Bradley hammers Gore on fund raising

While the senator questions Al Gore's integrity, George W. Bush and John McCain argue about readiness.

By Ron Fournier
Associated Press

MANCHESTER, N.H. — Al Gore and fellow Democrats jumped "into bed with special interests" during the 1996 fund-raising scandal, rival Bill Bradley said Sunday, as he struggled with questions about his health two days before New Hampshire's primary. Sen. John McCain claimed, "There's only one man who is fully prepared" to be commander-in-chief, and he said it's not George W. Bush.

With polls showing Gore's once-commanding lead narrowing, the vice president struggled to deal with Bradley's sudden eagerness to attack. A political flame-thrower himself, Gore accused Bradley of impugning his integrity and "stepping down ... to the level of personal vilification."

Since the waning days of the Iowa campaign, Bradley has been torn between a need to attack Gore and a fear that negative campaigning will tarnish his self-styled image as a non-politician. Daily polling, which is sometimes unreliable, showed Bradley edging toward Gore — and the vice president seemed to be feeling the heat.

"Why would Sen. Bradley break his promise to run a different kind of campaign and launch divisive, manipulative attacks?" Gore asked supporters, as Democratic leaders backing the vice president urged Bradley to curb his criticism.

Bradley has turned the tables on Gore: The vice president revitalized his sagging campaign last fall by launching a full-throated case against Bradley's health-care plan and questioning the former New Jersey senator's commitment to the Democratic Party.

With aides promising still harder attacks, Bradley stopped short of calling Gore a liar. "I don't think that he said the truth" about his abortion record in Congress, Bradley told ABC.

At a rally later, Bradley waved a recent article about Gore's 1996 fund-raising trip to a Buddhist Temple near Los Angeles and demanded an explanation. He said the fund-raising scandal "was a disgrace" to both parties, particularly Democrats.

"When we all get into bed with the special interests, I think that makes a more serious problem for us than for Republicans," Bradley said. He suggested that Gore's role in the fund-raising abuses would make him vulnerable to attacks by the GOP nominee.

Iowa City ponders magnet schools

In order to alleviate overcrowding, Iowa City considers year-round schools and special programs.

By Anne Huyck
The Daily Iowan

Year-round school and special programs in mathematics, science and fine arts could be features added to local elementary schools that would eventually ease overcrowding.

Iowa City School District officials are looking into magnet schools with special draws because, if it were to implement such a plan, students would not be forced to switch schools. Instead, some students would opt to go to magnet schools, thus decreasing overcrowded schools' populations.

For UI students hoping to pursue a career in education after graduation, "fads" such as year-round school and specialized schools will not greatly affect the future of teaching, said Sandra Damico, the dean of the UI College of Education.

"It's just an organizational structure," she said. "With year-round schools, it is just a different time schedule. In other schools, say science schools, it is just having specialized people in school for longer periods of time and could affect instruction just through tying scientific themes into the rest of the curriculum."

On Jan. 25, the School District boundary committee recommended looking into such alternatives in an effort to reduce school overcrowding, said board President Matt Goodlaxson.

Superintendent Lane Pluggie is conducting a study on magnet schools, with assistance from members of the UI community.

Some local elementary schools are overcrowded, and others are underpopulated, Pluggie said. Magnet schools could help balance the populations.

"Primarily, the thought process is kind of to diminish enrollment voluntarily so we don't have to force more people to move in the future," said Tami Bryk, a boundary committee volunteer and a parent with two children in district schools.

Such reorganization in how schools are structured would not only affect teachers but also students and parents.

Bryk said she would consider sending her children to magnet schools "depending on the type and if they were run properly."

When researching magnet schools, Pluggie will have many models to look at. He said he is most interested in looking at schools with a year-round schedule and schools with a special draw, such as additional math and science or fine arts in the curricula.

In the Des Moines, there are five magnet schools: two science and math Local bars play host to the biggest sporting event of the year.

Downtown Iowa City served as a place for fans to congregate and enjoy the unusual but eagerly awaited Super Bowl match-up between the St. Louis Rams and the Tennessee Titans Sunday night.

At first glance, it was just another weekend at Vito's, 118 E. College St. In the raucous atmosphere and free-flowing drinks, the gathering was a time for football fans to enjoy the last game of the season.

UI senior Beth Rominski said she has been a bar regular on Super Bowl Sunday throughout her college career. Whether at Vito's or other downtown establishments, she and her friends have always preferred the bar atmosphere for Super Bowl Sundays.

"It's a great time just to spend with friends and hang out," she said. "Vito's is great for fans because it has food and drinks, and David (Haile) just makes us

Illinois halts executions after exonerations

Many UI students support the state's decision to review death-penalty procedures.

By Ryan Foley
The Daily Iowan

Illinois Gov. George Ryan's decision to suspend executions in the state while reviewing death-penalty procedures has caught the attention of some UI students familiar with the state's problems.

The decision, which Ryan is expected to announce today, makes Illinois the first state in the country to stop executions while reviewing the its death-penalty procedures.

"I'm glad they suspended the death penalty," said Sarah Lloyd, a UI freshman from Sycamore, Ill. "It should be carried out only if it is carried out well. We've had so many cases in Illinois thrown out that the system is not working. It will only work if it applies to the right people."

Illinois has seen more of its death sentences overturned than carried out since reinstating the death penalty in 1977.

Ryan plans to create a panel to study the state's capital-punishment system and determine what happened in the 13 cases in which men were wrongly convicted.

Just last month, Cook County prosecutors dropped charges against a former Chicago police officer who had been convicted and sentenced to die based on the word of a jailhouse informant. Another inmate spent 15 years on death

Airbus slams into sea off Ivory Coast

By Tim Sullivan

ABIDJAN, Ivory Coast — A Kenya Airways jet carrying 169 passengers and 10 crew members crashed into the sea Sunday night, shortly after taking off from Abidjan. Airport officials said at least seven people survived.

The plane, an Airbus 310, took off at 9:08 p.m. and crashed just one minute later, said George Dapre Yao, the head of air traffic at Abidjan's Felix Houphouet-Boigny Airport.

Kenya Airways Flight 431, which was en route to Lagos, Nigeria, carried 167 adults passengers and two children, Yao said. Kenya Airways officials said the plane's final destination was Nairobi, Kenya.

Six or seven survivors were found early today, floating in the wreckage off Abidjan; they were taken to an area hospital, said Raymond Kesse, an official with the Ivorian Red Cross.

Earlier, another survivor, a Frenchman, was brought to the same hospital with cuts and bruises.

Witnesses said the plane never appeared to get sufficient altitude as it crossed over the airport's wall and headed out over the ocean, just a few

Ono fears for safety

LONDON (AP) — Yoko Ono, the widow of John Lennon, is reportedly concerned about the safety of Lennon's two sons after the recent attack on former Beatle George Harrison. "Knowing that our close friend and his family have been subjected to a violent incident I am, naturally, most concerned about the safety of Julian and Sean," Ono said in the Independent Sunday, a British newspaper. Ono has continued to live in the New York City apartment building where she and Lennon lived with their son, Sean, when the star was killed in 1980 by Mark David Chapman. In an attack a month ago, Harrison received a serious knife wound that collapsed his right lung. His wife, Olivia, was scratched and bruised when the couple MADRID, Spain (AP) — Pedro Almodovar won Best Director and his Todo Sobre Mi Madre (All About My Mother) won Best Film in the Spanish Goya cinema awards presented Sunday. The movie, Spain's candidate for a foreign-language Oscar, is the story of a single woman who experiences the death of her son and goes in search of the boy's father. The film's female star, Cecilia Roth, also won Best Actress. Almodovar recently won a Golden Globe for the movie. Roberto Benigni's World War II era movie La Vita E Bella (Life is Beautiful) won the award for best European film. Organized by the Spanish Cinema Academy, the Goya film awards take their name from the 18th century Spanish painter.

NEW YORK (AP) — Might Mary Tyler Moore extend her reunion with Valerie Harper into a series if their new television movie does well? "That depends on whether I could live with a network coming in and telling me what comedy is. I just don't want 30-year-old VPs on the set," Moore said in Sunday's Parade magazine. "That may sound a bit arrogant, but I don't want anyone to muck around with my work." The two-hour film Mary and Rhoda will be broadcast on Feb. 7. Moore's character tries to make a new life after the death of her husband, while Harper's role has her returning from Paris after a divorce.

Museum hosts Armajani exhibition

The UI Museum of Art will feature "Siah Armajani," an exhibition of drawings and models by the internationally known artist and designer, who designed Iowa City's Dubuque Street skywalk, from Feb. 5-May 28 in the West Gallery. In conjunction with the exhibition Armajani will give a public lecture at 7 p.m. Thursday in Meeting Room A, Iowa City Public Library, 123 S. Linn St. Armajani will also attend an opening reception for the spring exhibitions from 5:30-7:30 p.m. Friday at the museum. Armajani, a resident of Saint Paul, Minn., is known for his designs for functional public art. Among his most prominent projects were a bridge and a tower designed for the 1996 Olympic games in Atlanta. That same year he became the first major sculptor to be commissioned for the cauldron housing the Olympic flame. Armajani is best known for his bridge designs. These include the Irene Hixon Whitney bridge in Minneapolis, which spans 16 lanes of state highways and city streets, and the Dubuque Street bridge. Models of both are included in the exhibition. Another of the models in the exhibition is a study for skyway bridges in Leipzig, Germany, connecting three buildings and supported by columns made from terra cotta jars. Armajani's projects run from the urban to the comparatively rustic "Glass Bridge," which will span a creek on the grounds of the Cheekwood Museum in Tennessee. Other models on display include "Bridge Over a Tree" (Minnesota, 1970); "Strasbourg Bridge," a pedestrian bridge over the Lille River in France (2000) that is adorned with statues; and the "Fifth Bridge" (New York, 1979), a truss bridge in the Bronx.

Council ponders Van Allen walkway

■ Acquiring the Englert Theatre is also on today's agenda.

By Chao Xiong
The Daily Iowan

A partnership has developed between the city and the UI to examine how to improve the walkway connecting Jefferson and Market Streets between Seashore and Van Allen halls.

Although details have not been worked out, improvements will likely include increased lighting and green space and would occur after the condemned portion of Seashore Hall is demolished, according to city reports.

"I felt it was an important connection because we have commercial area on both sides of that block," Councilor Dee Vanderhoef said.

The city will continue discussions about purchasing the Englert Theatre, 221 E. Washington St. during Monday's informal work session. Iowa City resident Kip Pohl is expected to sell the theater to the city for $700,000 after he purchases it from Central States Theatres.

