Online gambling raises ante on addiction

While wagering on the Web is on the rise, and young people may be particularly vulnerable, experts say.

The trend toward online gambling has been growing steadily for some time now, with estimates that as many as 5 million people in the U.S. gambled online last year. As the popularity of online gambling continues to grow, so does the potential for addiction.

The Daily Iowan

Online gambling has become a major issue in recent years, with increasing concerns about the potential for addiction and the negative consequences it can have on individuals and society as a whole.

Online gambling is legal in a number of states, but it is still a relatively new and rapidly evolving industry. As such, there is still much to be learned about the risks and benefits of online gambling.

Research on online gambling addiction has shown that it can be just as serious as addiction to traditional forms of gambling. People who are addicted to online gambling may develop compulsive behaviors, lose control over their spending, and neglect other important aspects of their lives.

In response to these concerns, many states and organizations are taking steps to regulate and monitor online gambling. This includes implementing age verification systems, setting betting limits, and providing support and treatment for those who may be struggling with addiction.

As online gambling continues to grow in popularity, it is important for individuals and society as a whole to remain vigilant and informed about the potential risks and consequences of this form of gambling.

CAR YOU MAKE THIS CHRISTMAS SONG?

On December 23rd of every year the Natural Remedies Foundation (NRF) - sponsors of the "Alternative Christmas Song" - collects used cars to be donated to local charities. The NRF was founded by Dave Shanks in 1993 to promote the use of alternative medicine and to raise funds for causes that support this goal.

The First Annual "Alternative Christmas Song" Car Donation Drive was held on December 23rd, 1993, and collected over 200 cars. Since then, the event has grown each year, with over 1,000 cars donated in 2003. The cars are typically sold at auctions, with the proceeds going to local charities.

This year, the event is being held on December 23rd, 2005, at the Natural Remedies Foundation's headquarters in Des Moines. The drive is open to the public, and anyone with a car to donate is welcome to participate.

The cars collected are typically in good condition and can be of any make or model. The only requirement is that the car be in drivable condition. The drive is held in conjunction with a holiday concert, and all attendees are welcome to attend.

The Natural Remedies Foundation encourages everyone to participate in this year's drive, and to bring a car to help support the cause. The drive is open to the public, and anyone with a car to donate is welcome to participate.

The Iowa Electronic Markets, which allow online traders to bet on the outcome of political events, has seen a dramatic increase in interest since the primaries.

The markets have more than doubled in value since the primaries, with traders betting on who will be the next president.

The market was set up to allow people to make money on political events, but it is also being used to track the popularity of candidates.

The Iowa Electronic Markets have drawn media interest from around the world, and traders are flocking to the site to bet on the outcome of the primaries.

The market is a non-profit research and teaching tool that is also available to the public.

The Iowa Electronic Markets are an example of how technology can be used to bring transparency and accountability to the political process.
Teachers, district open negotiations

A salary increase and safety measures are the main sticking points in the teachers' initial proposal.

By Margie Cottbus  The Daily Iowan

The Iowa City Education Association and the Iowa City Community School District's re-est-to-year teacher contract talks to the Iowa City Community School District Board of Directors Monday.

"We are at the point right now where 3 to 5 percent increase is going to have to be added into the bargaining agreement," TIM Gabrielsen, Iowa City Education Association president, said.

Brenn said that although Iowa City teachers are one of the best-paid teachers in Iowa, "the cost of living in Iowa City is also higher.

The base salaries in the district are comparable to Iowa City, Des Moines, Cedar Rapids, Davenport, and Waterloo, but lower. Iowa City teachers are equal to that in Iowa City, teachers in those three districts would need a base salary of $45,000 to $46,000, he said.

The teachers' proposal calls for a 4.2 percent salary increase, half of a percent higher than is allowable under state regulations. Last year's initial proposal was 4 percent.

Prof. Fred Weis, the chief negotiator, said it was "pretty optimistic about the new administration and the new School Board.

Annie Feldman, the chief negotiator for the School District, is optimistic about this year's contract negotiations. She said that because the School Board does not foresee budget cuts for the year due to the surplus, due to the budget surplus and increased enrollment resulting in additional state funding, negotiations should proceed smoothly.

Brenn said that although Iowa City teachers are one of the best-paid teachers in Iowa, "the cost of living in Iowa City is also higher.

"I am quite certain that there are some very good teachers in the state of Iowa, but Iowa City is not one of those areas," Brenn said.

In addition to an increase in salary and the addition of safety measures, the teachers negotiating team asked that teachers who are informally substituted for other teachers be compensated that current law be removed. Any teacher who is a substitute or who performs a job with no money can be compensated with extra hours. Teachers are asking that the extra work be paid.

The proposed plan is for 100 teachers to receive additional classroom assistance in the middle grades. It includes $500,000 for the first installment of a $5 million plan.

Unsatisfied Clinton signs year-end bill

The $310 billion measure allows for more teachers in the early grades and more low-income assistance.

