2 fires leave 11 homeless

Dawn Greene, left, a resident of 320 E. Fairchild St., is comforted by her friend Melissa Yoder (foreground) while her roommate Anneke van der Valk is comforted by Tatum Gunsolly following a fire that caused $25,000 worth of damage to their house Monday afternoon.

Two area fires Monday left 11 residents at least temporarily homeless. A fire was reported at 320 E. Fairchild St. in a basement bedroom at approximately 5:45 p.m. Firefighters brought the blaze under control in approximately 25 minutes. "The fire melted a water line in the basement — and when the water line separated, it probably helped to stop the spread of the fire," said Jim Humston, Iowa City Fire Department battalion chief. Damage to the structure is estimated at $25,000, said department officials. Kristin Daniels, a resident and a Kirkwood Community College student, said she smelled smoke roughly 30 minutes after arriving home from school at 5:15 p.m. "We were sitting in the living room, and someone smelled smoke," she said. "Within 20 seconds, the house was full of smoke." Her housemate, UI senior Anneke Vander Valk, and their friend, UI junior Tatum Gunsolly, were in the house. The other three residents — Joe Winckler, Anne Wells and Dawn Green — were at work or in class, Daniels said. Gunsolly called 911 on his cell phone at approximately 5:43 p.m. "I went down into the basement to see if the cat was down there, and I couldn't see anything," he said, adding that the cat was found unharmed later. "Then I told everyone to get out." Daniels said there were no visible flames and that smoke was coming from the basement where the dryer was running. She said the smoke reached the second floor first. Nancy Fandel, a family friend of Daniels who has lived across the street for two years, said firefighters arrived five minutes after the call was placed. "I only saw smoke," said Fandel, who estimates that the house, like hers, dates back to the 1920s. "It was amazing. Almost immediately, smoke was pouring

If they had gotten here five minutes later, the whole place would have burned to the ground.

Bombing drives civilian retreat

■ The Russian air force is trying to crush suspected Islamic militants.

By Russian Musayev
 Associated Press

GROZNY, Russia — Terrified civilians tried to flee Chechnya by the thousands Monday, driven out by a Russian bombing blitz intended to crush Islamic militants in the break-away republic. "I wish I were dead," mourned Tamara Aliyeva, 70, whose house in Grozny was destroyed by Russian bombs. "I don't know what to do or where to go." Aliyeva joined tens of thousands of Chechens who headed for the neighboring Russian republic of Ingushetia in hopes of finding refuge — only to find the border closed. In Grozny, Russian airplanes were raining bombs and missiles for the fifth straight day. Witnesses said oil refineries in Grozny were ablaze, blanketing the capital in choking black smoke. Russian jets also struck other cities and villages throughout Chechnya, targeting suspected militant bases along with oil derricks and other industrial facilities. Chechen President Aslan Maskhadov claimed Monday that 300 people had been killed in Grozny alone. The figure could not be independently confirmed. Many Chechen refugees trapped on the Russian border were in a state of shock. "Where is my Mama?" 8-year-old Liza Temirsultanova kept asking between sobs. Her grandfather, Ayup Temirsultanov, said that Liza's mother, baby sister and two brothers had all been killed by Russian bombs in Grozny Monday. The bombing is aimed at weakening Islamic militants, who have twice invaded the neighboring Russian republic of Dagestan in recent weeks from their main bases in Chechnya.

Executions hit highest level in 50 years

■ The total could reach 100 for the first time since 1951.

By Laurie Asseo
 Associated Press

WASHINGTON — With three months remaining, 1999 already is the deadliest year on America's death row in almost half a century. Eighteen states have executed 76 killers, and the total could reach 100 by year's end.

"There has been this stairway upward since the death penalty was re-instituted in 1976, said Richard Dieter of the Death Penalty Information Center, a group critical of how capital punishment is administered. "It hasn't peaked yet ... 150 is probably where things may max out over the next three to four years."

Executions on Sept. 24 in Delaware and North Carolina raised the year's total to 76, the most since 1954, when 81 people were put to death in U.S. prisons. If the year-end total reaches 100, as Dieter said could happen, it would be the first time since 105 people were executed in 1951.

There were 68 executions last year, 74 in 1997.

States have executed 576 convicted killers since the Supreme Court ended a four-year nationwide ban on capital punishment in 1976. Currently, approximately 3,565 people are on death rows across the nation.

Many countries have abolished the death penalty, including Canada, Australia, France and Germany. Amnesty International said it received reports of 1,067 executions in China in 1998, more than 100 in the Democratic Republic of Congo and 66 in Iran. The organization said it also has unconfirmed reports of hundreds of executions in Iraq.

Eighteen of the 38 American states with death penalty laws have imposed capital punishment this year; once again, Texas is first, with 25 executions.

"What sometimes people lose sight of is that prosecutors don't give the death penalty — it takes a unanimous 12 folks (on a jury) to do it," said John B. Holmes Jr., district attorney in Harris County, Texas, which includes Houston.

Holmes' office seeks a death sentence in 12-20 cases a year and almost always succeeds.

Drawing a fine line on politics

■ The UI will hold a symposium on political cartoons, featuring, among others, Paul Conrad.

By Steve Schmadeke
 The Daily Iowan

Three-time Pulitzer Prize winner Paul Conrad spent part of his college years playing string bass in a swing band and having no definite goal in life.

After returning from World War II, Conrad enrolled at the UI, but classes didn't go well. "Everything I got into, I flunked; I just flunked," he said in a telephone interview from his office at the Los Angeles Times.

In 1949, in a meeting that would change his life, Conrad met Charlie Carroll, then editor of The Daily Iowan, at a local bar. Carroll asked Conrad to draw political cartoons for the DI. Conrad had never drawn a cartoon before, but he quickly became enamored with the work. "I realized this was one hell of a way to make a living," he said. The creative process of music remained an influence on his work as he moved from the DI to the Denver Post.

"You either can or can't draw a cartoon," Conrad said. "It's like playing the piano by ear. I remember I was playing Chopin, and all of a sudden I heard a popular tune in my head. So I stopped playing Chopin and started playing it. I didn't have to read it; I still can't read music."

The process of drawing cartoons is the same, he said; it springs from his subconscious as he keeps up with national events. However, Conrad expressed disappointment in the direction the cartoon industry is headed.

"There are no more editorial cartoons — it's all gags," he said. "And that's very sad. We're the only country in the world with a First Amendment, and what are we

■ Iowa economy is expected to grow at roughly 4 percent, says a UI economic institute.

By Deidre Bello and Avian Carrasquillo
 The Daily Iowan

UI findings that predict continued income and employment growth in Iowa into the year 2000 may affect UI students who will be entering the job force in the near future.

The forecast, released last week by the UI Institute for Economic Research, predict economic growth at approximately 4 percent, said Beth Ingram, the director of the institute and an associate professor of economics.

In regards to real income, a 4 percent increase means that at the end of 1999, the average person in Iowa will have 4 percent more purchasing power, she said.

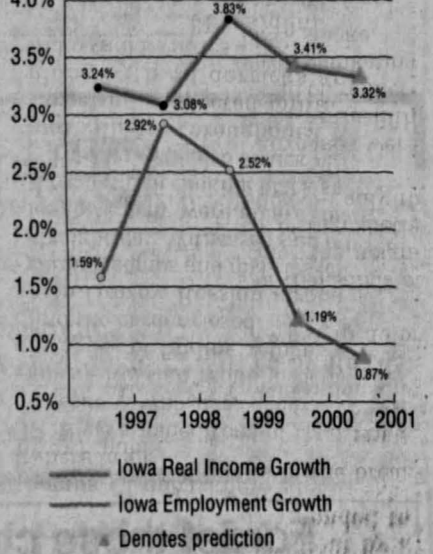

The job market is very good right now and judging by the predictions it can be expected that it will continue to be a favorable employment situation when UI seniors graduate, said Calvin Siebert, an UI economics professor.

"There are a lot of labor shortages right now, which means more interviews for graduating students and more job choices," Siebert said.

Contempo Casuals in the Coral Ridge Mall has noticed a labor shortage and a substantial decrease in job applicants, said store manager Amy Hlstelner.

"People looking for jobs has become scarce, and we are having a hard time finding people to work," Hlstelner said. "Because people are not willing to work for certain wages."

UI senior and English major Meredith Marshall said she tends to agree with the prediction of large numbers of available jobs in the future. But, depending on the area a person wants to work in, ideal jobs are not so easily obtainable, she said.

"I could probably find a job doing clerical work right away and just have to work my way up," Marshall said.

Five years ago, there was concern over whether enough firms were coming in with job offers, Ingram said. Now the worry has shifted to whether Iowa has enough people to

Researchers to study older workers with disabilities

The UI Department of Occupational and Environmental Health in the College of Public Health has received a grant of $415,000 to conduct a national study on workplace accommodations for older workers with disabilities. The grant, made by the National Institute on Aging, funds a project to determine to what extent employers are providing environments that allow older workers with disabilities to be productive employees, and what impact this has on these workers' retirement decisions and risk of occupational injury. "We really do not have a lot of information about what happens when older individuals with disabilities want to work or continue to work," said Craig Zwerling, head of the department and the study's principal investigator.