The city, which would then sell the theater to the Englert Theatre Coalition, can postpone its decision if it wants more time to decide how to subsidize the final cost, said Councilor Steven Kanner.

"I'm excited about the idea ... but I have a number of concerns," he said, noting the negotiable no-movie clause, funding and the theater's target audience.

The Englert coalition, made up of community members, would have to buy the theater from the city for approximately $700,000 and raise approximately $500,000 more to refurbish it.

"Mr. Pohl would buy back the building if the citizen group does not come up with the money to buy and refurbish it," Vanderhoef said. "The city can't afford to own the building."

Neither Pohl nor Central States Theatres could be reached to confirm that they had closed a deal.

In other news, a proposal to move the Iowa City Public Library, 123 S. Linn St., into the space formerly occupied by JCPenney in the Old Capitol Mall has not gained support from the library's board of trustees.

Madison Realty official John Zemet proposed the idea in a letter sent to the board. The idea failed to gain support because the second floor of the property would not be able to support book racks.

The city will continue to develop the westward expansion plan for the library, on which the city has spent $60,000 for development, said City Manager Steve Atkins.

Sledders have one hill of a time

■ As snow begins to pile up, local residents hit the slopes, using anything that slides.

By Bryce Fishman
The Daily Iowan

With more snow piling up in Iowa City over the weekend, residents and UI students are hitting the slopes around town with sleds — or anything else that can slide down a hill.

UI junior Seth Davis lives in the Phi Kappa Theta fraternity house, 339 N. Riverside Drive, which overlooks an ideal sledding hill, he said.

Davis and his friends frequently sled down the hill, and they like to challenge themselves by using lunch trays or skateboards, going head first, or riding two people on one sled, he said.

Even with the unusual assortment of sleds, Davis said, there has never been an incident in which anyone was hurt.

"Sledding can be dangerous if you don't know what you are doing," he said. "Never go by yourself, always have people at the bottom of the hill watching, and never drink while sledding."

The hill near the intersection of Riverside Drive and Myrtle Avenue is another prime stop for sledding action for residents and students alike.

As does the hill under Davis' fraternity, this one also appears to send sledders into traffic on Riverside Drive, but Iowa City resident Mark Nelson said the hill can be deceiving.

"The slope looks steep but it really isn't," he said. "Because it tapers out at the bottom, you won't make it to the street on your sled."

UI junior Ben Joynt and his friends wanted to go sledding Sunday at 4 a.m. but were forced to find alternatives to the typical sleds.

"We went to buy one, but they were all out, so we got work-out mats," he said.

Even though the mats didn't slide well, Joynt said, the group still had a fun trip.

Denise Powell/The Daily Iowan

Iowa City residents Rich Widstrom and his son, Danny, sled down the hill on Riverside Drive.

While Davis' and Joynt's approach to sledding is a bit radical, others view sledding as more of a mild form of recreation, said UI senior Nate Haines.

"Sledding is a change from the status quo," he said. "It's fun and a change from going downtown."

CITY BRIEF

Possible Airliner sale draws interest

The Airliner has been drawing a lot of interest since it was put up for sale on Jan. 14, said co-owner Randy Larson. No offers have been made yet, he said.

Of the 11 or 12 people who have inquired about the property, 22 S. Clinton St., most of them already own bar and restaurant businesses, including Kip Pohl, Larson said.

Pohl, who owns Malones, 121 Iowa Ave., and the Union Bar, 121 E. College St., is currently involved in negotiations to purchase the Englert Theatre, 221 E. Washington St., from Des Moines-based Central States Theatres.

"I think it's fair to say he has expressed interest, and he has our information," Larson said.

Pohl declined to comment on his interest in the property.

Larson said he is not surprised by other restaurant owners' interests in the Airliner.

"It's natural for a competitor to be interested in the business," he said. "It makes more sense for them than to start a clothing store or something."

A major advantage of buying an established restaurant is continuity, Larson said.

"We try to diversify and be involved in every atmosphere we can compete in," he said. "We try to be an everybody feel welcome kind of place and cover every niche."

Larson said he must get the right offer in order to sell the restaurant.

"If we don't get an offer that's adequate, we'll keep doing what we're doing," he said. "We just think it's a good time to evaluate what (the Airliner) is worth."

Shuttle gets NASA seal of approval

■ NASA declares Endeavour's engines to be safe and aims for launch today.

By Marcia Dunn
Associated Press

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — With only hours remaining before liftoff, NASA Sunday declared space shuttle Endeavour's engines safe to fly despite lingering uncertainty over two fuel pump seals.

The announcement kept Endeavour on track for a afternoon launch today for an Earth-mapping mission. Thick clouds, however, could still force a delay.

Shuttle managers ordered an exhaustive review of seals in Endeavour's fuel turbopumps late last week after a defective seal turned up in one of Discovery's main engines.

The bad seal should have been thrown away as a factory reject but instead was installed in a fuel pump that flew on Discovery six weeks ago. It also flew on Discovery in October 1998 — the flight that returned John Glenn to orbit — and on Endeavour earlier that year.

NASA was able to determine, through documents, that 16 of 18 seal segments on Endeavour's three fuel pumps are certified and good. The paperwork on the two remaining seals is missing.

Even though shuttle managers cannot prove the two seals are certified for flight, shuttle managers concluded Sunday afternoon that Endeavour's engines are safe and voted unanimously to proceed with the launch as planned.

Shuttle program manager Ron Dittmore said the likelihood of another defective seal turning up on one of Endeavour's three engines is "very, very, very low."

"It goes back to, how likely is it that you'll have a defect? Very low. And what is your test experience? Overwhelmingly positive," Dittmore said Sunday. "Then you look at your design, and your design is to be very safe. And you look at those, and it's a compelling story."

Dittmore said NASA will continue to search for the paperwork detailing the history of the two seals. NASA also will review the paperwork for seals in all its other fuel pumps before clearing any more shuttle engines to fly, he said.

The nickel-plated seals, each made of six segments, help direct hot gas into the turbine blades to increase engine performance. If a seal should fail, an engine could shut down during launch and force an emergency landing.

Dittmore said the defective seal worked fine, but during the last launch, the nickel plating came loose in one spot and the turbine blades gouged a groove in it.

He said the odds that it ended up in an engine, rather than in the garbage, are extremely small.

On Jan. 29, Dittmore said the defective seal had flown on six space shuttle launches. He corrected himself Sunday, saying it flew on three launches and was test-fired three times at Stennis Space Center in Mississippi.

Endeavour's radar-mapping mission originally was scheduled for September, but was held up by damaged wiring found throughout the shuttle fleet.

Study finds low-level AIDS carriers unlikely to spread disease

■ Experts caution that the new research should not lull Americans into giving up safe-sex practices.

By Daniel Q. Haney
Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — An encouraging study suggests that people with very low levels of the AIDS virus in their blood are unlikely to spread HIV to others.

The study, which was conducted in Africa, could have important implications for the future of the AIDS epidemic in the United States, where drug treatment has lowered virus levels for many.

AIDS treatments in recent years have saved many lives, and public-health experts speculate that they may have an additional benefit — slowing the epidemic by making infected people less likely to pass the virus to others. The new study offers indirect evidence this hope is well founded.

However, for several reasons, the conditions studied in Africa do not precisely mirror the U.S. AIDS situation, and experts caution that the new research should not lull Americans into giving up safe-sex practices. Unprotected sex with HIV-infected people probably always carries some risk, no matter how low their virus level.

The new study looked at sexual transmission of HIV in rural Uganda. It was conducted by Dr. Thomas C. Quinn and others from Johns Hopkins University and presented Sunday at the seventh conference on Retroviruses and Opportunistic Infections.

The doctors followed 415 heterosexual couples in which one partner was infected with HIV and one was not. Despite receiving free condoms, the couples rarely used them. During 30 months of follow up, 90 people in the study caught the virus. The study found that the higher the level of HIV in the infected person's blood, the higher the risk of passing on the virus through sex.

It's wonderful news, and there is a lot we can learn from it.

— Dr. Helene Gayle,
AIDS chief at the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention

"In non-condom users, viral load is the greatest predictor of transmission of HIV heterosexually," said Quinn.

Doctors measure the number of individual viruses in a milliliter of blood. The study found that someone with 200,000 copies of virus is 2½ times more likely to spread HIV than is someone with 2,000 copies.

However, the researchers found no transmission of virus at all by infected people who carried less than 1,500 copies of the virus, even though they had sex without condoms.

Because of the high expense, AIDS treatment is rare in Africa. However, in the United States, doctors typically try to reduce patients' virus levels to below the level of detection, which is approximately 50 copies per milliliter.

Approximately half of all U.S. patients fail to reach this undetectable level consistently. However, doctors say, virus levels below 1,500 are common even among these so-called treatment failures.

"It's wonderful news, and there is a lot we can learn from it," said Dr. Helene Gayle, AIDS chief at the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

However, both she and Quinn cautioned that the situation is not identical in the United States. They noted that in Africa, people may have low virus levels because their immune systems are still strong enough to fight HIV.

But in the United States, many people's virus levels are lowered by treatment with AIDS medicines.

Doctors say it is theoretically possible that people with drug-suppressed HIV carry more virus in their semen and vaginal secretions than do those with naturally low levels. If so, this could make their risk of transmission greater. Other studies have shown that even if HIV is undetectable in men's bloodstreams, it may still be found in their semen.

Dr. Michelle Roland of the University of California, San Francisco, said she knows of one case in which a man passed the virus to his female sex partner, even though both believed his virus has been reduced to undetectable levels.

"There is no question, no question, that this happens," she said.

The African study looked only at heterosexual transmission. Doctors note that HIV spreads much more readily through anal sex. So unprotected sex at very low virus levels may be riskier for homosexuals than for heterosexuals.

Dr. Robert Grant of UCSF attempted to calculate what impact the lower virus levels will have on the epidemic among homosexual men in San Francisco. He estimated that if sex habits remain unchanged, there will be 30 percent fewer AIDS deaths over the next 10 years than otherwise would be expected. However, this reduction will be wiped out if there is a 10 percent to 20 percent increase in risky sexual behavior.

The African study also confirmed earlier research suggesting that circumcision reduces the risk of AIDS. In this group, no circumcised men caught the virus from their infected female mates.

Albright meets with Arafat, Egypt's foreign minister

DAVOS, Switzerland (AP) — Secretary of State Madeleine Albright, in Switzerland for an economic conference, held meetings Sunday to promote peace between Israel and the Palestinians. Afterward, she told conference delegates the process is as difficult as slogging through the Alpine snow.

