UI privatizes vending machines

■ Nonsoft-drink vending machines will come under the control of a Cedar Rapids company.

By Nicole Schuppert
The Daily Iowan

UI non-beverage vending machines will no longer be controlled by UI Residence Services and will be turned over to a private company by the beginning of the spring semester.

The decision to turn over the 150 machines to the Cedar Rapids-based Aramark Vending Service was due to losses that are expected to total $162,000 for fiscal year 2000, said Phillip Jones, the UI vice president for student services.

On average, the fixed costs for operating nonsoft-drink vending machines reach $417,000, but the sales only have totaled $360,000. Losses have increased over the past few years, and the UI cannot afford to operate it, he said.

Brian Boss, the general manager of the Cedar Rapids division of Aramark, said his company utilizes buying-habit data to ensure the machines are stocked with the most popular items. Aramark will match the current pricing, and it will work to maintain and increase the variety, he said.

"Because Snickers is the No. 1 selling candy bar, there should not be a machine without a Snickers bar in it," he said.

The UI was forced to make a decision between getting an outside company to provide the service or not having the machines at all, Jones said.

A committee of six reviewed the two bids received by the UI. Representatives from the purchasing department, residence halls, student services, IMU business office and IMU food service served on the committee and made a recommendation, but Jones made the final decision, he said.

UI freshman Jackie Welter said she thinks that student input should have been included in the decision.

"It doesn't make me personally angry, but I'm sure it would upset some people," she said. "I hate how it is with the Coke machines, when I have to drink Citra rather than Mountain Dew."

The Gemini Refund System will be a change from the UI's current refund system and will refund money lost in the machines in a much more timely manner, Boss said.

Special phones will be placed in six of the higher-volume vending locations on campus. When a customer loses money, he or she can pick up the phone and push a help button. The phone will put the customer through to the company, and a refund will be granted immediately, Boss said.

The proposal Aramark has offered the UI will also include a yearly vending promotion in which vending-machine customers will be able to win merchandise from the University Book Store. Boss also said Aramark will be meeting with the UI quarterly to discuss vending issues.

Aramark is a worldwide company based in Philadelphia that employs 150,000 people. The Cedar Rapids office has been open since 1969.

Although a contract has not yet been signed, Jones said the proposal includes selling the UI's vending

"That's what led us to the loss — the support. It made me swim faster." The excellent times were impressive considering where the Hawkeyes are in the young season. "We're still at high-intensity training," said Haunz. "So it's impressive to see the times dropping." The excellent times and hard-fought finish pleased Bolich. It was an outstanding finish. "We're swimming more confident," she said. "This was a great team effort. A lot of people stepped up and swam faster. All five freshmen stepped up." The Iowa women's swimming and diving team's next action will be Saturday, Dec. 11, at 3 p.m. in Ames.

Russia warns Grozny: Flee or be destroyed

■ The Chechens have been given an ultimatum to evacuate or be considered terrorists.

By Yuri Bagrov
Associated Press

DOLINSKY, Russia — Russian planes dropped leaflets on Chechnya's besieged capital Monday, warning residents and rebels to flee before federal forces launch a massive attack to smash Grozny into submission.

The Russian military has been raining bombs and artillery on the city for weeks but has been hesitant to risk storming it, for fear that street battles would cause the kind of heavy casualties that Russia suffered in Grozny in the 1994-96 war.

Now, the Russians are threatening to unleash their biggest artillery and air bombardment on the city so far. The leaflets specified a safe corridor that would be open until Saturday for residents to use to flee Grozny.

"Persons who stay in the city will be considered terrorists and bandits and will be destroyed by artillery and aviation. There will be no further negotiations. Everyone who does not leave the city will be destroyed," the leaflets said.

It was unclear who could or would leave. Most of the civilians in Grozny — the Russians estimate between 15,000 and 40,000 remain — are old or infirm.

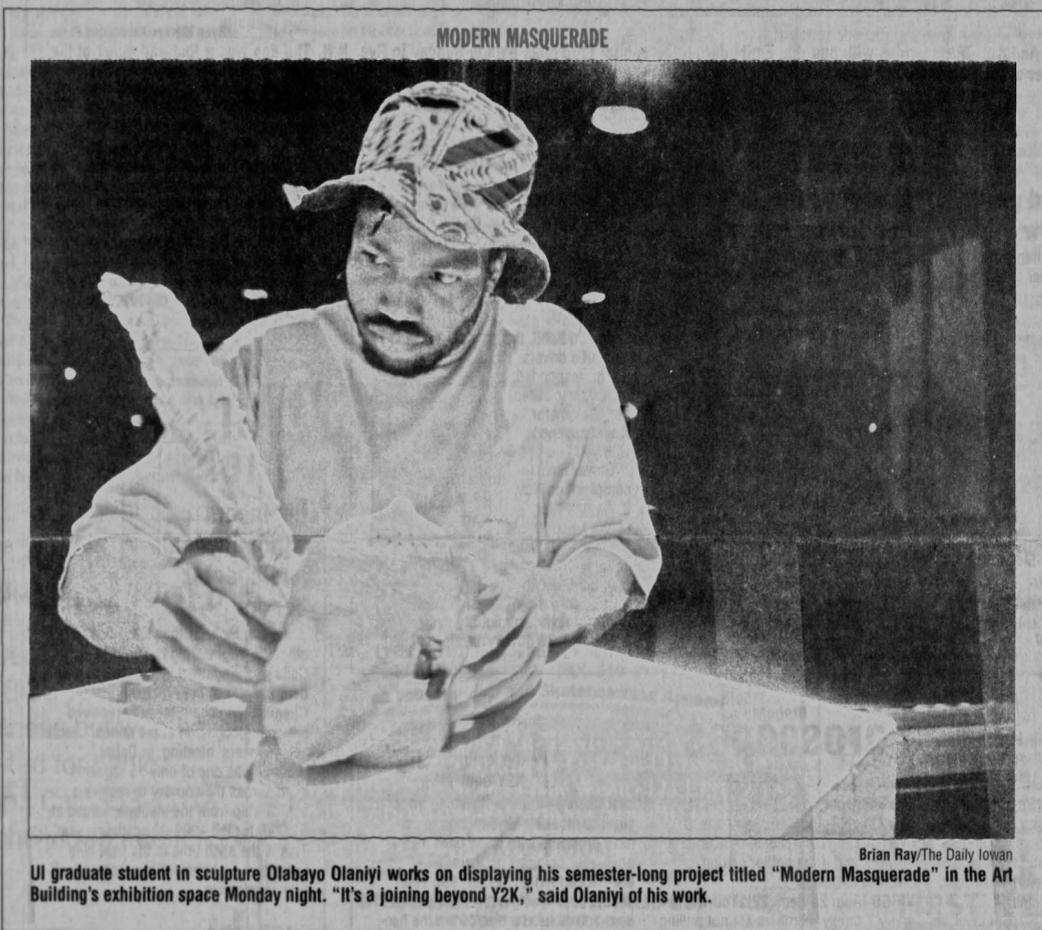

"We had to flee when they made such an ultimatum during the previous war. Last time they also said that those who stayed in the city were militants. It turned out that many of them were elderly people who had nowhere to go, and exactly the same thing will happen now," Zina Ferzuli, a refugee from Grozny staying in the village of Dolinsky, nine miles to the northwest.

The European Union expressed "deep concern" Monday at "news that civilians in Grozny have been given an ultimatum to leave by Dec. 11, or face annihilation." The 15 EU foreign ministers, meeting in Brussels, Belgium, called the warning "an unacceptable threat" by Russia.

However, Finnish Foreign Minister Tarja Halonen, who presided at the meeting, admitted that there was little the EU can do except keep prodding Russia "to rethink its policies" in Chechnya. Russia has repeatedly dismissed international criticism of its campaign.

4 wounded when teen opens fire in Okla. school

■ The suspect, a 13-year-old, is a straight-A student and popular, schoolmates say.

By Renee Ruble
Associated Press

FORT GIBSON, Okla. — A seventh-grader walked up to a crowd of youngsters waiting for the morning bell Monday and opened fire with a gun, wounding four schoolmates before a science teacher pinned him against a wall, witnesses said.

None of the injuries appeared to be life-threatening. A fifth youngster suffered bumps and bruises.

"He doesn't even know who it was he shot," sheriff's Deputy Terry Cragg said. "There was not a hate thing. I asked him why. He said, 'I don't know.'"

The 13-year-old dropped the emptied, 9mm semiautomatic handgun as he was approached by science teacher Ronnie Holuby, who also serves as the safety officer at Fort Gibson Middle School, Superintendent Steve Wilmoth said. Holuby grabbed the boy's arms and pinned him against a brick wall.

The small, slender boy was taken to court for a closed, 15-minute detention hearing, walking solemnly between two deputies and keeping his head down.

