Yes, Iowa, there is life after the caucuses

Student supporters of the various candidates are eager to see how their picks will fare elsewhere in the nation.

By Chao Xiong
The Daily Iowan

As the national political focus has shifted to the next stop on the campaign road, New Hampshire, the local challenge of keeping interest in the election begins.

While those who were elected to represent the Democratic and Republican parties in the upcoming county conventions will probably stay involved in the race, it is important to continue to provide events to spark local interest, said Christina Powers, a UI senior and an Iowa City Democratic precinct captain.

"Without all of the candidates coming through Iowa, it becomes much harder to keep people interested," she said. "We are still trying to figure out ways in which to keep it up."

While the exact turnouts for Monday's caucuses have not been tabulated, turnout on the Democratic side was approximately two and a half times higher than 1996, said David Tingwald, the chairman for the Johnson County Democrats.

"This year, we had two really dynamic candidates who got a lot of people out to support them," he said. "While I don't know what the turnout throughout the state was, I was definitely surprised how well we did."

The turnout, which was more than three times that of the expected 40 in Precinct 3, was seen at several Democratic precincts in the city, Powers said.

Bradley won or tied in all of Iowa City's Democratic precincts, according to the polling results on Voter.com.

"Bradley has an amazing student appeal," Powers said. "Many students say that he comes over as a dad or a teacher — someone very accessible."

Bradley gained 53.7 percent of the Democratic votes in Johnson County.

Representatives from the various candidates' camps are confident that the support they generated in Iowa will continue from the New Hampshire primary up through the general elections.

"I think people will follow the campaigns because we have strong organizations in the county that are for the various campaigns," said Joanne Stoner, the chairwoman of the Johnson County Republican Party. "I think that most of the people who had the interest to come will maintain their interest."

Even with the possibility of change in the near future, student groups remain loyal to their campaigns for now.

"The groups are going to maintain their structure," Powers said. "We're in a wait-and-see position."

The Bradley campaign may be transferred to the University Democrats if he is nominated for president, she said.

Students for Gore plans to keep its efforts alive.

"We have a lot of excited people who invested a lot of effort in this," said Emily

Hajek, a UI junior and public relations director for Students for Gore. "I don't think they'll give up or lose interest now that the focus has shifted from the state."

Increasing interest in grassroots campaigns and getting students to realize that political action is not limited to presidential campaigns are goals Powers would like to see realized.

With the general election yet to come, Hajek said, Students for Gore is working to keep interest from disappearing.

"We had a lot of students turn out at the caucus, but there are a lot of students waiting for the general election to vote," she said.

Students with disabilities increasing nationwide

Nationally, the number has risen from 1 in 33 20 years ago to 1 in 11 today.

Michael Lovaglia, a UI associate professor of sociology, extends test-taking deadlines for some students, and he lets others take tests in separate rooms.

He's not playing favorites — he's accommodating students with learning disabilities.

Currently, one in 11 college freshmen reports having a disability, an increase from the 1 in 33 reported 20 years ago, according to a recent survey from the American Council on Education, as reported by the Chronicle of Higher Education.

"It isn't an advantage; it's leveling the playing field," said Susan Vess, the director of UI Student Disability Services. She said the department currently serves a caseload of approximately 800 — roughly 1 of every 36 UI students — with more than half of those reporting a learning disability.

Some say the number of students with learning disabilities has been steady over recent years, while others disagree with the validity of the students' claims.

"Bottom line — I think it's a big scam," said UI special education Professor Ken Kavale. "It's not something you

Common learning disabilities

A learning disability is a disorder that affects people's ability to either interpret what they see and hear or to link information from different parts of the brain. There are many different types of learning disabilities, which affect 15-20% of the U.S. population. A few examples:

- Dyslexia: affects individuals with average to above-average intelligence who have problems translating printed words into spoken words, word identification or reading comprehension.
- Developmental Writing Disorder: may develop from problems in the brain networks for vocabulary, grammar, hand movement and memory.
- Developmental Arithmetic Disorder: demonstrates problems with numbers, concepts, symbols, memorizing facts, aligning numbers and understanding abstract concepts.
- Attention Deficit Disorder (ADD): Characteristics of this condition display inattention, hyperactivity or impulsivity.

Washington awash in $1.9 trillion budget surplus

President Clinton now believes government debt can be paid off by 2013.

By Alan Fram
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Virtually doubling the size of the budget battlefield this election year, the Congressional Budget Office said Tuesday that it now expects federal surpluses over the next decade to total as much as $1.9 trillion.

With the soaring economy pouring billions in unforeseen revenue into federal coffers, President Clinton said he will propose paying off the government's entire $3.6 trillion federally held debt by 2013. That would be two years earlier than he has previously aimed for and puts him a step ahead of House Republicans, who are working on a plan to pay off that portion of the debt by 2015.

The surplus estimate by budget office for the next 10 years represents a near doubling of the $1 trillion forecast it issued only last July. The figures exclude Social Security funds.

Both sides immediately claimed credit for the good news.

"We got here by making hard choices and sticking to a strategy that works, that builds opportunity and reinforces responsibility," Clinton said at the White House. "I remain committed to that strategy. I ask the Republican majority in Congress to put politics aside and join me."

In a written statement, House Speaker Dennis Hastert, R-Ill., said, "We have this surplus because of the hard work of the American people, because of the healthy American economy and because of prudent fiscal policies championed by the Republican Congress."

The ballooning surplus estimate by budget office, Congress' nonpartisan budget analyst, means there will be even more money at stake this election year, as both parties' presidential candidates, as well as Clinton and Congress, battle over how much of it to use for

When the spam hits the fan

Since July 1999, it has been illegal in Iowa to send fraudulent e-mail.

UI students probably get more e-mail from Anthony Parkin and Jessica Mydek than from their own parents.

They're the kids who are terminally ill, dying from some incurable brain tumor or other rare form of cancer, and are featured on popular fake e-mail chains. Due to their "illness," they have decided to start an e-mail chain letter, with the promise that the American Cancer Society will donate 3 cents toward cancer research for every person the letter is sent to.

Because this and other such letters, the American Cancer Society has posted a notice on its Web site saying it "is greatly disturbed by reports of a fraudulent chain letter circulating on the Internet that lists the American Cancer Society as a 'corporate sponsor.'"

Fake e-mail, a type of spam, is a problem common to anyone who has an e-mail address.

Though she gets the occasional funny forward, UI freshman Erin Nelson says, the majority of the e-mail she receives is spam.

