I looks to Chicago firm for PR fine-tuning

Officials hope the university will become more "efficient" using the data the company generates.

> By Chao Xiong The Daily Iowan

With the help of Chicago communications firm Lipman Hearne, the UI hopes to improve its communication strategies in an effort to increase university efficiency.

"I wouldn't say we're doing this to improve our image," said Steve Parrott, the director of university relations. "I think we want to be clear about the image we are projecting."

Ann Rhodes, the vice president for university relations, said the firm will analyze how the UI communicates with current and prospective students, the public, alumni, donors and faculty. With the data it generates, it will make recommendations to help the UI to be more "efficient."

"Internally, we've gotten a lot of expertise, but I wanted to get an outside opinion," Rhodes said. "We thought it would be good to have someone who could look very broadly at the university."

Neither Parrott nor Rhodes could disclose how much time or money would be spent on the communications audit, which is set to begin in a few weeks, according to a letter from UI President Mary Sue Coleman.

Rhodes did say the funding for the audit will be reallocated from the current budget.

"One of the challenges we face is that we have to place a very high priority on other things," she said. We're not going to spend a lot of money on this."

An area that Rhodes wants to focus on is recruitment.

"I'm absolutely all for it," said Michael Barron, the director of admissions. "This is a large community with thousands of students and faculty. I think one of the things that an audit such as this may help to Hawks housebreak No. 1 Huskies, 70-68.

NEW YORK — Iowa Coach Steve Alford did what he thought would only happen in his dreams.

Thursday night, the Hawkeyes stunned No. 1 Connecticut in Madison Square Garden, 70-68. The firstyear coach implemented a new system for the Hawkeye squad in only one month of practice and shocked a near-capacity Garden.

Tonight, the Hawkeyes will face Stanford, which put away Duke in overtime, 80-79, Thursday night. The game will be televised at 8 p.m. on ESPN. Iowa will start the same lineup as Thursday, with Dean Oliver, Ryan Luehrsmann, Kyle Galloway, Jacob Jaacks and Duez Henderson. Duke and UConn will face off in the consolation game starting at 5 p.m.

"This is great for us," Oliver said. "What a better way to start the season off than to knock off the No. 1 team in the nation."

Oliver battled in foul trouble, but finished with 14 points, three assists and two steals, in helping to avenge last year's Sweet 16 loss to the

After two days of battling the flu, Alford had little to complain about after the final buzzer. "I'm feeling a lot better," he said with a smile. "I had the stomach flu, then it turned into Huskie nerves before the game. But now, I feel no pain."

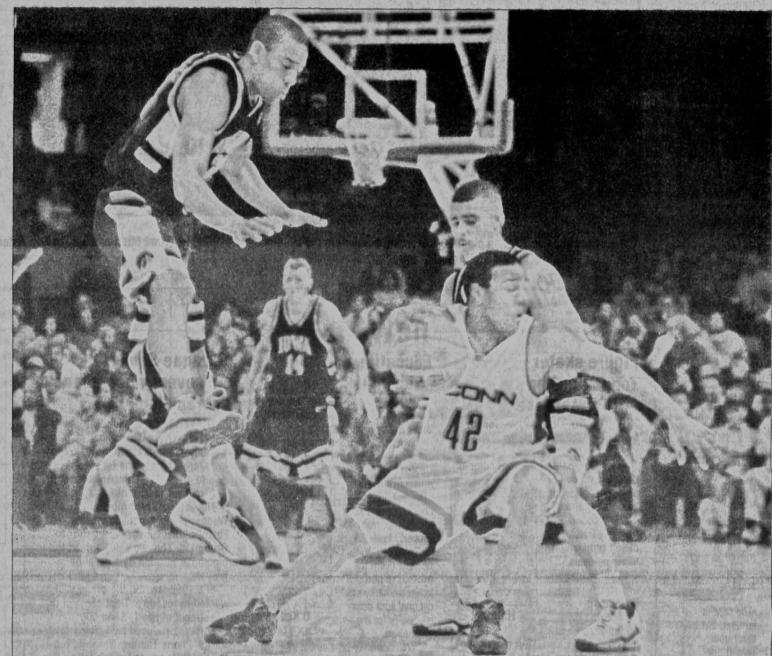

The show was just a beginning of Alford's era. The upset was Iowa's first defeat of a No. 1 ranked team since beating UCLA in 1965. The Bruins were also the defending national champions that year. With a difficult preseason ahead, Alford is making no lofty predictions and just shook his head Thursday when asked about national title hopes.

Others in attendance at the Garden, however, were talking enough for Alford.

"This is just a phenomenal win," ESPN commentator Dick Vitale said following the game. "Alford can flat out coach.

The Hawkeyes finished shooting 24 of 57 from the field, while holding UConn to only 35-percent in the game. Jaacks led Iowa with 20 points, while Oliver finished with 14.

Downtown Iowa City erupted in cheers as the final buzzer sounded in Iowa's 70-68 upset over the No. 1 ranked UConn Huskies Thursday after each shot, rebound and turnover for the final five minutes of the game.

The crowd in the Airliner, 22 S. Clinton St., reacted with boos or cheers

After the victory, UI junior Ted Benzing started an "Iowa!" cheer with a group of his friends at the 'Liner, while the whole bar exploded with excitement. Benzing called the atmosphere "wild."

"To be honest, I didn't think they had much of a chance," he said. "It's a great

With the win, Iowa avenges its loss to the Huskies in last season's Sweet 16. Some UI students attribute the victory to the new coach, Steve Alford, who replaced veteran Coach Tom Davis this year.

"It's a huge win and a great way to kick off Steve Alford's tenure. It makes (Iowa Athletics Director) Bob Bowlsby look great," said UI graduate student Jeff Scott, adding that he has been a "rabid Hawkeye fan" for most of his life.

The small effect that the UI's four-year graduation plan had on the first class to which it was offered will come under the state of Iowa Board of Regents' microscope at a meeting next week

First offered to the UI's 1995 freshman class, the four-year plan may have contributed to 1998's 0.9 percent increase over the previous year's rate - 34.1 percent.

The plan may not have a huge impact on four-year graduation rates. but that is not the point, said Emil Rinderspacher, the UI associate director of admissions

"Even if it doesn't raise graduation rates, this is another planning tool for freshmen," he said.

The heated rivalry between the interstate neighbors reached its peak after Iowa lost to the Badgers 31-0 last year.

Rock the Vote doesn't rock some

"Miscommunication" mars a rally meant to increase student voting.

> By Ryan Foley The Daily Iowan

While leaders of Students for George W. Bush were busy recruiting UI students for their group Thursday during the Rock the Vote rally, miscommunication forced two other UI political groups to miss out on that chance.

The rally, which started at noon on the Pentacrest, was sponsored by the Aliber/Hillel Jewish Student Center. The goal of the rally was to get UI students involved by getting them to register to vote and sign up for student organizations, rally organizer David Leventhal said.

But miscommunication with rally organizers affected both the Students for Gore and Students for Bradley organizations, which also wanted to recruit members.

Students for Gore President Julia DiGangi said she received an e-mail from Leventhal saying the rally started at 1 p.m. She said she arrived at the rally at approximately 12:45 - when people were packing up their stuff and leaving.

"It's unfortunate that we were unable to attend the event," DiGangi said, explaining that the group had planned to set up a table and hand out Gore placards, stickers and literature. "But these things happen, and there will be more events.'

received an e-mail from Leventhal apologizing for the miscommunication. Two representatives from Stu-

"If we would've known further in advance, (the rally) would have been a great bene-apologetic and sincere. Two of fit," Logli said. "We could have gotten more people involved."

Students for Bush signed up approximately 20 members Thursday during the rally, said Tony Stabenow, the executive director of the group.

"People were signing up for our organization, at least - I wish it would have lasted longer," he said. "Any time you can get 20 people to register for your group in one hour, it's a success.

Leventhal also called the rally a 'success" and estimated that 30 students registered to vote.

Italian apt. building collapses

Only 17 survivors have been found, out of the 70-75 families that lived in the building.

> By Ellen Knickmeyer Associated Press

FOGGIA, Italy - A six-story apartment building came crashing down upon 24 sleeping households in southern Italy Thursday, trapping them in a 15-foot-high heap of concrete and dust. Only one family escaped intact, fleeing with seconds to spare after a frantic attempt to save their neighbors.

Wakened by the sound of the building shaking itself to pieces, the family of five ran apartment to apartment, ringing doorbells and pounding on doors. The effort nearly cost them their lives, said building superintendent Luigi Laconta, who ran from the building with the family at the last minute.

"I took a step back, thinking I could see someone stick their head out the window," he said. "Instead, I saw the entire building crumple."

By nightfall, authorities had accounted for only 17 survivors out of the 70 to 75 people believed to be inside. The latest, a young man, was pulled out more than nine hours after the last survivor had been found. After a day of seeing only covered bodies on gurneys go by, the dusty search crews stopped digging to applaud the rescue, shouting, "He's alive!"

