Regents snub students; hike passes

Board discounts student opinion, raises tuition and fees by 6.9%.

By Chris Rasmussen
The Daily Iowan

Despite fierce opposition, the state of Iowa Board of Regents voted Thursday to increase tuition at the UI by 6.9 percent, saying the UI's needs justified the hike.

Although a UI Student Government referendum of 1,374 UI students showed that only 4 percent of the students were in favor of a 6.9 percent raise, Regent Beverly Smith said she took student input into consideration before voting yes to both the tuition and fee proposals.

"The two other institutions (the University of Northern Iowa, Iowa State University) were actually in support of a 13 percent quality raise ... A majority of UI students supported the separation fees," she said.

But ISU Student Government President Matt Kraft said ISU students did oppose the tuition hike and is disappointed by the regents' decision.

"I could bet that the majority of the regents had their minds made up before even entering the room," he said. "I don't know how much a short speech can sway their decisions."

Some UI students are angered and think their opinions were ignored.

"They should really respect students' opinions more because it affects them more than anyone else," said UI senior Michael Sage.

UISG President Lana Zak, who made a presentation before the tuition proposal passed, said the responsibility of the increase rests on the shoulders of the UI administration.

"What's done is done," she said. "We expect the UI to be held accountable."

UI President Mary Sue Coleman made a solid case for the separation of student fees from tuition at the UI, Smith said.

"I really support the work President Coleman did to bring this proposal to us," she said. "She thinks outside of the box. One size does not fit all, and she identified the needs of the university."

The vote to raise tuition at the regents' universities by 4.3 percent passed unanimously, while the vote to separate fees at the UI — raising its tuition an additional 2.6 percent — created some dissent. The regents' action means that in-state tuition and fees will increase $206, to $3,204 from $2,998 beginning with the 2000-01 academic year. Out-of-state tuition will increase $720, to $11,160 from $10,440.

As one of the two regents to vote against the separation of fees at the UI, Regent David Neil said Iowa residents will have trouble accommodating a 6.9 percent increase.

"Basically, 6.9 percent was in excess in light of Iowa economy and the amount of student debt this increase will incur," he said.

Student debt is already too high, and by raising tuition, it will be tough for graduates to pay off their debts in Iowa, Neil said.

"The example I give is a teacher starting out at $20,000-$21,000," he said. "They are going to have trouble paying off student loans at substandard wages. We are going to have trouble attracting the best and brightest."

Tuition at the regents' universities will continue to increase above the rate of inflation, which will be a problem for Iowa families who have budgeted a certain amount of their income for a college education, Neil said.

"I think that until education and technology move on, you will see increases above inflation," he said. "The percentage of income in Iowa used for a college education has remained stable, but that will probably change because of the increase today."

Some UI students said increasing tuition every year is too much.

The regents make their decisions without taking students' needs into account, said UI senior Mike Luken.

"They don't think about how poor college students can't pay for it," he said.

The UI needs, which will be addressed by the projected $3.8 million the separation of student fees should create, were identified by Coleman as $600,000 for student aid, $1.1 million for library improvement, $1.1 million for technological equipment and $1 million to initiate a comprehensive program to improve writing skills.

Students will ultimately benefit from the increase, Coleman said. "Obviously, I feel it's an important investment for students to make."

The discussion began with a presentation by Zak, who said an increase would reduce the value of a UI education.

"Although we compare ourselves with other Big Ten schools in terms of us being at the bottom of the tuition pool — one of the reasons presented to us as to why we should raise tuition — we're not at the bottom of Big Ten schools," she said.

How the regents voted:

Owen Newlin, president: Yes — "It has identified its needs, and its needs are great."

Lisa Ahrens: No — unavailable for comment; voted in telephone conference.

David Fisher: Yes — "Students will find better quality because of increase."

Clarkson Kelly: Yes — "I don't believe we can improve the quality of our education without an increase."

Ellengray Kennedy: Yes — unavailable for comment; voted in telephone conference.

Roger Lande: Yes — "I thought the circumstances justified it."

David Neil: No — "The 6.9 percent increase is excessive in light of the Iowa economy."

Beverly Smith: Yes — "Iowa identified its needs."

Deborah Turner: Yes — "If our goal is to have the best institutions we can, we have to fund those institutions."

With the parade and pep rally, Homecoming kicks off its weekend.

Senate affirms Roe v. Wade

Eight defect from GOP ranks to support Harkin's resolution.

By Laurie Kellman
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — In its first-ever referendum on Roe v. Wade, the Senate went on record Thursday as saying the landmark abortion ruling established "an important constitutional right" and should not be overturned.

The nonbinding resolution, which was introduced by Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, was sure to provide fodder for campaign ads for the 2000 election. The measure won near-party-line support from the Senate's Democrats, and eight Republicans joined them to ensure passage; it was added to a bill that would ban certain late-term abortions, which later passed, 63-34.

"This is going to be an absolutely huge issue next year," declared Sen. Barbara Boxer, D-Calif., of the Roe v. Wade resolution. The abortion-rights supporter said: "Now we see the extremists in the United States Senate."

Republicans said the vote was irrelevant to the main legislation up for debate: a ban on certain late-term abortions sponsored by Sen. Rick Santorum, R-Pa. President Clinton, who has vetoed two earlier bans, also opposes the bill because it lacks an exception for women whose health is endangered by the pregnancy.

Once again the bill fell short — by four votes — of the two-thirds majority required to override a veto. Republican Sens. Connie Mack of Florida and Judd Gregg of New Hampshire — who both voted yes in last year's override attempt — were absent.

Success in UI athletics doesn't necessarily translate into a rise in applications and donations.

By Anne Huyck
The Daily Iowan

Nationally televised games and the acclaim of being a Big Ten school have brought prestige to the UI, leading some to credit the school's athletics programs.

While athletics programs may bring fame to the UI, this doesn't necessarily mean the school will benefit if the football team makes a bowl game appearance.

In many areas of the university, the effects of athletics are hard to find. "It is hard to infer the cause and effect" of why those who donate money to the UI do so, said Michael New, president of the UI Foundation.

"Clearly, there are a range of reasons," he said. "Success in sports, as in any part of the university, creates that positive climate that can lead to positive support."

The last time the Iowa football team went to a Rose Bowl was Jan. 1, 1991. For that calendar year, donations to the UI Foundation amounted to approximately $52.1 million, New said.

The three years before the Hawkeyes went to the '91 Rose Bowl, donations ranged from $49.7 million to just more than $50 million, New said. He did not attribute the $2.4 million in '91 rise to anything particular.

Effects on enrollment

The number of applicants to the UI can't be directly connected to Iowa sports either, said Michael Barron, director of admissions.

"I think it's hard to say," he said. "But when a school not known suddenly

In a series of downtown bar expansions and takeovers, the Englert Theatre, 221 E. Washington St., may be the next venue to get a liquor license.

Jim Pohl is in the process of purchasing the theater, said Arthur Stein Jr., president of Central States Theater Corp., which owns the Englert.

This would be the third property owned by Pohl in downtown Iowa City. Pohl purchased Malone's from Jerry Ambrose last summer. He also owns the Union Bar.

In addition to Pohl's transactions, the co-owners of the Fieldhouse Restaurant & Bar, are currently working on a new pool hall across the Pedestrian Mall from the Fieldhouse.

Local business owner Jim Mondonaro also plans to open a new restaurant and microbrewery where the former Mondo's Sports Café stood before the building was destroyed by fire. Mondonaro also owns Givanni's, the Bread Garden Bakery & Café, Micky's, Mondo's Tomato Pie in Coralville and a national chain of Mondo's Sports Cafés.

The amount of bar activity has some people wondering how long it will be before all of downtown Iowa City is turned into a "bar monopoly," owned by a few entrepreneurs.

Regents approve UIHC plan

The plan will try to find a way to overcome the problems caused by the balanced-budget act.

Managed care is going to exceed Medicare as the single biggest source of payment.

— Ed Howell, UIHC CEO

By Chris Rasmussen
The Daily Iowan

The state of Iowa Board of Regents' approval of a new strategic plan for the UI Hospitals and Clinics will help guide the hospital through tougher financial times.

The plan, which will not take effect until 2001, was given the green light by the regents Thursday, it includes UIHC strategies for dealing with the Balanced Budget Act of 1997.

A key phrase added to the strategic plan's mission statement says that as a teaching hospital and comprehensive health care center, the UIHC promotes the health of Iowans "regardless of their ability to pay."

This mission has been made more difficult to follow because of the 1997 budget act, which reduces the rates that Medicare pays to hospitals for treatment in order to rein in the costs of the Medicare program. This is causing problems for teaching hospitals across the nation as they try to cope with the loss of revenue.

Currently, Medicare 000000000is the largest source of revenue for the UIHC, but that is changing, said UIHC CEO Ed Howell.

"Managed care is going to exceed Medicare as the single biggest source of payment," he said.

Managed care, however, may not solve the problem because some managed-care programs restrict patients' ability to see specialists, reducing the money their patients can spend on health care at the UIHC.

The UIHC had to raise its inpatient rates by 4 percent in July in order to pay for the $12 million that the hospital expects to lose because of reduced Medicare rates in 2000.

If the act remains in effect, the UIHC stands to lose more than $60 million in Medicare payments by 2002, according to the strategic plan.

Efforts are being made in Congress to change this situation for teaching hospitals, Howell said.

"A bill sponsored by Sen. Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., and Rep. Charles Rangel, D-N.Y., would freeze the reductions in the balanced-budget act," he said.

The bill, called the Graduate Medical Education Payment Restoration Act of 1999, would help to cut the losses that the UIHC and other teaching hospitals are being forced to take by putting caps on the how deep the cuts can go.

Teaching hospitals such as the UIHC are particularly susceptible to the effects of the Medicare cuts because they support large teaching and research facilities, which constitute a large cost but bring in no revenue.

Regent David Neil said the regents should write the Iowa representatives, voicing their collective concern over the situation.

"Anything we can do to change this situation would be beneficial," Howell said, offering to help draft the letter.

The regents decided to vote on the letter next month; Regent Clarkson Kelly voiced opposition.

Kelly said he agreed with Neil in principle but said the regents should lobby representatives on an individual basis, not through collective action.

From Africa to the Daum elevator

A night of African music mixed with "goofy" songs will be a part of a concert at the IMU tonight.

By Chao Xiong
The Daily Iowan

The rhythm and beat of African music will reverberate from the IMU Wheelroom tonight, as the UI African Association presents "Rhythms of Our Nations: A Night of West and North African Music."

"Be ready to shake it," said Yawo Armstrong, a native of Togo and a member of the Des Moines band Doliho, which will play tonight. "In the villages and streets of Africa, when we play music, we get up and we dance."

Doliho, the Iowa City band the Nile Musicians and Daum Residence Hall's own Elevator Music Band will treat listeners to a mix of traditional African and contemporary music from 10 p.m.-1 a.m.

UI students will be admitted to the concert free of charge with their student IDs; non-students will be charged $6.

"The aim of the festival is to tell the rest of the students in Iowa and the whole of Iowa about African culture," said Tamba Marah, a UI sophomore and a member of the African Association.

Pictures of famine and war are too often the public's only images of Africa, said Musa Sadock, the association's vice president and a UI graduate student.

"The other side of the story is that we have culture," Sadock said. "We want to provide the continent Africa with a cultural perspective."

African music will be a focal point of the night, but bringing people together through music is an important element of the concert.

"We want to convey a message of understanding among different cultures," Armstrong said. "We want to share our African culture with people. Doing that, we're not just playing African music, we're playing music."

Tonight's music combines the old and new to form the eclectic sounds of a diverse society.

"I take from the themes of folk music sometimes, and I make a variation of it," said Yousif

Elmosley, a native of Sudan and member of the Nile Musicians. "It's a mix between the old and the modern."

The lineup for the show brings together musicians who have emigrated from Africa with the tradition of their music and the less-foreign sounds of the Elevator Music Band.

"It's good to have it (Elevator Music)," Marah said. "People need to know this little group and see what it can do."

Although none of the Elevator Music Band's members hails from Africa, the group will perform its "goofy" and "fun" songs, flavored with a bit of funk and blues, tonight in its first public performance.

"We hope the people who listen to us have a good time and that we have a good time," said David Fishel, the group's harmonica player and vocalist and a UI freshman.

Many different rhythms of music will come together tonight, with the intention to educate and entertain the Iowa City community.

"I believe in diversity," Sadock said. "And knowing each other."

The Daily Iowan

U.S. Supreme Court Justice John Paul Stevens condemned modern law schools for placing excessive importance on research and too little regard for teaching.

"In many law schools today, there is the attitude that professors must write, write, write, regardless of whether anyone is reading," Stevens said during a lecture at the IMU Thursday. "Today's schools are overlooking the way in which teachers can affect the practice of law by setting an example."

Stevens' address was part of a session of remembrances for Supreme Court Justice Wiley B. Rutledge, who was the dean of the UI College of Law during the Depression. Stevens clerked for Rutledge when the former UI dean was a Supreme Court justice.

Speakers remembered Rutledge for his accessibility to students both as a teacher and as a dean.

"Rutledge got involved with his students on a personal basis. He would help a student get a loan, provide job references for students, and arrange home-cooked meals for students who were not eating. He assisted one student dealing with alcoholism to keep his job at the law library and stay in school," said Justice John M. Ferren of the U.S. Court of Appeals for D.C. Ferren is working on a biography of Rutledge.

Ferren quoted letters from Rutledge's law students from classes between 1936 and 1941. Numerous students recalled his impartiality, though he was well-known as an ally of President Franklin Roosevelt.

"He was known to be a Democrat, but that was not apparent in the classroom. I was rather conservative and would've noticed if he had done this," one student recalled.

Rutledge was unique as a teacher because of his emphasis on the belief that "good-faith debate would lead to the best answer." This philosophy led him to require his freshman students in his Judicial Processes class to question the rulings of earlier Supreme Court cases.

A student who went on to become an Iowa legislator remembered using Rutledge's advice — "don't ever vote on what your conscience says not to" — on a controversial tax bill in his career, Ferren said.

During his years at the UI, Rutledge distinguished himself by encouraging the law fraternity to accept Jewish, black and female students.

"There was a practice in many law classes during that time that whenever a woman would stand up to present her case, the men in the classroom would loudly shuffle their feet. Rutledge put a stop to that practice by saying he knew who was making the noise and would flog them if they proceeded with it," Ferren said.

"Although I never met Rutledge, he was a rare individual who inspired great warmth from his students. He set a high standard of 'deaning,'" said N. William Hines, dean of the UI School of Law.

Rutledge was appointed to the U.S. Court of Appeals for D.C. in 1939 and to the U.S. Supreme Court in 1943. His philosophy included defense of civil liberties, support for Roosevelt's plan to add 51 federal judges and free legal aid for the poor.

Stevens cited Rutledge's writing as influential to him in debates today, including the debate on background checks for gun owners.

"Rutledge influenced me because he had an accurate understanding of how the Constitution was written, that it could be interpreted for modern times. I am distressed that the court today hasn't captured that spirit in the way that Rutledge had," Stevens said.

Loftin pleads not guilty

Former Iowa football player Ryan R. Loftin entered a written plea of not guilty Wednesday on the charge of extortion.

Loftin was charged with the crime following an Aug. 21 incident in which he allegedly threatened to expose secrets about the UI football program if his scholarship was not restored.

Four days after he quit the team, Loftin allegedly hand-delivered a letter that detailed a plan to share a play book with opponents and form a group of angry former players in an effort to oust football coach Kirk Ferentz.

Extortion is a class D felony, carrying a maximum sentence of five years and a fine of $7,500.

The plea recognizes that Loftin has received and understands the charges against him. The court has yet to schedule a pretrial conference.

Loftin has also been charged with fifth-degree theft for allegedly stealing a team play book. Action on the misdemeanor has been delayed until after the extortion charge has been resolved, said Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White.

CITY BRIEFS

Survey shows residents like their services

Most Iowa City and Coralville residents seem to think that their cities are on track in providing services to area residents, a survey says.

Representatives from Iowa State University presented a study of urban areas during a Thursday night joint meeting of the Iowa City Council, the Coralville City Council, school officials and Johnson County officials.

The Rural Development Initiative Project, funded by the ISU College of Agriculture, conducted a random-sample, statewide survey to help identify urban community problems, said Jeff Zacharakis-Jutz, an ISU development specialist.

Approximately 65 percent of respondents said that police service in Iowa City was good or very good, while 89 percent of respondents from Coralville responded with good or very good service.

Approximately 99 percent of respondents in Iowa City ranked medical services good or very good, while 73 percent of Coralville residents voted the same way.

The general-question survey gives elected officials an idea of how the community views city services and the community regarding jobs, public schools, police protection and medical services, said Gene Mohling, Johnson County extension director.

Bradley proposes rescuing poor kids

Bradley likens his goal to Kennedy's vow to put a man on moon.

By Sandra Sobieraj
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Claiming the big ideas of this presidential race, Bill Bradley likened his goal of eliminating child poverty to John F. Kennedy's vow to put a man on the moon and offered Thursday a $9.8 billion "wholesale rescue effort" for the poor.

The Democratic presidential candidate proposed automatic, annual increases in the minimum wage and expanded tax credits and child-care subsidies. He also called for government programs to recruit 60,000 teachers into poor school districts and give children an after-school school hang-out seven days a week.

Even if these attempts to attack poverty's root causes proved faulty, Bradley at least wanted credit for trying — like, he said, President Kennedy did.

Launching America's race against the Soviets into space, Kennedy "didn't know what kind of fuel should be used in that booster or what kind of suit the astronauts should wear. He just knew we had to do it," Bradley told teachers, students and social workers at a church in New York's poor Bedford-Stuyvesant neighborhood.

"Eliminating child poverty as we know it is a big goal," he continued. "But the first step is the commitment, and I am making that here today."

An estimated 13.5 million American children live in poverty, defined by the government as a yearly income of $16,400 or less for a family of four.

As Vice President Al Gore, Bradley's rival for the Democratic nomination, likes to point out, that population has shrunk from 15.3 million when he and President Clinton took office in 1993.

Bradley sniffed at that achievement as "better than doing nothing."

"Child poverty is a kind of slow-motion national disaster," Bradley said, and should be treated with the same kind of "wholesale rescue" the government undertakes after hurricanes. "We don't fix a roof here and a window there," he chided.

NATION BRIEF

Illegal drug use down in U.S., up in Europe

WASHINGTON (AP) — Illegal drug use is falling in the United States but rising sharply in Europe, U.S. officials say. The amount of drugs seized in Europe more than doubled this year, as South American traffickers targeted the continent.

Barry McCaffrey, President Clinton's chief drug-policy adviser, will hold a series of drug summits across Europe next week to address the problem. He is also pushing for a drug-free Olympics.

Anti-drug authorities classify 13 million Americans as current illegal drug users, compared with 25 million in 1980. Cocaine use has dropped the most dramatically, from 5.7 million in 1985 to 1.8 million, according to McCaffrey's Office of National Drug Control Policy. A current drug user is anyone who used drugs at least once in the past month.