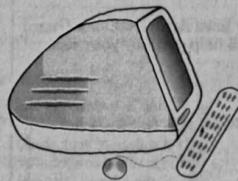

"I'd say I get 10 to 20 a day," she said. "Some of them are good, but most of them are junk."

Blizzard buries East Coast, from Carolina to Maine

Record snowfall amounts, especially in North Carolina, create states of emergency.

By Roger Petterson
Associated Press

A surprisingly fast-moving storm blanketed the East Coast with up to 2 feet of wind-blown snow Tuesday, closing airports and schools, paralyzing the nation's capital and leaving North Carolina looking more like North Dakota.

"The snow has completely covered my car. It's gone, I can't even see it," Thomas Allen said in Raleigh, N.C.

At least four people were killed in weather-related traffic accidents in the Carolinas, and a 5-year-old girl was missing and feared dead in Massachusetts after falling into an icy river while walking to school in heavy snow.

The storm even intruded on the presidential campaign. Most of the candidates flew to New Hampshire after the Iowa caucuses, but Republican Alan Keyes got stuck in Detroit, unable to fly into Boston.

The storm — known as a nor'easter — drove northward along the coast, with moist air from the ocean colliding with cold air over the land. During the morning, snow fell from South Carolina all the way to Maine.

The storm raced into the Northeast with a speed that surprised forecasters. "We knew it was coming. It just decided to hit us a day earlier," said National Weather Service meteorologist Tim Morrin in New York.

It was the third snowfall in a week for some states, but for much of the region it was the first major storm in a season that has seen little snow. It was also the worst snowstorm to hit the area since the blizzard of January 1996.

Board, teachers complete contract

Both sides are happy about the speed with which the agreement was reached.

By Jeremy Shapiro
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa City School Board and the teachers' union gave overwhelming approval Tuesday to a new contract that will give the teachers a 4.26 percent pay increase next year.

The agreement was originally reached during a Jan. 17 closed meeting between the Iowa City Education Association and the School Board.

The teachers' union approved the contract Tuesday morning with 98 percent of the teachers voting in favor. The School Board put the finishing touches on the arrangement by unanimously ratifying the new contract.

Both sides were pleased to have the contract finished.

"The teachers' negotiators and our negotiators did a wonderful job," said Matt Goodlaxson, school board president. "It's all done, and we're still in January. We are very pleased."

Marla Swesey, the union president, was also satisfied.

"We're happy about how quickly everything was handled," she said. "This is the start of something good. I think we learned a lot and got a lot done."

The contract will run for two years. In the first year, the teachers' pay package, including salaries and insurance, will increase by 4.26 percent. The pay increase for the second year will be determined by the state's allowable growth index — an amount decided by the increase or decrease in the number of the district's students. The greater the number of students coming for the 2001-02 school year, the greater the raise teachers can expect.

"The contract is a time-consuming process, so it was a mutual agreement to make it a two-year deal," Swesey said.

This year saw little disagreement and quite a bit of compromising. Swesey attributes this to the solid relationship between the teachers and this year's School Board and administration.

5 in contention for library job

A UI search committee wants someone who can incorporate new technology.

By Andrew T. Dawson
The Daily Iowan

As the field of candidates for UI university librarian narrows, search committee members say they are looking for someone who can move the library system forward as technology develops.

In the weeks since Dec. 31, when former University Librarian Sheila Creth stepped down, the search committee has narrowed its choices to five candidates.

Search committee Chairwoman Barbara Eckstein, an associate professor of English, said the head of the UI Libraries is an important spokesperson inside the administration and for outside constituents.

"The final responsibility for the management lies with the head librarian," she said. "The head librarian is responsible for all of the staff, some of the collection buildings and increased access to information through technology."

Nancy Baker, one of the five candidates, will visit campus for the first time in mid-February. She has been the director of libraries at Washington State University for more than nine years.

"I think the biggest challenge is how to ensure that you can provide the full range of needs, services and collections that a research library demands when times are changing," she said. "You will never have enough money to do everything, and that's the hard thing."

David Eichmann, an assistant professor of library and information science, said one of the biggest current challenges most university libraries face is affording the resources that students and faculty need.

"The cost of scholarly journals and budgeting are the most problematic issues," he said.

Happiness is just a lease away for UI students

For worried first-time renters, there are organizations to help find that perfect pad.

By Anne Huyck
The Daily Iowan

Students who have never rented housing in Iowa City may worry after hearing horror stories about cockroach infestations, sky-high utility bills and neighbors who hold parties until 4 a.m. But fear not, many students and organizations say — it is possible to find a rental property well-suited to one's needs.

"I am having a hard time looking for an apartment," said UI freshman Christine Holland. "I am worried about finding one — very worried."

To ease the fears of students such as Holland, those who have rented an apartment or a house provide proof that everything will eventually work out.

"It wasn't that bad," said UI graduate student Chris Burger. "We started looking in May. The biggest problem was finding a place that allows dogs."

Bugs are something that Burger warns new renters to watch out for — in addition to a few other things.

"Make sure you have enough money for first and last month's rent and utilities," Burger said.

There are two groups on campus dedicated to helping students find a place to live and signing a lease: the Housing Clearinghouse and the Tenant/Landlord Association, both located in the IMU. Both provide free services.

Current renters are now renewing contracts; throughout February and March, most new renters will sign leases for next year, said Corey Keninger, a counselor at the Tenant/Landlord Association.

"We have an apartment directory of current vacancies, which varies a lot," said Penny Caldwell, the coordinator of the Campus Information Center.

Matt Holst/The Daily Iowan
Patti Griffin, who shows apartments for the Chambers Agency, walks UI freshman Joel Eagle through an available apartment.

The Housing Clearinghouse provides a tip sheet that tells students how to understand their leases, along with things to look for and questions to ask about the buildings.

The Tenant/Landlord Association recommends students use common sense when looking for housing.

Violence-intervention program to hold 'Souper' fund-raiser

The Domestic Violence Intervention Program will celebrate the largest sports event of the year and raise money in the process with its fourth-annual Souper Bowl dinner tonight.

The Souper Bowl, beginning at 5:30 p.m. at the City Plaza Hotel, 210 S. Dubuque St., was created in response to a myth that domestic abuse is highest during Super Bowl Sunday, said Kristie Doser, the program's director of education.

In 1993, for example, a crisis line in California got more calls on Super Bowl Sunday than any other day of the year, said program Director Cris Kinkead. Similar findings were widely reported, but the likelihood and potential for domestic violence throughout the year shouldn't be overlooked, she said.

And though the program's Souper Bowl started out small four years ago, 350-400 people are expected this year, Kinkead said. Local businesses have donated soup, bread, veggies and bowls for the event, she said.

