday shows it also cuts the chances of catching the flu from an ill relative by 79 percent.

The drug is the first of a new class of anti-viral medicines that are effective against both major strains of the disease, known as influenza A and B.

"These drugs are a major step forward," said Dr. Frederick Hayden of the University of Virginia in Charlottesville. "The latest data show that they clearly work for prevention, as well."

Relenza was approved in July by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration and is made by Glaxo Wellcome, Inc. The company says the drug will be on drugstore shelves Friday. The wholesale cost for enough to treat one bout of flu will be $37.

Hayden presented the latest data at a meeting of the American Society of Microbiology, as well as a report on another drug that is the first to shorten a bout of the common cold. Glaxo Wellcome paid for the study.

Between 25 million and 50 million Americans typically get the flu each winter. Doctors emphasize that the flu vaccine is the best way to ward off the disease but the new drugs should help when people fail to get the shots.

Often, youngsters bring home the flu to their parents and siblings from school and day care. The latest experiment was intended to see if family members could be protected by taking Relenza at the first sign of flu in the family.

Last fall, 975 families with school-age children volunteered to participate in the study. Between December and March, 337 of these families had a case of flu. The sick person and the rest of the family were randomly assigned to get either the drug or a look-alike dummy spray.

Overall, 4 percent of the folks in the families getting Relenza came down with the flu, compared with 19 percent in the untreated comparison families. Even when they did get sick, their disease appeared to be far milder. Flu in the Relenza-treated family members typically lasted three days, compared with approximately six days in the comparison group.

"This is an important aspect of the drug that could reduce the burden of influenza," said Dr. William Craig of the University of Wisconsin.

Relenza will be the first of a new class of flu medicines known as neuraminidase inhibitors to reach the market. Hoffman-LaRoche's Tamiflu, a similar medicine in pill form, is expected to be approved soon.

One drawback to the medicines is that they must be started within the first day or two of symptoms to have any effect on the disease. Most people don't call their doctor at the first twinge of flu's body ache, and they probably could not get an instant appointment, even if they did.

Not banned in I.C. is library's motto

■ The Public Library holds a "Paeon to Forbidden Words."

By Leah Reinstein
The Daily Iowan

Little House on the Prairie, by Laura Ingalls Wilder, may never be temporarily removed from elementary schools in Iowa City as it was in Minnesota, but that won't stop local activists from working to keep intellectual freedom in libraries alive this week.

Approximately 30 Iowa Citizens Sunday attended "Paeon to Forbidden Words" presented by the Iowa City Public Library, 123 S. Linn St., as part of national Banned Books Week. At the event, which was held Sunday as part of the annual Public Library Intellectual Freedom Festival, participants were encouraged to choose a book and read a passage while presenters Deanne Wortman and Darrell Taylor simultaneously sang the Library Bill of Rights.

Participants chose books that have been banned in libraries and schools across the country. Little House on the Prairie, which was banned in 1998 because it contained statements against American Indians, is one of many instances of censorship under fire during this year's celebration of national Banned Book Week. Other previously banned works include Hamlet, Dr. Seuss' The Lorax, James Joyce's Ulysses, Mark Twain's The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn and the Bible.

Unlike some libraries in the United States, the Public Library adheres to the Library Bill of Rights, which is against removing any books because of partisan or doctrinal disapproval.

"A book is an opportunity for parents to get involved with their children, to discuss the material, and decide as a family whether certain information is appropriate. The library cannot do that," she said. "If people want to make a suggestion, we will respond to them and discuss their concerns."

Petitions to censor books from the Iowa City School District have come before the School Board, said board member Mary Jo Langhorne. While Iowa City schools have never had to ban a book, an Iowa City committee has decided that some books by authors such as Stephen King should remain on the shelves only for older children.

"Typically, we have one or so complaints every year, and the committee then considers whether the material is inappropriate," she said.

Even so, Wortman said, some people are so opposed to certain books that they take matters into their own hands.

Mexican workers fighting to recoup pay

IRAPUATO, Mexico (AP) — For five years, Sabino Munoz Montesino watched layers of his skin disappear.

At the end of each 12-hour day wrestling fuzz from spiky-stalked cotton plants, scraping dirt from hard asparagus bunches or massaging fat tomatoes from resistant vines, he felt the welts grow and the flesh flake from his fingers.

But like 2.5 million other Mexican "braceros" who worked on farms in the United States between 1942 and 1964, Munoz expected something in exchange for his dawn-to-dusk workdays north of the border: pay nearly 10 times what he could earn in his own country.

Some workers apparently ended up with less than they were promised — not because American companies didn't pay, but because no one knows what the Mexican government did with 10 percent of the wages that was withheld under an agreement with the U.S. government.

The money — which some bracero activists say should have grown to about $150 million by now — was supposed to have gone into a collective savings fund for the workers, but it apparently has disappeared.