Comparable statistics are not available for most of Europe, although surveys taken in recent years show cocaine use ranging from 0.5 percent of the population in Belgium to 3.3 percent in Spain. Ross Deck of McCaffrey's office, who has been meeting with European officials tracking drug use, said there is ample evidence that drug use is increasing across Europe although countries are only beginning to compile statistics.

"Cocaine is looking for new markets," McCaffrey said at a news conference Thursday, and it's finding them in Europe, where attitudes toward some narcotics differ from those in the United States.

Santa Fe man faces 21st DWI charge

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — A man sentenced to prison at least twice for drunken driving was taken into custody again this week — his 21st arrest on a DWI charge.

Joe Leonard Rael was arrested again Tuesday. Police said an officer saw him drive into a gas station and stagger to the cashier, and he flunked a field sobriety test. He was freed the same night after posting a $750 bond.

Besides the sheer number of arrests, Rael has become something of a local legend for the circumstances surrounding them.

In 1990, he was arrested after ramming into a police car. The same year, he was arrested a few hours after a court-ordered, alcohol-screening session. In 1994, he was drunk when he went to a meeting with his probation officer. And the same day he was sentenced in 1997, his 24-year-old son was in court to face his fifth DWI charge.

"I don't know when this guy's luck is going to run out, and he's going to kill somebody — that's the scary part," police Lt. Raye Byford said. "I'm shocked that this guy has this many DWIs."

Rael, 45, who was first arrested on a drinking-and-driving charge when he was in high school, was sentenced to 18 months in prison — the maximum sentence — in 1997 after pleading guilty to his 20th DWI charge. At the time of that arrest, Rael was on parole from a prior DWI prison sentence.

Fear of dock strike panics Hawaii

■ In a state that gets 90 percent of everything by ship, people are stripping the stores.

By Jean Christensen
Associated Press

WAIPAHAU, Hawaii — Hawaiians are stripping store shelves of rice, Spam, toilet paper and other items, fearing a dockworkers' strike that could cripple the state, which gets 90 percent of everything via ship.

The 507 members of the International Longshore and Warehouse Union Local 142 are demanding a new contract with the state's four major shipping companies.

So far, dockworkers on the islands of Kauai, Maui and Hawaii have authorized a strike. The Oahu members, by far the local's largest contingent, vote today. Union leaders could call a strike any time after that.

If the dockworkers strike, ships that arrive in Hawaii will sit in port without being unloaded. And if the walkout drags on, shipping companies will stop sending vessels on the five-day journey from the West Coast.

Since the voting started, residents have swamped Hawaii supermarkets.

"They've got us by the throat," said Shirley Oshiro, 61, a retired schoolteacher who found rice but no toilet paper. "It's like we're getting ready for a hurricane."

Gina Agpao went to the Sam's Club warehouse to stock up but found bare shelves. Rice and toilet paper were long gone, and gallons of milk were going fast. She grabbed Spam and Vienna Sausages.

The Wal-Mart in Hilo limited customers to 24 rolls of toilet paper, one bag of rice, two bags of disposable diapers and six cans of infant formula. "We're trying to make sure as many people as possible get the supplies they need," assistant manager Seni Kaseli said.

Hawaii's docks shut down for five months in 1949 and 100 days in 1971 because of a West Coast strike.

The dockworkers' union wants a contract similar to the three-year, 8 percent wage increase West Coast stevedores received this summer. Contract talks are set to resume Saturday morning.

"We are not expecting a strike," said Paul Stevens, senior vice president for Matson Navigation Co., whose subsidiary, Matson Terminals Inc., is one of the four shipping companies involved. "We want to keep the commerce to Hawaii flowing. We're not digging in here at all."

Drunken elephants rampage, killing 4 in India

GAUHATI, India (AP) — Wild elephants broke into a cluster of thatched huts, guzzled rice beer fermenting in casks and then tore the village apart in a drunken rampage, trampling four people to death and injuring six, a wildlife official said Thursday.

The herd of 15 elephants descended Wednesday on the village of Prajapatibosti, 180 miles east of Gauhati, state capital of northeastern Assam, elephant expert Kushal Konwar Sharma said.

The elephants broke into the thatched huts with their trunks and then began drinking rice beer from casks, Sharma said in a telephone interview from Golaghat.

"After drinking the beer, the elephant herd became intoxicated and went on a rampage, trampling to death four members of a family," he said. The animals trampled rice paddies and more huts before leaving the area Thursday morning.

At least 100 people have been killed in elephant attacks during the past year in Assam, where 5,000 wild elephants are estimated to be living. Human encroachment and a shrinking forest habitat have been the main causes of the problem, Sharma said.

Indonesian protests ease; Megawati elected VP

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — Violent protests turned into celebrations Thursday when wildly popular opposition leader Megawati Sukarnoputri was named vice president, a move that bodes well for the future of Indonesia's fledgling democracy.

The vote of the People's Consultative Assembly came one day after Megawati lost the first free and contested presidential race in the country's 54-year history.

Immediately after her loss to new President Abdurrahman Wahid, tens of thousands of Megawati's disillusioned supporters went on a rampage. Two people were killed, and 65 injured by a car bomb as troops fired tear gas and warning shots in Jakarta.

On the resort island of Bali, a Megawati stronghold, mobs torched and looted supermarkets, blocked roads and burned trees. There were no direct attacks on tourists, and the protesters emphasized their anger was directed at the assembly, not at tourists.

The chaos eased only after Megawati took the oath of office in a ceremony broadcast on national television. In Jakarta, crowds returned to the streets to celebrate, waving flags, honking car horns, banging drums and setting off fireworks.

Under ABM shadow, Russia, U.S. start talks

MOSCOW (AP) — Russia and the United States started another round of arms-control talks Thursday, but there appeared to be little chance of overcoming disagreements over proposed U.S. changes to the 1972 Antiballistic Missile treaty.

The two sides planned to discuss U.S. desires to modify the ABM treaty as well as prospects for a START nuclear arms reduction treaty.

Washington wants to amend the ABM treaty — which was key to starting arms-control pacts during the Cold War — so that both countries can defend themselves against nuclear attacks by rogue nations like North Korea.

The United States says the modification would not be substantial enough to stop the type of attack that Russia could launch, but Moscow says the change would upset strategic stability and possibly lead to a new arms race.

GROZNY, Russia — Salvos of rockets Thursday slammed into a crowded open-air market and other parts of Grozny, including a maternity hospital, killing at least 118 people and injuring up to 400, a Chechen official said.

Chechnya said the rockets were fired by Russian forces moving in on the capital. The Russian Defense Ministry in Moscow denied responsibility.

Bleeding bodies and severed limbs were scattered throughout the market after six rockets exploded in the stalls, which were crowded with shoppers during the early evening attack.

At least four other rockets slammed into other parts of the city, including one that hit a maternity hospital, Magomed Magomadov, a senior government official, said.

He said 118 people were killed and between 300 people and 400 people were injured. Many of the injured were in critical condition, he said.

Russian forces moved into Chechnya in late September to impose a security zone around the breakaway republic and to wipe out Islamic militants. Earlier, Russia had been bombing militant bases after the militants invaded neighboring Dagestan twice this summer and were suspected of bombing four apartment blocks and killing approximately 300 people.

But the Russian advance prompted fears that the two sides would repeat their 1994-96 civil war, in which Russian forces were battered by street fighting, and Chechnya was left devastated but with de facto independence.

However, Barron said there is a long tradition of many areas that attract to the campus.

"I would never say athletics make a difference; it's a part of the total package," he said. "Students choose to be in part because of the things that goes on here."

"Athletics leads to excellence in other areas," Rinderspacher said. "It's a part of the total package that people look at and want to be a part of that they have a stronger focus on arts or athletics."

Success has little effect

Since 1992, two years after his last Rose Bowl bid, the number of applicants steadily increasing, Rinderspacher, associate athletics director, said. He attributed the increase to multiple factors.

"You can't attribute recruiting harder, academics," he said.

Rinderspacher said that the time span of 1985-87, the football team and men's and women's basketball teams were ranked first.

"We thought it might be a reference, but did it? Not sure," he said.

Although Rinderspacher said that correlations between success in athletics and increased enrollment, other universities have been greatly affected by success in athletics teams.

When Northwestern went to the Rose Bowl in the Citrus Bowl the following year, the number of applicants increased, almost doubling previous years, said Barron, an associate athletics director at Northwestern. He said "absolutely" a correlation between applicants and athletics western.

This is Holzhammer's first of doing public-address at for Iowa football, and it will be his last, he said.

"I'm very surprised to be grand marshal, and I'm honored," Holzhammer said.

Fessler said she's excited about several floats, especially the new ones to the parade.

Floats created by the Kappa Kappa Gamma Association, the Phi Kappa Phi Association with the Black Union and the Dance Marathon will be new and interesting, she said.

"This is the first time a Marathon has been a part of Homecoming parade," said Dodman, a UI senior and relations director for the Marathon.

The float will be called 'lennium' of Miracles, and about 100 people will be walking with the float, including children with cancer, the and student representative marathon, she said.

Iowa City resident Lisa two daughters, ages 9 and 11, exited about riding on the throwing candy to the crowd.

Bridget Horgan, pep rally director for the Homecoming, a UI senior, hopes that the pep rally will also attract a lot of people, which will be held on the trestle after the parade.

"We're trying to draw a crowd this year by moving west to the east side of trestle," she said.

Holzhammer and Iowa ball Coach Steve Alford guest speakers at the Iowa football Coach Kirk will be speaking "kind of lite," Horgan said.

The rally also will feature leaders, dance teams and two Iowa Shout performances.

"This is the first year Shout performances will be the pep rally, and we're very excited that we get to be in front of the town," said Nippert, a UI sophomore performer for Alpha Delta.

ly develops and has incredible success in athletics, sometimes it raises the visibility."

However, Barron said, with the UI there is a long tradition of visible athletics. He feels that sports is one of many areas that attracts students to the campus.

"I would never say athletics doesn't make a difference; it is an important part of the total identity," he said. "Students choose to come here in part because of the broad variety of things that goes on here."

"Athletics leads to exposure, but athletics is part of a greater university that people look at and say 'I want to be a part of that,' whether they have a stronger focus in liberal arts or athletics."

Success has little effect

Since 1992, two years after the UI had its last Rose Bowl-bound team, the number of applicants has been steadily increasing, said Emil Rinderspacher, associate director of admissions. He attributes the rise to multiple factors.

"You can't attribute it to just recruiting harder, academics or athletics," he said.

Rinderspacher said that during the time span of 1985-87, at various times the football team and both the men's and women's basketball teams were ranked first in the nation.

"We thought it might make a difference, but did it? Not really," he said.

Although Rinderspacher, New and Barron said they can't draw any correlations between success in athletics and increased enrollment or donations, other universities have been greatly affected by the success of athletics teams.

When Northwestern University went to the Rose Bowl in 1995 and the Citrus Bowl the following year, the number of applicants sharply increased, almost doubling those of previous years, said Brad Hurlbut, an associate athletics director at Northwestern. He said there was "absolutely" a correlation between applicants and athletics at Northwestern.

This is Holzhammer's 25th year of doing public-address announcing for Iowa football, and it will probably be his last, he said.

"I'm very surprised to be the grand marshal, and I'm very honored," Holzhammer said.

Fessler said she's excited to see several floats, especially those that are new to the parade.

Floats created by the Korean Student Association, the Panhellenic Association with the Black Student Union and the Dance Marathon will be new and interesting this year, she said.

"This is the first time the Dance Marathon has been a part of the Homecoming parade," said Danielle Dodman, a UI senior and family-relations director for the Dance Marathon.

The float will be called the "Millennium of Miracles," and approximately 100 people will be on or walking with the float, including 50 children with cancer, their siblings and student representatives for the marathon, she said.

Iowa City resident Lisa Leathers' two daughters, ages 9 and 3, are excited about riding on the float and throwing candy to the crowd.

Bridget Horgan, pep rally director for the Homecoming council and a UI senior, hopes that parade watchers will also attend the pep rally, which will be held on the Pentacrest after the parade.

"We're trying to draw a bigger crowd this year by moving from the west to the east side of the Pentacrest," she said.

Holzhammer and Iowa basketball Coach Steve Alford will be guest speakers at the rally, and Iowa football Coach Kirk Ferentz will be speaking "kind of via-satellite," Horgan said.

The rally also will feature cheerleaders, dance teams and the top two Iowa Shout performances.

"This is the first year that the Shout performances will be seen at the pep rally, and we're definitely very excited that we get to perform in front of the town," said Melissa Nippert, a UI sophomore and Shout performer for Alpha Delta Pi.

Benefits of high-profile sports

With the high-profile athletics that comes with being a Big Ten school, some UI students think that not only would enrollment and donations be higher at the UI as a result but also that the Athletics Department would be sharing some money.

In actuality, the Athletics Department retains all of its revenue, which is the case at most U.S. universities, including Penn State, said Budd Thalman, an associate athletic director for communications at Penn State University.

Even so, UI sophomore Billy Gombert says, a university should benefit when its athletic department is successful; he said he thinks most students would agree.

"I should hope that students are upset that their education is getting shafted by football," he said. "That should stop, because Iowa is an academic institution, and that is the part that should be profiting."

Where the money goes

Those who work for the Athletics Department, however, say sharing money may not be feasible.

Revenue generated from televised events, participation in bowl games and tournaments, and contributions from fans keep the Athletics Department financed, said Larry Bruner, an associate athletics director.

These funds primarily cover salaries, scholarships, maintenance of buildings, new buildings, team travel and scouting services, he said. There is typically $100,000-$200,000 surplus at the end of a year; although occasionally the surplus is less than $100,000, he said.

Much of this money goes to constructing new buildings and improving older ones for the Athletics Department, Bruner said.

The UI also shares the cost of some projects with the Athletics Department, such as the current one that will add a new pool, tennis courts, a Visitors Center and a Hall of Fame to the West Side of the campus, he said.

Keeping the money for sports

The left-over money would not "adequately" be able to support other areas of the UI, Bruner said.

"We are not normally involved with money in other departments," he said. "The Athletics Department donated $300,000 to the library once, but that was more than 10 years ago and wasn't directed to any department."

Traditionally, the department doesn't share money with other areas of the UI because it can't pick one department over the others for fear it will be construed as attempting to buy athletes' grades or asking for preferential treatment, Bruner said. The Athletics Department can't afford to donate to all areas of the UI, and fans' donations can't be used because donors specify that their money be used for athletics.

The Athletics Department has its own fund-raising staff at the UI Foundation, said Bob Bowsby, director of men's athletics. This staff raises annual capital, endowment and support for the department, he said.

Although the staff's primary goal is to raise money for the Athletics Department, its fund raising often leads to donations to not only athletics but other parts of the UI as well.

"It depends, but if they come across a potential contributor with an awful lot to give and express interest in other areas, they either accept the gift on behalf of that department or refer the person to someone at the foundation," Bowsby said.

Overspending accusations

Bowsby knows that the department has been accused of frivolous spending, especially around bowl games, when the department pays for players, members of the marching band, cheerleaders, dance-team members, many of the coaches and staff members for the Athletics Department and some of those staff members' families.

"We have discussions before every bowl game about that," Bowsby said. "But we work hard, and get value for our money, and use our resources wisely."

It takes money to send people to bowl games and sponsor banquets for fans at all away games, said UI junior Margaret Broderick. She thinks the Athletics Department is justified in how it spends its money.

"I think it helps get all the fans and employees hyped up and excited," Broderick said. "The fans are there to help get the players excited, and when they are excited, the team does better."

However, UI junior Christine Rundell disagrees about the validity of spending funds in such a way.

"There have to be better ways to use the money that would be more productive," she said.

Others not asking to share

Finding money for the College of Liberal Arts, the largest college at the UI, is a goal for Frederick Antczak, the associate dean of the college. But he said the Athletics Department may not be the best place from which to get revenue.

Ideas such as the UI's taxing football and basketball tickets have come up, but no one has ever tried to change the current system, and Antczak doubts whether anyone will in the near future.

Antczak said that with the Athletics Department handling its own money, other departments don't have to worry if it were to go into debt. And colleges such as liberal arts don't have to worry about their academic integrity being questioned, he said.

"Boy, we'd like to see some of that money. But if we taxed tickets, it would tend to hurt non-revenue sports more," he said. "And with sharing money, there would be strings attached that we would certainly not want to know about."

Englert may become newest bar

all bars, they could charge whatever they want.

"It'd be like Bill Gates," said UI freshman Katy Kass. "I'm not at the bars that much, but I don't think I'd like it if I went out and the prices were like $10 a head every time."

While some may think that the city doesn't have the clientele to support the all current and newly planned bars in the downtown area, others disagree.

"If there wasn't enough people going out to them, they wouldn't stay in business," said UI senior and business major Trent Eidemiller.

And UI junior Rachel Mallett thinks there is a need for more bars in Iowa City.

"It seems like everybody goes to the same bars, and a lot of the bars everybody likes, there aren't enough of," she said.

Stein said he and Pohl were still negotiating the purchase of the property Wednesday night.

City Clerk Marian Karr said Pohl recently picked up paperwork for a Class C liquor license — one for a commercial establishment that "authorizes the sale of liquor and beer by the drink on premises only." There are currently 63 Class C liquor licenses in Iowa City.

Pohl has yet to return the application, but, Karr said, "He indicated it was for the Englert." However, when reached, Pohl would not comment about the Englert.

Many of the area bar owners, such as Fieldhouse owner Dave Moore, believe that expansion and addition of new businesses could be positive.

"I'm always up for a good business venture," he said.

In the wake of this increased business activity, some residents continue to question the addition of another bar to the downtown district.

"I think we have enough places to drink and party down," said Iowa City resident Gary Sanders.

Despite having 154 liquor licenses currently issued to Iowa City businesses, the city government doesn't plan to intervene for now.

Iowa Code doesn't allow the city to limit liquor licenses, said Dave Schoon, Iowa City economic development coordinator. And Mayor Ernie Lehman said that to try to control the number of businesses an individual could own would be unconstitutional.

Under ABM shadow, Russia, U.S. start talks

MOSCOW (AP) — Russia and the United States started another round of arms-control talks Thursday, but there appeared to be little chance of overcoming disagreements over proposed U.S. changes to the 1987 Antballistic Missile treaty.

The two sides planned to discuss U.S. desires to modify the ABM treaty as well as prospects for a START nuclear arms reduction treaty.

Washington wants to amend the ABM treaty — which was key to starting arms-control pacts during the Cold War — so that both countries can defend themselves against nuclear attacks by rogue nations like North Korea.

The United States says the modification would not be substantial enough to stop the type of attack that Russia could launch, but Moscow says the change would upset strategic stability and possibly lead to a new arms race.

Let your Hawkeye Homecoming spirit shine

Welcome back to campus, alumni! Students on this year's Homecoming Committee have selected a marvelously appropriate theme for all of us who were once students here ourselves: "A Time to Shine." I can't think of a better phrase to express the feelings of pent-up excitement and camaraderie that light up the campus during Homecoming.

