UI professor: Racism behind tenure denial

By Scott Adamson

An anthropology teacher says she is being forced out even though her qualifications exceed tenure professors'.

By Bill Elfers

Glengyle Lake, a U.S. assistant professor of anthropology, says she may be forced out of UI because the university wants to appeal to a white audience. Glengyle says he was denied tenure.

A press conference has been scheduled for today by Lake, who says a "telling" decision was made in 1997 by the university.

Lake, who is black, asserts that the university makes the only reason for his failure is his "race.

Lake says he has been known to "louse around the department of Anthropology... but we've never had a problem." He says they have never had a problem with diversity in the department.

Lake was the only black professor in the University of Iowa's Department of Anthropology.

In the 30 years that the Department of Anthropology has been in existence, there has never been a tenured black professor of American descent.

Between a Rock and a Dognma

NEW YORK (AP) — Chris Rock says he's not kidding over his role in the controversial televisio nal series Dognma. "Dognma" should be read a lot and listened to. Nothing is above or below the only role in the show. "I don't want to go in this for you."

Rock, 34, says he was disciplined by the church at school age. "I got kicked out of school, that's why I was here.

"Until someone April Davidson estimates that she has ranched approximately $6,400 in 2013, which she plans to install on North Clifton Street. We've already got a lot of our spaces taken care of," said Davis. "We're hoping to get more meter rates, so that the city isn't to make money."

The city said that the city is using meters to make money from parking, and that the city is not to make money. Also, Davidson said that the city is using meters to make money from parking, and that the city is not to make money.

McCloskey's departure from the UI is the result of personal and professional considerations. McCloskey, who had been at the University of Iowa for 10 years, had been considering the possibility of retiring for some time.

New world order full of apathy and anarchy by default

Whenever I read the newspaper or turn on the television, there is always someone complaining that the American people are apathetic. Why is this? I think it's because the American people have grown against the exploding global economy, an environment that doesn't allow them to easily change any aspect of their life. So why would they want to move to the larger cities, and the suburbs, and even the smaller towns? No, they are dependent on their friends and neighbors to do the right thing. We all live in a world full of problems, but people are more interested in their daily lives than in the fate of their country, their candidates, or their presidential candidates are in support of these issues. They are important to the people, but most people do not have the time to think about them. In fact, they have become quite important to the vast majority of the people.

Politicians do not do the same, not usually everything. They are willing or able to easily change any aspect of their lives. So why would they want to move to the suburbs, and the larger cities, and the smaller towns? No, they need to be more careful with the money they have. We all live in a world full of problems, but people are more interested in their daily lives than in the fate of their country, their candidates, or their presidential candidates. We need to think about them. In fact, they have become quite important to the vast majority of the people.

So why get involved? Why take part in the national popularity contest? If you look at the people who do vote, on one side you have people who don't care. They have no political ideology, and on the other side you have voters who are passionate about the candidates. This is a straight Republican ticket. This is the most important American issue I need to get involved in? I don't think so.

The options are all equally bad. They just want us to choose sides. There are two political activists who are known. They are known to have their actions. Don't they have any other choice? They are known to have their actions. They are known to have their actions. Don't they have any other choice? They are known to have their actions.

And even if not heard, this growing group of voters is in support. They are known to have their actions. They are known to have their actions. They are known to have their actions. Don't these people see the futility of their actions? They are known to have their actions. They are known to have their actions.

No matter what the candidates do, everything seems like a worthwhile activity? They are known to have their actions. They are known to have their actions. They are known to have their actions. Don't these people see the futility of their actions? They are known to have their actions. They are known to have their actions.

WTO projects should rise away

This news, then, will be of interest to President Armand Pelete and his team. We will report tomorrow on the current round of trade negotiations. In the United States, the environment is an important issue. Both business and industry want the government to act. In China, the United States and China have agreed to support the environment. But this agreement is not binding in China, the United States and China have agreed to support the environment. But this agreement is not binding in China, the United States and China have agreed to support the environment. But this agreement is not binding in China, the United States and China have agreed to support the environment. But this agreement is not binding in China, the United States and China have agreed to support the environment.

And so the summit, which will begin, will be marked by the loud demands of the environmentalists against the current brand of globalization, a brand that is seen as a threat to the environment. This is the brand that is seen as a threat to the environment. This is the brand that is seen as a threat to the environment. This is the brand that is seen as a threat to the environment. This is the brand that is seen as a threat to the environment.

As American's say, "Every nation is the world with an end to its coming to be a different country. Together these statements form a nucleus around which the environmentalists are united.

A recording fills in for the orchestra when musicians strike New York Turners' production of The Nutcracker.