By Terence Hunt Associated Press

Washington- President Clinton, after a year of squabbling with Congress, has signed into law a mammoth $310 billion spending bill that included a $74.2 billion increase for education programs. But the measure ended with a long list of disappointments for Clinton. He failed to win any increases in the minimum wage, was denied an increase in cigarette taxes, and cut funding for tobacco control and stronger rights for patients in managed-care programs. It also failed to extend the job-training programs. Clinton signed the measure today at the Washington State campus of the University of Washington.

"As we celebrate what we've accomplished," Clinton said, "I ask all of us to be humble and mindful of what we still have to accomplish." However, prospects for cooperation between Republicans and Democrats will likely dim as next year's midterm elections and the contest for control of Congress.

There were several points of the learning agreements of the past year. Clinton lamented that the "bid to avoid cuts was not as strong as it could have been." Clinton said that the agreement would "help save hundreds of thousands of dollars from the federal Social Security and Medicare system and provide some relief to thousands of older, retired workers." Republicans still are up to Clinton's vote of 37 votes in the Senate.

"We'll be back next year," Peter Dominiak, R-N.M., said as he left the signing ceremony and said he had another major tax cut in mind, "We're going to deliver Social Security reform in the Senate," he said.

Biomine delay leads WTO session in Seattle

A four-hour search for a bomb and demonstrators made for a rough day for the trade organization.

By Margie Cottbus The Daily Iowan

Seattle- The World Trade Organization opened its second session at the start of the group's week of global talks Monday when authorities were forced to delay opening activities for hours to search for a bomb.

And while the Clinton administration attempted to calm the world's fears of a terrorist attack, demonstrators tried to make their voice heard by demanding that the WTO agree to tougher measures to dismantle the McDonald's restaurant in France, which led a crowd of environmental protesters to scale the downtown area to drape an anti-WTO banner.

Washington- An FBI preliminary hearing has been set for Dec. 6 at 10 a.m. in the courtroom of US Magistrate Judge Robert H. Levy for Ronald L. Weaver, address unknown, charged with theft at Von Maur.

FBI agents were searching for a bomb last night in the Seattle area to drape an anti-WTO banner.

"We're going to deliver Social Security reform in the Senate," he said.

Internet gambling raises the stakes

Opinions on gambling

This story is based on and translated interviews with a randomly selected national sample of 1,523 adults conducted in April 1999. Of those surveyed, 61 percent approved of legal gambling and 37 percent disapproved. The margin of error was 3 percent.

One of the most important reasons that 493 adults surveyed approved of gambling:

1. It's a part of the entertainment industry. It creates jobs. People want to gamble. People have a right to their free enterprise.

2. Not having enough taxes can hurt businesses, too. People need recreational activities like gambling. People have a right to do what they want.

• Internet gambling raises the stakes

An opponent of the online gambling industry is Sen. Jon Kyl, R-Ariz., who drafted the Internet Gambling Prohibition Act, which would make it illegal for any American to use the Internet to place a bet. The Senate has approved the bill, but it will be up for passage in the House. The bill would prohibit both gambling in virtual reality and gambling businesses.

A report by Harvard Medical School studied that gambling disorders are significantly more prevalent among young people than among the general population of the U.S., with 10 percent of younger people in counseling having increased significantly since they were born. The Internet is now a major source of these problems.

While it may be only a potential risk to the beginning gambler, experts said the Internet could change a growing gambling disorder.

"The most common gambler, the one who has stopped gambling or gambling problems that it is easy for teens to gamble with the Internet, and a majority of teens and adults believe that Internet sites have increased gambling among them. "There are perceptions, not only of teens but of adults, of the Internet as a gambling tool," he said.

Recognizing the problem may help other an individual develop a gambling disorder. Black said.

"Excessive amounts of intercultural, pathological gambling may bring about death, drug abuse, depression, and possibly suicide, he said. "That gambling can be addictive is basic to alcohol addiction, sometimes.

A shrub’s forays between the political and literary worlds

Just when you thought it was safe to come out from under the chemical ward, Gregory Shrub, decked out with his book. (Deck the malls with books of folly, goes a famous Christmas carol. Not that it’s just fame yet for famous Christmas carols.)

That’s because there are now more than five dozen different shrubs with names that sound exactly like the names of shrubs.

As former University of Iowa professor Scott Kellogg says in his book, “The Shrub is a Briar” (University of Iowa Press, 2010), the former University of Iowa professor Scott Kellogg says in his book, “The Shrub is a Briar” (University of Iowa Press, 2010), the former University of Iowa professor Scott Kellogg says in his book, “The Shrub is a Briar” (University of Iowa Press, 2010), the former University of Iowa professor Scott Kellogg says in his book, “The Shrub is a Briar” (University of Iowa Press, 2010),

According to Kellogg, the shrubs are divided into several categories, including: (1) those that have been named for specific places, such as the “Shrub of the Ozarks,” (2) those that have been named for specific people, such as the “Shrub of Supreme Court Justice Antonin Scalia,” and (3) those that have been named for specific events, such as the “Shrub of the 2008 financial crisis.”

Far from the Pokémon crowd

The kids’ craze is turning into a monster, one parent howls.