Searchers recovered 13 corpses, wheeling them out under green sheets with broken limbs dangling.

Many may have died on the stairs, trying to escape.

Rescuers dig in the rubble where an apartment building collapsed before dawn in the southern city of Foggia, Italy, Thursday.

Authorities suspect that a structural failure brought down the 30year-old building. Some residents said workers had been renovating a garage underneath; Di Spazio said that would be investigated.

In Rome, politicians urged Parliament to push through a proposed law that would make buildings subject to periodic inspections.

"It is absurd that cars must undergo periodic checkups while buildings don't," said Cristina Matranga, a lawmaker for the opposition Forza Italia party.

Emergency crews evacuated an adjoining building in the neighborhood, a cluster of tidy, wellkept apartment blocs in the city of 150,000. Awakened in the night by the crash and then by screams, neighbors packed balconies to watch the daylong rescue effort.

The apartment building fell about 3:15 a.m., and fell hard. Crushing floors and ceilings, it collapsed into rubble about 15 feet high. A single door stood upright atop the ruin - that of the tiny rooftop apartment, its fall cushioned by the floors pancaked beneath it.

Resident Aldo Guidone woke to the noise of the building shaking. Someone rang his doorbell, and then the building dropped from Guidone landed flat in the rubble, escaping alive with his son and daughter-in-law. Their 8year-old son was missing.

"In the heart of the night I heard my bed shake, like an earthquake. Then I heard creaking noises but I couldn't understand what was happening," Salvatore Taronne, 19, said from his hospital bed.

"All of a sudden I found myself deep in chunks of cement," he said. "It was dark, and I didn't have the strength to scream."

The identity and whereabouts of the family that alerted the others could not immediately be determined.

EgpytAir data confuse experts

Investigators are considering all possible scenarios that may have caused the flight to crash.

> By Pat Milton Associated Press

NEWPORT, R.I. - The mystery of what caused the crash of EgyptAir Flight 990 deepened Thursday after an initial examination of the flight-data recorder indicated everything was normal until the autopilot disengaged and the plane suddenly descended.

Puzzled aviation experts said the Boeing 767 could have experienced a rapid decompression, forcing the pilot to make an emergency maneuver to get the plane to an altitude where passengers could breathe

Other scenarios being considered by investigators include terrorism, sabotage, hijacking or a problem with a passenger or crew member on the New York-to-Cairo flight.

A sudden decompression could also have occurred from an explosive device ripping a hole in the fuselage, said Ed Crawley, head of the aeronautics and astronautics department at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He called the plane's action a "violent maneuver."

"You never felt in your life what went on in that airplane. Everything that wasn't tied down was pinned to the ceiling by twice its weight," he said. "The question is, did he do this or did the autopilot disengage on its own?

High seas Thursday halted the search for the plane's other black box, the cockpit voice recorder. Investigators hope the tape of the crew members' conversations and cockpit noises can better reveal what happened. The search for the box could resume today. A preliminary analysis of the flight-data recorder announced Wednesday by the National Transportation Safety Board eliminated at least one theory about what may have caused the Oct. 31 disaster that claimed 217 lives 60 miles south of Nantucket Island, Mass. Safety Board Chairman James Hall said there was no evidence the plane's thrust reversers, which are used while landing, deployed accidentally.

Hall said the plane had been cruising normally at 33,000 feet when the autopilot disconnected. That is unusual because the plane was just beginning its hours-long cruise across the Atlantic. Hall refused to say whether the autopilot disconnected manually or automatically.

Approximately eight seconds later, the flight "begins what appears to be a controlled descent" from 33,000 feet to about 19,000 feet, Hall said.

The recorder stopped shortly afterward; the final five to 10 seconds of information on its tape were still being extracted.

Crawley said a handful of mechanical possibilities could have forced the pilot to suddenly descend from 33,000 feet. Because pilots must notify airtraffic controllers before changing altitude, there's a possibility that rapid decompression - perhaps from a sudden blowout of a door or windshield - forced an emergency dive, Crawley said.

CITY BRIEF

Rally to denounce local hate crimes

The Iowa City Human Rights Commission, along with the Hate Acts Rapid Response Team, has organized a rally to respond to recent race-related crimes in Iowa City.

The rally will take place Saturday on the Pedestrian Mall at 5 p.m.

A pedestrian bridge and a new house under construction on the 1600 block of Teg Drive were spray-painted with racial slurs and swastikas. Similar markings were found in the men's locker room near the south gym of the UI Field House. lowa City police and the UI Department of Public Safety are conducting ongoing investigations; if an arrest is made, charges will not likely be filed. Under current laws, hate messages only become crimes if directed at particular individuals. "We want the community around us all to come together to denounce hate," said Heather Shank, the city human rights coordinator.

Faith Wilmot, co-chairwoman of the Hate Acts Rapid Response Team. saw the graffiti at Teg Drive and said acts of this nature won't be tolerated in the community

"The rally is a way for the community to respond to this deplorable act and show that we won't stand for it." she said

Marrow recipients to meet donors in IMU ceremony

An emotional scene is expected at a UIHC meeting of givers and receivers.

> By Carrie Johnston The Daily Iowan

Iowa City resident Bev Dunn has waited for a year and a half to meet the bone-marrow donor who saved her 2-year-old daughter's life.

Today she gets her chance. Dunn's daughter, Aubree, has osteoporosis, a rare condition that makes her bones so dense her growth is inhibited. Aubree has received two bone-marrow transplants at the UI Hospitals and Clinics over the past year and a half — without the transplants, she would have died. "I've been emotional all week, and I'm so excited to meet him (donor Tom Sandersfeld of Marengo, Iowa)," Dunn said. "I've talked to him on the phone several times, but I've never met him in person.

"He has given my daughter two times a life. It's really a miracle she's here today."

More than 400 bone marrow donors and recipients from all over the country, some of whom received their transplants as early as 1981, are expected to gather in the IMU today to celebrate both the giving and receiving of life.

This is the second annual meeting of blood and marrow transplantation donor and recipients. Two recipients of marrow will be meeting donors for the first time, said Roger Gingrich, a UI professor of internal medicine and the director of the Adult Blood Marrow and Transplantation program for the UIHC.

This reunion is simply a way to consciously take a moment to affirm what has been done," he said.

Approximately 30 people each year donate bone marrow to the UIHC, and it performs approximately 140 transplants annually. The donors' tissue type is run through a computer program every night to compare their type with that of a patient in need of a trans-plant, said Colleen Chapleau, the assistant director of the UIHC Iowa marrow donor program.

"Most of the people who donate here, their marrow actually goes some place else in the world," she said. "We send marrow to Australia, France and Germany."

According to the Iowa Marrow Donor Program Summary, if the recipient's family cannot donate, the chances of finding a match increase from 1 in 100 to greater than 1 in 5,000,000.

Even though marrow donations are anonymous, the recipients can write letters anonymously thanking the donor, Chapleau said.

"I will be reading portions of the letters recipients and donors have written to each other out loud as part of the program," she said. The convention features "Break Out Sessions," in which Transplantation Program staff and marrow recipients will lead small, 40-minute seminars on issues involving transplant patients, Gingrich said.

Jaacks said. "They are a team of everybodies. This is big.'

The win went down to the wire, as All-American point guard Khalid El-Amin attempted to turn the game around by himself.

Iowa had a 15-point lead heading into halftime, with El-Amin being almost a nonfactor. But after being held to only 1 of 7 prior to halftime, he came out to score nine points in the first four minutes. His jumpers came from both inside and beyond the arc, as he helped pull the Huskies back within three points at the 11:27 mark — the smallest deficit since the first two minutes of the game. El-Amin finished with 26 points and two steals Iowa's guards didn't have as powerful a start. During El-Amin's run at the beginning of the half, Oliver picked up his second, third and fourth fouls in the first four minutes of the half, causing him to sit for nearly 10 minutes.

Leuhrsmann took over, but he picked up his fourth foul at the 11:37 mark, and Jason Price ran the point until Oliver returned at with 6:53 remaining in the game.

"It was hard to let (Oliver) sit," Alford said. "I wanted to wait until about the 6 minute mark, but then I felt I had to put him in when UConn got up by 2.

The Huskies led after their first possession of the game, but did not regain the lead until 7:03 left in the second half. Albert Mouring sank a long 3-pointer to put the Huskies ahead, 55-53. However, Galloway followed the shot with a 3-pointer of his own at 6:32 to give Iowa a 56-55 lead. The Hawkeyes would not surrender control of the score the rest but on Ron Dayne.

Dayne, Wisconsin's powerhouse running back and a Heisman trophy hopeful, needs 99 yards to break Ricky William's mark of 6,279 and become the Division I-A career rushing leader.

"The focus is not about Iowa, it's about Ron Dayne. That's what we're really thinking about here," Riseling said.

Although the University of Wisconsin police do not expect much activity if Dayne breaks the record, they are prepared.

