Low UI salaries may contribute to brain drain

■ Some faculty say lower pay than what similar schools offer is why the UI loses professors.

> By Michael Chapman The Daily Iowan

The annual state of Iowa Board of egents' report on faculty salaries reflects what some UI professors have been saying for a long time - faculty members at the UI are paid less than nose at "similar institutions."

But what may be more difficult to neasure is the salary discrepancy's mpact on education because several faculty members have chosen to look said salary plays factor in their decisions to stay in Iowa City.

"I think salary does matter in these calculations. It's one of a number of things that are important," he While the UI does place in the middle of the Big Ten for average faculty salaries, the report released by the regents on Oct. 11 concluded that the UI still ranks near the bottom of average faculty salary among "similar institutions."

"Similar institutions" include the University of California, Los Angeles, the University of Michigan and the University of Arizona. Regents' Executive Director Frank Stork said the regents ask institutions to report on such criteria as expenses, academic programs, enrollment and a "whole array" of factors that are then analyzed by the board and used to place universities into comparison groups. The biggest discrepancy was an estimated $16,700 higher salary at the UCLA than at the UI. UCLA faculty will make an estimated average the new date for the leadoff event in the 2000

By Mike Glover Associated Press

DES MOINES - Unable to persuade New Hampshire to change its primary date, Iowa's Republican and Democratic leaders announced plans to move their state's leadoff caucuses to Jan. 24, 2000, a week earlier than had been planned.

Top Republicans and Democratic Secretary of State Chet Culver announced the switch at separate news conferences. State GOP Chairman Kayne Robinson said officials need to find a way to bring stability to the political calendar.

"If we don't get a handle on this among the states that are in this first-in-the-nation area and have some stability here, yes, we will be threatened," she said. "We don't want that uncertainty."

Republicans and Democrats use different methods to set caucus dates but work together to have them on the same day. Iowa Democrats must win approval from the national party's rules committee.

"We expect that to happen," Culver said. "I don't want to have to go through this again.'

Iowa Republicans are free to set their date without national party

The move comes after days of private discussions about the 2000 political calendar of primaries and caucuses that yield presidential

The Iowa caucuses had been set for Jan. 31, but New Hampshire officials unexpectedly scheduled their primary for Feb. 1. They refused to push it back to Feb. 8 despite the entreaties of Iowa officials.

Holding the caucuses on Jan. 24 puts them at the earliest they've been held since 1980, when the caucuses were held on Jan. 21. It is the fourth date for the caucuses that has been set. They were initially set for Feb. 21, but gradually moved earlier as other states set early dates as this year's political calendar became enormously front-loaded.

Roughly 75 percent of the delegates will be picked by March 7, and both parties are virtually certain to have a nominee within six weeks of Iowa's opening test.

Iowa reached the conclusion that it had no choice but to move the caucus date a week earlier to preserve its leadoff status, Robinson said.

"It's a difficult thing, and it's a terribly inconvenient thing," she said.

In fact, it's a massive logistical chore. Each party will have to find more than 2,000 caucus sites across the state. The two parties also will have to reshuffle the logistics of totaling the votes, and there's certain to be a major hotel shortage with the thousands of journalists and assorted others who descend on the state on cau-

Despite that, the state's political leaders concluded that holding the caucuses the night before the New Hampshire primary likely would dilute their impact and jeopardize their role in the presidential selection

The UI estimates that nearly 84,373 gallons of sewage were released into the Iowa River during a spill that took place between June 1 and Sept. 14, according to a report the UI sent to the Iowa Department of Natural

■ Gen. Pervaiz Musharraf orders a state of emergency, dissolves Parliament, and suspends the Constitution.

> By Kathy Gannon Associated Press

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan - Pakistan's military chief declared himself the country's leader earlier today, defying pressure to restore democratic rule after the army toppled the civilian government.

Fighter planes could be heard scrambling overhead within minutes after Gen. Pervaiz Musharraf made his declaration and announced a state of emergency. He then suspended the Constitution and dissolved Parliament.

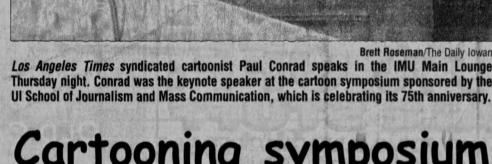

Since troops ousted Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif Tuesday and reportedly jailed his top supporters, Mushar-raf has been holed up in talks with leading politicians, including the president.

A spokesman for President Rafiq Tarar said Thursday that the general wanted to restore civilian rule.

However, soldiers then moved into Parliament, which had reopened only hours before and was scheduled to meet today for the first time since the military takeover.

The troops went down the corridors, clearing out staffers and the Political candidates traditionally knock on doors, kiss babies, and hand out brochures to garner votes; as Iowa City gears up for the Nov. 2 City Council election, local candidates are no exception.

Holding an informal meeting in a neighborhood home is a very popular, and traditional, strategy. Many of the council candidates participate in neighborhood "coffees," in which friends and neighbors gather at a host's house to meet the candidate and voice their concerns.

"I like the coffees especially," said City Councilor Dee Vanderhoef, an at-large candidate.

The meetings give her feedback on what issues really concern voters, she said, which forums do not. She includes a check-box on her campaign pamphlets to mark if a voter rould like to host one of the coffees.

District A candidate Ross Wilburn said that although he enjoys debating with other candidates in a forum, he prefers talking with people face to face. "You get more of a discussion," Wilburn said.

Wilburn is also relying on mass mailings to spread the word about his campaign. Another method that might have helped him win the primary election on Oct. 5 was the large number of phone calls that he and roughly 50 volunteers made, he said.