For weeks, students have been preparing for this one extraordinary week. Across campus, groups have been creating skits and banners, building floats and selling but-tons. Alumni who remember bed races in downtown Iowa City won't find that event on this year's schedule, but "Havoc at Hubbard," the grassy field north of the IMU, offered students other creative ways to burn up some excess energy earlier this week. Can you imagine sliding through slimy food on a timed obstacle course? They did it, laughing and cheering and more than willing to escape the pressures that begin to build up in the classroom at this time of the semester.

Tonight, activities culminate around the Homecoming Parade and Pep Rally. My family and I always look forward to these festivities, which attract the youngsters, students, faculty and staff in our community, as well as the alumni from far and near. I encourage you to go to the Pep Rally on the east side of the Pentacrest after the parade. You'll see Herky and the Iowa cheerleaders, the dance team, the Hawkeye Marching Band, new basketball Coach Steve Alford and "Father Bob" Holzhammer ('49), a special guest at Homecoming 1999.

You'll witness the coronation of this year's Homecoming king and queen, and you'll get a chance to vote with your hands, applauding loudest for your favorite Iowa Shout skit. Finally, fireworks will light up the sky over the Old Capitol, providing a perfect ending to what should be a memorable day.

The spirit of Homecoming links everyone willing to be caught up in a celebration for Iowa. As president of the UI Alumni Association, I am delighted to report that 1999 has been a "time to shine" for our organization, too. We achieved a major milestone this past spring, when our membership surpassed 50,000 for the first time. In May, our Web site earned the only gold medal that the Council for the Advancement and Support of Education awarded for alumni Web sites this year. If you haven't participated in our online community, be sure to visit us at www.iowalum.com.

But one of the most exciting developments in 1999 has been the rejuvenation of our student member program, IOWA S.T.A.T. — Students Today, Alumni Tomorrow. At Orientation sessions throughout the summer, incoming students lined up in the IMU Main Lounge to join S.T.A.T. The group's popular T-shirts were seen everywhere on T-shirt day, when the alumni prize patrol gave away hundreds of prizes to student members.

Next month, another student group promises to add excitement to men's basketball games at Carver-Hawkeye Arena. The Hawk's Nest, a brand-new Alumni Association program sponsored by IOWA S.T.A.T., is sure to become the place to be for student season-ticket holders. Members of the Hawk's Nest will sit behind the south basket, and they promise to pump up the tempo in cheering the Hawkeyes throughout the season.

As the Alumni Association looks toward ending 1999 on a high note, the organization will begin 2000 with an expanded benefit for all members. Our award-winning magazine, published quarterly for the past six years, will go back to being a bimonthly. We are thrilled to be able to deliver an updated look and content that's sure to interest our broad range of readers.

Like Homecoming, the spirit of the Alumni Association links people in a celebration for Iowa. If you haven't joined us, whether you're a grad or a current student, call our office at 335-3294 to activate your membership, or sign up through www.iowalum.com. Together, we can multiply the spirit that abounds during Homecoming.

Amy O'Deen ('80 B.S.N., '83 M.A.) is a senior assistant director, UI Hospitals and Clinics, and administrator, Children's Hospital of Iowa.

GUEST OPINION

AMY O'DEEN

Elephant dung and other substances people love to look at Elephant dung is hard to come by. This isn't a discovery one makes haphazardly; it's the kind of epiphany one has after repeated calls to zoos and exotic pet stores.

The zoos don't want to part with the stuff, and the exotic pet stores apparently aren't so exotic, if they don't even have elephants to supply me with dung. My poop-quest was fueled by a desire to duplicate the work by London artist Chris Ofili. Aw, you know the painting — the really controversial one with the puppies and the cherubic kiddies peacefully romping amongst a field of clover. OK, OK, it's actually a representation of the Virgin Mary adorned with porn-pictures and elephant doody. The work has become the poster child of the entire show of which it is a part, "Sensation," at the Brooklyn Museum of Art, which has now started to resemble World War II Germany, but was formerly part of New York.

I wanted to replicate the work because, as a semi-knowledgeable art person, I am astounded by the uproar this show has caused. No, I take that back. I can completely understand the brouhaha; I just can't comprehend the levels it has escalated to. Not being one to let current events just waft on by, I wanted to throw my cap in the ring and get my two cents in, all the while keeping a firm grasp on the bird in my hand.

The whole show itself is alluring because of its voyeuristic nature. The temptation of seeing a sectioned cow floating in formaldehyde had me holding myself back from booking a flight this very moment. Let's face it, people like seeing things that have been classified by others as "wrong," "dirty," or, everyone's favorite, "immoral and disgusting." People flock to these things, and the lines that formed in front of the museum since the opening of the show are a testament to that. Anything displayed in a public forum that smacks of sexuality and oddity draws a crowd even before it draws complaints and controversy. That they named the exhibition "Sensation" instead of "Boring Art Stuff" denotes a premeditated knowledge that the show would shock and inspire thought.

Naturally, this exhibit opened up that age-old question, "Isn't it time that I learned Morse Code?" No, actually, it opened up the question, "What is fine art, really?" These days, people pay millions upon millions of dollars for the chance to own a Picasso or a de Kooning, but for a long time their works were considered just as vulgar as those in question now. When Marcel Duchamp's "Nude Descending a Staircase, No. 2" was displayed at the Armory Show in New York, it caused an uproar. In truth, it was a humorous attack on Futurist prejudices against traditional uses of nudity. Now it hangs in the Philadelphia Museum of Art. Jackson Pollock is famous for his "drip" paintings that shocked early crowds. Now, our own Museum of Art proudly displays "Mural," one of his grandest creations.

The problem is — and this is a monumental thing I've hit upon, so steady yourselves — that art appreciation is relative. There, I've said it. Let the tidal wave of protest and frenetic commotion begin. No? Did we suspect that all along? I thought so. Some people like some things, while others think those things are crap. It's like arguing the existence of a god; it's a dangerously undertaken debate, as people's initial beliefs are probably not going to be easily swayed.

In a very lovely and oh-so-subtle segue (thank you 19:115), that last god remark brings me to a very heated component of this controversy. Ofili's work has brought so much criticism and so much public debate because not only does it utilize pornographic pictures and elephant scat, but it also involves religion. Historically, whenever religion and artistic expression cross paths, there are sure to be some big issues that arise.

And this time, not only was the public treated to the spectacle of the exhibition, but they also received a bonus performance. "The Rudy Giuliani Show" was not an immediate sell-out, but he made some modifications that allowed almost anyone to get involved. Claiming that the work was immoral and offensive to Christians, Giuliani first threatened to yank funding for the museum, then upped the ante by pompously stating he would evict the museum from its state-owned home if he didn't get his way.

What a great performance art piece! Clearly Rudy's job-aptitude test was wrongly evaluated when it directed him toward the public sector. No one said he had to wear a "I went to the 'Sensation' art show and all I got was this lousy T-shirt" shirt, or carry a "Sensation" umbrella, but he danced very close to the line of freedom of expression. If Rudy one day decided that he no longer felt at one with pieces at the Met, would it feel his wrath as well?

Meanwhile, my quest to be a shock artist continues. I'm taking small, but important, steps for the furthering of my career. I left a dish encrusted with food remnants out for a few days. I'm going to call it, "But that was MY plate! No. 3." I think I'm almost ready to present my retrospective, which will feature such works as, "Do Your Laundry Already," "Have you SEEN the Bathroom??" and the critical, "Biohazard in Green" series. I already feel so creative, so imaginative, so... sensational!

Brothers to keep no more

Brothers Robert and David Morey will begin other endeavors after one last performance at the Mill.

 The Daily Iowan

Real-life brothers Robert and David Morey, more widely known as Brother's Keeper, are calling it quits as a duo after 3½ years.

Their farewell performance, with Bill Neff on drums, will be held tonight at 9 at the Mill Restaurant, 120 E. Burlington St.

Due to the strong public demand after playing their first show in spring 1991 together, David moved from St. Louis to Iowa City to join Robert to form Brother's Keeper. The two have graced audiences with their unique acoustic style in outdoor festivals, coffeehouses, restaurants and night clubs from city to city.

In 1997, Brother's Keeper gave its fans a lasting gift. The Moreys took 13 songs into the studio and compiled their third recording, their first CD, From the Ground Up, available on Tale Wagon Records here in Iowa City.

Recently, The Daily Iowan had the opportunity to ask Robert Morey a few questions about his past, present and future plans.

DI: For starters, why are you guys calling it quits?

RM: Well, I'm going to keep playing, but my brother David is looking to do some other things. Both of us have full-time jobs and we've been playing a lot in the last year. In 1998, we played almost 100 shows and drove 16,000 miles to get to them. And that is an awful lot to do while you are working a full-time job and trying to maintain a decent home life, too.

DI: What are your plans now?

RM: I'll probably play by myself, and maybe I'll get involved with a band.

DI: You guys have been compared with the likes of Simon and Garfunkel, Seals and Crofts, and you have even been called a couple of James Taylors. Have these comparisons had an impact on your music?

RM: I like some of those people, some more than others. I think Simon and Garfunkel are musical giants. I have been playing guitar for more than 20 years, and when I started playing, James Taylor, Simon and Garfunkel and Bob Dylan was the stuff that we learned to play by.

DI: Would you consider any of those artists influences on your sound?

RM: It's funny because I think the sound we have has grown out of the songs that we write. I don't think that we really set out to make a sound that was like anything else.

Honestly, the music that I listen to most is not really that "folky-acoustic" stuff, although I like some of that stuff a lot ... I grew up listening to rock 'n' roll, and I listen to all sorts of stuff from all over the 20th century: jazz, some classical, soul, rock 'n' roll and some sorts of "country-fied" rock 'n' roll.

DI: You guys have played a lot of college towns. Is that something that you like doing?

RM: Absolutely ... Honestly, I like playing whenever I can. It makes a big difference when they are listening and are into it. Then it sets up an exchange of energy; it's not just a drain. There is a real sort of back-and-forth, and that makes it a lot of fun.

Inside glimpse of The Insider

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Tobacco whistle-blower Jeffrey Wigand says the movie The Insider takes some liberties with his story, but is essentially accurate.

In one scene, the former Brown & Williamson executive is portrayed as hitting golf balls at a driving range while a burly man watches him.

"Did that happen? No," Wigand said Wednesday.

ARTS BRIEF

But Wigand said the movie starring Al Pacino as "60 Minutes" producer Lowell Bergman accurately portrays the kinds of threats he and his family faced after publicly addressing health and smoking issues in 1995. The movie will open in November.

"Its fidelity to the actual facts is acceptable," Wigand said.

Wigand was in Nebraska to give speeches on his experiences. He said he is donating his speaking fees to his nonprofit organization, Smoke-Free Kids, based in Charleston, S.C.

DNR: Knight failed to report hunting accident

SPONDER, Wis. (AP) — Indiana basketball coach Bob Knight accidentally shot and killed a hunting grouse without a license while hunting on his property, the state Department of Natural Resources said Thursday. Knight, Thomas Mikunda and two other men were hunting Oct. 12 when they spotted a grouse, said Dave Zeug, law enforcement officer for the DNR's northern region. Knight, 59, told investigators that he was aiming at the bird, his finger slipped and he hit the trigger, causing the gun to fire. Shotgun pellets struck Mikunda in the upper shoulder, causing wounds that were life-threatening but required medical attention. Under state law, Knight was required to report the accident to law enforcement authorities. As a result of that investigation, it was determined Knight did not have a $43 non-resident small game license and that he also had not renewed one last year in Wisconsin, a state where he has hunting companions. Knight, coach at Indiana since 1971, was cited for failure to report a hunting accident and will receive two citations for hunting without a license in 1999 and 1998. The fine for the 1998 citation is $165. His two companions will receive similar citations.

DNR: Knight failed to report hunting accident

SPONER, Wis. (AP) — Indiana basketball coach Bob Knight accidentally shot a friend while hunting grouse without a license, then failed to report the mishap, the state Department of Natural Resources said Thursday.
 Knight, Thomas Mikunda and two other men were hunting Oct. 12 when they spotted a grouse, said Dave Zeug, law enforcement director for the DNR's northern region.
 Knight, 59, told investigators that as he turned to aim at the bird, his finger slipped off the shotgun's safety and hit the trigger, accidentally firing the gun before he was ready to shoot.
 Shotgun pellets struck Mikunda in the back and upper shoulder, causing wounds that were not life-threatening but required medical treatment.

Iowa to fight for No. 1

■ The Iowa field hockey team will take on Michigan Sunday for sole possession of first place in the Big Ten.

By Robert Yarborough
 The Daily Iowan

The Michigan field hockey squad may not get a warm welcome when it travels to Iowa City on Sunday. The Wolverines doused Iowa's hopes for a perfect season with a 1-0 win over Iowa two weeks ago and the Hawkeyes are looking for revenge at Grant Field. This weekend, Iowa will first tee it up with Michigan State today at 4 p.m., before turning its focus to Michigan at noon on Sunday.

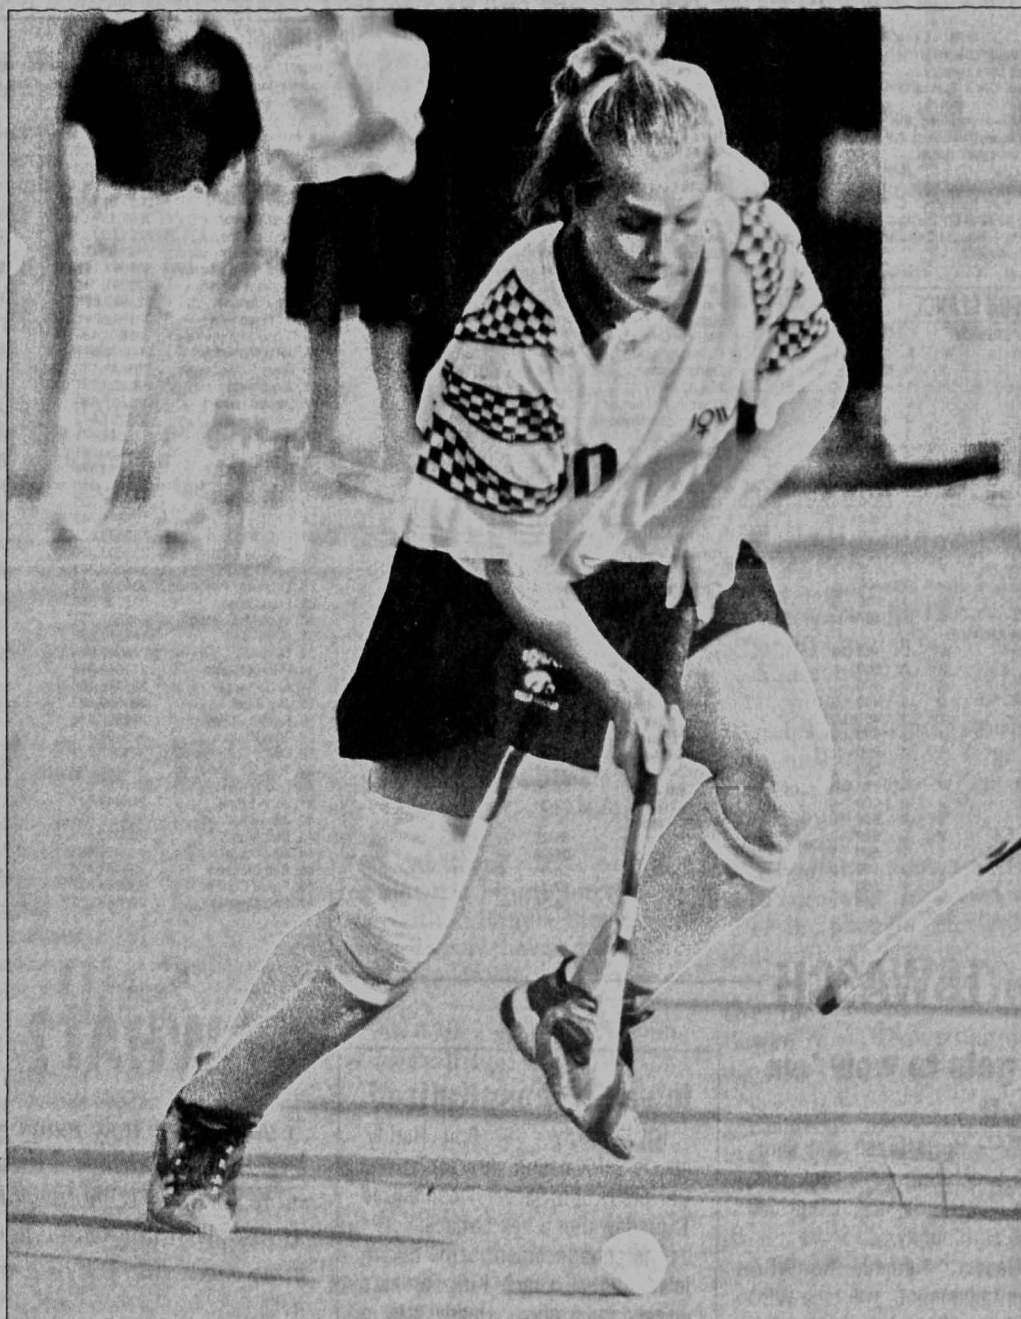

The winner of the Iowa-Michigan game moves into sole possession of first place in the Big Ten.

"This week we took a day off because basically the team is suffering from physical fatigue," coach Beth Beglin said. "Wednesday was our first day of practice and we focused on improving our play against both of these teams."

Iowa made a jump back to No. 3 in the NHFCA National poll this week after defeating Penn State and Ohio State on the road last weekend. More importantly, the team is ranked second in the first NCAA Field Hockey poll of the season. The NCAA poll is used to select the teams that will play in the NCAA Championship.

"It is becoming such a cliché, but we are really just taking every game as it comes," Beglin said. "We are not even thinking about looking ahead to Michigan until we take care of Michigan State. If we looked past Michigan State, I would guarantee that we would probably lose."
 No. 16 Michigan State (8-7, 1-5) lost to the Hawkeyes 2-1 on Oct. 10 in a game that many "unintelligent" plays were made according to coach Beglin on the part of the Hawkeyes.

What: Iowa vs. Michigan State and Michigan
When: Today at 4 p.m. and Sunday at noon
Where: Grant Field

"We really did not play well against Michigan State or Michigan when we played them before," senior Quan Nim said. "We were flat in the first half against both teams and were lucky to come out with one win the way we played."
 Beglin said the Michigan State game was the Hawkeyes' worst performance of the season.
 "We did not show up for that game," Beglin said. "It was the first time this year that I yelled at the team during half-time because we were not handling any of the pressure or playing with poise at all."
 The No. 8 Wolverines are currently 12-4 and tied with Iowa for first place in the Big Ten with a 5-1 record. Michigan is known for being stingy on defense and the Hawkeyes are not willing to give the Wolverines a second shutout this weekend.
 "They are really good at sealing off the 25-yard line, making it difficult to get into the key."

Rematch for Braves, Yanks has new look

■ A lot has changed since New York and Atlanta met in the 1996 World Series.

By Ben Walker
 Associated Press

ATLANTA — A lot has changed since the New York Yankees last came south for the World Series.

