"Early voting is more convenient people can choose when and where to vote," Slockett said. "Over time, there is more and more selection by the voters to vote early. I think, to a degree, this is a continuing trend.

New book store seen as threat by some

■ The Book Market may be a temporary solution to Old Capitol Mall's vacancy problem.

By Avian Carrasquillo The Daily Iowan

While regenerating excitement in the Old Capitol Mall, the Book Market may spell trouble for local book stores. Mall officials announced Monday that on Nov. 11, the Book Market, a national publisher buyback store, will move into the 25,000-square-foot first-floor area of the old JCPenney store. "Basically, what we do is buy older books from publishers and sell them at a discount. They're not used, and we're not a second-hand book store," said Bryon Switala, a Book Market field supervisor. The Book Market is a temporary tenant - meaning it will stay approximately three months and review sales before deciding whether to leave, he said. Rockwell Williams, a general manager at Northside Book Market, 203

N. Linn St., is concerned about the temporary store. Northside Book Market deals primarily with rare and used books. "We like books. The more books the better; but what we don't like is the big chains swooping in and taking money from small, independent-owned book stores," he said. Williams also doubts whether the store will stay long in Iowa City. "You know it's only here to get the Christmas money and run," Williams said. The Book Market will have an impact on sales at Iowa City Book & Supply, 8 S. Clinton St., said Pete Vanderhoef, general manager. "It has a ground-floor location and a big space, so it'll attract some customers," he said. Jim Harris, owner of Prairie Lights Books, 15 S. Dubuque St., is waiting to see what impact his competition will have and would not comment.

Jean Bride, the store manager of B. Dalton Bookseller, located only a few stores down from the new Book Market in Old Capitol Mall, also refused to comment

■ Two UI students complete the Chicago Marathon.

> By Kate Thayer The Daily Iowan

Determination and a competitive nature are traits that UI students Jessica Levai-Baird and Bob Holschuh Simmons shared when they completed the Chicago Marathon on Oct. 24.

UI senior Levai-Baird, a mechanical engineering major, qualified for next April's Boston Marathon with a time of 3:33:07. Simmons, a graduate student in classics, finished with a time of 2:21:35, making him one of 100 runners eligible to lace up his blue and orange Adidases and compete at the Olympic Trials in May.

Of his seven marathons, this is Simmons' first time qualifying for 'Qualifying has been my goal for five years," he said. "This was my second time running in the Chicago Marathon, and I was able to take off about five minutes from my time to qualify."

In order to qualify for the trials, men had to run the marathon in under 2 hours and 22 minutes, while women had to finish with a time of 2 hours and 50 minutes or better.

"During the race, I took it easy for the first half and ran the second half stronger," he said.

Simmons said he trained more than ever before this year, running between 100 and 120 miles every week, with his high being 143 miles. But he said he doesn't expect to qualify for the 2000 games.

"I was very focused on hitting my mile splits and was confident I could pull this off," he said. "Qualifying for the Olympics is not something I'm realistic about. I'm just happy to have achieved getting to the trials."

Simmons was not the only UI student running toward a goal at the Chicago Marathon. Fellow competitor Levai-Baird was determined to qualify for the Boston Marathon at her second Chicago Marathon. Levai-Baird began to feel the intensity around mile 20 of the race. "They call it the half-way point of the marathon," she said. "You are so tired, but you still have six miles." Last year, it was these last six miles that slowed her down, keeping her from Boston Marathon qualification, Levai-Baird said.

This year, I was more prepared in my training and felt better during the race," she said. Maintaining her pace gave her confidence in reaching her goal, Levai-Baird said.

"I knew if I just kept going at the UI senior Jessica Lavai-Baird and UI graduate student Bob Holschuh Simmons both ran in the Chicago Marathon and achieved their goals.

same speed, I would make it to Levai-Baird used a training program that she found in Runner's World magazine, which consisted of running 40-50 miles a week. Training with friends who ran the race made it easier to stick to the 18week program, she said. Though she was never a member of the UI women's cross country or track teams, she was a coxswain for the UI women's rowing team during her freshman and sophomore years. She said she appreciated the

she said. "My dad even ran with me during miles 11 through 19, which really kept me going." Among the crowd was UI senior Stephanie Schrader, Levai-Baird's roommate. "It was neat to see Jessica finish after all of her hard work throughout the fall and summer, running almost every day," she said. "I guess it was the determination of qualifying for Boston that got her through it.'