"We have all sorts of emergency plans after our 1993 game with Michigan," Riseling said, citing a game in which 70 spectators were injured when fans stormed the field after a Wisconsin victory.

Maggie Rogers, a UI senior and Wisconsin native, will attend this weekend's game to cheer on the Hawks

"A bunch of my friends are going. We're planning on tailgating and going to the game,' she said.

Rogers understands the rivalry, especially after witnessing last year's near riot.

"There's a lot of pride with both fans," she said. "It should be a good game."

UI freshman Sam Gerbyshak said that although his hometown is Coleman, Wis., he was not sure if he will make the journey to Madison. He knows how intense Badger fans can become over football.

"I have a couple friends who go there, and it's pretty high strung," Gerbyshak said.

But the deterioration of the Iowa football program in comparison with previous years is why Gerbyshak feels Wisconsin fans might not think much of Saturday's game.

"They don't have an opinion too much, because it wouldn't be much of a victory," he said. DI reporter Michael Chapman can be reached

The idea for the audit came from the Strategic Communications Forum, a group composed of approximately 30 UI faculty and Iowa City residents, Rhodes said. UI faculty must unionize against corporate control he current political and economic landscape increasingly resembles the late 19th century, when monopolies dictated the conditions under which Americans worked and lived.

Monopoly corporations such as Microsoft control critical components of late 20th-century economic life. The bottom-line logic of monopoly capitalism has even infected previously sacrosanct institutions such as medicine and education. In our time, as in the late 19th century, when workers are facing the unbridled excesses of corporate greed, unions are one of the few means of

Beginning in the 1980s, so-called managed care increased on a nationwide basis and is now the dominant form of what passes for health care. Fueled in large part by a push for ever higher profits, corporations created an insurance system that keeps costs to a minimum and in which insured persons face increased barriers to coverage.

Practices such as cherry picking, whereby insurers reject people who are more likely to need health care in favor of healthy people, keep employers' costs to a minimum and ensure the insurance industry's high profits. In this stripped-down environment, doctors and other professionals have seen their role and expertise increasingly subverted to the dictates of industry. So-called gag rules, where doctors are forbidden from honestly discussing a patient's needs and health-care options, indicate the power of totalitarian, corporate rule.

Recent events, however, indicate that the medical profession is actively resisting the corporate medical menace. In June, the American Medical Association, one of the oldest and most powerful professional organizations, voted to form a national labor organization. Following this decision, media accounts represented it as surprising and tended to denigrate the AMA's action. In contrast, many professional workers recognized that the decision to unionize was a sensible, even necessary, one.

Over the past five years in particular, professional workers at the UI have witnessed the bottom-line mentality rear its nefarious head. Similar egregious examples of the corporate ethos being imposed by a corporate-oriented administration abound. Instances such as the re-naming of departmental chairmen and -women as departmental executive officers, the awarding of a beverage contract to Coca-Cola and an increased intertwining of academic and corporate research indicate the ivory tower is now the green tower.

The UI is now listed on the Hoover's Company Capsule Database of American Private Companies, which details that 1998 sales were $1.2 billion, representing a one-year growth of 7.6 percent. Similarly, the bioengineering department, Dermatology Clinic, Dental Clinic and UI Libraries are also listed in business directories.

Furthermore, a Nov. 10 Iowa City Press-Citizen article detailed that the UI "launched a $1.8 million ad campaign in May for UI Health Care — a combination of the hospital and the College of Medicine." And, like its corporate counterparts of the 19th century, the UI employed a union-busting firm last summer in an unsuccessful attempt to prevent the hospital workers from organizing.

In response to the corporatization of the UI, workers have unionized in order to strengthen their tenuous positions in the university. Given the corporate Darwinism that reigns at the university — such as the attempt to end the International Writing Program and the proposed merger of the language departments — the collective strength of unionized workers serves as a defense against unchecked administrative power.

In July 1998 the hospital workers voted to affiliate with the Service Employees International Union. Graduate TAs and RAs voted to affiliate with the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America (COGS-UE 896) in 1996. Clerical and custodial workers have long been represented by the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees (AFSCME Local 12). While these phenomena indicate the power of collective organization, many UI workers are not represented.

The UI faculty and professional and scientific staff remain without representation, voice and power in the UI political economy. Lacking the collective strength of a union, these workers stand alone against the power of an united administration.

These workers are an integral part of the UT's educational admission. Separated by departmental and disciplinary boundaries and forced to justify any and all allocations of resources, such workers are atomized and relatively powerless. For their own benefits and that of the students and citizens of Iowa, this needs to change.

It is time for the faculty and the professional/scientific staff to organize and join the rest of the UI workers to preserve the educational mission of the UI. The UI administration is united around corporate values and priorities, and these workers need to weigh their choices. As an old song succinctly puts it, "Which side are you on?"

Lamenting the rapid decline of pop music hen I come home, my house is dark, and my pots are cold. So said Santana, that legendary band whose frontman now shills on MTV.

I mean really, did he ever make it onto that hallowed station of hollowness with anything before he was locked on a set and forced to "jam" with Rob Thomas?

Did Carlos sell out? Back then, when he said his pots were cold, you could tell that he had really been there. Would anyone pay attention, these days, if he ran out onto the street and screamed at the sky, "Oye Como Va. Oye Como Va." After two years of college Spanish, I still think that means, "Oy, My Aching Feet." (Just kidding, Eduardo, I know it really translates as "Man, That is A Killer Va.")

And yet, I must sheepishly admit, I liked that duo song. At least the first eight times around. Then it became that song that you couldn't escape, even if you dug yourself a small hole in Death Valley and jammed your fingers into your ears. It insidiously crept into our lives and implanted itself, alien-like, into the subconscious, emerging whenever least expected.

A friend of mine has his own killer song like this. To protect the guilty, I'll just call the piece Rumba No. 9. Sure, we once LEAH KIND tapped our fingers and bobbed our heads along with the music as good as any white kids could. But that was two months ago. Now, hearing that song makes him physically ill. We have to carefully monitor the music channels, especially the Box.

Oh, why does good music have to go bad? Or, in this case, why does bad music have to go worse? Of course, I've heard that many people absolutely adore these songs, which I can understand, as they're catchy and good to dance to, and the singers are somewhat appealing. In the case of Rumba No. 9, the backup dancers are quite appealing too. So says my roommate who made special note to tape it for posterity. Or posteri-

But I believe that such musicians fill a special nook in today's society. Take Britney Spears for one. She appeals to two very distinct groups: teenyboppers and middle-aged men. The former can be excused for needing a quick role model. Why bother trying to seek out a solid character to guide your life when there's someone who can dance with nuns?

The middle-aged men find Brit appealing because it's easier to catch one of her lascivious dance numbers than to worry about when their copies of Lolita are due back at the video store. But, if imitation is still a higher form of flattery than stalking, Brit is doing just fine on this particular college campus. During the Halloween festivities, I was about to tell a woman that she had missed quite a few buttons on her whitecollared shirt before I caught a glimpse of the knee socks and realized it was all part of a definite look.

And one cannot utter the illustrious name of Britney Spears without quickly mentioning her big brothers of music, the Blackstreet Boys. No, that's not right, that group has a puppet in it ... the one I'm thinking of has several. Well, you know who I'm talking about - the little protégés of the the New Kids of Schlock. They even invaded Iowa recently, to the delight of hordes of giddy pre-pubescent girls.

A professor of mine even took in this most grandiose of pop-culture displays. He said he still didn't know what they sang, as the music itself was obliterated by the shrill mating cries of 13-year-old girls, but he thought that the showmanship was incredible. Apparently, the Boys flew around Carver on snowboards. Personally, I would think that the insurance liabilities on a stunt like that would be high enough to negate any profit. Then again, any mishap would make for an excellent Fox show, "When Backstreet Boys

Yes, yes, I understand that musical tastes are all quite relative. My own often make me the subject of harassment. And perhaps it might seem to the casual observer that my lyrical likes are quite limited, but I believe, on closer observation, they are quite diverse.

All top 40s, you say? Well, OK, sure. But look there at Beth Orton nestled next to Spinal Tap, or Rusted Root uneasily squeezed between Nine Inch Nails and Vivaldi. And besides, who said I had to cater my musical tastes to anyone? You can like your music, and I will happily jam to Zeppelin or the Who. Sure, some of their members met up with untimely ends, but that only makes the message all the more powerful. Their VH1 "Behind the Music" specials get me misty-eyed every time.

So perhaps the world isn't going to hell quite as fast as one may have thought. As long as there are real artists out there, eagerly ready to make a compilation album, or any album, paralleled with those musicians who would sell their souls only if they were offered a lot of money, I suppose music isn't really dead. It's just more ... smooth.

City leaders should help fund performing-arts center

In the past few years, downtown Iowa City has seen a tremendous growth of its bar scene, instilling fear in city leaders that their fair city will soon be known as "just another bar town." However, little seems to have been done about the situation. Now, with the future of the Englert Theatre up in the air, city leaders have a prime opportunity to slow the trend.