The old stadium is just a parking lot now, with painted lines where the basepaths used to be. Jimmy Key and Cecil Fielder are out of baseball. Mark Wohlers and Marquis Grissom are out of Atlanta.

"I don't think we're going to spend a lot of time figuring out what's the difference between now and 1996," Braves pitcher Tom Glavine said Thursday.

Glavine will start against Orlando "El Duque" Hernandez, MVP of the AL Championship Series, in Game 1 Saturday night at Turner Field.

The addresses have switched, and so have the attitudes going into a rematch of the '96 Series, won by New York in six games.

"That team wasn't sure if it was good enough to beat the Braves," said pitcher David Cone, one of 11 Yankees left from that club. "We had never done it before. Now we have the experience to know what we can do."

First baseman Tino Martinez said: "That year we were the underdogs. We wanted to win, but this year we expect to win."

Hawkeyes prepare for Randle El rampage

■ Iowa will have to contain Indiana quarterback Antwaan Randle El in order to earn a Homecoming victory on Saturday.

By Greg Wallace
 The Daily Iowan

Defensive coordinators, take note. Iowa's Matt Bowen has the solution to all of your nightmares caused by Indiana quarterback Antwaan Randle El.

The plan is actually very simple; it can be executed with a simple bribe passed to the Hoosiers' traveling secretary.

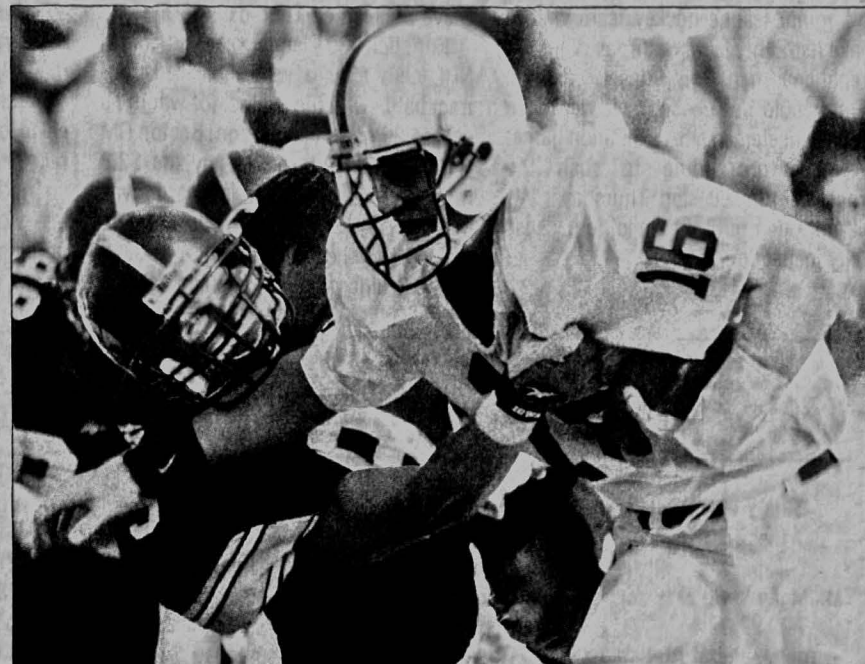

"Maybe he'll miss the plane. I wish he would," Bowen said, only half jokingly.

Considering Randle El's extremely dangerous nature, hoping that he doesn't show up could be Iowa's most effective defense for tomorrow's 1:05 p.m. game with Indiana. Time and time again, opposing defensive coordinators have learned that you can't contain Randle El, you can only prepare and hope the damage he causes isn't too severe.

"If I had to pick the two best athletes in the Big Ten, I'd say Randle El is the best athlete on offense," Bowen said. "He deserves every bit of credit he gets."

Randle El has definitely gotten a lot of credit. He was the 1998 Big Ten freshman of the year, and Indiana's media guide features several pages of glowing praise given by everyone from Hayden Fry to Ronald Curry. This year, Randle El has 20 combined rushing and receiving touchdowns, and averages 267 yards of total offense per game.

"I'll let you in on a little secret," Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz said. "This quarterback that Indiana has, he's pretty good."

Brett Roseman/The Daily Iowan

Iowa's Matt Bowen tries to take down Penn State quarterback Kevin Thompson during Iowa's loss two weeks ago. The Hawkeyes are hoping to stop Indiana's quarterback Randle El on Saturday.

So, how do you stop this guy? First of all, take the Indiana/Wisconsin game film from last week. The Badgers crushed Indiana, 59-0, and held Randle El to 28 yards rushing and 153 yards passing, both well under his season averages. Randle El didn't score a touchdown, breaking a string of nine straight games in which he had a rushing score. It was also the only third time in his career he had been held scoreless.

Obviously, Iowa's defense is not of Wisconsin's caliber. But much can be learned by studying what the Badgers used against Randle El and how they achieved the success that few in the Big Ten have.

"I watched the tape," Bowen said. "That's one thing we have to do, is watch the tape and see how they did it. Wisconsin shut him down, so that's something we're going to look real hard at."

It's not a foolproof plan, though. Iowa runs a different defensive scheme than Wisconsin does. The

No, Jaacks is not getting softer, nor has his desire to be competitive decreased, his team simply needs him in a different role this season.

"I have to play with controlled madness this year," Jaacks said. "I have to be on the court 30 or 45 minutes and can't be getting in foul trouble."

Jaacks will get his first shot at playing more minutes Saturday at the Black and Gold Blowout, Iowa's annual intersquad game. The game is scheduled to start 30 minutes after the Iowa-Indiana football game. LOWA SID HOSPITALIZED

IOWA CITY — Phil Haddy, sports information director at the University of Iowa, was hospitalized Thursday after a heart attack. The announcement came during Iowa football coach Kirk Ferentz's weekly radio show. Haddy was in serious condition at University Hospitals in Iowa City. Haddy, a Cedar Rapids native, joined the Hawkeye staff in 1971 and was named the school's director of sports information in 1993. He and his wife, Elaine, have a son, Jason, and a daughter, Jamie.

ASTROS INJURY BUG CONTINUES AS CAMINITI FALLS

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Astros third baseman Ken Caminiti, who missed 79 games this season with a calf problem, sustained three fractures in his lower back after falling from a deer blind during a South Texas hunting trip. The accident happened early Wednesday near Laredo. Caminiti was expected to remain at Methodist Hospital in Houston through Friday, then spend the next eight weeks recuperating. The Astros used the disabled list 16 times during the season. The barrage began before spring training when outfielder Moises Alou sustained a season-ending knee injury after reportedly falling off a treadmill.

ARENA CANCELS SATURDAY OPENING

NORTH LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — The opening of the city's civic arena was further delayed Thursday after more problems were found with beams that support the $80 million building's upper deck. A minor league hockey team was to make its home debut Saturday night but arena chairman Bob Russell said the arena would not go on. Last week, the game canceled an NBA exhibition game. "We're not going to rush the process," Russell said Thursday. "We will not open until the building passes" a city inspection.

PRINCE GETS TO WOW 'EM IN DETROIT

DETROIT — He is brash and flamboyant and promoted like a rock star. And he has won the hearts of Detroit's sizable Arab community. Prince Naseem Hamed, the WBC featherweight champion, will face WBO titleholder Cesar Soto in a unification match Friday night at Joe Louis Arena. About 15,000 fans are expected for the 12-round bout at Joe Louis Arena. There are an estimated 250,000 to 300,000 people of Arab heritage in the Detroit area. Hamed, an Englishman of Yemeni descent is considered one of the hardest punchers in boxing. But he might be best known for his leopard-print trunks and his 10-minute entrances that finish with a flip over the top rope and into the ring.

SULLIVAN ON WAIVERS, KRISTICH JOINS LEAFS

TORONTO — After the signing of former Boston forward Dmitri Khristich to a $10 million, four-year deal, the Toronto Maple Leafs released popular Steve Sullivan on Thursday. Khristich, 30, lands with his fourth NHL club after a well-publicized contract battle with the Bruins, for whom he scored 29 goals last season. Boston GM Harry Sinden refused to pay the $2.8 million the Ukrainian forward was awarded by an arbitrator in August, making Khristich a free agent. The Bruins retained matching rights if

Iowa look
 Iowa will end its regular season action against Illinois and Northern Illinois.

By Melinda Mawdsley
 The Daily Iowan

When more than half of the players hail from the Lincoln, the motivation for this weekend's match against Illinois and Northern Illinois isn't hard to find.

Iowa heads into today's season finale against Illinois in possession of third place over the Fighting Illini. A win tonight would guarantee a place conference finish and a seed in the Big Ten Tournament.

The postseason seed is not Iowa is thinking about. The team is remaining undefeated against teams from the Illinois this year and improving its 83 lifetime record against inter-state rival teams.

"We need to work on maintaining our level of hard work for the season. We've covered our tactical things," Iowa coach Stephanie Gabbert said. "Iowa is to outwork the other team that's our goal this weekend."

Iowa, 10-5 overall, 6-3 in conference, defeated Illinois in 1997 for its first ever win, but Illinois pounded Hawkeyes 5-0 last year. Illinois ending off a disappointing season. The Fighting Illini were scoreless against Indiana Purdue, the teams Iowa defeated.

Iowa looks to send message to Illinois

Iowa will end its regular season action against Illinois and Northern Illinois.

By Melinda Mawdsley
The Daily Iowan

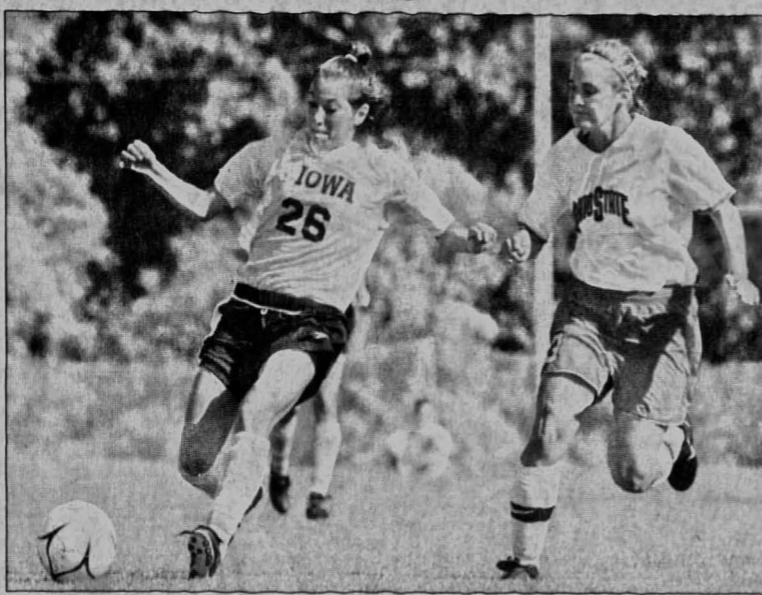

When more than half the roster's players hail from the Land of Lincoln, the motivation needed for this weekend's matchups against Illinois and Northern Illinois isn't hard to find.

Iowa heads into today's Big Ten season finale against Illinois in sole possession of third place. A win over the Fighting Illini tonight would guarantee a third-place conference finish and a No. 3 seed in the Big Ten Tournament.

The postseason seed is not what Iowa is thinking about. The focus is on remaining undefeated against teams from the state of Illinois this year and improving its 8-3 lifetime record against its inter-state rival teams.

"We need to work on maintaining our level of hard work for the rest of the season. We've covered a lot of our tactical things," Iowa coach Stephanie Gabbert said. "Our goal is to outwork the other teams and that's our goal this weekend."

Iowa, 10-5 overall, 6-3 in the conference, defeated Illinois 2-0 in 1997 for its first ever Big Ten win, but Illinois pounded the Hawkeyes 5-0 last year. Illinois is coming off a disappointing weekend. The Fighting Illini were held scoreless against Indiana and Purdue, the teams Iowa defeated that same weekend. Illinois is led by two outstanding forwards, sophomores Emily Brown and Lisa Baldwin.

"Illinois is right in the middle of the conference. They're definitely a good team, fast and dangerous up front," Gabbert said. "Both teams are evenly matched. Whoever works harder will win."

"It's a competition to see who can excel fastest because we both started our programs at the same time," senior Meredith Taylor from Hinsdale, Ill., said.

The emotional high of the Illinois game will be followed by the emotion of the season's last home match against Northern Illinois Sunday at 1 p.m. at the Hawkeye Recreational Fields. Admission is free to the public.

"The home season's been great and every game's been exciting. We've been strong at home, and the crowds have been great," said Gabbert.

The Hawkeyes defeated the Huskies, 3-2 in its inaugural game in 1997 but fell to Northern Illinois, 3-2 in double overtime last year. The Huskies, 4-11, split last weekend's games.

"A majority of our roster is from Illinois so we play up against teams from that state to show we made the right decision to play at Iowa," said Taylor.

Iowa takes to the pool for opener

The improved Hawkeye women start with rival Illinois today at 4 p.m.

By Melinda Mawdsley
The Daily Iowan

The first home meet is an important meet for the Iowa women's swimming team, as it opens the regular and Big Ten seasons today in a dual meet against Illinois in the Field House pool at 4 p.m.

"Illinois and Iowa are teams that get along. There's a good number of mutual friends," Iowa coach Mary Bolich said. "There will be fierce competitiveness, but it will be fun and full of respect."

In Bolich's three years at the helm, Iowa has never defeated Illinois. Last year the Fighting Illini defeated Iowa, 211.5-139.5 in Champaign, Ill. The Hawkeyes finished first in four individual events. Champions included sophomore Melissa Loehndorf's in the 1000 free, junior Loredana Zisu in the 200 back and junior Sara Wolchko in three-meter diving. Junior Ileana Buciu recorded two top-three finishes in the 500 and 1000 free.

"We will need to get after it because it's a big rivalry. Bottom line, we're pumped," said Loehndorf.

The three Iowa freshmen Lisa Haunz, Ann Nollau and Erin Strub are expected to see action in their first collegiate meet today. Look for Haunz in relays and backstroke, Nollau in relays and breaststroke and Strub in freestyle sprints and butterfly.

"I'm not sure what to expect before my first meet. I think it's going to be exciting," said Strub.

Bolich said Iowa matches up well with Illinois and expects a great meet. Because it's the first meet for both teams, it's tough to know what each other has.

"The meet should be very good and very close. I expect a lot of fast races and good competition," said junior Stacey Wertz.

The Hawkeyes are looking forward to the race and getting the season started after the many hours spent practicing for competition.

"During the week, we tried to focus on us and that winning isn't everything," said Haunz. "Iowa and Illinois are evenly matched. The coaches have gone through the lineup ten times. It's going to come down to whoever wants it more."

"I'm looking to have a good meet. Where the chips fall, the chips fall," said Bolich.

Last Week: Two weeks ago the Hawkeyes left Rockford, Ill., champions of all three races they entered at the Head of the Rock Regatta.

Standout Statistic: For the first time since Mandi Kowal became coach, the Hawkeyes beat Wisconsin and every Hawkeye came home with a medal. In the Women's Pair race Iowa won the top five places with Meghan Martin and Katie Hurbut taking first place in the Iowa D boat. Iowa also found victory in the Varsity 4+ race and the Varsity 8+ races.

Coach's Comment: "As expected the entire boat (Champ 8+) is excited to go and represent the UI at the Head of the Charles," said Kowal. "It is one of the most exciting races of the year. The competition is very good with teams from all over the world."

Next Week: The Iowa Hawkeyes will have their only home competition of the season. The ninth annual Head of the Iowa Regatta will feature schools and clubs from around the Midwest and will take place on Oct. 31.

Men's Golf

This week: The Iowa men's golf team will travel to New Orleans, La. to participate in the 54-hole Deep South Intercollegiate. It will be the final time the men see action this fall.

Last week: The Hawkeyes had the week off after one of their best showings of the season, their fifth place finish at the Xavier Invitational.

Iowa's key: The key for Iowa will be to simply do well this weekend. Another strong finish for Terry Anderson's squad could give them added incentive to work harder in the off-season and come out firing in the spring.

Coach's comment: Following the team's showing at Xavier, Anderson said the improvement his team showed could bode well for their future.

"This was some of the best golf we've played this year," he said. "Hopefully we can take some of this momentum down south and play well in our last meet of the season then use it to roll into spring."

Next meet: The team can put their clubs away and rest up during the winter before teeing things up again next spring.

Women's tennis

This week: The Iowa women's tennis team travels to Atlanta, Ga. to participate in the Georgia Tech Invitational today through Sunday.

This is Iowa's third year in the tournament and the Hawkeyes will compete against teams from Georgia Tech, Baylor, Clemson, Wisconsin, Georgia, Mississippi State and Rice.

Last year: Erica Johnson won the Flight B singles championship title. In singles consolation matches, Natalya Dawaf, Shera Wiegler and Megan Kearney all won their final matches.

Iowa's Key: In the absence of Shera Wiegler and Toni Neykova who are competing at the All-American tournament in California this weekend, the Hawkeyes will have to step up their level of play a notch due to the fact that they will be playing up a spot or two in the lineup.

Coach's Comments: "We are doing well," coach Paul Wardlaw said. "Everybody is much improved and it is really apparent when we play the top teams in the country. We can hold our own. We are not overwhelmed by anything due to the confidence we gained last year."

—Lisa Colonna

Volleyball

This weekend: The Iowa women's volleyball team heads east this weekend to face the Nittany Lions of Penn State on Friday and the Buckeyes of Ohio State on Saturday.

Last weekend: The Hawkeyes played Indiana and Illinois last weekend and only managed to win one match out of the whole weekend. Iowa lost to Illinois in three games and Indiana in four games.

The records: Penn State is currently ranked No. 1 in the nation as they post 18-1 overall record (8-0 Big Ten). The unranked Buckeyes are 9-6 (3-5 Big Ten). The Hawkeyes head into this weekend with a 4-11 overall record (3-5 Big Ten).

The leaders: The Hawkeyes are lead by senior Julie Williams who has amassed 244 kills on the year and Jill Schmidt who leads the team in sets with 232. Penn State is lead by senior Lauren Gacciamani who has 289 kills on the year, and the Buckeyes are lead by Rosie Snow with 241 kills.

Coaches comment: "We want to try get back up to the level of two weekends ago," said coach Rita Crockett. "We have had a really good week of practice, though."

Option familiar to Iowa

Hawkeye defense is also hampered in its preparation by the lack of an athlete with Randle El's skills to practice against. Freshman wide receiver Ramon Ochoa will try his best, but it's just not the same. Randle El is a singular talent, impossible to duplicate.

You can't concentrate on shutting down a single part of his game, either. Randle El will hurt Iowa with whichever part of his skills the Hawkeyes choose to ignore.

"He's done a good job throwing the football too, so it's not like you just want to let him throw the football," Ferentz said. "But he's dangerous if he breaks out of there."

"I've watched him play since we were freshmen in high school," quarterback Scott Mullen said. "He's a great athlete. He plays with pure intensity."