Authorities and the boy's attorney wouldn't release his name because of his age and because charges had not been filed by prosecutors. But schoolmates, including 13-year-olds Max Chrisman and Shaila Benjamin,

After beating No. 1 UConn, it's been Hawks gone

■ Since holding off the leading team in the nation, the Hawkeyes haven't played up to some fans' expectations.

By Michael Chapman
The Daily Iowan

Nearly a month ago, Hawkeye fans were basking in the glow of victory. Weeks later, they are afraid it was a fluke.

When the men's basketball team handed new Coach Steve Alford his first victory on Nov. 11 by shocking then-No. 1 University of Connecticut, 70-68, it captured the limelight.

The win sparked a night of celebration, with thousands of fans marching in droves to revel in unison at local bars.

"It was so cool to see everyone so excited," said UI freshman Amy Pennington. "It was just chaos, but it was awesome."

However, hard times have fallen on the team since the UConn game, grounding the Hawks with a 4-3 overall record. And the .500 record for the last six games has meant that celebrations have been few and far between.

As the team prepares to face the 6-0 Northern Iowa Panthers in Cedar Falls tonight, UI students wonder if the victory over UConn was a showing of Iowa's true talent or simply a fluke win.

The UI's record does not exactly reflect a team that upset the No. 1 team in the nation, said UI junior Darren Drozd.

"I thought that we were going to be a very big contender for the Final Four," he said. "It's disappointing, but it means to me that UConn was a fluke."

UI sophomore Justin Stuedemann agreed, saying Iowa's good fortune and inaccuracy in Associated Press ratings were the reasons for the victory.

"I think that it's kind of lucky that we beat UConn; it is a good team, but it was not No. 1," he said.

Iowa's play since the victory over UConn has left many UI students puzzled about why subsequent victories

High court takes on Miranda decision

■ The Supreme Court, far more conservative than the court of 1966, may strike down the landmark decision.

By Richard Carelli
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court, confronting its landmark Miranda ruling head-on, agreed Monday to decide whether police still must warn criminal suspects they have a "right to remain silent" and to get a lawyer's help.

The justices said they will rule by summer on whether Congress in 1968 effectively overturned the 1966 decision, familiar not only to police and suspects but to generations of Americans who have witnessed countless arrests in movies and on television.

Clinton administration lawyers are refusing to defend the anti-Miranda law enacted by Congress, but a federal appeals court upheld it earlier this year — setting the stage for this constitutional showdown.

The court, far more liberal 33 years ago than today, sought to remedy "inherently coercive" interrogations by requiring police to inform criminal suspects of their rights before questioning them. Failure to give the warnings can result in evidence — a confession or some incriminating statement — being lost to prosecutors.

But in a surprising ruling earlier this year, the conservative 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled that a long-ignored 1968 federal law known as Section 3501 means failure to issue Miranda warnings no longer requires automatic exclusion of evidence in federal prosecutions.

That ruling would let prosecutors use incriminating statements that Charles Dickerson of Takoma Park, Md. — accused in seven bank robberies in Maryland and Virginia — made to FBI agents even though he may not have received a proper Miranda warning.

The appeals court's rationale would apply to state prosecutions as well. By an 8-5 vote last February, it said Section 3501 made failing to give Miranda warnings just one of several factors in deciding whether statements to police were made voluntarily.

Section 3501 says "the presence or absence" of any factor such as a Miranda warning "need not be conclusive on the issue of voluntariness."

Neither Dickerson nor the federal prosecutors who had opposed his appeal focused on the 1968 law. But University of Utah law professor Paul Cassell, representing the conservative Washington Legal Foundation as a friend of the court, sought to revive the dormant Section 3501.

He succeeded in the 4th Circuit court and was appointed Monday to defend the law when the case is argued before the nation's highest court in March or April.

It's been a long twisting road. Leslie Margolin, a UI family counseling professor, says she has included writing about men patients, owning his own pizza and becoming an author. Margolin's latest book, Murderer, released this fall, follows the story of the 1927 Ruth Snyder case in which Snyder, a New York housewife, plotted with an insurance salesman to kill her husband. Snyder was found guilty and later put to death in the electric chair. Mary Trachsel, a UI associate professor of rhetoric, says she found the book to be compelling. "It's not the type of book I usually read, but I found it fascinating and joy to read," she said. Margolin says that the things she writes about have changed as she has changed. Love-love for tennis pro and former ball girl

NEWBURY, England (AP) — A tennis ace has tied the knot with a former ball girl.

Britain's Greg Rusedski was married on Dec. 4 to his longtime girlfriend, Lucy Connor. More than 100 guests in formal evening dress filled Douai Abbey Church for the Catholic Mass and wedding.

The two met when Rusedski was competing in the junior tournament at Wimbledon and Connor was a 15-year-old ball girl.

Rusedski, 26, and his 23-year-old bride posed for pictures as they emerged from the hour-long service.

"I feel great," the star said. "This is the best day of my life." The couple drove away in a vintage Jaguar to attend a reception at nearby Highclere Castle.

Too-mean streets

NEW YORK (AP) — Danny Glover, who filed a complaint with the city after five taxi drivers passed him by, told a group of cabbies they should find another line of work if they are afraid of black people.

Farooq Bahti, the head of a drivers group, responded: "Mr. Danny, accept our apology for what happened with you."

Glover filed a complaint on Nov. 3. A week later, Mayor Rudolph Giuliani announced an undercover operation and threatened to seize the cabs of drivers who refused to pick up minority passengers. Since then, 39 drivers have been cited.

Local man escapes robbery attempt

■ Two suspects are sought in an alleged robbery near an Iowa City elementary school.

By Gil Levy
The Daily Iowan

Iowa City police are investigating an attempted armed robbery after two men allegedly tried to steal an elderly man's wallet. The incident allegedly occurred on the playground area of Mann Elementary School, 521 N. Dodge St., at 7:05 p.m. Sunday, according to a police report. The elderly man was walking through the park area when two men approached him from behind and demanded his wallet, the report said.

One suspect grabbed the man, and he began to struggle, Iowa City police Sgt. Mike Lord said. The second suspect produced a knife, and the victim screamed for help. "He was yelling for someone that lived in the area near the park and for help," Lord said, adding that the yelling probably scared the suspects away. After the suspects ran away, the man, uninjured, went to a house across the street and called police, Lord said. The first suspect is described as a white male in his late teens to early 20s, approximately 5 feet, 9 inches tall, 170 pounds with short dark hair. He was wearing a dark-colored short jacket during the attack. The second suspect, who allegedly carried the knife, is described as a white male, also in his late teens to early 20s. He is said to be approximately 5 feet, 9 inches tall, 170 pounds with short blond hair. He was wearing a short red jacket at the time of the incident. The investigation has been turned over to detectives, who are investigating several leads, said Iowa City police Lt. Richard Wyss. Some residents living near the site of the attempted robbery expressed mixed feelings about the safety of their neighborhood. "I haven't heard anything like that before," said UI junior Meghan Hasselberg, who lives across the street from the park. "The reason I chose to live by a grade school is because I thought it was safe. I'm awfully surprised."

Andrew Dawson, a UI sophomore, said he thought crime could happen anywhere in Iowa City; but, he said, that it occurred in an open park is unusual. "It's definitely a surprise," he said. "Criminal activity normally is where there's an alley to run down. The park is pretty open." Still, Dawson said, the incident will not change his lifestyle. "There's already been a number of incidents," he said. "Just because it happened across the street doesn't mean I'm in any more danger." Iowa City police are asking anyone with information regarding the case to call the Detective Bureau at 356-5275.

City Council votes to expand Public Library

■ Renovating and not building a new facility will go before the voters.

By Heather Pavnica
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa City City Council voted 4-3 Monday night in favor of the westward expansion/remodeling option for a 80,000-square-foot Iowa City Public Library. The westward option will require the city to purchase property from the Lenoch & Cilek True Value Hardware building, whose owners have expressed an interest in selling, Mayor Ernie Lehman said. The estimated cost of expansion for the current Public Library, 123 S. Linn St., is approximately $15.3 million. "I like the idea of maintaining the current building," said Councilor Connie Champion. "Everybody views that building as new. It seems logical to expand what we have." The recommended option includes plans for a 20,000-square-foot commercial space on the ground-level and an additional 33,000 square feet on the second floor for library purposes. The council decided against the other option — a new Public Library, which would have been constructed on the Linn Street parking lot 64-1A at an estimated cost of $14.3 million. Lehman said lot 64-1A is valuable to the city because it can remain as a parking lot, yielding $80,000 in profits for the city each year, or the city could sell it. The parcel is the last potential commercial space in the downtown.