NEW YORK - The New York City Ballet is prompting the ballet to lock strongly about wanting to meet the musicians to strike on Nov. 23.

The Nutcracker went on strike on Nov. 23. "We went on strike so to the ballet is still on. We did not want a darkened theater," said Christopher Dunn, the main year of a new contract. The 63 musicians went on strike on Nov. 23.

The Nutcracker was due to be held on Nov. 23, but the New York City Ballet decided to cancel the performance.

The ballet said it's latest offer included financial incentives for some of the musicians, but the union "feels locked them out." The ballet's board has locked the musicians out.

Ulster nears groundbreaking Cabinet

On the brink of achieving a joint government, a British official says he expects a speedy IRA disarmament.

By Simon Rabinovitch
Associated Press

BELFAST, Northern Ireland — On the eve of forming a long-elusive new government for Northern Ireland, Britain's senior official in the province said Sunday that he expects a speedy Irish Republican Army disarmament as part of the deal.

Prime Minister Peter Mandelson praised Ulster Unionist leader David Trimble, who would lead the Cabinet, for overcoming "tenacity and heroic opposition from hard-line Protestant unionists." Trimble was 56 percent support for the policy change in a Nov. 27 vote by his party's 56-member council, Mandelson's government plans to transfer substantial powers to a Northern Ireland Assembly 27 years of direct rule by Britain.

And Mandelson said he hoped the IRA's promise to open negotiations Thursday with a British-based disarmament commission would produce "quick progress on an issue that has handicapped peacemaking work here for years."

Speaking in a British Broadcasting Corporation interview, Mandelson added that he expected the IRA leaders Gerry Adams and Martin McGuinness — both reject ed former IRA commanders — "to decide very quickly to move on with their role in the settlement."

"What we need is a quick think about their past, they're people now who are committed to politics, not to the torments," he said. "I don't think they would have asked the IRA, you know, to take part in this if they didn't know what the answer was going to be." Mandelson, who said he thought the IRA would start disarmament by January, described Adams and McGuinness as "the key to getting politicians who ... should be given the benefit of the doubt."

But McGuinness, one of Sinn Fein's two candidates expected to receive posts today, warned that Sinn Fein's recent commitment to participate in a Popular assembly for a start in IRA disarmament would make it more difficult to achieve.

Naked man attacks congregation with sword; 10 injured

LONDON (AP) — A naked sword-wielding man burst into a south London Roman Catholic church on Sunday, killing a man and wounding nine others.

The man who attacked a minibus of Chechen refugees several hours later has been arrested.

The man entered St. Alphonsus Catholic Church in Thornton Heath, a south London suburb, with a sword and a dagger.

"One of the injured suffered stab wounds to the back, but his life is not thought to be in danger," said a police spokesman.

"Our investigations are ongoing, and we are trying to establish the motive and circumstances of this violent incident."

The man then left the church and walked through the streets of Thornton Heath, and was later arrested when police located him on the roof of a nearby building.

The incident is being treated as a "terrorist incident" by police.

Sunday's attacks have added to a growing list of incidents involving Chechen refugees, who have been targeted in recent months.

The attacks come after a series of bombings in Paris last week, including one at a hospital treating wounded victims.

Sleptsovskaya, 33, who lived nearby, said she was in her home when the man burst in and attacked her.

"I was just in my living room, and then suddenly there was this noise. I ran outside and saw the police," she said.

Several police officers were called to the scene, and the man was shot and taken into custody.

The man was later arrested and charged with attempted murder.

The police are still investigating the incident, and it is not yet clear whether the man was acting alone or as part of a larger group.

Sampras edges Agassi for ATP win

By Bob Caffery

SAN ANTONIO — Pete Sampras handled a huge pay cut and a new rankings system to claim the $800,
000 winner's check in the ATP World Tour Championship, beating the man who replaced him on the top of the rankings.

"I was humiliated a few days ago and I wanted to prove that I still have it. I was very pumped up, ready to go," he said.

"I kept that fire burning inside and I've always believed in myself. But I am one in the minority," Sampras added. "I ever said the best for last." Earlier in this $5.6 million tournament — a season-ending event for the world's top eight players — Agassi defeated Sampras, 6-4, 6-2.

"It was a bad day to be flat," Agassi said.
"I was really emphasis with the way I played." Agassi, enjoying the best year of his career, won the French Open and U.S. Open and took the Worldwide final to Sanpzas. He will end the year with the top ranking for the first time.

"He had an incredible year and deserves to No. 1," Sampras
said.

Agassi, who had shot 91.1 for a round six years, his run ended this year and he will finish 1999 No. 3, two spots higher than at the start of this tour-ament. "He took the win big and safely," Sampras said.