One area donor — Fired Up, 112 S. Linn St. — donated 50 bowls made in the store for this year's dinner.

Iowa women's basketball team members will be "celebrity servers" for the dinner, Kinkead said. Jazz will be played by guitarist Jason Clothier.

Kinkead said she hopes to raise approximately $5,000 from the dinner this year for the various domestic-violence programs, including the 24-hour crisis line and domestic-violence counseling, education and advocacy.

Tickets are $15 at the door.

Iowa J.C. does the Dew to recruit students

■ Cans of Mountain Dew are being used to advertise an Iowa community college.

Associated Press

SHELDON, Iowa — An Iowa community college is hoping to inspire people to think about quenching their thirst for knowledge when they reach for a can of Mountain Dew.

Northwest Iowa Community College is running ads on pop cans sold in a seven-county area — approximately 240,000 of them.

The ads — in bright red letters against the green cans — picture a space alien and the slogan: "You don't have to go far away to get a quality education."

Beneath the slogan, the school lists its selling points: "Affordable. Close to home. Quality instruction." Then comes the school's name, logo and Web address.

The ads are "wild and out there," said Julie Mooney, a college spokeswoman.

She said they give the school "a unique presence" among its target audience — area high school students.

Mountain Dew is the No. 1 soft drink in the 15- to 22-year-old age category, said Bill Carpenter, a spokesman for Pepsi-Cola of Estherville, the local bottler for Mountain Dew.

"I think it's perfect for them," he said.

The pitch for the Sheldon school is an extension of the school's agreement to sell only Pepsi-Cola products on campus, a contract that brings in approximately $19,000 per year.

The cans have been distributed throughout O'Brien, Osceola, Dickinson, Emmet, Clay, Palo Alto and Kossuth counties. The supply is expected to run out by the end of the month.

Nearly 90 percent of students at Northwest Iowa Community College live in the surrounding counties.

Carpenter said pop cans often have been used to promote events and places in the community, such as the Clay County Fair and Arnold's Park Amusement Park.

Iowa Lakes Community College ran a similar campaign.

The last shall not be first: Hatch quits

■ A poor showing in the Iowa caucuses forces the Utah senator out of the presidential race.

By Matt Kelley
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A last-place finish in the Iowa caucuses has persuaded Orrin Hatch to drop out of the Republican presidential race.

The Utah senator had hoped to capitalize on his political experience, repeatedly stressing his record as a four-term senator and chairman of the committee overseeing judicial appointments. But few voters were interested.

Hatch, who received just 1 percent of the Iowa vote, planned to announce his decision at a news conference today in the hearing room of the Senate Judiciary Committee.

He left Iowa without making a public appearance and before all the votes were counted Monday night. He had planned to hold a news conference Tuesday in Washington, D.C., but a snowstorm paralyzed the city and delayed his announcement.

"He's not taking any calls. We're even having trouble getting him on the phone," spokesman Paul Smith said.

Hatch jumped into the GOP race only last summer, months or years after some other contenders were actively building their campaigns. He asked for 1 million donors to give him $36 each to raise $36 million, but received only about $2.5 million from 15,000 contributors.

He had hoped his Senate experience would help him in the race.

"All these other (GOP candidates) are making grandiose promises, but three of them have never been elected to anything," Hatch said last week, referring to fellow conservatives Steve Forbes, Alan Keyes and Gary Bauer. "They have no clue how to work with Congress."

Forbes came in second in Iowa to George W. Bush, and Keyes finished third. Bauer, who was fourth with 9 percent of the votes, continued to campaign Tuesday in New Hampshire, site of next week's first-in-the-nation primary.

He said of Hatch: "I can't say I'm too sad to see him go, because I want everyone to go but me. But he's a good man, and I'm glad he was there."

Vilsack warns of teacher shortage

■ In Iowa, there aren't enough teachers to replace those who soon may retire, the governor says.

Associated Press

CEDAR RAPIDS — Iowa needs to immediately address an expected decline in teacher numbers before state education officials are forced to start closing schools, Gov. Tom Vilsack said Monday.

"It's not just a small problem," he said. "It's a major problem." Vilsack has proposed tax incentives, improved salaries and better working conditions for Iowa teachers. He said the director of the Iowa Department of Education, Ted Stillwill, has told him the situation is almost dire.

"It's pretty tough to say, 'Come to Iowa because we'll give you the 35th-lowest starting teacher salary in the country.' That doesn't get anybody's attention," Vilsack said. "You have to get their attention — then you can say, 'It's not about tax credits. It's about lower class sizes. It's about the ability to do what you want to do, which is to teach.'"

It's been speculated that 40 percent of current teachers could qualify for retirement in the next couple of years, he said, and if that were to occur without replacements, teacher shortages would be severe. Iowa can't compete with states such as Texas or California with attractive natural resources, he conceded.

And, he added, "It's pretty tough to say, 'Come to Iowa because we'll give you the 35th lowest starting teacher salary in the country.' That doesn't get anybody's attention. You have to get their attention, then you can say, 'It's not about tax credits. It's about lower class sizes. It's about the ability to do what you want to do, which is to teach.'

"We haven't been aggressive enough marketing ourselves to ourselves, particularly to many of our bright young people who want to teach."

A handful of rock 'n' roll classics that VH1 might have missed

In case you might have missed it, the music video network VH1 summarized rock history last week with its stunning presentation of "The 100 Greatest Songs of Rock 'n' Roll."

In between airings of the Celine Dion life story, rock experts such as Jon Bon Jovi, Melissa Etheridge and John Mellencamp provided narration for the network's analysis of the best rock songs known to humankind.

It was a showcase of revolutionary magnitude — who would have thought, after all, that the Rolling Stones, Led Zeppelin and the Beatles would all have songs in the top 10?

And how could one have predicted that Jon Bon Jovi was a big AC/DC follower when he was a teen, as he unwittingly revealed to the viewing audience? For those who watched, it was one of those phenomenal experiences that come along only so often.

It occurred to me, meanwhile, that the contributors to the list, whether by accidental omission or outright neglect, left out some of the more important rock compositions of our time. For while Aretha Franklin certainly got her respect, there was a surprising lack of representation by bands such as Poison, Grand Funk Railroad and The Thompson Twins.

For the sake of rock's integrity, I've gathered a handful of rock 'n' roll classics that must have somehow slipped out of the ballots when VH1 made its compilation. Because these are the best songs of rock, we must regretfully ignore the works of hip-hop wizards such as Biz Markie and Sir Mix-a-Lot.