Just in case to serve

■ The UI is planning to assist the city in dealing with any emergencies, should they arise.

By Michael Chapman
The Daily Iowan

If the Y2K bug bites on Jan. 1, 2000, causing outages and loss of homes, residents may be looking for shelter and services.

Should the need arise, Hawkeye Arena would be a massive shelter, said Nickels, UI Information Services senior specialist.

"If things become dire, we need to find places to house people. Carver has been about as one of the places opened up," she said.

The UI has the capability to generate its own power, it doesn't suffer from its problems, said Richard, associate vice president of Facility Services Group.

The UI's self-sufficiency in power and water and the Carver-Hawkeye make it an adequate emergency option, Gibson said.

"It depends on the circumstances," he said. "We have a number of our buildings that power works. But if they don't, we could keep Hawkeye going."

The UI is not alone in its chaos plans. It has been working with Iowa State University and the University of North Dakota to address Y2K needs.

"We meet on a regular basis," said Garrysky, the Y2K coordinator. "We've been putting teams to look at each other's Y2K preparations."

Ann Rhodes, vice president of university relations, said the City is not expected to solve its problems.

"We've known about this for a very long time,"

Council ponders train tunnel

■ The City Council is considering building a pedestrian tunnel under the railroad near Longfellow.

By Heather Pavnica
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa City City Council has passed two options for a tunnel in the Longfellow neighborhood near Mark Twain Elementary School on Monday.

Councilors hope the tunnel will prevent pedestrians from crossing the Iowa Interstate Railroad tracks in the area.

In 1994, the two neighborhood residents requested a safe place for pedestrians to cross the tracks, said Yapp, Iowa City assistant transportation planner.

"We have heard from Longfellow neighborhood residents that there is a lot of concern in that neighborhood," said Councilor Karen Kubby. "The way to help reduce traffic is to build a tunnel."

Federal funds, $196,000, will be provided for the project, Yapp said. The favored option — connecting Longfellow with Kirkwood Avenue — was approved by councilors. He added that residents are willing to work with the city on the project.

"Option one is closer to the school, so that's a plus," said Councilor Pavnica.

Residents preferred it because it is more centrally located between Longfellow and Twain schools and neighborhoods, according to Yapp.

The other option would connect H Street with Muscatine Road, Yapp said. Residents objected to the tunnel connecting H Street to Muscatine Road.

The council collective vote to begin the project, favoring the first option, but it will vote on the project tonight.

Just in case, Carver to serve as Y2K haven

The UI is planning to assist the city in dealing with any emergencies, should they arise.

By Michael Chapman, The Daily Iowan

If the Y2K bug bites Iowa City on Jan. 1, 2000, causing power outages and loss of heat, local residents may be looking to the UI for shelter and services.

Should the need arise, Carver-Hawkeye Arena would become a massive shelter, said Susan Nickels, UI Information Technology Services senior systems specialist.

"If things become dire and we need to find places to house people, Carver has been talked about as one of the places being opened up," she said.

The UI has the capability to generate its own power, provided it doesn't suffer from its own Y2K problems, said Richard Gibson, associate vice president for the Facility Services Group.

The UI's self-sufficiency in power and water and the size of Carver-Hawkeye make the building an adequate emergency option, Gibson said.

"It depends on the circumstances," he said. "We can keep a number of our buildings lit if our power works. But if everything works, we could keep Carver-Hawkeye going."

The UI is not alone in its Y2K chaos plans. It has been working with Iowa State University and the University of Northern Iowa to address Y2K needs.

"We meet on a regular basis to coordinate," said Garry Bozynsky, the Y2K coordinator at UNI. "We've been putting together teams to look at each university's Y2K preparations."

Ann Rhodes, vice president for university relations, said Iowa City is not expected to suffer Y2K problems.

"We've known about this for years and have been working on it for a very long time," she said.

If things become dire and we need to find places to house people, Carver has been talked about as one of the places being opened up.

— Susan Nickels, UI Information Technology Services

"We're pretty confident everything is fine."

But if Y2K problems do besiege Iowa City, the UI will have a multitude of services available, she said.

Officials from UI Public Safety and the UI Hospitals and Clinics, along with Facilities Services staff, are expected to be on call at the end of the year, she said.

"We're trying to plan for the worst-case scenario," Rhodes said.

The UI Water Plant is debating whether to provide housing for its employees if an emergency arises, said Ken Lloyd, manager of the plant.

"We're considering putting bunks in," he said. "We are investigating this as a possibility."

Council ponders train tunnel

The City Council discusses building a pedestrian tunnel under the railroad tracks near Longfellow.

By Heather Pavnica, The Daily Iowan

The Iowa City City Council discussed two options for a pedestrian tunnel in the Longfellow and Mark Twain Elementary school neighborhoods Monday night.

Councilors hope the tunnel will prevent pedestrians from illegally crossing the Iowa Interstate Railroad tracks in the area.

In 1994, the two neighborhoods requested a safe place for people to cross the tracks, said John Yapp, Iowa City assistant transportation planner.

"We have heard from the Longfellow neighborhood for years that there is a lot of traffic in that neighborhood," said Councilor Karen Kubby. "This is one way to help reduce traffic."

Federal funds, totaling $196,000, will be provided for 80 percent of the project, Yapp said.

The favored option — for both councilors and residents — would connect Longfellow Nature Park with Kirkwood Avenue, Yapp said. He added that residents are willing to work with the developers on the project.

"Option one is closer to Longfellow School, so that seems like a plus," said Councilor Connie Champion.

Residents preferred it because it is more centrally located between Longfellow and Mark Twain schools and neighborhoods, according to Yapp.

The other option would have connected H Street with Lower Muscatine Road, Yapp said, but residents objected to the location.

The council collectively agreed to begin the project, favoring the first option, but it will officially vote on the project tonight.

Donors stand by UI Foundation

The foundation says a $5 million loss is only a "paper loss" and isn't as bad as it sounds.

By Anne Huyck
The Daily Iowan

A $5 million loss on the stock market is intimidating, but the UI Foundation is taking such a setback in its stride.

At the conclusion of the past fiscal year, June 30, the foundation had lost $5 million in investments. The foundation handles the money donated to support everything from arts and academics to athletics at the UI. It typically invests the donations in stocks and mutual funds.

As a member of the President's Club, Iowa City resident Robert Barker has given or pledged to give at least $40,000 to the UI.

"I was surprised, but not upset," Barker said about the loss. "I realize it is a high-risk market, and over the years, the foundation has come out ahead. I think they probably just had some bad luck."

John Gross, an Iowa City resident and President's Club member, said he wished the loss hadn't occurred; if the foundation continues to lose money, he might stop his donations.

"I would have to reconsider (not donating) if the foundation wasn't able to turn its policies around," he said.

The $5 million loss came from investing in smaller businesses, said Alan Swanson, senior vice president of developmental services for the foundation. He added, however, that the loss is only on paper — meaning that there was no loss in shares, leaving the potential to gain back the money.

"There is a paper loss," Swanson said. "But we didn't sell stock. It is permanent, so it can go back up again."

The money lost is 1.4 percent of the $391 million endowment fund, of which 75 percent is invested in stocks and 25 percent in bonds.

The foundation uses earnings from the investments — not the actual donations — so it is not affected by the loss, Swanson said.

"If you donated $10,000 in the last five years, there would still be a tremendous gain on what you gave us through investments," he said. "This is just a slight deviation — it doesn't mean we like it, but we will get back on track."

Earl Yoder, an Iowa City resident and President's Club member, said the loss shouldn't affect donations.

"I am an investor myself, and I know how the stock market works," he said.

"If you are in it for the long term, you don't get hurt, so I am not concerned about the short term. I know they use the best money managers they can possibly find, and the members (of the foundation) are very dedicated."

CITY BRIEF

Nursing school tops fund-raising goal

A special fund-raising drive has helped to fuel the UI College of Nursing to more than double its grant and donation income.

The goal of the Centennial Campaign, which began in January 1997 and is supposed to run until the end of this year, was $1 million, said Wes Butterfield, the school's director of development. The campaign has already raised $1.7 million, he said.

The total grant awards for the nursing school were just over $4 million for the 1998-99 fiscal year, said Brian Harvey, assistant vice president for the division of sponsored programs.

Increases in funds should help the college's rankings and raise the College of Nursing's productivity, said Toni Tripp Reimer, a nursing professor and associate dean of research.

"We want to retain our ranking in the top 15 schools of nursing in the country," Tripp Reimer said.

The school has been ranked 12th for the past six or seven years, she said.

The college plans to use the funds to establish a new professorship in gerontological nursing, a clinical practice and technology lab and more scholarships, Butterfield said.

Some of the previous scholarships have been used to fund doctoral students who work as research assistants, contributing to several of the funded projects.

Kanner driven by progressive values

Iowa City City Council candidate Steven Kanner believes that the key to success in city government is to include under-represented groups.

"My goal is to bring in people that have been traditionally discriminated against. Groups such as minorities, gays and lesbians, women, seniors, people on low-incomes and people with disabilities," he said.