Levai-Baird plans to continue with athletics and to run a marathon every year.

Schools may hedge budget cuts

An enrollment increase may save the district money.

By Anne Huyck The Daily Iowan

Although the Iowa City School Board members and the School District superintendent are hesitant to utter the words, they say this school year could very well be the first one in a while in which the district is not facing extensive bud-

Forty more students are enrolled in the district this year than last year, but the projected number the district based its funding on for this year was 100 students fewer than are actually enrolled for the 1999-00 school year.

As a result of the increase in a year predicted to be a decrease, the School District is receiving money administrators did not anticipate when drawing up the budget.

For each student enrolled in the district, it receives $4,200 to $4,300 from state funding, said Jim Behle, the interim associate superintendent.

"It's not definite, but we hope the situation is that we won't have to make significant cuts," he said.

Depending on salary settlements, which will begin at the end of November, the district could easily avoid budget cuts similar to the past two years' cuts, Superintendent Lane Plugge said.

"It costs more to educate extra students, too," he said. "But that, and more in our unspent balance, could be favorable to the budget."

Plugge said that no matter what happens with the teachers' contract settlements, he doesn't predict massive budget cuts.

"We should be in a lot better shape than anticipated," he said.

The 1999-00 enrollment report submitted by Behle Tuesday also showed that enrollment is increasing in schools primarily on the West Side of the district.

Behle said the West Side numbers may lead to "boundary needing changes on that side of the river."

Plugge also found the report's results informative, especially about classes in the district that are larger than the average class size.

"The enrollment and demographic changes affect us, especially as we look at the bubbles and sub-groups," he said. "They will be a factor in future decisions and staffing."

The enrollment report, coupled with a North Central Association report that suggested more mentoring in vocational and career education programs, led Lauren Reece, a school board member, to wonder if there should be schools within schools to better educate students, especially at the high school level.

"It's a national movement, and it is appealing to break down schools," she said. "I think it will make schools friendlier, safer, more communityoriented and make more people

The council received an UI ombudgerson report concerning faculty-leave policies that stated, "Omissions and ambiguities in policies governing faculty leaves of absence frequently cause difficulties for both faculty members and students. For example, it is often unclear what obligations faculty owe to existing grad-

"These difficulties can be solved by simply reminding departmental chairmen and -women to make faculty aware and able to deal with their students." said Jonathan Carlson, the council pres-

International Day focuses on rights

■ The event stresses the importance of human rights to middle school and high school students.

> By Chris Rasmussen The Daily Iowan

The UI International Day Tuesday drew more than 200 area high school and middle school students to the IMU Main Ballroom, where they had the opportunity to learn about global human rights while interacting with one another.

The third annual event, sponsored by the UI Office of International Education in the College of Education, included four panelists who related their experiences with human-rights issues. The students were invited to respond to the panelists with comments or stories of their own.

The comment that "you can't change a racist" by seventh-grader Gabe Dean of Taft Middle School, Cedar Rapids, got a quick response from panelist Ellie Keen, a British Dean's remark and the subsequent student responses were what the day was all about, said Paul Retish, the director of the international education office.

"All of these things we're talking about are controversial," he said.

Measuring ingredients for a presidential candidate

Now that the smoke has cleared after last week's Republican and Democratic debates, we can return to the business of taking care of our families, making the economy work, and doing all those other important things that require no government oversight or intervention.

We ought to be thankful for this brief respite from the rhetorical chicanery. If the candidates had made one more undeliverable promise to save Social Security, reform the health care system so as to eliminate all suffering and disease, and transform public schools into an Elysian paradise, we may have just decided to hold them to it.

Eventually, though, as responsible citizens, the time will come to examine the candidates and learn their positions on various issues (or you can decide based on whose name most often hits the headlines and whose cash box is the fullest).

The following are a list of questions for separating the wheat from the chaff, for deciding which candidate is truly a winner and worthy of your support, and which wants to use elected office for self-aggrandizement:

• Does the candidate talk ad nauseam about his qualifications and how these will enable him to solve all your problems?

• Does the candidate refuse to answer questions or provide only limited public exposure to his ideas?

• Does the candidate mention autobiographical elements that tell you a lot about his past but little about the country's future?

If the answer to any of the above is yes, such a candidate is not worthy of the voters' support (and we can all think of several who fit this category). On the other hand, if the candiport (and we can all think of several who fit this category). On the other hand, if the candidate meets these criteria below, he ought to be promptly elected:

• The candidate is deeply knowledgeable about American history and law and adheres to a developed sense of the nation's identity and purpose as expressed in the founding documents.