"I think some of the phone calling helped," he said, adding that he was frustrated at some of the angry responses that some of his volunteers experienced. District A candidate Jerry Hansen estimates that he has knocked on 400 or 500 doors in his campaign. He said it would be a good way to get feedback even after the election. "If elected, I'd like to continue to

"I'm going to be talking to a lot of individual labor unions," Major said. Irvin Pfab, a District C candidate, makes voter registration a prime focus of his campaign.

Race set to run/walk for schools

■ The Race for the Schools could raise more than $100,000 in the Oct. 17 event.

> By Anne Huyck The Daily Iowan

Nearly 3,000 runners and walkers of all ages are expected to participate in the Hawkeye Medical Supplies Run for the Schools on Oct. 17, which will raise money for local schools.

At least 64 of the runners were on hand at the last of four warmups, sponsored by Mercy Hospital Thursday at 5:30 p.m. The runners socialized, received free shirts and heard an inspirational speech from Iowa City School Superintendent Lane Plugge before embarking on a final 5K practice.

Iowa City Road Races is putting on the event, which will benefit the School District Foundation and the Regina Foundation. The foundations will then put the money into local schools.

Iowa City Road Races has been holding races locally for 23 years; this is the first year that donations are going to local schools. The United Way declined to be a part of the races this year.

Doug Stahl, health-promotion coordinator for the Iowa City Hospice, said all the turnouts have been well-attended and Thursday's turnout was the best. "There was a concern that there would be no race," he said. "So, to have 65 people per warm-up is a

As of Thursday, 2,500 racers had registered. People can register until Oct. 17 at 8 a.m., when the first race begins, said race director Lori Riley. Numbers are expected to reach 3,000.

Participants can either run or walk in a half-mile, one-mile, 5K or K-and-a-half marathon, all starting between 8 a.m. and 9 a.m. on Oct. 17 on either College Street or the corner of Gilbert and Washington streets, she said.

Although final donations are not yet in, Riley said, in past years the donations have amounted to more than $100,000.

Jim Barrett, president of the Board of Directors for Iowa City Road Races, has made participating in the races a family affair over

"It's absolutely a blast," he said. "It's a good fitness activity."

In addition to the runners, 500 volunteers will help at 13 water stations. They also will help people with traffic and runners at the finish line by getting names and times, Riley said.

People participating in the races found sponsors, who then donated monetary gifts that the two foundations will receive. Donators could support Regina or the School District Foundation, or split their donations between the two, said Annie Deam, an administrative assistant for the Regina Foundation. accepting the pledge for an alcoholfree VEISHEA.

"We have always been the frontrunners for a dry VEISHEA," said IFC President Adam Oris. "But there was some strong opposition this year that had nothing to do with alcohol. People are against the administration's actions. There are some extremists who would be willing to vote against the pledge just to make their point."

For the past two years, ISU administration has delivered official statements to student groups, saying approval of the alcohol-free pledge was the determining factor for the existence of VEISHEA. This year, students brought their concerns about university regulations to members of administration prior to the release of any statement. In his address to the student government, Jischke confirmed that if VEISHEA is not alcohol-free, the voted Thursday night in favor of university would not allow the event

"VEISHEA has had several incidents in the past 10 years, from riots to a death, that alcohol played a role in," said Steve Sullivan of the VEISHEA Advisory Committee and the university-relations department. "We wanted to make it a safer environment."

University officials had not expected such divided student reactions on an issue that has been going on for approximately three years. "A lot of people who live off cam-

Marcia Wallace speaks on her brush with breast cancer.

> By Robin Wright The Daily Iowan

Breast-cancer awareness advocate and Emmy Award winner Marcia Wallace described the importance of early detection of cancer, and having a sense of humor if cancer strikes Thursday evening.

Wallace, who's best known for her role as the voice of teacher Edna Krabappel on "The Simpsons," spoke to approximately 200 people at the Radisson Hotel, 2525 N. Dodge St., in conjunction with Breast Awareness Month.

"Laugher is the only wall between us and the dark," she said. "In tragedy, people always feel that laughter is in bad taste - but no, that's when you need it most."

In 1984, just three days after becoming engaged, Wallace was diagnosed with breast cancer. Eleven years later, her husband succumbed to pancreatic cancer, leaving her with a 5-year-old son. Wallace shared the words spoken by her husband in his final days to the Wallace's own brush with cancer lasted only a few months. While working in New York, she discovered a lump in her breast that resulted in her surgeon wanting to remove her breast on the spot. some crucial measures the public can use to fight breast cancer.

"I think the most important fronts that breast cancer can be fought on are research, of which the Breast Involve Group plays a large part in by studying therapeutic results for women with breast cancer, and public awareness," he said.

We have discovered new genes and molecular markers for therapeutic intervention that should be a crucial step in the prevention of breast cancer for women," she said.

Wallace stressed the importance of early detection by getting regular mammograms after age 40, practicing breast self-exams beginning as a teen-ager, and what she called the most important tool, gut instinct.

"I'll never forget meeting a woman in her 80s. She told me that when she was in her 50s, she had the feeling that she had cancer but doctors kept saying she was fine," Wallace said. "Well, decades later, they found cancer. It was because

Hurricane drenches Cuba, heads for Keys

HAVANA (AP) - Hurricane Irene dumped rain across western Cuba Thursday, forcing at least 130,000 people to evacuate. Ranchers moved cattle to higher ground, schools and businesses closed, and workers sealed warehouses storing Cuba's famous cigar leaves.

A hurricane warning was issued for the Florida Keys, as well as a stretch of Florida coastline from Florida City to Boca Grande, approximately 85 miles south of Tampa. Areas north of Boca Grande and between Florida City and Jupiter Inlet, on the east coast of the peninsula, were put under a hurricane watch

At 4 p.m. CDT, Irene was centered approximately 65 miles southwest of Havana and was moving north-northwest at 7 mph.

