Fall's 4th sex assault reported

■ The attack allegedly occurred at the Lindquist Center.

> By Gil Levy The Daily Iowan

The UI Department of Public Safety responded to the fourth sexual assault report of the 1999-00 school year last weekend.

The alleged assault occurred on Oct. 17 at 9:20 p.m. at the Lindquist

The report was taken as a thirdparty report, which is given by the victim or a friend of the victim's with the desire to have the incident known but not followed up by investigators, said Public Safety Capt. Duane Papke.

"We try to do some follow up to see if we can get some information on it," he said. "But it's a very sensitive issue. We have to take the victim's wishes into account." Investigators from Public Safety get as much information from the survivor as they can in cases of third party reporting, Papke said, and try to determine if it was a "stranger" or "acquaintance" incident. "We find out if there's anything we can share with the rest of the community, and then we put that out," he said. "When the victim decides not to go further, it's very frustrating."

One of the Public Safety's main concerns is if the crime was perpetrated by someone who may do it again, Papke said.

When investigators have limited information, as they do with this case, Public Safety officers are made aware of what happened and where it happened; in this case, there is very little to tell them, he said.

While reports to law enforcement in which victims wish no follow up be done may be frustrating, any report to police is an improvement, said Christie Munson, the director of the Rape Victim Advocacy Program. According to an FBI study in the 1980s, one in 10 sexual-assault victims reported the incident to authorities, Munson said. Now that number is one in six.

"Sometimes the prospect of a criminal investigation isn't safe to a survivor," she said. "It's an invasion of life, one's psyche and spirit. Dealing with that is enormous.'

Approximately 80 percent of sexual assaults involve acquaintances, Munson said, and society's way of blaming victims keeps some people from coming forward.

"It takes a certain amount of time and a healing process," she said. "Some See ASSAULT, Page 5A

Regents likely to approve tuition hike

■ The regents will meet today and Thursday to discuss and vote on the UI's proposal.

By Chris Rasmussen The Daily Iowan

The state of Iowa Board of Regents likely will vote to raise tuition at the UI and separate mandatory student fees at its meetings today or Thursday, despite opposition from 96 percent of the students who participated in an online referendum on the matter.

UI President Mary Sue Coleman is expected to present her plan for raising tuition and student fees by 6.9 percent at the meetings. The proposal would raise tuition by 2.3 percent for inflation and 2 percent for "quality," while separating $76 from current tuition price

Essentially, students will be paying twice for that $76, because the increase is added on to a number that already factors those funds into its base.

UI freshman Dilek Dogruyusever, one of the 1,374 students who voted in the online referendum, said she was not very well-informed about the proposal and its ramifications.

"The only time I heard about it was when someone came into my room and told me to vote on-line," she said, adding that she had no explanation of the proposal given to her prior to

UI Student Government President Lana Zak said she has been told by UI staff that this year's UISG administration has turned apathy into "raging student activism.

"They will fly in the face of every UI student," she said. "I trust the regents will not ignore 1,500 students."

If the separation of fees makes money for the UI, as has been predicted, the other state universities may be forced to follow suit, said Regent Clarkson Kelly.

"If it works, if it makes money, you can expect to see Iowa State and Northern Iowa do the same thing," he said.

Coleman's proposal is setting a dan-gerous precedent for the University of Northern Iowa and Iowa State University if their administrations choose to follow the UI's lead, said Nick Arnold, UNI student government president.

"Currently, student activities are part of tuition; by separating them, you are creating greater out-of-pocket expenses," he said.

Had tuition at the UI been higher, sophomore Jenni Schollmeyer said, it would affected her decision to attend

"At the time, I was looking at UNI pretty closely," she said. "I probably would have gone to UNI had tuition here been significantly higher." Despite the results of the UISG referendum, the UI will present its original plan to the regents today, said UI Provost Jon Whitmore.

"To my knowledge, there will not be any change to the plan that is in the regents' docket of events," he said.

The regents could change the UI proposal, Whitmore said, but he believes they will approve the plan as it stands

UISG tables moves to limit mass e-mailings

The action comes eight days after an attempt was made to auction off 40,000 UI e-mail addresses.

> By Ryan Foley and Tom Tortorich The Daily Iowan

An amendment and a resolution that would have given UI Student Government the power to revoke recognition of student groups using mass e-mailings were tabled during UISG's Tuesday night meeting.

The legislation, introduced by Sen. Anthony La Forge, a UI junior, will be revised by him for presentation to UISG at a later date.

La Forge said the legislation was in response to the Students for Bush email, which was sent to all university e-mail accounts by Information Technology Services.

The legislation came eight days after the attempted auction of 40,000 e-mail addresses of UI students, faculty and staff on the Yahoo! Auctions Web site. The addresses were being sold under the seller name e_lection. At that time, e_lection's other auctions included the sale of the domain name Election2k.org, owned by LaForge Dig-

UISG calls for more diverse Homecoming

Group receives complaints about Greek dominance.