Egypt was a major player Sunday. Albright met in this ski resort with Egypt's foreign minister, Amr Moussa, and Israeli Prime Minister Ehud Barak talked in Cairo with President Hosni Mubarak. Albright also met with Barak's negotiating partner, Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat.

Reaction from participants, both in Switzerland and in Egypt, was positive.

Nabil Shaath, the Palestinian planning minister, said the Albright-Arafat meeting was very positive. "There is a feeling that the United States is really continuing to be engaged to push the process forward," he said.

In Cairo, after meeting with Mubarak, Barak said he expects the Palestinians to honor their commitments and promised that his government will turn over more West Bank land to Palestinian control on schedule, in 10 days.

Report: Priests dying of AIDS at higher rate

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Roman Catholic priests in the United States are dying from AIDS-related illnesses at a rate four times higher than the general population and the cause is often concealed on their death certificates, the Kansas City Star reported Sunday.

In the first of a three-part series, the newspaper said death certificates and interviews with experts indicated several hundred priests have died of AIDS-related illnesses since the mid-1980s and hundreds more are living with HIV, the virus that causes the disease.

"I think this speaks to a failure on the part of the church," said Auxiliary Bishop Thomas Gumbleton of the Archdiocese of Detroit. "Gay priests and heterosexual priests didn't know how to handle their sexuality, their sexual drive. And so they would handle it in ways that were not healthy."

The Star received 801 responses to questionnaires that were sent last fall to 3,000 of the 46,000 priests in the United States. The margin of error of the survey was 3.5 percentage points.

Six of 10 priests responding said they knew of at least one priest who had died of an AIDS-related illness, and one-third knew a priest living with AIDS. Three-fourths said the church needed to provide more education to seminarians on sexual issues.

"How to be celibate and to be gay at the same time, and how to be celibate and heterosexual at the same time — that's what we were never really taught how to do. And that was a major failing," Gumbleton said.

Thank you.

FILM REVIEW

By John Mullin

Eye of the Beholder is one of those frustrating movies that has a lot of great ideas and well-crafted moments but ultimately doesn't coalesce into anything memorable or satisfying.

The opening of the movie is a grabber: The nameless protagonist (Ewan McGregor) is in the middle of a high-tech surveillance job where he's got to photograph some high-ranking corporate guy having an affair with his secretary. Who is this mysterious observer? How did he get cooler equipment than James Bond?

Soon, we find out that he works for an unidentified British government agency and that he's probably spent a little too much time staring at monitors and hiding in shadows. As we later discover, his obsession with his work ultimately led his wife to walk out one day, taking their 6-year-old daughter with her. He never really got over the loss, and even now, seven years later, has continual hallucinations that his daughter is still with him. She looks like that annoying kid from those Pepsi commercials, but she isn't.

McGregor's troubled character is next assigned to follow a suspicious bank executive. He's embezzling money, McGregor discovers, to give to the mysterious and seductive Ashley Judd character who, as we will discover, was abandoned herself at a young age. She doesn't have a name either, although she passes many false ones off throughout the course of the film.

As McGregor's work continues, it becomes clear that he's developing more of a personal interest in Judd than a professional one. This comes to a boil one night when she ties up and brutally stabs the banker to death, taking his money and exiting the scene as quickly as she can. McGregor, although his job does not require him to do so, obsessively continues to follow and observe her from city to city across the United States over the course of what eventually becomes 10 years.

That's the basic set-up; unfortunately, the movie never really develops beyond that point. There's a bit of parallelism in that Judd's character lost her father at a young age while McGregor's lost his daughter, but the "broken family unit" concept isn't really enough to justify why she kills or why he continues to watch over her, serving as a guardian angel of sorts.

In a hallucination early in the film, McGregor's imaginary daughter tells him to look after Judd and make sure that nothing bad happens. Indeed he does, helping her out of tight spots with the police multiple times and even beating the crap out of former "Beverly Hills 90210" stud Jason Priestly at one point.

We want our nameless leads to get together, and the movie is full of moments where he almost approaches her to strike up conversation or she is on the verge of discovering her secret protector whom she somehow suspects is always watching.

The biggest disappointment of the film is that it spends a good deal of time texturing these characters but then lets them simply drift through the plot, never building up toward anything in particular. Ultimately, the movie sort of crawls to a stop rather than coming to some sort of satisfying conclusion. At the particular screening I attended, people laughed when the end credits appeared so unexpectedly. On my way out of the theater, I overheard one woman say that she thought the story still had more to go.

Director Stephan Elliott (Pricilla, Queen of the Desert) probably should have gone a bit further himself when adapting the Marc Behm novel for the screen. The potential for something entertaining is certainly there, and Elliott manages to get some good performances out of his leads interspersed with some exciting action and stylish direction. After a while, though, it's clear that he doesn't really know what to do with the characters he's introduced, and the movie quickly deteriorates into the sort of thing that you may enjoy while you're watching it but will probably have trouble remembering afterward.

Eye of Beholder tops lackluster box office

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Eye of the Beholder, a thriller starring Ashley Judd, opened atop the box office with $6.2 million in ticket sales. The only other opening in wide release, the Bette Midler film, Isn't She Great, failed to crack the top 10, according to industry estimates Sunday.

For the second weekend in a row, none of the top 10 films made at least $10 million during the three-day period.

"It's been a tough couple of weekends," said Paul Dergarabedian, president of Exhibitor Relations Inc. "For a top film to do $6.2 million shows you what kind of state the box office is in at this moment."

IT'S TIME TO ASK THE PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATES...

Hope. Progress. Answers.

Dear Presidential Candidates:

Last year, cancer killed half a million people nationwide and over 6,600 people right here in Iowa. These individuals, and their families, represent the true health care crisis in America — coping with sickness, pain and death.

On behalf of cancer survivors, patients and their families, we want to know what your plans are to fight cancer? Your presidency can help us move toward a cure.

Fighting this disease is not just an issue of increasing funding for cancer research. It's a war that must be fought on multiple fronts. We urge you to set a goal and work toward it: support the American Cancer Society's goal of cutting cancer deaths in half by 2015. Ensure patients have the option of participating in clinical trials — cutting-edge treatments that can reduce suffering and prolong life. And increase health care access for uninsured Americans including preventive measures for screening cancers, such as mammograms, so people get the care they need and deserve.

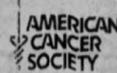

As Americans we all share common experiences, and sadly, coping with this disease is one of them. Talk about your experience with us. Tell us how that experience formed an impression upon you to want to beat this disease.

Near the end of every term, presidents focus on their legacy — what did they actually accomplish that made life better in this country? Would you be satisfied if at the end of your presidency, historians said you helped cure cancer?

We need your help to beat this disease.

Sincerely,

The American Cancer Society in Iowa

EDITORIAL

Automated law enforcement not a scary concept

"They ought to catch them the old-fashioned way." This is the view of state Rep. David Millage, R-Bettendorf, concerning police officers and new methods of catching law-breakers. Regardless of whether or not his feelings are correct, the action they have led to commands serious reconsideration.

Millage recently proposed a bill in the Iowa House of Representatives that would prevent law-enforcement agencies from using "automated enforcement systems" to catch individuals who run red lights. The use of pole-mounted cameras to photograph vehicles' license plates and law-breaking operators as they speed through red lights apparently frightens Millage, conjuring up images from George Orwell's 1984. "It reminds me of Big Brother," he said.

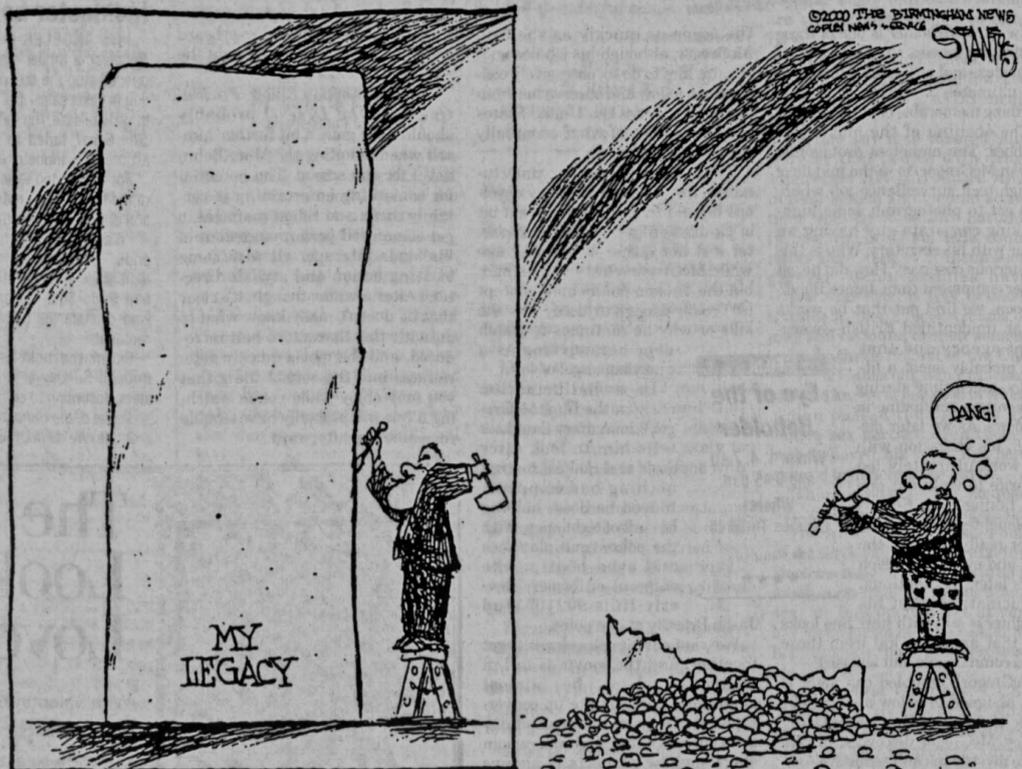

Millage's connection, however, is irrational and based in fear. Our government does not run a Big Brother campaign and has no logical reason whatsoever to construct one around the use of spotlight cameras. Both the idea and Millage's resultant fear are simply ludicrous and may be giving our government too much credit.

Of more importance is that these cameras can (and should) be set up to prevent accidents when an individual runs a red light. From sensors built into the road, the cameras can detect when cars are not going to stop at the signal. At this point, they are activated to photograph the offenders. In addition, they can be set up to change the normal light pattern, keeping all lights red while the offender runs the light. This prevents other cars from crossing the offender's path, thus preventing accidents.