The Englert was purchased recently by the Pohl family, which owns a number of prominent downtown bars. Many have since feared that this historic old theater will face the same fate as Bushnell's Turtle (which became Martinis) and, most recently, Hardee's

Shortly after the purchase, a community group — including the owner of Prairie Lights Books, the president of Iowa State Bank & Trust Co. and the owner of the Sanctuary Restaurant & Pub - expressed interest in acquiring the property from the Pohl family. The group hopes to revitalize and re-work the theater into the Englert Center for the Performing Arts, which would house the Iowa City Community Theater and be operated by a nonprofit

However, assuming the Pohl family wants to sell the property, the community group faces a daunting task. Acquisition and renovation would require that up to $2 million be raised in a relatively short amount of time. Such an undertaking would require the combination of public and private funds.

This is where city leaders can make a difference. If the city of Iowa City were to put up a substantial portion of the required capital, it could reap huge benefits. First and foremost, such a step would prevent the growth of the city's image as a bar town. Second, it would show citizens that their leaders care about the citizens' concerns, the city's image and its future.

In addition, citizens themselves would benefit. While the presence of the UI culturally enriches Iowa City, a performing-arts center in the heart of downtown would add a piece that is otherwise missing from the puzzle. The addition of a community theater to the downtown area would attract a diverse crowd and provide another activity for the whole family.

Several members of the community have stepped forward with a brighter vision for the future of downtown Iowa City. But turning their vision into a reality will require help. The city of Iowa City is in a prime situation to provide this help while adding to the merit of the community as a whole at the same time.

Downtown is quickly being flooded by books and beer On Thursday, a new bookseller, the Book Market, opened in the space vacated by JCPenney in the Old Capitol Mall.

By all accounts, the mall needs new businesses. The businesses of downtown Iowa City in general and the mall itself have been suffering from the competition offered by Coral Ridge Mall. But why a new bookstore?

One might have thought that when considering the complaints of downtown booksellers, such as Prairie Lights Books, that Barnes & Noble is eating into their business, another giant bookstore would be less-than-a-good idea. But who is really thinking downtown, where students are quickly drowning in beer suds from bars that are reproducing like rabbits? That springtime feeling has now spread to bookstores, and soon the only choice we will have downtown is books or beer. Imagine the bloodshed

Without considering the even more sinister possibility of a Book-Bar Industrial Complex, it's easy to see that there isn't a whole lot of thought being put into the future well-being of downtown Iowa City. The Book Market will not only undercut local bookstores but perform a hit-and-run on the city. By most accounts, the store will probably move on after the holiday season, "after assessing the situation." Old Capitol has forsaken its commitment to other businesses for a one-season stand — a fly-by-night operation that offers no clear benefit to the city, short- or long-term.

The reality is, however, that nothing could go downtown that would not threaten locally owned business in one way or another. This isn't a new problem, for the axes of cities have been moving from Main Street to the Mall Strip for quite some time now.

Maintaining the vitality of downtown is a challenge, but it is a worthwhile one that deserves more thought than it recently has been given.

Kanner, IC residents must accept bars as a part of college life

When one thinks of the atmosphere of a bar, sensations of loud music, huge groups of people and the sight of intoxicated individuals leaving at around 2 a.m. come to mind. People, especially university students, venture out to such places to have fun and cut loose on the weekends.

But, according to recently elected Iowa City City Councilor Steven Kanner, some of the accompaniments of a college-town bar might infringe on the rights of nearby residents. Early on Nov. 3, Kanner allegedly made a call to Bob Willert, the owner of Gabe's. Gabe's is located on the corner of Washington and Gilbert streets, just down the block from Ecumenical Towers, a low-income housing complex for senior citizens.

Kanner had heard several complaints about the noise and loitering around Gabe's from Ecumenical Towers residents. Soon after learning of his election to the City Council, coincidentally, Kanner reportedly made a call to Willert, saying he would have the bar's liquor license revoked. However, this is not even a matter for Kanner to decide. Iowa City is a college town with several thousand students. Local residents must learn to accept that students are a part of the community as well and deserve the right to fre-

Gabe's has been noted for hosting a wide variety of live bands and is an asset to the downtown community. Until any complaints by residents of Ecumenical Towers are officially filed with the city, Gabe's should not be inhibited by a disgruntled councilor-elect's beliefs of what is disruptive to or incompatible with surrounding residents.

Car bomb rips Bogota, killing 8

■ Officials suspect a link to Colombia's renewed policy of extraditing drug lords to the United States.

By Jared Kotler Associated Press

BOGOTA, Colombia — Raising the specter of a bloody era when drug lords sowed terror to avoid extradition to the United States, a car bomb ripped through a Bogota commercial district Thursday, killing at least eight people and injuring 45.

The shrapnel-packed bomb — which had been placed in a red Mazda sedan and was believed to have been detonated by remote control — destroyed a two-story house and a restaurant on a wide avenue and blew out the windows of banks, stores and apartment buildings nearly a quarter mile away.

It was the Colombian capital's worst blast since the wave of terror by the Medellin cocaine cartel in the late 1980s and early 1990s aimed at stopping the extradition of its members to the United States. The campaign only ended with the cartel's 1993 demise.

The new attack came a day after the Supreme Court approved the second handover in a week of a major alleged drug trafficker to the United States — and Colombians feared it was a blunt warning to the government not to go ahead with more than three dozen planned extraditions.

"You get the feeling the wolf is raising its ears again," said Miguel Maza, a former head of the state security agency. Maza headed the agency in 1989, when a bomb placed by traffickers leveled its headquarters, killing 80 employees in the single most devastating attack of the era.

Pastrana responded to Thursday's bombing defiantly, signing a decree hours later that would extradite to the United States an accused Colombian drug lord.

In Washington, National Security Council spokesman Mike Hammer said, "We condemn violent acts such as this latest incident in Colombia."

Justice Minister Romulo Gonzalez said it was still too early to blame "narcoterrorism" for the 10:15 a.m. blast — which sent shards of metal and glass in all directions. Six people died on the scene, two others at hospitals, and 14 people were hospitalized in serious condition, said city health official Dr. Adriana Ortegon.

By Laura King Associated Press

RAMALLAH, West Bank — Palestinians pushed the state-hood issue into the spotlight Thursday during a visit by Hillary Rodham Clinton, triggering an angry response from Israel and potentially complicating the probable New York Senate candidate's efforts to court Jewish voters back home.

During a two-day visit that ended Thursday night, Rodham Clinton largely managed to steer clear of controversy, visiting hospitals and a youth-counseling center, delivering speeches and making symbolic pilgrimages to Israel's Holocaust memorial and to the Western Wall, Judaism's holiest site.

But tensions flared during her single foray into the West Bank. At a ceremony in Ramallah intended to commemorate a $3.8 million U.S. grant for health care in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat's wife used a speech introducing Rodham Clinton to rail against environmental and health damage she claimed was caused by tear gas and other methods of suppression during Israel's 30-year occupation of Palestinian lands.

"It is important to point out here the severe damage caused by the intensive daily use of poison gas by the Israeli forces in the past years, which has led to an increase of cancer cases among Palestinian women and children," Soha Arafat said.

Soha Arafat also referred to Palestinian statehood aspirations, speaking of the desire for an "independent state on our native soil."

pendent state on our native soil."
Other speakers, including
Palestinian Health Minister
Riad Zanoun, then urged Rodham Clinton to remember her own earlier expressions of support for a Palestinian state.

"It goes without saying that we want her to stick to her original words," Zanoun told reporters afterward. At one point, Dr. Jihad Mashaal, the director of one of the private Palestinian groups receiving the grant, looked directly at Rodham Clinton and said: "Next time, I hope we host you in our state of Palestine and in its capital, Jerusalem."

Jerusalem's status is hotly disputed, with Israel claiming sovereignty over all the city, and the Palestinians seeking to make the traditionally Arab sector the capital of their future state. The issue is supposed to be settled in negotiations that began this week.

Rodham Clinton appeared unruffled during the remarks, with no change in her expression or posture, but Israel reacted with irritation. A statement from the prime minister's office said Israel "bitterly condemns the inappropriate statements" made by Soha Arafat and the other Polectician officials.

other Palestinian officials.

"It would be preferable if the Palestinian side were to bring its positions to the negotiating table," the statement said. "Poisoning the public atmosphere does not contribute to the success of these negotiations."

14 dead, 50 hurt in Kashmir train bomb

JAMMU, India (AP) — A bomb exploded in a passenger train traveling through northern India Thursday, killing 14 people and injuring 50 others, police said.

Police said they didn't know who was behind the explosions but that they suspected the involvement of Kashmiri militants. Kashmir is wracked by a separatist insurgency, and militants have targeted civilians in their fight for secession from India.

The Pooja Express had left Jammu, Kashmir's winter capital, in the evening and was heading toward New Delhi when the explosion tore through the floor and roof of a carriage, bringing the train to a halt.