He is hoping to win an at-large seat in the Nov. 2 general election. Kanner must first be one of four at-large candidates to pass through the Oct. 5 primary election.

"I have a strong, progressive value, and that is what's driving me," he said.

Kanner, who compares himself with current City Councilor Karen Kubby, would also like to see neighborhood associations strengthened. He likes the idea of neighborhood groups that could share resources such as lawn mowers and could keep streets safe with expanded neighborhood watches. "The answer is not more armed police officers," he said.

City government should play a greater role in initiating those organizations, Kanner said.

"It's nice to say there should be neighborhood organizations, but we need to put time and money into organizing them," he said. "There are tools out there that can be used."

Kanner currently works as the supervisor for the Iowa City Farmers' Market. This is his first run at council, although he has been active in the Greens, a government watch-dog group concerned with the environment and the ideas of peace and justice.

He would like to expand bus service, does not support the Iowa Avenue parking ramp, and would like to equalize water rates. Placing several options for Public Library expansion on a bond issue would also be a good idea, Kanner said.

"Let the voters decide," said Kanner, who would put five library expansion options to a vote: creating a mini-branch, expansion into the adjacent 64-1a lot, adding another floor onto the existing library, creating a full-branch, or doing nothing.

Hansen looks to involve the community

If elected to the Iowa City City Council, Jerry Hansen said, he would strive towards general improvement of the city while keeping fiscal responsibility in mind.

Hansen, who is running for the District A council seat, must first be one of the four candidates chosen in the Oct. 5 primary to continue to the Nov. 2 general election.

One of Hansen's key concerns is transportation.

"The bus system is good, but we need to improve it," he said. "I'd like to see the shuttle expanded."

Additional police officers to check for speeding violations would improve street safety, Hansen said.

The problem for the service additions is the funding.

"We need to do it on a can-we-pay-for-this basis," Hansen said.

Encouraging university-oriented downtown business will help the downtown to adapt to changing times, he said.

"I'd like to see things students could use," said Hansen, who suggested the addition of another bookstore, although he said he doesn't want to create more competition for the current downtown businesses.

Hansen said he is coming to the election race without any "baggage" or hidden agendas.

"I have opinions, but if someone could show me my opinion is wrong, I'm willing to listen to them," Hansen said.

bers, that he initiated last August in response to a shooting.

The negative reputation associated with the neighborhood after the incident inspired him to gather together approximately 150 neighbors to discuss ways they could improve neighborhood safety, Hansen said.

The group successfully lobbied the city for over $100,000 to improve Wetherby Park and provide more lighting.

Hansen is also involved with the Neighborhood Association of Iowa City and the Committee for Restorative Justice.

✳ COMMUNICATION. THE ANTI-DRUG.

A loving relationship cannot exist without communication. Research shows that kids believe they have valuable things to say. When parents ask them and listen genuinely, it helps build self-esteem and confidence.

Communication is connection. During their teenage years, kids are exposed to an ever widening variety of people and influences. Know their friends as well as their friends' parents. Know your kids' routines and set curfews. Tell your kids that you love them. Praise them when they do well, no matter how small the accomplishment. Stay connected.

Also it demonstrates that you support their burgeoning independence as well as their ability to make intelligent decisions. The important thing to remember about drugs is that it's not a five minute talk about sex. It's a dialogue. As kids grow, they will need more information relevant to their exposure. In general, smoking marijuana is harmful. The younger a kid is, the more it may be. Research shows that people who smoke it before age 15 are 7 times more likely to use other drugs. It also shows that people who didn't smoke marijuana by age 21 were more likely to never smoke it. For more information, visit www.theantidrug.com or call 800.788.2800.

Illegal drugs are estimated to cost America over $110 billion each year in treatment, enforcement, incarceration and social damage. But what else could you buy for $110 billion? Well, you could build 1,692 new hospitals. Or operate 632 universities. Or 3,667 national parks. You could hire 2,955,956 new high school teachers. Or you could put 758,620 new buses on the road. This message is brought to you by the Office of National Drug Control Policy/Partnership for a Drug-Free Iowa and America.

Being well-grounded up in the air

■ A UI junior juggles classes and performances.

By Chao Xiong
The Daily Iowan

Charlie Wittmack/The Daily Iowan
UI junior Brad Harris juggles flaming torches in front of the Old Capitol Monday.

UI junior Bradley Harris can turn thin air into a performance arena with the flight and fall of his juggling maneuvers, an act he calls "Up in the Air."

"This is all you need," said Harris, pointing to three well-worn bean bags. "It can fit in your pocket. With juggling, you can be in a corner minding your own business and practicing."

Harris began juggling in seventh grade, after a family friend gave a gift that just didn't cut it. Harris received games while his brother received the book Juggling for the Complete Klutz.

The two swapped gifts, and all was resolved.

"I actually liked my brother's (gift) better, and he liked mine better, so we switched," Harris said. "Then I threw it into the closet for like three months."

While going through his closet, Harris re-discovered the book, igniting a long-term interest in juggling.

This interest has led him to open with friends for musician Sir Mix-a-Lot earlier this year at Cornell College, in Mount Vernon, and performances in No Shame Theater, RiverFest and on street corners.

"He's really, really professional," said Dan Brooks, No Shame Theater director and a UI senior. "He has a knack for making things spontaneous seem planned and vice-versa. He has an excellent sense of audience perception."

His skill has been fine-tuned on the street corners of cities such as Chicago (near his hometown of Glenview, Ill.), San Francisco and New York.

"When I got here as a freshman, I showed up, and I started street performing. The first day I could possibly get out there, I was street performing," he said. "I love my audience."

As a first-year residence assistant in Hillcrest Residence Hall, Harris started a juggling club that meets, tentatively, every Thursday.

"It's fun," said John O'Connell, a Hillcrest resident and UI freshman. "It's really interesting watching him show us all up. I came into it not knowing how to juggle at all, and now I can do a few tricks."

O'Connell said approximately 25 of the residents can now juggle.

"I tell people anything that I can do juggling-wise is just practice and progression," Harris said. "That's what I really like about juggling. You can see yourself progress at a steady rate. You know where you want to go, and you can make a path to get there."

Harris has performed three times this semester and is scheduled to put on a volunteer show at the UI Hospitals and Clinics in October.

Each Monday at 11 p.m., Harris can be heard on his radio show "A Day On the Air" on KRUI, 89.7 FM.

His "zine, A Day in the Air, has become a priority for the performer.

"We all have seen a lot of jugglers — a lot of lame jugglers," Brooks said. "But Brad's got a comedic sense about him and a strong stage presence. He always keeps it from being hackneyed."

Yale professor talks on love, abortion

■ Gene Outka, a leader in the field of ethics, delivers the James Spalding Memorial Lecture.

By Dana Ritzmann
The Daily Iowan

Gene Outka, a Dwight Professor of philosophy and Christian ethics at Yale University and a leader in the field of religious ethics, lectured on the ethics of love and the problem of abortion Monday evening at Gilmore Hall.

The UI School of Religion invited Outka to deliver the 1999 James C. Spalding Memorial Lecture because he is an eminent scholar and is able to address issues to a broader public, said Robert Baird, director of the religion school.

The lectureship, which was established in 1998, deals with a wide range of topics, including ethical issues and contemporary Protestant thought, Baird said. The lectureship honors James Spalding, who taught courses on those topics in the religion school for 36 years, he said.

Outka, who is famous for his book Agape: An Ethical Analysis, approached love and abortion from a Christian viewpoint.

"There are many ways in which Christianity does influence my position," he said, drawing special attention to the two "love commandments" in the New Testament — the love of god above everything else and the love of your neighbor as yourself.

"The most important thing we can do in our civil community is to honor claims of the pregnant woman and the fetus by compromise," Outka said.

The lecture demonstrated how tenacious the abortion issue is, said some of those attending.

"What he has done in this lecture it to show how difficult the problem of abortion is and why it is so difficult to come to any agreement," said Diana Cates, an associate professor of religion who teaches a course on Sexual Ethics every year, in which abortion is a topic.

A lot of the issues Outka raised in the lecture are raised in her class, she said — for instance, "How do you compare the value of an embryo with the value of a full grown girl or woman?"

Sandra Gines, a UI graduate student, is glad that Outka listens to women.

"I'm not surprised that his position was something mediating between the two sides," she said. "I'm glad to see that he seems to be listening to women's concerns about their own well-being in the extraordinary circumstance of pregnancy."

NATION BRIEFS

Study: Blocked enzyme can help fight cancer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Researchers have found that blocking production of an enzyme interferes with the ability of many cancers to reproduce, a step that could one day lead to new treatments for the disease.

In laboratory experiments, the scientists prevented cancer cells from producing the enzyme telomerase, which helps the cells grow without limit. That resulted in the cells stopping their reproduction and dying.

"We haven't developed a chemical, a therapeutic drug," said Dr. Robert Weinberg of the Whitehead Institute for Biomedical Research in Cambridge, Mass., a member of the research team. He added that the method used in the laboratory study is not practical for use in humans.