Symposium to cover law, gender, race

■ The neglected issues of race and gender will be the subjects at the law school this weekend.

> By Chao Xiong The Daily Iowan

The Journal of Gender, Race, and Justice at the UI will hold its fourth annual symposium, "A Critical Legal Perspective on Entertainment: Sports, Sex, and Identity," today and Saturday in Levitt Auditorium of the Boyd Law Building from 8:45 a.m. to 5 p.m.

"There is a lot of integration of ideas going on here, and it's exciting to see that," said Amy Weismann, the journal's senior articles editor-publication. Every year we have higher numbers of attendance and feedback.'

Nineteen speakers from universities across the nation will speak, said Anel Dominguez, the journal's senior articles editor and symposium coordinator. The speakers' writings will be published in the fourth volume of the journal sometime during the summer or fall of 2000, she said.

"Out of 400 American law journals, I cannot think of another journal that focuses on both gender and race simultaneously," said UI law professor Adrien Wing.

Members of the UI and the Iowa City community are encouraged to attend the symposium, which is free to the public, Dominguez said. Registration for the event can be done on-site. "I think we're lucky here at Iowa because we have people to whom these issues are very important," Dominguez said. Issues of race and gender law professor who deals with both issues of race and gender.

"This symposium hopes first to educate the UI community about these issues, and then when the symposium is published in the fourth volume, this important information will be disseminated throughout the United States," she said.

There will be three panels each day, consisting of three guest speakers and a UI commentator, Dominguez said. To facilitate discussion, a question-and-answer segment will be included in the presentations; an $8-lunch buffet will be offered both days.

'We want to involve the legal community in these issues and bring the public into it," Dominguez said. "We'd like to get some discussion going, raise awareness, and start making some changes."

At its inception in 1995, the journal was to serve as a forum "to discuss issues we (the founding board) felt were typically neglected in traditional law study but that we found to be integral to law study," she said.

The selection for speakers began in January, said Dominguez, who picked the panelists. She added that none of the speakers will be paid but their airfare and hotel expenses will be paid by the journal or their respective universities.

as it has since 1992 - despite the treaty's rejection. "It still binds us" unless the president says otherwise. With Texas Gov. George W. Bush and other Republican presidential hopefuls opposed to the treaty, Clinton acknowledged that a future president might disavow the ban. "Then all bets are off," Clinton said. treaty, another major arms accord. More generally, Clinton complained that the treaty's defeat was another step in the United States' retreat from a global leadership role.

GOP reckless on test ban, Clinton says

We are in a battle with the new isolationists and the Republican Party," Clinton said. He said the United States has failed to pay its U.N. dues or meet financial obligations under Middle East peace agreements and an accord with Russia to help dismantle the former Soviet nuclear arsenal.

The president's words reflected deep White House bitterness over the treaty vote and the undiminished animosity between Clinton and congressional Republicans after the impeachment battle and fights over gun control, tax cuts and other issues

In blistering language, he also said Republicans were endangering America's economic prosperity by "lurching from one unworkable idea to the next" in spending proposals and budget cuts.

Republicans quickly answered Clinton's charges. "It was not about politics," Senate Majority Leader

Trent Lott, R-Miss., said of the treaty vote. "It was about the substance of the treaty and that's all it was. No senator, no senator, was pressured to vote anyway but his or her conscience based on the substance of the treaty."

As Clinton denounced the Senate's treaty vote, other Democrats pledged to make it a political issue for 2000. Gore, in his first television ad of the 2000 presidential race, said he would send the treaty back to the Senate for ratification if he wins.

"Yesterday, hard-line Republicans irresponsibly forced a vote against the Comprehensive Nuclear Test Ban Treaty," Clinton said. "This was partisan politics of the worst kind, because it was so blatant and because of the risks it poses to the safety of the American people and Urging all nations to refrain from nuclear testing, he said, "I have no doubt" whether the Senate will ratify the treaty eventually - although that is highly unlikely in the near term because Republicans will remain in control of the Senate at least until January 2001.

IWP needs strong finances, leadership

he members of the task force committee on the International Writing Program are to be commended for their hard work and thoughtfulness in putting out the recommendation to restore the IWP to its original vision and past glory.

While feeling a sense of relief from the overall positive content of the report, one wonders if some of the details in implementing the program warrant careful rethinking. One of these is the creation of a new position of associate executive director for the designated purpose of fund raising. Financial woes plague most nonprofit organizations all the time; they are not unique to IWP. A major qualification of leadership is the ability to raise money, but to have a duplicate directorship dedicated to fund raising is unheard of among the many university programs. If the recruited candidate for the associate director is brilliant and knowledgeable on international literature, why not appoint her or him as the sole director? But, on the other hand, if he or she turns out to be mediocre, why not replace her or him with a lesser personnel (a program assistant or a representative from the UI Foundation, the fundraising instrument of the UI)? Why, then, pay out a hefty salary when the job can be handled with only a fraction of the cost? One can foresee the financial burden incurred by this position even before the first dollar trickles in. In choosing a director, academic reputation and managerial skills (including the ability to raise money) go hand-in-hand and enhance each other, but only if they reside in the same person. Splitting the two qualities simply does

There is a real danger in a top-heavy bureaucratic expansion. A lesson can be learned from the case of the vice president for health sciences, which was established in the not-too-distant past in order to bridge a gap among the different health-related colleges (medicine, nursing, dentistry, pharmacy) and the UI Hospitals and Clinics. The office not only slowed down communication processes between the colleges and the provost/president by intervening as an unnecessary relay station but also incurred a substantial financial liability through unforeseen proliferation of high-ranking personnel (creation of two associate and one assistant vice presidents, along with their respective program assistants and secretaries). Small wonder that the office was quickly dismantled because of public opposition.