But here, in no particular order, are some of the songs that the pollsters might have missed:

"I Can't Drive 55," Sammy Hagar. Before he joined Van Halen, this multi-talented artist took time to record this rock 'n' roll epic, in which he explained a common impediment that many motorists are confronted with. Whether it be out of contempt for the federal regulatory process or out of sheer physical limitation, Hagar laments that he can not, in fact, drive 55 mph. This plea, combined with a brilliant guitar arrangement, made this song an instant classic.

"Hanging Tough," New Kids on the Block. In 1989, this song seemed to most as just another in the line of the New Kids' riveting hits. A decade later, though, the song echoes as a visceral commentary on everyday life and the will to succeed in the face of adversity. As Joey and Jordan remind us in the chorus, "we're hanging tough." In these days and times, aren't we all?

"I Wanna Sex You Up," Color Me Badd. Never had the complex male/female courtship dynamic been quite so idealistically encapsulated as it was in this early 1990s love anthem. The pop group, which — as video footage indicates — was composed of Vanilla Ice, Kenny G, George Michael and a guy from Milli Vanilli, struck harmonic gold with this under-appreciated hit. The music of Color Me Badd was a precursor to the boy-band romanticism that is prevalent today, and this song captures the skill and symphonic mastery of its musicians.

"Dr. Feelgood," Mötley Crüe. If Mozart had ever dabbled in late-80s heavy metal, it likely would have sounded something like

"Dr. Feelgood."

"He's the one they call Dr. Feelgood," vocalist Vince Neil asserts. "He's gonna make you feel all right." This rock opus sends chills down the spine every time and also makes one wonder: Just who is Dr. Feelgood, and what does he practice? Podiatry? Gastroenterology? Is he a dentist? Or does it even matter?

"Funkytown," Lipps Inc. This classic, unfairly categorized as a disco tune, actually transcended the entire disco genre with its mind-gripping opening and robotic vocals. How this escaped the attention of VH1's analysts is beyond anybody's guess.

"Soldier of Love," Donny Osmond. This hit from the late 1980s is remembered mainly because it thankfully brought Osmond back to the forefront of American culture, but it is also a sonic masterpiece of the highest degree. Osmond might have surprised some with the song's militaristic tones, but Donny assures us that he is not a soldier in the Air Force or Navy, but a soldier of love.

"MmmBop," Hanson. These three mop-topped teens broke through in 1997 with the philosophical musings included in this rock-pop classic. "MmmBop... booo bop ba doo bop... well, we all know the rest. The hard rockers from Hanson made us all believe in the power of compelling vocals and mind-blowing guitar riffs.

This is all, as I believe K.C. and the Sunshine Band once said, just the tip of the iceberg. It might well be, however, that we will have to wait until the next century or next millennium to see a rock list that gives songs such as these the recognition they deserve. Oh well — it might take a few hundred years to warm up to Sammy Hagar, anyway.

Jesse Ammerman is the DI Viewpoints editor.

EDITORIAL

Game show trend trivializes our intelligence

In recent months, prime-time television has set aside several time slots for a wide variety of game shows. With the success of ABC's "Who Wants To Be A Millionaire?" America has become addicted to nights filled with trivia rather than sitcoms and the like. The content of the trivia appears to be beside the point. Some of it, after all, is better suited for junior high school students than for well-read adults. Nevertheless, "Millionaire" has been riding high.

Instead of waiting for the fad of "Millionaire" to run its course, meanwhile, the other major networks made a decision to jump on the bandwagon and start nightly quiz shows of their own, such as "Greed," "Twenty-One" and "Winning Lines." The interactive nature of many of these shows are key factors in drawing in the audience.

The viewers, apparently, believe they can participate fully in the games through their selection rounds. They also believe, given that the shows' writers keep coming up with simple questions, that they, too, can win thousands, even millions, of dollars.

Sadly, the continuation and expansion of these game shows is leading to a "dumbing-down" of our country, making us, the viewers, into a group of money-hungry people who overestimate our intelligence because we are able to complete a short nursery rhyme or finish the phrase "duck, duck..." while contestants on TV might have more difficulty.

This, of course, is what the networks would like us to believe. Who's going to watch a show, after all, in which he or she cannot answer the questions as well, if not better, than the contestants? As long as millions of Americans believe that they, too, can be millionaires, ratings should not plummet anytime soon for some of TV's prime-time game shows.

For years, sitcoms have been the major source for empty-headed TV viewing, but they seem to have been replaced with an even more pathetic form of entertainment.

Reserve Room thievery aggravates students and teachers alike

There have been six semesters in which I have put course material in the Reserve Room of the Main Library. During three of those semesters, some of the materials were stolen.

In conversations with other instructors, I have learned that theft of reserve materials is commonplace. In hopes of making it less common, I want to explain why instructors put materials on reserve and why stealing these materials impedes the learning of all students, thief included.

The Reserve Room helps instructors to comply with U.S. copyright law. Instructors do not make copies of articles for every student in the class because it is illegal to do so. People wishing to reproduce copyrighted material must have permission.

Instructors obtain written permission to duplicate the material included in course packs, and the price of those packs includes the royalty fees that the publishers require.

If instructors are unable to get permission, they may not legally include the material in a course pack. "Fair use" stipulations within copyright law, however, allow single copies of copyrighted material for educational purposes. Putting an article on reserve constitutes fair use: from the one article, students may each make a copy.

Instructors also put items on reserve in order to make course materials available at lower cost.

Instead of paying for an entire book with only one relevant chapter, students using the Reserve Room pay only the cost of copying one chapter. Thus, the Reserve Room frees an instructor to use numerous articles or book sections without financially overburdening students.

The Reserve Room also allows instructors flexibility in selecting course materials — they may legally use an article regardless of whether the publisher grants permission, and an instructor may easily add books or articles to the syllabus via the Reserve Room as the semester progresses.

Stealing from the Reserve Room degrades the learning environment in several ways. Most obviously, stealing Reserve Room material denies other students access to course materials and thus demonstrates a flagrant disregard for the learning of one's fellow students. It also demonstrates a dis-

Lyn Elliot
Guest Opinion

Another less-obvious way that theft of reserve materials degrades the learning environment lies in a potential long-term response of instructors: They could decide to put nothing on reserve.

regard for the work of the instructor. When materials I have on reserve are stolen, it falls to me to reassemble them. Not only does this process take time that I would rather devote to other aspects of teaching, it also embitters me toward the anonymous thief. When materials I put on reserve disappear, I know that there is one student in my class who could not care less about the effort and planning I put into teaching.