> By Ryan Foley The Daily Iowan

After the makeup of this year's Homecoming court consisted of five members of the Greek community and one minority, the UI Student Government passed a resolution Tuesday night to diversify the Homecoming Executive Council and to encourage a greater mix of students to apply for the court.

By doing so, the UISG said, it hopes that the council will "better represent the UI student body."

Sen. Marquez Brown, who cointroduced the resolution, said he felt the issue needed to be addressed because of the student response he has received. Approximately 50 people in the past two days have complained about the make-up of the Homecoming court, he said.

The deep, charred hole that was once home to Mondo's Sports Café, 212 S. Clinton St., is the future site of a new, seven-story building. On a 7-0 vote, the Iowa City City Council approved the design of the future Whiteway 2000 Building during Tuesday's formal council meeting. Whiteway 2000 will house a two-story ground-level commercial space and a five-story apartment complex. The former three-story building, which housed Mondo's and an apartment complex, burned down on

Construction of the new building began on Sept. 15; the new Mondo's, which will include a restaurant and a microbrewery, will occupy the commercial space by August 2000, said Tim Schroeder, a project architect from Neuman Monson PC Architects, 111 E. College St.

The ground level, reserved for Mondo's, will have an opening at the street level with a view of the two main beer-brewing kettles that will be located on the lower level. The kettles will have glass tops so patrons will be able to view the brewing process from the balcony above, Schroeder said. Marc Moen, the owner of the building, said he wants it to have a simple design, to look like a commercial establishment, and to have a New York-loft look or one that is unlike a typical Iowa City apartment building. The east and west sides of the building will be predominantly glass windows, he said.

The sixth and seventh stories of the building will have seven 690-squarefoot penthouses with balconies. There will be a total of 39 apartments, including one-bedroom apartments and efficiencies on the remaining three floors, Schroeder said.

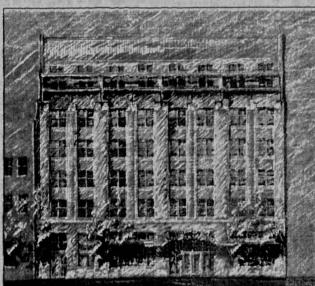

"We are trying to design it in a way that is out of the ordinary," he said. "We are trying to break the mold of a typical apartment."

The apartments will have folding metal partitions, which will slide across the colored concrete floors to allow the occupants to close off part of the room, he said.

The south side of the building, facing the Bread Garden Bakery & Café, 224 S. Clinton St., will have a spiral staircase visible through glass blocks that will be illuminated at night, Schroeder said.

"It blends well with the surrounding buildings and streetscape," said Lisa Mollenhauer, a member of the Design Review Committee. "It will be a good addition to the downtown area."

The $3 million structure will be See MONDO'S. Page 5A

Marc Moen plans to build a seven-story Whiteway 2000 Building to replace the three-story building that formerly housed Mondo's Sports Café and the Iowa Hair Cutting Co., which burned down on March 26. The Whiteway Building will include a two-level Mondo's, featuring a restaurant and microbrewery, and five floors of apartments.

Though the UI football team is in the midst of a losing streak, students and alumni remain hopeful for the Homecoming game against Indiana University Saturday.

"I think we will win because it is Homecoming and everyone is excited and pumped up for the game," said UI sophomore Brandy Okones

Iowa is 0-3 in the Big Ten, tied for last with the University of Illinois. "All teams have their ups and downs. A true fan stays loyal," said UI junior Jaime Edgar. Although morale among students is good, ticket sales for the game are down from previous years.

"The season tickets have been on a gradual decline," said Mike Burke, a representative of the UI Box Office. "This is partly due to aging of season ticket holders and the pre-season expectations of the I think we will win because ... everyone is excited and pumped up for the game.

Other factors affecting ticket sales are the successes of opposing teams, Burke said.

"People want to see a good team. This year we aren't playing Ohio State, which may affect ticket sales," he said.

But local hotels don't seem to be affected by the Hawkeyes' losing streak. All the rooms at the City Plaza Hotel, 210 S. Dubuque St., are booked both for this weekend and for all the upcoming game weekends, said Susanna Rodriguez, the front desk receptionist.

Faculty Council revises IWP stance

The UI Faculty Council revised proposed resolutions made by the Faculty Senate regarding the future of the International Writing Program during a meeting Tuesday.

The council's main concern is the program's deficit and the effect it will have on the future of the IWP.

"Recruiting for a director would be a challenge if there is a deficit," said council member Amitava Bhattacharjee. a professor of physics and astronomy. "If a deficit is left, it will be setting up failure under the new director."

Also, council members changed a phrase in a resolution passed by the Faculty Senate so that the council would not be seen as advocating the UI's paying for IWP deficits.

The resolution originally stated that the UI should absorb the IWP's deficit. This was changed to "the accumulating deficit of the IWP should not be allowed to endanger the program."

Other revisions were in regards to the administrational structure of the IWP. According to the resolution, the Faculty Senate feels that the program should remain under the oversight of the Office of the Vice President for Research and David Skorton, the vice president for research.

"People within the program have a lot of confidence in (Skorton)," said Jon Carlson, the council president and a professor of law.

