Group: Use tobacco $ for anti-smoking campaign

One group in debate over how to do the tobacco-settlement money wants to start a campaign.

By Chris Vossman
The Iowa City Press-Citizen

Tobacco Free Iowa held a public listening-to get support and publicize its $2.5 million settlement agreement recently with the state for raising the age to purchase tobacco. The presentation was held in support of an anti-smoking campaign.

"We feel we have a multi-billion dollar opportunity to speak the issue on the problem that creates cancer in the first place," said Bill Moe, coordinator of the Iowa anti-smoking campaign.

The largest portion of the settlement, $2.4 million, will go toward a media campaign. This does not mean, however, that the most important element is just more money, Colwell said. The $2.5 million proposal from Century Tobacco, Central Tobacco and the American Tobacco Co. includes provisions that would need to spend between $2 million and $4 million to have an effective campaign.

"It's a conservative figure," he said. "We have a Republican-sponsored legislation, and that would probably end up with nothing."

Meanwhile, in Des Moines, Republican legislators have called a press conference urging Iowa tobacco smokers to take full advantage of the upcoming settlement. "We have a Republican-sponsored legislation, and that would probably end up with nothing."

"It's a conservative figure," he said. "We have a Republican-sponsored legislation, and that would probably end up with nothing."

The Iowa anti-smoking campaign hopes to spend up to $2.5 million on a campaign that would work to raise the public's awareness of the dangers of smoking.

The plan presented by Tobacco Free Iowa will have an advertising campaign that is in place such as California's "I Quit" campaign. The group would use its money to educate people on the dangers of smoking and increase a media campaign to raise public awareness.

Parents and health officials are severely concerned over the growing trend of girls getting pregnant. The problem is particularly acute in Iowa, where the Iowa Health Services maintains predominantly Roman Catholic schools, according to Parents magazine. Parents and health officials are worried over the fact that teenage girls are willing to take the risk of pregnancy, not willing to take the pill.

"This is a serious problem," said a spokesperson from Parents magazine. "Teenage girls are willing to risk their lives for a future that is uncertain." The spokesperson added that the responsibility of parents in this situation is crucial.

"Parents must understand the gravity of the situation and take necessary steps to prevent pregnancies," said the spokesperson. "This includes providing education about contraception and the importance of responsible decision-making.

The spokesperson also urged health officials to take measures to address the problem, including the availability of contraceptives and education on their use.

"We need to work together to address this issue," said the spokesperson. "It's not just a family matter, it's a community issue. We need to come together to find solutions that work for everyone.

The problem is not limited to Iowa, but is a nationwide concern. According to a recent survey, 40% of teenage girls in the United States have had at least one pregnancy.

"This is a worrying trend," said the spokesperson. "We need to address this issue with urgency and take effective measures to prevent it."

The spokesperson concluded, "We need to work together to prevent pregnancies and ensure a healthy future for our children."

was held in the Pentacrest Mall after the two-and-a-half hour forum.

World AIDS Day will be observed at the UI, the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, and the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases.

"This will be a motivational event to break the silence," said Sharon Elmore, a health educator at the UI Student Counseling Center.

"Although there is one day that we recognize to acknowledge AIDS, we are most concerned about the ongoing problem... We are most concerned about the ongoing problem," Elmore said.

"It is one day that goes on and on and on," she said. "It is just one day where we can begin the dialogue and the awareness of the need, and not until the end of the month, until the end of World AIDS Day.

World AIDS Day observance is Iowa is coordinated by Hands and Postal Interactions, a program of the Iowa Department of Health, the UI Student Counseling Center, and the UI Student Counseling Center.

"Many people think of World AIDS Day as the beginning of an awareness, but we need to continue that awareness and think about the impact AIDS has on individuals and communities," Elmore said.

Hate crime statistics should be viewed with caution.

According to a recent report released by the FBI, Iowa is the only state in which no hate crimes occurred in 1999. Not every group's hate crimes report is shared in this fashion, but the agency said the statistic "may indicate a lack of awareness or a lack of reporting within the community." The FBI defines hate crimes as crimes motivated by certain characteristics of the victim, such as race, religion, gender, or sexual orientation.

While the report itself states that no hate crimes took place in Iowa in 1999, it differs from other sources that were reported to the police. In February, three men were charged with second-degree criminal mischief for spray-painting racial slurs on a wall in the city of Cedar Falls. In August, two men were charged with the same offense for spray-painting racial slurs on the walls of two businesses in the city of Cedar Rapids. The incidents were handled by the police, but they were not included in the FBI's report.

The FBI report shows that the number of hate crimes in Iowa has decreased dramatically since 1999, but it noted that incidents involving intimidation and harassment are on the rise. According to the report, there were 29 incidents reported in Iowa in 1995, though, and there's always the dreaded end-of-year blitz into overdrive.

Letters to the Editor:

Help stop the harassment

Gather this month, Iowa City officials continued an awareness initiative known as "Iowa City's opposition to hate." It's been widely publicized that the city has two hate crimes in a year, but the city also has two hate crimes that were reported.

In the last report, issued in 1995, 29 incidents were reported in Iowa. Not every agency branch's reports are shared in this fashion, but this year, magazines and newspapers are sharing the results of hate crimes.

Express your opinion

The idea of having a police officer with a gun in his holster walking by your home can seem threatening to many people. That's why the Iowa City Police Department is offering a program called "Iowa City's opposition to hate, and strength.

Dear Editor

I'm writing to bring to your attention the issue of hate crimes in Iowa City. As a resident of the city, I've noticed an increase in hate incidents in recent months. In particular, I've seen an increase in graffiti and verbal harassment.

I believe it's important for the community to speak out against hate crimes and to support the police in their efforts to prevent them. Hate crimes are not just a matter of personal safety; they also have a negative impact on the overall quality of life in a community.

I'm writing to let you know that I support the efforts of the Iowa City Police Department to prevent hate crimes. I encourage others to do the same and to stand up against hate in our community.

Sincerely,

[Your Name]

Indiana G

to pass up basketball

Antwan Randle El has decided to skip Big Ten basketball this season, in order to concentrate on his class work. He will return to Bob Knight's team for the 1999-2000 season as a senior. Randle El said that the decision to come back was made because of his father's illness. Randle El's father, a former basketball player at Indiana, passed away this past summer. Antwan Randle El is a key player for the Hoosiers, who are expected to be one of the top teams in the Big Ten Conference. He has been a consistent performer for Knight's team, and his return will be a major boost for the Hoosiers' basketball team. Rundle El is a hard worker, and his dedication to his studies will surely benefit him in the long run.

Maryland has a lot of great young wrestlers, but Iowa still has the edge. So far this year, Iowa has been the best team in the nation. We have the best coach and we have the best young wrestlers. We have a long way to go, but we are definitely the team to beat this year.