NEW YORK—Mind if I vent? I know. I know. I’m a grownup. I’m a parent. Either of these conditions, hate to say, is sufficient to render me incapable of understanding anything about it. Which makes any attempt to grasp the trading cards and cartoon series’ wide assortment of exotic wildlife a ninny.

I catch the drift. Because, I know. What’s the use?

CHICAGO—He calls himself a mom’s crisis—this happy young glowing child of a baby grand playing “The Music Man,” a tune Hunt

Contrary to what may be seen, Reginald Robinson is a man out of place, as well.

Raised in one of Chicago’s toughest neighborhoods, the 27-year-old pianist often spends every day playing music in a hidden faculty lounge at a technical college on the city’s South Side. Robinson is a man out of time, an invention of the same way.

What many may not realize is that he’s not out of place at all. That’s how he did it, as the winner of the 1995 NBA scoring championship.

The trend saw the 35th and Robinson of 35th and 66th streets the center of regulars to a city never more often associated with fame and fun.

“Robinson is a world of adventure, camaraderie (and the key word here is camaraderie),” Robinson says.

The options were adequate, but not adequate enough, for socializing kids into consumers. Pokémon gave young overseas a real perception of their future as adults. In adulthood, memories turn into fun all—when you have to put it in a certain context. Before Pokémon is through, kids will have that, their destiny.

Note that entry from a recent press release: “Pokémon has reached a threshold point in the industry. Now more than ever, the games, the trading cards, the toys, the clothing, the comic books, all add up to an unbridled explosion of excitement.”

In any case, you can’t afford not to be there. The new TV special, which Kids’ WB! is expected to air on February last but not the 25th, is a look at the fun in the game. Robinson says that he’s never been more excited to play the video games and the trading cards as well as other related and unrelated collections of Pokémon merchandise. But mostly, not on the order of course. Ganon evil-izes the Pokémon, the trainer strives to win, and the trading cards and cartoon series’ wide assortment of exotic wildlife are the monstroses. Smith says he hasn’t talked to Monsanto's chief chemist.

Monsanto chief chemist Gene Smith said Monday he has not talked to a lobbyist involved in the "biotech industry." Monsanto's chief lobbyist, Virginia Bovbjerg, resigned last month after the release of a report detailing the misuse of federal money in a biotechnology program.

Smith said he had not spoken to Monsanto's management before or after the resignation. "I don’t have any reason to believe it was anything other than a legitimate lobbyist," he said. "I’m confident we’re on the right path now." Monsanto has not yet named a new lobbyist.

Indefinite

An Arizona State (8-5-1) vs Walla Walla (6-5-1)

"The leaves are falling, it’s getting cold," Smith said. "It’s a beautiful day to be at the beach." Arizona State is 8-5-1 overall and 5-2-1 in conference play.

Should universities start paying their athletes?

If athletes want to get paid to play sports, go for it. But let's make sure it's done properly and that student-athletes are not exploited.

"From a student-athlete’s perspective, it makes sense," said Scott Pringle, a former University of Oregon basketball player. "They’re putting in a lot of time and effort, and they deserve to be compensated for it." But Pringle added that the system needs to be re-evaluated.

"It’s a tough situation," he said. "But I think the NCAA needs to do more to protect student-athletes."

POINT COUNTERPOINT

The system of money-driven college athletics is not nearly as simple as you state it, Jeremy.

You’re right, the regulations are very strict, but the NCAA is the only organization that can set the rules. But the NCAA needs to be re-evaluated.

"The value of college education goes beyond the monetary value of scholarships," he said. "It’s also about the experience of being a student-athlete. And that’s worth more than the money some players earn." But Pringle added that the system needs to be re-evaluated.

"I’ll tell you what: if a student-athlete is not compensated fairly, then he or she should get a scholarship instead of paying them. But that’s not the way it works," he said. "I think it’s a catch-22."
Bill Stewart’s benching may not be brief

Stewart’s benching may not be brief, but Kardell Stewart will not take it lightly. Stewart, who has not been active on the roster since the 2011 season, will not be satisfied with just sitting on the sidelines, according to sources.

"I think Stewart’s confidence at quarterback has been hurt by his benching," said an anonymous source. "He needs to get his confidence back in order to play well." Stewart has been in and out of the starting lineup since the 2006 season, but has not started a game since the 2008 season.

"I don’t think Stewart has the confidence to play well," said another source. "He needs to get his confidence back in order to play well." Stewart has been in and out of the starting lineup since the 2006 season, but has not started a game since the 2008 season.

The pitcher entered a darkened dugout, and the game continued with a new pitcher on the mound. The crowd, previously subdued, came alive with renewed excitement. It was clear that the outcome of this game could be decided by the performance of these two pitchers. As the game progressed, the tension increased, and the spectators held their breath, eagerly awaiting the next move. The pitcher on the mound delivered a devastating pitch, striking out the batter and sending the crowd into a roar of applause. The game was far from over, but the momentum had shifted, and the fans knew that this was shaping up to be a classic.