The resolution also stresses that director should be appointed immedia to set up the inner administration of the program and fund-raising possibilities It is important to allow the IWP to have the freedom to develop its own administrative structure," Bhattacharjee

The resolution will be given back to the Senate, which is scheduled to meet on Oct. 26 to further discuss the future of the program.

Local woman is missionary reader for the jail

For 26 years, Woodye Kessler has read the Bible to the inmates of the county jail.

> By Dana Ritzmann The Daily Iowan

Woodye Kessler got her first Bible for Christmas when she was 7.

Seventy-five years later, Kessler has countless copies of the book, including one she keeps in a bag attached her walker that she takes to the Johnson County Jail every Thursday.

"I discuss the Bible and try to bring the fellows to Christ," said Kessler, who began her jail ministry in 1973.

After her first visit to the Johnson County Jail, an administrator told Kessler the women she visited would kill her just as easy as anything, she said

From that point, Kessler said, she knew she would continue reading at the jail.

"I felt I was ordained to that ministry," she said. "They need to be loved, not condemned.

Kessler was born in Fairfield, Iowa, into a religious family but never became a minister herself, though her two brothers did, she said. She worked as a nurse's aide at the UI Hospitals and Clinics Children's Hospital, is a mother of five and involved with genealogy, she said.

"It is interesting that three generations in our family worked with people who have problems," said

Dorinda Rupe, Kessler's oldest daughter. "Her father was an ordained minister who worked in jail; she is what our church calls a lay minister who works in jail; one of her daughters is an ordained minister; and I work with handicapped people who are in trouble."

In 1973, Kessler met Sister Rosemary, a Catholic chaplain in the hospital where her mother was treated, she said. Sister Rosemary, who had seen an ad in The Daily Iowan for a Bible reader in the jail, talked Kessler into going with her to the jail, which was behind the courthouse then, she said.

On Thursday, Johnson County Jail will hold a reception to recognize Kessler's 26 years of jail ministry, Rupe said.

'She's a really dedicated Christian and acts out what she believes," said Rev. Patricia Halverson, pastor of First Baptist Church, 500 N. Clinton St., where Kessler attends services and used to teach Sunday school.

She has a heart for the "downand-outers" and invites those without a family to her house for the holidays, Halverson added.

Del Vande-Krol, Protestant chaplain of the Iowa State Penitentiary, heard from several prison inmates who were transferred from Johnson County Jail to Fort Madison and realized the impact Kessler had on them.

"I've had inmates who have been highly touched by her," said Vande-Krol. He wrote Kessler two letters Woodye Kessler, 82, reads out of the Bible at her lowa City home Monday. describing his appreciation for her ministry and for being a substitute parent for prisoners who mostly came from dysfunctional families, he said.

Kessler also started a Christmas party for the inmates that included pizza and gifts. She remembers when a man in his 70s started crying when he unwrapped his present. He said it was the first gift he ever got, Kessler said.

She also writes letters to prisoners in 18 other jails and has visited some of them, she said.

One year, she wrote 1,069 letters, but she doesn't keep track anymore, she said. She receives letters from people she has never met and responds, trying to help them with their struggles, Kessler said.

One man still comes to dinner at her house and plays the piano, she said. Approximately 20 years ago, she wrote a letter to the correction office to release him earlier. It helped, and the man has turned his life around since then, she said. He now works for a company and remembers her by drawing posters for her and designing artwork, she

By Alice Ann Love Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Retirees will get the biggest cost-of-living increase in their Social Security checks that they've seen in three years - an average $19 a month beginning in January 2000.

The 2.4 percent benefits boost, which was announced by the Social Security Administration on Tuesday, will be nearly twice the 1.3 percent increase senior citizens got this year, largely because of a recent spike in energy prices.

However, with overall inflation remaining relatively tame, the 2000 Social Security payment update will continue a 1990s trend of modest increases. The annual adjustment is tied to the government's estimate of increases in consumer prices.

"Inflation remains under control, which is important for all consumers, particularly seniors who live on fixed incomes," said Social Security Commissioner Kenneth S. Apfel, focusing on the positive.

Many retirees, however, complain that modest annual payment updates in recent years haven't kept up with their day-to-day expenses.

Iowa's move makes a growing problem worse

Congratulations, Iowa politicos. For the sake of being first in the nation in the upcoming presidential primary season, you managed to mortgage the state's credibility regarding two of the most pressing issues in the political world: campaign-finance reform and the lack of substance in the preliminary party races.

Granted, Iowa has good reason to move the caucuses up to Jan. 24, 2000. For a state that has virtually no impact on the Electoral College, Iowa is blessed with the continuous presence of presidential candidates seeking their party's nod for the Big Race. Along with the politicians comes national media attention as well as the financial benefits of events such as last supports COP straw roll.

Unfortunately, while the move of the caucuses prevents the state's precious political influence from escaping to New Hampshire or, heaven forbid, Louisiana, it also places supporters of the move at the heart of the perceived problem with politics.

Money talks with a clear voice in the world of politics, and because candidates can only raise $1,000 from each individual contributor, much of their focus is directed toward attracting as many contributors as possible.