• The candidate often tells you what you don't want to hear, prescribing, like a good physician, an unpleasant but necessary remedy.

• The candidate speaks to you like an adult, expressing respect for your intellect and responsibility as a moral agent.

• The candidate gives fundamentally the same message regardless of the setting and audience, refusing to pander and flatter, or to disguise his views to please the listeners. If the candidate is eloquent, all the better, because the ability to articulate a conviction is directly related to the strength of that conviction.

There are candidates (even presidential ones) who meet the above criteria. It is our responsibility to elect them.

Website enhances notion of representative government

Congressmen and congresswomen purporting to vote according to the will of the people can now expect a barrage of information from their constituents ... whether they like it or not.

Sunday evening, former Clinton adviser and current FoxNews analyst Dick Morris opened the doors on his new Web site, Vote.com (http://www.vote.com). It represents an interesting paradigm shift in the mechanics of national politics.

Vote.com presents a number of issues and allows voters to offer their opinions, which are instantly forwarded to their senators and representatives. What Vote.com does is bring the legislative power structure in line with what our Founding Fathers envisioned 200-plus years ago. Representative democracy is based, obviously, on "representation." Unfortunately, barriers in communication have prevented this from happening throughout our nation's his-

Vote.com erases some of these barriers. Anyone with an Internet connection can point and click her or his opinions to Congress. Just as importantly, Vote.com sends each voter an Election Eve summary detailing how their representatives voted on the issues in Congress. No longer will voters have to rely on ads or spend hours looking up roll call votes.

Vote.com does have some drawbacks. First, the likelihood of congressmen and congresswomen reading the e-mail from Vote.com is comparable with the probability of them opening their own voter mail. On the other hand, though, many of them do see their own e-mailboxes, and a titanic flood of messages dealing with a specific issue may be enough to make boxes, and a titanic flood of messages dealing with a specific issue may be enough to make them think twice — or, in the case of some, think at all.

Second, because Vote.com is a product of the Internet Age, it is only available to those with Internet access, which is still rare (but increasing) below the middle-class tax brackets. As computer prices drop, enabling more homes, schools and libraries to buy them, this bias toward the middle-and upper-classes will disappear.

Vote.com (and its founder) may not be perfect, but it is an excellent change in the Beltway power structure. If particular congressmen, congresswomen and interest groups can't stand the heat, they should get out of the kitchen — a process that Vote.com will be more than happy to facilitate.

Gore summary misses mark

I am writing in response to The Daily lowan's coverage of Vice President Al Gore's visit to the UI on Oct. 28. The story by the DI reporter, in the lead sentence of the article, described the event as resembling "a religious service more than a campaign speech."

I was puzzled by this characterization, as were several other people I talked to who were at the speech. Those who were not at the event and relied on the DI for its coverage might be left with a false impression of Gore's speech from the article. In his speech, the vice president spoke movingly of the struggle of Americans since the nation's founding to make good on the promise of democracy and freedom. He also suggested what he might do as president to eradicate discrimination and to create opportunity for all. To depict his remarks as more religious than political is misleading.

Jason K. Duncan

Gore coverage unimpressive

Regardless of political affiliation, it is a momentous event when the vice president of the United States elects to visit your campus. While we are huge fans of Halloween, we cannot understand the editorial judgment that led a story about a big bone collection to take precedence over Al Gore's speaking at our campus (DI, Oct. 29). The Ul community relies heavily on The Daily Iowan for accurate news coverage. It is unfortunate that the Gore event was misrepresented in such a popular

Ironically enough, the top headline is about a snafu remedy and the summary reads, "The grad student union will hold a rally to address the UI's recent spate of payroll glitches."

News flash — Students for Gore held a rally, an enormous one.

The Oct. 28 DI predicted that 500 people would attend the event — a prediction shattered on Oct. 28 in the IMU Main Ballroom and overflow room in the Main Lounge. The 1,400 people that attended made the event the largest rally for the vice president in lowaduring the campaign.

An entire press plane of media flew in to cover the event, and somehow a payroll snafu ends up being more newsworthy than a national media event.

Perhaps in a deadline haste, reporter Steve Schmadeke overlooked the fact that the state's largest Gore rally, hosted by a student organization, happened at our very own IMU. Context is crucial in journalism. Gore's quote "Let me hear you say amen" was completely taken out of context. Gore was joking with the audience members who were being extremely vocal and outspoken in their agreement with his speech. He was witty and humorous. The 1,400 audience members signaled their approval with laughter.