In addition, the Associated Press reports that fewer drivers run red lights at intersections where cameras are present. According to the Federal Highway Administration, the automated-enforcement program can reduce such infractions by 20 to 60 percent. Thus, the simple act of installing a camera makes an intersection safer for all who pass through it. With fatal intersection accidents increasing by 16 percent between 1992 and 1998, making intersections safer is hard to argue against.

Here we can see a fundamental difference between automated-enforcement systems and Orwell's Big Brother. Big Brother was about control and domination. Automated-enforcement systems are about making intersections safer and saving lives. In fact, outlawing such systems seems more along Big Brother's line than the systems themselves.

In troublesome times, reach out anywhere to somebody who cares

Every morning, I scan the police list for my students' names. Why? In my second semester of teaching rhetoric, I had a student who was arrested. Twice. His experiences taught me a lot about Iowa City laws — so I keep on reading that list.

But last November in the DI, on the front page this time, I read something about a former student. Something I hope never to see again in any paper.

Those who have been rhetoric students may not believe this, but I enjoy my students. I love their energy, humor and willingness to work. A couple of years ago, I had a student who truly stood out. His name was Jason.

Jason explained the first day that he was a transfer from Cornell College. He wasn't tall, and compared to the giant guys and lanky women in his class, he looked pretty short. But he played football at Cornell, and had the compact, muscled body of an athlete. I know he cared about his health, because he analyzed ads in Men's Health for one speech. His high cheekbones glowed with the perpetual tan of any runner.

When he wasn't in school, Jason worked in a care facility in Solon. I heard later that his ability to be both kind and strong served him well in his job.

During class, Jason would sit by the door, wearing his soft-brimmed fishing hat over his sun-bleached curls. He wasn't the loudest nor the most frequent contributor, but when he spoke, his low voice and strong words rang true. He was confident. And he was funny — even his one-page reading responses contained a dry, self-aware humor that surprised and delighted me.

I'm going to admit something here: I love my students. I don't get involved in their personal lives, but I want them to succeed, to retain their beauty and grace. I look forward to knowing some of them as they mature. Jason was a student I thought I'd get to know later on, a young man who always seemed older than his years, a good guy. Later on, indeed, I learned from DI articles that his personality affected others the same way.

After class ended, I heard from Jason once or twice. He seemed to be doing OK, though he was having some hard times. I didn't know exactly what was going on, and since we had a tenuous connection, I let it go. He would tell me if he wanted to. But he never did.

One day last fall, I was thinking about e-mailing him to give him some encouragement. Then I opened the DI. "Ex-student's death ruled a suicide."

Suzi Steffen

I wish someone else had noticed Jason's pain. I wish Jason had called a hotline. I wish Jason had turned the warmth of his smile inward, learned to love himself.

Someone had shot himself on the steps of the Old Capitol the day before.

I was reading near the vending machines in the basement of EPB, about to buy a Diet Coke. My jacket was tucked under one arm; I had the change in my hand. Then I saw the name of the student who killed himself. It was Jason.

No more chances. No more e-mails. No more time.

I wish someone else had noticed Jason's pain. I wish Jason had called a hotline. I wish Jason had turned the warmth of his smile inward, learned to love himself.

I'm writing from my sadness, of course. But I'm writing, too, with hope. If you're reading this, thinking no one cares about you, you're wrong.

You don't know whom you've affected, or who will sob for you, rage at you, plead with the universe to have you back. You don't know who will think they see your curls, your fishing hat, your purple jacket in the IMU, feel their heart leap with hope — and then fall back with grief.

I know it's not simple, but please, pick up the phone. Call University Counseling Services, a hotline, your spiritual adviser — just call somebody who can help.

'Cause I don't want to read about you in the DI. I don't want to grieve your absence every day. I want you on this planet. I'm begging you, just as I would have begged Jason, to stay. Stay a little longer.

I'll always miss you, Jason.

Students not the only victims of Reserve Library book theft

No doubt about it. Reserve Library materials vanishing is a dismal act. But wait a minute: we have to be careful in how we think about it. And Lyn Elliot (in her "guest opinion" of Jan. 26) might want to broaden her view. I have no quarrel with her assessment that she creates a very great instructional convenience by taking library materials out of normal circulation and reserving them for a particular class/topic. But Elliot writes: "I know that there is one student who ... (saves) a dollar or two in copying ..." showing her focus is too narrow.

In fact, the great value of a first-class library and easy access to reserved readings in it are assets that draw some serious students to decide on the UI and some faculty to do the same when job-hunting. People even retire to Iowa City because of its good libraries. Many kinds of readers, some of them simply bibliophiles, can be lifting reserved materials, and it is wrong to assume it is a student every time.

Picture this: a reader in Nebraska, or Missouri, or Kansas or Illinois has a desperate need for Book X, can not get it through interlibrary loan because it is on reserve, drives to Iowa City and pilfers it somehow. Also, such a reader could be an Iowa City citizen of several types, remembering that any felt need drives the theft.

It might not even be a permanent theft but an appropriation to be undone after the need is satisfied. It could be anybody's, and it does not help to let one's assumptions rule the analysis ...

Elliot's article is very useful in all other ways, because she explains the problems of instruction when materials disappear. Funny world, this reading business: We want people to read, to love to read, to benefit from it, but the library is a state treasure, set up to be easily used by all. And all might be thieves in its enterprise, not just students.

Free speech not as rare at UI as White thinks

In Adam White's reaction to the white-washing of the tunnel by EPB, I think he is wrong when he states that the UI was never a home to free speech.

As a student, I remember a campus with enough opinions to offend and educate everyone. The graffiti in the tunnel was just one venue for those opinions.

Disagreements about lifestyles and politics were alive and well from No Shame Theatre and the wackos on the Pentacrest to the local fascists at Campus Review serving South African champagne and anarchists spray painting "Study hard $lave$" on campus buildings. If the UI administration cover up offending material, it won't be confronted and the idiots who wrote it won't be ridiculed. I just hope the re-painting crew is kept out of the library.

Tunnels were never a free speech forum in the first place

There are lots of problems with Adam White's sophomoric defense of vandalism as free speech (DI, Jan. 28). Here's one of them:

The tunnel near EPB is not a forum for free speech, no matter how much White wants it to be. It remains a piece of property that its owners have every right to paint at their discretion, as they have for years. Those who unlawfully deface it — regardless of their motives — remain subject to prosecution.

If I'm to respond to spray-painted speech in this "forum," I have to break the law and further vandalize property that doesn't belong to me. The threat of prosecution and the widely held belief that it's wrong to damage someone else's property impose practical and ethical limitations that render the tunnel useless as a site for the free and open dialogue that White so seems to prize.

If those who smeared the tunnel with anonymous insults really wanted to make a legitimate point, they could have written a letter to the editor, staged a rally on the Pentacrest, or exercised any number of legally and socially sanctioned alternatives. But I suspect they were more interested in ruining someone's day than in contributing to public discourse.

On the SPOT What should be done with the Englert Theater?

"I think it should be bought by the city or university and opened again as a movie theater — definitely not a bar, we have enough of those."

Isiah Lavender III

 Here's an instrument that's so far beyond standard, it's legendary. It's the result of setting technology aside, then reaching back to capture the unbridled soul of the rock'n roll workhorse. All the guts, the glory, and the sound that shook the stages and rattled the studios is back... and it hasn't changed a bit.
 At $2,275 it isn't for everyone, but a legend is worth every penny.

WORLD BRIEF

Elain's grandmothers' get hero's welcome

HAVANA (AP) — Elian Gonzalez's grandmothers arrived back in Cuba Sunday without the child they had hoped to bring home, but they were greeted as heroes nonetheless by an enormous government-organized parade through the streets of the Cuban capital.

"It's very sad," said the boy's maternal grandmother, Raquel Rodriguez, breaking down in tears before President Fidel Castro and 1,700 schoolchildren, who greeted the grandmothers at Havana's Convention Palace.

"You are here, and Elian cannot be, because we could not bring him," she said.

Before leaving Dulles International Airport in suburban Washington Sunday, Elian's paternal grandmother, Mariela Quintana, said the boy would never be happy growing up in the United States "because he grew up in Cuba ... He is a Cuban boy. He has a father. He has four grandparents and an entire family back there."

The boy's father, Juan Miguel Gonzalez, embraced the women as they stepped off a business jet at Jose Marti International Airport, then rode with them in a convertible as they waved at the crowds of hundreds of thousands of people holding Cuban flags in a scene reminiscent of the 1998 greeting for Pope John Paul II.

she said.

"It's more than enough," she said. "They're more than ready to come back."

Both Pape and Woods have advice for Iowa City on magnet schools and non-traditional schools: Look at what others have done.

"Visit some other magnet schools and look at places where it has worked but also schools where it didn't," Woods said. "Talk to parents, how they worked out transportation, and keep an eye to the balance of race and gender."

Pape recommended that the schools and the community engage in a lot of dialogue.

"Look at the options," she said. "Best meet the needs of your students. I think it makes sense for our schools, but it might not for other schools."

If the Iowa City School Board decides to create magnet schools, they would be at least a year to two years away, Plugge said.

Goodlaxson echoed this, saying the board still needs a lot of information and wants to find out what the community's needs and wants are.

"We assume there will be a lot of interest, and a large portion will want to put kids in," he said. "Hopefully, this hints that we are a proactive board. We have to deal with the short-range first, but we are looking at the long-range, too."

It is cases such as these that have some people agreeing with Ryan's decision to review Illinois' death-penalty procedures.

"If it's not working for the state and they're convicting the wrong people, it's better for them to stop and investigate it than to keep it going," said Katherine Schmidt, a UI junior from Oak Park, Ill.

UI freshman Melissa Schwab also thinks Ryan's decision is a good idea.

"I wouldn't want them to kill somebody who has been wrongly accused," she said.

While UI senior Brooke Schubert of Kent, Ill., said she agreed with Ryan's decision to review the procedures, she also thinks that capital punishment should be reinstated in Iowa.

"I'm for the death penalty, but I will admit that it has its problems and isn't always doing what it is supposed to be," she said.

UI sophomore Chris Loftus, who has lived in both Iowa and Illinois, said the capital-punishment system in general needs to be reviewed.

"If the death penalty were used properly, it would work as a deterrent," he said. "It takes 10 to 15 years to convict someone. As it is now, it's not an effective method."

"Unless we clean up our own house, Republicans will clean it up for us this fall," he told ABC.

On the Republican side, Bush, the two-term Texas governor and GOP front-runner, said his executive office experience would make for a better president. "I'm not of the Washington scene. I'm not a committee chairman," Bush said, digging at Senate Commerce Committee Chairman McCain.