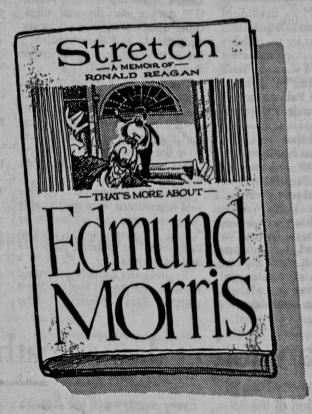

In an attempt to solve financial woes, the Task Force Committee has inadvertently created a position that could deepen the problem it tries to eliminate. The committee failed to recognize that what ailed the IWP in the past was not the organization of the program but the lack of enthusiasm on the part of the UI administration, which did not consider IWP a long-term investment for enhancement of the university's worldwide reputation. Like other investments, money is to be put away in exchange for future gains.

What the IWP needs is a firm financial commitment from the UI. In plain language, this means securing hard money out of university funds for the small crew of IWP personnel. This being done, it won't be difficult to hire a director (not two) who is a reputable literary figure and also possesses the charisma and persuasive power to attract outside funding, thus turning a vicious, downward-spiraling circle into a virtuous, upward one. Failing this commitment, no amount of reorganization and reshuffling will save the future of IWP.

EDITORIAL

UI Foundation loss is no small deal

The UI Foundation, an organization that raises money for the university, announced late in September that it had lost $5 million in the stock market during the last fiscal year. At first foundation officials claimed it was no big deal. They said it only looked bad because of the timing, and they said that it was only a small percentage of the total endowment fund. The investments were conservative, it was only short-term volatility, and the endowment fund wasn't in any danger. Above all, they claimed that the losses wouldn't hurt students and faculty.

In an article that appeared in the Sept. 27 DI, the foundation's vice president of communications, Alan Swanson, was quoted as saying, "Our endowment fund is set up permanently and will stay that way; it has to, by law." The article also said Iowa law states that when a public institution receives a donation and puts the money toward an investment, it can spend only the earnings from the investment.

These statements give a false impression that the fund is generating earnings without taking on any risk, which is of course not true. The stock market is risky, especially if we are concerned with the short term - one fiscal year at a time. A steady decline in returns not only eats up earnings but also eats up the endowment itself. This can make life very uncomfortable for fields that count on money from the foundation - arts, athletics and health research. This is true even if the investments turn around in the long run.

What we should be asking ourselves is if the investments were so conservative, the why did the foundation show a loss at a time when most market indicators gained? Foundation officials say that they have a positive long-term investment record, which only brings to mind the usual disclaimer that past performance is no guarantee of future returns. The UI has enough budget troubles as it is without having to worry about this as well.

Education programs are de-emphasized because of privatization at UI resident Mary Coleman assures us that student fees must be separated from tuition raises — a neat accounting move that allows the UI to raise costs to students even faster.

This money will be used for library furniture, "smart classrooms" and "rapid response teams" to make sure all the new technology purchased is properly cared for. Oh, and 16 percent of tuition increases will go to student financial aid.

But would we need so much financial aid if tuition costs had not skyrocketed over the past 10 years, both here and across the country? And where has all that tuition money really gone? There is evidence that where it often goes is not into undergraduate or graduate educational programs. Instead, it's often funneled into "capital improvements," meaning, buildings and labs and technology that are not really meant to aid students but rather to help universities obtain lucrative industry and government contracts.

In 1990, the American Council on Education reported in "The College Tuition Spiral" that tuition goes up because student enrollments are dropping and because colleges spent oodles of money on faculty salaries or other instructional costs in the 1980s. But other researchers insist this theory is wrong: Student enrollments have not dropped (in fact, they've gone up). Overall, the council's own data showed that, nationwide, relative state funding has not dropped. And there was no evidence linking increases in faculty salaries or other instructional costs to the level of tuition increases. Rather, large tuition increases are tied to the need for cash to help fund the "commercialization of campus-based research." (Atlantic, March 93, page

When presented with the "tuitionsubsidizing-corporate-research" hypothesis, Arthur M. Hauptman, author of "The College Tuition Spiral," said, "I don't think it's hypothetical. It's true." Hauptman's recent research shows that the competition for private contracts has led to the need to capitalize state-of-the-art-labs, new buildings, and equipment. Cash shortfalls result, which are subsidized by increases in tuition.

What happens to graduate and undergraduate education programs once a "corporatization" trend hits a university campus?

GUEST OPINION

DEBORAH HERMAN

First, investment decisions are made

Wall-Street style. The University of Minnesota, for example, invested $5 million of its endowment into China through an Asia Corporate Partners Fund, ignoring complaints that a public university shouldn't be investing in a country with an extensive human-rights violations record. Universities also hire marketing firms, which advise on how to "maximize net tuition revenue" through "financial aid leveraging." Translation: How to give larger grant packages to students from wealthier families who can pay the balance of their tuition bill in cash, rather than to poorer students (often minorities) who come with federal aid packages.

Second, academic programs not considered "cost-effective" become targets for "down-sizing." In 1995 the University of Rochester eliminated its entire graduate program in mathematics — this at a school known for its specialty in science and economics. Graduate programs in chemical engineering, linguistics and comparative literature were also targeted for elimination. And at Vermont's Bennington College, the departments of Political Science, Economics, Art History, foreign languages and Music were eliminated between 1989-94. The college president noted massive faculty firings were necessary to be "competitive" because faculty are "entrenched and lazy" and undergraduate students are "reluctant to accept responsibilities." Is corporatization happening at the UI? Well . 1) The UI Foundation recently shrugged off a $5 million loss in the stock market as inconsequential and assured us that such losses won't affect students.