But, Weinberg said, the findings, which will be published in the October issue of the journal Nature Medicine, point the way for pharmaceutical companies to search for drugs that do the same thing.

His campaign sputtering, Quayle bows out

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dan Quayle, the former vice president who hoped to overcome long odds and much ridicule to step up to the Republican presidential nomination in 2000, gave up his White House dreams Monday.

At a Phoenix news conference, Quayle said, "There's a time to stay, and there's a time to fold. There's a time to know when to leave the stage. Thus today, I am announcing that I will no longer be a candidate for president of the United States."

Quayle became the latest victim of Republican front-runner George W. Bush's juggernaut.

"I was facing a campaign where the front-runner would have up to $100 million to spend, and an unprecedented frontloading of the primary system made the task for me of winning the nomination of my party virtually impossible," he said.

Quayle pledged to work to unite the Republican Party and said he would support the nominee. "I want to see the Republicans recapture the White House," he said. "It is time that we restore honor, dignity and decency to the Oval Office."

Quayle's departure winnows the GOP field to eight major Republican candidates and will increase speculation about the finance and political health of the remaining contenders. There is already turbulence within the nomination race.

Dole backpack search idea a threat to privacy

There is nothing like having Big Brother looming over your shoulder at all times. If everyone keeps their fingers crossed, maybe Big Brother will show its ugly face for a period of four years. Elizabeth Dole is making plans to change the educational system in America, but her plans seem to infringe upon some constitutional rights.

"I support parent-approved locker and backpack searches and drug testing," Dole was quoted as saying in the Sept. 24 Daily Iowan. However, allowing this to become a norm in schools today would violate the Fourth Amendment of the Constitution.

"The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures, shall not be violated, and no Warrants shall be issued, but upon probable cause, supported by Oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched, and the persons or things being seized."

For some reason, no one seems upset about "parent-approved locker and backpack searches." Perhaps the public would be a little more appalled if Dole suggested workplace searches. The public just seems more at ease with the idea of minors' rights being violated than those of adults.

Dole spoke at the UI on Sept. 23 to students about her plans to "restore our public schools to greatness." That statement does not ring true if Big Brother is always in the classroom.

Searches and seizures might not seem like a big deal, but how far will she take it? American citizens take pride in calling their country a democracy. This term may become a joke if Dole's education plans take effect.

Clinton doesn't trust public to spend money wisely

"No one believes more firmly than Comrade Napoleon that all animals are equal. He would be only too happy to let you make your decisions for yourselves. But sometimes you might make the wrong decisions, comrades, and then where would we be?"

With these words from his 1945 novel Animal Farm, George Orwell summed up succinctly the nature of totalitarianism. He described a nightmarish society in which a swinish clique holds absolute sway over the dumber animals on the farm. As the pigs alone were literate, they were able to write and rewrite laws for the rest of the beasts of England. Napoleon, Squealer and the other porcine perpetrators were able to foist their twisted utopia on the rest of the animals by convincing them they were too stupid to care for themselves.

On Jan. 27, Bill Clinton summed up just as succinctly his vision for America. In a speech given in Buffalo, N.Y., the president said the following: "Because it's projected that over a 25-year period we will average substantial surpluses on an annual basis... the question is, what do we do with it? We could give it all back to you and hope you spend it right. (Applause.) But I think — here's the problem. If you don't spend it right, here's what's going to happen. In 2013 — that's just 14 years away — taxes people pay on their payroll for Social Security will no longer cover the monthly checks." (He employed the same rationale just last week, of course, to veto the meager Republican tax cut.)

Did you catch that? Why can't the surplus from excessive taxes be returned to us? Because we are too stupid to spend it correctly. Like the mules, donkeys, and dogs on Animal Farm, we could make our own decisions, comrades, but sometimes we might make the wrong decisions, and then where would we be? According to Clinton and the other statist who prey on our lack of moral self-confidence, we will be a society replete with homeless, starving and poor. Destitution will become the rule, not the exception.

Citizens will hold their noses daintily while they pass the stinking and bloated corpses of their neighbors. As our parents and grandparents stop receiving their Social Security checks, we will sip lemonade and nibble on cookies, watching them starve and beg for their medication. And the children, think of the children! If we are allowed to make decisions for ourselves, comrades, parents by the droves and flocks will not only neglect their children's education, but fail to put food in their mouths and clothes on their backs unless some more qualified person like Comrade Clinton steps in.

Is this the people we have become? Are we really liable to this charge of irrevocable selfishness when we have resisted the lust for world power, forgiven the debts of so many nations in the world, foresworn colonialism, and rebuilt the societies of our defeated enemies? If not, then why do we continue to swallow this, well, tripe, from such a herd?

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Schneider's mockery of Greek system was inappropriate

Greek... what an interesting word. I am sure this brings to mind many different stereotypes for many different people. One such individual, Frank Schneider, decided to voice his opinion of the Greeks in a very unethical and inappropriate manner. In his Sept. 20 column ("Visiting good geysers of very raw sewage"), he stated that he was an observer at the 1999 Greek Etiquette Banquet and proceeded to give me an excerpt. However, when I called Frank last Monday to see if in fact he was at the banquet, he replied "No." I was quite confused to hear that response, and I reminded him that his article said he was "able to sit in on the banquet as an observer." He then replied, "I bent the facts a little." Frank did not bend the facts a little, but in fact, a lot.

I walked into the IMU Monday, and a staff member asked me if I had seen the rude article in the paper. I replied that I had, and she questioned me if Frank's statements were true. To clarify for all of those who may not have interpreted Frank's remarks as sarcasm, he never attended the banquet and the quotes are blatant lies. He claims that it is all a joke and that everyone is laughing, but is everyone laughing? As I continued to speak with Frank, he claimed that he was the "voice of the people" and that he could not be silenced. We are not denying that he may speak for a small amount of people and in no way are we trying to silence him. We merely want facts to be facts and not to have words put into our mouths, such as "official motto: Proudly Disguising Ignorance with Conformity into the 21st Century." Frank was very concerned and repeatedly requested that his name not be "smeared." Isn't that an interesting concept — not wanting your name smeared or degraded in the paper?

As the coordinator of the etiquette banquet, I was very disappointed that the editor of the student paper would allow such a mockery of an event sponsored by a student organization. Not only does this affect students but also the etiquette banquet expert, who was very disturbed to hear of such ridicule. The only "ignorance" that lay within this matter is that of Frank Schneider.

Stalking the wild Shrub, at loose in the fields of academe

The autumnal rains have come, meaning that the wind is out of Canada these days — and will be for about the next six dreary months or so.

You want to say, Hey, friendly Canadians, we're really, truly sorry about that messy salmon thing. We here in Iowa (those of us that work for a living, anyway) don't even eat salmon; it's more expensive, per ounce, than a plutonium warhead. And salmon tastes about that good, too, by the time it gets past Nebraska (Motto: At least we're not Kansas; we realize that we've descended from monkeys — we have mirrors). So, friendly Canadians, please stop air-mailing the weather, already.

The Canadians never listen, which makes you wonder just exactly how friendly they really are. Right about this time of year, they start air-mailing us weather, which is truly unfortunate because, in addition to being good-weather-challenged, Canadians know how to air-mail. As opposed to, say, the U.S. Postal System, whose idea of air mail is to strap a packet of letters onto the back of a snail and then, using this rubber-band contraption, catapult the snail into Nebraska, where it wanders around unnoticed for days because everyone's busy studying the mirror for traces of a simian visage. It's no wonder that Des Moines is the capital of Nebraska.

Given all this — the onset of Canadian weather, the proximity of Nebraska, the existence of Des Moines — it's a wonder that the suicide rate around here isn't a whole lot higher. So thank god (or Darwin) for George W. Shrub, who's running for president, partly for the comic-relief value but mostly because his father, the famous lip-reader, was once president. (His father's presidency was about as memorable as that of Mortimer Snerd's, who sneaked into office sometime — historians are as divided on the date as amoebae during mitosis — between Benjamin George Harrison, who, while in office, wished to be known as "My Sweet Lord," and Grover Cleveland Alexander, who is mostly famous for striking out the side while blind drunk, much to the consternation of the Stepping Up fans in the ball park.)

The Shrub is, so far, mostly famous for a) raising more money for his campaign than the GDP of many Third World nations and b) not saying anything about anything, at least in a language resembling English, which might account for a). His Shrubness, in his day job as governor, is less famous for denying the constitutional rights of poor defendants in Texas to have access to a lawyer, but that lack of fame probably comes about because most Americans are busy pricing SUVs the size of a Third World nation and don't have the time to clutter their minds with such arcane as constitutional rights.

His Shrubness is also mildly famous for a) defending, during the Vietnam War, the shores of Texas against the danger of an attack by North Vietnamese sampans and b) his courageous "Don't Ask, Don't Tell" policy regarding any alleged drug use on his part during the portion of his life in which he was recovering from the harrowing task of defending the shores of Texas against the danger of an attack by North Vietnamese sampans.

One positive thing about the Shrub's campaign is that it drove Dan Quayle out of the race, thus striking a blow for all the potato-splitters of the world. Not to mention that now we won't have to sit through any rehashings of "Murphy Brown" plots. It was bad enough having to sit through the hash that "Murphy Brown" plots were in the first place.