"They were supposed to give it to us, but I think they spent it all," said Munoz, a 64-year-old who still works the farms outside Irapuato, a town 170 miles northwest of Mexico City.

Militias vow to fight for East Timor

DILI, East Timor (AP) — Pro-Indonesia militiamen should peacefully return to East Timor and help rebuild the province, the commander of a peacekeeping force said Sunday, as he prepared to take control of the province from the Indonesian army.

Maj. Gen. Peter Cosgrove also called for an accelerated deployment of the second half of the 7,500-strong force, amid persistent reports that the militias are massing outside the capital to attack the peacekeepers.

"We would welcome militia to come along back into the political debate, to come back in unarmed," Cosgrove told Australian television. "And if this is done, then Timor has an early rosy future. If it's not done, then this will drag on for a long time."

The militias, backed by Indonesian troops, launched a terror campaign in the province after residents voted nearly 4-1 in favor of independence in a U.N.-sponsored referendum on Aug. 30. The Australian-led peacekeeping force arrived in East Timor on Sept. 21 to stop the violence and maintain order until a U.N. force arrives in November to shepherd the territory through the transition to independence.

Just across the border, in the province of West Timor, militiamen brandishing rifles and machetes vowed Sunday to fight for the province.

Brothers survive after being buried in quake

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — Two brothers were pulled to freedom Sunday after spending 5½ days buried alive in the wreckage of Taiwan's killer quake, saying they survived by eating a few apples and playing cards in the small space where they were trapped.

Amid the devastation and shattered hopes, Taiwanese were cheered by the improbable survival of Sun Chi-hwang, 20, and Sun Chi-feng, who turned 26 on Sept. 22, one day into their 130-hour ordeal in the wreckage of a collapsed Taipei building.

The brothers were rescued even as powerful aftershocks continue to jolt Taiwan. A particularly strong one hit early Sunday, killing at least three people on top of more than 2,000 who have already died.

Onlookers applauded as the younger Sun, stripped to the waist but staying upright and holding a bottle of water he got from rescue workers, was lifted to safety by a crane. His brother was rushed away on a stretcher.

Their mother, Liu Luan, heaved with sobs of joy as her sons came out alive, speaking so fast she was almost incoherent.

"I kept thinking, 'This is not possible, this is not possible,'" Liu told reporters at the scene. "I kept praying for them all the time."

The brothers were hospitalized in stable condition. Doctors were checking them for internal injuries or dehydration.

No retreat for Buchanan on Third Reich

■ The presidential hopeful says the U.S. is repeating the errors that brought about World War II.

By William C. Mann
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Pat Buchanan relented not an inch Sunday on foreign-policy views criticized by fellow Republican presidential hopefuls and made a modest proposal for the GOP to end his dalliance with the Reform Party: nominate him.

At the same time, Buchanan chastised members of both parties — "especially the Republicans" — for being "braying donkeys of interventionism." He said the United States should apologize to Russia for the "double-cross" of expanding NATO into Central Europe.

And, he said, the West today is making the same mistakes in Europe that he wrote about in a new book, A Republic, Not an Empire.

"We are repeating the errors that led to World War II, and for heaven's sake, stop it before World War III," Buchanan said on "Fox News Sunday."

Buchanan's book entered the national political debate last week because of its questions about the United States' entry into World War II against Nazi Germany. It said Adolf Hitler's Third Reich was no threat to the United States after 1940, and Allied guarantees to Poland brought war to the continent and gave the Soviet Union's communist government two extra years to prepare for Germany's invasion.

Presidential rivals Sen. John McCain, Elizabeth Dole and Steve Forbes have questioned Buchanan's writings in highly critical terms. McCain said Republicans should welcome Buchanan's departure from the party.

On Sunday, Buchanan said he needs at least three more weeks before deciding.

Law targets 'dangerous' gun owners

Connecticut police will be able to confiscate weapons they believe to be a danger to others.

By Adam Gorlick
Associated Press

HARTFORD, Conn. — Before Columbine High School, before the Atlanta day-trader offices, before the Jewish community center in Los Angeles, there was Matthew Beck.

In March 1998, the 35-year-old accountant went on a suicidal shooting spree in his offices at the Connecticut Lottery headquarters. Four people died before Beck put the gun to his own head.

Lawmakers reacted with one of the toughest gun-seizure laws on the books.

Starting next month, Connecticut police will be allowed to confiscate guns from anyone determined to be an immediate danger to himself or others. The law is rooted in the notion that rampages such as Beck's are preceded by a detectable descent into madness.

Critics say the law tramples the Second Amendment and fear it could lead to unwarranted searches and seizures.

Supporters say the standards for seizing guns are so high the law will seldom be used.

From both sides, Connecticut's law — apparently the first of its kind — is attracting attention. Legally seizing a gun will require more than suspicion, said state police Lt. Robert Kiehm.

