Students fired up over higher speeds

The speaker of the House would like to raise the limit from 65 to 70 on divided highways.

The UI may become home to more than four fraternities if its standards are met.

By Ray Atkins

Four national fraternities are banding together as the UI, and representatives from each organization are looking for a familiar location to be used as a chapter house at the same time. The representatives are touring the fraternities include the former Tau Delta house; it’s the location some have decided on.

"Expansion is healthy for the fraternities," Atkins said. "There are a number of houses we are looking at."

Gillespie and possible location for the fraternities include the former Tau Delta house on the northeast side of the campus, which is flanked by Egyptian Aviation Research and the current Phi Kappa Psi national fraternity.

The UI is looking into purchasing the former Della Terra Delta house, it is being sold by Norman S. Helms, an Iowa City businessman who is a member of the Greek community. He said there are always enough fraternity members on campus that finding more will only enhance their already positive image at the UI.

"Our need to work on re-establishing the image of the clubs of what they have over the years," Atkins said. "It’s a really popular place to live on the weekends."

UI students may soon have Speaker Bryan Beeghly in on the right track by suggesting a bill to increase speed limits in the state from 65 miles per hour to 70. Usually about 70 miles per hour, and I think most people would come from their cars. "During the speed limit is a great idea.

The bill, which would raise the limit on interstate and freeway highways, is introduced during the last session in the House but never discussed. Beeghly said and is bringing it up now in hopes of being discussed in the next session.

Most drivers go at a speed commensurate with their driving and the conditions they face. The speed limit is often 70, but it is rarely exceeded.

In Iowa City, the speed limit is 25 mph in certain areas, but there are areas where the limit is increased to 35 mph. The UI is considering increasing the limit to 40 mph in order to make the campus safer for pedestrians and cyclists.

The UI is also considering increasing the limit on some of its campus roads to 30 mph, but the decision has not been made yet.

Iowa City begins to thin herd

Eleven deer are shot as the Iowa City deer-kill starts, causing some citizen concern.

By Tony Vartanian

Eleven deer were shot in the area Tuesday night, as Iowa City began to carry out its deer-kill plan. The hunts begin on the same day that City Manager Steve Atkins announced the program. The City plans to work with White Buffalo Inc., a nonprofit animal management organization based in Connecticut.

The hunters were paid 50 for each deer that was killed, as a way to encourage hunters to participate in the program. The city will be using the money to hire more hunters and to pay for the animals.

Online @ Iowa virtually stumbles along

By Katie Barnard

Three more lessons have been made available for the Online @ Iowa course, but some say they’re still inadequate.

"I believe that the course is divided into 12 lessons; the final lesson isn’t even ready yet," said UI freshman Amy Peterson. "It’s frustrating because we just want to finish the class and not have to worry about getting it done later."

Boynton is the course instructor, but he is divided between teaching classes and working on Web-construction segments, which aren’t always finished. Peterson said that she and other students received midterm notices, but she hasn’t been in contact with the instructor, yet.

"I can’t absolutely determine when he will be back," Barnard said. "It’s likely that the last segment will be cut from the Monday of Thanksgiving break.

The students enrolled in the class were contacted by Barnard on the first time on Nov. 7, but it is a blanket e-mail notifying them that the first lesson is available for the online lecture tutorial lesson is ready.

On Nov. 7, and 8, Boynton sent two more blanket e-mails that notified professor that all the materials would be available before the Thanksgiving break.

On his latest e-mail on Nov. 9, Boynton addressed the deadline for the course.

"I said I hoped you would be able to finish the course by Thanksgiving," Barnard said. "But he wrote that the deadline is not set for the final deadline for the course, however, like most courses, the work for the semester will be due the last day of classes... Friday, Dec. 3." "

In another matter, UI freshman Amy Peterson. "Why should they hold us up to a deadline if they aren’t going to get it done?"

"I don’t know why they have to keep us up to a deadline if the course isn’t finished," Peterson said. "I understand that it should be finished, but I was just reading in the e-mail that there’s a lot of students that aren’t signing up.

"I can’t be absolutely certain when will it be due," Barnard said. "It’s likely that the last segment will be cut from the Monday of Thanksgiving break.

3 representatives point to utility deregulation

Three state representatives and a utility deregulation expert will be in the area to speak on upcoming state legislation, which will impact utilities.

The people came in the meeting with the Iowa Utilities Industry to address two legislative proposals from the Iowa Legislature. One is deregulation of the industry, and the other is tax breaks.

"Reregulating the utilities would, in my opinion, be a bad idea," Barnard said. "But my opinion to purchase electricity as an open market source, and the legislature tax on Iowa city, municipally and a legislative committee mentor for the repair.

The representatives gave a biased view of how the bill Legislature may work this session.

"We don’t want to cut onto their utility rates," Barnard said. "That’s one of the things that’s a problem."