After such instances, it can be difficult to keep feelings of demoralization from pervading my teaching as a whole.

Another less-obvious way that theft of reserve materials degrades the learning environment lies in a potential long-term response of instructors: They could decide to put nothing on reserve. In this scenario, students could be required to buy many more books, and instructors could choose not to include articles, chapters or out-of-print books that would enrich student learning.

Of course, the best interests of students are not served by this course of action, but it is easy to see how an instructor might judge it preferable to wasting time and teaching energy on stolen reserve items.

Though stealing from the Reserve Room may save those who do it a dollar or two in copying, it is important to understand that the cost to the overall quality of education at the UI is much greater. If you discover any impulses to Reserve Room theft this semester, either in yourself or your peers, try to squelch them. The aggravation you save may be your own.

Lyn Elliot is a UI graduate student and instructor.

"The whole thing — it's a bogus deal," he said.

On the other side, Vess said she thinks there is an increase because there is a large emphasis on pursuing post-secondary education, despite limitations.

"An individual has a right to (an education) that has changed under the law — the Americans with Disabilities Act," she said. "If a student is qualified to participate in programs and activities on campus, then one cannot discriminate because of the disability."

Student Disability Services will serve as an intermediary between the student and the classroom, ensuring correct help, Vess said. For example, she said, someone with a reading disability may gain assistance in a history class but not a math class.

"We will accommodate what goes on in the classroom. We won't go to the library for you," Vess said.

Storm clobbers East Coast from Carolinas to Maine

Most federal agencies shut down in Washington. Legislative meetings were called off in Delaware, New Hampshire and Pennsylvania; Delaware Gov. Thomas Carper had to postpone his State of the State address for the second time in a week because of snow.

Schools were closed from South Carolina to Maine, including nearly all the schools in New Jersey and Maryland.

Up to 17 inches of snow fell in parts of Virginia. The Baltimore-Washington International Airport got more than 7 inches. Ten inches had accumulated outside Philadelphia at King of Prussia; New York City measured 6.

Snow up to 18 inches deep was forecast by the end of the storm in the Berkshire hills of western Massachusetts.

The storm hit hardest in the Carolinas. North Carolina got a record 20.3 inches at the Raleigh-Durham airport.

The North Carolina utility CP&L had 81,000 customers without power, and Duke Power Co. reported 87,000 outages in North Carolina. Approximately 50,000 people were without power in South Carolina, and Virginia Power reported fewer than a thousand customers in the dark.

forms, ranging from hoax chain letters, such as one in which Bill Gates offers to send you $1,000 to forward his e-mail to 100 people, to forwards promising that wishes will come true if you send the letter to enough people.

"The best one I've gotten is the one where, if you forward this to people, you'll get Gap clothes," said UI freshman Elaina Buzzell.

Residents of Iowa and 13 other states now have the right to fight back against spam. As of July 1, 1999, any Iowa resident who receives an e-mail message that "involves forgery or fails to give an e-mail address for opting out of future messages" can sue for actual damages and attorney fees, as well as $10 a message, or $500 per suit, according to section 714E of the Iowa Code.

So far, the law office of Iowa City lawyer Stephen Greenleaf has not seen any cases involving unwanted e-mail or e-mail fraud, but he said such cases should be intriguing if they are "presented in the near future."

"It's an interesting area, especially because issues such as personal jurisdiction are going to be made more complex," he said.

Still, even with a law in effect, students such as Nelson aren't exactly up to the idea of taking on a spammer in the courtroom.

Federal surplus balloons to $1.9 trillion possible tax cuts, spending increases and debt reduction.

Among the politicians for whom the forecast was good news is GOP presidential contender George W. Bush, who has proposed a five-year, $483 billion tax cut that could be paid for by the new numbers. Some, including Republican candidate Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., have said Bush's plan eats up too much of the projected surplus.

Because of likely political gridlock on issues this year, many analysts expect that most of the surplus for fiscal 2001 — which begins on Oct. 1 — will go for debt reduction. The budget office projected next year's surplus at up to $69 billion, plus another $166 billion in Social Security surpluses.

Clinton provided no details about how he would eliminate the publicly held debt, which is money the government owes investors who hold Treasury bonds, bills and notes. The remaining $2 trillion of the $5.7 trillion national debt is money held by the Social Security and other trust funds.

Clinton said his plan, to be included in the fiscal 2001 budget that he will release on Feb. 7, will devote interest savings to Social Security, extending its solvency beyond 2050. It will also seek to ensure Medicare's survival until at least 2025, he said.

Yo-Yo Ma, cellist extraordinaire, to bring New Goldberg Variations to Iowa City

■ One of the world's best-loved cellists will grace the Hancher stage.

By Akwi Nji
 The Daily Iowan

Music lovers around the world have been captivated by cellist Yo-Yo Ma, and Iowa City's are no exception. And though Ma's concert of The New Goldberg Variations (at 8 p.m. today) will be his sixth performance in Hancher Auditorium, the program will include compositions that the local community has not heard Ma perform.

"I've never heard him play Bach live," said Amos Yang, a visiting assistant professor of music. "I'm intrigued, because it's something I've never heard performed by a cellist with a piano accompanist."

Accompanied by pianist Kathryn Stott, Ma will open the program with compositions by Stravinsky and continue with such works as Opus 19 by Rachmaninoff. A series of recent works, The New Goldberg Variations, which were written for Ma by composers Kenneth Frazelle, Peter Lieberman, Christopher Rouse, Richard Danielpour, Peter Schickele and John Corigliano, stem from Bach's Goldberg Variations.

"Composers such as Vivaldi, who were successful in their own time, looked back to other composers' works," said Charles Wendt, a UI professor of music.

"That's what the composers who wrote the pieces for Yo-Yo's program were doing - looking back to the masters."

In Ma's previous trips to Iowa City, he has taken the opportunity to teach many classes. Because of his demanding schedule, he teaches primarily in large-group settings, or master classes.

"In all the master classes I've seen him teach, he doesn't even bring his own cello. He demonstrates on the student's cello, and the student will be amazed that her or his own cello could sound so good," Yang said. "Every cello is actually different, but he adjusts so quickly that it just amazes everyone in the room."

Yang, who has played for Ma in several master classes, said that off-stage, Ma reveals a side that is very "down to earth," such as when he wears shorts and a T-shirt to classes or takes an entire cello section out for dessert after a class.

While Ma finds time in his career to have some fun, he also works to maintain his position as one of the best cellists in the world.