When the primary season is as front-loaded as it is, with states seeking their own pieces of the political pie, candidates are forced to focus even more effort and energy on collecting money. Iowa's action to move its caucus to January, a full six months before the party conventions, only intensifies the grab for cash on the political money-go-round.

As a result of this, voters can expect minimal substantive discussion of the issues before they are asked to cast their ballots. Before the move, Iowans had little chance of seeing more than a couple debates between the candidates. Moving the vote ahead a week does nothing to improve this. If not for the decreasing margins between George W. Bush and John McCain and between Al Gore and Bill Bradley, the voters would be guaranteed the opportunity of voting for candidates who had never defended their stance on any issue in a live public forum.

The benefits, financial or otherwise, of moving up the caucuses could very well outweigh the drawbacks. State party leaders, however, must now admit that they are guilty-ascharged in the watering down of the presidential campaign.

When Bradley left the Senate in 1996, he said politics was broken. Our state, which has done all it can to keep him and his compatriots between the Mississippi and Missouri rivers, has done nothing to improve the situation, and everything to make it worse.

Political cartoonists losing touch with provocative roots

Political cartooning has been a large part of American satire for many years. It is a clear and concise way for cartoonists to place their political views into terms that society can accept. The use of satire enables people to share their true beliefs in an unharmful way — a means of expression that citizens can understand but not be offended by.

People who live in the United States owe quite a bit to political cartoonists.

Symbols such as the Republican elephant and the Democrat donkey would not exist without a political cartoonist. Research of the human brain in recent years has proven that many humans respond better to pictures and visual items than they do to mere words. So, in many respects, political cartoons can enable everyone to better comprehend the nature of American politics.

However, the number of political cartoonists has greatly declined within the past decade. Perhaps one of the reasons for this trend involves the recent need for American journalists to be politically correct. Some cartoonists are known to have angered the subjects of their satirical drawings, and as a general rule, nobody wants to step on the toes of any political figure or on the political affiliation to which any member of the journalistic press may belong.

Today's political cartoons have geared themselves more toward making fun of political figures than any past cartoons ever have. Does this say something of America's ability to deal with political matters? In the past few decades, American citizens' interest in politics has greatly declined. Maybe this can be directly related to the decline in the number of political cartoons in our nation's newspapers. U.S. newspapers and political cartoonists should remember that political cartoons were created to illustrate political matters to the general public and not simply to poke fun at the members of the American government.

Fee changes must receive careful consideration

I am writing in regard to the Oct. 18 Daily Iowan article, "UISG Vote Draws 1,300." I must express my confusion at the results of the UISG survey. According to the article, students voted against the Board of Regents' proposed 4.3 percent increase while at the same time supporting the UI's proposed fee separation. If the students' wish was to keep their out-of-pocket expense to a minimum, support for the fee separation just doesn't make sense.

Currently, a portion of tuition is used to cover expenses such as student activities and student services. Under the proposed fee-structure change, this fee would be removed from tuition and be charged in addition to tuition, much like the student health and computer fees. At the same time, tuition itself is not being decreased by the amount of the fee to balance the separation.

In addition to the added cost to students, this fee-change proposal has other faults. Currently, as long as tuition is increased annually, the amount of money guaranteed for student activities and student services will also increase because the percentage of tuition allocated remains the same. In essence, the fee gets the same portion of a larger piece of pie. Under the new proposal, this guarantee is removed and the regents would have to be approached every year to secure additional funding for students.

This fee change sets a dangerous precedent for the other regents' institutions in the state that may be forced to adopt a similar fee structure. University of Northern Iowa President Robert Koob and Iowa State University President Martin Jischke have both indicated that they would be hard pressed not to follow suit if the regents adopt this proposal. Although it is too late to change the vote, I encourage the UI students to give this issue serious consider-o find good cheer in this day and age, one must bypass the international news, along with all things political, and soak up the joy of a nice Valtrex or Claritin ad. While such heavy items as global hunger and gun violence appear to have no immediate solutions, it is of some comfort to know that a case of herpes or seasonal allergies can be knocked out with a few pills.

It is actually quite amazing what prescription drugs can do nowadays, and the people who we see on TV and magazine ads can certainly attest to this. Why, for some of the robust individuals who prance through fields of flowers and stroll breezily through city streets, it would appear that the grim specter of venereal disease is the last thing on their minds.

Indeed, many health problems that would have once congested, burned, itched or embarrassed their hosts are now being taken care of with a variety of medications that are increasingly simple to attain. Is your hair falling out? Get a hold of some Propecia. Allergies getting you down? Call for some Claritin or Nasonex. Got something in common with Bob Dole besides your moderate Republican views? Look into Viagra

For every problem that arises (or fails to arise), the pharmaceutical industry is there to solve it. And judging from the appearances of the guys and gals in their advertisements, these companies are doing a damn good job. The drug recipients are chasing dogs, walking along beaches and cruising on roller coasters. I'm waiting for a random affliction to strike me just so I can try some of these pills out for myself.