There must be evidence that the person recently tortured animals, threatened to kill himself or others or acted violently. A police investigation must conclude there is no other way to keep the person from doing harm, and a warrant must be issued by a judge.

The law also requires a hearing within 14 days to determine whether the gun should be returned.

"You need probable cause just to begin an investigation," Kiehm said. "But it gives police officers the power to take some proactive steps instead of waiting for something to happen."

Although the course did require much effort and diligence on my part, it was truly worth it. I find that I can read novels, textbooks and magazines at an amazing rate and still be able to understand at an excellent comprehension level. This course will greatly benefit me in the future.

Mumford is shrink-wrapped

FILM REVIEW By John Mullin

The less-than-entertaining advertising campaign for Mumford might not make you eager to see the movie. The promos show a gaggle of wacky celebrity patients, such as Ted Danson and Martin Short, revealing their problems to Dr. Mumford (Loren Dean), who proceeds to dispense advice, much to the shock of anyone who's even vaguely aware of what a psychologist does.

But Mumford isn't a psychologist. About a third of the way through the movie (and for no apparent reason), he blows his secret and tells local Bill Gates-style billionaire Skip Skipperton (Jason Lee) about the life he has abandoned: hard-core drug abuse, indiscriminate sex and all-round seediness.

After this confession, we're treated to another round of Mumford's patients. He sees people who are troubled with chronic depression, compulsive buying, anxiety attacks and bizarre sexual fantasies. All of them seemingly want someone to listen, and Mumford does.

As the film goes on, little things he says and does serve as catalysts to free people from their inhibitions in a Pleasantville sort of way. As one might guess, however, there are those in town who have suspicions about Mumford's unorthodox methods and his credibility as a licensed shrink.

A few parts of the film are funny, and writer/director Lawrence Kasdan (The Big Chill, Grand Canyon) has taken a lot of care in filling the film with well-drawn and realistic characters possessing secret, interesting lives. However, Mumford never really comes together in a cohesive or satisfying way.

The movie is designed to evoke a strong emotional reaction but fails almost always. This becomes evident in the characters and situations that seem to be leading up to something, then don't go anywhere.

Because of this, Mumford is frustrating — the kind of movie you really want to like for its concept and potential but can't because of the mediocre plot line.

What it all boils down to, perhaps, is that Mumford is about second chances. The town gives the psychologist with a shady past another chance, and he gives it right back to his patients. On the other hand, the movie could be implying that falling in love is the way to solve all your problems.

Whatever the case, Mumford ultimately comes off as a somewhat convoluted mess that doesn't say much and fails to amount to much more than the sum of its parts.

The Nerves lets New Animal loose in I.C.

■ The Chicago-based band is set to play at Gabe's tonight.

By Jim Mack
 The Daily Iowan

No matter what your ears tell you, the Nerves is not trying to be punk. "Punk" is merely a simplistic adjective that tends to roll off the tongue of whoever tries to describe this Chicago-based band.

The Nerves falls back on '60s pop music as far as inspiration goes. It's got a garage-band sound, from which probably all the punk references originate, and it stays away from intricate complexities. The band's range includes hard-nosed rock with surprisingly audible vocals.

The Nerves' second and recently released New Animal is a little darker in content than its love-incorporated debut. The music on New Animal migrates from cement-styled rock to pillow-soft punk.

The band will be at Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St., tonight at 8 to perform what promises to be a lively and aggressive show.

The Daily Iowan spoke with the Nerves' lead singer/guitarist, Rob Datum.

DI: You've been labeled '60s garage-rock that's been infected with punk. Is that how you want to come across as?

Datum: I don't know, it's whatever you want to call it. It's certainly '60s music. So if it comes out that way, and somebody wants to say that, that's fine.

DI: Does the band's name reflect your style of play?

Datum: I guess so. I wasn't really conscious of the way we were playing with the name. But I have heard comments of people saying that.

DI: I've heard your live shows are pretty high-energy.

Datum: Yea, we try to crank it up. The music definitely has a "nervous" energy. It's interesting because when I write down songs, none of them are consciously high-energy songs. They're just kind of a pop melody. Usually I can't control the way it comes out. That's the way your style ends up being. I think maybe when you are playing in front of a bunch of people... maybe there's kind of a circle of excitement that radiates between the two. I've noticed that we play a lot faster than we do in the rehearsal or in the studio.

DI: What was it like working with engineer Jack Endino (Nirvana, Mudhoney, Makers)?

Datum: It was great. Our first record was very wiry and tinny-sounding, which I thought was appropriate for the music. For New Animal, we wanted to have a little bit more depth, something with a little bit more variety. We didn't want to change the whole sound or anything like that. We approached him, and he was really into the first record, so he flew out, and we spent a week and a half with him. The thing that struck me that was really good about him was that he wanted us to make a tape of what we were currently listening to, and then we also made demos of some songs we wanted on the record.

DI: Do you have any advice for our local punk-rockers?