Councilor Dee Norton said the westward expansion option would cost more money because the building would have to be gutted for remodeling. He voted against the expansion option. "I want to see the most modern and appropriate library," Norton said. "I think you can build a better one on a new site — starting clean and clear." Councilor Dee Vanderhoef said the 64-1A option creates problems for the city because the cost of marketing the current Public Library is unknown. Selling the current library property may create conflicts with other businesses downtown, she said. Councilor Karen Kubby agreed with Norton and said the voters would probably not approve deconstructing the playground on the Pedestrian Mall, a project that the city has just completed. Kubby said the city would probably not have had a problem selling the current library property because it can hold a lot of weight and has potential for many different occupancy options. Public Library Director Susan Craig said that although the library board prefers a new building on 64-1A, it is satisfied with either option. "I am happy just to be moving forward," she said. "The end result will be a wonderful library for Iowa City." The library board will request a referendum for the debt of $15 million for the estimated cost of the project. The referendum must be approved by 60 percent of Iowa City voters.

Margolin's latest book, Murderess!, released this fall, follows the true story of the 1927 Ruth Snyder case, in which Snyder, a New York housewife, plotted with an insurance salesman to kill her husband. Snyder was found guilty and later put to death in the electric chair. Mary Trachsel, a UI associate professor of rhetoric, says she found the book to be compelling. "It's not the type of book I usually read, but I found it fascinating and a joy to read," she said. Margolin says that the things he writes about have changed as his life has changed. After graduating from Bard College in Annandale-on-Hudson, N.Y., Margolin received his master's degree from Hunter College in the School of Social Work in 1970. Margolin eventually wound up working for Bellevue Hospital in the psychiatric emergency room. "My job there was to sketch mental patients through my writing," he said. "Through my sketches, the doctors were able to form a better understanding of what was wrong with the patient." After leaving Bellevue, Margolin started his own psychotherapy practice in 1974, but decided to move on after two years because of the "emotional strains that came with the job," he said. In 1977, Margolin decided to pursue a non-academic career and bought a small pizza place, called Pizza, in downtown Brooklyn, N.Y. The long hours and seven-day work weeks were more than he wanted to deal with, so a year later he went back to school and obtained a Ph.D. in social work from the University of Nebraska. After finishing his degree, Margolin accepted a position at the UI in the home economics department in 1987. During the 12 years he has spent at the UI, he has also worked in the sociology and family counseling departments and on the Project on Rhetoric of Inquiry. He currently teaches Family Counseling once a year and Human Sexuality every semester, while teaching writing in the Project on Rhetoric of Inquiry. John Nelson, a UI professor of political science and a colleague on the Project on Rhetoric of Inquiry, said he thinks Margolin has led an interesting life. "He's an inquiring mind who follows his interests wherever they take him; he's truly an interesting person to be around," Nelson said. Margolin feels that he has finally found a home at the UI after so many years of searching for his niche. "I love it here; it's a great place to teach and write," he said.

Coleman hosts party at her pad

■ All UI students are invited to party at the annual Winter Reception with UI President Mary Sue Coleman.

By Anne Huyck
The Daily Iowan

UI students have attended holiday parties throughout the years, but none have been hosted by UI President Mary Sue Coleman — until tonight.

Everyone in the UI community is invited to eat, drink (punch) and be merry at a Winter Reception tonight from 6-8 at Coleman's house, 102 E. Church St.

Students who attend can expect punch, cookies and holiday cheer in her "wonderful, comfortable house," Coleman said.

"We are always decorated," she said of her house. "There will be wreaths and bows and things like that."

The Winter Reception is an annual, non-denominational event sponsored by UI Student Government and Coleman, but this is the first year the event will be held in Coleman's residence and be open to all students.

"In the past we've held it at the Old Capitol and sent invitations out to presidents of different organizations," said UISG President Lana Zak. "This year, we're changing it to make it more personal, so President Coleman is holding it at her house."

Although the reception will be free, those who attend are asked to donate a non-perishable food item. Zak said that unlike past years, this year's focus is "giving back to the community."

Zak and Coleman both encourage all students to attend.

"It is an opportunity to talk with President Coleman and other UI leaders in a free and open atmosphere," Zak said. "It's a time to just relax in a really nice house."

The reception is a good idea, UI junior Brina Sachs said.

"I've met (Coleman) before at the Honors House, and I think it's cool she makes herself accessible to students," she said. "She's saying that she wants to meet students and make us more of a community."

While he agreed that a reception is a "good thing," UI junior Nick Francis said he won't be in attendance.

"I don't think too many people will show up," he said. "A lot of people aren't interested, and it's a busy time for students, with finals coming up."

Going the extra mile for Hanukkah

■ The story of the festival of lights was shared in Iowa City by Orthodox and non-Orthodox Jews.

By Tom Tortorich
The Daily Iowan

Hasidic and non-Orthodox Jews came together Monday at the Agudas Achim Congregation to learn about the story behind Hanukkah.

The Chabad Lubavitch Jewish sect from Postville, Iowa, traveled to Iowa City as a part of its outreach mission this holiday season to teach people "a little more about their Judaism," said 15-year-old group member Getzel Rubashkin.

The group is one sect of the national organization led by New York Rabbi Scheerson, said Junior Rabbi Mendy Stein, the group's co-leader.

"Scheerson commanded us to go out and spread the word about what Hanukkah's really about," he said.

The group's Hanukkah teachings are geared toward children ages 5-13 years old, Stein said.

A play was given by the group to teach Iowa City youth about the Greek deification of the Jewish temple in Jerusalem 2,000 years ago. The miracle of Hanukkah, according to Jewish religion, is that while only one day's supply of oil remained in the temple, it kept the menorah lit for eight days.

Group Rabbi Aaron Schimmell demonstrated how olive oil was made.

"After you press the olives really hard, the juice is extracted. Then, the oil rises and must be separated," he said.

The children assisted in the making of oil by pouring it into test-tubes, which were placed in a gyra- tor that separated the solution.

Although the Chabad Lubavitch sect is "ultra-Orthodox," it performed for a more reformed synagogue, such as the Agudas Achim Synagogue, Rubashkin said.

"Everybody celebrates Hanukkah in basically the same way. It's not something that a liberal community would play up more than a conservative community. The story is still the same," said Iowa City Rabbi Jennifer Flatté.

"The kids learned a lot, and I learned a lot," said Iowa City Rabbi Jeff Portman.

Each child in attendance received a menorah and candles, as well as a dreidel, a traditional Jewish clay top that commemorates the rededication of the Temple in Jerusalem and is used in Hanukkah games.

"But the most important thing to take away from this is the spirit of Hanukkah," Schimmell said.

The group performs various outreach programs for each major Jewish holiday, Rubashkin said.

On Dec. 4, it performed in Omaha, Neb.; after Monday's visit to Iowa City, it traveled back to Postville. It has two presentations today in Rochester and St. Paul, Minn.

Coke chairman announces retirement

year-old chairman is retiring after only 2½ years on the job, the company announced unexpectedly Monday.

M. Douglas Ivester will retire in April as Coke tries to overcome a contamination scare in Europe, a race discrimination lawsuit and sagging stock prices.

"After extensive reflection and thought, I have concluded that it is time for me to move on to the next stage of my life and, therefore, to put into place an orderly transition for this great company," Ivester said.

At a special meeting Sunday, Coke's board elected Douglas N. Daft as president and chief operating officer, effective immediately.

MIAMI (AP) — An aircraft maintenance company was convicted Monday of improperly packaging the oxygen canisters blamed for the cargo hold fire that caused the 1996 ValuJet crash in the Everglades. Two SabreTech employees were acquitted.

The Vending Services employees can also apply for a position with Aramark, where they are guaranteed an interview but not a guarantee of a job.

Vending-machine suppliers Jim Keese and Loren Schutt say they don't know of any employees who plan to apply at Aramark.

"As far as I know, nobody's interested," Schutt said. "Most people wish to stay with the university, where they have seniority."

Keese said he doesn't think Aramark has a lot of job security compared with the UI.

"Who's going to take a chance when they're going to find a job for us here at the university?" he asked.

Keese said he wonders what will happen next but isn't really worried. He said he plans to do what he thinks is the most logical thing: stick it out, see if he likes his new job and watch for something else, just in case.

"Because there aren't very many of us, you would think they would be able to find us a good job," he said.

Schutt said he is upset about the idea of privatizing the vending machines and doesn't understand why the UI is "plunging forward without a finalized contract."

Stuedemann added that with the victory in the past, things are a little more real for the Hawkeyes.

"Of course you'd like them to win because they're your school team, but they're playing realistically," he said. "I think we're beginning to play back to where we should be."

"I know that they're under a lot of pressure to please everybody. After that big win, everybody is expecting them to do it again," Pennington said.

But while Iowa hasn't played up to its expectations, it doesn't mean fans should discount the season, she said. She thinks Iowa has what it takes to do what it did against UConn again.