The other good thing, at least here in the Paris of the Parking Ramps, is that we get to enjoy the ongoing spectacle that is the Students for Shrub — the Shrublets, as they're known by those who love them. Which wouldn't include anyone who has a UI e-mail account, but who's counting?

The Shrublets' latest plot was to spam (though the UI flak-catchers couldn't fit their tongues around that four-letter word) almost the entire university community, a move of such staggering Einsteinian insight that you would've thought the Quayle had thought it up, all by himself. Of course, the Shrublets should remember that it was Quayle's thinking for himself that brought his political career to the high water mark at which it currently bobs. If there's any one result that is ensured from this e-mail madness, it's that a year from now, otherwise apathetic students will remember the invasion of their e-mail accounts and vote against the Shrub — if his war chest does indeed buy the Republican nomination.

The best part about the spam dinner was the comment by the Shrublets' intellectual property manager (talk about a lonely, dull job with very little to do). When informed that many in the UI community were not at all pleased with the presence of the Shrublets in their e-mail, she gushed, "Don't cry about it; just get rid of your account." It's great to see compassionate conservatism in action.

You can only hope that the Shrublets have many more such acts of unbridled genius in their arsenal, because it's going to be a long, dreary winter. You can tell. The squirrels on campus are full of frenzied activity. And their tails are bushy.

from the attic." Ila Miller, who owns the house, said firefighters pulled the electric meter and shut the water off. She has hired a cleaning company and will repair the damage to the basement, Miller said. However, she added, she does not know when the residents will be allowed to move back in. "They were able to go in tonight and get the stuff off the first and second floor," she said. "The woman who lived in the basement lost everything." She said three computers in the basement were also destroyed. "The surrounding houses have some smoke in them, but they're not really damaged," Miller said. She said the Red Cross, which was called in to provide temporary housing, offered the residents a hotel room, but they declined, preferring to stay with friends.

The cause of the fire is under investigation, Humston said. A second fire, which damaged a duplex at 713 Fourth Ave. in Coralville, left six residents temporarily homeless.

The fire broke out shortly after 8:30 a.m. and originated in one of the kitchens, said Jeff Petvie, Coralville Fire Department incident commander. He said the cause of the blaze is not known but that there is no suspicion of arson. The quick response by the department helped to reduce the damage, said resident Julie Brookshear.

"If they had gotten here five minutes later, the whole place would have burned to the ground," she said.

Although the fire caused damage to the kitchen and attic, the residents are hopeful about moving back in soon.

"The landlord says he will be able to fix it by a couple of weeks," Brookshear said.

The Red Cross has been providing help to the residents.

"In every case, we go on scene and ensure that the people have their immediate needs met, such as food, shelter and clothing," said Sara Cross, Red Cross representative.

Brookshear expressed gratitude for the support being given to her family.

"They're helping us with food and a hotel room," she said. "We're just glad there's someone around to help."

Ronald R. Reed, chairman of the chamber's education committee, said a work force development initiative that was established in 1997 addresses the growing demand for qualified employees.

The first step of the initiative includes profiling area jobs to determine the level of employable skills needed. It then assesses 10th and 12th graders' skills in reading comprehension, writing, listening and applied mathematics for comparison with employers' needs, Reed said. He said the chamber would like

WORLD BRIEF

Timor peacekeepers push on into interior

LIQUICA, East Timor (AP) — Peacekeepers dropped from helicopters and fanned out through the nearly deserted coastal town of Liquica Monday, as the multinational force extended its control in East Timor just hours after the Indonesian army relinquished its authority in the territory.

On the opposite side of East Timor, reports emerged that as many as 16 people, including two nuns and two seminary students, were killed over the weekend during a mercy mission to refugees.

The reported killings underscored the urgency for the Australian-led force to speed up its deployment throughout the countryside, where militias opposed to independence maintain control.

Liquica, the town secured Monday, was the scene of one of the worst massacres in East Timor this year. Some two dozen people hiding in the town church last April were killed when militiamen threw tear gas inside, then hacked to death those who fled, witnesses have said.

putting out? Funnies." Conrad and a group of well-known cartoonists are scheduled to attend an Oct. 14-16 symposium at the IMU to raise awareness about the changes in political cartoon drawing. Over the years, Conrad's work has put him in the hot seat, and he has faced several multimillion dollar lawsuits. But his cartoons have also inspired many people. "As a young reporter starting out... this was my hero," said Stephen Bloom, an associate journalism professor who worked with Conrad at the Los Angeles Times. "This is somebody who changed the way Americans view political cartoonists."

Conrad was on Nixon's "enemies list," Bloom said.

Another famous cartoonist, Wiley Miller, whose "Non Sequitur" cartoon appears in approximately 400 newspapers in 20 countries, including the DI, is also concerned about the future of political cartoons.

"Newspapers have virtually killed political cartooning in this country," said Miller, an Iowa City resident.

Of the 1,500 daily newspapers in the United States, approximately 100 have political cartoonists on staff, Bloom said, which is 70-80 fewer than 15 years ago.

When corporate-owned newspapers began squelching competition, the importance of people's reactions to their cartoons lessened, Bloom said. Instead, he said, newspapers chose to take a dumber route in hopes of wider acceptance.

"I'm doing more editorializing in 'Non Sequitur' than 90 percent of cartoons on the editorial page," Miller said.

Joe Sharpnack, another local cartoonist whose work also runs internationally, said the problem with a growing number of "watered-down" cartoons is that a powerful force for social change could be lost.

"Images are very, very strong," he said. "You can nail in a second what it took a writer 1,000 words to do."

Sharpnack, also a UI graduate, is a self-syndicated cartoonist who submits his work to newspapers across the country and is paid per use of his cartoons. As a result, he is free from editorial pressure to produce a "soft cartoon," he said.

"You're also free not to be paid,"

he said. "It's a tightrope I'm walking, and there's no net."

The UI offered its first class on political cartooning in 1934, but since then, interest in the field has declined.

"I don't know of any student who is (interested), and that concerns me," Bloom said. "And why would you want to be a cartoonist, from a market point of view?"

John Soloski, director of UI School of Journalism and Mass Communication, said no part of the newspaper creates as much reaction as the political cartoon.

The Daily Iowan

Moe. is different. All right, so maybe it sounds a bit like the Grateful Dead or the Allman Brothers, but what decent jam band these days doesn't net such comparisons?

As moe.'s influences range from Frank Zappa and Little Feat to Steely Dan and Yes, it's damn near impossible to pin a descriptive tag on the music created by these four New York state natives.

One thing is for certain, however, and that is that moe.'s success is mounting.

With its late '98 release, Tin Cans and Car Tires, garnering great reviews, as well as its hugely successful summer tour with Gov't Mule, String Cheese Incident, and Phil Lesh And Friends, the "radio-unfriendly" moe. is suddenly being called America's best kept secret.

Moe. will bring its jam sound to the Union Bar, 121 E. College St., tonight at 7. Tickets will be available at the door for $12.

Over the weekend, The Daily Iowan caught up with moe. guitarist Al Schnier via telephone before the band's show in Milwaukee.

DI: Despite the steady success of your latest album and your notable summer tour, moe. still manages to get virtually no radio play, even on college stations. Do you have any idea why?

AS: Maybe our songs just wouldn't sound good in a GAP commercial ... I don't know.

When I saw the list of performers at the MTV Video Awards this year, I couldn't believe how terrible all of the talent was. There wasn't even a decent rock band on the bill!

Pop radio at its current state is in pretty bad shape, and I think our sound is just too organic to gain any airplay. Rock bands such as Dave Matthews and the Wallflowers were all over the radio at one time, but that was over a year ago. Maybe we need to start having the Dust Brothers re-mix our stuff.

DI: I heard that moe. will be recording a live album later this month.

AS: Well, actually we've been recording shows here and there throughout our current tour for release early next year. We're not sure if we'll take songs from different shows and piece the album together that way, or if we'll just end up using an entire show.

DI: With all of the live moe. bootlegs floating around, why did you decide to put out an "official" live release?

AS: Our fans have been asking for a live album for a long time so we thought we'd start making these multi-tracked recordings of our shows and see how things turned out.

Although there are some pretty good bootleg recordings out there, they don't have the high quality sound like you get when you can mix everything down.

DI: You guys shared the stage this summer with Phil Lesh, who has shared the stage with Phish, and Trey Anastasio (Phish guitarist) joined Leftover Salmon on stage a couple of weeks ago. Do a large number of musicians in the jam band scene know each other?

AS: Yeah, it's like a nice little community. We've played with a number of bands, whether just sharing the bill or having them join us on stage, and of course we've just met a ton of bands while on tour. Playing with all of these guys gives us a chance to learn from them ... and steal a bunch of their ideas.

The only band we've never played with is Phish, although we did open for them at the Wetlands in New York about five years ago. We've met all of the band members but have never really had a chance to sit down and play with them.

DI: Moe. is often compared with the likes of the Grateful Dead and the Allman Brothers - which, although your style differs quite a bit from theirs, - almost immediately classified you as a "jam band." Do you find that this pigeonholes moe.?