To make the vice president sound like an evangelist rather than an articulate, intelligent candidate is misrepresentative and inaccurate. Please save your personal opinions for the editorial page.

Role models all around, from the athletic field to the penitentiary he past few weeks have provided a grand display of positive role models in the world of athletics.

Anybody watching baseball's World Series would have seen Darryl Strawberry, a Yankees star and past cocaine user, in action. At the same event, the multi-faceted Pete Rose — baseball legend, gambling pro and convicted felon — made an impressive return in a special ceremony.

And then, of course, there was Mike Tyson, who returned to the boxing ring after his latest jail stint. These were memorable moments, indeed, for all of us to behold. Children across the land had to have been awestruck by these impressive heroes. If anything, the respective returns of these legends prove the adage that a little hard work and perseverance will always work and perseverance will always prevail over jail sentences and suspensions

One of my own vices, which — with a little willpower of my own — I overcame, was my lasting appreciation of Mike Tyson. As a youngster, I was an unabashed fan of the boxer, but disilusionment set in sometime after his 1992 rape conviction. Losses are one thing for a kid to understand, but prison terms are quite another.

Nevertheless, Tyson resurfaced to the boxing scene a few years later. He knocked out some opponents and gnawed the bodily appendages off of others. Anyhow, I had just about given up on the guy when Tyson was sent to jail again last year for assaulting a motorist.

At about the same time, Strawberry was serving a suspension from baseball for another of his cocaine violations. Most sports pundits predicted that this was to spell the end of Strawberry's career, but, like a true hero, Darryl defied the odds. The moral? If you're going to be caught with cocaine, do it while playing for a good team

And after 10 years of banishment from baseball, Pete Rose was allowed onto a baseball field once again last week as part of a tribute to "Baseball's All-Century Team" (earlier in the evening, Rose attended another "All-Century Team" ceremony, hosted by the National Association of Sports Bookies in Las Vegas).

What did several thousand baseball fans have in mind for the Rose, who once bet on his own team and served time for tax evasion? A minute-long standing ovation, for one. Granted, this did occur in Georgia, but it was clear that ol' Pete was back in good graces with Americans once and for all.

So while it is easy to dismiss these athletic figures as troubled individuals best relegated to the dustbin of sports history, they keep coming back, and we keep our arms open for them.

When a guy can beat his wife, rape a beauty pageant contestant, sever an opponent's earlobe with his teeth, pummel an innocent man after a fender-bender and still get thousands of Americans to pay $50 to watch him fight some more, it is clear that no matter what any judge seeks to do with Tyson, the jury of American public opinion has given him a villains, and only in a society that glorifies some of its most delinquent members (seen any good Mafia films lately?) can somebody such as Tyson or Strawberry get a break. And if it's dedication the public likes to see in its sports stars, then that is exactly what it gets in any proathlete who has fallen into the clutches of the law.

Forget the athletes who make it to the big leagues despite any discouragement or injuries. Give us some people who have battled illicit drugs and felony convictions only to find success in the sports arena later on. Whether that's perseverance or dumb luck, it makes for good TV. Who doesn't want to see a little redemption, anyway? Triumphs over alcoholism and cocaine abuse provide a good storyline for anybody, whether they be baseball stars or GOP front-runners.

AMES — Tailgating before Iowa State University football games is starting to take on a more business-oriented twist.

Approximately 20 companies - including IBM, Novartis Seed Co. and Maytag - have rented red-and-gold tents on the northeast side of Jack Trice Stadium during ISU home games, making résumés a popular item for students to tote to games.

Business leaders, often decked out in Cyclone garb, sip beers, shake hands, and offer brochures and snacks to prospective employees. Students said they are discovering that schmoozing at the tents might help them land a job.

"I know lots of people who go to them. For me, I think it's helped," said Andrew Kilborn, 22, an industrial technology major who will graduate in May.

Earlier this fall, Kilborn stopped by a tent reserved by Pella Corp. of Story City, Iowa, after he spotted an invitation on campus. Company officials later invited him to the Nebraska-ISU game on Oct. 9 in Lincoln, Neb.

Kilborn admitted that it will probably take more than attending a tailgate party to secure a job or internship.

"It's just like searching for a job," he said. "If you call or visit over and over, you have a better chance for a job or internship than if you sit around and do nothing.