2) The School of Music and the theatre and dance departments are being pushed to merge. So are all the foreign language departments, despite widespread faculty resistance. The impact of such mergers on undergraduate and graduate educational programs is potentially disastrous.

3) Medical and science journals are targeted for elimination from the UI Libraries because they are "very expensive.

4) The Liberal Arts Grants Office was essentially shut down last spring. Much of the grant money generated by this office was used to fund minority student recruitment and financial support.

5) The International Writing Program is dismissed by Dean Linda Maxson as being "outside the mission" of the college.

What difference will it make if we have new buildings and labs and computers, but no professors or educational programs to serve students? Are we really a public institution if constantly rising tuition and fees drive out the very students we are supposed to be serving? Has it occurred to anyone that student debt may be dropping at UI in part because more and more Iowa students are being driven out of "their" public university? This is a state in which 70 percent of the jobs pay less than $10/hour and farmers are experiencing the worst financial crisis since the Great Depression. So just what is the mission of this univer-

The UI also was $9,400 short of the University of Michigan and $3,800 short of the University of Wisconsin's average for faculty salaries; it ranks higher than the other regents' universities. Iowa State University's average is expected to be $68,500, and the University of Northern Iowa's average is $56,800.

With UI professors getting more offers from other schools than in the past, UI Provost Jon Whitmore said, faculty members may decide to leave for an increased salary.

"We lose faculty every year for a variety of reasons," he said. "Some leave because they get better offers of salary elsewhere."

The regents would be in favor of a salary increase, Stork said, with most of the funding deriving from tax-payer money in the form of state appropriations within the Faculty Salaries Estimated Estimated Here is a listing of average faculty salaries at Big Ten Schools for 1998-99 as well as Average Average Average estimated increases for 1999-00. Faculty Percent Faculty Salary Increase Salary Big Ten (Public Universities) 1998-99 1999-00 1999-00 University of Michigan, Ann Arbor $77,800 4.0% $80,900 University of Illinois, Urbana $72,100 5.0% $75,700 University of Wisconsin $69,500 7.7% $74,900 University of Minnesota, Twin Cities $72,500 3.0% $74,700 University of Iowa $68,400 4.0% $71,100 Purdue University $66,900 $70,000 4.6% Pennsylvania State University $69,900 $67,200 4.0% Ohio State University, Main Campus $66,900 4.0% $69,600 Indiana University, Bloomington $65,400 $69,100 5.6% Michigan State University $65,900 4.5% $68,900 Source: The Bulletin of the American Association of — the paper went from the bottom of the journalism world to one of the top 10 papers, Conrad said.

But the transformation didn't happen without resistance, particularly to his cartoons.

"It doesn't bother me at all," he said. "In fact if you're not, you're probably not doing something right. I don't care just so long as people read 'em."

Conrad's academic career began at Iowa State University, working toward an architecture degree, but after the first year he had a .006 grade point average. He said, "I don't know where that six came from."

So he came to the UI and majored in art; after four years, he was ready to graduate, but with a 1.79 GPA, he was just under the 1.8 GPA needed to get his diploma.

He went to the Registrar's Office and tried to persuade the UI to let him graduate.

"You're going to break the hearts of my parents," he told them; the next day, he received a phone call telling him to pick up his cap and gown.

Conrad said his Midwestern upbringing, most notably, "the standards and the expectations to do something with my life,' have probably helped him in his career.

His father was a painter turned railroad worker who gave up eating lunch in order to pay for Paul's and his twin brother's art and piano lessons. He also brought home rolls of rate sheets, which were blank on one side, and the two boys would sit and draw with Crayolas, pens and pencils.

Iowa City resident Susan Baskett was examining the display of cartoons and laughing before the speech.

"I saw his cartoons in the paper every day, and I thought they were brilliant," she said. "When I read in the paper he was going to be here, I wanted to come.

UI junior Brandon Hayes had never heard of Conrad before but attended the event anyway.

"I find political cartoons interesting," he said. "They easily capture the message in a powerful way."

The UI attempted to clean up the spill the next day without informing the DNR, according to the report. Subcontractor AAA Mechanical Contractors could not get the proper parts to remedy the situation until Sept. 14.

Because the rooms were occupied intermittently during the summer months, the UI could not determine the exact amount of sewage spilled into the river. Officials based the equation on 40 gallons per person per day in the period between June 1 and Sept. 14.

The DNR was informed anonymously of the spill on Sept. 14.

In the report, the UI said it did not notify the DNR because the university "operates in a highly decentralized fashion" and said that "we are satisfied that there was no knowing disregard of the reporting requirement."

"Every single individual employee was not aware of the reporting requirements," said Ann Rhodes, vice president for university relations.

While the UI takes full responsibility for the spill, the DNR can choose to fine the contractor, she said. "If it wants to look into the cause of the accident and penalize other parties, it can," she said. If the maximum fine is levied, the UI will pay it, Rhodes said.

Starr to ride off into sunset, report says

WASHINGTON - With his five-year. $47 million investigation of the Clintons winding down, Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr will formally step aside next week and be replaced by one of his assistants, Robert Ray, sources familiar with Starr's plans said Thursday night.

Ray, a federal prosecutor who joined Starr's office early this year, was select-ed by a panel of three federal appeals court judges to succeed the controversial special prosecutor, the sources told the Associated Press

The judges, who interviewed several of Starr's deputies, have not issued a formal order yet, but they told the prosecutor's office of their plans this week, the sources said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

That cleared the way for Starr, who has hinted for months his desire to step down, to return to private law practice. Starr's office declined to comment Thursday night.