"He's got a flare to him," said UI junior Maggie Darby. "Whenever I used to think of him, I used to think he could play anything, and I really think he can."

While many musicians might be able to pluck at an instrument and call it music, Ma touches bow to string and produces Grammy Award winners. Of his more than 45 albums, 10 have won Grammys.

"Instead of resting on how good he is, I find that every time I go hear him, he seems to grow and get better as a musician and artist," Yang said. "I have respect for someone of his stature who is already 'at the top' and yet is still seeking to make himself better."

Wendt feels that Ma's success stems from the challenges he takes.

"He always challenges himself. He takes on new works and presents new compositions that are always appreciated in the repertoire," he said.

These challenges are reflected in Ma's ability to work with diverse artists, ranging from bluegrass musicians to tango specialists.

"It's everything. He's got his style for how he plays the music, and he's also a very physical player," Darby said. "The biggest thing about him, I think, is how much he has popularized the cello, string music and classical music."

Hawks look to exploit slumping Illini squad

■ The Hawkeyes host Illinois tonight at 7, and hope to pick up their second-consecutive victory.

By Mike Kelly
 The Daily Iowan

Iowa's best preparation for tonight's game against Illinois did not come from watching film or practicing intensely — it came from playing Michigan.

Steve Alford said the Fighting Illini remind him of a deeper, more experienced Wolverine team — just as talented and with a year of Big Ten experience under their belts.

Illinois comes into tonight's 7:05 tip-off sporting a 10-6 (2-3 in the Big Ten) record up against the 8-9 (2-4) Hawkeye team.

The Illini started the season ranked No. 17, but Illinois' fab freshmen from a year ago are in the midst of a sophomore slump, losing three out of its last four games. Adding to the bad news was losing starting center Marcus Griffin, who sustained a knee injury last Friday in practice and is expected to miss three to six weeks.

"It's just one thing after another for us," Griffin said.

Alford said his team is not going to intimidate the bigger, stronger Illinois team, or most other Big Ten teams for that matter.

Little things like getting to loose balls and taking charges are the things Alford thinks his team has to do in order to be successful the rest of the way.

"If I was a coach, I would not look at us and say, 'Wow, those guys are really scary looking,'" Alford said. "I might tell the guys during warm ups to keep their tops on longer and run around really fast. We have to do things in the 'little things category' that lead to big things like a win."

Iowa did the little things against Michigan. The Hawkeyes were out-shot, and outbounded in the first half against the Wolverines, but were

Thomas' spinal cord only bruised

■ Derrick Thomas' doctors are hopeful that the Chiefs linebacker will walk again.

By Mark Long
 Associated Press

MIAMI — Derrick Thomas underwent more than four hours of surgery Tuesday to rebuild part of his spine and doctors said his spinal cord was not damaged as badly as feared.

Thomas' spinal cord was severely bruised, neurosurgeon Barth Green said.

Doctors originally thought it might have been severed when Thomas, 33, was thrown from his car Sunday after losing control on an icy highway near Kansas City, Mo. Thomas broke his spine and neck and wound up semi-conscious with no feeling in his legs.

Though the NFL star remained paralyzed from the chest down at Jackson Memorial Hospital, doctors expressed hope he'd walk again.

"There have been cases of people with similar injuries who have recovered and there have been people who haven't recovered," Green said. "Anybody who knows Derrick knows that you don't bet against him. But it's too early to tell right now. We just have to see how he does."

The Kansas City Chiefs linebacker's operation included decompressing the spinal cord, stabilizing the spinal column with screws, titanium rods and hooks, and implanting bone grafts from Thomas' hip.

Doctors said surgery went as planned and that Thomas, who remained sedated Tuesday afternoon, could be transferred to a rehabilitation facility in about two weeks. He already has begun working with therapists.

Motivation mighty for Sunday's warriors

■ St. Louis remembers the early season loss to the Titans, and Tennessee remembers the victory.

By Barry Wilner
 Associated Press

ATLANTA — The Tennessee Titans want to remember one game from their special season. They want to recall everything they did right against the St. Louis Rams on Halloween, then repeat it Sunday in the Super Bowl.

The Rams want to remember that game, too. And pull off a reversal of fortunes.

"I think it's going to give both of us a little bit of confidence," said Rams quarterback Kurt Warner, recalling the 24-21 victory in which the Titans built a 21-0 lead and held on.

"Obviously, they beat us, so they know they can beat us. And we feel that we could have beaten them had we played a good game."

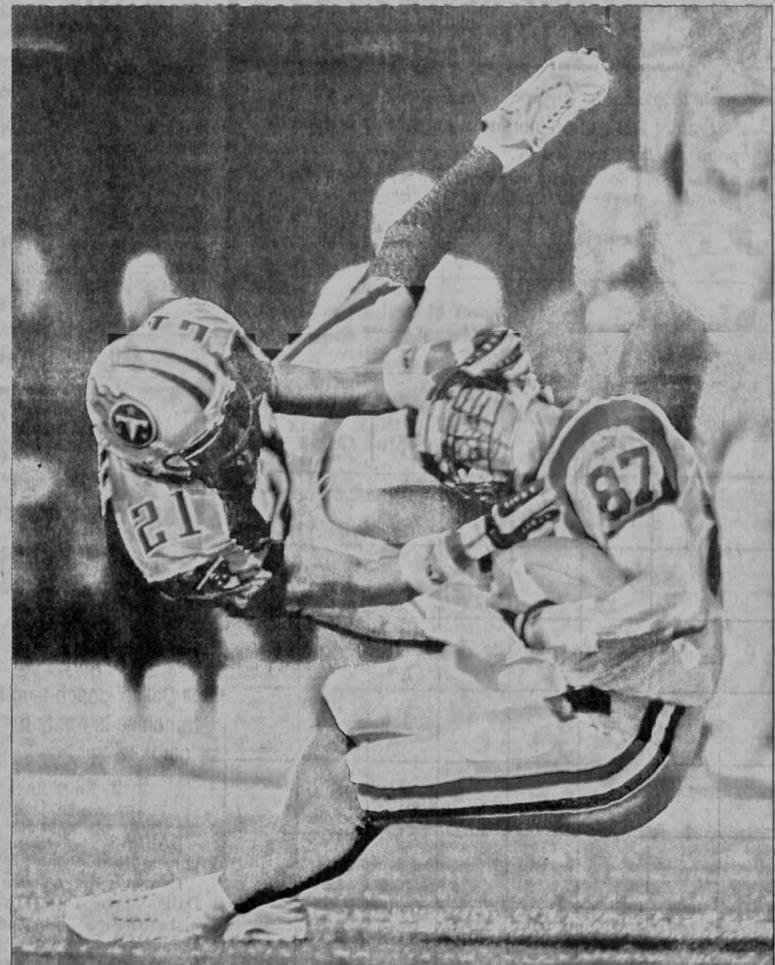

The Rams were 6-0 heading into their visit to Nashville, where the Titans were coming off a bye. St. Louis already had displayed a powerhouse attack, scoring no fewer than 27 points and winning by no fewer than 17.