The only possible advantage Iowa has is their previous experience against option quarterbacks. In the season opener, the defense faced two option artists in Bobby Newcombe and Eric Crouch. They were relatively successful against Newcombe, and moderately so versus Crouch. Penn State brought Rashard Casey, who took advantage of Iowa's tight pass coverage to exploit the Hawkeyes for easy running first downs.

The experience will be beneficial, even though Randle El is a different breed of option quarterback, according to Ferentz.

"It won't hurt," Ferentz said. "It helps in your preparation, but the challenge is to stop those guys on Saturday. This guy is more balanced than anyone we've faced."

Even the confident Bowen isn't sure what his mood will be after the phenom quarterback is done with the Iowa defense.

"I'll tell you how fun it was in the locker room Saturday," Bowen said. "Depending on how my mood is when I come down the stairs. If he rolls up 300 yards on us, but if we find a way to hold him, contain him and win the game, it'll be a great story."

Knowing Randle El's abilities, it's a feat easier said than done.

Tough go for Hoiberg in return

■ Former Cyclone Fred Hoiberg returned to Hilton Coliseum with the Bulls Thursday night.

By Chuck Schoffner
Associated Press

AMES — Fred Hoiberg got the warm reception that was expected when he returned to Iowa State's Hilton Coliseum.

The Atlanta Hawks weren't nearly as kind to the Chicago Bulls guard.

After receiving a standing ovation from the crowd of 9,460 when he was introduced as a starter on Thursday night, Hoiberg had a rough go at the beginning.

The former Iowa State star played the first 3:01 and during that time, he was called for two fouls, threw a pass out of bounds, had a shot blocked by Jimmy Jackson and had Bimbo Coles and Jackson make jump shots over him.

"I didn't start out too well," said Hoiberg, whose team was routed by the Hawks 112-88. "I got some whistles early and never got my legs under me."

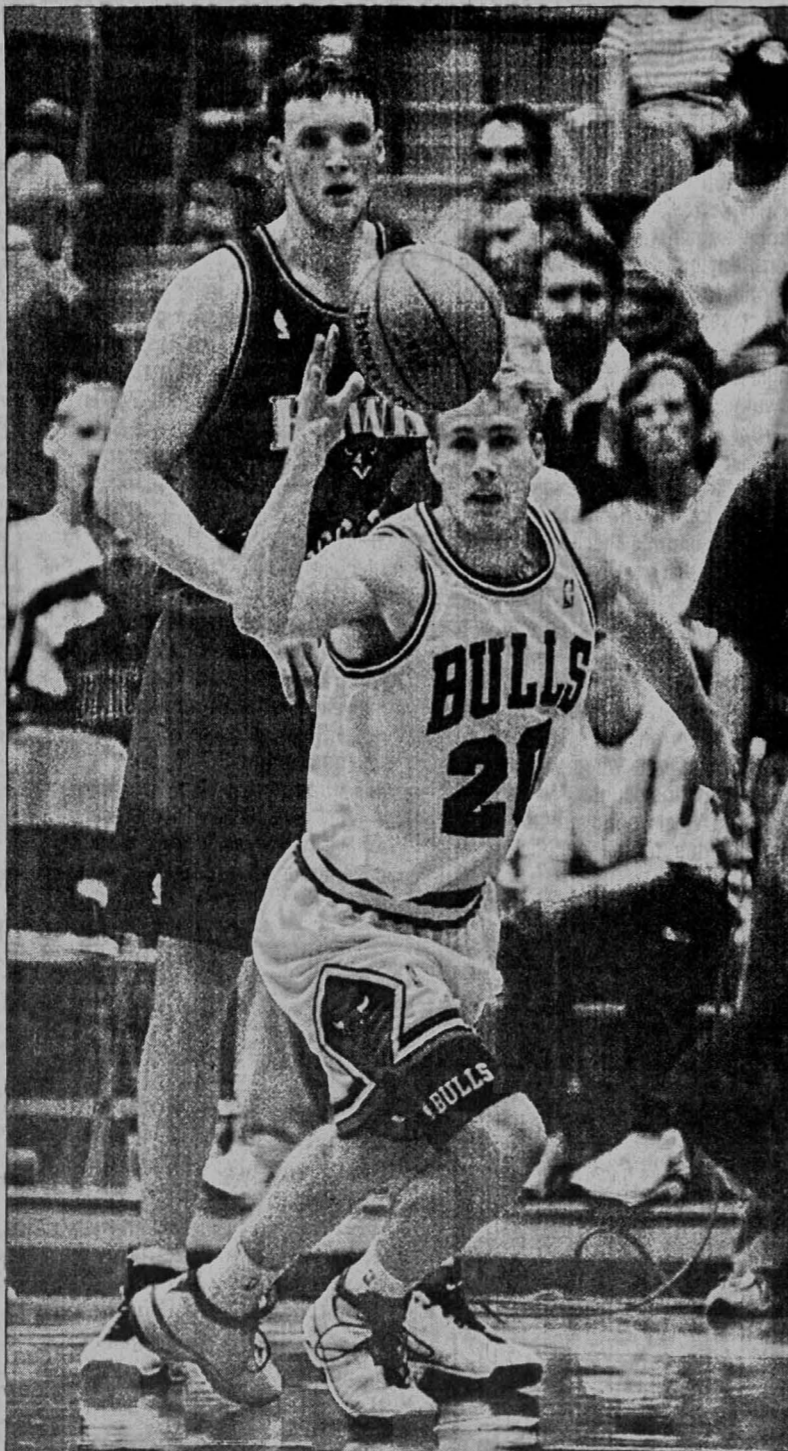

Hoiberg, who scored 1,993 points at Iowa State from 1991-95, ended up playing 18 minutes and scored nine points on 3-for-8 shooting. He also had two assists, one steal and a rebound and capped his night with a driving dunk, though it came long after the outcome was settled.

The night wasn't any better for Bulls coach Tim Floyd, who coached at Iowa State from 1994-98. Atlanta, which had been 0-5 in exhibition games, shot 62 percent and outrebounded Chicago 53-30.

The Bulls lost for the third straight time.

"I enjoyed coming back," Floyd said. "I just wish we could have put a little better face on our team. People have to understand that we're a work in progress. It's going to take some time."

A former Ames High School standout, Hoiberg was nicknamed "The Mayor" when he was at Iowa State because of his popularity in town. Bulls center Will Perdue said some of the players tried to steal Hoiberg's jersey and have Mayor printed on the back, but the switch would have to be approved by the NBA office and they couldn't work out the logistics. Perdue was impressed with the reception that Hoiberg received. "It speaks very highly of this place," he said. "He's one of those guys that's easy to like."

Hoiberg signed with the Bulls last month after four years with the Indiana Pacers. He said the rough time he had on the court didn't take away from coming back home. "Oh no," he said. "My family was still here. I got to see a lot of familiar faces. I saw the first coach I ever had."

His parents, Eric and Karen Hoiberg, sat in the first row and Eric Hoiberg took part in a half-time contest in which he sat on a large ball and hopped down the court and back.

Baltimore defensive end Peter Boulware sacks Kansas City quarterback Elvis Grbac for a 6-yard loss in the first quarter of an NFL game in Baltimore Thursday.

Chiefs' defense too much for Ravens

■ Baltimore defeated Kansas City, 35-8, Thursday night.

By David Ginsburg
Associated Press

BALTIMORE — Elvis Grbac threw two touchdown passes, and so did Stoney Case. Unfortunately for the Baltimore Ravens, the Kansas City Chiefs scored on all four plays.

The Chiefs turned two interceptions into touchdowns, including a 56-yarder by James Hasty, and cruised to a 35-8 victory Thursday night.

Kansas City (4-2) had only 80 yards in the first half and 132 through three quarters, but it didn't matter. That's because the Chiefs' defense repeatedly frustrated Case, who went 15-for-37 with three interceptions before being replaced in the fourth quarter by Tony Banks.

"Probably the most disappointing loss of my career. I can't remember one this bad," Case said. "Obviously I didn't play very well, didn't throw the ball very well. I threw two touchdowns to them."

Hasty's score made it 14-0 in the third quarter, and that was enough to hand the Ravens (2-4) their second straight loss under first-year coach Brian Billick. It was Baltimore's worst home defeat since the team moved from Cleveland before the 1996 season.

The conservative game plan of Chiefs coach Gunther Cunningham worked to perfection — thanks to a defense that came within four minutes of the team's first road shutout in 26 years.

"We played the game to plan," Cunningham said. "I know our running game wasn't pretty in the first half, but we play beat 'em up football. ... What we do is keep the ball real tight inside. It's really smashmouth football."

After Grbac connected with Tony Gonzalez for a 22-yard touchdown for a 21-0 lead with 12:37 left, Donnie Edwards picked off Case's pass and lateraled to Reggie Tongue, who went the final 38 yards for a 28-0 lead.

That ended the night for Case, who replaced ineffective Scott

Mitchell in the second game of the season. Case, hailed by Baltimore fans after generating two comeback victories in exhibition games, now faces the prospect of losing the starting job.

"I'm not going to figure it out tonight," Billick said. "I'm not going to talk about wholesale changes, who my quarterback is going to be, who's going to be here and who's going to be there. That would be ill-advised at this point."

The Ravens scored with 4:05 left, thanks to a 35-yard pass interference penalty. Errict Rhett carried it in from the 2, ruining the Chiefs' bid for their first road shutout since a 19-0 victory over San Diego in 1973.

Kansas City was 3-0 at home and 0-2 on the road this season, and 3-16-1 against the AFC East and AFC Central on the road over the last 10 years.

Cunningham was tired of hearing about it.

"We won on the road. Any more questions?" he said. "We got drilled so much about our road record in the 90s. It's tough to win on the road, but we made a real issue of it."

Finley helps Blues in OT

■ St. Louis defeated the Oilers 3-2 at home.

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Jeff Finley scored a rare goal at 19 seconds of overtime as the St. Louis Blues beat the Edmonton Oilers 3-2 Thursday night.

Finley scored his first goal of the season from the right side of the net off a cross-ice pass from Pierre Turgeon. Pavol Demitra also assisted on the play as the Blues made their first overtime under the new 4-on-4 format a success.

Finley matched his total from last season, when he totaled one goal in 32 games for the Blues and New York Rangers. He has nine goals in 375 career games.

Craig Conroy and Michal Handzus also scored for the Blues, who have won the first three games of a four-game homestand. Doug Weight and Janne Niinimaa scored for the Oilers.

Senators 4, Avalanche 1

KANATA, Ontario — Rob Zamuner and Magnus Arvedson each had a goal and an assist to lead the Ottawa Senators over the Colorado Avalanche.

Wade Redden and Andreas Dackell also scored for the Senators, who halted a two-game losing streak by outshooting the Avalanche 41-20.

Ottawa goalie Ron Tugnutt stopped 19 shots to post his first career win against Colorado. Tugnutt had lost his first two decisions to the Avalanche.

Alex Tanguay scored for the Avalanche, who had both a three-game winning streak and four-game unbeaten string come to an end.

Mighty Ducks 5, Blackhawks 5

CHICAGO — Teemu Selanne scored with 1:13 left in the third period to lift the Mighty Ducks of Anaheim to a tie with the still-winless Chicago Blackhawks.

Chicago's Doug Gilmour had scored his second goal of the game with 2:40 left in the third period to give the Blackhawks a 5-4 lead. But Chicago (0-3-4-0) couldn't hold on and remained one of three NHL teams without a victory.

Gilmour's goals were his first two this season and first since since Feb. 24. Eric Daze, Tony Amonte and Dean McAmmond also scored for the Blackhawks. Ted Drury, Paul Kariya, Antti Aalto and Marty McInnis had goals for Anaheim.

COACHES

Give the nod to Ferentz because Cam Cameron has had three years to build a good team.

INTANGIBLES

The Hawkeyes are 8-3-1 vs. Indiana on homecoming, plus Steve Alford is a Hawk now.

SPECIAL TEAMS

Both teams have kick returners that rank in the top 20 in the country and the punters have nearly identical statistics. Tim Douglas can hit the long field goal and that puts Iowa over the edge.

DEFENSE

This game features the two worst defenses in the Big Ten. Iowa ranks 11th and Indiana ranks 10th. If there was ever a time for a barn-burner at Kinnick this year, it's Saturday. Give the edge to Indiana by a nose.

Family ties in Bowden Bowl

■ Bobby Bowden's 300th career victory may come at the hands of Clemson coach Tommy Bowden.

By Richard Rosenblatt
Associated Press

Ann Bowden could be hiding in the Memorial Stadium stands Saturday night. What's on the field might be just too much.

On one sideline, Bobby, her husband of 50 years, will be going for career win No. 300. On the other, son Tommy will be trying to stop him.

"When I see that, I think I'm going to retreat up to the end zone in a high seat and sit there so I can kind of let my emotions hang out," Ann Bowden said of the milestone matchup of No. 1 Florida State (7-0) at Clemson (3-3).

"If there wasn't so much at stake in this ball game, like our chance for a national championship," she added, "I probably wouldn't think too much about it."

But there sure is a lot to think about, especially for Ann Bowden and the rest of the Bowden clan, more than two dozen strong.

"It's going to be so different from anything that has ever happened to us," Ann Bowden said. "I don't think we'll realize it until the time comes."

The time has just about arrived.

At Clemson's Death Valley, 69-year-old Bobby Bowden applies for membership in the exclusive 300 Club, which consists of Bear Bryant, Pop Warner, Amos Alonzo Stagg and Joe Paterno among Division I-A coaches.

"I'll be excited, and Tommy will be excited," Bobby Bowden said. "But I don't think it will have one bit of an effect in the game. We're going to do what we're going to do anyway. We might have a trick or two up our sleeve. I'm going to have one for him, and I know he's going to have one for me."

Tommy Bowden, in his first season at Clemson after leading Tulane to a perfect record in '98, is playing it cool. He's putting all the pressure on his father.

"If they lose, they lose a national championship," Tommy said. "If we lose, we're 3-4."

When Penn State's Paterno reached 300 last season in a rout of Bowling Green, a packed Beaver Stadium crowd chanted, "Joe Pa-terno, Joe Pa-terno," and the coach broke down and cried, the memories of nearly 50 years in Happy Valley too much to contain.

"I was just overwhelmed with how much everyone wanted us to win the 300th game," Paterno said. "I'm sure Bobby will go through the same kinds of emotion. You don't really think about it until it happens."

If Bowden gets No. 300, it will be on the road and against his son. And for Ann Bowden it's very conflicting.

"I think she wants Florida State to win the game because we've got so much riding on it," Bobby Bowden said. "But she wants her son to make it as tight as he can make it, a close game. She'd be very happy if it's a one-point win for Florida State."

The events that led to this moment are as unique as the matchup itself — the first time a father has coached against his son in a major college game.

Terry Bowden was supposed to have the honor of coaching against his father, in Auburn's season opener. But he resigned near midseason last year, and the school then bought its way out of the game against the Seminoles, creating bitter feelings between the Bowdens and Auburn.

"It's a shame for Auburn that the game wasn't played," said Terry Bowden, an ABC college football analyst and one of the few Bowdens unable to attend the game. "I guess with Tommy, it's a pretty good second choice. It's not so bad."

And who's Terry rooting for? "I want a close victory for my dad."

It may be fitting for Bowden to secure No. 300 on the road. Nearly two decades ago, the fun-loving and folksy coach earned the nickname "King of the Road" by taking his not-so-well known Seminoles almost anywhere to play. Unlike other supposed patsies, Bowden's boys were ready.

In his now infamous "Octoberfest of 1981" — he went 3-2 in road games against the glamour teams of the decade, beating Ohio State, Notre Dame and LSU, and losing at Nebraska and Pittsburgh. He calls it the turning point for Florida State.

Tiger shoots a 66 at Disney Classic

■ After a month-long layoff, Woods made seven birdies and a bogey in soggy conditions.

By Fred Goodall
Associated Press

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. — Tiger Woods has no intention of coasting through the rest of the year.

Rested and determined to complete what already has been a terrific season on a high note, Woods shot 66 Thursday to trail co-leaders Rocco Mediate and Brad Faxon by one stroke after the opening round of Disney's National Rental Car Classic.

Playing for the first time since the Ryder Cup a month ago and ending a layoff of seven weeks from 72-hole tournaments, the world's top-ranked player fashioned a 6-under-par score with seven birdies and one bogey in soggy conditions on the Palm Course at Disney World.

With victories in two of the last three tournaments this season, Woods can become the first $6 million man in golf. He's won five PGA events in 1999, including his second major title, and isn't ready to rest on his success.

"I want to end on a good note. It's been a great year. I've won six times worldwide, and I've come close in other majors. I just want to keep playing well and hopefully chalk up a couple more victories."

A late-afternoon downpour held up play on the Palm and Magnolia courses for nearly two hours. Twenty-eight players were still trying to complete the round when play was suspended for the night.

Vijay Singh joined Woods at 6-under. Steve Elkington and Mike Springer, who didn't finish, were 6-under through 16 and 13 holes, respectively.

John Huston, Bob Tway and Scott Verplank were among a group at 67 to trail by two strokes. Hal Sutton and Ernie Els were among those bunched at 4-under 68.

Mediate's round consisted of five birdies and an eagle on the Magnolia course. Faxon played the Palm, finishing with seven birdies and no bogeys for a share of the lead.

Although Mediate said he putted as well as he has in a long time, he missed from inside 10 feet on each of the last three holes.

"You always remember the ones you missed," he said, adding the longest putt he had for par all day was four feet.

"Everything else was in or just about in. Which is good. You don't have many of those days. At least I haven't."

Woods began his round with three birdies and a bogey on the back nine of the Palm course. He added four birdies on the front, including a 60-foot chip on No. 2, to close on the leaders.

Wilt remembered with love, laughter

More than 500 people gathered at a memorial service for Wilt Chamberlain Thursday.

By Jennifer Brown
Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — Wilt Chamberlain was remembered Thursday with uproarious laughter and a few tears at a church just blocks from the high school where he first soared to basketball fame.

More than 500 people attended the lighthearted memorial service, telling stories about the tall skinny kid who went on to become perhaps the sport's most dominant player.

"Wilt never really left Philadelphia even when he was geographically far away. He never forgot us and we never really forgot him," Philadelphia Mayor Edward Rendell said.

Chamberlain died Oct. 12 in his Bel-Air, Calif., home at 63 of an apparent heart attack. A previous memorial service was held in Los Angeles.

Among those attending Thursday were former Warriors teammates Tom Gola and Paul Arizin, former 76ers teammates Bill Melchioni, Billy Cunningham and Matt Guokas, ex-Knicks star Earl Monroe and Temple coach John Chaney.

Chamberlain led West Philadelphia's Overbrook High School to several championships before playing 14 dazzling seasons in the NBA.

George Widman/Associated Press

Former Philadelphia coach Billy Cunningham, in dark glasses, is one of more than 500 people attending the lighthearted memorial service for basketball great Wilt Chamberlain on Thursday at a West Philadelphia church.

Chaney played alongside Chamberlain while he was in high school and Chamberlain was in junior high. Even then, Chaney said Chamberlain was dazzling.

"I would put the ball up, and Wilt would take the ball out of the air and while he was up there would put the ball in the basket, and then he would get credit for my basket," Chaney said. "I had to pull him aside and tell him to stop taking my shots."