Despite a tough slate this weekend, Iowa volleyball coach Rita Buck-Crockett is pleased with her team's demeanor.

By Jeremy Schnitker The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's volleyball team is a happy bunch, according to its coach Rita Buck-Crockett.

The Hawkeyes have every reason to be. They head into this weekend boasting a fifth-place standing and a 3-3 record in the Big Ten.

"I'm very impressed with their positive emotion this year," Buck-Crockett said. "They're happy girls, they come to practice with a great attitude.

A positive attitude will be a good thing to have as the Hawkeyes face two tough teams this weekend. They play Indiana on Friday and Illinois on Saturday, both starting at 7 p.m.. Both teams come into Iowa City with good records and a lot of experience. "Illinois has a lot of experience inside and in the middle," Buck-Crockett said. "Indiana is a very quick team. It's going to be tough, but they are both beatable."

The Fighting Illini head into this weekend 9-3 and 5-1 in the Big Ten, with their only loss coming from the No. 2 Penn State. Indiana brings a 11-4 record to the table. Despite all the happines surrounding the team, there is a hint of bad news. Senior Julie Williams, who just last weekend moved to sixth on the all-time Iowa kills list, sprained her thumb in practice Friday. Although she will be wearing a protective cast, Williams plans to play this weekend.

"I'm definitely playing," she said.
"I should be used to it by tomorrow. By then it shouldn't hurt once the game comes.

Following the game on Friday will be the men's basketball teams' Game Night, all fans are asked to stay around for the evening's festivities.

NEW YORK (AP) - These New York Yankees aren't just beating up on Boston. They're pushing themselves into the record book alongside Murderer's Row.

Chuck Knoblauch hit a gametying double in the seventh inning and scored the go-ahead run on Paul O'Neill's single as New York rallied past the Red Sox 3-2 Thursday night for a 2-0 lead in the AL championship series.

With their 12th consecutive postseason victory, the World Series champions tied the record set by the Yankees of Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig who swept the World Series in 1927, '28 and '32.

David Cone rewarded all those fans wearing Coneheads on a chilly night with his best performance since his perfect game against Montreal on July 18, and the Yankees won a battle of managerial chess moves in the eighth to send Boston to its 10th consecutive ALCS loss.

Boston once again didn't hit much when it counted, going 1-for-13 with runners in scoring position.

The Red Sox stranded 13 runners. Now the series moves north to Fenway Park, where it resumes Saturday with an exciting pitching matchup. Former Red Sox star

Roger Clemens starts for New York against Pedro Martinez, the best pitcher in the game these days.

Pitching for the first time since Oct. 2, Cone struck out nine in seven innings, making just one major mistake, a two-run homer to Nomar Garciaparra in the fifth that overcame Tino Martinez's solo homer an inning earlier off Ramon Martinez, Pedro's older brother.

New York's bullpen survived the high-drama eighth, which opened when Troy O'Leary connected on Mike Stanton's third pitch for a double off the wall in right-center just inches short of a home run. Then came a managerial chess game, as Boston gambled its entire Boston countered by having Lou Merloni hit for Hatteberg, and the Yankees intentionally walked him, loading the bases.

Butch Huskey then hit for Trot Nixon, one of series of moves that cost Boston its designated hitter. Ramiro Mendoza came in, with Donnie Sadler - the last available non-pitcher on Boston's bench -

Game night ends week of anticipation for Alford

Steve Alford will kick off the official start to fall practice with Game Night tonight at Carver Hawkeye Arena.

By Greg Wallace The Daily Iowan

On most media days, the plan for the year is laid out, the goals are stated and the table is set for the sea-

Steve Alford had trouble doing that Thursday at Iowa's press gathering because he said Iowa fans are more familiar with most of his team than

"There really is no overview," Alford said when asked to synopsize his team. "I've been on the job six months, and haven't even seen these guys play five-on five. Your first look is going to be my first look."

Practice begins tonight at mid-night, and only 21 more follow before Iowa's first game in the Coaches vs. Cancer Classic Nov. 11 with UConn, the defending national champions. Alford is faced with the task of implementing an entirely new system, both offensively and defensively. something that would be a challenge if Iowa playing was Western Illinois, much less Duke or Stanford.

"That's not a lot of practices when you're implementing a whole new system to 14 players and four new coaches," Alford said. "It's not going to be easy to get all of that done.'

Iowa's best returning player, junior point guard Dean Oliver, said the next two weeks will be a challenge. "I see a lot of defensive drills, a lot of tugging on the shorts and a lot of sweat dripping on the floor," Oliver said. "We're not the most talented team in the Big Ten, but hard work will make up for a lot of that." When Iowa takes the court in Madison Square Garden, expect to be surprised. From the shoes, to the uniforms, to the offense and the defense, it's a whole new bag of tricks. Due to the lack of a truly dominating big man, (6-foot-8, 235-pounds Jacob Jaacks is the center), Alford hinted at running a four-guard offense at times, with Jaacks the only big man on the floor. Junior college transfer Joe Fermino will help, but behind him there is a significant dropoff to Antonio Ramos, Marcelo Gomes, and John Carl Williams.

Brian Ray/The Daily Iowan Rob Griffin will play a key role in determining lowa's success this season.

"Those are issues we're going to have to address in these next three weeks, as to whether we go to two posts and three guards, or four guards," Alford said. He then joked, "If Jake gets crazy, five guards."