Datum: All I can say is that if you want to play music, there's nothing that's going to really stop you from doing it. As far as getting a record out — you can't depend on the fact that someone's going to put one out for you, but these days you can do it yourself.

Russia steps up air attacks

■ The Russian army may begin ground operations.

By Ruslan Musayev
Associated Press

GROZNY, Russia — The Russian military Sunday warned it may launch ground operations against Islamic militants in Chechnya, as warplanes bombed the Chechen capital for a fourth day, pounding industrial and communications facilities.

Four Russian jets flew repeatedly over the city's southern Oktyabrsky district Sunday morning, firing rockets and dropping bombs, the Interfax news agency said. The district is the site of Chechnya's now-destroyed television broadcasting center as well as oil wells.

Russian Defense Minister Igor Sergeyev said he could not rule out the possibility of launching ground operations in the breakaway republic. Until now, the military has favored an air war that would keep Russian casualties to a minimum.

"There are several variants of a plan for ground operations, which will be implemented depending on the situation that develops," Interfax quoted Sergeyev as saying. He spoke while visiting soldiers recovering from Dagestan battle wounds in a Moscow military hospital.

"The main aim of all the plans is to eliminate the bandits" and "to create a considerably deep security zone around Chechnya," he said.

The militants are separatists who want to form an independent Islamic nation in what is now southern Russia. The Russian military said the air raids are aimed at preventing militant incursions from Chechnya into the Russian republic of Dagestan, where they fought Russian forces in August and September. Increasingly, however, Russian leaders have vowed to eradicate the militants altogether.

Eyewitnesses said that over the past four days, Russian air raids have destroyed more than 100 oil pumps, reservoirs and small refineries in and around Grozny that are believed to be controlled by Chechen rebel field commanders. The oil was the basis of a profitable business providing low-grade gasoline to other Russian regions.

Russian planes also struck suspected rebel camps near Chechnya's border with Dagestan on Sept. 25, the ITAR-Tass news agency said, citing the provisional federal press center in Dagestan.

Col. Gen. Anatoly Kornukov, commander of Russia's Air Force, said in a television interview Sunday that the air campaign against Chechnya could last another month.

Group blasé about stock market loss

FOUNDATION

the UI posted its loss.

The market experienced large gains during calendar year 1998, but those have declined since January, said David Bates, an associate professor of finance.

While the foundation's loss won't have any effect on UI students, Swanson said, a continuous trend could make a difference.

"There's always a possibility that we could see a string of unsuccessful fiscal years, which would affect students and faculty, but that hasn't happened yet," he said.

The stock market changed continually in 1998 despite its being an overall good fiscal year, Bates said.

"The fiscal year in which the UI Foundation lost the $5 million was one of extreme changes," he said. "In the third quarter alone, there was a volatile change, where the stock market fell and later rebounded."

Bates said he has been following the foundation's situation closely and believes that it attempted to use a passive strategy and pulled out of the market at the time the market experienced large losses.

"By not re-entering the market, it was not able to experience the rebound that followed the fall, but that's just what I think," Bates said.

Swanson said that Bates' theory simply wasn't the case.

"The stocks we invested in, we did not sell, so we did not lose the stocks — they are just down right now," he said. "We're not happy about the loss, but there was a blip in the market that hit us as well as other businesses, and now we have to recover."

Jim Lane of HIA Discount Brokerage, 311 E. Washington St., said the stock market is never certain.

"We've seen a good stock market in the past year — right now though inflation has got the current status of the market in a tough streak," he said.

The foundation has a positive long-term investment record and, despite recent losses, remains strong, Swanson said.

"A lot of times people tend to dwell on the negative and panic," he said. "We've seen losses before, but we've restructured to the needs of the changing market and will continue to do so."

NATION BRIEF

Sightseeing plane crash leaves 10 dead

KAILUA-KONA, Hawaii (AP) — A sightseeing airplane with 10 people aboard crashed high on the flanks of the Mauna Loa Volcano. There were no survivors.

"The plane was totally demolished, just like a plane would be if it went into rocks at a high rate of speed," said Doug Lentz, spokesman for the Hawaii Volcanoes National Park.

Rescue crews reached the remote spot on the Big Island of Hawaii to recover bodies Sunday morning, said Bruce Butts of the Hawaii County Civil Defense.

No details were released on the victims. The Red Cross was working with the tour company, Big Island Air, to notify relatives, Butts said.

Big Island Air notified Kona International Airport at 7:20 p.m. on Sept. 25 that its plane was overdue with a pilot and nine passengers, said Marilyn Kali, a spokeswoman for the state Department of Transportation. There were conflicting reports Sunday as to the make of the plane.

"Weatherdance" replaced the old fountain at a cost of approximately $70,000 and was built as a part of the city's Downtown Revitalization Plan.

The fountain will be turned off for the season before the first frost, Atkins said.

The dry "Weatherdance" was still a pleasing sight for Iowa City resident Marge Aldinger.