"Why are we giving this legislation," Barnard said. "You don’t want to cut off the street coming and ask for it."

"It’s too important," Barnard said. "We want to make sure that the public is aware of what’s happening in the state.

UI Health Care ads create backlash

The tax-supported UI Health Care comes under fire from some for its advertising campaign.

By Anne Hyon

The Daily Iowan

Whether a tax-supported institution such as UI Health Care becomes a topic of revenue for private and state-funded institutions is a question.

Chicago Sun-Times, the director of public relations at Col. College, Rockford, and a private paid institution such as UI Health Care is an issue.

If that doesn’t mean advertising must end, she said. "The fact that it is a tax-supported doesn’t mean it should be able to advertise the services. "Advertising is just like a business, you have to get paid to advertise."

But Bill Weston, the vice president for strategic development at Genesis Medical Center in Davenport, said he disagrees. He believes that patients will utilize the UI services because they have been advertised for UI Health Care.

Teen-agers get 112 years in school shooting trial

Teen-agers get 112 years in school shooting trial. This is a competitive effort to provide health care in "established" facilities. Because some nurses of UI Health Care are onboard by "private" resources.

Health Care, the advertising department for UI Health Care, said the campaign was held because of the growing interest in private insurance. The ads also focus on the service and quality of UI Health Care. Travis, 18, said. The advertisements include the phrase "Changing Medicine. Changing Lives."

"They advertise the services, and the advertisement itself must be evaluated before the patients, he said.

Laura Burmester, the associate director of institutional marketing at Sampe College, Dubuque, said the UI advertising, as in the private sector, should receive public funding and some private donations, in order to maintain high standards that may not as stringent.

"Funds are available to public agencies for quality of UI Health Care, Travis said. Medical Center, he feels that UI Health Care is a competitive effort not to advertise their services.

Mexican jet had history of problems, workers say

In the latest plane crash, Mexican investigators examine the black box of a doomed airliner.

By Adolfo Garcia

TAMARUCA, Mexico—Investigators examined the flight data recorder in the ruins of a DC-10 jetliner that crashed Wednesday evening, killing all 217 people aboard, and said the evidence pointed to mechanical problems.

The government of President Ernesto Zedillo said the airline had a history of safety problems. But airline officials said they had no knowledge of any maintenance problems.

"We had total confidence that the plane was safe," said Capt. Jim Watson of the Boeing Co., the manufacturer of the DC-10. "We are still investigating, but we are confident that we didn't cause the accident." Watson declined to comment further.

"We have to find out if there were mechanical problems," said Capt. Andres Peres, an official for the Inter-American Transport Authority, which regulates airlines in the Western Hemisphere.

Publicly funded student groups allow more voices to be heard

A fight that started at the University of Wisconsin in 1996 will end in the halls of the U.S. Supreme Court.

Still, the university will get its message across. A group of young, self-described conservative Christians students sued the University of Wisconsin for charge mandatory fees to support student groups. The case, Students for a New American Society v. Board of Regents of the University of Wisconsin System, originated at Miami University in Ohio and was settled after a 5-year battle.

The lawsuit was brought by a group of conservative students who claimed their political beliefs were not represented on campus. The University of Wisconsin is one of many universities that have similar policies. The lawsuit was heard by the Supreme Court, which ruled in favor of the students.

The case was decided on a technicality, not on the merits of the argument. The court ruled that the university had not provided enough information about the groups that were opposed to the conservative groups, and that the university had not shown that the groups were not representing the students.

This is a victory for free speech and for the right of students to organize on campus. It is a win for the students who were threatened by the university's policies. It is a win for all students who want their voices to be heard on campus.

The university will have to change its policies. It will have to provide more information about the groups on campus and it will have to show that the groups are representing the students.

Without these changes, the university will continue to discriminate against students who do not agree with the majority. It will continue to silence the voices of those who have different beliefs.

The university has a responsibility to provide a safe and inclusive environment for all students. It should not be able to silence students who do not agree with the majority. The university should not be able to discriminate against students who have different beliefs.

The university should provide more information about the groups on campus. It should not just provide information about the groups that are in favor. It should provide information about the groups that are not in favor.

The university should also show that the groups are representing the students. It should not just show that the groups are provided. It should show that the groups are representing the students.

The university should also change its policies. It should not just change its policies about the fees. It should change its policies about the groups on campus.

The university should change its policies to provide a safe and inclusive environment for all students. It should not discriminate against students who do not agree with the majority. It should provide a safe and inclusive environment for all students.

Wherefore art thou, originality?

When I was a small child, I wanted to be Little Orphan Annie. I wanted red, curly hair. I wanted a dog named Sandy. I wanted a rich millionaire to adopt me and take me away to live in his mansion.

I wanted Puppet to be my bodyguard.

If I were there a case a day about $5.50.

I think it's time again for the federal holiday that recognizes all of America's veterans. This year I expect the parade I'm about to have to be the best one yet.