Police said the ferocity of the blast indicated that the explosive was placed inside the crowded, economy-class carriage. The bodies of the victims were so mutilated they couldn't immediately be identified, police said. The carriage appeared to be carrying mostly soldiers and border policemen.

Eleven of the injured were reported to

'West 54th' - old & not in the way

■ PBS' "Sessions at West 54th" offers pop music for grown-ups.

> By Jim Patterson Associated Press

NASHVILLE, Tenn. - For music fans too old to care about MTV staples such as Britney Spears and 'N Sync — or to even know who they are — "Sessions at West 54th" is a musical oasis.

The PBS series is in its second year of presenting a diverse, intriguing mix of pop music. For instance, this week's show, which airs on Nov. 14 at 1 a.m., features Los Lobos and Diana Krall.

The radio and music industry is pretty much devoted to music for kids from, like, 9 to 15," said John Hiatt, the program's new host. "Beyond that sort of dance fluff, they're sort of out of the music business, really.'

That's an exaggeration. But "Sessions at West 54th," which airs on more than 300 PBS stations, is the only show that provides an expansive showcase for musicians as diverse as George Clinton, Henry Rollins, Iggy Pop, the Dixie Chicks, Ziggy Marley and Ruben Blades Artists get nearly a half-hour to perform. And although there are interview snippets, the music is the reason "Sessions at West 54th" exists.

"It gave me just a renewed vigor and faith in the state of music," Hiatt said of his new job. "Popular music here in America is teeming with life, and there are so many possibilities and so much wonder-

Hiatt, 47, has been a consistently acclaimed singer-songwriter since being labeled America's answer to Elvis Costello and Graham Parker in the 1970s. His commercial peak came with his Bring the Family album in 1987.

host of "Sessions at West 54th" is a stretch, he admits.

"At first I wasn't interested, to be honest with you," Hiatt said. "I'm not a particularly good conversationalist, unless I'm talking about myself.

"The idea of having to interview people was kind of intimidating." But the more he thought about it, the more he liked it.

Although it would be nearly impossible to look as uncomfortable as the former Talking Heads leader last season, Hiatt continues the tone Byrne set. He, too, is earnest and enthusiastic about showcasing deserving music and wrestles mightily with his interviewing duties.

On a recent "Sessions" edition, Hiatt's talk with phenomenal new R&B singer Macy Gray is hard to watch, given her shyness and his inability to draw her out.

"I know exactly where she's coming from," Hiatt said. "I've been there. So I understood totally that she was a brand-new artist. Young. Shy ... We just muddled through.

"The only thing that I tried to achieve ... is to shut up and listen."

But then, as everybody listens, Gray's smoldering rendition of "Why Don't You Call Me?" reveals her to be as charismatic in performance as she was reticent in the

As the tapings have progressed this season, Hiatt feels he has grown as an interviewer, pointing to his talks with Rollins, Clinton and Branford Marsalis as high-

Rollins was so articulate and funny that Hiatt suggested he would be a good host for next year.

Taped at Sony Music Studio on Manhattan's - yes - West 54th Street, "Sessions at West 54th" seats approximately 300 people, who treat the performers as they would classical musicians. It's respectful appreciation instead of the boisterousness of a club.

'Shortfilling' - Rx for shortchanged

■ The government says many pharmacies underfill prescriptions.

> By Amy Green Associated Press

NASHVILLE, Tenn. - Taxpayers are getting shortchanged by a common practice in pharmacies: Druggists underfill some prescriptions when they run short on medicines, but still bill government insurance programs for the full amount.

Authorities say the practice, called "shortfilling," costs taxpayers tens of millions of dollars a year because it is usually done with Medicaid patients and others who use federal health programs.

Two of the nation's largest drug store chains have recently settled legal claims over shortfilling. The Justice Department says other cases are pending against additional drug stores but won't elaborate, saying the lawsuits have been sealed.

We believe the practice is widespread, but I can't give you the specifics of the extent of what we're looking at now," spokeswoman Chris Watney said. "It's a problem that could happen at any pharmacy."

When a pharmacist "shortfills" a prescription, the customer is usually encouraged to return ers shortfilling prescriptions. later for the rest of her or his medication, federal authorities say.

Many people fail to return, but some pharmacies still charge government health programs for the full prescription.

Kendall Lynch, director of the Tennessee Board of Pharmacy, said the computer systems many pharmacies use to bill government health programs cannot prorate shortfilled prescriptions.

You have to do it manually, and I don't think I have to tell you how much more (time-consuming) it is do it manually," Lynch said.

The nation's largest drug store chain, Walgreen Co., agreed in September to pay $7.6 million and revamp its computer system to track and appropriately bill for partially filled prescriptions. The move resolved claims with 25 states and Puerto Rico.

Florida and Tennessee filed similar claims as part of a federal suit against Eckerd Corp., the drug chain owned by JCPenney. Tennessee settled its portion of the suit last month for $200,000.

The lawsuits against Eckerd and Walgreen were originally brought in 1995 by a whistle-blower, Louis Mueller, an Eckerd pharmacist in Clearwater, Fla., who watched oth-

Mueller says he complained to a supervisor but got nowhere, so he sued. The Justice Department began investigating in 1996 and joined the lawsuits in 1998.

The Deerfield, Ill.-based Walgreen was accused of shortfilling 4 million prescriptions and overcharging government health care programs $21 million.

The lawsuit against Largo. Fla.-based Eckerd, the nation's fourth-largest chain, charges it shortfilled 180,000 prescriptions and overcharged $11 million.

Mueller's complaint said Eckerd required pharmacists to prorate the price of partially filled prescriptions for cash-paying and privately insured customers but not for those covered by Medicaid and other government health programs. Walgreen did the same thing, federal authorities say. Walgreen and Eckerd denied any wrongdoing.

"We followed the industry practice of filling the prescription partially in order to get the patients started on their prescriptions and then asked the patients to return to pick up the rest when we had more in stock," Walgreen spokesman Michael Polzin said. "The majority of patients did just that."

Technologies to revolutionize medicine

LONDON (AP) - Picture a world in which wheelchairs can climb stairs and insulin sacs implanted in diabetics automatically release just the right amount at the right time.

Such breakthroughs are on the horizon, as medicine looks likely to change more in the next 20 years than it has in the last 2000 - mostly because of new technology, the British Medical Journal reported Thursday

"Cures aren't really our final destination," said Dr. Thomas Reardon, president of the American Medical Association, in London to launch the issues of the British Medical Journal and the Journal of the American Medical Association.

NATION BRIEF

Predicting and preventing diseases, mostly through technologies that allow us to better understand our genes, will be more of a focus than trying to diagnose and treat them, Reardon said.

One paper in the British Medical Journal predicted that drugs and lifestyle changes would be the preferred prescription for people genetically predisposed to a given disease, rather than trying to manipulate the genes themselves.

Many of the advances highlighted in the journals also promise to make life better or easier for people grappling with common ailments

Sensors, used widely in industry, will transform health care in the next decade, according to a paper by Charles Wilson of the California-based Institute for the Future, published in the British Medical Journal.

Sufferers of irritable bowel syndrome will be able to detect imminent diarrhea with gut sensors and forestall it by pressing a drug-filled pouch under the skin, the paper said.

Japanese engineers have designed a toilet that weighs whoever sits on it and tests the urine for bacteria and sugar levels. It then transmits the results directly to the doctor.

In fact, most of the tests performed by laboratories will be done automatically by sensors either worn by or implanted in patients, or built into hospital beds, Wilson said.

In addition, ceiling vents installed in hospital lobbies will monitor the air to detect and report any visitors who might spread airborne infections to 10:30 11:00 11:30

Wade Boggs calls it quits

■ The newest member of the 3,000 hits club will take a frontoffice job with the Devil Rays.

> By Fred Goodall Associated Press

TAMPA, Fla. - Wade Boggs, the newest member of baseball's 3,000hit club, retired today and accepted a front office job with the Tampa Bay Devil Rays that will include scouting and evaluating young talent.

"Tve come to the fork in the road of making the decision of not to be a player. It was a long, painstaking decision. I talked to a lot of people past players, present players, famimembers and friends," Boggs said during a news conference at Tropicana Field.

"It wasn't an easy decision because an athlete can always look in the mirror and say OK, I can still play. Deep down inside, probably I thought I still could. But why not go out out on top. I've always said: T'll never embarrass myself in this game.'

Boggs, who played 18 seasons in the majors, become the 23rd player to reach 3,000 hits on Aug. 7. He is the only player to do it with a home

A month after reaching the plateau, the five-time AL batting champion had season-ending surgery to repair torn cartilage in his right knee. He hit .301, the 15th time he finished at .300 or better and wound up with 3,010 career hits.

A 12-time All-Star, Boggs also was the only player this century with seven straight 200-hit seasons.

History in the making this Saturday against Wisconsin

Wisconsin running back Ron Dayne could become the NCAA's all-time leading rusher.

By Greg Wallace The Daily Iowan

When one remembers the 63-yard touchdown run that gave Ricky Williams the college football rushing record last Thanksgiving weekend, the Texas A&M jerseys chasing Williams are just as indelible in the memory as burnt-orange No. 34 galloping down the sideline.