"I'm the guy who can beat Al Gore," McCain replied, as the GOP and Democratic campaigns appeared headed for close finishes. McCain holds a slight edge or is tied with Bush in polls here, after leading the Texan for eight weeks. Gore's edge over Bradley is slightly wider, but that contest also could be close Tuesday.

Bradley, McCain, Bush and Republican Alan Keyes made the round of Sunday talk shows while the seven major-party White House hopefuls plowed toward Tuesday's vote with rallies and news conferences.

Haile, the general manager of Vito's, said this year's Super Bowl drew more business than previous games for several reasons, including advertising, a new big-screen television and an effort to make it an enjoyable evening.

"People were here since 1 p.m., trying to save seats and eating," he said. "It's been good business."

The St. Louis Rams were not the only winners on Sunday night.

Iowa City resident Alberto Abreu won free food, a cooler full of beer, a complimentary football and front-row seats in front of the big-screen television at the Sports Column, 12 S. Dubuque St. Abreu's steady attendance at the bar throughout the football season made him the winner of the Column's football promotion.

"My whole group came here regularly on Sundays to watch football, and for every Budweiser we drank, you would fill out a form," he said. "I guess we were here often enough and drank enough beer."

hundred yards away.

"I saw it take off," said an itinerant trader who identified himself as Alogouleta. "After it went over the wall, it was still very low. Then it hit the water. I heard the sound two times," as the plane slammed into the ocean.

He said he heard no explosion and saw no flames; the plane did not veer as it flew overhead, he said.

Emergency officials — firefighters, police officers, soldiers and divers — were combing the beach near the crash scene late Sunday night, approximately 1 mile east of the airport, looking for survivors and corpses. Police boats cruised the Atlantic off the beach and a helicopter chattered noisily overhead, scanning the dark ocean with a bright searchlight.

Dozens of people who live nearby or were praying in churches along the beach road heard the plane slam into the water.

A few immediately jumped into the water, hoping to get to survivors, but were quickly driven back by the harsh surf that slams noisily into the white sand beach.

A few times late Sunday, cheers rippled through the crowds and people rushed to the water's edge after hearing reports that survivors had been found. Those reports turned out to be false.

Warner completes dream season as Super Bowl MVP

ATLANTA (AP) — Kurt Warner's storybook season ended with the ultimate exclamation point Sunday — a record-breaking Super Bowl MVP performance.

The quarterback who once tossed rolls of toilet paper around an Iowa supermarket, threw passes just as easily in the glare of pro football's most dramatic setting, picking apart Tennessee's secondary and leading the St. Louis Rams to the NFL championship, 23-16.

Warner completed 18 passes for 277 yards in the first half alone, with six straight completions in one drive, and set a Super Bowl halftime record for attempts with 35.

He constructed a 16-0 lead. Then, when Tennessee made a furious second-half comeback to tie the score, he won the game with a 73-yard touchdown pass to Isaac Bruce.

That gave him a record 414 yards for the game, breaking Hall of Famer Joe Montana's record of 357.

Warner was following in the Super Bowl successes of high profile passers such as Bart Starr, Roger Staubach, Terry Bradshaw and Joe Namath. The difference was that those guys were future Hall of Famers, expected to produce championships for their teams. Warner came out of football's shadows to bring this one to the Rams, who had struggled through nine straight losing seasons before finding him almost by accident.

'How about the Rams!'

Super Bowl MVP Kurt Warner did a victory lap around the Georgia Dome following the Rams 23-16 victory.

ATLANTA — The St. Louis Rams rediscovered their offensive firepower just in time, and the Tennessee Titans came up just 1 yard short.

Kurt Warner's 73-yard touchdown pass to Isaac Bruce with 1 minute, 54 seconds left gave the Rams their first Super Bowl win Sunday, 23-16.

The TD capped an improbable turnaround for St. Louis, which was 3-13 a year ago and 13-3 this season as they scored 526 points, third best in NFL history.

But Steve McNair and Eddie George almost led Tennessee to another miracle finish, rallying them from a 16-0 deficit.

On the game's final play with six seconds left, McNair's pass was caught by Kevin Dyson at the Rams 5. He scrambled for the end zone only to be stopped just short by Mike Jones, as Dyson's outstretched arm held the ball toward the goal line in vain.

"I always believed in myself, and had a whole bunch of people who believed in me," said Warner, the Super Bowl MVP who did a victory lap around the Georgia Dome. "We're the world champions! How about the Rams!"

Warner, a former Arena League and NFL Europe quarterback, finished 24-of-45 for 414 yards and two touchdowns.

The Rams dominated for much of the game but had to settle for three field goals to take a 9-0 lead before finally scoring a touchdown.

St. Louis seemed to have put the game away when Warner threw a 9-yard pass to Torry Holt with 3:59 left in the third quarter to take a 16-0 lead.

But suddenly the Titans' offense came to life and the St. Louis defense began to wear down behind the battering of George and short passes from McNair.

Tennessee scored on its next two possessions, both on 1-yard runs by George to make it 16-13 with 7:21 left. It would have been 16-14, but the Titans chose to go for two points on their first TD and failed.

Al Del Greco's 43-yard field goal tied it with 2:12 left. Then the Rams' quick strike for a touchdown set up one of the most exciting finishes in Super Bowl history. The Titans, however, just didn't have enough at the very end.

"We've been doing this off and on during the year. We knew we had an opportunity to go on in and score," McNair said of the game's final play on Dyson's near-touchdown lunge.

ATLANTA — One yard, 36 measly inches.

For a month now, Tennessee had been getting that extra break. On Sunday night, the Titans fell a Tennessee two-step short.

"It's ironic isn't it," Dyson said. "We're 16 seconds away from not even being here and not even being in this game. It's ironic."

Dyson, who pulled out a victory over Buffalo in the AFC wild-card game with a last-second return, couldn't do it again Sunday night.

His right arm fell a yard short of the end zone as time expired, just missing what could have been the tying touchdown in a 23-16 loss to the Rams.

"We knew we had an opportunity to go down and score," said quarterback Steve McNair, who helped bring back the Titans from a 16-0 deficit. "Unfortunately, we got down there and just fell short."

Hawkeyes destroy Northern Illinois in season opener

The Hawkeye doubles teams came together for the squad's first contest as Iowa routed the Huskies, 7-0.

One word describes the Iowa men's tennis team's first meet of their spring season: Domination. The Hawkeyes dominated Northern Illinois in a 7-0 win at the Iowa Recreation Building on Sunday.

Although the team has stressed needed improvement in the caliber of their doubles play, they won all three of those matches. Coach Steve Houghton said he was very impressed with the Hawkeyes doubles performance.

Freshman Stuart Waters teamed up with junior Big Ten Singles Champion Tyler Cleveland for one of the doubles matches. Waters and Cleveland won their match 8-3.

"I didn't exactly know what to expect from Tyler," Waters said. "Obviously he is really intense on the court, but it was really fun. He made me feel really comfortable."

Waters, and two other freshmen Eric Kozlowski, and redshirt Hunter Skogman were all victorious in singles competition of the meet. Houghton said he was especially pleased with Waters whom he said destroyed his opponent Radovan Zivkovic 6-1, 6-0.

"Obviously it was my first dual match and my first time to play in front of the crowd," Waters said. "My confidence level grew as the match went on, but there is still some technicalities in my game."

According to Houghton, the Huskies are not the strongest team overall and Iowa will face much tougher opponents in the rest of the season. Although the Hawkeyes dominated the competition, they also saw

DePaul no contest for Iowa

The Iowa women defeated DePaul Saturday, 8-1, in their home opener at the Rec Building.

By Jeremy Schnitker
 The Daily Iowan

A return trip to the NCAA tournament for the Iowa women's tennis team is looking like a more realistic goal, following an impressive season-opening victory over DePaul Saturday.

Iowa, who advanced to the Sweet 16 last year, dominated the Blue Demons, winning 8-1. According to coach Paul Wardlaw, the Hawkeyes took a step in the right direction towards paralleling last year's success.

"We performed pretty well for our first match of the year," Wardlaw said. "We're at a higher level at the beginning of the year than we were last. We're real pleased with where we are now."

Hawkeyes Shera Wiegler and Toni Neykova turned in solid performances as they won their singles matches and teamed up to defeat Laura Taylor and Charlotta Aronsson 8-2 in No. 1 doubles.

Wiegler, a senior, defeated Taylor 6-2, 6-3 in No. 1 singles and Neykova, a sophomore, beat DePaul's Kadi Hilpus 6-1, 6-4 at the No. 3 slot.

"I think we played well," Wiegler said. "This was a solid first match of the year, but there's always room for improvement."

The lone loss for the Hawkeyes came at No. 2 singles, where Iowa's Natalya Dawaf was beat by Szilvia Keleman in two sets, 6-4 and 7-6.

Despite shutting out DePaul last year and losing a match this year, Wardlaw was not at all discouraged by Iowa's performance.

Wrestlers struggle, win twice

■ The No. 1 Hawkeyes ground out two Big Ten wins over the weekend.

By Jeremy Schnitker
The Daily Iowan

The matches weren't pretty, but they'll go down in the win column.

The No. 1-ranked Iowa wrestling team had a couple of tough matches last weekend as it faced some stiff competition from a young Penn State squad on Friday and escaped a near upset from No. 11 Michigan State Sunday.

Since the Iowa style is to dominate each and every performance, senior heavyweight Wes Hand wasn't quite satisfied with their performance, even though the Hawkeyes finished the weekend unbeaten.

"Any time you win it's OK," said Hand. "But we want to do better."

Jim Zalesky agreed. "I'm not really satisfied with the way we wrestled," the third-year coach said.

After being tied with the Spartans 13-13 after seven matches, Hand, Jody Strittmatter (125) and Eric Juergens (133) strung together three wins in the final three matches to secure a 22-13 victory for the Hawkeyes.

"I think we finished strong," Zalesky said of the MSU match. "Juergens wrestled a good match."

In the Penn State match, after starting out sluggish, Iowa's upper weights got the Hawkeyes rolling to a 22-9 victory.

Gabe McMahan (174), Paul Jenn (184), Lee Weber (197) and Hand picked up four victories in the middle of the dual to solidify first match in an Iowa singlet by a score of 8-5.

"I didn't see any shots, Hunter was in our legs all match," Zalesky said of Strittmatter's match. "You know maybe he's (Strittmatter) hoping to win."

In the other big match, No. 1 Juergens handed McNamara his first loss of the season by dominating him to a score of 12-6.

Things will continue to get more intense Friday night as the Hawkeyes play host to their archrival No. 4-ranked Oklahoma State, in Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

Zalesky says his Hawkeyes will be ready for the challenge.