"I like the artistry," she said. "It's hard to comment on it when I haven't seen it running."

Underwood found bleeding in city street

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Dolphins defensive end Underwood was found bleeding from a head injury Sunday, bleeding from a head injury that police described as a serious injury.

"He was cut. We're still not sure of the nature of the injury," Doherty-Wright, a Lansing police spokeswoman, said.

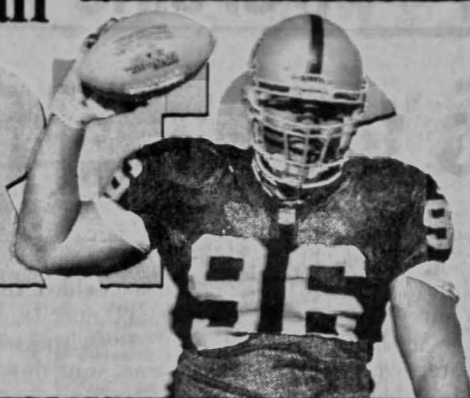

Underwood disappeared from the Vikings training camp after one day this summer. When he was found he talked of giving up football for the ministry but signed with the Dolphins after being released by Minnesota.

Doherty-Wright said Underwood was found about two blocks south of the capitol in downtown Lansing at 12:45 p.m. The site was cordoned off and a library and about the business district.

He was taken to Sparrow Hospital for surgery. WLNS-TV was in stable condition, a spokeswoman declined comment.

Lansing police said Underwood had been arrested Saturday and released on bond, but they did not have information on what the injury was because he had not been seen. A message was left at the home of Underwood's attorney, Prosecutor Stuart Doherty, but Underwood had been charged with failing to pay

Leonard sinks 45-foot putt, U.S. regains Cup

Justin Leonard became the surprising hero Sunday, as the U.S. fought back to clinch the Ryder Cup title with the biggest comeback in the event's 72-year history.

By Doug Ferguson
 Associated Press

BROOKLINE, Mass. — With a wink of the eye and a wag of the finger, Ben Crenshaw insisted against all odds that his beleaguered Americans were destined to win the Ryder Cup.

On Sunday, he made a believer out of everyone.

His players took to heart his tearful talk about destiny, playing like they had nothing to lose and finally living up to their potential. The gallery caught on, too, stomping and cheering as the greatest comeback in Ryder Cup history unfolded before their eyes in an electric atmosphere that riled the Europeans.

At end of a wild and delirious day at The Country Club, Justin Leonard, Hal Sutton and the rest of the Ryder Cup stars sprayed champagne over a balcony and sang the national anthem with thousands of fans still trying to grasp the magnitude of the victory.

Then, Crenshaw stepped onto a stone wall and held up a prize far more valuable than the $63 million in revenue that threatened to divide his team.

The Ryder Cup is staying in America.

"What transpired is a moving experience," Crenshaw said. "I do believe in fate."

The Americans won 8½ points from the 12 singles matches Sunday, giving them a 14½-13½ victory and their first Ryder Cup victory since 1993.

IOWA FIELD HOCKEY

Iowa shuts out No. 2 Penn State

The Iowa women's field hockey team upset No. 5 Ohio State and No. 2 Penn State at Grant Field last weekend.

By Robert Yarborough
 The Daily Iowan

After mediocre seasons the past two years, the Iowa field hockey team looked back in top form this weekend at Grant Field.

The rebuilding phase is officially over.

No. 10 Iowa (8-0) dismantled No. 5 Ohio State 6-1 on Friday, before shutting out No. 2 Penn State 2-0 on Sunday. At the end of the Nittany Lion game, Hawkeye fans stormed the field.

"Both of these teams came into our house," coach Beth Beglin said. "And as hospitable as we are, that unfortunately does not transfer to the playing field."

Going into the second half with only a 1-0 lead against Ohio State (7-1), Iowa went on a tear that included a run where three goals were scored in the span of four minutes.

Freshman Tiffany Leister led the way with three goals, two of which came off penalty corners in the second half. Senior Lesley Irvine and Alycyn Freet assisted on four of the six goals scored throughout the afternoon.

"With two minutes left in the game, I almost started crying," sophomore Anita Miller said. "The fact that we were able to put up six goals against a team this strong should send a strong message to the rest of the Big Ten."

Coach Beglin had an idea of what to expect after seeing the Hawkeyes perform well in practice.

"We were just teeing it up on them and I have stated before that penalty shots was an area that this team needed to improve on," Beglin said. "In practice, Tiffany was shooting the ball extremely well, so I

New rankings to be released Tuesday

By Robert Yarborough
 The Daily Iowan

With wins against two of the top five teams in the nation, Iowa has put itself in a position to be ranked as the top team in the nation when the national coaches poll comes out on Tuesday. No. 1 Connecticut defeated Villanova 6-1 on Saturday after defeating Penn State 1-0 last weekend. Heading into last weekend, Iowa was nine points away from No. 9 Wake Forest in the rankings.