Chances are, after Saturday's encounter with Wisconsin running back Ron Dayne, who needs only 99 yards to break Williams' record, there will be an black-and-gold clad Iowa player etched in history after giving up the yardage Dayne needs to break rushing, which ranks last in the Big Ten and 109th nationally.

The record isn't the main focus for either side, though. Wisconsin is fighting for a share of the Big Ten title and Rose Bowl berth. Iowa is just hoping for Kirk Ferentz's first Big Ten win as Iowa coach.

The soft-spoken Dayne wants a victory; he knows his yards will come. "I didn't break the record yet, and the team comes first," Dayne said. "We just go out and play tough. It doesn't matter who we play, it's a team here and that's what it's about." Defensive end Scott Pospisil says

Iowa can't focus on Dayne, or it may be a Saturday of infamy for the Hawkeve

"I think we just mostly (want to go) in there and win the game," Pospisil said. "If we don't have that mentality, then he'll break the record and it will get ugly."

Ferentz suggested that Iowa may stack nine men on the line of scrimmage to stop Dayne, but he cautioned that strategy may open up the secondary for Badger quarterback Brooks Bollinger. Defensive tackle Jerry Montgomery likes the idea.

"One guy hold him up and everybody put a body on him," Montgomery said. "He'll be hurting all game long."

The strategy was successful for Michigan; the Wolverines held Dayne to no yards on eight carries in the second half of a 21-16. Wolverine win.

The fourth-ranked Iowa field hockey team will begin its quest for a National Championship this weekend as they host an NCAA Regional at Grant Field.

Iowa (17-2) is the top seed in the fourteam regional bracket that includes No. 6 Penn State, No. 8 North Carolina and No. 14 Kent State. The Hawkeyes will begin play against Kent on Saturday at 11 a.m. while Penn

The two winners will advance to the championship game on Sunday at 2 p.m. with the opportunity to advance to NCAA Final Four in Boston, Mass. Tickets for all games are $3 for students and $5 for adults.

Tickets: Still remain "It will really be a good change of pace for us to play against some other teams," coach Beth Beglin said, "Kent is a dangerous team offensively and will have a lot of momentum coming into this game.

Kent State (17-5) is riding a wave of confidence after winning the MAC Championship title for the second consecutive year and claiming its spot in the NCAA tournament. The Golden Flashes also have some Iowa ties which should increase the intensity for the game.

Head coach Kerry De Vries was a twotime All-American at Iowa and the Hawkeyes advanced to the NCAA semifinals three times during her career. De Vries also set a single-season record for assists at Iowa in 1990 and knows the reputation that comes with Grant Field.

If they win, the Hawkeyes will take on the winner of the Penn State/North Carolina game in the championship game Sunday at 2 p.m. All games this weekend will be at Grant Field.

It's going to be a great challenge," De there with that team."

Penn State (16-4) should be tired of seeing Iowa at this point after two previous losses this season, but a rematch in the championship game is a definite possibility as the Lions are favored over North Carolina (15-5). Iowa was the only team in the Big Ten to defeat Penn State twice this season.

"It goes without saying that we know Penn State pretty well at this point," senior Sarah Thorn said. "They have nothing to lose and the rivalry is always Beglin is hoping that the crowd will have an impact on raising the intensity level of all the games and plans on setting a record that has nothing to do with performance on the field.

"Our record-breaking crowd at Grant Field was 1237 against Penn State when they were No. 1 in the country," Beglin said, "I really, really would like to break that record this weekend."

The Hawkeyes do not have time to reflect on all that has been accomplished this season, however senior Quan Nim is soaking up her last moments as a Hawkeye. The last Hawkeye appearance in the NCAA tournament was in 1996.

"It is still hard to believe that we are here at NCAAs with the opportunity to go to the Final Four," Nim said. "This is a little bit more special than 1996 because the seniors on this team were only freshmen then. Now that we are here, we have to stick to our game plan and do the job."

Cardinal upset Duke in the first game of the Coaches vs. Cancer Classic.

Associated Press

NEW YORK - Stanford started the season with a young team and late in its season opener got even

The 13th-ranked Cardinal used an 8-2 run late in regulation and a 10-0 spurt in overtime to beat No. 10 Duke 80-79 Thursday night in the Coaches vs. Cancer Classic.

What made the victory even more impressive was that senior forward Mark Madsen, the only returning starter from last season, pulled a hamstring in the final minute of regulation and didn't return.

"We made some big plays to get it to overtime and a lot of guys stepped Stanford coach Mike Montgomery said. "Madsen has a pulled hamstring and I'm 90 percent sure, barring some kind of miracle, he won't play tomorrow night."

Stanford will play the winner of the Jacobsen missed two free throws second game between No. 1 Connecticut and Iowa in Friday night's championship game at Madison Square Garden.

Madsen wasn't there for the two big runs that allowed the Cardinal to win the opener for the 11th straight

After the 8-2 run over the final 39 seconds of regulation, Chris Carrawell made two free throws 33 seconds into the extra session to give Duke its final lead. Michael McDonald, who scored eight points, then started the 10-0 run with two 3pointers.

David Moseley's layup and Jason Collins' dunk gave Stanford a 78-70 lead with 2:03 left. Carrawell then scored seven points in Duke's 9-2 run to close the game but it wasn't enough. Carrawell's tipin made it 80-79 with eight seconds left. Stanford freshman Casey with 4.6 seconds left and Moseley grabbed the rebound of the second but was called for traveling. Duke had another chance, but Nate

James' 25-footer bounced off the rim at the buzzer. Duke, which has two starters back from last season's team that reached the national championship game, has six freshmen among its 10 scholarship players. There were a lot of good things like the comeback in overtime," Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski said. "Our defense was better than I thought it would be and it kept us in the ballgame."

Moseley led Stanford with 20 points and Madsen had 15.

"We knew we had to make some big plays down the stretch and we did to get to overtime," Moseley said. "We showed some depth and now we'll

Tickets to see the "Dayne Train" going for top dollar

MADISON, Wis. (AP) - Tickets for Wisconsin's regular-season football finale against lowa are being advertised for as much as $300 each as Badgers tailback Ron Dayne seeks to break the NCAA career rushing record.

Tickets from the UW box office have been sold out all week. However, et sites have offers big the game

Student tickets in the Camp Randall Stadium's end zone, with a $12 face value, are being advertised for as much as $300 each. Regular $28 tickets are being advertised on the Internet for $300.

One Milwaukee-area ticket broker said sellers expecting to command those kinds of prices might be in for a surprise. Mark Jones of Front Row II Inc. said his company had been selling Badger tickets all week at prices ranging from $95 to $195, with most selling in the lower price range.

Jones said pregame hype was making some season ticket holders greedy, leading them to expect as much as $300 per ticket.

Police said they will be patrolling for scalpers around Camp Randall before Saturday's game. People are being warned by UW police that they could face fines up to $150 for selling tickets on university property.

Blue Jays send Hentgen to St. Louis

catcher Alberto Castillo and minor league pitcher Matt DeWitt.

Hentgen, who will earn $6 million next season, was 11-12 with a 4.79 ERA in 1999 - third-highest among Toronto's starters. In 34 starts, he pitched 199 innings, allowing 225 hits. He struck out 118 and walked 65.

In 1998, Hentgen was 12-11 with a 5.17 ERA. Since going 20-10 with a 3.22 in his Cy Young Award-winning season of 1996, Hentgen is 38-33.

Hentgen, a fifth-round pick of Toronto in the 1986 amateur draft, had played for the Jays for eight seasons. He was a key member of the 1993 World Serieswinning team.

Women's Swimming:

This Weekend: lowa (0-2) travels to Columbus, Ohio, this weekend for a double dual meet with Ohio State and Purdue.

Last Meet: lowa's last meet was on Oct. 29-30 against Wisconsin. The Hawkeyes fell to the Badgers, 213-132 in Madison. Juniors Andrea Pennington and Stacey Wertz won the 100 breaststroke and 50 free respectively. Sophomore Melissa Loehndorf placed first in the 400 IM.

Scouting Ohio State: Ohio State will face West Virginia today before battling the Hawkeyes on Saturday. The Buckeyes lost their last dual meet to Cincinnati, Iowa was defeated by Ohio State, 119-92, in their last meeting in 1997.

Scouting Purdue: The Boilermakers narrowly defeated the Hawkeyes last year, 159-141. lowa had eight event winners, including Zisu in the 100 and 200 fly and 200 back. Senior Ileana Buciu won the 1000 and 500 free

Women's Cross Country:

Standout statistic: At the Big Ten Championships. Anne Ruffcorn ran her personal best time of 18:10 and finished only six places behind Arens.

lowa's key: The Hawkeyes are hoping to be among the top ten teams at the NCAA Regional meet. Another strong performance from Arens is the key to reaching this goal.