AS: At times yes, but I won't deny that we're a jam band. When a band is placed into a category, it's usually by a journalist or someone who feels that they have to give you some kind of title. I'm not putting it down, but it's a shame that it has to happen.

There are probably kids out there who are really into punk and would like a lot of our stuff, but they don't give us a chance because we're a "jam band" ... It's just too bad that there is such an emphasis on categorizing music these days.

Iowa looks to repeat past success

The Hawkeyes may move into the top three when rankings are released today.

By Robert Yarborough
The Daily Iowan

After reflecting on this past weekend's victories, it is back to the basics for the Iowa field hockey team.

After defeating two of the top five teams in the nation in Ohio State and Penn State, coach Beth Beglin and the players are taking success with a grain of salt.

"There are eight more games left in the Big Ten schedule and two wins does not make a season," Beglin said. "I don't care what the rankings say. Northwestern is a great team and we will have to be ready this weekend."

If the Hawkeyes seem to be a bit subdued after coming off a huge weekend, there is good reason. They've been here before. Iowa put together a very similar weekend when the team defeated both Ohio State and Penn State last October 16-18.

"We had a big weekend like this last year, but we were not consistent," senior Alycyn Freet said. "If we can play with consistency, then we definitely should come out with more big wins."

Druley earns Nat'l honor

Senior goalie Kelly Druley was named the Div. I Player of the Week by Hockey Point online magazine for the week of September 26.

The Falmouth, Mass., native did not allow a goal in Iowa's win over No. 5 Ohio State and No. 2 Penn State last weekend.

Druley has started all eight games this season and is ranked third in the Big Ten with an 84.8-save percentage. She has had four shutouts.

"We had a big weekend like this last year, but we were not consistent," senior Alycyn Freet said. "If we can play with consistency, then we definitely should come out with more big wins."

Police: Underwood's neck wound self-inflicted

Dimitrios Underwood was listed in fair condition Monday after undergoing surgery for a self-inflicted knife wound on Sunday.

By Kathy Barks Hoffman
Associated Press

LANSING, Mich. — The saga of Dimitrios Underwood took another bizarre turn Monday when police said he had slashed himself in the neck with a knife.

Police found the 22-year-old defensive end covered with blood on a downtown street Sunday after getting calls that a man was yelling for help.

"He was somewhat despondent," police spokesman Lt. Ray Hall said. "He was upset, physically upset."

A first-round draft pick by Minnesota, Underwood left the Vikings after one day in training camp. He later changed his mind and signed with the Miami Dolphins.

Underwood apparently cut his neck at the home of the mother of his twin 17-month-old children, Hall said. No one in the home saw him cut himself, but several people in the neighborhood saw him running down the street afterward.

Police took Underwood to Sparrow Hospital, where he was listed in fair condition Monday after undergoing surgery

Sunday. No further information was released at the request of his family.

"This is real rough for the family," Hall said. "They're going through a real rough time, like any family would at a time like this."

Hall said physical evidence at the scene and witnesses' statements convinced police Underwood used the knife on himself. The officer would not describe the knife, other than to say it was a common household knife. He declined to say if Underwood had written a suicide note.

The player cooperated with police when they found him about 12:45 p.m. Sunday and has spoken with police since, Hall said. He declined to say if Underwood gave them a reason for his actions, but said police are close to completing their investigation.

"Our attention is turned toward safeguarding his good mental health," Hall said.

Underwood was arrested by police about 7 p.m. Saturday for nonpayment of child support. A $500 bond was posted for him about three hours later, but Underwood refused to leave the jail in Mason for another hour, spending the time talking to another inmate, Hall said.

Police had no trouble arresting Underwood or taking him to the county jail, Hall said.

COLLEGE FOOTBALL • BOB STOOPS

Stoops riding high as rookie

First-year coach Bob Stoops has begun to turn the tides in the football-crazed state of Oklahoma.

By Chuck Schoffner
Associated Press

His team is unbeaten, it's in the Top 25 for the first time in four years and has a record-breaking quarterback running an exciting, fast-paced offense.

Life couldn't be much sweeter for a first-year head coach than it is at this moment for Oklahoma's Bob Stoops. With the Sooners at 3-0, Stoops might be No. 1 on the popularity chart in his football-crazed state.

"I don't know how popular I am," Stoops said Monday. "I'm just trying to get the team better each and every day. All our coaches are working hard and we're just trying to do the best job we can."

"Right now being 3-0, I know how everybody can be excited about that. But I also know that can change."

Stoops has wasted no time injecting life into a team that stumbled and bumbled its way to a 5-6 record

The OU Files

National Team Rankings

- No. 23 in AP poll
- No. 1 in total offense (383.6 ypg)
- No. 1 in passing (399.7 ypg)
- No. 1 in scoring offense (44 ppg)
- No. 7 in scoring defense (10.3 ppg)
- No. 16 in total defense (263 ypg)

Individual Rankings

- Josh Heupel, No. 3 in passing with a rating of 170.5

last season under John Blake.

Oklahoma leads the nation in passing, scoring and total offense, and quarterback Josh Heupel, a transfer from Snow Junior College in Utah, is the individual passing and total offense leader. Heupel already has set school records for attempts, completions, yards and touchdown passes in a game.

And Stoops said his No. 23-ranked Sooners are just scratching the surface with their offense, which is putting up 536 yards and 44 points a game.

"I believe our offense can be better without question," he said. "We're going to see stronger defenses, we realize that. But still, we can play better and execute in certain situations better than we have. I believe we can run the ball better and will as the year goes on."

Stoops will face the stiffest challenge of his young head coaching career when the Sooners play at Notre Dame on Saturday. Though Notre Dame (1-3) is struggling, the Irish will be a step up for Oklahoma after its games with Indiana State, Baylor and Louisville.

"We ... have great respect for Notre Dame football and their tradition, but we also know that we've got a great one here," Stoops said. "There's a lot of pride here in what we've done in the past and I think that makes it fun. It makes the players realize that here are two

McGwire ties Sosa with 61, Reds still win

The Reds took a 1½ game lead over the New York Mets for the NL wild card, as Mark McGwire tied Sammy Sosa in the home run race.

By Joe Kay
Associated Press

CINCINNATI — The way Cincinnati is rolling, Mark McGwire could hit 70 homers in a game and the Reds would still find a way to win.

McGwire hit his 61st Monday to catch Sammy Sosa, but the Reds made another amazing comeback that will make it tough for anyone to catch them.

Dmitri Young drove in five runs and Eddie Taubensee hit an upper-deck homer for a 9-7 victory that solidified the Reds' lead and added to their sense that nothing's too improbable for this bunch.

Historic homers? Big deficits? Long odds? So what?

"Special things happen for special teams, and this one's special," said shortstop Barry Larkin, who played on the 1990 World Series championship club. "It's a special year, no doubt."

The Reds' sixth victory in seven games gave them a 1½-game lead over the idle New York Mets for the NL wild card. A $35 million team that has bucked the odds against small markets all season is now on the verge of making the playoffs with five games left.

"We're going to get there," manager Jack McKeon said afterwards.

Cincinnati also pulled even with the Astros for the NL Central lead and headed to Houston for a two-game series starting Tuesday. The Astros have set up their rotation to throw 20-game winners Jose Lima and Mike Hampton.

A division championship would mean that the Reds could avoid a first-round matchup with Atlanta. The Braves won 8-of-9 from the Reds this season and are 29-5 against Cincinnati over the last three years.

"This is beautiful," outfielder Greg Vaughn said. "This is what you want. You want to go in there and determine your own fate. It's going to be loud and it's going to be fun."

Tennessee investigates academic fraud allegations

Reports are being investigated on whether four tutors have done school-work for at least five football players.

By Duncan Mansfield
Associated Press

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — Defending national champion Tennessee, which in recent years has uncovered cheating in its advanced degree programs and a telephone card fraud scandal among its athletes, is now investigating whether tutors did schoolwork for football players.

Tennessee President J. Wade Gilley, who started his job last month, said Monday the school is following "normal procedure and has turned this matter over to the (university's) general counsel's office for review." "Once this review is complete, the university will announce its findings and, if necessary, take appropriate action," he said.

Athletics Director Doug Dickey said the university also has reported the matter to Southeastern Conference commissioner Roy Kramer.

Tennessee coach Phillip Fulmer declined to discuss the allegations, which he termed "a concern."

"If it is anything about football, I will be glad to talk to you," he told about a dozen reporters who met him after practice. "The players are not going to allow it to be a distraction." ESPN reported Sunday that internal memos show high-level administrators in the athletic department were told of four tutors who may have done schoolwork for at least five football players, possibly violating the university's honor code and NCAA rules.

None of the information was passed on to the proper campus authorities charged with investigating possible rules infractions, said Malcolm McInnis, NCAA compliance officer for Tennessee.

The alleged incidents dated to 1995, and it was unclear whether any of the players were on the 1998 national champion team. Three of the five players have transferred, according to ESPN.

POINTCOUNTERPOINT

Would Bob Stoops have been a success at Iowa?