"I don't think the team is worried too much about the rankings," Kelly Druley said. "If we are number one, of course we will be excited, but I think that the only ranking that matters is at the end of the season."

Druley steps up to challenge

Iowa coach Beth Beglin was not pleased with the way that Penn State was able to force its way inside the 25-yard line during Sunday's game, but was happy that two seniors stepped up to the challenge. Kelly Druley was able to defend a remarkable ten penalty corners against Penn State and 13 total shots on the game.

Underwood found bleeding in city street

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Miami Dolphins defensive end Dimitrius Underwood was found on a city street Sunday, bleeding from a neck wound that police described as a life-threatening injury.

"He was cut. We're still investigating the nature of the injury," said Sgt. Linda Doherty-Wright, a Lansing police spokeswoman.

Underwood disappeared from the Vikings training camp after one day this summer. When he was found he talked of giving up football for the ministry but signed with the Dolphins after being released by Minnesota.

Doherty-Wright said police discovered Underwood lying on a street about two blocks south of the state capitol in downtown Lansing about 12:45 p.m. The site was near a park and a library and about a block from the business district.

He was taken to Sparrow Hospital for surgery. WLNS-TV reported he was in stable condition, but a hospital spokeswoman declined comment.

Lansing police said Underwood had been arrested Saturday night and released on bond, but said it had no information on what the charge was because he had not been arraigned. A message was left at the home of Prosecutor Stuart Dunning III. WLNS-TV and WSYM-TV reported that Underwood had been arrested on a charge of failing to pay child support.

Iowa hangs with Big Ten opponents

Iowa volleyball upset Purdue in four games and narrowly lost to No. 15 Wisconsin.

By Jeremy Schmitzer
 The Daily Iowan

The Iowa volleyball showed signs of a new era emerging during its first Big Ten matches of the season.

After upsetting Purdue (15-11, 15-7, 9-15, 15-13) on Friday, the Hawkeyes were up-ended by No. 15 Wisconsin (3-15, 15-0, 16-14, 15-13) on Saturday night.

Despite the loss to the Badgers, the Hawkeyes were upbeat about their weekend performance.

"The Purdue game was huge," said senior Julie Williams. "It was not only good for our record, but for our confidence."

The victory against Purdue marked the first time Iowa opened up Big Ten play with a victory since 1994, which gave coach Rita Crockett reason to be excited.

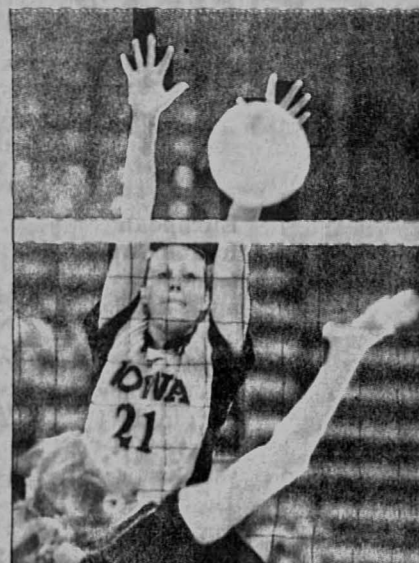

"It was a great win for our team," Crockett said. "We worked really hard and didn't give up when Purdue made a rally."

Despite the confidence Iowa gained in its game against Purdue, the Hawkeyes couldn't overcome a tough Wisconsin team.

Iowa jumped out to an early lead by beating the Badgers in the first game 15-3, but Wisconsin came back shutting out the Hawkeyes in the second. The Badgers went on to win the third and fourth games narrowly.

"It was a well fought game," Crockett said. "In time we will be to win close matches like that. I was really proud of the way we fought and

Celebration controversy overshadows win

tain Mark James said. "We gave it our best shot."
As much as Crenshaw believes in fate, he played a part, too.

He sent out his six best players to create a chain-reaction of momentum, and it paid off with six decisive victories that swiftly turned the tide. He cried with joy when Justin Leonard delivered the decisive blow, a birdie putt on the 17th hole that was as long as the Americans' odds of winning the Ryder Cup.

"I never stopped believing," a choked-up Crenshaw said. "I'm stunned. This is so indescribable."
That victory came on the 17th green was only fitting. Across the street is the house where Francis Ouimet lived when he won the 1913 U.S. Open on this course and made golf popular in the United States.

Leonard's 45-foot birdie putt unleashed a torrent of emotion that had been building throughout an electric day at The Country Club, where fans cheered every American victory and every missed putt by the Europeans.

Although one match was still on the course, the putt — followed by Jose Maria Olazabal's miss — guaranteed the Americans 14½ points, the amount they needed to win, but an amount few believed they would get.

"This was history being made today, and we all wanted to be a part of that," said Hal Sutton, the rock-solid star of the U.S. team who contributed 3½ points. "This is the greatest moment in golf right now."