DI: What are the things you would like to see yourself do this season this season?

RT: I want to try to be more than one-dimensional this season. There are many aspects of my game that I did not get to show a lot of last year. I have to develop my defense around the perimeter, too.

DI: Do you ever think about last year and the things you could have done?

RT: Sometimes I think about last year, but it just gives me motivation for this year. I wish I would have redshirted, but I think things will work out.

DI: Did you ever think about transferring? RT: The thought crossed my mind, but I didn't want to bail out. I knew I could play when I got the opportunity to do that. DI: Last year your nickname was "Bucket." Are you trying to get a new nickname this year? RT: I have a new nickname this year: "Rick." It comes from Rick Mahorn. I like "Rick" because people are afraid of him. DI: You came to Iowa with Joey Range. When he left did he ever try and influence your decision to stay at Iowa?

RT: Me and him did not really talk about it. When we got here, we kind of split apart. He did his thing and I did mine. I think it was in his best interest to leave.

reshman Tiffany Leister originally hoped to be named a starter for Iowa this season and make contributions whenever she was on the field.

That goal was accomplished by the end of her first weekend in a Hawkeve uniform.

Leister scored two goals in the Hawkeye Invitational as a preview of what has turned out to be a great regular season. With a total of 27 points (11 goals, 5 assists), Leister's strength in scoring and aggressive team, because I had no idea what my role was," Leister said. "The coaches never really expressed that because everyone was on the same playing field at the beginning of the season and we had to fight for spots."

Originally her fourth choice to play collegiate field hockey, Leister selected Iowa over powerhouses University of Maryland, Ohio State and Old Dominion coming out of high school. With only a slight idea of Iowa's back-to-back mediocre seasons, Leister focused on the fact that Iowa had five Big Ten titles and a long tradition of excellence under coach Beth Beglin during her recruiting visit last year.

Team unity was a big factor, and Leister added that there was extra incentive added by another team-

"Iowa was my second to last choice at first. I just got a gut feeling, though, and remember saying to my mom on the plane, I am going to go to school here," Leister said. "It is funny because I could not believe that I was going to school with Anita Miller too."

Chicago bids farewell

Small monuments were set up around the city in rememberance of Walter Payton Tuesday.

> By Eric Fidler Associated Press

CHICAGO - Flags at half staff whipped in the cold November wind outside Soldier Field on Tuesday.

But the day after his death, many spoke more of Walter Payton the man than Walter Payton the running back.

There aren't many players one can idolize as a child and still look up to them as an adult. Walter is one of the few," Sandy Fox of Chicago wrote in a message posted on the Chicago Bears' Web site.

Payton, the NFL's career rushing leader, died Monday of bile duct cancer that was discovered during treatment for a rare liver disease. He was 45.

With no obvious spot for fans to express condolences - Soldier Field is removed from downtown and Payton lived and worked outside the city - the sort of spontaneous memorials that often spring up after celebrity deaths were largely absent.

The Bears opened a gate at Soldier Field, and some fans dropped off bouquets and cards. More sent flowers to Payton's restaurant in suburban Aurora. At Mike Ditka's Restaurant, fans signed condolence cards and were encouraged to become organ donors.

Just north of Soldier Field on Lake Shore Drive, Mike Liberles brought his Crane High School class to the Field Museum's exhibit on Bears' history.

"I never missed a game when Payton was playing," Liberles said. His students, too young to remember Payton the running back, spoke of the man they knew through his charity work and the publicity about his illness. "He broke records but he didn't let all this stuff get to his head. He didn't act like he was better than everybody like Michael Jordan does," said Marcus Smith, 15.

The Bears announced Tuesday that a public memorial service for Payton will be held on Saturday from noon to 1:30 p.m. at Soldier Field. The current Bears team as well as several of Payton's former teammates are scheduled to attend.

A private, invitation-only service will be held at noon Friday at Life Changers Church in South Barrington. Private visitation will begin at 10 a.m.

Payton brought glory back to a storied franchise, and to a city that had gone more than two decades without sports championship when the Bears won the Super Bowl in 1986.

"You get disillusioned," said Mike Houlihan, a Chicago writer and lifelong Bears fan.

"Somebody like Walter Payton comes along and you get reborn as a fan," he said.

Juan Gonzalez is heading to Detroit, and Ken Griffey Jr. has asked to be traded closer to his family in Florida.

By Ronald Blum Associated Press

NEW YORK - Two of baseball's biggest stars sent shockwaves through the sport Tuesday.