When I look at the success that Bob Stoops is having at Oklahoma, I get jealous. Why shouldn't I? He's taken a team that went 5-6 in 1998 and turned them into the No. 23 team in the country. His Sooners have outscored his opponents 132-31, and he's turned a relative no-name quarterback, Josh Heupel, into a possible Heisman candidate after Heupel set Sooners single-game passing records. If there was any question before the season as to whether Bob Stoops was as good as his hype, they've all been answered. While the jury's still out on Hawkeye mentor Kirk Ferentz, Stoops has established that he's the real deal. And as for the argument that Stoops didn't really want to coach at Iowa, think again. His father is buried in a Hawkeye jersey, for crying out loud! No matter what is said about the situation, Iowa missed a golden opportunity. Ferentz will probably lead his team to a few second-tier bowls, and Hawkeye fans will follow like they always do. But in a few years, the folks in Norman could be making plans for a trip to the national championship. Why do Iowans have to settle for second best?

I know what you're thinking. You read the Bob Stoops story, and you're saying, why didn't Iowa hire this guy? Well, don't blame Bob Bowlsby and the UI for hiring the wrong man. If Stoops were here, he wouldn't be doing any better. It's all about the players you have. Right now, Oklahoma has them, and Iowa doesn't. Kyle McCann and Randy Reiners aren't Josh Heupel (who was a junior college All-American.) Even if Heupel were here, he wouldn't duplicate his success behind Iowa's patchwork offensive line. Whether you like it or not, Hayden Fry left at the right time. Iowa's talent level is not exactly Rose Bowl level. It's not even Sun Bowl level. You can have all of the high-flying, well-planned game plans you want, but they don't mean anything if you don't have the talent to execute them and win games. The Sooners returned 15 starters, including four offensive linemen — from a team that wasn't exactly down at 5-6 in 1998. Give Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz those kind of odds, and Iowa would be more of a Big Ten predator than prey. The Sooners are shining. They're in the top 25. But who have they played? Indiana State, Baylor, and Louisville. Not exactly Murderer's Row. Don't blame Iowa's athletic department or Ferentz. They're making the best of a bad situation. Check back in three or four years, and Iowa might be experiencing the success that OU is right now.

Woman buys Cobb's dentures for $7,475

NEW YORK (AP) — On the day Tiger Stadium closed, Ty Cobb's dentures sold for $7,475. Cobb's choppers were sold to Karen Shemonsky of Clarks Summit, Pa., who spent most of Monday explaining to friends why she had purchased them in the Sotheby's auction of Barry Halper's baseball memorabilia. "They keep calling me, saying, 'Why would you want that?'" she said. "My sister goes on cruises. I'd rather have this in my hand."

Besides, it was a lot cheaper than Cobb's 1928 jersey, which sold last weekend for $332,500. Originally, Sotheby's estimated the dentures of the Detroit Tigers great at between $300 and $500 in the auction catalog. The price caught Shemonsky's eye. "When I saw that, I said to my husband, 'That's not bad for a piece of history,'" she said. "It caught my eye. It's so odd, so different."

Vancouver and Atlanta each claim two players

NEW YORK — The expansion Atlanta Thrashers and the Vancouver Canucks were the busiest teams during Monday's NHL Waiver Draft, with both selecting two players apiece. The Thrashers took center Jeff Williams from the New Jersey Devils and right wing Ladislav Kohn from the Toronto Maple Leafs. The Canucks claimed defenseman Chris Joseph from the Ottawa Senators and John Nomestnikov from the New York Rangers, filling spots created by the holdouts of Ed Jovanovski and Adrian Aucoin, both restricted free agents.

NBA referee fined $3,000 in ticket scam

BRIDGEPORT, Conn. — An NBA referee from Danbury was fined $3,000 Monday for his part in a scam involving the misuse of airline tickets received from the league. Ronald Nunn, 49, pleaded guilty in July to one count of filing a false income tax return. He admitted that during 1993 he earned more income than he declared on his return by cashing in first-class airline tickets for coach tickets and pocketing the difference. He failed to report between $8,000 and $13,500, including some unreported income from 1992. Nunn was one of 11 league officials convicted after an investigation by the Internal Revenue Service dubbed "Operation Slam Dunk."

Pistons sign free agent Pooch Richardson

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — The Detroit Pistons have signed free agent guard Pooch Richardson, who spent the past five seasons with the Los Angeles Clippers. The Clippers bought out the remainder of Richardson's contract in September. Neither the Pistons nor his agent, Arn Tellem, would release terms of the one-year contract.

Owners, umpires select Symonette as arbitrator

NEW YORK — Baseball umpires and owners finally selected an arbitrator to hear their dispute, deciding Monday on Alan Symonette, a 55-year-old Philadelphian. Symonette has been a salary arbitrator for the past two years, serving on panels that ruled for catcher Charles Johnson and against outfielder Matt Lawton.

Umpires want Symonette to rule that 22 umpires were illegally terminated by the American and National Leagues on Sept. 2.

IOWA INTRAMURALS

Give it up for Sexual Chocolate

■ The powerhouse of flag football looks to be on its way to a second-consecutive intramural title.

By Jeremy Schnitker
The Daily Iowan

Practice? These guys have never heard the word. Domination? They wrote the book. You would think a team that has outscored its intramural flag football opponents 130-0 so far this year would at least work at it. Well, you haven't met the guys from Sexual Chocolate.

Unlike the group's namesake from Eddie Murphy's "Coming to America," these guys are pretty good. They stay humble about their success, and all that matters to them is having a good time.

"All we really care about is getting drunk and beating frat teams," said Jace Bisgard, Iowa graduate student.

"We hold our practices at One Eyed Jake's," teammate B.J. Terrones said.

While the guys from Sexual Chocolate try to downplay their success, it's hard not to look at the scores of their games and be amazed. One would think that there has to be something behind their success. A play book stolen from Steve Spurrier. Pre-game motivational speeches from Dick Vitale. Something, anything. But these guys don't run plays, and the closest they get to a motivational speech is a pre-game smoke.

They credit their success to having been together for so long, and the weakness of their competition. "The thing that separates us is that we've been playing together for a long time," Aaron Anderson said. "We know where our teammates are on the field. Most of the teams that we play are real unorganized; we capitalize on their mistakes."

The majority of their touchdowns come from interceptions due to bad passes by the other team.

"A lot of the teams we play just make mistakes," added Nick Cockrum. "If a quarterback throws up a duck, odds are we're going to intercept it and run it back."

On offense, they have no set patterns or plays; they run a hurry-up, no-huddle offense. On defense they run a basic man-up defenses and blitz, which causes a lot of those interceptions.

"Defense is how we win games," Bisgard said.

Though they try not to take themselves too seriously, they all share the common trait of being tough competitors. While only a few played high school football, the whole team seems to know how to win.

"We're all competitors," Bisgard said. "We don't like to lose."

Like the saying goes, good things can't last forever. Most of the members of Sexual Chocolate will be graduating in the next few years, putting an end to their flag football domination at Iowa.

However, a few of the guys did pointed out that graduate school wasn't out of the question to keep the tradition going.

Griffey, Rodriguez may become best-paid players

■ Howard Lincoln has already offered two Mariner stars higher contracts.

By Tim Klass
Associated Press

SEATTLE — Howard Lincoln got off to a fast start as chairman of the Seattle Mariners, offering Ken Griffey Jr. and Alex Rodriguez contracts he said would make them the best-paid players in baseball.

Both players have emphasized that their interest in remaining with the Mariners, third in the AL West at 77-78 before Monday night's game, hinges more on having a club that can make the playoffs than on their own contract terms.

Taking over Monday from John W. Ellis, chief executive of the franchise since 1992, Lincoln said the club's player payroll would be boosted to $65 million to $70 million, an increase of about 30 percent after three years at roughly $50 million. "I think we're operating on the assumption that that will be sufficient," Lincoln said. "We are operating a business. We have to take into consideration revenues and costs..."

"I think we're in good shape. I think this will put us, from a competitive standpoint, where we should be."

Without giving figures, Lincoln said the Mariners had made "definitive, written offers" to Griffey and Rodriguez.

"Those are long-term contract proposals which, if accepted, would make these two players the highest-paid players in the 130-year history of major league baseball," he said.

Neither player was immediately reachable for comment. The Mariners played the Rangers Monday night in Texas.

Mariners president Chuck Armstrong will continue to direct the search for a general manager, a task Lincoln said he hoped would be completed by Oct. 31, when the resignation of Woody Woodward takes effect.

Saban hopes help develops for Underwood

Underwood played defensive end at Michigan State for three seasons before sitting out his senior year with a sprained ankle. The Minnesota Vikings in April made Underwood their second first-round draft pick, and 29th overall.

He signed a five-year, $5.3 million contract Aug. 1 but walked out of training camp the next day. Underwood told coach Dennis Green he had no desire to play football.

Michigan State football coach Nick Saban on Monday hinted that Underwood's ambivalence about playing football may not be new.

"I think Dimitrius' behavior over a little bit of time here has been a little bit unusual," Saban said at his weekly news conference. "We tried to help the guy last year; I know the Dolphins have tried to help him now, and I've talked to him on several occasions. ... Maybe now someone can help him and he can do well."