Gola said he still has a crook in his nose from an elbow by Chamberlain. Gola noted that Chamberlain's height, sometimes in question, was actually 7-foot-1 3/4. Gola said he measured Chamberlain using a ladder at training camp.

Several friends and former teammates likened Chamberlain to such greats as Babe Ruth and Michael Jordan. Chamberlain still holds the NBA record for most points in a game (100) and highest season average (50 points in 1962).

Poll ends in favor of Rose

In a recent poll, people voted that Pete Rose should be in the Hall of Fame.

By Ronald Blum
Associated Press

ATLANTA — By a 2-1 margin, most people think Pete Rose should be reinstated to baseball, even though many believe he did gamble on his sport, according to an Associated Press poll.

Fifty-six percent of those surveyed said Rose should be reinstated, while 29 percent said he should not, according to the poll, conducted for the AP by ICR of Media, Pa.

Seven out of 10 said baseball's career hits leader belongs in baseball's Hall of Fame, while almost two out of 10 said he doesn't. Rose is not eligible for the Hall of Fame as long as his lifetime ban remains in effect.

By a 78 percent to 15 percent margin, people said commissioner Bud Selig made the correct decision to invite Rose to the World Series ceremony Sunday honoring the sport's All-Century team. Rose was among the 25 players elected in fan balloting in the second half of the season.

The telephone survey of 1,012 adults was taken Oct. 1-5 and has a margin of error of plus or minus 3 percentage points.

cult to generate shots," Beglin said. "We obviously have to play a lot better offensively than last time, and we need to play all out like we did last weekend."

Iowa will finish the season next weekend against Northwestern at home before heading to the Big Ten Tournament in Columbus, Ohio, on Nov. 5.

"The fact that we have taken each team as it comes has really helped us I think," senior Kelly Dolan said. "The only people who can beat us, if we play our game, is us."

Jones hopes for a different result in rematch

WORLD SERIES

Chipper Jones is one of only eight Braves still remaining.

"We're a lot closer as a team, we're a lot tighter," the third baseman said. "We didn't have a lot of injuries '96, we didn't have a lot of adversity."

The Braves' only setback came that season after they won the first two games of the World Series at New York. Back home, in the final three games ever at Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium, they lost three in a row to the Yankees.

In the pivotal play of the series, Jim Leyritz hit a three-run homer in the eighth inning on a hanging breaking ball from Wohlers in Game 4. The long drive sailed over the glove of left fielder Andruw Jones.

"That was a mistake that he hit it," Jones said after Thursday's workout. "But I don't remember that stuff. That was 1996 and this is 1999. I'm hoping things go differently."

The defending champion Yankees are trying to win their third championship in four years. Atlanta is hoping to win its second title in the '90s — and avoid becoming the first team to lose four World Series in a decade since the New York Giants from 1910-19.

The Braves won two of three at Yankee Stadium in July during interleague play. But slugger Ryan Klesko, who homered twice in one of those games, said that won't have much effect on what happens in October.

Klesko said the results from 1996 won't play a role, either.

"I think we've changed a lot more than they have."

To be on the safe side, however, Klesko planned to watch tapes Thursday night from that other World Series with the Yankees.

He was limited to a lone single in 10 at-bats in that matchup.

Cone will start Game 2 for New York against Greg Maddux. When the series moves back to Yankee Stadium, it will be Atlanta's Kevin Millwood against Andy Pettitte in Game 3 and then John Smoltz vs. Roger Clemens in Game 4.

Among the pitchers missing from 1996 Series are World Series MVP John Wetteland and Key from the Yankees and Denny Neagle, Steve Avery and Wohlers from the Braves.

Gone from the starting lineup in Game 1 that year are Grissom, Mark Lenke, Fred McGriff, Jermaine Dye and Jeff Blauser from the Braves — catcher Javy Lopez is injured — and Wade Boggs, Mariano Duncan and Fielder from the Yankees.

"There's not a whole lot of guys left on the teams," Maddux said. "All that matters now is 1999."

Juco transfer to help Jaacks at center

Jaacks will mostly guard the opponent's center this season, after being a power forward last season. A small post player at 6-foot-8, Jaacks has no little challenge ahead of him this year. He will be counted on to provide the rebounding punch on a team that could play with as many as four guards at a time.

"He is a big part of our program this year and he knows it," Alford said. "He has to change his game more than anyone coming back in terms of leadership in the Big Ten. He has to get those around him to get better. That is the difference between a good player and a great player."

Fellow big man Joe Fermino said he and Jaacks were bruisers who thrived on physical play. He said the two know it is not going to be an easy time this season, but will play whatever role the coaching staff wants them to — including guarding the inbounds pass.

"If they want me to guard the inbounds pass, I will," Jaacks said. "I'll just have to wear a facemask."

Alford is expecting a lot out of his big man this year, even though he does not know exactly where he will fit in.

He said he has a different conversation everyday with Jaacks about what his role on the team should be this year, and it always ends with a different result.

"Each day he comes in it is a different type of conversation with Jake," Alford said. "It would not surprise me if Jake came up and said he wanted to play a six."

With the increased leadership role on the team, Jaacks will have to give up a role he relishes in — being the most hated man on the floor.

"I am going to be a little bit less intense," Jaacks said. "I'll try and not draw as much attention from the referees and let my game speak for myself. I have been working on it a lot it will be a learning process."

Stoops Watch just keeps readers informed

Every Monday in the DI, we run a "Stoops Watch" on the second page of the sports section.

In case you have missed it, the "Watch" recaps how Iowa graduate and current Oklahoma coach Bobby Stoops' team did the previous Saturday. Win or lose, it is always in the paper.

For the first three weeks of the season it looked like Bob Stoops was a god-send for a struggling program. His team was 3-0 and garnered a Top 25 ranking in the polls.

Then the team went on a skid, losing leads late to Notre Dame and Texas.

We have chronicled this throughout the year in the "Stoops Watch."

Critics of the feature say it is a simple act of muckraking journalism, stirring up controversy when there is none to be found, solely to sell papers and incite ill will towards the Iowa program.

They will say the "Stoops Watch" is an unfair, omnipresent specter that lurks over Kirk Ferentz's head on a weekly basis.

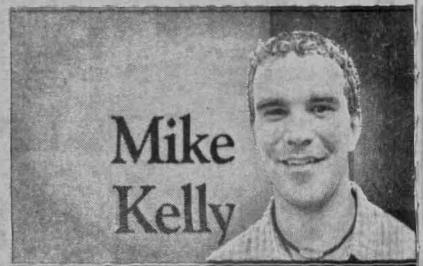

The Watch is not meant to be a slam on Ferentz at all. In fact, it could even work to his advantage if Oklahoma falters down the stretch and winds up going 3-8 or 4-7 on the season.

Remember the first few days of last December? The buzz around town was Iowa was either going to hire Terry Allen away from Kansas or hire Stoops, the Florida defensive coordinator. Stoops was an up and comer in the collegiate coaching ranks and was the fan favorite to continue the tradition started by Hayden Fry.

When Ferentz was hired, the city was surprised. Kirk, who? That was the question around the bars and the restaurants around Iowa City. Why didn't we get Stoops?

In all likelihood, we will probably never know what really went down on the days after Fry retired. Maybe Stoops did not want the job. Maybe he was not even offered the job.

People will still speculate, though. We think many Hawkeye fans would be interested to know how the possible candidates for the Iowa coaching job are doing with their respective teams. That is why we do the Stoops Watch. We are not out to get Ferentz, but we want to provide readers with the information about what is happening with the coach, that presumably was a top choice for the job.

Mike Kelly

Critics of the feature say it is a simple act of muckraking journalism, stirring up controversy when there is none to be found, solely to sell papers and incite ill will towards the Iowa program.

We are trying to present just the facts about Stoops' record with Oklahoma. The stats tell a story, and the outcome of the season is up to the reader to decide.

If we were being perfectly impartial, we would run a Terry Allen watch as well, but we don't have enough space in our paper to include all the coaches in the NCAA that have ties to Iowa.

That is why we don't have a "Alvarez Watch," or a "Snyder Watch."

As a newspaper, we do the best we can to inform people about current issues in sports, especially Iowa sports. Simply put, we feel that Stoops' performance at Oklahoma is a newsworthy event that merits a spot in our paper every Monday.

It's not really that cold

Iowa freshmen Colin Cole and Fred Barr have opened up a recruiting line in Florida for the Hawkeyes and could be trend setters for the next generation of recruits.

By Greg Wallace
The Daily Iowan

This season, many have bemoaned the lack of talent and speed on the Iowa football team. Get a couple more guys like Fred Barr and Colin Cole, though, and they won't be moaning for long.

As true freshmen, both have made a huge impact on the field for Iowa. But perhaps more importantly, they've opened the door to what could be the most talented area for football players in America — one that the Hawkeyes have failed to tap until now.

The duo grew up together in Plantation, Fla., near Miami in Broward County. It wasn't the most pleasant area, according to Barr.

"It was alright," Barr said. "It was a typical black neighborhood, had a lot of drugs, and stuff like that."

How tough was his neighborhood? Any neighborhood football game was no more than an excuse to throw down. He calls Iowa City "a fantasy land," a far cry from Plantation, where crime and drugs ran rampant. Although both he and Cole came from solid family environments, the city still had its effects on Barr.

"I used to fight all the time," Barr said. "We used to play football games against the other streets, and if you lose, then you go fight. If we won, we were fighting. It didn't really matter who won or lost. Nobody likes to lose, we were just violent about it. I'm real happy to get out of there."

The toughness instilled in those neighborhood games worked. Barr and Cole are the only true freshmen to make an influence for the Hawkeyes this year. Cole is a second-string defensive tackle, and Barr has overtaken Derrick Davison for the outside linebacker job after pushing him for several weeks.

Why Iowa?

Both say they were recruited by Florida's Big 3 (Florida, Florida State, and Miami). So why aren't they there? Good old-fashioned Iowa values.

Barr visited Iowa first, in mid-December. He loved the program, but had concerns about the weather.

"It was cold, it snowed," Barr said. "When I first got off the plane, I was like, I can't go here, it's too cold. But as the days progressed, I got used to the weather."

He got so used to it, and so pleased with Iowa, that he wanted to commit immediately after returning home. His grandmother wanted him to visit other schools, a thought that scared Bret Bielema, Barr's position coach and the person who first saw Barr in action.

"His grandmother wanted him to take a couple more visits, so I tried to get him on board," Bielema said. "I didn't want him going to West Virginia or Georgia Tech and jumping on board there."

The main factor in signing Barr was the relaxed environment that Iowa City provided. His mother told him to think about his surroundings outside of football. Barr did, and he realized that Iowa beat his other suitors easily in that category. It was the key in landing him.

Cole came next, in late January. He had originally committed to Virginia Tech, but didn't like the pressure the Hokies put on him.

"They were telling me, 'Oh yeah, we have a couple of guys who want to come on in, and you want to come, you should hurry up and commit,'" Cole said. "I was like, 'Well, I'm already gone there. I might as well go ahead and do that.'"

He hadn't visited Iowa until then. When he did, he was sold on the no-pressure approach of coach Bret Bielema and his staff. "Coach Ferentz said, 'It's your decision,'" Cole said. "He's not going to put any pressure on you, he wants you to do what you feel is right. That's how he always talks to people."

Barr helped, too. He and Cole are friends, and Barr leaned on Cole to become a Hawkeye.

"We used to hang out all the time," Barr said. "I influenced him a little bit. He was being influenced by other schools, but I convinced him to come here."

A Quick Start

Barr began his climb toward the starting lineup in the first game of the season, when both he and Cole saw action. By the third week of the season, both were on the two-deep. When the Big Ten season began, Barr was rotating with starter Davison, and last week at Northwestern, he got his first start.

Although both Barr and Davison still play, it's been a pitched battle between the two for playing time, a reflection of the pair's intensity and desire.

"It's kind of weird," Barr said. "(Davison) doesn't talk to me as much. Now, it's really on."

When Barr got his first taste of Big Ten action, he said he wasn't sure if he was ready for the game's fast pace. But he has picked up his game considerably, and will continue to do so as the season progresses.

"I'm starting to adjust," Barr said. "I can keep up now."

Cole is getting plenty of playing time of his own, though he isn't pressing senior Corey Brown as hard as Barr pushed Davison. The Iowa offense's struggles have provided him with ample opportunity to shine, since Ferentz has rotated his front seven in an effort to keep them fresh.

The larger of the two, Cole is soft-spoken, and looks as if he still carries a bit of baby fat on his 275 lbs. frame. Don't let it fool you. His outward appearance belies an intense competitive spirit, which yearns to prove people wrong.

By Greg Wallace
The Daily Iowan

Like a slumbering giant, the state of Florida sat virtually untouched by Iowa football recruiters during the Hayden Fry era.

Kirk Ferentz decided that the giant needed a poke in the side. He assigned linebacker coach Bret Bielema to the state, and the results happened instantaneously — Fred Barr and Colin Cole were the first recruits signed, and both have produced immediately for the Hawkeyes as true freshmen.

Now, Ferentz and his staff are expanding their sights and are poised to establish a presence in Florida for years to come. Bielema has been joined by recruiting coordinator Pat Flaherty, and together they hope to make a big impact this recruiting season.

Cole is getting plenty of playing time of his own, though he isn't pressing senior Corey Brown as hard as Barr pushed Davison. The Iowa offense's struggles have provided him with ample opportunity to shine, since Ferentz has rotated his front seven in and out to keep them fresh.

The larger of the two, Cole is soft-spoken, and looks as if he still carries a bit of baby fat on his 275 lbs. frame. Don't let it fool you. His outward appearance belies an intense competitive spirit, which yearns to prove people wrong.

"I'm always up for a challenge," Cole said. "People were telling me, 'You can't do this, you can't do that.' That's the biggest thing for me. I like it when people tell me I can't do something, I go out there and do it anyway."

Barr has a confident air about him, which has only been inflated by his impressive freshman year. It was what attracted Bielema to him when he first visited him last winter.

"I liked the way everyone talked about him," Bielema said. "I went to school, and everyone had good things to say about Fred. Then we got onto the practice field, and it was even better. He had presence, work ethic and poise. Anytime you combine that with talent, you have a good thing. The way he walked, the way he talked. I liked Fred's confidence."

Something that recruiting analysts weren't confident about was Barr's size. He stands only 6-foot-2, a notch shorter than is generally required for a true blue chip linebacker. It is something that may have shied away the Florida schools. To Bielema, it's not an issue.

"One thing Kirk Ferentz said is that he worked for six years in the NFL, and he played against guys who were 6-foot, 6-foot-1 that he couldn't stop," Bielema said. "If they have the speed, have the want-to, that can make up for a lot of things."

The Future

Despite Iowa's poor start, Barr is unfazed. He doesn't regret his decision to join the Hawkeyes. Not one bit. In fact, he wants to prove his naysayers wrong.

Brett Roseman/The Daily Iowan

"We're an up-and-coming team," Barr said. "We'll be able to do something in the next three or four years. In a couple of years, we'll be able to beat them."

Maybe it should be clarified who Barr means by "them." "Them" isn't Iowa State, or Michigan State, or Penn State. "Them" is Florida, Florida

State, and Miami. That's how confident he is.

Both Barr and Cole plan to extend the Hawkeye network into South Florida, hopefully bringing their friends, and other talented players, into the Iowa fold.

"There are a lot of good athletes in Florida," Cole said. "I've been talking to a couple of people, trying to get them to come up here, but I can't make any promises."

Barr has set his sights a bit higher.

"We're going to open up a whole lot of opportunities," Barr said. "When we go home, we're going to recruit, and it's going to bring us some good players."

Bielema, Flaherty blaze a Hawkeye trail in Florida

Bret Bielema and Pat Flaherty are establishing an Iowa recruiting presence in Florida.

By Greg Wallace
The Daily Iowan

Like a slumbering giant, the state of Florida sat virtually untouched by Iowa football recruiters during the Hayden Fry era.

Kirk Ferentz decided that the giant needed a poke in the side. He assigned linebackers coach Bret Bielema to the state, and the results happened instantaneously—Fred Barr and Colin Cole were the first recruits signed, and both have produced immediately for the Hawkeyes as true freshmen.

Now, Ferentz and his staff are expanding their sights, and are poised to establish a presence in Florida for years to come. Bielema has been joined by recruiting coordinator Pat Flaherty, and together, they hope to make a big impact this recruiting season.

Why is Florida so talent laden? The weather is the main source. Good weather means more time to play, which leads to better players.

"Great weather, all year round," Bielema said when asked the source of Florida's success. "Those kids are out being active rather than being cooped up and sitting on the couch. It makes them better."

Another factor is the talent itself. Higher levels of competition makes every player step up his game. It prepares them well for college, according to Bielema.

"The overall talent level is so high, that when they get here, it's not such a change for them," he said. "It makes it easier for them to adjust to college life."

One has to ask, how does Iowa fit into all of this? Surely, no one in his right mind would travel hundreds of miles from home, to go to cold weather, and a program out of the traditional limelight, right?

Bielema says it's not a problem. He pushes Iowa City, Iowa values, and does it all with enthusiasm. It's a formula that seems to be working wonders.

"A smile goes a long way," Bielema explained. "There's not a lot of happy people down there walking around, so you have to put a price on it."

He also sells Iowa as a place with great people, a great city (Iowa City), and a great environment to be a student. Not to mention Kinnick Stadium; Bielema's greatest regret is that he can't express the game day environment, which he lauds, in videos or letters.

It may only get easier for the Hawkeyes in Florida. Having potential recruits see Barr and Cole on national TV enjoying success does more for Iowa's chances than anything Bielema or Flaherty can tell them.

"When we go and talk to those kids, they say, we saw Fred, or we saw Colin, they were on TV," Bielema said. "You can't put a price on that."

Like any scholastic endeavor, grades are an arbitrary judgment of worth that is subject to the interpretation and scrutiny of the instructor and pupil alike.

With that said, here is the DI's midseason report card for the Iowa football team.

Offense: D

Much like a freshman experiencing college for the first time, this season has been a learning experience for most of the offense.

Six first-time starters have gotten a baptism of fire during the first half of the 1999 season.

Injuries played a part in the disheveled offensive line. Guys like Ben Sobieski and Kyle Trippeer have not seen any action this year due to injuries. Trippeer is back now, but Sobieski will sit out the entire season. Even the mainstay of the offensive line, senior Chad Deal, missed much of the first four games with an injured groin.

The line has had to bear the brunt of the criticism and with good reason.

Ladell Betts has not had very much room to run

Brett Roseman/The Daily Iowan

Michigan State's Gari Scott scores a touchdown as Iowa's D.J. Johnson tries to strip the ball away during the first quarter of Iowa's 49-3 loss to the Spartans October 3 in East Lansing.

between the tackles as Iowa is still averaging only 2.7 yards per carry.

Randy Reiners' scrambling ability has made the passing game look good at times, but he has taken season's worth of big hits through only six games.

"Yep, I'm still there," Reiners said when asked after the Northwestern game if he was still in one piece.