But it's all fun and games, I guess, until somebody contracts a rare side effect. I realized this upon my perusal of the back side of one magazine advertisement, which listed, in full detail and microscopic print, the potential "adverse reactions." Quite disappointing, this was, as it turned out that the dizziness that can accompany Singulair, an asthma remedy, is a result of the drug itself and not the amusement park ride depicted in the ad. That can't be good. And neither can abdominal pain, swelling of the face or dream abnormalities, which occurred in a small proportion of test patients.

Certainly, I assumed, other medications would not have such strange side effects attributed to them. What kind of wonder drugs are they, anyway, if they can reduce one to convulsions on occasion? However, small numbers (fewer than 1 percent) of patients treated with Claritin, an allergy medicine, ended up with such maladies as vertigo, amnesia and anorexia.

Meanwhile, if one were to take Paxil to cure a little case of social anxiety, he or she would run the rare, but documented, risk of encountering arthritis, hallucinations or psychosis.

The makers of Paxil had to include these problems among their 13 paragraph-long list of potential side effects because federal law mandates that drug makers devote a certain amount of space and time to any such disclaimers. Which is why those scintillating ads for Propecia are usually narrated by one who can run through the list of side effects as quickly and inconspicuously as possible. The discussion of "certain sexual side effects," after all, is a huge waste of airtime.

These alerts are often buried somewhere deep in the advertisements, but they tend to be intriguing and mysterious. Do you happen to know what bruxism is? Neither library.

In the long run, however, more than 99 percent of those who use these drugs won't have much dizziness, insomnia or jaundice to worry about. But one shouldn't expect those who make up that 0.1 percent to be doing too many commercial plugs. In any case, the studies associated with these medications support the adage that one must take the bad along with the good. At least they've got it down to GROZNY, Russia (AP) - Russian warplanes and heavy artillery moved to draw a tighter circle around the Chechen capital Tuesday, and Chechen fighters retreated from the northern front-line to reinforce positions around Grozny.

Russia has said it is planning the second phase of its campaign to wipe out Islamic militants but has not said whether it intends to send its forces into Grozny.

The capital saw the heaviest fighting in the 1994-96 war in the separatist republic, with the outnumbered guerrillas frequently inflicting major losses on the Russian army; the current conflict has raised fears that the army is about to be drawn into another bloodbath.

Russian troops are as close as 10 miles to Grozny, with units perched on a ridge overlooking the city, which spreads across several valleys.

Artillery and warplanes reportedly attacked militants' bases in at least four locations Tuesday, including Alkan-Yurt, six miles southwest of Grozny. They also destroyed a radio relay station in Pervomaiskoye, 12 miles northwest of the capital, the news agency ITAR-Tass reported, citing the Russian Defense Ministry.

WASHINGTON - President Clinton and congressional leaders agreed Tuesday not to use Social Security surpluses to pay for federal spending and to try to resolve their budget impasse within the next week, participants said.

"Now we just have to roll up our sleeves," said Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., following an 80-minute meeting at the White House.

In recent weeks, Republicans have made leaving Social Security surpluses alone a major goal of their budget fight with Clinton. The president has agreed, though at one point he also proposed using the surpluses if Republicans would agree to do so.

In fact, both parties have used Social Security's surpluses to cover spending for decades, and it has had no effect on the system's ability to pay benefits. But each party is eager to cast itself as a defender of the massive pension program for the elderly and dis-

Republicans told reporters that Clinton had also agreed to abandon his effort to pay for extra spending for schools and other programs by raising taxes, including a 55-cents-per-pack increase in the federal cigarette tax.

But Democrats said that while Clinton conceded that Congress would not approve the full 55-cent boost, he believes a lesser increase remains politically viable. "There's a long way from 1 cent to 55 cents," said Senate Minority Leader Tom Daschle, D-S.D. Both sides said that beginning today, there will be an intensive effort to try to resolve the disputes that have so far blocked the enactment of eight of the 13 annual spending bills for the 19-day old fiscal 2000.

Clinton told the lawmakers that he will sign a sixth bill covering veterans, housing and environmental programs — today. But he has either vetoed or threatened to veto five bills, and White House officials say that to increase his leverage, he might veto the $268 billion defense bill on Oct. 25 if the talks on the other measures are not going well.

White House Chief of Staff John Podesta said Clinton's budget chief, Jack Lew, would go to Capitol Hill to negotiate details of the remaining bills with congressional budget writers.

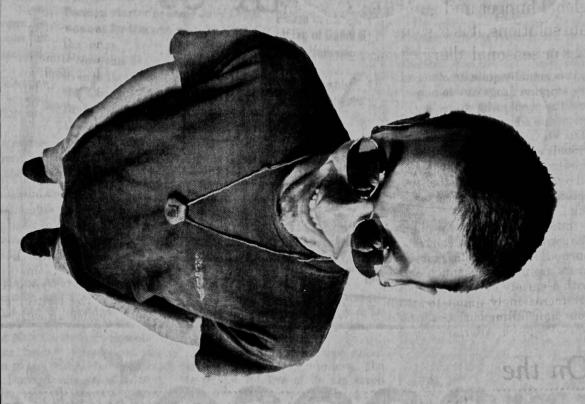

The discussions will also include proposals - largely supported by both sides - to extend expired tax breaks for corporate research and development and other purposes. The two sides also said they will discuss rolling back some reductions in Medicare reimbursements to hospitals and nursing homes that were enacted as part of the 1997 budget-balancing deal between Clinton and Congress.