Underwood has explained his departure from Minnesota by saying he was torn between a desire to pursue the ministry and the need to support his children.

tradition-rich programs ready to play.

"But all that goes out the window when you kick the ball off. That will be talked about as the week goes on, but once you get into playing, it doesn't have a whole lot of bearing."

When Oklahoma broke into The Associated Press poll on Sunday, it was the first national ranking for the Sooners since 1995. Texas coach Mack Brown was glad to see that, even though his school and Oklahoma are longtime rivals.

"OU needs to be a great football team. It's something that is good for college football," Brown said. "The Big 12 needs OU to be good, just like Texas. We haven't been as consistent the last number of years as we would like to be, but I think it's important for both OU and Texas to be good."

Intensity surprises Leister

FIELD HOCKEY

Despite the fact that she scored a hat-trick against the Buckeyes, freshman Tiffany Leister admitted that she was a bit overwhelmed with the extreme intensity that comes with Big Ten play. After a less than spectacular week of practice, Leister was happy she produced when it counted.

"This was just a totally different level of play for me, the intensity level was so high," Leister said. "The fans are great here and there is such pride and energy every time we step on the field. We owe them a lot for this weekend."

Beglin will be looking for better support around the ball for defenders Sarah Thorn and Freet as the Big Ten season progresses. The ball carrier rarely had an opportunity to pass against Penn State, which led to dumped balls or wrong passes that the Nittany Lions did not take advantage of.

"We will have to play a lot better in the future if we hope to continue to win this season," Beglin said.

With Iowa's record at 8-0, the additions of top scorers Leister and senior transfer Lesley Irvine have added some offensive firepower to an already solid team. Thorn said the Hawkeyes now have the big guns needed to take the team to the next level.

"We have a nice crop of newcomers and veterans on this team, and this is it for the seniors," Thorn said. "This team has the potential to go all the way and this weekend proved that Iowa field hockey is back."

After 103 years at the site on Michigan and Trumbull Streets, the Detroit Tigers will move to Comerica Park in another location downtown Detroit for the 2000 season.

Detroit bids farewell to Tiger Stadium

■ Players dressed in uniforms of former Tiger greats for the final game at the old ball park.

By Harry Atkins
Associated Press

DETROIT — With Al Kaline, Ernie Harwell and a sellout crowd bidding goodbye, Tiger Stadium took its last turn at bat Monday.

Built on the site of a haymarket in 1912, the ballpark that was once home to Ty Cobb, Mickey Cochrane, Hank Greenberg, Denny McLain and Kaline made one last sentimental journey as the Tigers played their final home game at the corner of Michigan and Trumbull.

Next season, the team will play in Comerica Park, a state-of-the-art stadium about a mile away. But Monday was a time for remembrance.

For the game with the Kansas City Royals, Detroit's players all wore numbers of Tigers who played through the years. The starters wore the numbers of the Tigers' all-time team. Center fielder Gabe Kapler wore a uniform without a number, honoring Cobb — the greatest Tiger of them all — who played in an era before uniforms were numbered.

Kaline, a Hall of Famer, exchanged lineup cards with Royals Hall of Famer George Brett. Both wore their familiar uniforms, Kaline with his No. 6, Brett with No. 5. Harwell, the beloved broadcaster, emceed pregame festivities.

"The great times we've experienced in Tiger Stadium we'll cherish forever," mayor Dennis Archer told the crowd. "Now, let's create some new memories in Comerica Park."

More than 70 former Tigers were invited to take part in the ceremonies honoring Tiger Stadium.

"It was home to us for a long time," said Eddie Mayo, a member of the 1945 World Series champions. "Old friends are hard to slough off."

Kaline, wearing his No. 6 uniform, was saluted with a two-minute standing ovation.

"I have spoken many times about the first day I ever saw this ballpark, as an 18-year-old kid fresh off the train from Baltimore," Kaline said. "I again find myself humbled and a bit overwhelmed by the events unfolding."

Billy Rogell, a shortstop from 1930-39, threw out the ceremonial first pitch as the crowd roared.

"This is a good day, but a sad day," said U.S. Sen. Jim Bunning of Kentucky, a Hall of Fame pitcher who was with the Tigers from 1955-63.

Added Bill Freehan, selected by Detroit fans as the greatest Tigers catcher ever: "Bittersweet is the perfect word for it."

The weather cooperated, with pale blue skies, gentle sunshine and a pleasant breeze coming off the Detroit River as thousands of fans came through the old ballpark's turnstiles one last time.

Steve Levine, a 53-year-old fan, flew in from Chicago. In his wallet were ticket stubs from the 1968 game when the Tigers clinched the AL pennant and the game when McLain got his 30th win.

"Coming out here on the plane this morning, probably 80 percent of the people were coming here to see a ball game for the last time," he said.

"I have tons of feelings about this old place. I used to skip school regularly to attend opening days here."

Young leaves game, 49ers still win

■ Quarterback Steve Young left the game after taking a hard hit, but the 49ers held on to defeat Arizona, 24-10.

By Bob Baum
Associated Press

TEMPE, Ariz. — With Steve Young, San Francisco was overpowering. Without him, the 49ers were able to hold on, then punctuated their 24-10 victory over the Arizona Cardinals on Monday night with a 68-yard touchdown run by Lawrence Phillips.

Young staked San Francisco (2-1) to a 17-0 lead before being knocked out of the game with a mild concussion with 28 seconds left in the first half.

Jake Plummer, the quarterback San Francisco passed up in the 1997 draft, has rallied Arizona to victory 10 times in his 29 games with the Cardinals. But this one fell short.

Young threw a 13-yard touchdown pass to Jerry Rice before he was knocked woozy by the blitzing Cardinals.

Arizona rallied with 10 points in the fourth quarter, but Chad Stanley's 49-yard punt pinned the Cardinals on their own 3-yard line with 9:17 to play. Arizona moved the ball down the field, but Adrian Murrell lost 6 yards, then Plummer was sacked for the fifth time and the Cardinals chose to punt on fourth-and-11 at the San Francisco 40.

Phillips, given a chance by the 49ers after off-the-field troubles in college and early in his NFL career, burst through the line and raced to the end zone for the game-clincher with 1:42 to play to make coach Steve Mariucci 7-0 on Monday nights.

Young, sacked five times and knocked down 16 more in last week's 28-21 victory over New Orleans, was hit by Aeneas Williams and J.J. McCleskey as he let go of a pass. His head hit the knee of an offensive lineman as he fell to the turf.

Young lay motionless for a moment before he slowly got to his feet and walked off the field.

Tigers capture victory in memorable game

DETROIT (AP) — Al Kaline told Robert Fick to go out and make some history. Once he got his breath back, Fick did just that.

Fick's first career grand slam helped Detroit close Tiger Stadium with an 8-2 win over the Kansas City Royals on Monday.

"It's the most exciting thing that's ever happened to me," Fick said.

Luis Polonia and Karim Garcia also homered for Detroit. Mark Quinn homered for the Royals.

Brian Moehler (10-16) gave up two runs and nine hits in six innings. Jeff Suppan (10-11) was tagged with the loss, allowing four runs and eight hits in 5 1-3 innings.

"There was a lot of excitement definitely in the ballpark," Suppan said. "I think if we could play every game like that, with that much excitement, it'd be great."

Red Sox 5, Orioles 3

BOSTON — Pedro Martinez struck out 12 to give him a career-high 312 for the season, leading Boston to a 5-3 victory over the Baltimore Orioles on Monday night and guaranteeing the Red Sox at least a tie for the AL wild-card berth.

Boston holds a six-game lead over the idle Oakland Athletics in the wild-card race with six games left for each team.

Expos 8, Marlins 4

MONTREAL — Michael Barrett's three-run double keyed a six-run eighth-inning comeback as the Montreal Expos beat the Florida Marlins 8-4 Monday night, giving Felipe Alou the 600th win of his managerial career.

Trailing 4-2 with two outs in the eighth, Peter Bergeron singled to chase Marlins starter Reid Cornelius.

Devil Rays 10, Yankees 6

NEW YORK — Since clinching a postseason berth, the New York Yankees have looked nothing like a playoff team.

New York made three errors and allowed all of Tampa Bay's runs to score with two outs as the Yankees lost their third straight to the Devil Rays.

White Sox 3, Twins 1

MINNEAPOLIS — Brook Fordyce hit a two-run double in the ninth inning Monday night and the Chicago White Sox beat the Minnesota Twins 3-1.

Chris Singleton doubled with two outs off Bob Wells (8-2). Wells then walked Paul Konerko and reliever Eddie Guardado walked Brian Simmons to load the bases.

Fordyce followed with his double off Mike Trombley.

Rangers 3, Mariners 2

ARLINGTON, Texas — Lee Stevens drove in the go-ahead run with an eighth-inning sacrifice fly as the AL West champion Texas Rangers won their fourth straight game, 3-2 over the Seattle Mariners on Monday night.

The Rangers (93-63) moved 30 games over .500 for the first time in team history.