"I think we're doing OK, but I think that they have a lot of potential to win again, like we did against UConn," she said. "We just need another big win."

Students had gathered outside the middle school and were waiting to enter for the start of classes when the boy walked up at around 7:45 a.m., put his backpack down and started shooting, witnesses said.

"He did not say anything or make any accusations," said parent Richard Schindel, who repeated what his son told authorities. "All the kids started running ... The young man allegedly tells customers he is selling magazines to make money for Students Against Drunk Driving or new football jerseys for West High through a magazine company called Atlantic Coast Subscriptions, a real company. Presumably, if customers have already purchased magazines, they should receive them, according to police reports.

"I was aware of it Saturday evening after I got a call from a couple of parents," said West High Principal Jerry Arganbright. "We do not have any students out there trying to raise money."

The person involved with the door-to-door sales is described as a white male in his late teens to early 20s. He is described as approximately 5 feet 8 inches tall, 170 pounds with dark hair and possibly a Southern accent.

Anyone having contact with the individual is asked to contact Iowa City police at 356-5275 immediately.

NASA waits in vain for lander to call home

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — With hope fading fast for the Mars Polar Lander, NASA investigators may have to face the possibility of never really knowing what went wrong with the spacecraft 157 million miles from Earth.

The space agency has only scant information on the final moments of the $165 million spacecraft's attempt to land on Mars and no hope of recovering any wreckage.

"It may be that everything went right, and it simply landed in a terrible spot," said physics Professor Robert Park, a University of Maryland expert on the space program. "Who knows if it landed on a big boulder and fell over?"

"We just don't know, and we never will, is my guess," he said.

For NASA, the loss would mean back-to-back Mars expeditions ended in failure.

Mission controllers planned another attempt early today to detect a signal from the spacecraft, which has not been heard from since it began its descent on Dec. 3. Two microprobes that were to have landed separately were also lost.

No signal during the next window would eliminate one explanation for the spacecraft's silence — that it was in a slumbering "safe mode" caused by some problem after landing, said Laurie Leshin, a member of the lander's science team.

It could be two weeks before the mission is declared a failure, said Richard Cook, the spacecraft's operations manager at NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory.

FDA recommends OKing diabetics watch

GAITHERSBURG, Md. (AP) — Diabetics may soon get their first painless way to measure blood sugar, as government advisers recommended approval Monday of a wristwatch-like device to supplement — but not completely replace — the painful finger-prick blood tests patients now endure.

The GlucoWatch checks glucose levels every 20 minutes by sending tiny electric currents through the skin. It sounds an alarm if patients' blood sugar hits dangerous levels, even while they sleep.

Advisers to the Food and Drug Administration voted unanimously that the GlucoWatch should be approved for adult diabetics, saying it could offer a tremendous benefit by measuring glucose far more often than blood tests can today.

But the advisers stressed that the GlucoWatch is not perfect: it sometimes gives erroneous readings, won't measure when the patient perspires too much, and is less effective at detecting life-threateningly low blood sugar than at spotting dangerous high glucose levels.

Indeed patients should never decide to use insulin based on a GlucoWatch measurement without first doing a finger-stick test to double-check, FDA advisers and manufacturer Cygnus Inc. agreed.

WTO authority threatens American rights to self-government

Last week, this space discussed the two elements that maintain order in a free society: law and conscience. It was pointed out that stable society is predicated on the assumption that individuals and institutions are obligated to obey the law so that the rights of all are preserved. This is because the law is a codification of the better impulses of conscience (when they are just laws) and therefore a standard toward which those consciences must aim.

The notion that law is not a mere convention or the mendacious fabrication of the elite to manipulate the majority but instead derives from a basic human nature, goes by the name of natural law. It has a long pedigree and has always given rise to strong disagreement. The Greek historian Herodotus, for example, marveling at the variety of human experience, pointed out that some societies cremate their dead while others ritually devour them. The poet Pindar expressed this remarkable discrepancy in the phrase "custom is king."

Others saw things differently. The historian Livy tells us that when the Romans were at war with their neighbors the Falisci, a crooked schoolmaster tried to help the Romans by kidnapping some Falerian children and handing them over to the Roman leader Camillus. The schoolmaster thought these could be a bargaining chip for the Romans. Camillus was not pleased. He rebuked the schoolmaster and sent him back to the Falerians bound and gagged, with his would-be captives caning him all the way.

Camillus appealed to the alliance that exists by nature between all societies even when paper treaties are absent. Natural law thus forbids Camillus from accepting children as hostages. "Romans do not take up weapons against helpless children," he says.

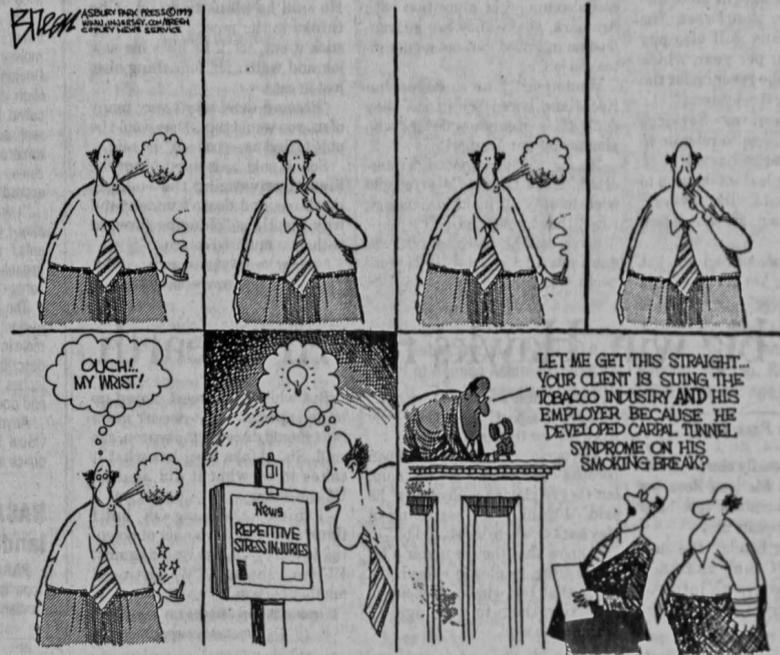

The American founders firmly adhered to the notion of natural law, which they had inherited from the ancients. Jefferson expressed that commitment succinctly in the Declaration of Independence when he appealed to creator-endowed "inalienable rights" as the basis for revolution against oppressive governments. For Jefferson, a transcendent authority animated natural law and guaranteed its force and application.

How far we have strayed in contemporary society from this most basic allegiance is evident on a wide variety of fronts. Last week, for example, protesters against the WTO in Seattle rightly complained about the harm done by the international treaties of this semi-socialist body. The protesters complained that the rights of American workers, the civil rights of peoples with whom we trade and the safety of the world's environment are severely jeopardized by the World Trade Organization's money-trumps-all rulings.

Irrespective of the specifics, these protesters are right to be incensed that the American people are now bound by agreements to which they have not consented through their representatives. The most basic tenet of natural law as applied to the political arena is the right to self-government. So long as international bodies such as the WTO and United Nations are setting American trade policy with open contempt for our self-government, we have ceased to be free.

Like Camillus of old, it is high time we sent packing these malefactors and the American politicians who ratify their noxious agendas.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Remember war and savor peace on Pearl Harbor day

Who wants war? Who wants to serve in wars such as World War I and World War II? Why does the world have so many conflicts and armed battles to maintain a halfway peaceful world? Aren't we all looking for the day when the whole world will have a truly peaceful environment to live a happy, productive enjoyable life?

What if all people in the whole world followed the Golden Rule principles that our country was founded upon? It certainly appears there would be a much more peaceful world if all the "War Lords" would use the Golden Rule as a daily guide and settle their differences in more peaceful ways.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur understood the answers to these questions when he spoke aboard the USS Missouri on Sept. 2, 1945: "Let us pray that peace be now restored to the world and that God will preserve it always."

He declared: "WE HAVE HAD OUR LAST CHANCE. If we do not devise some greater and more equitable system, Armageddon will be at our door. The problem basically is theological and involves a spiritual recrudescence and improvement of human character. It must be of the SPIRIT if we are to save the flesh."

In all, we need to honor, respect and remember these days of remembrance because of the tremendous sacrifices ALL AMERICANS have made since the first Independence Day to keep America and the rest of the world as peaceful as it is in 1999. Each time we remember these days of victory, we can realize war doesn't really make a peaceful world and ponder on the words of Gen. MacArthur.

Free trade movement helps some, but hurts others

The free trade ideology maintains that farmers can trade their way to prosperity by increasing farm exports — even at a world price that is below the cost of production. In doing this, it conveniently ignores the import side of this theory. The United States imports massive amounts of the same farm products — often from Third World countries whose living standards are below ours — that we are also trying to export in order to "help" the farmers. In this twist of "logic," Third World countries are using their resources to produce food for export, rather than feeding their own people — and we are importing it into the United States and telling our own farmers that they produced too much.