Coach's comment: "I want to have a good season ending meet which would jump-start us into next year and the indoor track season," said coach Sara Swails. "I would like the team to go out relaxed and just do

Last year: The Hawkeyes qualified for the NCAA Championships after finishing second out of the 22 teams regional 18000 meet at Augusta, Kan., a year

meet: lowa finished ninth in the Big Ten Meet on October 30, Nick Nordheim was lowa's top runner placing 23rd overall with a time of 26:18 for the 8.000 meter race.

Standout statistic: The course for the NCAA Regional meet is the longest distance lowa will race so far this season. Most meets are 8,000 meters but for the NCAA Regional and National meets the length is increased to 10,000 meters.

lowa's key: In order for the Hawkeyes to make a return trip to the NCAA Championships they will probably need two runners among the first ten finishers. The best chance of that will come from Nordheim and Paul Sarris who both finished in the top 20 at last year's regional meet.

Coach's comment: "I am optimistic about our chances because of the way we have run in practice," said coach Larry Wieczorek. "We have bounced back from the Big Ten Meet and the team is looking terrific."

Next meet: The top two teams automatically qualify for the NCAA Championships in Bloomington, Ind.

Pak surges into lead at Las Vegas

■ Se Ri Pak shot a 66 to take one-stroke lead in the LPGA Tour Championship.

> By Doug Ferguson Associated Press

LAS VEGAS (AP) - No longer under a spotlight so glaring it made her sick, Se Ri Pak quietly went about her business Thursday and wound up with a 6-under 66 for a one-stroke lead after the first round of the LPGA Tour Championship.

On a still, sunny day just off the Las Vegas Strip, Pak birdied five of the first seven holes on the back nine of the Desert Inn Golf Club, then capped her round with a solid save of par on the 18th hole.

Janice Moodie of Scotland birdied three of the last four holes for a 67, while six-time winner Karrie Webb got off to a solid start in her bid to clinch player of the year and smash the LPGA Tour's season scoring average.

Webb struggled coming in but still managed a 68 and was tied with Kelly Robbins and Lorie Kane. Juli Inkster, paired with Webb, bogeyed the final hole and was at 70. The year has belonged almost exclusively to Webb and Inkster, who between them have won 11 tournaments and three of the four major championships. They also are the only two players to surpass $1 million in earnings.

Pak remembers what it was like to have everyone watching her every move. Just last year, she took the tour by storm as a 20-year-old by winning back-to-back majors and four times during a season that left her physically and emotionally spent.

She has won three times this year, but has been somewhat lost amid the success of Webb and Inkster.

"Did they forget about me?

flashing a smile that showed how much control she has of her life. "This year, Julie and Karrie, it is their season. They play so good and play so strong. I don't mind trying to follow them. Having fun out there, all season.

Maybe," Pak said,

Feel more relaxed. Just enjoy it

When she's not overpowering a golf course, Pak has been making the transition to freedom from parents who "keep looking at me like little baby" and a Korean press that used to chronicle her every step.

She is cooking and doing her own laundry, making her own schedule and staying out as late as she wants. She no longer has an entourage around her to tell her what to do and when to do it.

Pak took control of her life by dumping swing coach David Leadbetter and firing her Korean manager, turning over her affairs to IMG.

Everything is perfect. Better than last year," she said. And, as she showed Thursday, she can still play.

None of her six birdie putts was longer than eight feet, and had nothing more than a 9-iron for her approach shots on the back nine. "Just every hole, I do my best," she said. "Sometimes it works, sometimes it not work. But today, I just feel so good."

Webb has felt good all year. Along with winning six times and getting her first major championship in the du Maurier, she has only finished outside the top 10 in three out of 24 tournaments this

The result is a 69.45 scoring average, a mark so astounding that Webb could afford four rounds at 81 and still beat the record of 69.99 that Annika Sorenstam set last year.

"Now I can shoot an 85 one day," she said. "I'm not really thinking about that. Obviously, I want to play well this week, to have as low a scoring average as I possibly can and set the record ... and see how long it takes for someone to break Winning is still a priority, the one way to assure the 24-year-old Australian her first player of the year award. Inkster, having a historic season in her own right, would have to win this week and Webb finish third or lower for the 39-year-old Californian to win player of the year.

Inkster was right there, tied for the lead at 4-under, until a threeputt from about 40 feet on the fringe at the 13th. She also botched a birdie chance on the par-5 15th when her bunker shot just made the fringe, and she closed with a bogey on the 18th.

cessful in stopping Dayne was last week's opponent, Purdue. Dayne rushed for 222 yards on 32 carries, keying the Badgers' 28-21 win. Bowen and fellow defensive back D.J. Johnson have seen that tape, and they are hoping they won't be the ones being laughed at when the Badgers' bowl opponent breaks down film.

"It happened to a Purdue guy," Bowen said. "He was 12 yards off the line, and Dayne broke through, with a head of steam, and we looked at each other, kind of smirked, and hoped it wasn't going to be us."

Ferentz knows that it's probably not a matter of if, but when, Dayne sets the new rushing stan-

"He's going for the record. I don't think you can hold us accountable for, what has he got, 20,000 yards- at least it seems like it," Ferentz said. "The fact that he's only 99 yards away shows that he's had a tremendous career. Odds say he's going to get his 99- it's a rare time when he doesn't."

Wisconsin is a running team. Carried by Dayne, the Badgers rank first in the Big Ten in rushing, with 263.7 yards per game. Their dependence on Dayne is clear; they are last in passing, with 141.7 yards per game.

Some Iowa ABC stations are carrying the Iowa/Wisconsin tilt until Dayne breaks the record, then cutting away to the Kansas State/Nebraska top-ten showdown in Lincoln, Neb. Dayne says that if there are Husker fans clamoring for their team, they shouldn't have to wait long, since the Badgers plan to run, run, and run, and then maybe pass.

'We're a running team," Dayne said. "We run the ball then we pass. I imagine the score won't be that run up by the time I break it. I can't score eight touchdowns before I get 99 yards."

By Dave Goldberg Associated Press

Five weeks ago, the Buffalo Bills handed the Miami Dolphins their only loss of the season, then lost two of the next three.

Now they come home from a three-game road trip to play the Dolphins. And they come off their best game of the season, a 34-17 win in Washington in which Doug Flutie put to rest cries he be benched in favor of Rob Johnson.

Buffalo is favored by three the home field advantage. But that advantage might not be as great as the Bills get in December. The Dolphins could feel right at home if the weather in the North stays as warm as it's been for the last week or so.

One man the Bills won't see is Dan Marino, out again with the pinched nerve in his neck. That hasn't hurt the Dolphins, who have won five straight, four with Damon Huard, who came in series. But the key is the ground, game. Flutie was effective against Washington because Jonathan Linton and Antowain Smith combined for 164 yards on the ground and he scrambled for 40 more. Miami, on the other hand, is sec-

Fight crucial to boxing's success

Boxing has taken its lumps in 1999 and needs the Lewis-Holyfield fight to get it back on track.

> By Jeff Goodman Associated Press

After what has been a pretty rough year so far for boxing, Saturday night's fight between Evander Holyfield and Lennox Lewis could go a long way toward healing the sport.

Hopefully, this bout will go smoother than their last one. Most ringside observers thought Lewis fought well enough for 12 rounds on March 13 to win an easy decision. Instead, the three judges scored the bout a draw, raising a storm of criticism. This is it. These two fighters hold the weight of boxing on their shoulders," said HBO executive producer Ross Greenburg. Greenburg isn't the only one in boxing who wants a bout that lives up to its billing. "If you'd asked me this question in the past, I'd say they were blowing it out of proportion again," said ESPN analyst Al Bernstein. "I'm not one to give in to gloom and doom.

Boxing has virtually disapeared on network television. Fox, NBC, and CBS don't televise any professional boxing and even cable's USA network dropped its weekly program.

NBC's last fight was in October 1992, and Fox last televised a bout in March 1998, ABC aired a couple of events last year and plans to do the same in 2000. On the cable side, HBO, Show-

The Blue Jays opened the GM meetings by trading Shawn Green to the Los Angeles Dodgers on Monday along with a minor league infielder for Raul Mondesi and reliever Pedro Borbon.

Earlier Wednesday, Cincinnati general manager Jim Bowden said he made five proposals involving Griffey that Seattle rejected, and the Mariners made three proposals that the Reds rebuffed.

Bowden wouldn't say how many players were included in the offers, but he gave a hint at what "It would make us non-competitive," said Bowden, who put together a team that lost a onegame playoff to the New York Mets for the NL's wild-card spot. "Instead of 96, we think we'd win 79. They're asking for all of our best players."

Bowden didn't plan to meet again with Seattle's Pat Gillick before the general mangers meetings ended today.

"We want to continue the discussions, but certainly not at the price that they're asking at this point," Bowden said.

Griffey, eligible for free agency after next season, asked to be traded closer to his home in Orlando, Fla., and the Mariners said they will try to comply. Griffey grew up in Cincinnati, where his dad was a star on the Big Red Machine of the 1970s and is currently a coach.