Others attending the session included House Speaker Dennis Hastert, R-Ill.; House Majority Leader Dick Armey, R-Texas; House Minority Leader Dick Gephardt, D-Mo., and Treasury Secretary Lawrence Summers.

Warrick could play Saturday

A judge will decide today if Peter Warrick's grand theft charge will be reduced.

> Brent Kallestad Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. - Florida State's Peter Warrick could play Saturday against Clemson in a deal that would send him to jail for a month early next year, the star receiver's lawyer said Tuesday.

Warrick was considered the leading candidate for the Heisman Trophy when he was suspended Oct. 7 following his arrest on a felony grand theft charge. He has missed the top-ranked Seminoles' last two games

Peter Warrick's lawyer

Florida State athletic director Dave Hart Jr. wouldn't comment Tuesday, preferring to wait until Crusoe acts on the agreement. Warrick and former teammate Laveranues Coles were charged with buying more than $400 of designer clothes Sept. 29 for $21.40 from a store clerk, who is also charged. A security camera recorded the transaction.

The agreement would require Warrick spend 30 days in jail, donate to charity clothing he acquired in three trips to a Dillard's store, pay $295 in court costs, stay away from the department store and serve a year's probation.

"They wanted the 30 days to offer a misdemeanor," Kenny said Tuesday. "That's pretty standard when looking at felony cases. They worked very hard to look at Mr. Warrick not as a football player."

Warrick could have avoided jail time, but not if he wanted to have a shot at playing again this season.

"He looked at the options of going to trial to prove it was a petty theft, but those are not viable options when Peter wants to make himself available to the university as quickly as possible," Kenny said. Warrick caught 36 passes for 508 yards and four touchdowns in Florida State's first five games. He also threw a touchdown pass, ran back a punt for another and ran from scrimmage for a TD.

Reiners may be too sore to start lowa junior Scott Mullen will be prepared to replace Randy Reiners if injuries keep him sidelined on Saturday.

Iowa quarterback Randy Reiners has a defensive player's mind, trapped inside a quarterback's body. He does not slide when he is about to get hit, he is not afraid to block a larger defender and he has taken his not play Saturday due to nagging injuries that have accumulated over the course of the season. "We are not ruling anything out," Ferentz said concerning Reiners' chances of playing against the Hoosiers. "He has taken some shots. He has a sore Reiners took over as the starting quarterback after the second game of the season. In four games, he has completed 54-percent of his passes for 580 yards and a touchdown.

If Reiners cannot go, Scott Mullen will see his first start since breaking his collarbone against Ohio State last November. Mullen saw action last week against Northwestern, replacing Reiners for a play and scoring a touchdown. Mullen said even though he does not want to see his friend and Nearly three months since his car accident, Arizona's Luke Recker is appreciating life.

TUCSON, Ariz. - The long scar on the left side of Luke Recker's face is evidence of his awful summer.

Finally settling in at Arizona, where he transferred after two stormy seasons under Bob Knight at Indiana, Recker said living through last July's car crash has made him appreciate how fortunate he is. I really value life," he said. "I fragile, so I want to give my best effort in everything I do. Recker was a prep sensation in basketball-crazy Indiana, a winner of the coveted Mr. Basketball award. At 15, just a high school sophomore, he committed to playing for Knight, a decision he came to regret. Last season, he averaged 16.2

points as a sophomore for the Hoosiers but wanted to leave Knight's iron command.

He considered North Carolina, Florida, Iowa and Notre Dame, but settled on Arizona. He felt he could win a national championship there, and he liked the relationship coach Lute Olson seemed to build with his players.

He also noticed the way Olson's best players succeeded in the NBA. Recker felt Olson would best allow him to develop into a shooting guard, his best chance of making it as a pro.

Casey and the cart:

Martin on verge of Tour

■ Casy Martin is getting closer to earning his PGA Tour card.

> By Doug Ferguson Associated Press

By Sunday, the most remarkable comeback in golf this year may no longer belong to the U.S. Ryder Cup team. Casey Martin is four rounds away from becoming a card-carrying member of the PGA Tour.

While everyone was either debating Ryder Cup revenue, salivating over that shot by Sergio Garcia or still wondering what Jean Van de Velde was thinking, Martin quietly put together four top-10 finishes on the Nike Tour to climb to No. 12 on the money list.

The top 15 after the Nike Tour Championship this week are automatically exempt on the PGA Tour next year. Commissioner Tim Finchem will be on hand in Dothan, Ala., to hand out the working papers. For once the cards are stacked in Martin's favor.

Martin declined interviews leading to the Nike Tour Championship but told Golfweek magazine last week: "It would be a lifelong dream becoming a reality, especially with the kind of obstacles I've been up against."