The point of this is that free-trade ideology has no morality. In all of its calculations, there are no factors to allow for the immorality of starving people, the immorality of underpaying them, the immorality of destroying communities and communal bonds that should be tying people together. When people compete, they do not commune, they do not feel responsible for their fellow human beings. "Efficiency" is maximizing the output per individual using new technology — it is not cornering the market in order to hire former independent producers to become employees, it is not selling at the lowest price using labor from underdeveloped countries to lower the wages of workers in developed countries.

The indoctrination of our children with free-trade ideology has resulted in social disunity and broken families because of the increasing drive to compete. This is now the subject of increasing studies and papers in a number of disciplines. The curriculum is so filled with this that there is no room for the subjects that are taught in other countries who outscore U.S. students on international tests. It's time for a change.

WTO flare-up a reminder that idealism is still alive and well

The Battle in Seattle, they're calling it. Perhaps the phrase is not quite so catchy and colorful as the Thrilla in Manila, but then, Ali doesn't float and sting like he used to. Not that anyone else from those times does much, either.

But what a great sight the Battle in Seattle was. Just when you're ready to give up on the American people, ready to dismiss them as mere consuming lemmings headed for whatever alleged fashionable cliff Old Navy or Gap or Abercrombie & Fitch wants to lead them off, concerned only about financing their next SUV and salivating over the up-to-the-second NASDAQ quotations on CNBC — along come the WTO protests in Seattle. You could almost smell the tear gas wafting in the night air — which, after almost two decades of seemingly having Eisenhower as president again and Ozzie & Harriet as the Cabinet, is an odor for lonesome noses.

I mean, it's about time. The American people have been doing this sheep-like lining up to get sheared for long enough. Seattle is almost enough to make you believe that, when the 21st century comes meandering along in another year or so, Americans won't devolve into slimy amino acids, fit only for voting for John Kasich, the next decade's George W. Shrub. And, given most of the news pre-Seattle, that had seemed like the probable scenario. Bladerunner, Brazil, here we come.

The WTO protesters couldn't have picked a much better target, either. It's one thing to raise your voice against this or that transnational corporation that either seems to employ 10-year-old Third World girls to make your oh-so-cute pajamas for $1 per 12-hour day or to spend its time shucking the rain forests as if they were so much jive. Who needs all these trees, anyway? As Saint Reagan once said, trees cause pollution.

But the protesters who made Seattle sleepless, by not going after merely one transnational, were right on the money. So's to speak. The WTO has been a cabal of transnational capitalism since its inception.

From overturning environmental regulations in those countries that have them to resisting pleas for workers, and human rights around the globe, the WTO has proven itself to be a capitalist's wet dream. Dolphin-friendly tuna that U.S. environmentalists fought so hard for? Zap, says the WTO; that's restraint of trade. Yep, that's right; they're needlessly slaughtering dolphins again so you can have 89-cent-a-can tuna from Asia.

EPA regulations on Venezuelan oil because it creates more air pollution than some of the world's other oil when refined into gasoline and burned? Zap, goes the WTO. The Massachusetts law imposing a 10 percent penalty on goods and services provided by companies with financial interests in Burma because of that country's brutal military régime? Tsk-tsk-tsk, says the WTO; no, no, no. If Iowans wanted to protest against the rape of the rain forest in Brazil, which is largely due to transnational corporate policy, and the Legislature decided to penalize corporations dealing in Brazilian goods in order to register that protest (OK, granted; that would be like seeing the sun rise in the west) — the WTO would step in. Zap, it would say; that's restraint of trade.

In fact, as Robert Kuttner of the Boston Globe points out, "If the United States had been subject to such global constraints during the Great Depression, most of the New Deal would have been illegal"

In which case, we'd all be quite fluent in German, with the possible exception of Pat Buchanan. Since the fall of the Berlin Wall, nobody seems quite sure what this world is about, exactly. Not that anybody did before. Perhaps, these days, Günter Grass or Richard Powers or William Gibson or Charles Bowden knows — at least as close as a human gets to know. At least close enough for jazz.

But one thing is clear. If you let capitalism run unbridled, as in the vision of the world dreamed by the WTO, you wind up with a centralized economy — not the pseudo-Marxist ones that the capitalists are so full of hubris about "defeating" in the Cold War — but a centralized economy run by a handful of mega-corporations, answerable to no one.

And that is the way to sure death of the human spirit, if there still is such a thing. Not death as Stalin would have done it, with his "engineer of human souls"; no, a slower, less-painful death, a nearly unnoticed death — the Web-site designer of human souls.

Cats set to prowl Iowa City one last time.

After almost 13 years of prowl-ing the country, the last touring company of Andrew Lloyd Webber's Cats is calling it quits. This week is the last time that Iowa City fans will be able to watch Cats pounce on the stage. Hancher Auditorium starts tonight and ending on Dec. 12, though the musical will continue to be performed on Broadway.

The longest-running musical both on Broadway and on tour will perform eight shows at Hancher today through Dec. 12, before closing nationally on Dec. 19. In addition to the original company in New York City and a touring company in Germany, The Really Useful Company, Ltd. is the fourth American touring company of Cats.

"Our company travels a lot. (The first touring) company would sit in a city for six months at a time," said Cats performer Renee Venezia. "But now, because Cats is so well known, we do three days here, four days there — we live out of our suitcases."

Venezia said that although there are slight variations in the shows that are performed by the three present companies, there are some advantages to attending a show by a touring company.

"Our whole life is Cats, we only here to do Cats," she said. "In a way, you get a really good show."

... In New York, the performers have their lives, they do everything they need to do, and then they perform the show at night. But when you're on the road, you don't even know where the postal place is."

Cats has been performed at Hancher five times in the past, and the turnout has "always been really good," Hancher director Wallace Chappell said, but even ticket sales for a Broadway hit are sometimes unpredictable.

"More and more these days, people, particularly college students, buy tickets at the last minute," Chappell said. "They treat it like a movie, which makes it really difficult for us to plan a show that has a young appeal."

Mande Butler, a UI senior who attended a performance of Cats in Chicago two years ago, said the dancing, costumes and music in Cats will attract an Iowa City crowd.

"I think Hancher will be full, given the UI music and theater departments," she said. "Everyone seems excited about it. It's better than a movie at Coral Ridge Mall."

Though ticket sales at Hancher last week reached more than $50,000, mostly in Cats tickets, Chappell said, the week-night performances are more difficult to sell.

"The toughest sell for us are very often the Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday nights. People want to go out on the weekend — that's no mystery," Chappell said. "But our success is really based on how well those sell."

Though performances may not be sold out, Cats continues to draw large crowds of adults and children.

"It brings in the biggest audiences we ever have," Chappell said. "Whether it's Cats, Rent or Annie, these big Broadway shows are what bring in the crowds."

The musical, developed from poet T.S. Eliot's Old Possum's Book of Practical Cats, deals with subject matter that appeals to a large audience.

"Cats appeals to all ages because it's not restricted. Like Rent is strictly young generation, it's about New York, drugs, rock 'n' roll, sex and politics. Cats is not about that," Venezia said. "I think people relate to it because it's a universal theme of love and acceptance."

"Kids like it because it's about cats — it's fun and it's fantasy," Butler said. "There are so many colors, and it's got different kinds of music and dancing."

This "celebration of catness" is successful because of the poetry it's based on, the "diminutive scale" of the junkyard, and the medley of music and dancing, Chappell said.

"Andrew Lloyd Webber shamelessly imitates or steals from any number of musical modes — '50s rock 'n' roll, Broadway style show tunes, Calypso — you name it, Cats has got everything. It's kind of a kitchen sink thing."

Nurse admits setting fire that killed billionaire

■ An American confesses that he started the blaze because he wanted to be a hero.

By Ian Phillips
Associated Press

MONTE CARLO, Monaco — An American nurse confessed Monday to setting the fire that killed banker Edmond Safra, saying he had hoped to emerge as the valiant hero who saved the billionaire's life, police said.

Ted Maher, 41, told investigators that he started the fatal blaze in a wastebasket but did not intend to kill the banker, said Monaco's chief prosecutor, Daniel Serdet.

Maher, described by Serdet as an unstable man who had taken heavy doses of sedatives, was charged Monday with arson leading to the deaths of two people — a crime punishable by life in prison. Serdet said Maher acted alone.

An investigator in Serdet's office, reading from Maher's lengthy statement to prosecutors, later told the Associated Press that Maher deliberately sparked panic in Safra's penthouse by pretending dangerous intruders had broken in. He then stabbed himself twice in the abdomen and thigh to make it look as though he had put his own life on the line to save his employer.