The Europeans didn't think so. They took exception to the player celebration after Leonard's putt because Olazabal still had a 25-foot birdie putt to tie the match

Dave Martin/Associated Press

Members of the U.S. Ryder Cup team pose with the Ryder Cup trophy, Sunday night in Brookline, Mass., following the team's dramatic victory, and keep alive Europe's fading hopes.

"It was very sad to see. It was an ugly picture," Olazabal said.

"It's about the most disgusting thing I've ever seen," said assistant captain Sam Torrance. "This is not sour grapes. The whole American team, and spectators ran right across the green over Oly's line. He still has a putt to tie the hole. We could still take the Ryder Cup home. It was disgusting."

Crenshaw later apologized and said: "The celebration started spilling over, and it really was not something that we need to be proud of."

The Americans overwhelmed Europe in the first six matches, closing all of them out before the 17th hole.

"When you get the first match-ups that easily, the crowd is going to get more involved, and that's all it takes," Jesper Parnevik said. "They just got huge momentum going."

Even David Duval, who referred to the Ryder Cup as an exhibition, showed how much it meant by repeatedly shaking his fists and cupping his hand to his ear, asking the gallery for even more noise — maybe too much noise.

Despite a 10-6 deficit going into the final round, despite the fact no team has ever come back from more than two points on the last day, Crenshaw refused to give in.

"I've felt it all week," Crenshaw said. "I know how these guys can play. I know how determined they are. Darned if we didn't pull it off."

Crenshaw had that feeling once before. He won the 1995 Masters after the death of his longtime teacher Harvey Penick. The victory came out of nowhere, and Crenshaw said at the time he felt it was Penick's spirit guiding him along.

Doug Mills/Associated Press

U.S. captain studies history, makes it

Ben Crenshaw never gave up on his dream of helping the U.S. regain the Cup.

By Jimmy Golen
Associated Press

BROOKLINE, Mass. — Drenched with champagne and flush with victory, U.S. Ryder Cup captain Ben Crenshaw crossed the veranda outside the men's locker room until he was virtually hanging over the throngs cheering his name.

He pumped his fist. He blew a kiss to the crowd. And then he shared with them the message that had been so effective in rallying the Americans from a 4-point deficit to a 14½-13½ victory.

"Don't stop believing," Crenshaw told the fans. And then, pumping his fist one more time, he yelled, "Yes!"

After two years of gushing about the history of the Ryder Cup and The Country Club course, Crenshaw went out and made some this weekend, guiding the Americans to victory in eight of 12 singles matches Sunday — one other was tied — to wrest the cup back from Europe.

No team had ever come back from more than 2 points down on the final day, but Crenshaw was stunningly optimistic on Saturday night when sent the media home with this farewell:

"I'm going to leave y'all with this thought," he said, wagging his finger at the reporters who had watched his heavily favored side fall behind 10-6 after two days. "I'm a big believer in fate. I have a good feeling about this. That's all I'm going to tell you."

The Country Club has been the site of several memorable events, none more historic than the 1913 U.S. Open, when unknown American amateur Francis Ouimet beat English professionals Harry Vardon and Ted Ray in a playoff. The victory is considered the founding moment of American golf, and Ouimet is considered its father.

And it was right on No. 17 that Ouimet — a caddie who lived right across Clyde Street from the hole — made par to beat Vardon's double bogey and go two strokes up; Ray had already fallen back. Crenshaw called the coincidence "a little bit spooky."

"Francis Ouimet's dream. Francis Ouimet's dream, right here!" Crenshaw yelled as he hugged tournament chairman John Cornish after Justin Leonard's 45-foot putt all but clinched the cup. "We made the greatest putt I've ever seen, right here on Francis Ouimet's green. ... It's almost mystical."

COLLEGE FOOTBALL

Pac-10 is packed with wild games

With eight of the Top 25 teams losing, unpredictable outcomes highlighted Saturday's college football.

By Richard Rosenblatt Associated Press

A month into the college football season, the Pac-10 Conference has cornered the market on startling results.

In the past few weeks there were astounding nonconference losses, including Arizona State's 35-7 shocker at New Mexico State and Arizona's 34-point loss at Penn State in the Pigskin Classic.

On a Saturday, when eight Top 25 teams tumbled, the Pac-10 was anything but predictable: -USC's David Newbury missed three field goals — two in OT — and Josh Frankel, Oregon's third kicker, hit a 27-yarder as the Ducks beat the Trojans 33-30 in a game lasting 4 hours, 40 minutes.

"It was a great moment in my life," Frankel said. In the ensuing celebration, a fan crashed into Frankel's kicking knee and may have caused ligament damage.

-Joe Borchard replaced injured starter Todd Husak and threw five TD passes, including a league-record 98-yarder to Troy Walters, in Stanford's 42-32 win over UCLA. Walters had nine catches for a school-record 278 yards and three TDs. Stanford, by the way, is 3-0 in the league after opening the season with a 52-point nonconference loss to Texas.