Martin has a rare circulatory disorder in his right leg known as Klippel-Trenaunay-Weber Syndrome, which causes severe pain and makes it virtually impossible for him to walk 18

For that reason, he sued the PGA Tour and won the right to use a cart in February 1998.

8:00 to Close

The tour, which argued that walking is an integral part of the game, filed an appeal that could be ruled upon by the end of the year.

Martin's talent has never been in question. A teammate of Tiger Woods at Stanford, he won on the Nike Tour last year, qualified for the U.S. Open and nearly played well enough at Olympic Club to get into the Masters.

Timing, however, is critical. Martin's leg isn't getting any better. His best chance to make the big leagues could also be his last chance. It is mathematically possible that at least four players from No: 16 on down could play well enough this week and earn just enough money to bump Martin out of the top 15 and relegate him to another year on the

But that wouldn't be the greatest tragedy.

Imagine Finchem handing Martin his diploma Sunday along with the rest of the Nike Tour graduating class. Then imagine the 9th U.S. Circuit Court handing down a verdict in favor of the PGA Tour.

What good is a card if Martin doesn't have a cart?

A popular solution is for the tour to ban carts from its tournaments, as it should, and then grant an exception to Martin.

Jack Nicklaus, who testified on behalf of the tour in Martin's lawsuit and adamantly opposes carts on the PGA Tour, said that's what he would suggest if the tour won the appeal.

"I'd grandfather it in," he said. "I think that's the right thing to do in his case.' But Finchem indicated Monday that would not be an option.

ST. LOUIS - St. Louis Rams quarterback Kurt Warner spent a big part of his day off Tuesday playing with visually impaired children, posing for pictures and signing toy footballs and tiny jer-

It's a cause very familiar to Warner, whose adopted 10-yearold son, Zachary, is blind.

NFL players from all 31 teams spent the day in a variety of community service endeavors as part of the "NFL and United Way Hometown Huddle." In Baltimore, members of the Ravens served meals to the homeless. Jacksonville Jaguars helped students at a Boys & Girls club with their homework. Members of the Cleveland Browns helped build a playground for underprivileged

Warner, the NFL's surprise star of 1999, and several teammates spent hours at Delta Gamma Center for visually impaired children. Warner brought along his wife, Brenda, and Zachary, who seemed to relish taking on a sort of big brother role with the children mostly 1- to 3-year-olds - who attend the center.

"He means the world to me," Warner said of Zachary. "He's just a true blessing in every sense of the word."

Warner met Brenda seven years ago, when a teammate at the University of Northern Iowa persuaded him to go to a countrymusic club in Cedar Falls, Iowa.

The two had an instant connection. But Brenda, divorced with a baby girl and Zachary, then 3, didn't know if it would last.

"I dated men before that I never heard from again" once they learned of the children, Brenda said. "Kurt showed up the next morning and wanted to meet them. He fell in love with them before he fell in love with me."

The couple wed in 1997 and added a third child, Cade, in 1998. They've had plenty of trials and tribulations - Brenda's parents were killed in an Arkansas tornado; Kurt bounced from the Arena Football League to NFL Europe before finally landing with the Rams.

They've weathered it all with a strong belief in God; Warner spoke Friday at Billy Graham's crusade at the Trans World Dome. And Zachary, Warner said, has been a constant source of Zachary became blind as an infant, when his biological father lost his grip while carrying him from a bath. Zachary suffered severe brain damage - doctors feared he would never walk or

He beat the odds. Today, Zachary can see some items up close. Though he falls often, Zachary speaks, walks and talks. He loves to wrestle with his dad, even wears his dark hair in a Kurt Warner-like crew cut.

The Warners clearly felt at home at the center.

"Seven years ago, I was a single mom in this type of environment," Brenda said. "We were on food stamps and needing help. Now, we want to give back.

Davis out with injury

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) -Charlotte Hornets reserve guard Ricky Davis, a first-round draft choice in 1998, could miss up to four months with torn cartilage in his right knee.

The injury occurred in Charlotte's exhibition game at Minnesota on Oct. 14.

The Hornets said Tuesday that surgery was scheduled for Thursday, when the tear is to either be repaired or cut out, depending on the severity of the injury. The team said Davis is expected to be sidelined for

The 6-foot-6 Davis was

21st overall pick in last year's draft after playing just one season at Iowa. He appeared in 46 of the Hornets' 50 games last season, averaging 4.5 points.

and quiet attitude during practice, this year's Iowa team responds to his leadership.

"You have no choice but to listen to Alford because he has been there before," said junior Rob Griffin. "With Alford's demeanor you can't do anything but love the guy. He can be your best friend but you don't want to mess with him or take advantage of his kindness."

During practice, the Little General may prefer to remain on the sidelines, but he demonstrated to his players early on what he expected of them.

During Iowa's first conditioning drills this spring, Alford lined up with his players and ran timed sprints with the team.

Alford's passion not only rubs off on his players, but his assistant coaches are affected by him as well. They have all adopted the hands on style of coaching.