"Then he said he started the blaze so as to get the fire brigade involved and make it look even more dramatic," said the investigator, who demanded anonymity.

"He said he had an intense professional rivalry with another member of the staff and that this seemed a good way of bringing attention to himself," she added. "He said he forced Safra and his other nurse into the bathroom for protection and started the fire near a vent so it would spread."

"He thought that, as a result, he would be given more authority within the household."

Serdet said the rival member of staff was the banker's chief nurse, identified only as Sonia.

Safra, 67, the founder of the Republic National Bank of New York and a member of a prominent Jewish family, died on Dec. 3 along with American nurse Viviane Torrent in the fire at his seaside apartment.

In Geneva, approximately 700 mourners gathered Monday for Safra's funeral and burial.

"You have brought together people from different backgrounds, cultures, religions and social horizons, just as you always have," Nobel Peace Prize laureate Elie Wiesel said.

"Each of us are dealing with his own memories of you, his own questions about what happened last Friday," he said.

Safra, a Monaco resident with homes around the world, was a leading philanthropist who helped build synagogues, schools and community centers from Greece to the United States.

After a security alarm sounded on Dec. 3 shortly before the fire, Safra's wife, Lily, hid in another room. She was unharmed.

The banker had been under medical care for Parkinson's disease and reportedly had an elaborate health staff. According to the French daily Le Monde, eight nurses and four doctors tended to him.

Maher had worked for Safra for five months but had been in Monaco just six weeks. He originally hailed from Auburn, Maine, and later moved to Stormville, N.Y., officials in Monaco said.

Mideast-style welcome for Albright — talks off track

JERUSALEM (AP) — On the eve of Secretary of State Madeleine Albright's arrival, a bitter confrontation erupted Monday between Israel and the Palestinians over Jewish settlements, derailing the month-old talks aimed at sealing a final peace between the sides.

The dispute appeared all but certain to embroil Albright, who intends to use her visit to the region to reaffirm U.S. support for the peace process but had hoped to avoid acting as a referee in the tangle of quarrels between Israel and the Palestinians.

Spotlighting one of the most intractable of those disagreements, the Palestinians announced Monday that they would no longer participate in negotiations aimed at setting terms of their hoped-for statehood — so-called final status talks — unless Prime Minister Ehud Barak halts a burst of new construction of Jewish housing in the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

"It is illogical to hold final status talks while at the same time Israel is continuing its settlement-building. This is unacceptable," senior Palestinian negotiator Yasser Abed Rabbo told reporters in the West Bank town of Ramallah after a three-hour session with his Israeli counterpart.

The final-status negotiations, launched with fanfare on Nov. 8, are meant to reach the broad outlines of an Israeli-Palestinian peace treaty by mid-February. On the table are the most contentious issues dividing the two sides: the borders of a future Palestinian state, the status of Jerusalem, the fate of Palestinian refugees — and Jewish settlements.

Family alleged drunk Texas fans attack

■ Some rowdy Texas fans allegedly told some Nebraska fans they would show them "I make a Texas sandwich."

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A member of a Nebraska family who attended the Big 12 championship game at the Alamodome claim they were attacked by drunken University of Texas fans who were angry the Longhorns had lost.

The incident started with a fan who chipped a tooth, a swollen jaw and cuts for the family member said Don Losole Jr., 30, a fan who moved to San Antonio years ago.

His father and three brothers visiting from Omaha attended the game between Nebraska and Texas on Saturday.

The Losole family was seated in the Texas section and opened the game with the team colors and white team colors amid Texas burnt orange.

Taunts started immediately and the tone turned meaner as the game closed in its 22-6 victory.

"They were ranting and raving about how they wanted to win," he was quoted as saying Monday's San Antonio Express-News. "It got worse with the alcohol being served at the game."

When the game ended and the fans started leaving the stadium, a confrontation seemed to erupt between the Losoles hung back and the Texas fans, avoiding a fight, Losole said.

Luke Recker transferring to Iowa

■ The Arizona basketball player cited personal reasons for leaving the Wildcats.

By Mike Kelly
 The Daily Iowan

Arizona basketball player Luke Recker confirmed reports Monday night that he is leaving the Wildcats and transferring to Iowa.

In a statement released by the Arizona men's athletic department, Recker confirmed reports that he is leaving the Wildcats at the end of the semester to be closer to his fiancée, Kelly Craig, who is hospitalized in Chicago.

Recker

"I have been contemplating this decision since my arrival in Tucson," Recker said. "This decision is based solely on personal reasons. I have been nothing but extremely impressed with coach (Lute) Olson and the Arizona program and will miss them greatly. But being close to my loved ones has become a priority at this time."

On July 10th, Recker suffered a partially severed ear and a broken wrist in a traffic accident in Durango, Colo. A truck crossed the center line of a highway and hit the car Recker and Craig were traveling in. The driver of the car was killed, and Craig is currently undergoing treatment in the Chicago area for partial paralysis suffered in the accident.

Iowa coach Steve Alford said Monday he had not been contacted by Recker.

"There had not been any contact at all with him," Alford said. "There is really nothing to talk about. I don't think it is ethically right to talk about someone else's player. NCAA rules dictate that we are the ones that have to be contacted first."

Arizona coach Lute Olson was unavailable for comment following Recker's announcement, but the statement said Olson and Recker had been in contact shortly before the announcement.

Recker transferred from Indiana last May because of his combative relationship with Hoosier coach Bobby Knight. He chose Arizona over Iowa, North Carolina and Florida.

Under NCAA rules, Recker will have to sit out a full year before being eligible because he transferred from a Div. I program. He will first be eligible in January 2001, and have one and a half years of eligibility remaining as a Hawkeye.

With Antonio Ramos' impending departure at the semester break, Alford will have two scholarships available beginning in January.

Alford said Monday he and his coaching staff had not had a meeting to discuss what to do with the extra scholarship.

At Indiana, Recker led Indiana in scoring as a sophomore during the 1998-99 season. He averaged 16.1 points per game while hitting a team high 61 three-pointers.

The Recker File

• 1999-2000: Announced in May he was transferring to the University of Arizona. Was involved in a traffic accident July 10, in which he suffered a partially severed ear and a broken wrist.

• 1998-99: Averaged 16.1 points per game and 4.0 rebounds. Played in 33 of 34 games, and led Indiana to a 23-11 record and tie for third place in the Big Ten. Helped Indiana to the second round of the NCAA tournament. Finished seventh in the Big Ten in scoring and was a third-team All-Big Ten selection by the league's coaches.

• 1997-98: Averaged 12.8 points per game and 3.9 rebounds as a freshman. Played in 30 of 32 games and helped Indiana to a 20-12 record, and fifth place in the conference. Scored in double figures 19 times, and was an honorable mention All-Big Ten pick. The Hoosiers advanced to the second round of the NCAA tournament.

• Prep: Was Indiana's Mr. Basketball in 1997. Averaged 26.8 points per game his senior year, and was a McDonald's All-American and second-team Parade All-American.

Hawks look to avenge dome defeat

■ Iowa takes on an undefeated Northern Iowa team in the UNI-Dome, the site of the 1997 upset.

By Mike Kelly
 The Daily Iowan

Last time Iowa came into the UNI-Dome, the then-No. 10 Hawkeyes entered undefeated and came out with a dose of humility.

Iowa guard Dean Oliver has not been back to Cedar Falls to face Northern Iowa since 1997's 84-78 upset, but his only memories of playing in the Dome are ones he'd like to forget.

"It was a bad experience," Oliver said. "Last time we went up there we got smoked, so I want to go up there and be ready. I want to redeem myself."