"It's getting to be that time of year were everybody's going to be ranked so we have to be ready to wrestle," Zalesky said. "I think we're going to be up for these meets."

Hogs continue Iowa's road struggles

■ The Iowa women's basketball team was unable to hold a second half lead and fell to Arkansas Sunday.

By Lisa Colonno
The Daily Iowan

A second-half rally was not enough to carry the Iowa women's basketball team over the Arkansas Lady Razorbacks Sunday.

In Fayetteville, Ark., the Hawkeyes (6-13, 3-6 Big Ten) lost their eighth game on the road, 72-65, after coming back from 15 points down to take a one-point lead midway through the second half.

"We are very proud of our comeback," assistant coach Dana Eikenberg said. "We were down 48-33 at one point. We really looked at the guards and said they really needed to make a difference on the defensive end. And they dominated. We did a great job defensively to pull ourselves back in."

Iowa's defense was key, due to the Hawkeyes' struggles on offense. Iowa shot 35.3 percent for the game while Arkansas (12-7, 2-4 in the SEC) shot 50 percent, including a 53.8 percent second half. Senior Karyn Karlin led the Lady Razorbacks with 26 points, blowing away her average of 8.3 points per game.

"Karyn has really had a rough stretch here," Eikenberg said. "I feared (while) scouting these guys that today might be the day she lights up. I was sure they'd go after our young, inexperienced post players and they did just that."

Junior Wendi Willits scored 14 for Arkansas, postponing by three points her initiation into the Razorbacks' 1,000 point club. She currently has 997 career points.

For the Hawkeyes, sophomore Lindsey Meder finished as the top scorer with 27 points and also led Iowa in rebounds with seven.

Meder and junior Cara Consuegra combined for 20 of the Hawkeyes' 31 first-half points.

Iowa trailed 38-31 at half-time, but was outscored 10-4 in the first five minutes of the second half, turning the deficit into 15 quickly. The Hawkeyes battled to take the lead by one twice but could not retain the lead.

Consuegra finished with 11 points, as did Mary Berdo. Randi Peterson scored nine of her 10 points in the second half.

The loss leaves Iowa at 1-8 on the road. To make matters worse, four of the Hawkeyes' next seven games are away, not including the Big Ten Tournament, in Indianapolis, Ind., March 2-5.

"We have a full plate ahead of us," Eikenberg said. "We feel that Indiana and Michigan State are attainable goals to get on the road. We aren't doing a good job on the road right now and if we want to get into that upper echelon of top five in the conference we're going to have to do it on the road."

Iowa will try to turn around their luck on the road against Indiana Feb. 3 in Bloomington. The Hawkeyes defeated the Hoosiers, 82-68, Jan. 2 at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

Lady gymnasts dazzle in home debut

■ The women's gymnastics team sailed past Northern Illinois in Saturday's meet, 192.100-187.325.

By Melinda Mawdsley
The Daily Iowan

Before one of the largest women's gymnastics crowds ever, the Iowa women's gymnastics team dazzled those in attendance for Saturday night's home opener against Northern Illinois.

The meet was billed as "Women's Sports Night," and Iowa women's athletics director Dr. Christine Grant delivered a message prior to the meet to honor female athletes. She challenged the fans and Hawkeyes to consistently fill the North Gym in the UI Field House. Too many fans would force the meets to be held at Carver-Hawkeye Arena, a possibility that excites first-year coach Mike Lorenzen.

"If we perform well and are the type of team Hawkeye fans want to support, I believe we can do it," he said. "The challenge is to us."

If Iowa continues to execute as it did Saturday night, making the Field House rafters shake shouldn't be a problem. The Hawkeyes won every event on their way to a 192.100-187.325 victory.

Iowa took the top three spots in the all-around with first-place honors going to Julie Matolo (38.600). Sophomore Corynne Cooper took second and junior Giselle Boniforti came in third.

"Julie has been a trooper," Lorenzen said. "I'm using her in a lead-off role. It's real nice to have a senior you can depend on."

Cooper, who Lorenzen said is the toughest gymnast he's ever met, competed despite a lingering ankle injury. That toughness was evident

UI freshman Heather DeAtley competes on the vault in Iowa's meet versus Northern Illinois. Iowa had the top two finishers in the event.

Flair on the floor exercise secured Iowa's victory. With support from teammates and hordes of Girl Scouts, freshman Stephanie Benson and NIU transfer Michelle Ford took first-place honors with 9.775's.

"This was an amazing setup and crowd," Matolo said. "It's my fourth year, and I've never had support like this. It's a really positive feeling."

Iowa returns to the gym Sunday, Feb. 6, when Minnesota comes to town for a 2 p.m. meeting with the Hawkeyes in the UI Field House.

"I was really hoping we'd take some steps forward in each event, and I think we did," Lorenzen said. DJ sportswriter Melinda Mawdsley can be reached at melinda-mawdsley@uiowa.edu

Almost! Men's swimming scares PSU

■ Iowa fought to the last event against defending Big Ten champ Penn State but fell just short.

By Todd Brommelkamp
The Daily Iowan

In their final home meet of the season, the UI men's swimming team gave defending Big Ten champion Penn State all they could handle. Riding a wave of emotion, the Hawkeyes challenged the Nittany Lions to the very last race before finally falling 123-116.

The Hawkeyes (1-6, 0-5) nearly picked up their first Big Ten win of the season as they won 8 of the 13 events they swam.

"This is the best we've looked all year," said coach John Davey. "We've certainly come a long, long way from last year."

Adding to the challenge of swimming the defending champions was the fact that seven Hawkeyes were making their final appearance at the UI Field House pool.

"I came to realize there is something special about being a Hawkeye and swimming here," said Avi Mednick.

Mednick picked up two Iowa wins, taking the 200-yard breaststroke (2:05.15) and the 200-yard individual medley (1:52.63). His time in both events were team and season bests.

Davey, a former Hawkeye All-American, agreed the meet was a special one.

"This is always an emotional meet for everyone," he said, "and for me because I remember when I did it."

Along with Mednick, Jay Glenn also picked up two victories, winning the 100- and 200-yard freestyle events. Senior Bogdan Deac won the 200-yard backstroke in 1:49.80.

"This was my best time of the last five years," said Deac. "I'm really happy things ended like this."

Other victors for Iowa included Simon Chrisander in the 3-meter dive with a score of 316.95 and Ales Abersek in the 200-yard butterfly (1:52.31). The 400-yard freestyle relay team of Thad Hackney, Glenn, Pat Fuller and John Loneran also picked up a victory for Iowa finishing in 3:02.88.

"I don't think we've ever swam this fast," said Hackney, another senior. "The years have gone by so quick."

While a loss is still a loss, Davey remained optimistic about his team's showing against a strong team like Penn State.

"I can't put a swimmer on this squad down," Davey said. "The whole team came up today."

Iowa will have one last chance to pick up a conference victory when they travel to Evanston on Saturday to swim against Northwestern. Davey says the Hawkeyes and Wildcats are two very comparable teams and Northwestern's only built in advantage will be the location of the meet.

"These guys are starting to believe in themselves and they know they can compete," said Davey.

Tom Lehman hits out of the bunker on the third green during the final round of the Phoenix Open Sunday in Scottsdale, Ariz.

Lehman breaks through in Phoenix

Tom Lehman ended a four-year PGA Tour drought with his victory in the Phoenix Open Sunday.

By Mel Reisner
Associated Press

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. — The statistics said Tom Lehman was playing superbly this year. So did Lehman.

He had a chance to repeat himself again Sunday, when he broke his four-year tour victory drought by winning the Phoenix Open by one stroke when Robert Allenby bogeyed the last hole.

Lehman won the Williams World Challenge on Jan. 2, but the Phoenix Open was his first official title in 58 starts since he won the British Open and the Tour Championship in 1996 and was the Tour's Player of the Year.

Both men had difficult putts on the final hole.

Lehman saved par with a 10-foot putt for a score of 4-under 67 and a 72-hole total of 14-under 270.

"I played pretty scrappy," he said. "I didn't hit the ball very often. I hit a lot of shots off-center, off-line, but I made a couple of really good putts."

Allenby, who has never won on the PGA Tour, missed a 5-footer when the ball made a right turn on the rim and rolled a foot away.

"Those are the breaks," he said. "I know I'll win down the road."

His final-round 69 landed him in a tie for second with defending champion Rocco Mediate, who had the best next-year performance at the TPC of Scottsdale.

Johnny Miller won back-to-back titles in 1974-75, when the tournament was played at the Phoenix Country Club.

Lehman lives in Scottsdale, and his fifth career title was the first hometown win by anyone since David Duval won the 1999 Players Championship in Ponte Vedra, Fla.

The $576,000 first prize vaulted Lehman to second on this year's money list ($673,150) in two PGA Tour events. His strong start includes a tie for sixth in Hawaii two weeks ago.

He credited watching Tiger Woods with his improvement. He was inspired by the way Woods remained cool even when struggling.

"He didn't throw away shots," Lehman said. "So during the off-season, I thought about it. 'What is it that I do? I throw away shots.' That's kind of the reason I felt so good going into this year — that's something you can correct. You know, if I couldn't drive it out of my shadow, and if I couldn't chip or putt at all, then I'd be worried."

"But I've been beating myself for three years."

Allenby, a 28-year-old Australian, had his best finish in the United States, improving on a tie for fourth in the 1998 B.C. Open.

Brandt Jobe, Kirk Triplett and Hal Sutton tied for third at 272, with Edward Fryatt, Mark Calcavecchia and Steve Flesch in the next trio a shot back.

As painful as Allenby's finish was, it couldn't have been as sharp as the anguish of third-round leader Frank Lickliter and 1996 Phoenix champion Phil Mickelson, who began the day one shot behind.

Lickliter, who was 13-under to start, shot himself out of contention early, bogeying the first hole and taking a triple bogey-8 on the third, and finished with a 74 after previous rounds of 67-64-69.

Mickelson reached 14-under and held the lead until he bogeyed the 11th and 12th holes. He carded a 73 to join Lickliter and six others at 274.

Casey Martin, who battled the PGA Tour for the right to ride in a golf cart between shots because of a medical condition that is killing his right leg, made the cut in this event but struggled the last two rounds (71-75) and finished at 287.

Lehman shot a 63 in the first round to share the lead with Mickelson, and led everyone after a 67 the next day. But on Saturday his putter deserted him and he carded a 73, which left him 10-under and three shots off the lead.

"It would have been easy for me to have gone out and shot 71 or 72 or something and let my negative feelings about my putting carry over, but they didn't," Lehman said.

Prendergast shines at Minnesota

Colleen Prendergast won the 60-meter high hurdles at the Minnesota Classic.