Overall, improvement is apparent. The linemen are staying with their blocks longer on running plays and Reiners threw for 192 yards against a ferocious Penn State defense.

Still, exams are not judged by effort. Bart Simpson studied all through a snow day before his history test and barely passed. Same goes with the Iowa offense.

Defense: D+

From the first day of class, the teachers (coaches) drill into the students' heads, "defense, defense, defense." It is a fundamental part of the game and so far this season, Iowa has been lax with its studying.

The Hawkeyes rank 109th nationally in total defense, and 112th in rushing defense.

The teacher's pet is Matt Bowen. The senior strong safety has been named captain in all six of Iowa's games and is the only Hawkeye to be singled out in a positive light by Ferentz without prompting from the media.

And rightly so. On more than one occasion, Ferentz has told the story about how Bowen being hooked up to an IV after the Northern Illinois game symbolized what he was about as a football player.

Bowen backs the acclaim up on the field as well. He is the team's leading tackler with 67.

Against Northwestern, Iowa

went to a youth movement, starting freshman Fred Barr over Derrick Davison and sophomore D.J. Johnson over Joe Slattery. The final grades may hinge on how well the young defenders perform.

Special teams: B

Ok, first the negatives. Iowa gave up a punt return TD against Michigan State, then gave up a first down on a fake punt against Northwestern. Both of those breakdowns led to points.

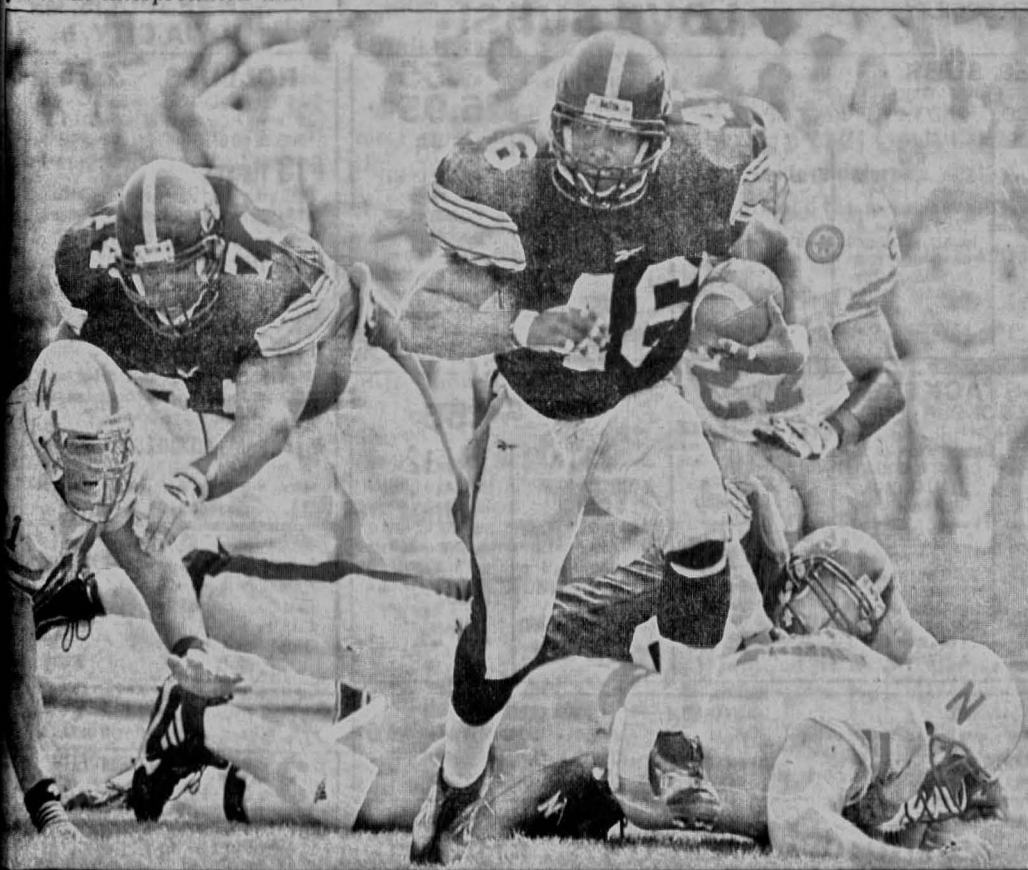

The special teams also have provided Iowa fans with the most vivid memories so far this year. LeVar Woods' run back of a blocked field goal and his flip going across the goalline ignited a spark during the Northern Illinois win.

Tim Dodge ranks 18th in the Big Ten in kickoff returns as well. Even if he is eight yards deep in the end zone, Dodge still tries to make a big play. It is that kind of zest that professors like to see from students.

Coaches: Incomplete

It is too soon to tell how well the coaches have done since taking over the program. The real challenge comes in December when recruiting season begins. From what we can tell so far, the players have adjusted well to the new system and the coaches have the full faith of the players.

 Kelly selects Io
 Century Defen

By Mike Kelly
 The Daily Iowan

In the second part of the Daily Iowan's All-Century Team series, we profile the players that made the hits, pulled down the interceptions, and won the Hawkeyes games on the overcast, rainy November Saturdays in the Big Ten. It was a difficult list to compile because the amount a player contributes on defense is hard to measure on a statistic sheet. Even the sack statistic was not even kept until recently.

Even though the Kirk Ferentz regime changed the defense to 4-3, the positions listed are in a 5-2 because that is the defense that most of these players played in.

So in celebration of the century's end, we present the All-Century Defensive Team.

Defensive End

Andre Tippett was the first consensus All-American under coach Hayden Fry. From 1978-81, Tippett was a frequent guest in opponents' backfields, finishing as Iowa's career leader in tackles for losses with 241. He led the Big Ten in sacks as a senior with 20 and went on to be a five-time All-Pro selection with the New England Patriots. He led the Pats to their first Super Bowl in franchise history in 1986 where they fell to the Bears 46-10.

Jared DeVries is the other choice at the end position. DeVries made the first team All-American team in both his junior and senior seasons. In 1998, he was also selected as captain of the Iowa team. He started all four years during his Iowa career, but coach Hayden Fry will remember DeVries' character most.

"You can imagine the character of a guy who turns down a million dollar signing bonus to come back to school and get a degree," Fry said when DeVries decided to come back to Iowa for his senior season.

Defensive Line

Mark Bortz's name just sounds like he was destined to be a great defensive lineman.

With grit and determination from the defensive line position, Bortz was one of the pioneering members of Hayden Fry's defense. After his days in Iowa City were over, he went on to a lengthy NFL career with the Bears.

Joining Bortz on the squad is Dave Haight. In 1987, Haight led the Hawkeyes in tackles with 126 from a nose guard position. He was named team MVP that year, one of only two nose guards in Iowa history to be named to that honor.

Haight

Alex Karras is one of two players to make the list on both offense and defense. This two-way great won the Outland Trophy in 1957 and made nearly every All-American team in the country.

Linebackers

With only two spots available, linebacker may be the most competitive position on the defensive side of the ball.

Larry Station led the Hawkeyes in tackles all four years he played at Iowa and finished as the leading tackler in Iowa football history. Station went on to play for the Pittsburgh Steelers after he completed his dominating run at Iowa.

"Larry can get under control so well," former Iowa defensive coordinator Barry Alvarez said. "So many linebackers will overrun a play, but if he overruns a play, he can square up better than anyone I've ever seen."

In 1972, Andre Jackson had a dream season for a linebacker. His team went a mere 3-7-1, but Jackson made an indelible mark on Iowa football history that year, making 171 tackles that season. That year earns him a spot on the squad.

Defensive backs

Merton Hanks anchored an Iowa defense that was so successful in the late 80s. He swarmed around the football, becoming one of the best run-stopping secondary members in Iowa history. Hanks has enjoyed many prosperous seasons in the NFL after his Iowa career. After winning a Super Bowl with the San Francisco 49ers, he is now with the Seattle Seahawks.

Although he will be remembered more for winning the Heisman Trophy as a half-back, Nile Kinnick played defense as well. Kinnick is tyed for the lead with fellow all-Century team member Devon Mitchell for most interceptions Iowa history. Mitchell and Kinnick are tied for the lead with 18 apiece.

Willis Glassgow completes the secondary. In 1929, Glassgow was the first Big Ten MVP in Iowa history. He was also first team all-American during his senior season.

Punter

The most prolific punter in Iowa history is Reggie Roby. The Waterloo native broke an NCAA single season record for punting average with a 49.8 yard average. He punted for more than 4.5 miles in college and was an All-American twice.

After his freshman season, Randle El won the title of 1998 Big Ten Freshman of the Year. He also won co-Big Ten Player of the Week after his first collegiate football game, and again after his sixth.

"The success I've had I take in stride and keep a level head," Randle El said. "I love talking to little kids and things like that."

In 1999, Randle El ranks 12th in the nation in scoring, 36th in passing efficiency, second in quarterback rushing yards and 22nd in total offense.

He has accounted for 20 touchdowns in 1999 and is two rushing yards and five passing yards away from reaching 1,500 career rushing yards and 2,000 career passing yards.

And he still has two years of eligibility remaining.

But Randle El does not seem to be concerned with the numbers he has, or soon will own.

"I just want to win," Randle El said. "I want to see my coaches, the university and my players happy."

But they are happy just to be on the same side of the football with him.

"He is a natural-born leader," linebacker Justin Smith said. "He has all the athletic ability in the world. I'm excited to be on the same team with someone of that caliber. I'm glad he's on my side." His athletic ability goes beyond the football field, however. As soon as the season ends, Randle El replaces his pants with shorts and his cleats with basketball shoes.

The 5'11" Randle El also is a guard on the IU basketball team. Last season he missed eight weeks of the season after breaking his fourth metacarpal bone in his right hand in February. He had a team-high five assists and three steals against the Antwaan Randle El has already established himself as one of the premier quarterbacks in the country and he still has two seasons left with the Hoosiers.

Hawkeyes, scored 16 points on the season, had 11 assists and played 74 minutes.

His talents don't stop there, however. Randle El also was drafted in the 14th round of the 1997 Major League Baseball draft by the Chicago Cubs.

For now, he is sticking with two Hoosier sports, but who knows what the future might hold. Randle El said he enjoys always being on the go.

"I like that," Randle El said. "I feel better when I'm doing things whether it is academics, football or basketball.

One day I'm going to get into baseball too."

But now it is football season and Randle El is focusing on winning, and has coach Cam Cameron to help guide him on his way.

Cameron said that Randle El is equivalent, if not better, than the quarterbacks he's coached in the past, including NFL players Jim Harbaugh and Elvis Grbac. Cameron also coached with the Washington Redskins.

"His approach to practice is like the NFL quarterbacks I've seen," Cameron said. "The good quarterbacks I've been around treat practice as a game (as Randle El does). Physically he has a different style than I've been around, but he is the most athletic I've seen. His practicing and his athleticism are the most similar (to NFL quarterbacks)."

After college, Randle El would like to continue on playing one of his sports professionally, but if that does not turn out to be an option, the sport broadcast major would like to pursue a career related to sports.

"If I don't make it into someone's pro league I'll like to give broadcasting a try," Randle El said. "It's not really a dream, but it's something I've always wanted to do."

Banged-up Hoosiers limp into Iowa City

Indiana has performed below expectations, but remains confident.

By Lisa Colonno
The Daily Iowan

The Indiana football team is not where it wants to be.

After suffering a 59-0 loss last week to Wisconsin, the Hoosiers are 3-4 overall (2-2 in the Big Ten) and are looking to improve in almost every area.

Hoosier football appeared to be on the upswing the past two seasons under fourth-year coach Cam Cameron. In the preseason, everything seemed to be in place for Indiana football to be in the national spotlight throughout 1999.

Bloomington, Ind. was home to 1998's Big Ten Freshman of the Year and one of CNN/Sports Illustrated's 11 front-runners for the 1999 Heisman Trophy, sophomore quarterback Antwaan Randle El. In 1998, defensive end Adewale Ogunleye set the IU record for sacks (26.5) and tackles (53) and earned preseason All-America honors from Playboy magazine.

But things have not gone according to plan.

During Indiana's homecoming game Oct. 9 against Northwestern, senior Ogunleye sustained a season-ending knee injury.

And last week's loss to Wisconsin did not showcase any of Indiana's finer points. The Indiana defense gave up 705 total offensive yards to the Badgers, 461 of them rushing. The Hoosiers totaled 278 on offense.

But Cameron is not attributing the shutout by Wisconsin to the loss of Ogunleye. He plainly stated that his team just needs to improve as a whole.

"I don't want to buy into the 'Wale letdown,'" Cameron said. "It's hopefully not as big of a factor as everyone thinks. We ran into an awfully good Wisconsin football team. They came at us from the start and we didn't handle it very well. By the time our guys realized what happened we were down 21-to-nothing. We didn't handle the situation well at all.

"Our focus has been on the fact that we've got to get a lot better as a football team. We have to get back to work, put that game behind us and flat out get better for upcoming ballgames."

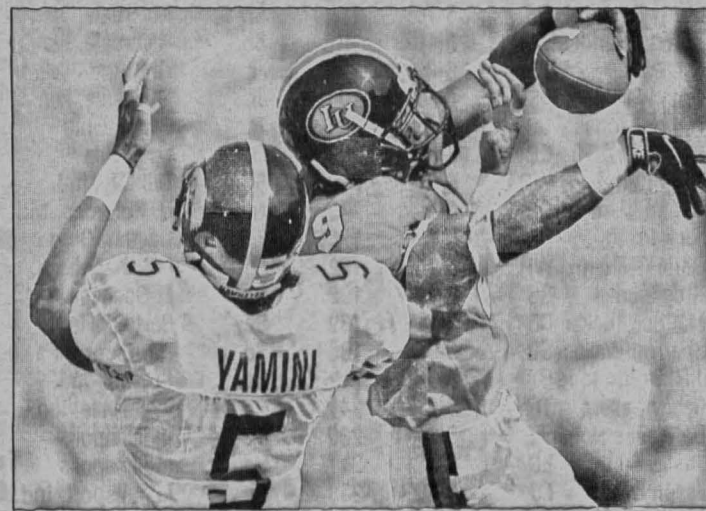

And Randle El said that getting better is necessary in all areas.

"We need to improve as a whole team playing together," Randle El said. "Our offense and defense have not been playing together. We need both sides of the football playing well."

Indiana's remaining four games are against Big Ten opponents Iowa, Michigan, Minnesota and Purdue.

Sophomore linebacker Justin Smith cited the last four games as the most important part of the season, and as the time when the Hoosiers need to really gel as a team.

"As a team we've done good, done bad, done good, done bad," Smith said. "We are trying to keep getting better as a team and are working on being more physical. The Big Ten is one of the most physical leagues (in the country) and our last four games of the season are when the Big Ten season really starts."

The "start" of the Big Ten season is Saturday at Kinnick.

This season, both teams are in a position of needing to prove themselves, which could add to the excitement Saturday.

"In the second half of the Northwestern game (Iowa) played their best football," Cameron said. "They gave up a touchdown late in the game that cost them the game and I know they feel that their backs are against the wall. They're at home for Homecoming. I think they'll obviously be ready to play and obviously I hope we've learned something. Although this game won't have the national spotlight this is a big, big football game for both teams and it's a big, big football game for us."

Pospisil an unlikely Hawkeye hero

■ The fifth-year senior has gone from just a student to a starting defensive end in five years.

By Greg Wallace
The Daily Iowan

If there was an award for longest road traveled to a starting slot on the Iowa football team, Scott Pospisil would win, hands down.

In five years, he has gone from not even being an Iowa student, to a walk-on, to finally earning a starting role at defensive end.

When his college career began, he wasn't a football player. He was just another face in the crowd, a student at the University of Nebraska. Admittedly, there "wasn't exactly a gold rush" of interested schools, and UNL was no different. The Huskers had expressed no interest in Pospisil walking on, so he was pursuing his degree in sociology.

Part of the reason that he went to Nebraska can be attributed to the fact that he didn't have a Division I body. He was an all-state elite team selection at center, yet he weighed only 200 pounds and wrestled in the 189 lb. class.

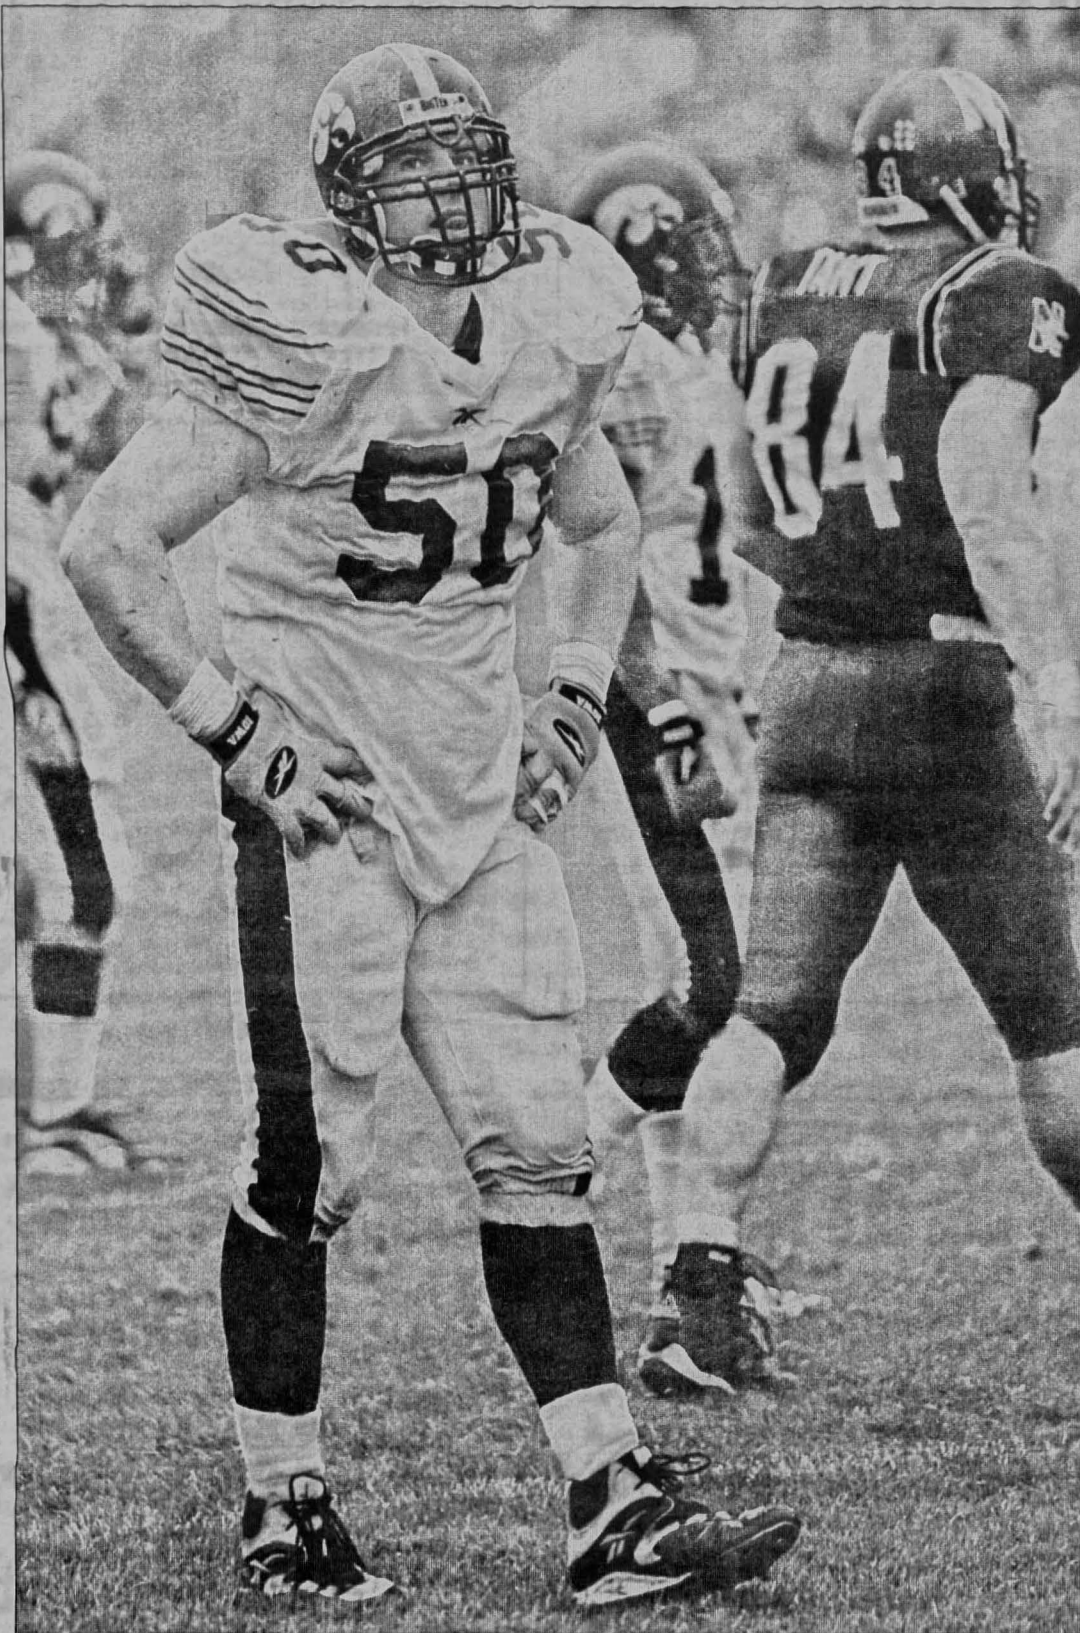

"I think a lot of the schools that came by after my senior year saw me when I was cutting weight for wrestling," Pospisil said. "So I might have been too small," he joked.