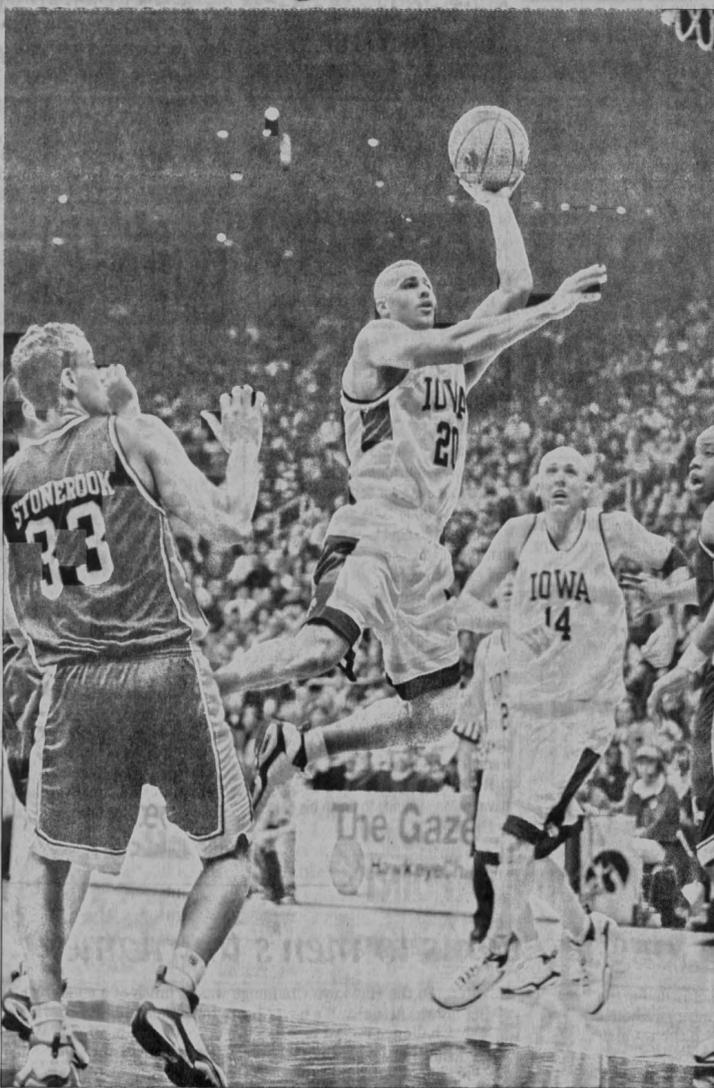

Iowa faces an undefeated Northern Iowa team tonight at 7:05 p.m. The Panthers are off to their best start in 35 years and a near capacity crowd is expected for this evening's tilt.

Even though Iowa won last year's game against the intrastate rival Panthers, Northern Iowa should pose a bigger threat to the Hawkeyes in 1999.

Northern Iowa is 6-0 on the season and defeated Alabama to open the season.

Iowa coach Steve Alford knows the environment should be menacing, but it won't be anything his team has not seen before.

Family alleges drunk Texas fans attacked

■ Some rowdy Texas fans allegedly told some Nebraskans they would show them "how to make a Texas sandwich."

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Members of a Nebraska family who attended the Big 12 championship game at the Alamodome claim they were attacked by drunken University of Texas fans who were angry the Longhorns had lost.

The incident started with heckling and ended with a broken nose, a chipped tooth, a swollen jaw, bruises and cuts for the family members, said Don Losole Jr., 30, a food salesman who moved to San Antonio two years ago.

His father and three brothers were visiting from Omaha and they attended the game between Texas and Nebraska on Saturday.

The Losole family was seated in the Texas section and openly cheered for the Cornhuskers, wearing red and white team colors amid a sea of Texas burnt orange.

Taunts started immediately, but the tone turned meaner as Nebraska closed in on its 22-6 victory, Losole said.

"They were ranting and raving about how they wanted to beat us up," he was quoted as saying in Monday's San Antonio Express-News. "It got worse with the alcohol. I'd say 90 percent of it had to do with alcohol being served at the Alamodome."

When the game ended and a physical confrontation seemed imminent, the Losoles hung back from the crowds leaving the stadium in hopes of avoiding a fight, Losole said.

Bucs hold off late Vikings charge, win 24-17

■ Tampa Bay moved into tie for the lead in the NFC Central.

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Shaun King stared into the bright lights of Monday Night Football and didn't blink.

As he promised, Tampa Bay's rookie quarterback was cool, calm and collected in his first NFL start, leading the Buccaneers to a 24-17 victory over the Minnesota Vikings.

The streaking Bucs (8-4) won for the fifth straight time and regained a share of first place in the NFC Central with the Detroit Lions, who travel to Tampa Bay next Sunday.

The Vikings (7-5) lost for the first time since Jeff George replaced Randall Cunningham at quarterback six weeks ago and dropped a game behind the division co-leaders with Green Bay.

King, a second-round draft pick pressed into duty because of injuries to Trent Dilfer and Eric Zeier, threw second-half touchdown passes to Jacques Green and Dave Moore to overcome a 14-10 halftime deficit.

George rallied the Vikings from a 10-0 deficit in the second quarter, throwing a 1-yard TD pass to Cris Carter and using a fumble by King to get Minnesota into the end zone on Leroy Hoard's 1-yard run.

Carter caught a touchdown pass for a seventh straight game, tying a Vikings record set last year by Randy Moss. But with Minnesota trailing 24-14, all George could produce was Gary Anderson's 34-yard field goal with 5:50 remaining.

Donnie Abraham scored on a 55-yard interception return for Tampa Bay, which forced four turnovers, including a fourth-quarter fumble on a punt return that set up King's 1-yard TD pass to Moore for a 10-point lead.

Men's golfer to leave Iowa for Florida St.

■ Ian Brendel will forfeit his scholarship at the end of the semester in hopes of playing for the Seminoles.

By Todd Brommelkamp
 The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's golf team became used to playing without sophomore Ian Brendel this fall. The problem is they counted on his return in the spring.

That will no longer happen following Brendel's announcement that he will transfer to Florida State and become a member of the Seminoles' golf team.

Brendel has forfeited his scholarship for the spring semester and will leave for Tallahassee at the end of this semester. Iowa coach Terry Anderson confirmed Florida State had been granted permission to speak with Brendel, but did not know any further circumstances of his transfer.

Brendel cited his desire to play in better conditions as his main reason for leaving Iowa.

"I want to be able to play all year on the best courses," said Brendel.

Brendel has been accepted to the university, but has not registered for classes yet and has no scholarship immediately available to him. He says he has been in contact with FSU golf coach Dr. Ernie Lanford about once a week working on finalizing his registration, but Anderson said he knows of only a few instances where contact has been made and has spoken with Lanford himself.

Following a freak accident during the first tournament of the fall season, Brendel was forced to sit out the rest of the season. Brendel was struck on the back of the head by a partner's shot during the Hawkeye Intercollegiate.

During the season Brendel led Anderson and his teammates to believe he would return to the team next fall for what would be his sophomore season on the squad. However, Brendel says, the thought of transferring had been at the back of his mind before the start of this semester.

Since Brendel redshirted this season, he will be eligible to play three full seasons for FSU beginning next fall. He continues to lift weights and play Finkbine, just not with his former Iowa teammates.

While Anderson said he will miss having a player of Brendel's potential in the lineup, the team will continue on without him.

"We can't dwell on this," said Anderson. "We have to move on."

Westbrook says bad calls a family affair

Michael Westbrook claims that David Boston's father wrongly influenced a Redskin loss Sunday.

By Joseph White
Associated Press

ASHBURN, Va. — Washington receiver Michael Westbrook accused an NFL official of nepotism Monday, one day after the Redskins were called for a season-high 14 penalties in a 33-17 loss to the Detroit Lions.

Westbrook pointed out that the line judge for the game at the Silverdome was Byron Boston, whose son is Arizona rookie receiver David Boston. "We just found out a little tidbit out there," Westbrook said. "Somebody's father that plays in our division is a referee. I told you, I knew there was a 12th man on the field. I just didn't know who it was."

Westbrook said Byron Boston called two penalties against right tackle Jon Jansen, a false start and an illegal hands to the face, that weren't evident on the game film.

"He called a face mask when we couldn't see the face mask. They said Jansen jumped. We sat there and rewound and looked at it in slow motion. Nobody on the offensive line, none of the receivers, no back, the quarterback, nobody moved until the quarterback said, 'Hike.' The guy threw a flag. What was he watching? I told you, we had to be playing against 12 people out there."

Washington (7-5) has a one-game over Arizona (6-6), Dallas (6-6) and the New York Giants (6-6) in the NFC East. The Cardinals, who have won four straight, visit the Redskins on Sunday with first place on the line.

Westbrook also said his fourth quarter catch in the end zone, initially ruled a touchdown but overruled after a replay challenge showed he didn't get both feet inbounds, should have counted.

"That was a TD, too," Westbrook said. "No question."

The Lions were called for nine penalties, one short of their season high, for 65 yards.

Because David Boston plays for Arizona, Byron Boston is not allowed to work a Cardinals regular season or playoff game. He was allowed to work a Cardinals exhibition game this season, NFL spokesman Greg Aiello said.

Aiello had no immediate response from the league to Westbrook's remarks. Criticizing the officiating usually results in hefty fines, such as the $10,000 fine levied against Tampa Bay Buccaneers coach Tony Dungy in September.

ESPN, MLB end spat

The $800 million agreement came hours before a trial between the two began.

By Josh Dubow
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Major league baseball and ESPN each came to a conclusion: baseball was too valuable for ESPN to lose, and $800 million could ease the sport's hurt feelings of being pre-empted by the NFL.

The two sides finalized a settlement to the lawsuit and a new six-year deal Monday.

Hours before they were to go to trial over ESPN's placement of late-season Sunday night baseball games.