By Jeremy Schnitker
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's track team turned in a fifth-place performance Saturday at the Minnesota Classic in Minneapolis.

In a tournament that featured No. 9 Georgia and a tough Minnesota team, the Hawkeyes performed well despite finishing in the bottom half of the competition, according to coach James Grant.

"I thought we did well," Grant said. "We didn't win, but in terms of improvement, everybody improved."

Nearly all Iowa competitors turned in personal bests, but the top performance of the day was Colleen Prendergast's first-place finish in the 60-meter high hurdles. The junior finished the race with a meet-record time of 8.59.

"Colleen was the highlight of the meet," Grant said. "I was quite happy with her performance."

The only other top-three performances went to freshmen. Sarah Arens improved in the mile run by placing third with a time of 5:02.2. Sarah Steffen turned in a solid performance also, by placing third behind Prendergast in the 60-meter hurdles. The Hawkeyes also had a strong showing in the 800-meter run with Katie Butler finishing third in a time of 2:16.8.

The Hawkeyes get back into competition next weekend as they head to South Bend, Ind., to participate in the Notre Dame Invitational.

"If we can do this week by week we'll be in good shape," Grant said. "Next weekend shouldn't be as difficult as this one."

Last-minute change works for Wieczorek

A meet that wasn't originally on Iowa's track schedule produced two provisional NCAA qualifiers.

By Jeremy Schnitker
The Daily Iowan

It was a good thing that Iowa track coach Larry Wieczorek decided to make a last minute schedule change that sent his team to the Wisconsin Elite Invitational.

The meet, which Iowa wasn't planning on attending, turned out to be a good idea. The invitational allowed two Hawkeyes to provisionally qualify for the NCAA track and field championships.

Junior Jeremy Allen qualified in the shot put, and senior long distance runner Stetson Steele qualified in the 3,000 meters.

"It turned out to be a real worthwhile trip," Wieczorek said. "Of all performers, Allen turned in the day's best performance. For the first time in his career, he broke the 60-foot mark in the shot put."

"I wanted to reach 60 feet, it's kind of like the next level in the shot put," Allen said. "I'm glad I finally got there, but I'm not totally satisfied."

Other Hawkeyes who turned in solid performances included Shaun Allen's second-place finish in the mile run, DeRocco Reed took third in the 60-meter hurdles and Tim Dodge placed fourth in the 200-meter dash.

While Iowa only took about half its team to the meet, Wieczorek was encouraged by the performances.

"This meet set us up to put the whole team back together," Wieczorek said.

Hawkeyes come through in clutch against Gophers

The men's gymnastics team overcame a late deficit to beat Minnesota Saturday.

By Melinda Mawdsley
The Daily Iowan

A familiar scenario began to unfold for the Iowa men's gymnastics team.

The Hawkeyes found themselves trailing Minnesota, 111.65-111.5, after three events in Saturday afternoon's meet in Minneapolis.

Flashback to their last competition on Jan. 22. Iowa had fallen behind Michigan after three events, a deficit they were never able to overcome. Despite winning two of the final three events, the Hawkeyes were unable to overtake the defending national champions.

The story ended differently for the Hawkeyes Saturday.

The No. 4 Hawkeyes were able to come from behind, taking the final three events to secure a 223.12-221.325 team victory over Big Ten rival Minnesota. The win was Iowa's first of the year.

Iowa's first two events, pommel horse and floor exercise, are two events Iowa coach Tom Dunn said should be Iowa's strongest. Aside from senior Todd Strada's second-place finish (9.6) on the pommel horse, sophomore Andy Thornton's second-place finish and personal-best score (9.8) on the floor and freshman Cameron Schick's (9.4) floor performance, Iowa continues to struggle.

Senior Brian Hamilton sprained his ankle on his floor routine, but Dunn said it wasn't serious. Sophomore Shane de Freitas and Schick took first-place honors (9.4) on the vault, an event Dunn said the Hawkeyes were much improved on.

Iowa finished one-two on the still rings with de Freitas taking top honors (9.55) and junior Brian Christie recording a career best (9.4).

The Hawkeyes were able to extend their lead with a sweep on the horizontal bar. Strada (9.625), de Freitas (9.6) and Thornton (9.475) finished in the top three spots for Iowa.

Iowa's lead was 186.45-185.775 heading into the parallel bars. Iowa came through, behind Strada's second-place (9.55) performance, for the victory.

Strada's efforts on Saturday earned him all-around champion honors.

"Minnesota had a chance but didn't come through," said Dunn. "It was intense. It was close even though we won by two points."

The Hawkeyes open their home season Friday, Feb. 4, when they host Illinois-Chicago.

Swimmers fall at Mizzou

In a fast pool, the Iowa women's swimming team was unable to keep up and lost to Missouri Friday.

By Melinda Mawdsley
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's swimming and diving team fell to Missouri in Columbia, Mo., Friday, 161-131, in its final competitive tune-up before the Big Ten Championships.

The Tigers came into the meet on fire, undefeated in duals this season. Iowa coach Mary Bolich said she was impressed by Mizzou.

"It was a very good meet," she said. "Missouri was just an exceptional team."

Bolich said the meet was fast, which was reflected in the times recorded. Seven Missouri pool records were broken, two by Hawkeye entrants.

Sophomore Melissa Loehndorf set the 1,000 freestyle record with a time of 10:10.27. She was also victorious in the 500 free (5:01.58) and the 200 butterfly (2:04.61).

The Iowa B 400-freestyle relay team also set a pool record with a time of 3:29.31. Members of that team included junior Becca Schwartz, sophomore Regan Fields, freshmen Erin Strub and junior Stacey Wertz.

Schwartz was also victorious in the 200 free (1:53.06).

The one other champion for the Hawkeyes was Wertz in the 100 free (52.61).

The Tigers dominated both the backstroke and breaststroke events with Leslie Hoh winning both the 100 and 200 breaststroke, and Rikki Janes taking the 100 and 200 back.

"The biggest thing for us is the outcome — how we progress from week to week," said Bolich. "Despite the loss, there were a heck of a lot of positives. From here on in the focus is on rest and speed."

Iowa returns to the water to train for the Big Ten Championships on Feb. 17-20 in Indianapolis, Ind.

scored that the only fault they did was scoring too quick. We fell just short."

Dyson almost became a big hero for the second time this season. He was the key player in the miracle finish that beat Buffalo in the wild-card game, taking a lateral and going 75 yards for a touchdown on a kickoff return with three seconds left.

The Rams' victory was vindication for coach Dick Vermeil, who returned to coaching in 1997 after being gone for 14 years. He had lost his only other Super Bowl appearance, in 1981 with Philadelphia.

"You know I'm an emotional guy but right now I feel so good and so proud of this football team and organization," said Vermeil, known for shedding a tear or two at times. "To be able to bring this home to St. Louis, such a wonderful city. I know they appreciate us a little more right now."

The Rams outgained the Titans 294 yards to 89 in the first half, but led just 9-0.

The first three possessions ended with field-goal attempts and the Rams holding a 3-0 lead.

St. Louis took the opening kickoff and drove from its own 31 to the Titans 17, twice converting third and long plays. But holder Mike Horan fumbled the snap on what would have been a 35-yard field-goal attempt and Tennessee got the ball at its own 29.

The Titans then moved to the St. Louis 26 on a 32-yard screen pass from McNair to George.

But a delay of game penalty stalled the drive and Del Greco missed a 47-yard field goal.

Warner then hit two quick passes, 32 yards to Torry Holt and 17 to Marshall Faulk. But that drive stalled at the 9-yard line and Jeff Wilkins hit a 27-yard field goal to give St. Louis the lead.

The Rams got another chance when Warner found Faulk all alone for a 52-yard completion to the 17. But Wilkins missed a 34-yard attempt 12 seconds into the second quarter.

The Titans kept the Rams out of the end zone again after St. Louis drove 73 yards from its own 16 to the Tennessee 11. This time Isaac Bruce dropped a pass in the end zone and Wilkins ended up kicking a 29-yard field goal to make it 6-0.

destiny. That was the day they trailed Buffalo 16-15 with 16 seconds remaining, then stunned the Bills when Dyson caught a cross-field lateral from Frank Wycheck and ran 75 yards untouched for a touchdown and a 22-16 victory.

Instant replay helped them twice in the divisional round against Indianapolis. One replay gave them the inches they needed for a first down on a carry by McNair, and a second replay nullified a Terrence Wilkins' punt return to the Tennessee 3 and preserved the Titans' lead.

They got no such help against the Rams.

The Titans tied the game at 16 on a 43-yard field goal by Al Del Greco with 2:12 remaining.

Kurt Warner needed just one play to find Isaac Bruce on a 73-yard touchdown pass play. Titans cornerback Denard Walker was running with step for step with Bruce until the receiver stopped for a half-stride, enough space to catch the ball and lose Walker for what would be the winning TD.

Coach Jeff Fisher said that Walker, who dressed and quickly left the locker room after the game, tripped on the play.

"We have made those kind of plays all year and this particular play we didn't," Fisher said.

The Titans had made a habit of rallying in the second half. They won five games in the regular season and all three of their playoff games by doing just that.

They thought they plenty of time left with 1:54 to go. McNair drove them down the field and found Dyson slanting across the field just inside the 5 in the last seconds.

"It's set up exactly like we worked on it in practice," Dyson said of the play called "Silver Right." "It came down to the linebacker making a great tackle. It was ironic, it came down to something like that."

Dyson caught the ball and thought he would score. Then, Rams linebacker Mike Jones grabbed him.

"I realized as soon as I stretched out and was going down that I didn't get the point of the ball over the goal line," Dyson said. "When he got his hands on me, I thought I'd break the tackle, but he slid down to my foot like you're supposed to and made a great play. Maybe I should have pitched it back to somebody."

Offensive coordinator Les Stechel said Dyson, who had four catches for 41 yards in the game, cut the play a little early. The Titans had practiced it three times in the past week.

"In the intensity of the moment," Stechel said, "people cut things a little short."

down the line-up," Wardlaw said. "It was a good team effort."

The Hawkeyes return to action next weekend with a little tougher competition as they head to Nashville, Tenn., to take on Vanderbilt and Florida State.

The Seminoles were one of Iowa's upset victims last year in the NCAA Tournament. According to Wardlaw, revenge will be on the minds of FSU's players.

"We beat FSU last year, so they'll be up for the competition," Wardlaw said. "We have to anticipate the revenge factor."

Iowa will face Vanderbilt on Friday and Florida State on Saturday.

a lot of room for improvement.