The press defense favored by former Iowa coach Tom Davis may be a thing of the past, too. Alford said presses half the time, but favors a man-to-man style, especially in half-court situations. With all of the changes taking place, one thing will be constant for Hawkeye fans; Oliver will carry much of the load. Alford said that Oliver can expect to play 34-38 minutes per game, a tough ask considering the junior's caree high is 34 minutes. "I'm going to have to be in a lot better condition," Oliver said. "With all of the changes, I'm going to have learn the system as fast as I can to help everyone else out. If I don't die in practice, I'll be able to do it."

It won't be easy, but Oliver and the rest of the team seem ready. Alford has emphasized conditioning, and worked the players hard in spring drills. Rod Thompson earned the name "Bucket," as in what he was leaning over after finishing some workouts. He has dropped 20 pounds, and most other players added muscle and lost fat.

The next two weeks could be telling, as the new staff implements the new system. "I've had good success doing it in my style, my way," Alford said. "Now, it's up to the players to activate it. If they don't do it, they won't play."

At times this season, the Iowa football team has looked high and low for answers. How appropriate, then, that the son of a preacher man may have been the one to give the answer they needed. Going into last Saturday's game with Penn State, Iowa was 1-3. They were coming off of a 49-3 torching at Michigan State, where they displayed little talent and less heart. It wasn't getting any easier. Penn State was coming to town, and the Hawkeyes were 28-point under-background to inspire his teammates. "I was just speaking from my heart," Dodge said. "I got a chance to say something to the team, and my dad's been a big influence in my life. He always taught me going into a big game, you go back to the basics. "For me, that's been my relationship with Jesus Christ, and working as hard as you can," he said. "So I just the season, we'll be just fine.' That rest of the season begins tomorrow at Ryan Field in Evanston, when Iowa takes on fellow Big Ten cellardweller Northwestern. The mood surrounding the team is that it can win, something that has been missing this Big Ten season. It can be traced back to Saturday's better-

Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz said that he felt Iowa played without fire against Michigan State. Against Penn State, it was a different case entirely. The team played to the crowd, and showed great enthusiasm, pushing the crowd

"We certainly competed harder than against Michigan State," Ferentz said. "They gave the kind of effort it's going to take for us to get better."

Brown says the improved effort will show through

"We feel confident, because we know we took some steps of improvement last week," Brown said. "We get back to what we did last week and focus on ourselves, we should be all right this week." Forget "all right." If Iowa can play one of the conference's worst teams, Northwestern, the way they played one of the Big Ten's best, Penn State, it's doubtful that the visitor's locker room will be filled with sad faces after the

Dodge knows that if if Iowa plays for themselves, and doesn't worry about their opponent, the result will be something they're proud of. "Coach Ferentz told us, no matter who you're playing, you try to play the same way. That's what's so good about the way we played against Penn State," Dodge said. "Even though we knew they were such a good ball club, we played with enthusiasm, as if we thought we were going to win. If we can learn to play with that same fire, when you play teams that aren't as talented as Penn State, and you have a legitimate chance to win, then you're going to come out with a win." DI sportswriter Greg Wallace can be reached at gwallace@blue.weeg.uiowa.edu.

No one came out and said it directly, least of all Young, who smiled but walked past reporters without a word Thursday on his way to watch the San Francisco 49ers practice.

But clearly, the groundwork is being laid for the retirement of Young.

38, who been lined indefinitely by lin-symptoms from his fourth concussion in three years.

Dr. Gary Steinberg, the chief of neurosurgery at Stanford Medical School and Young's neurologist, has given Young and the 49ers his recommendation on whether the two-time NFL MVP should continue playing.

Young, Steinberg, general manager Bill Walsh and coach Steve Mariucci all declined to discuss the nature of the doctor's recom-

"The only one who can answer that question is Steve Young,' Walsh said.

However, Walsh did say he met with Young, discussed his future and encouraged Young to seek ing to the possible conclusion that Steinberg recommended Young retire because of the potential for long-term health risks.

"Five to 10 years from now, when he's feeling really fit, he's going to say, 'Why didn't I play football? I took the advice of one physician. I should have really checked into it," Walsh said. "I want to make sure he really checks into everything. He has to have more than one opinion, just Robinson's back could limit playing time in Milan

MILAN, Italy - David Robinson's annual battle with back problems will limit his playing time in the McDonald's Championship, San Antonio Spurs coach Gregg Popovich said Thursday.

Robinson sat out the NBA champions' first exhibition game, a 98-97 victory at Philadelphia on Sunday, because of a stiff lower back.

"His back's a little bit better." Popovich said after running his team through a light practice, "but we don't want to do anything that could hurt him down the line.

Robinson, who said he skipped Sunday's game as a "precautionary measure," hopes to be on the court as much as possible in Milan.

"I imagine I'll be playing a big chunk of the time, because our No. 1 priority here is to win the games," the 1995 league MVP said. "I have in my mind to play 40 minutes, if that's what we need." But he acknowledged Popovich might see things differently.

"I don't know what he's thinking from a coach's standpoint. Pop tends to be more on the cautious side," Robinson said, "so he might just play me 20 minutes a night."

San Antonio plays for the first time in this tournament in a semifinal game

Soccer

This Weekend: lowa (8-5, 4-3) will be in West Lafayette, Ind., to face Purdue (6-7, 1-6) today. The Hawkeyes head to Bloomington, Ind., for a game against Indiana (2-6-5, 1-3-3) on Last Weekend: lowa qualified for the Blg Ten Tournament for the first time in school history with a 2-0 victory over Ohio State last Sunday. Friday the Hawkeyes fell to No. 5 Penn State 3-2 in overtime.