The time was ripe for the Titans, who pounced on it. They also pounced on the Rams' mistakes, jumping to a 21-0 first-quarter lead. Tennessee scored on an 80-yard drive to open the game. Then Warner fumbled when sacked and, one play later, Eddie George ran in from the 17. Two plays later came Warner's second fumble, and McNair's 10-yard run capped the quick onslaught.

Usually, that's how St. Louis (15-3) wins.

"Key turnovers put us in a hole that we were unable to climb out of," Pro Bowl cornerback Todd Lyght said. "We feel we are a quick-start team, and the roles were reversed at Tennessee. They did a good job of converting when they got the ball in our end of the field."

St. Louis rallied within 21-14 as offensive player of the year Marshall Faulk went wild. After Al

Newcomers watch their lips

ATLANTA — Call it the Ray Buchanan Rule.

The Tennessee Titans and St. Louis Rams, both Super Bowl neophytes, left their dog collars at home Tuesday. For good measure, they avoided anything that could be construed as an insult and respectfully declined to guarantee a victory in Sunday's game.

"We want to be careful in what we say and what we do," Tennessee receiver Derrick Mason said Tuesday at the annual phenomenon known as media day. "We don't want to say anything about the Rams that might get them motivated."

Agassi, Sampras to renew rivalry in semifinals

■ The most anticipated match of the Australian Open will be Thursday night's battle between Andre Agassi and Pete Sampras.

By Steve Wilstein
 Associated Press

MELBOURNE, Australia — At a moment when Andre Agassi and Pete Sampras are playing arguably the best tennis of their careers, they will meet a round too soon in the Australian Open semifinals.

It is the final before the final, a match that could set up the tournament for an anticlimactic finish.

Agassi and Sampras both are anticipating the high voltage that courses through all their matches, a charge that emanates from their days in the juniors and intensifies year by year as the stakes rise and they edge closer to the end of their careers.

On this occasion, Agassi will be seeking to become the first player to reach four straight Grand Slam finals since Rod Laver swept them all in 1969. For Sampras, history awaits as he tries to win his 13th major title and surpass Roy Emerson.

"Once 6 o'clock, 6:30 comes around, you get the nerves going and you feel like, 'This is it,'" Sampras said. "We are always a little nervous in the beginning of the matches, but once we get into it we are fine."

Yet there is a fear that Sampras senses against Agassi and no one else.

"He stands on the baseline and is basically looking you in the eye and saying, 'Ace me!' And if you don't ace him, he is going to pounce on that second serve," Sampras said.

Similarly, Agassi is undaunted by everyone else, but he knows that Sampras is capable of breaking down his baseline game with relentless net attacks.

"With Pete, there's a certain respect that goes along with playing him that makes you focus even more," Agassi said. "With the respect comes a level of anticipation and energy."

"It's always going to be close and it's always going to be a little that decides the difference. He's one of the greatest big-situation, big-match players that have ever played the game."

WHO'S HOT

Wayne Gretzky will star in a Budweiser Super Bowl ad where he will be the designated driver for a freind with a Zamboni.

SAID WHAT?

I'm not going to go and hit anybody. I'm not that ignorant, I'm not crazy. I'm not going to hit him in his face, I just wanted to make a point that that was wrong.
 — SuperSonics guard Gary Payton, on why he went after referee Ted Bernhardt and had to be restrained after being ejected in the first quarter of New York's 112-106 victory over Seattle on Monday night.

WHO'S NOT

"Sophia" an exotic dancer in Atlanta. Don't expect the Rams or Titans to frequent her club like the Falcons did last year.

Judge denies Belichick request to negotiate
 NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Bill Belichick remained a coach without a team Tuesday as a federal judge denied his request for an order allowing him to seek another NFL coaching job.
 In a sternly worded ruling, U.S. District Court Judge John W. Bissell said Belichick created the very problems he asked the court to solve for him when he resigned as coach of the New York Jets one day after being appointed to succeed Bill Parcells.
 His lawyers claimed the NFL is preventing Belichick from making a living the only way he knows, and Bissell acknowledged Belichick's distress at not having a team to coach.

 NEW YORK — Yet another title for Martina Navratilova: Hall of Famer.
 "Martina was the greatest all-around player to ever play our game," fellow Hall of Famer Billie Jean King said Tuesday at a news conference for the newest members of the International Tennis Hall of Fame. "She just did it all."
Soccer star smashes journalist's car window HAVANA — Diego Maradona, apparently angered by constant media coverage during his stay for cocaine rehabilitation, punched and broke a reporter's car window on Tuesday.

 Photographers and cameramen say they were trailing Maradona outside a Havana supermarket when he got out of the black Mercedes Benz loaned to him by the Cuban government.
 He confronted a TV cameraman and photographer of Reuters and struck the vehicle's window with his hand, shattering the glass. Photographer Heriberto Rodriguez sustained a slight injury to his eye from the broken glass.
 Maradona, 39, arrived in Cuba on Jan. 18 to undergo treatment for drug addiction at a medical-oriented hotel on the outskirts of Havana.

Rodman, Mavericks may strike a deal

■ Dallas' coach said the franchise is ready for a "gamble."
 By Jaime Aron Associated Press
 DALLAS — Dennis the Maverick? Stay tuned.
 Dennis Rodman spoke with the Dallas Mavericks again Tuesday, just as the team was placing Gary Trent on the injured list. The move opened a roster spot and left Dallas in need of a starting power forward.
 "I think everybody is kind of ready for a bit of a gamble," coach and general manager Don Nelson said before the Mavericks played the Golden State Warriors. "If it works out, that'll be fine."
DALLAS MAVERICKS
 If a deal is struck, Rodman would get $500,000 for the final 41 games, beginning Thursday night at home against the Los Angeles Clippers.
 Rodman flew in Monday and met for two hours with Nelson and Mark Cuban, who is buying the team. The flamboyant forward and Internet billionaire continued talking Tuesday to decide whether the two sides made a good fit.
 "We had a chance to talk about some issues and see where Dennis is coming from, where his head is," Nelson said.
 "He looked pretty good to me, although he did have two huge earrings in his nose and one in the bottom of his lip," Nelson said, laughing.
 The 38-year-old Rodman has played just 23 games the last two seasons. He's made more headlines for his off-court behavior, including scrapes with the law in November and December.