"This meet was a good sign for the team," junior Jake Wilson said. "We got a chance to see what we need to do better the next time out. We have a lot tougher matches to face in the rest of the season. I think everyone knows we have a lot to work on if we want to be a top contender in the Big Ten."

Houghton said he was particularly pleased with the team's overall performance and the way that the veterans and the new freshmen came together and played well.

"I'm really proud of how we just dominated at every position and I was really happy with the freshman. They did a great job in their first dual meet."

Luehrsmann leads final Iowa charge

MEN'S HOOPS

Wisconsin (11-9, 3-5) got just one field goal in the second half from someone other than leading scorer Mark Vershaw, who had 18 points. The Badgers, who beat Purdue three days prior, had their four-game winning streak against the Hawkeyes snapped.

"It just came down to them killing us on the boards all night and then making their free throws late," Wisconsin coach Dick Bennett said. "They executed, and that was the only difference. We've been struggling in a lot of close games."

Jon Bryant and Kirk Penney, who were a combined 4-of-15 from the field, missed open 3-pointers in the closing seconds for Wisconsin. Mike Kelley, the Badgers' point guard and last year's defensive player of the year in the Big Ten, spent the afternoon in foul trouble and eventually fouled out as Oliver took over the game.

"You've got to give them credit," Kelley said. "They were probably the tougher team mentally down the stretch."

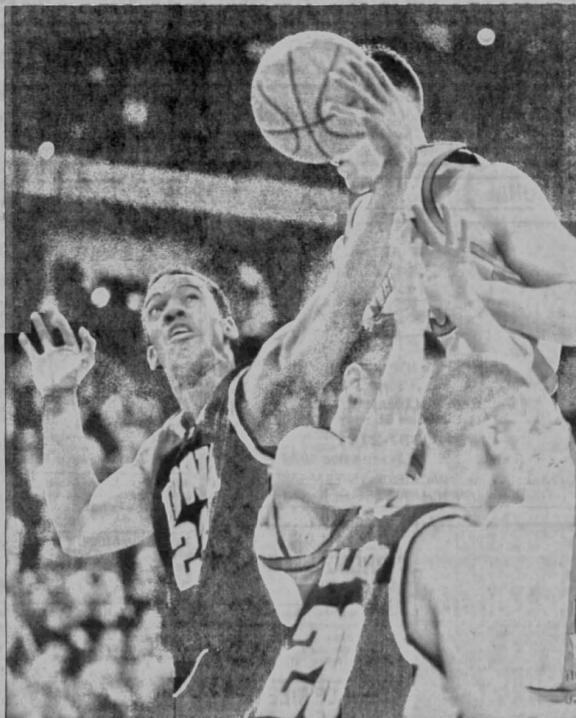

The Badgers couldn't get a field goal in the game's final 3:27 and failed to score on four straight possessions as Iowa went ahead for good and the sellout crowd at the Kohl Center got quiet.

Oliver's free throws with 51 seconds left gave the Hawkeyes a 56-55 lead, and Jaacks and Luehrsmann scored five points on the line after that.

"It was almost like we froze up," Vershaw said. "We didn't have enough in us to get back in the game."

Alford is now 10-0 as a player and a coach against Wisconsin. After eight straight wins over the Badgers during his playing days at Indiana, Alford led Southwest Missouri State to a 43-32 NCAA tournament win over Wisconsin last season.

After trailing for much of the game, Iowa took the lead with an 11-0 second-half run. The Hawkeyes held Wisconsin scoreless for 5:26 during the run and went up 43-39 on Luehrsmann's 3-pointer with 8:09 left.

Wisconsin then made its own 7-0 run, but Iowa went back ahead on five points by Luehrsmann.

The Badgers were outrebounded 32-23 by a team with no player taller than 6-foot-8. The teams combined for 26 turnovers and 40 fouls in a defense-oriented game.

Bennett and reserve Charlie Wills clashed on the bench in the game's closing seconds, though Bennett said the incident was resolved after the game.

Bennett also suffered a momentary blackout during the first half and fell to the court. He refused medical treatment during the game, though he said he would see a doctor afterward.

"Things went black for about a second, and by the time I woke

McCleary writes he's 'doing great'

Trent McCleary, who was hit in the throat with a puck, improved enough to write a note Sunday.

MONTREAL (AP) — Trent McCleary, who came within minutes of dying after being hit in the throat by a slap shot, felt well enough Sunday to write a note to his Montreal Canadiens teammates.

"Doing great, everybody," said the handwritten message delivered by team doctor David Mulder.

He said he would be listening to Sunday's game, in which Montreal beat Carolina 3-0.

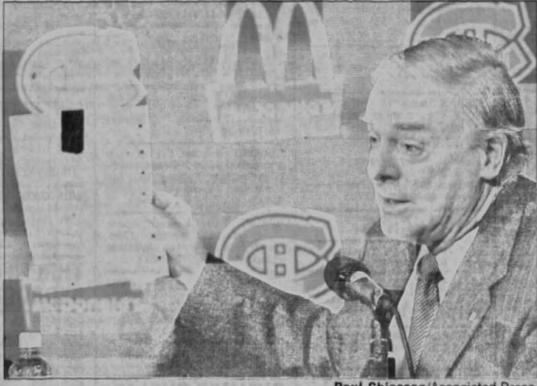

"Battle hard," the note said. "Go Habs." It was signed, "Trent No. 6."

McCleary is unable to speak but he is no longer in danger of dying, Mulder said Sunday. He is recovering from a fractured larynx and collapsed lung.

Doctors expect him to spend at least a week in hospital, but it is not clear if he will be able to play again.

The 27-year-old player, his skates still on, underwent an emergency tracheotomy Saturday night after being hit flush on the throat on a shot from Philadelphia's Chris Therien during a 2-2 tie.

"He's much better now," said Mulder, who treated the popular fourth-line winger from the time he was helped, limp and gasping for air, from the Molson Centre to Montreal General

Paul Chiasson/Associated Press

Montreal Canadiens' team doctor, Dr. David Mulder shows a note written by Canadiens' Trent McCleary to teammates during a news conference Sunday in Montreal.

Hospital. "Anyone on a respirator is considered in critical condition, but in terms of danger to his life, he went through that (Saturday) night," Mulder added. "Certainly, his life is not in danger now."

Ear, nose and throat specialists will decide Monday whether they should operate immediately on his larynx or wait several days for the swelling to subside. McCleary might be left with a raspy voice.

The only NHL player to die from an injury in a game was Bill Masterton, whose head struck the ice in 1968. Mulder said McCleary came close to dying. "It was as close as I think you could come," Mulder said. "It was a matter of seconds. If we had been held up along the way ..."

McCleary helped himself by skating to the bench. He gestured to his throat that he couldn't breathe before he collapsed and went unconscious.

Mulder was at the boards, and associate Dr. David Fleischer, a spectator, rushed to help.

When they couldn't get a breathing tube down the player's throat, McCleary was placed in an ambulance. There was little traffic for the five-minute ride.

Tyson points toward Asia, Europe

After dispatching Julius Francis, Mike Tyson said he wants more warm-up fights in Asia and Europe.

By Ed Schuyler, Jr. Associated Press

MANCHESTER, England — Mike Tyson wants more fights to reach top form, and he wants to do that in Europe.

That's fine with Jay Larkin, who runs boxing for Showtime, the American cable network. Larkin also wouldn't mind taking Tyson to Asia.

More difficult, it seems, will be getting Tyson a fight anywhere against undisputed heavyweight champion Lennox Lewis. Tyson has a contract with Showtime and Lewis with rival HBO.

Tyson put an exclamation point on his two-week ego trip to England in his bout with Julius Francis. He knocked him down five times and stopped him at 1:03 of the second round before a roaring sellout crowd of 21,000 Saturday night in MEN Arena.

He left Manchester about 5 a.m. Sunday, heading to Gatwick Airport outside London for a flight to Phoenix.

"I hope he can come back," said Frank Warren, promoter of Saturday night's fight.

Tyson would like a few fights in Europe. However, his first one, scheduled for March 25, could be in New Jersey.

"We're still talking Meadowlands but we have been getting offers, real offers from Europe," said Larkin, adding he has received calls from Copenhagen, Denmark; Amsterdam, Netherlands; and Paris.

"Asia also is attractive because of the time difference," Larkin said.

A Tyson pay-per-view fight in Europe would have to start about 4 a.m. local time (11 p.m. EST), which hurts the live gate. A fight in Asia — say, Japan — could start in the early afternoon because Japan is 14 hours ahead of the eastern United States.

Larkin indicated that Tyson's March 25 match, probably against Lou Savarese, will be pay-per-view and the Meadowlands is the leading site.

Shelly Finkel, Tyson's boxing adviser, wants Tyson to fight for the title this year. On Sunday, Panos Eliades, Lewis' promoter, said he would offer Tyson $40 million for such a fight. That seems unbelievably high because Lewis would certainly want as much — or almost as much — since he's the champion.

"He'll be there another year or two and then maybe he will retire," Eliades said of his fighter.

He is not optimistic about the fight happening this year. "I hope it will, but I don't think it will," Eliades said. "There are too many problems in the way. It could be possibly next year."

Tyson says he needs to get sharper before challenging Lewis. "I've got a ways to go," he said. "I've got to get my stuff together."

Larkin put a damper on a Lewis-Tyson match by saying, "You won't see that fight until Lewis fulfills his contract with HBO."

He said he didn't know how many fights Lewis had left on his contract. As for how many Tyson has remaining with Showtime, Larkin said, "You're looking at Mike spending a significant part of the rest of his career at Showtime."

While Tyson's performance against Francis was impressive, the British journeyman was not the kind of opponent he needs for successful pay-per-view bouts.

The fight, on pay-per-view in Britain, was shown on tape delay Saturday night in the United States. Tyson's previous fight was also not on pay-per-view — a one-round no-contest against Orlin Norris on Oct. 23 in Las Vegas.

"He's got to move up, obviously," Larkin said of the quality of future opponents. While Savarese has faded, he is a more legitimate opponent than Francis.

The idea behind Saturday night's fight was to have Tyson fight before a crowd that wanted to see him — he got a warm reception — and for him to look good. His four previous fights included losses to Evander Holyfield — the second one in the notorious Bite Fight — an unimpressive win over Francois Botha and the no-contest.

Francis helped by fighting back, which left him open. Tyson was wild in the first minute, but he kept his composure and found the range. He used his jab, a punch he had seemingly forgotten, and he threw some vicious body punches and accurate right uppercuts.

Equally important to Larkin was Tyson's attitude.

"His spirits are better than they've been in a very long time," Larkin said. "I know that getting his head in the right place is as important as him getting into the gym."