Scouting Purdue: The Boilermakers are in their second season as a varsity sport and its first season as a member of the Big Ten. Purdue has been shutout in five of its last six games. This is the first time the two teams

Boilermakers are led by Kate Queen. Scouting Indiana: The Hoosiers are 0-3-2 in its last five games and haven't won a home game since Sept. 10 when they defeated Montana. The Hoosiers are led by Tracy Grose and Kelly Kram.

Coach's Comment: "The team's been really focused this week. On any given day anybody can beat anybody in this conference. We need to come out fast right from the start. Neither of these games should we expect to win," said Stephanie Gabbert.

-Melinda Mawdsley

Men's Tennis

This weekend: Seven lowa men's tennis players will travel to Michigan State for a tournament. They will play in both singles and doubles matches, with six other teams competing Tyler Cleveland is in Austin, Texas this weekend to compete in the main draw of the All-American Championships. On Wednesday, Cleveland defeated Marc Legris of New Mexico State in the first round of the tournament.

Standout Statistics: Cleveland is the first lowa tennis player to compete in the main draw of the All-American Championships in Austin.

Coach's comments: "This should be another good competition," said Steve Houghton. "Our doubles teams are still lagging behind. Hopefully, we can improve that this weekend."

Next Week: After this weekend, the lowa tennis team is done competing until November 5-8 when some of the team will be attending the Rolex ITA Regional. Since lowa will only be taking select players to this tournament for some team members Michigan State will be their last meet of the season.

running at first for Merloni. Huskey struck out on a 1-2 pitch and Jose Offerman lofted an easy fly to center. Huskey had been 0-for-2 against Mendoza in his career and Offerman 3-for-10.

Mariano Rivera, who won Wednesday's opener with two innings of one-hit relief, pitched ninth for the save. Garciaparra singled with two outs and went to third on O'Leary's bloop single before Rivera fanned Buford on a 2-2 pitch to end it.

With the game-time temperature just 53 degrees on a breezy night, Pedro wore a stocking cap as he watched from Boston's dugout, and Ramon looked much like his brother, allowing just one run and four hits in the first six

He walked Ricky Ledee leading off the seventh, Scott Brosius sacrificed and, one out later, Knoblauch hit the tying double to left on Martinez's 120th pitch -22 more than he threw in any regular-season start this year following his return from shoulder

Martinez, who has struggled for much of the year, had been in an awful slump before the homer, getting just two hits in his first 16 at-bats of the postseason. But he lofted a 1-2 pitch into the right-field seats, and the Yankees were ahead.

Cone, meanwhile, kept pitching in and out of trouble for the first four inning, Boston stranded six runners in the first four innings - including four on sec-end base or third. By the time Garciaparra finally put the Red Sox ahead in the fifth, Boston had been 0-for-8 with runners in scoring position.

Offerman singled leading off the inning, making him 5-for-8 in the series, and stole second. Knoblauch appeared to tag him out just before he got his foot on the bag, but umpire Al Clark called him safe.

the series opener, Knoblauch got the benefit of a missed call at second, when Rick Reed called Offerman out despite Knoblauch dropping the throw.

This time, the Red Sox caught the break, and Garciaparra hit his third homer of the postseason with two outs in the inning. Cone, ahead 1-2 in the count, left low pitch over the plate.

First base was open at the time and O'Leary, 2-for-22 against Cone in his career, was on deck.

Marino vs. Bledsoe main attraction

■ This week it's Drew Bledsoe's turn to learn a trick or two from Dan Marino.

> By Dave Goldberg Associated Press

Did Jimmy Johnson's harsh words about Dan Marino spur Marino to a vintage performance in Indianapolis last week? Or was it just Dan being Dan again?

We'll never know and the principals won't tell. What's sufficient to know is that it sets up a nice big game in Foxboro on Sunday when Jimmy, Dan and the rest of the Dolphins drop in on Drew Bledsoe and the Patriots.

New England, coming off its first loss of the season, is favored by two points. It would probably be more had not the normally reliable Adam Vinatieri missed a 32yard field goal as time expired in Kansas City, keeping the Pats from becoming the only 5-0 team in the NFL.

This should be just as close in a division that looks like it will come down to the final week, with the Bills also involved. PATRIOTS, 20-19

NBC in a win-win situation with baseball

■ Every potential World Series matchup is appealing for the Peacock Network.

> By Jeff Goodman Associated Press

No matter what happens, NBC

The network, which hypes itself as the channel of storytelling, has the World Series this season and will have no shortage of tales to tell.

For starters, how about a Sub-

Atlanta Braves return to the city they left 47 years ago and face the Boston

Red Sox, who look to break "The Curse" and win their first title

Maybe a rematch of the series in 1986 when the New York Mets and Bill Buckner - ended Boston's chances.

And that's not even taking into account the most likely scenario a rematch of the 1996 World Series when the New York Yankees beat the Braves in six

"It doesn't matter who makes it because there's such appealing clubs and each has something different to offer," said Fox analyst Tim McCarver, who did last year's World Series

McCarver would have been the ideal person to do this year's finale, especially if the Mets get past the Braves and face the Yankees. He was fired by the Mets before the season after 16 years as the team's analyst and worked Yankees games instead.

But fans won't hear McCarver once the Series begins. Instead, it'll be NBC's Bob Costas and analyst Joe Morgan. Morgan who work ing seven games in seven days in seven different cities to begin the postseason, has clicked with Costas this season after admittedly struggling a year ago.

Last season, the duo went into the League Championship Series without having worked together all season. Morgan also works for ESPN and was used to partner Jon Miller.

"It's an adjustment for me working on both networks," Morgan said. "NBC is more traditional baseball while both ESPN and Fox have more pizazz and color. Jon and I take more chances.

But ESPN agreed to allow Costas to work two regular-season games with Morgan this year.