"We are competitive and love the hands-on approach with the players," said Sam Alford, who may have summed up the team's feelings towards his son the best. "You still know who is boss."

"I have to prepare myself like I am going to be the starter right now," Mullen said. "I will just take this game as a learning experience like I do every game. You can never stop learning.'

The 6-foot-6 junior is mobile enough to evade the rush and has a strong enough arm to throw the ball downfield if necessary.

If Mullen does start against the Hoosiers, he said he is ready to deal with the impending punishment that comes from being a quarterback in the Big Ten.

"I am kind of a utility guy," Mullen said. "Just tell me what to do and I'll do it. Coach Long always jokes about how we have to be mobile quarterbacks if we want to survive in the 90s."

The Hoosiers are 3-4 overall with Big Ten wins against Northwestern and Illinois. Ron Dayne and the Badgers ran all over Indiana, piling up 700 yards in total offense. DI sportswriter Mike Kelly can be reached

"It's amazing that life can change in a heartbeat," Recker said.

Besides the laceration near his ear. Recker dislocated several small bones at the base of his left thumb and still has not fully recovered from the surgery. He can take part in some drills, but won't be cleared for full participation for another month.

thing you never expect to hap-praying for the best." Recker decided not to change his plans to transfer, even though it meant leaving his girlfriend.

"Obviously, it was tough leaving home in the situation that occurred," he said. "But at the same time, I needed to continue to go on with my life and keep trying to be the best I can. I'll be there for Kelly by talking to her on the phone, but it was important for me to get out

"He's a good guy. He's real personable so he's easy to get along with," Arizona senior guard Josh Pastner said. "It's good therapy for him because he's around the game of basketball and around his teammates. We realize that this guy's been through a lot. Everyone's behind him."

Now Recker must sit and watch his teammates play. He won't be eligible until next season.

"It's going to be very, very difficult for me," he said. "I knew it was going to be hard when I left Indiana, but now I'm really itching to be playing again in a game, and it's going to be a lot more difficult than I expected."

Congress honors Aaron

By David Pace Associated Press

WASHINGTON -House joined the Senate on Tuesday in honoring baseball great Hank Aaron, who made baseball history a quarter-century ago by breaking Babe Ruth's career home run record.

■ Paul Kotheimer's music features quirky lyrics and stand-out acoustic guitar work.

The Daily Iowan

After spending seven long years in pursuit of a master's degree in Russian literature, Paul Kotheimer decided it was time to pack it all in and become a full-time musician.

"I remember reaching a point where I just couldn't do all of these things at once," said Kotheimer, six years after leaving the University of Illinois. "I felt so strongly about my music that word of mouth, Kotheimer has since earned himself a dedicated regional fan base.

Once called "J.D. Salinger with an acoustic guitar," his quirky, introspective lyrics and compelling acoustic guitar work make him a true coffeehouse folkie.

a number of home-recorded EPs and countless demo tapes, his latest effort, Sputnik Lullabye, an amazing collection of 18 home recordings, may at last gain Kotheimer the recognition he deserves.

Full of haunting solo pieces, straight up rockers and a femaledominated a cappella number, Sputnik is an extremely eclectic record best described as a "Y2K White Album." Ranging from the Roy Orbison-style "Asleep Diagonally" and the delicate "Dead Friend Short Story" to the low-fi Radiohead vibe on the album's centerpiece, "Sputnik Lullabye," Sputnik is heavy on the influences - yet, when com-

Although the album is a multitracked effort on which Kotheimer plays everything from the guitar and drums to a Casio keyboard and toy xylophone, he arms himself with only a battered acoustic guitar when it comes to his live performances.

"Not only is it difficult to find three or four guys who are willing to live in a van and head out on tour for a month, but I find that audiences are more appreciative and really recognize the effort put out by a solo performer."

Kotheimer will make his Iowa City debut tonight at the Mill restuarant, 120 E. Burlington St., and will be performing selections from Sputnik Lullabye as well as tracks from previous releases such as Typewriter and What I've Learned

One step forward, two steps back

ASBURY PARK, N.J. (AP) - Nine computers donated by Bruce Springsteen were stolen from the Boys and Girls Club of Monmouth County, police said.

The Gateway computers, worth about $15,900, were locked in a room named the Bruce Springsteen Technology Center after he donated some of the proceeds from a 1996 concert.

Club employees discovered the theft on Oct. 15. There were no signs of forced entry, said Cheryl Lonon, president of the club's board of directors. The investigation was continuing Tuesday.

Sympathy for the devil HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) - The number 666 is coming up again A movie is in the works about the scandal that resulted from a fixed Pennsylvania Lottery drawing of 666 in the Daily Number game in 1980. John Travolta may star in Numbers, which could begin filming next month. Nora Ephron is directing.

"It's my understanding that it's going to be sort of a humorous look at the lottery or lotteries in general," Pennsylvania Lottery spokeswoman Sally Danyluk said Monday. "I don't think we'll ever laugh about that."

The fixed drawing paid $3.8 million, a record high at the time, including a total of $1.2 million to eight people involved in the scandal. A lottery district manager and the announcer of the televised drawing were sent to prison.