Juan Gonzalez, the AL Most Valuable Player in 1996 and '98, was sent to Detroit by Texas in a nineplayer deal. Ken Griffey Jr., who won the award in 1997, asked the Seattle Mariners to trade him closer to his Florida home before the start of next season. "I guess it heated up over the last couple of days," Texas general manager Doug Melvin said. "We had talked about it at length." Going with Gonzalez to Detroit were pitcher Danny Patterson and catcher Gregg Zaun.

The Rangers received pitchers Justin Thompson, Alan Webb and Francisco Cordero, outfielder Gabe Kapler, catcher Bill Haselman and infielder Frank Catalanotto.

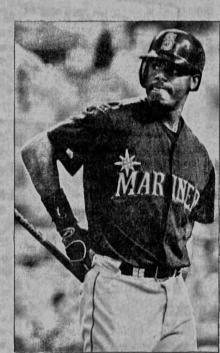

Detroit has until Saturday to exercise a $7.5 million option on Gonzalez, who turned 30 on Oct. 16. He is eligible for free agency after the 2000 season.

'We just weren't prepared to ... go into next season with that over our heads," Melvin said.

Gonzalez hit .326 with 39 home runs and 128 RBIs last season. He led the Rangers to AL West titles in 1996, 1998 and 1999 but they were eliminated all three times by the eventual World Series champion New York Yankees.

Griffey, a 10-time All-Star, hit 48 homers this year after hitting 56 in consecutive seasons. The center fielder, who turns 30 later this month, has 398 career homers and is thought to have the best chance among current players of breaking Hank Aaron's record of 755.

"This has been an extremely difficult decision for me," Griffey said in a joint statement he released with the team.

Ed Zurga/Associated Press Seattle's Ken Griffey Jr. has rejected the Mariners' eight-year contract offer and the team said Tuesday it will try to trade the 10-time All-Star.

Dodgers restructure Antonio Osuna's contract LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Los Angeles

Dodgers signed right-handed reliever Antonio Osuna to a one-year contract for next season with options for 2001 and 2002.

The agreement involved a restructuring of Osuna's contract, with the Dodgers declining to exercise their option for next season.

Osuna, 26, had no record with a 7.71 ERA in just five games with the Dodgers last season. He missed 148 games during three stints on the disabled list.

Tagliabue blames unusual NFL season on injuries, retirements

ROSEMONT, III. - The NFL has a new spin for a new story. The reason the 1999 season is "unusual," to use commissioner Paul Tagliabue's description, is because so many of its stars are hurt or have left the game.

"You have the retirement of John Elway and Barry Sanders, plus injuries to Dan Marino and Steve Young, Terrell Davis and Jamal Anderson," Tagliabue said as the NFL fall meetings began and ended on Tuesday.

This was a meeting in which nothing was planned and nothing was done, other than setting the stage for the spring meetings next March, when realignment to eight fourteam divisions will be one of the hot items on the agenda, along with more mundane business developments.

Sprewell signs with Knicks

NEW YORK — Latrell Sprewell and the New York Knicks finally ended their long negotiations, with the star guard signing a contract Tuesday that is believed to be worth $61.9 million for five years.

"I am thankful to be staying in New York,"

Sprewell said. "Since I got here, the fans have supported me and made me feel welcome. I hope to be part of the team that brings a championship back to New York."

Sprewell, who joined the Knicks last season, decided to take the team's long-term contract instead of a two-year, $21 million offer. For a time, it seemed Sprewell would accept the two-year deal.

Umpires striving for new union have their day

BALTIMORE — Dissident umpires met with their peers Tuesday and emerged certain they have enough votes to get rid of Richie Phillips and form a new union.

THE LEAF NOTES

Chargers suspend, fine Leaf

After yelling at Chargers personnel, Ryan Leaf was suspended from the team for four games.

> By Bernie Wilson Associated Press

SAN DIEGO - The short, troubled NFL career of Ryan Leaf hit a new low Tuesday when he was suspended for four week's without pay and fined a week's salary for what teammates said was an obscenitylaced tirade at general manager Bobby Beathard and other Chargers personnel.

The Chargers wouldn't disclose the reason for the disciplinary action against Leaf, who's coming off shoulder surgery and was expected to be in playing shape in 3-4 weeks.

However, players and others in the organization, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Leaf yelled at Beathard and members of the strength and conditioning staff, apparently over a workout he was asked to do.