■ Vikings coach Dennis Green hired six coaches fired from rival Green Bay.

By Arnie Stapleton
Associated Press

EDEN PRAIRIE, Minn. — Welcome to Lambeau Field West, where Ron Wolf's rejects have turned into Dennis Green's reclamations.

The Minnesota Vikings added three more of Green Bay's fired assistants to their coaching staff Tuesday, including defensive coordinator Emmitt Thomas, a day after Sherman Lewis was brought in to run the offense.

Former Packers receivers coach Charlie Baggett also joined Green's staff and Thomas brought along Chuck Knox Jr., who will provide computer analysis.

Lewis and Thomas were fired along with the rest of the Packers' staff on Jan. 3 after Green Bay went 8-8 in Ray Rhodes' only season as coach.

"We all kind of know each other," Thomas said. "It makes for a smoother transition."

Also on Tuesday, Vikings general manager Tim Connolly resigned effective Feb. 1 after 15 months on the job. He lost a power struggle with Green last spring that limited his duties to overseeing the Vikings' push for a new stadium.

"If I have one regret, it's that we didn't make more progress on the stadium front and hopefully that issue will be resolved in the near future," Connolly said.

The staff shakeup, known locally as the "Purple Purge," began last week when Green, smarting from an underwhelming 11-7 season that once again ended shy of the Super Bowl, fired inside linebackers coach Tom Olivadotti without informing defensive coordinator Foge Fazio.

Fazio resigned a few days later to take a job as linebackers coach in Washington.

On Monday, Doug Atkins was fired as tight ends coach and Ray Sherman quit rather than accept a demotion from offensive coordinator to receivers coach after Hubbard Alexander was moved to a front office job.

Lewis inherited an offense that ranked third in the NFL, but Thomas takes over a defense that owned the league's second-worst pass defense and used a rookie, a second-year player and a converted receiver in the secondary.

Thomas said Freddie Solomon will stay on as defensive backs coach and won't be moved to a front-office job as many had

"I had eight great years there. I wish it had ended better, but I have great memories of Green Bay and every time I walk into that stadium it will be a great feeling. I have no ill feelings toward Green Bay whatsoever."

— Sherm Lewis, newly hired Minnesota assistant coach speculated.

Thomas said he didn't disagree with his firing in Green Bay.

"We didn't get the job done and when you're in the W-and-L business, you've got to win," Thomas said. "A lot of people are talking about 'You should have gotten another year,' but there are no guarantees in life and in this profession."

"And to be given an opportunity to come to a team that has a record of winning ... I feel very excited about it."

Thomas and Lewis said they were too busy making the transition to think about playing NFC rival Green Bay, where they were part of the first triumvirate of black coaches in NFL history.

Wiegler aims for repeat performance

Shera Wiegler led the Iowa women's tennis team to a Sweet Sixteen finish last year, and her coach says she has emerged as one of the top singles and doubles players in the region. The senior has accomplished a lot in her three years at the UI and heads into her final campaign with the Hawkeyes ready to match last year's success. DI sportswriter Jeremy Schnitker sat down with the California native and discussed the upcoming season, pickles and the possibility of her playing professionally.

DI: Being a senior, what kind of mark would you like to leave on this program?

SW: There's a lot I want to give back. I was given a lot by this university, and I want to give that back. I want to leave by making an impact, setting a trend for this team for the future.

DI: What are some goals this team has set?

SW: To win the Big Ten for sure, I think we have a good shot. We missed it last year by one match. We also want to go back to the NCAA tournament. We want to get back to where we were last year — back to the Sweet Sixteen.

DI: What is the best memory you have of your time spent at Iowa?

SW: Absolutely last year when we beat Notre Dame to advance to the Sweet Sixteen. That was the best moment of my life. Being down and coming back like we did with such a team effort. That was my best moment.

DI: What was it like to make it that far into the tournament, making it to the coveted Sweet Sixteen?

SW: It was crazy. People were crying — fans and parents. But we were smiling too. It was just an unbelievable feeling, like a dream come true. We were such underdogs going into it and we beat two top 20 teams.

DI: You have one of the highest GPAs on the team. What is your strategy for balancing both school and tennis?

SW: I really can't figure that out. I'm actually a procrastinator. For some reason I just do my best when I cram. I'm still baffled by it.

DI: What do you feel makes you a good tennis player?

SW: I would have to say my will

with Shera Wiegler

to win. I don't like to lose. I will suffer on the court to do what it takes for my team to win.

DI: According to the 1999-2000 media guide, your favorite food is pickles. Why pickles?

SW: I have no clue. I just grew up loving pickles. My friends and family make fun of me for it all the time.

DI: With the recent cold temperatures, do you ever miss the nice weather in California?

SW: You're really not outdoors a lot here, so it isn't that big of a deal. All the experiences I've had here at Iowa are worth it. When I'm home laying out at Christmas and come back to this stuff I miss it. But I love Iowa.

DI: So there's no regrets about leaving California to come here?

SW: I have no regrets. This is the best choice I could have made.

DI: What are your plans for after you graduate?

SW: I'm going to play pro tennis for a year and see how it goes. If I do well, I'll keep up. I'm excited, it should be a lot of fun and a good experience.

Knight shakes media hands

By Steve Harmen Associated Press

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. — Indiana coach Bob Knight, who blew up at reporters after the Hoosiers played Iowa last week, started Tuesday night's postgame news conference with a sarcastic walk through the Assembly Hall media room, making small talk as he shook everyone's hand.

or anything now?" A week earlier, Knight lashed out at the media for repeated questions about his first game against new Iowa coach Steve Alford, who played for Knight and led the Hoosiers to the 1987 NCAA championship. Alford, in earlier interviews, had said Knight hadn't spoken to him since he was hired as coach at Iowa last spring.

HELP WANTED

MAKE A DIFFERENCE IN 2000

Systems Unlimited is a recognized leader in providing services to people with disabilities in the Iowa City area. We are looking for the right people to work in our residential program.

A DSA works directly with individuals with disabilities. In this job, you will become one of the key people for assisting individuals with normal daily living activities in a duplex or house where three to five individuals live. You will be asked to assist them in learning how to get things done on their own, and how to enjoy the community they live in.

We look for people who like people, who like to have fun, and who exercise good judgment in solving problems. If this sounds like you, and you want to learn more, visit our web site @ www.sui.org.