"As the process unfolded, it became obvious that this partnership that was under significant strain was something that was beneficial to both sides," commissioner Bud Selig said. "That's the thing that moved us forward, and I'm sure it is the same for ESPN."

ESPN needs baseball to fill the programming hole on its four cable channels — ESPN, ESPN2, ESPN-NEWS and ESPN Classic — and baseball would have trouble finding another cable partner that could promote the game as well as ESPN, or pay as much.

"ESPN loves baseball, and baseball is in safe hands with ESPN," said Neal Pilson, the former president of CBS Sports who runs a consulting firm. "Baseball comes away with significant new revenue stream, and ESPN protects its baseball franchise."

It didn't come without a price for the cable network, which has been showing baseball games for 10 years.

The two sides tore up the existing $117 million, three-year contract that baseball terminated in April and signed a new deal that sources in baseball and television, speaking on condition of anonymity, said was worth $800 million over six years.

That is more than what baseball had originally been asking for in return for moving three Sunday night games from ESPN to ESPN2, which is available in about 10 million fewer homes.

In April 1998, baseball asked ESPN for $30 million to grant the move. Last January, the sport upped the price to $200 million plus a $265 million, two-year extension. In the end, ESPN is paying $288 million on top of the existing contract and $400 million for three additional years.

In return, ESPN settles the thorny Sunday night issue, gets 18 additional games a year, the right to show at least 44 games on ESPN2, about 250 additional hours of studio programming, as well as Internet and radio rights.

"It is more important what you get than what you pay," ESPN president George Bodenheimer said.

Moe named interim Minnesota AD

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Attorney Tom Moe has agreed to become interim men's athletics director at Minnesota, replacing Mark Dienhart, whose resignation took effect today.

The university scheduled an afternoon news conference to discuss the hiring.

University President Mark Yudof offered Moe the job last week.

Moe, 61, is a former managing partner in the law firm Dorsey & Whitney. He retired in April from that post but remains as chairman. Last week, Moe said he'd take a leave of absence from the firm were he to accept the job.

A university report released Nov. 19 outlined widespread academic misconduct in the men's basketball program, prompting Yudof to change the leadership of the men's athletics department.

Dienhart and McKinley Boston, vice president for student development and athletics, resigned after being told their contracts would not be renewed after June 30.

Vick named Heisman finalist

■ Peter Warfick was not invited to the Heisman Trophy award ceremony.

By Richard Rosenblatt
Associated Press

NEW YORK — When the season began, Peter Warrick was the Heisman Trophy favorite and Michael Vick was just another promising freshman.

Now, it's Virginia Tech's Vick who's the Heisman finalist and Florida State's Warrick who will be watching Saturday night's presentation on TV.

"I really can't believe this is happening," Vick said Monday. "This whole season has been great but I never thought this would happen." Warrick, who missed two games because of his involvement in a shopping mall clothing scam, did not make the list of five finalists announced Monday by the Downtown Athletic Club, which presents the award.

The finalists are Wisconsin running back Ron Dayne and four quarterbacks — Georgia Tech's Joe Hamilton, Purdue's Drew Brees, Marshall's Chad Pennington and Vick, who becomes the first freshman to be invited to the Heisman ceremony since it started being televised in 1981.

Dayne, who ran for 1,834 yards and broke Ricky Williams Division I-A career rushing record in leading the Badgers (9-2) to the Rose Bowl, is considered the Heisman favorite.

The final five were invited based on returns from a majority of the 921 Heisman voters.

Vick led the Hokies (11-0) to their first perfect regular-season in 81 years and shot at the national title against Warrick's top-ranked Seminoles (11-0) in the Sugar Bowl Jan. 4.

Oliver's knee may hinder Iowa

IOWA-UNI

The Hawkeyes are no stranger to hostile crowds on the road. Two of Iowa's three losses this season were played in their opponents' sold-out gyms. Their season-opener against Connecticut was a virtual home game for the Huskies and Iowa had to endure the first sellout in Creighton history for their Nov. 27 game against the Jays.

Northern Iowa's games tell a completely different story. The Panthers have averaged 1,902 in their three home games so far this season. It's a sharp contrast to the expected turnout tonight.

"We can't get too caught up in the attendance," Alford said.

"They have a lot of in-state kids and it will be a tough environment, but we have experienced it before. It will be a tough game for both teams."

Northern Iowa's offense revolves around junior guard Robbie Sieverding. The Bellevue, Iowa native is averaging 18.8 points a game and has taken 32 more shots than anyone else on the team.

Guarding Sieverding may be a little more difficult for Iowa because of an ailing Oliver.

Oliver sat out Monday's practice with a deep knee bruise. The junior point guard injured his knee last Thursday in practice when he bumped knees with someone during a drill.

Alford said Oliver took himself out of the Ohio game late in the second half, but the injury was not major enough to warrant him taking the night off against Northern Iowa.

"With Dean not being 100 percent, it will be a tough challenge because of their guard play," Alford said.

The Northern Iowa-Iowa match will be one of conflicting tempos. The Panthers play a slower tempo than Iowa. UNI slows down its offense and tries to get Sieverding an open shot.

Alford speculated that Northern Iowa would like to keep the score of the game in the 60's, while his squad wants a higher scoring game.

Stribe won't practice with ISU team

AMES, Iowa (AP) — Transfer Sara Stribe will not practice with the Iowa State basketball team this winter and will decide next summer exactly what sports she'll pursue at the university.

Stribe transferred to Iowa State after playing basketball at Drake as a freshman. Because she had to sit out during the basketball season under NCAA transfer rules, she joined coach Linda Gensing's volleyball team and became the starting setter.

"When I enrolled at Iowa State, I did not plan on playing volleyball," Stribe said in a statement released by the university on Monday. "I enjoyed the opportunity to be part of coach Gensing's program.

"Since I am unable to be part of the Cyclone basketball team this season, I have decided to focus on being a student for the remainder of the year. I will make a decision on playing two sports before the start of the fall semester."

She averaged 4.3 points and five rebounds.

Attacked Huskers said police ignored pleas

TEXAS FANS

The assailants waited for them at an exit, the family said.

Somebody shouted, "We're going to show you how to make a Texas sandwich," according to the Losoles.

"It was the scariest moment of my life," said Dave Losole, 29, Don's brother.

Dave Losole said he spotted a San Antonio police officer at a lower level wearing a full uniform and gun and asked him for help, but the officer brushed off his request, reportedly telling him to "calm down."

As the Losole family tried to leave, the Longhorn fans rushed the group, the Losoles said.

Both Losole brothers estimated about four or five Longhorn fans tackled each of them. Don Losole said he saw his 51-year-old father, the owner of an Italian restaurant in Omaha, get punched in the side of the head.

Security guards broke up the melee, and police ordered the group to scatter but made no arrests, Dave Losole said.

The family members later filed a report with police at Methodist Hospital. The police report classified the case as an assault with bodily injury.

Raymond Roberts, a homicide detective who has worked security at the Alamodome about six times, said police would not ignore a plea for help.

The Losole family first leveled the accusation in the Omaha World-Herald, saying a mob of about 15 Longhorn fans attacked them.

Some Longhorns played down what they saw as a typical post-game scuffle. Others were embarrassed by the allegations.

In Grozny, most unaware of Russian deadline

With no access to news reports, Chechens seem to know of the Russian ultimatum.

By Yuri Bagrov
 Associated Press

ACHKOI-MARTAN, Russia — Hiding in basements, terrified of Russian Tuesday reports, Chechens seem to be mostly unaware of Russia's ultimatum to flee or risk being killed in a massive attack on the Chechen capital this weekend.

Many civilians in Grozny have been too scared to venture out amid the current relentless bombing, so many have not even leaflets dropped by Russian troops carrying the threat of an artillery assault scheduled to begin Saturday. Strong winds reportedly whisked many leaflets away.

While word of the ultimatum reached world capitals and caused outrage in the West, Grozny residents have no access to news about the threat because shelling has wiped out television radio transmitters. Russian Prime Minister Vladimir Putin brushed off the foreign criticism, saying calls for restraint President Clinton and others were "prompted by kind intentions."

Moscow announced Monday would open a safe corridor for Chechens to flee Grozny, but jets in the city Tuesday, making it difficult to move. There was no indication whether a safe corridor would be established. Associated Press Television footage showed a trickle of people, mostly women, mostly on foot, leaving the city. Russian riot police checked documents and frisked men.

Clinton, European Union ministers and the U.N. agency criticized the Russian ultimatum for Grozny, saying they would not taint Russia's image and risk civilian lives. "Russia will pay a heavy price for those actions, with each passing day sinking more deeply into a world that will intensify its own stand against a diminishing world," Clinton said Monday. Putin repeated that Russia would not seek a political solution to Chechnya, as the West has been doing, unless Chechnya turns