After spending the second semester of his Nebraska year playing rugby, of all things, the competitive fires flared for the Mount Vernon native. He was headed back to Iowa, who had offered to let him walk on out of high school, and decided to take the Hawkeyes up on their offer.

"I was coming back here anyway," Pospisil said. "To be close to family and financial reasons, and I just ended up playing football."

He was a bit wary of coming into the program without a scholarship, but that quickly faded.

"I'd heard a lot of horror stories about walk-ons being treated badly, but I think I was just treated like anyone else who starts on the bottom of the totem pole," Pospisil said. "I had to fight a lot, but things have turned out all

Scott Pospisil wears a dejected look on his face during Iowa's 23-21 loss to Northwestern Oct. 16 in Evanston, Ill. The fifth-year senior has fought his way from being a walk-on into a starting role at defensive end.

Indeed they have. Pospisil began the season as the second-string defensive end, and has moved into a starting role due to the sprained ankle that Ed Saidat suffered against Northwestern. He won't be a neophyte on the field against Antwaan Randle El, though. He's fourth on the team in tackles, and is tied for the lead in sacks and tackles for a loss.

His stats are all the more impressive when you consider that 1999 marks Pospisil's first significant playing time. He didn't even have a tackle to his name. He was a longshot to contribute, much less start in 1999.

One gets the feeling that Pospisil would be happy just about anywhere on the football field; anything from defense to the grunt work of special teams would please him.

"I just like playing, the amount of time doesn't really matter to me," he said. "As long as I get to play, and help the team win, that's all I care about."

It's not the easiest thing to move from the scout team to a starter's role. The fastest route to stardom usually doesn't involve the starting offensive linemen pushing you around, or Ladell Betts leaving cleat marks on your back. Somehow, Pospisil did get noticed, though. He was 1998's defensive scout team player of the year.

"It's hard," Pospisil said. "It's not easy to move up from there. On the scout team you really don't get a chance to show what you can do."

Ferentz credits his success to pure effort.

"Boy, what a great football player, what a great motor," Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz said. "If he's blocked, he refuses to stay blocked. And that's a big part about playing defense."

Before the season, the most notable thing about him was his hair. Pospisil sports a funky, dyed black 'do, and long, scraggly sideburns that would make the King proud. It's gotten him a good share of ribbing, even from the more unlikely sources.

"Scott's also got a nice looking hairdo," Ferentz said. "You've got to love his hairdo, it's the Elvis look."

"Before the season, I just wanted to dye my hair black," Pospisil said. "I had my head shaved for so long, that it was a real big surprise for a lot of people."

Some players are made on the field, while others are made in the weight room. Pospisil definitely falls in the latter category. He's gained over 60 pounds of muscle mass since high school, and now weighs 260 pounds. He came out of nowhere to become second-string defensive end when the season began, due to his intensity in workouts and conditioning.

"I've talked about Scott from day one," Ferentz said. "I've been impressed with him, as has the whole staff. Starting with the winter workouts, the weight room, he's a football player. He doesn't look like one. You go into the locker room, and you say, how's he doing it, he's not this big strapping guy."

Ferentz may have been misguided; he didn't look in the right place. Pospisil may not have the body or credentials of a first-team All-American, but inside, he's a unanimous selection.

The Pospisil File

1995: Student at Nebraska. Studied sociology and played rugby second semester.

1996: Transferred to Iowa, walked onto the team during the spring semester.

1997: Saw limited game action but recorded no tackles or sacks. Won defensive scout team MVP against Michigan.

1998: Saw game action against Purdue, but recorded no tackles or sacks. Won scout team MVP against Illinois, and was selected as defensive scout team Player of the Year.

1999: Saw first significant game action at defensive end. Through six games, has 37 tackles, five tackles for a loss and three sacks. Is tied for team lead in sacks and tackles for loss.

High School: Named to Des Moines Register all-state elite team as a center his senior year, an all state selection both junior and senior seasons. Mt. Vernon won Class 2-A title two years in a row.

PREGAME PICK

Homecoming is a time for memories. It's a weekend full of things like gathering around the bonfire, alumni revisiting their old haunts, and cheering on the various floats in the parade on Friday night.

The Hawkeye football team would like to be inspired by all of that, but they don't have time. They just need a win. Oh, how they need a win.

While it won't be nearly as easy as the horn o' plenty the offense enjoyed last time the Hoosiers were homecoming guests, a 62-0 pasting in 1997, (Remember Rob Thein trying to kill the clock and still getting a 40 yard touchdown? Ah, memories...) Indiana should be just what the Hawkeyes need.

The Hoosiers gave up 704 yards of total offense to Wisconsin last week, and are without their best defender, end Adinwale Ogunleye, gone for the year with a knee injury. They couldn't stop anybody with "Wally." They sure aren't going to start now. That 704 could have been much worse if Ron Dayne had even bothered to take the field for the second half.

Meanwhile, Iowa is still licking its wounds after one of the more heartbreaking losses I've ever seen a Hawkeye team take. There's light at the end of the tunnel, however.

I can see signs of life in Iowa's offense. Ladell Betts ran through one of the biggest holes the offensive line has produced all year for his 74 yard touchdown. Randy Reiners has executed the short passing game well, and the receivers are competent if anything else. Ferentz may have finally found the right combination when he moved A.J. Blazek back into the line-

The defense has looked good at times and horrible at others. Can you think of any worse time than the last drive of the game to have a breakdown? I sure can't. They have to put it together and play a whole game, no matter how tired the offense's ineptitude leaves them. Fred Barr, Colin Cole, and D.J. Johnson help, but they have to play like they have four years of experience, not four games.

The X factor in all of this is Antwaan Randle El, the multi-talented Indiana quarterback. He's the team's leading rusher and passer, and is probably the scariest player in the Big Ten for opposing defenses.

When I think scary, I tend to think of the Iowa defense. I have a good feeling about their chances against Randle El, though.

Iowa has faced option quarterbacks three times this season; Nebraska's Bobby Newcombe, Penn State's Rashard Casey, and Northwestern's Zak Kustok. With the exception of several Casey runs and Kustok's game winner last week, the defense has contained the option well.

Iowa won't be playing for bowl games Saturday. They'll be playing for pride, which is one of the few things this team has in abundance. I have my doubts that Matt Bowen or Randy Reiners are going to let anyone quit, be the record 9-1 or 1-9.

This team loves Ferentz and each other. They want to prove all of the naysayers wrong.

Picks To Click

Greg Wallace,
Pregame co-editor: Ladell Betts. When he gets some blocking, he can do wonders.

Mike Kelly,
Pregame co-editor: Scott Pospisil. He looks like Neil Young.

Megan Manfull,
Daily Iowan sports editor: Vincent Wilson. This special teams specialist turned heads last week, and he'll force a big tumble this week.

They also remember losing at Indiana last year, an equally unpleasant feeling. This team isn't the kind that will stand for a winless Big Ten slate.

The team has yet to put together a full 60 minutes of football. That will be a point of emphasis this week. If they can put one together, and keep Randle El in check, who knows what could happen? These guys want a win almost as much as they need one. And I don't anticipate anyone quitting on the season until the Kinnick clock reads 0:00 November 20 against Minnesota.

It won't be 62-0, but it will be a win. And that's something that just might put a smile on Kirk Ferentz's face.

NATIONAL GUARD ARMORY

COLLEGE FINANCING 101

Each year thousands of college students are forced to drop out. The problem is not with their academic standing, it is their financial status. They can't pass or CLEP out of "College Financing 101." The Iowa Army National Guard has over $36,000 available to each student who qualifies. Through programs such as the Montgomery G.I. Bill, 50% Tuition Assistance and Guard pay, students can concentrate on grades, not bills. The Guard offers hands-on experience, as well as technical and leadership training.

All it takes is about two days a month and two weeks a year. Serving your country and community today can help build a better tomorrow.

This Week in the Big Ten

Title picture gets clearer this week

THIS WEEK IN THE BIG TEN

It's getting to be that time in the Big Ten season where the contenders are separated from the teams that are not worthy of that status. Each team except for Penn State has at least one loss, meaning there's not much leeway if teams want to continue their championship dreams. Pasadena (and points beyond) are starting to slip away, meaning there will be an added intensity to the games played this week.

In fact, every game except for the one being played at Kinnick has bowl implications for both teams involved. The only bad thing about the Iowa game this weekend is the 1 o'clock start, meaning you won't get to see another complete conference game, unless you don't attend the game. But you wouldn't shirk your Hawkeye loyalty like that, would you? That's what I thought.

Penn State at Purdue

Is that Purdue/Michigan State game finally over? If Purdue fans miss valuable drinking time Saturday, they should blame Drew Brees. He's an entire offense all by himself. Brees put himself back into the Heisman race with an amazing five score, 509 yard day against a tough Michigan State team. And another great chance for exposure awaits, as No. 2 Penn State comes into Ross-Ade. Purdue is the kind of team that can lose to any contender by 20 or beat them by 20, which makes them extremely dangerous.

The Boilers' chances for the Rose Bowl are dim, but the Outback or Citrus still sound attainable, as are Brees' Heisman aspirations.

Penn State is riding high atop the conference. This will be their biggest test before the Michigan and Michigan State games November 6th and 13th. JoePa didn't let his players talk to the media before last week, citing too many interview requests. Yet the players that talked had no problem. Maybe the pressure is just too much for Joe. He'd better win to get our minds off of his strange ways. You know what? I think he will.

Penn State 35, Purdue 32 Michigan State at Wisconsin

The loser of this game will be eliminated from the Big Ten title chase. Both teams have one loss, and another would be devastating. Michigan State showed its pass defense is vulnerable after giving up 509 passing yards to Brees and Purdue last weekend. Luckily for the Spartans, Wisconsin does the majority of its travel by ground. The Badgers' leading passer, freshman Brooks Bollinger, has 502 yards all season.

The biggest question in Madison is whether or not Ron Dayne can break Ricky Williams' career rushing record. He needs 697 yards, and has four games to do it. That's 175 yards per game. The Spartans allow 39.9 yards per game rushing. Ouch. Once the Spartans get done with his average, Dayne's gonna wish he hadn't donned a baseball cap for the second half of all of the Badgers' blowouts this year.

Michigan State will have their heads screwed on tight after getting a little cocky, then a lot blown out, against Purdue. The Badgers have a tradition of folding when it matters. It will continue.

Michigan State 27, Wisconsin 17

Ohio State at Minnesota

This isn't as bad of a matchup as it might have appeared initially. Ohio State's collection of young talent, which has failed to step up, has downgraded it from perennial title contender status to a team that thinks El Paso looks good. And Minnesota has stepped up into an up-and-comer role, losing only to Wisconsin in overtime. If you can believe it, the Gophers need only one more win to go to a bowl for the first time in 13 years.

The Gophers are the best team playing in the Dome this year, considering the Vikings' struggles. The Buckeyes are flirting with .500 for the first time since John Cooper's first season, 1988. Steve Bellasari needs to start looking like a veteran in a hurry, or it might happen again. Wake up the Liberty Bowl scouts, the Gophers are back! Were they ever here? I don't know.

Minnesota 24, Ohio State 19

Illinois at Michigan

See, I told you the Illini weren't ready. Put those damn blue sweatshirts back in the closet, suburbanites, they're still not welcome at Kinnick. Illinois teased us, but three straight Big Ten losses prove that they aren't a bowl contender. This week's trip to Michigan should only provide further evidence along the same lines.

Ian Gold and the rest of the Michigan defense won't be happy after getting torched by Bill Burke and Plaxico Burress two weeks ago. Kurt Kittner will be just the antidote that they need.

The Wolverines are smarting after losing to Michigan State, and they've had a week to stew about it. They're in the Big House, and that will only make things tougher for the Illini. This one won't be pretty. Chalk up another "learning experience" for Ron Turner. It's just what he doesn't need.

Alford ready for action at Black and Gold Blowout

■ Saturday will be the first time the new Iowa coach sees his players in live action.

By Mike Kelly
The Daily Iowan

Not even Steve Alford knows what to expect from his Iowa basketball team this season.

The new Iowa coach has seen his players on tape, watched them work out individually and talked to them about schemes, but has not gotten to see them play five on five.

Saturday's Black and Gold Blowout will be Alford's first glimpse at his team in a game setting. The intrasquad scrimmage starts 30 minutes following the conclusion of the Iowa-Indiana football game. Tipoff is set for 5:00 or 5:05 P.M., according to the Iowa sports information department.

"There really is no overview to this season," Alford said. "Your first look will be my first look. There are a lot of questions and the answers to those questions are still up in the air."

One of the big questions Alford referred to was lack of size. The tallest player in the projected starting lineup is Jacob Jaacks at 6-foot-8 and the only player taller than that on the Iowa roster is 7-foot-2 reserve center Antonio Ramos.

Iowa could play with as many as four guards at a time this season to counter their dearth of size with a higher degree of quickness.

Alford said one of the biggest challenges will be figuring out which players fit into what role under the new system.

"That is one of the exciting things about the team this year," Alford said. "There are no set positions yet. All our guys know there are a lot of positions to be won, and that should make for some pretty fierce competition."

With only 21 practices before Iowa travels to New York to play the defending national champion UConn Huskies, this year's Black and Gold Blowout could take on greater meaning than in the past.

Iowa fans will also get to witness the new style of play the Alford regime brings to Iowa City.

Alford expects his Hawkeyes to play an uptempo man-to-man defense, and he said his players better be in shape in order to survive the first few weeks of practice.

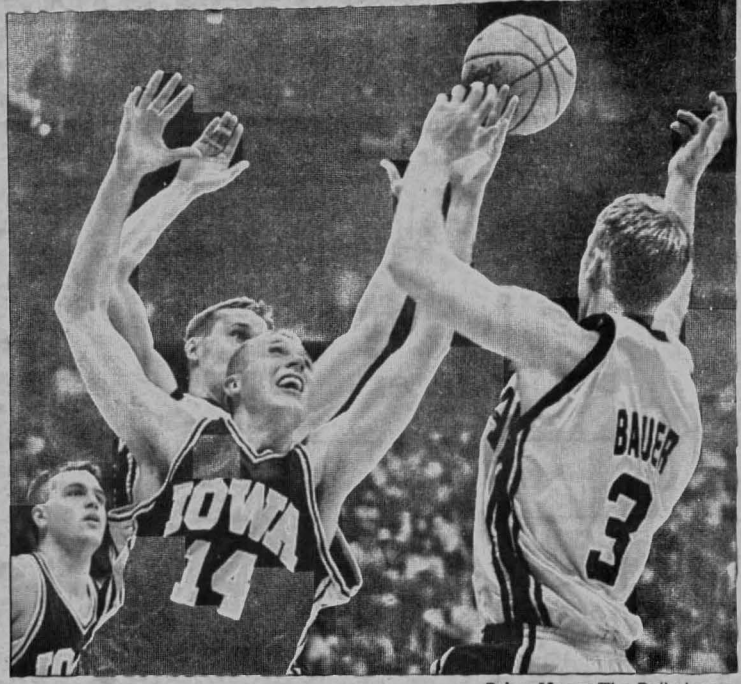

"Our first three days of practice, these guys will wonder if we do any shooting around here," Alford said. "There are some changes that are taking place in our style of play that places a heavy emphasis on man-to-man defense."

Junior college transfers Rob Griffin and Joe Fermino will also see their first action under the lights of Carver-Hawkeye Arena. The two transfers may play a pivotal role in the success of the Iowa team this season.

Alford said their roles would depend on how quickly the two adapted to the speed and intensity of Division I basketball.

Griffin said he was ready to step in and play.

"I'm ready for Big Ten basketball," Griffin said. "This is what I've been waiting for my whole life. I'm ready for the physical play in the Big Ten, I'm used to doing it, I've been doing it my whole life. It is better than running up and down the floor all the time."

Brian Moore/The Daily Iowan

Iowa center Jacob Jaacks blocks Jason Bauer's shot at last year's Black and Gold Blowout. You can see Jaacks and the rest of this year's Hawkeye team Saturday following the football game.

Shooting guard Kyle Galloway will also see his first action as a Hawkeye in over a year.

The sophomore missed all of last season with a back injury.

Galloway played in the Prime Time League this summer and said his back held up fine and should be playing at 100% this season.

Tickets for the Black and Gold Blowout cost $5 and are available at Carver-Hawkeye the day of the game.