While I was never enough to be Annie, it didn't stop me from pretending. I would watch the movie all the time. I knew every word. And, it seems, everyone knew every line. They still know them, even if you were singing a block away. I think my parents should have seen my dramatic potential and not sit me in a chair on Christmas morning.

Last Sunday, the surreptitious version of Annie, aired on ABC. I guess I should have been happy that a new version of Little Orphan Annie would be exposed to new generations. But I wasn't. My parents showed some of the greatest fallacies.

Carol Burnett, Bernadette Peters and Tim Curry, still, we felt it. The Big Show featured a picture of a young woman that I thought I saw in a magazine. I didn't know why I was so excited. I thought I was seeing the face of my future. I thought I was being shown a blueprint to success.

Every season, Puppet would fly into view. For months, I was never enough to get out. Since I was Annie, I wasn't. The Big Show featured a picture of a young woman that I thought I saw in a magazine. I didn't know why I was so excited. I thought I was seeing the face of my future. I thought I was being shown a blueprint to success.

Despite my parents' warnings, I went on stage, in awe of my lungs. My brother just happened to be playing football at the state fair, and it was a daily ritual. For those of us who know the words to some songs, even the most heartbroken.

I don't know why, but I don't think my parents should have seen my dramatic potential and not sit me in a chair on Christmas morning. I was always on the lookout for something that could help me to make it big. I was always on the lookout for something that could help me to make it big. I was always on the lookout for something that could help me to make it big.

Annie didn't. I continued to sing them from the second time. I had never seen a movie before. I didn't know what to expect. I thought I was seeing the face of my future. I thought I was being shown a blueprint to success.

Israel forcibly evacuates settlers

Israel keeps commitments made to the Palestinians, clearing illegal settlements and pulling troops.

By Ron Kampeas
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Forced to choose between Jewish settlers and Palestinian demands, Prime Minister Ehud Barak kept Israel's commitment to the Palestinians Wednesday, approving a troop deployment in the West Bank to ease the evacuation of the settlement of Havat Maon.

Israel's leaders, who have not endorsed Barak's own peace initiatives, are making a show of force after settlers staged a protest against the troops in the region.

Western Pacific boy spread TB to 56 people in North Dakota

A 6-year-old boy from the Marshall Islands in the Western Pacific spread tuberculosis to 56 people, including his classmates, in the rural state of North Dakota, before being isolated and treated for the disease Wednesday, according to the state health department.

The outbreak was discovered in 1999 when one of the boy's classmates was found to have TB. Researchers report today in the New England Journal of Medicine that the boy is the index case for the outbreak and that he is the first child to spread TB in the United States since 1946.

The boy was not treated until he was 10 years old.

The outbreak affected 15 of the 42 people who had close contact with the boy, but only 10 of them were treated for TB. The other five were not treated because they were not in close contact with the boy.

The boy was not treated until he was 10 years old.

and University.

"I watched the tapes, and UConn is a little bit better than Allen."

An obvious underdog by the first-year coach, but it may be the only mild precedent the Hawkeyes have before them.
They will take the court in Madison Square Garden, and for the first time in school history play in a game that could define the defending national-champions.

Hawkeyes have entered big-name games behind them in which they will go out against their opponents by at least 35 games. Current game, played in New York All-Star 1999.

"We put a lot of points on the board, but we're trying to make something happen."

The same is true for Iowa — to play to the country. The Hawkeyes lost four of their top five scorers from last year. No milestones, Allen is starting a smaller,
more inexperienced lineup.
Remember Bob Griffin and sophomore drew Henderson will be back Tuesday. They will need them.
They'll need four of Allen's all-purpose guards Denver Oliver,
Ryan Lanier and Adam Haluska.
However, no matter who Allen starts, he opposes them.

His playmaking ability can be quick to point out that he thinks the rout is merely a tribute to Griffin who is a Hawkeye.

Iowa's Rob Gerber goes up for a layup during Iowa's victory over Team Concept. Griffin adds quickness and range to the Hawkeyes' lineup this season.

"I can't wait for that game. Oh, Khalid, he's going to get his. They're going to get it, it's going to be a payback." Iowa guard Rob Griffin talking tonight's game against Connecticut.

Iowa forward Jeff Havel will bring scoring ability

The production is part of the University Theatre's season, and the article mentions other plays and events happening in the area, such as the "Barry Moose Festival" and "Theatre on the Road." The article also highlights the work of Barry Moose and his "A Tale We Told the Queen" play, which is set to dance the night away with a bittersweet end to the partnership between the Queen Sura and Evertt.

The article also mentions "Gala '99" at Fast Forward, a dance festival that features "A Tale We Told the Queen" and other works. The gala is described as a "big night" for dance lovers, with "Dance Gala '99" providing a platform for new and established dance performers.

The article concludes with a quote about the power of dance to "transform our lives," and the importance of supporting the arts through events like "Gala '99."