Saturday's results knocked the Trojans (2-1, 0-1) and Bruins (2-2, 0-1) from the Top 25, leaving No. 25 Oregon (3-1, 1-0) as the Pac-10's only ranked team.

It also left Oregon State (3-0, 0-0) — looking for its first winning season since 1970 — as the Pac-10's only undefeated team. The Beavers, idle on Saturday, open league play at USC next week.

On a day of furious finishes, including No. 7 Tennessee's 17-16 last-minute win over Memphis and East Carolina's 27-23 comeback over No. 18 Miami, the Pac-10, naturally, topped the list.

At Pullman, Wash., Keith Smith's desperation 42-yard TD pass to Bobby Wade with no time left gave Arizona a 30-24 victory over Washington State. Replays appeared to show the ball hit the turf before Wade had possession.

In the one game matching Top 25 teams, No. 4 Michigan beat Wisconsin 21-16 as Tom Brady threw two TD passes and the Wolverines dented Ron Dayne's Heisman Trophy chances by holding him to 88 yards — none in the second half. "Our goal was to hold him to less than 80," Michigan linebacker Ian Gold said, "but 88's not bad."

Dayne needs 1,105 yards in his final seven games to beat Ricky Williams' 1-A career rushing record. "The coaches told me not to get frustrated, that we were going to get 1- or 2-yard runs," he said. "So I just tried to keep going."

On Thursday night, it was No. 8 Virginia Tech 31, Clemson 13. CLOSE CALLS

No. 7 Tennessee 17, Memphis 16

At Knoxville, Tenn., Tee Martin's 15-yard TD pass to Cedrick Wilson with a minute left saved the Volunteers (2-1) from dropping out of the national title race.

"I told them I would take one point or 50 points, whatever we could get done," Vols coach Phillip Fulmer said. "I didn't know they would take me literally."

Memphis (1-3), 31-point underdogs, held Jamal Lewis to 45 yards on 16 carries. In '96, Memphis upset Tennessee 21-17 and knocked them out of the title chase.

No. 10 Georgia 24, Central Florida 23

At Athens, Ga., Javier Beorlegui missed an extra point attempt with 5:21 left, and the Bulldogs (3-0) escaped with a win. Vic Penn's TD pass to Page Sessions brought the Golden Knights (0-4) within a point.

Central Florida, 28-point underdogs, got the ball back and made it to the Dawgs 20 but two penalties, including a questionable offensive pass interference call, knocked the Knights out of field-goal range.

No. 11 Purdue 31, Northwestern 23

At West Lafayette, Ind., with Purdue at its 1-yard line and a one-point lead with under seven minutes to play, Drew Brees threw a 99-yard TD pass to Vinny Sutherland.

The longest play in Purdue's 112 years of football gave the Boilermakers (4-0) their 10th straight win, the school's longest streak since an 11-game run from 1928-30. Brees was 32-of-50 for 405 yards and three TDs. Washington 31, Colorado 24

At Seattle, another intriguing Pac-10 game saw Huskies coach Rick Neuheisel get his first win, 31-24 over Colorado, the school he used to coach, on Marques Tuiasosopo's 9-yard TD pass with 3:17 to go.

Casey seals Penn State's QB platoon

By David Kinney Associated Press

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. — From Arizona to Ann Arbor, lots of coaches tried quarterback platoons this season.

Most coaches finally settled on one guy, and Penn State's Joe Paterno, too, seemed unlikely to stick with college football's latest fad for an entire year. Through five games now, he has — and over the past two weeks, Kevin Thompson and Rashard Casey have shown why.

A week after Thompson threw a perfect 79-yard bomb to lead Penn State to a comeback victory over No. 9 Miami, Casey posted sensational numbers — and even more spectacular plays — as the No. 2

Nittany Lions beat Indiana 45-24 Saturday. "Casey was the show-stopper today," linebacker Brandon Short said.

Finally, no one is asking Paterno whether he is sticking with his two-quarterback system.

After Saturday, it's official: He is.

Throughout Saturday's game, Casey showed nice passing touch. In the first half, he found tight end Tony Stewart for 30- and 26-yard gains to set up a touchdown and a field goal.

In the second half, he had two TD passes to keep pace with Indiana's Antwaan Randle El, whose touchdown throws kept the Hoosiers in the game. First, Casey drilled a pass to Eric McCoo for a 20-yarder. Then he threw a well-placed ball to the pylon that Sam Crenshaw nabbed for a 9-yard score.

He was on the field for all five of Penn State's offensive scores, and finished with the best numbers of his career: 13-of-15 for 196 yards, two TDs and no interceptions.

He also rushed for 66 yards on eight carries and one scrambling roller-coaster of a touchdown.

"That was a pass going left," Casey said about the play. "And then all of a sudden, I was running right."