The blowup came before a team meeting Monday, a day after San Diego's 34-0 loss at Kansas City. Coach Mike Riley and some players witnessed part of the exchange.

"We can't tolerate the undermining of discipline that's set for this team," Beathard said at a news conference. "It's something that we discussed, and to the man felt that it was something we could not avoid. It was an action we had to take."

Fixed fights tarnish boxing

■ The Miami Herald printed reports of boxing fraud in some of the major matches.

MIAMI (AP) - More than 30 prizefights have been fixed or tainted with fraud in the past 12 years, according to The Miami Herald.

The admissions come from boxers who fought and lost to George Foreman, Eric "Butterbean" Esch and other ranked fighters. Some negotiated payments to throw matches. Others weren't bribed but fell down merely to avoid injury and get an easy paycheck.

Tony Fulilangi, once a worldranked heavyweight, told The Miami Herald that he faked a second-round knockout by George Foreman on Oct. 27, 1998, in Marshall, Texas.

Fulilangi, who received $30,000 to fight Foreman, said nobody asked him to throw the bout. The fight ended when Fulilangi ducked under a punch and hit the canvas. "I went down just to get the money," he said. "I went to the airport with a smile on my face. Foreman laughed when told of Fulilangi's comments. "That happened to me all the time," Foreman said. "If they're getting a whipping, it's up to them to decide if they want to continue."

Former heavyweight Andre Smiley said he made thousands of dollars faking 14 knockouts from 1990 to 1997. "I made a lot of money throwing fights," he said.

Widely suspected but rarely documented, fake fights threaten the credibility of professional boxing. Some fighters say the sport is plagued with corruption far worse than alleged criminal misconduct now under FBI scrutiny.

"The fix goes to the issue of integrity and trust in the game," said U.S. Rep. Mike Oxley, R-Ohio, who has sponsored a boxing reform bill aimed at protecting young fighters from unscrupulous promoters. "Nothing could be more American than believing in a fair fight. And if that is not happening, the public has every right to lose faith in the sport."

Quin Snyder makes debut at Missouri as Tigers win 84-67

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Quin Snyder's first time in the seat occupied for 32 years by Norm Stewart looked like the practice game that it was.

Missouri made only three of its first 22 shots and shot 35 percent in an 84-67 victory Tuesday night over the California Midwest All-Stars, a pickup team that surrendered 102 points at Saint Louis on Monday.

"We were a little tight," Snyder said. "We've shot really well. But they weren't hitting shots either and weren't getting a lot of open looks."

Keyon Dooling had 22 points, nine rebounds and five assists for Missouri, which has one more exhibition before the season opener Nov. 12 against Wisconsin. Junior college transfer T.J. Soyoye added 15 points and 10 rebounds.

"Everybody had the jitters going out at first," guard Brian Grawer said. "We tried a little too hard in the first half. We wanted to come out and show everyone that we have done things and improved ourselves."

Men's Basketball

The lowa men's basketball team will play the Dominican Republic Select Team on Friday night in Carver-Hawkeye Arena. Tip-off is scheduled for 7 p.m. Domincan The Republic team is a replacement for the Moscow Select Team, which was originally on lowa's schedule

However, due to travel complications, the team from Moscow was unable to travel to the United States.

The Dominican Republic team will be playing the first game of its tour in lowa City. The squad features Tito Horford, a 7-foot-2 center who played college basketball at Miami (Fla.).

Tickets for the game are $10 and are available at the lowa athletic office. General public and students who show they have a football ticket for Saturday's Illinois at Iowa football game may purchase a basketball ticket for $5.

Volleyball

Today: The Hawkeyes travel to Minnesota to face the Golden Gophers in Minneapolis. The game is scheduled to begin at 7 p.m.

Last week: The Hawkeyes were downed at home by Michigan and Michigan State last weekend. The Spartans and Wolverines defeated Iowa in three matches during both contests. The Hawkeyes have not won a match since Oct. 8.

The opponent: Minnesota comes into this game ranked 19th in the country and second in the Big Ten posting a record of 19-5 (10-2 Ten). Gophers are enjoying their highest national ranking since 1989. Previous meeting:

The Hawkeyes were pumelled by the Golden Gophers at home when they last met Sept. 29. It took Minnesota only 61 minutes to defeat the Hawkeyes in three games (15-5, 15-8, 15-1).