Bowden said the situation could change in a month or two if the Mariners haven't traded Griffey. "One of the big reasons we want Ken Griffey is not just he's the best position player in all baseball, but the fact what he can do for the city of Cincinnati," Bowden said. "After winning 96 games, you bring Griffey into the house, he might have the effect on Cincinnati that Mark McGwire had on St. Louis, or even more." Bowden doesn't blame Gillick for setting a high price. "If I were in his position, I'd be asking for a lot, too. These kinds of trades take time," Bowden said.

Penn State trying to avenge two Michigan losses

■ After losing to the Wolverines two years running, the Nittany Lions want revenge.

> By David Kinney Associated Press

Under Joe Paterno, Penn State is not often humiliated

Never has a team embarrassed the Nittany Lions in consecutive seasons the way Michigan has in 34-8 and 27-0 victories over the past two years. The closest to the Wolverines' 53-point advantage: 41, by Syracuse in victories of 48-21 and 24-10 in 1987-88.

So revenge will play a role Saturday for No. 6 Penn State (9-1, 5-1 Big Ten) against No. 16 Michigan (7-2, 4-2) at State College, Pa.

"If I told you that didn't motivate me, I'd be lying," Penn State's Brandon Short said. "I try not to look at things in that perspective. It's just another team we're trying to stop. But when we're running in the spring and summer and things like that, we're thinking about Michigan."

In Saturday's other games involving ranked teams, No. 1 Florida State is at home against Maryland; No. 2 Virginia Tech meets No. 19 Miami; No. 3 Tennessee is at Arkansas; No. 4 Florida visits South Carolina; No. 5 Kansas St. is at No. 7 Nebraska; No. 8 Mississippi State plays at No. 11 Alabama; No. 9 Wisconsin is at home against Iowa, and No. 10 Texas entertains Texas Tech.

Also, No. 12 Marshall is at Western Michigan; No. 13 Georgia Tech at home against Clemson; No. 14 Georgia entertains Auburn; No. 15 BYU visits Wyoming; No. 17 Michigan State is at Northwestern; No. 20 Minnesota is at home for Indiana; No. 21 Southern Mississippi entertains Louisiana-Lafayette; No. 23 Washington is at UCLA; No. 24 East Carolina is at home to Cincinnati, and No. 25 Ohio

State plays Illinois. The annual meeting against Michigan became one of Penn State's biggest games when the Nittany Lions joined the Big Ten

Over the first four years, the games measured up: Penn State won three, but each game was Then in 1997, the game promised to be the best yet. The Lions were No. 2, the Wolverines were No. 4 and both teams were chasing the national title. Michigan would go on to win the title, and it showed why.

Michigan's defense held Penn State to 169 yards — its lowest total in 10 years - and beat the Lions 34-8, Paterno's worst loss

A year later, another historic worst for the Lions. This time,

Penn State was No. 9 but still in contention, while Michigan was No. 22. The Wolverines again dominated defensively, holding Penn State to 200 yards and no points in a 27-0 victory. The Nittany Lions hadn't been shut out in 11 years.

Penn State's offensive - truly offensive - numbers: A total of eight points and 369 yards in two

"It's not hard to understand what happened the last two years," Kevin Thompson said. Michigan is a great team. They have a lot of tradition. They won the national championships two years ago, so it's no mystery.'

LaVar Arrington has a different take on the losses.

"They come with a certain attitude when they play us, and it seems like eventually it overwhelms us during the game," he said. "Whatever it may be, it's different now. At some point, we expected to lose to them. I don't expect us to play that way this

Neither is Michigan's Tom Brady expecting the easy time he had last year, when he finished 17-of-30 for 224 yards and two

"It is the same Penn State defense," he said, "but it's the same Penn State defense that's had another year to mature and play together. I'm sure every guy on that defense is better than they were last year.'

Wisconsin's Ron Dayne, facing Iowa and the worst defense in the Big Ten, needs only 99 yards to break Ricky Williams' Division 1-A rushing record of 6,279 yards set last year. Dayne, who came into the season needing 1,717 yards to overtake Williams, gained 222 last week in a Heisman showdown with Purdue's

Of just as much concern to the Badgers as Dayne's run at the Heisman Trophy is a six-game winning streak and possible ticket to the Rose Bowl.

$25.2 million payroll, 24th among the 30 major league teams. He got five firsts, 19 seconds and three thirds for 85 points.

Joe Torre of the World Series champion Yankees, last year's winner, was third with 21 points, followed by Johnny Oates of the Texas Rangers with 18 and Mike Hargrove, fired by the Cleveland Indians after losing to Boston in the playoffs, with 13. Hargrove will manage Baltimore next season.

Boston had been expected to struggle after Vaughn left as a free agent and signed with the Anaheim Angels.

"Certainly Mo was an integral part of this ballclub in the past years, but wasn't with our team,' Williams said. "He was with another team, and you have to move on. We weren't trying to replace Mo. Maybe some other players could step up and do a little more here and a little more there. Basically, that's what happened. A lot of different people stepped up."

Boston, 22 games behind the New York Yankees when it won the AL wild-card in 1998, finished only four games back this year, improving from 92-70 to 94-68.

The Red Sox pressed New York in September, sweeping a threegame series at Yankee Stadium and closing within three games.

Ali's daughter overpowers opponent

■ Laila Ali knocked out Shadina Pennybaker in her second professional fight.

> By John Raby Associated Press

CHESTER, W.Va. - Unlike in her boxing debut, Laila Ali had enough time to use some of her father's flair. She needed his strong finish, too.

Despite a sizable height advantage, Laila Ali couldn't beat her opponent right away as she did in her first fight.

"I felt strong. I felt like I could go another four rounds," Ali said. 'It was nothing for me.'

From a physical standpoint, this resembled one of the three Ali-Frazier fights. Here was Ali's 5-foot-10 daughter alongside the 5-4 Pennybaker, sporting a closely cropped hairstyle, a la Frazier. It took at least a round for Ali to figure out how to hit the smaller boxer. She landed few solid punches early.

"I'm not going to be perfectly right where I need to be all the time." Ali said. "That's why I took my time and why it went four rounds.

For Pennybaker, making her professional debut, her legs tired quickly, which seemed to be the least of her problems.

"It was hard to reach her head."

There was no mistaking this fight for the Ali-Frazier "Thrilla in Manila." It did have some of the old Ali drama, even if her old man wasn't in attendance.

The daughter got the crowd of 2,000 going from the start.

Introduced as the "Queen Bee," a reference to her father's famous "Float like a butterfly, sting like a bee" quotation - Ali danced around the ring with her arms raised, her back facing Pennybaker's corner as she strode by.

In the first round, Ali taunted her opponent and even shook her head when Pennybaker landed a punch, just like her dad used to

"What was I saying to her? It wasn't real nice," Ali said with a

I tell you what I did say. I was telling her her punches weren't hurting. That's one of the things I was saying. I couldn't even feel it.'

Early in the fourth round, Ali bloodied her opponent's lip and forced a standing-eight count with numerous blows to Pennybaker's head, one of which dislodged her mouthpiece.

Going to an NBA game just got a good deal more expensive

■ The cost of attending an NBA game went up 13 percent this season.

> By Ronald Blum Associated Press

NEW YORK - NBA ticket prices are soaring higher than its players.

For the first time, basketball has the highest ticket prices among the four major sports. The NBA's average ticket costs $48.37 this season, the Team Marketing Report said Thursday, a 13.8 percent increase from the $42.54 average last season.

The New York Knicks, who haven't won the NBA title since 1973, have the highest average at $86.82, a 9.4 percent rise. The Los Angeles Lakers, who moved from the Forum to the Staples Center, are second at $81.89. increasing their average ticket price 60.2 percent from $51.11.

That was the second-highest increase, trailing only the Toronto Raptors, who raised their average 63.4 percent, from $26.17 to $42.76, when they left Sky-Dome for their first full season in Air Canada Centre. At the other end, the Charlotte Hornets have the lowest average $32.08 despite a 13.9 percent increase from $28.12, and the Vancouver Grizzles have the second-lowest average, $34.71. The NHL has the second-highest average, $45.70, following a 6.9 percent increase this season. The NFL average is $45.63 following a 6.6 rise, and baseball had a $14.91 average following a

Since the 1991-92 season, NBA ticket prices have gone up 108.1 percent from a $23.24 average. NFL ticket prices have increase 81.0 percent since 1991 and baseball 72.6 percent. NHL prices were not tracked until NBA spokesman Brian McIntyre said the league's calculation of the average was slightly less. "Our records indicate the percentage of change is about 9 percent," he said.

The Fan Cost Index, which includes two average-price tickets, two average-price child tickets, four small soft drinks, two small beers, four hot dogs, parking, two programs and two adult caps, increased 11.0 percent to $266.61 from $240.26. The Knicks remained No. 1, going up 5.9 percent to $455.26, and the Lakers shot up 44.7 percent to second at $427.57.