The players: The Hawkeyes are led by senior Julie Williams who posts a teamleading 292 kills. Larissa Lopes currently leads the team in set assists with 283. The Gophers boast the national player of the week, Nicole Branagh, who leads her team with an astounding 579 kills. Minnesota's Lindsey Berg leads the team in set assists, with 1,029.

- Jeremy Schnitker Women's Tennis

Today: The lowa women's tennis team travels to Columbus, Ohio, to participate in the Midwest Regionals, the team's final tournament of the fall. Players from the thirty-seven teams in the Midwest region, including all the Big Ten teams except Penn State, will be present. Erica Johnson and Megan Kearney will compete today and Thursday in qualifying rounds, and if they advance to the quarterfinals will then be able to compete in the tournament's main draw. Natalya Dawaf, Shera Wiegler and Toni Neykova automatically qualified for the main draw and will compete Friday through Monday. The No. 6-ranked doubles team of Neykova and Wiegler will compete in the main doubles draw of 32 teams. Last year: Johnson, Dawaf and Wiegler all participated in last year's tournament. The doubles team of Johnson and Wiegler went 1-2, while Dawaf and graduated senior Emily Bampton went 1-1.

Player comment: "This is the biggest tournament of the fall," Megan Kearney said. "It is kind of a preview for the spring. It is not flighted. Everyone is in the same draw, so it is very competitive. Everyone is capable of doing well. Erica and I have a good chance of qualifying and we all can show everyone that we can do well this year.

City High receiver commits to Iowa State

AMES (AP) - Steve Pfaller did not rush his decision to play football at ISU. Pfaller, a wide receiver at Iowa City High, was offered a scholarship in April. He accepted on Sunday.

Pfaller grew up an Iowa fan and hesitated when Iowa State made its offer because he wanted to hear from the Hawkeyes. He visited lowa unofficially, but neither lowa nor any other Div. I school offered him a scholarship.

Long live the days of the 'Mashed Potato'

■ The Philadelphia sensation that became a national favorite lives on in themed restaurants and the original dance hall.

> By Meki Cox Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA - Past the room with Madonna's glassentombed high heels and the glittery guitars hanging on the walls, past 20-year-old hostesses and whiffs of greasy cheese steaks, a gray-haired man wearing a worn leather vest has found the bridge between reality and

To George Warnette, it is in the back of Dick Clark's American Bandstand Grille in suburban Philadelphia, where the 65-year-old retired technical writer can be found several days a week on the crowded dance floor, reminiscing about "American Bandstand" and his lost dream of becoming one of the television show's

Fifteen miles away at the building where "American Bandstand" first aired, some of the former cast members who danced the "Watusi" and the "Mashed Potato" for a nation of adoring adolescent fans, just roll

But that mix of reality and fantasy has always been the essence of "American Bandstand" since it first aired as a local show in 1952 in Philadelphia, gained popularity with host Dick Clark after he joined the program in 1956 and then went national in 1957.

The show, which eventually moved to Los Angeles and ended its long run in 1989, was a hit largely because it gave living room wallflowers the chance to project themselves through the screen and onto the dance floor.

While Clark has blended those memories into several theme restaurants across the country where people can dance and eat, Della Clark is as a teen-ager to get into the show working to keep the history alive in paid off just two times. He danced on the building where the show was broadcast for 12 years.

The show became a slice of American pop culture, so much so that Dick Clark donated the original podium and backdrop to the Smithsonian Institution.

The original building, which sat vacant for decades in a faded West Philadelphia neighborhood, is now home to a dozen newly established minority businesses With help from public and corporate funding, Della Clark has been able to finance the enterprise center and keep a historical flair about the old studio, which is now used as a conference room. "I was delighted to see the building in such good shape now," Dick Clark said recently from his office in Burbank, Calif. "I'm a history buff. I love anything that has to do with history.

And this building touched generations. It should have the same lasting quality as the Betsy Ross house or the Liberty Bell."

After protests, Wal-Mart body slams WWF doll

ATLANTA (AP) - A doll depicting a professional wrestler carrying a female mannequin's head was removed from Wal-Mart stores Tuesday after complaints that it makes light of violence against women.

John Bisio, a company spokesman, said complaints prompted the decision to pull the toy, called Summer Slam '99: Road Rage Al Snow.

The toy is modeled after Al Snow, a World Wrestling Federation competitor who carries a female mannequin's head resident for marketing, defended the doll.

'This is the first complaint we've had about the toy," he said from WWF headquarters in Stamford, Conn. "Al Snow's act with the mannequin head is as silly as it gets - loads
