Board lowers boom on UISG campaign $

■ The Student Elections Board wants to discourage "image voting" with a $1,500 campaign cap.

By Heather Pavnica
The Daily Iowan

The maximum amount of money a slate of candidates running for the UI Student Government can spend was sliced in half — from $3,000 to $1,500 — in an effort to increase the number of candidates running for office.

The move by the Student Elections Board came Monday, said Megan Bygness, a UI senior and the elections board chairwoman.

A large spending limit didn't encourage people to get out on campus and share their platform ideas, Bygness said. Instead, she said, larger spending limits allowed candidates to rely solely on images presented in ads and fliers.

"Our goal is that decreasing the amount of spending will increase the amount of contact with students," Bygness said.

UISG Vice President Andy Stoll said it is easier for a student to raise $1,500.

"It makes student government positions more accessible to the average student," he said.

Stoll said most of his campaign funding for last year's election came out of his own pocket. He relied on his family to help him raise the necessary funds.

Lowering the limit on campaign financing will force candidates to address student issues and not depend on materialistic campaign strategies to win a seat, Stoll said.

"Candidates can't rely on an image built through things backed by money," he said.

UISG Sen. Marquez Brown is against lowering the cap on campaign funding because it makes it more difficult to reach students.

"It is hard to reach 33,000 people on campus with only $1,500," he said. "I don't want candidates to be limited."

Most people on campus don't know about UISG, Brown said. With a cap on campaign funding, a candidate's message will not be heard, he said.

UISG Sen. Deanna Olsen said an ambitious, qualified candidate would try to gain support and raise $3,000 through campaign donations.

"It says something about somebody if he or she can go out and persuade people to donate money," she said. "$1,500 is not enough to run a campaign. If a candidate runs a full-page ad in the DI, all he or she has left is $500. What can they do with $500?"

UISG President Lana Zak said she started promoting campaign-finance reform when she took office last year.

"We don't want a person to win because he or she has money," she said. "We want people to focus on the issues."

■ The Hawks stun Kansas for the second year in a row.

By Avian Carrasquillo
The Daily Iowan

For the second time in as many years, the Iowa men's basketball team defeated the Kansas Jayhawks — this time in front of the home crowd.

As the play clock wound down, hundreds of Hawkeye fans spilled onto the court in celebration.

Downtown Iowa City streets simultaneously became flooded with fans who were excited about the unexpected victory.

"It's a great win for the team and Iowa City. I think this win will give us hope for the playoffs," said UI junior Christina Antes.

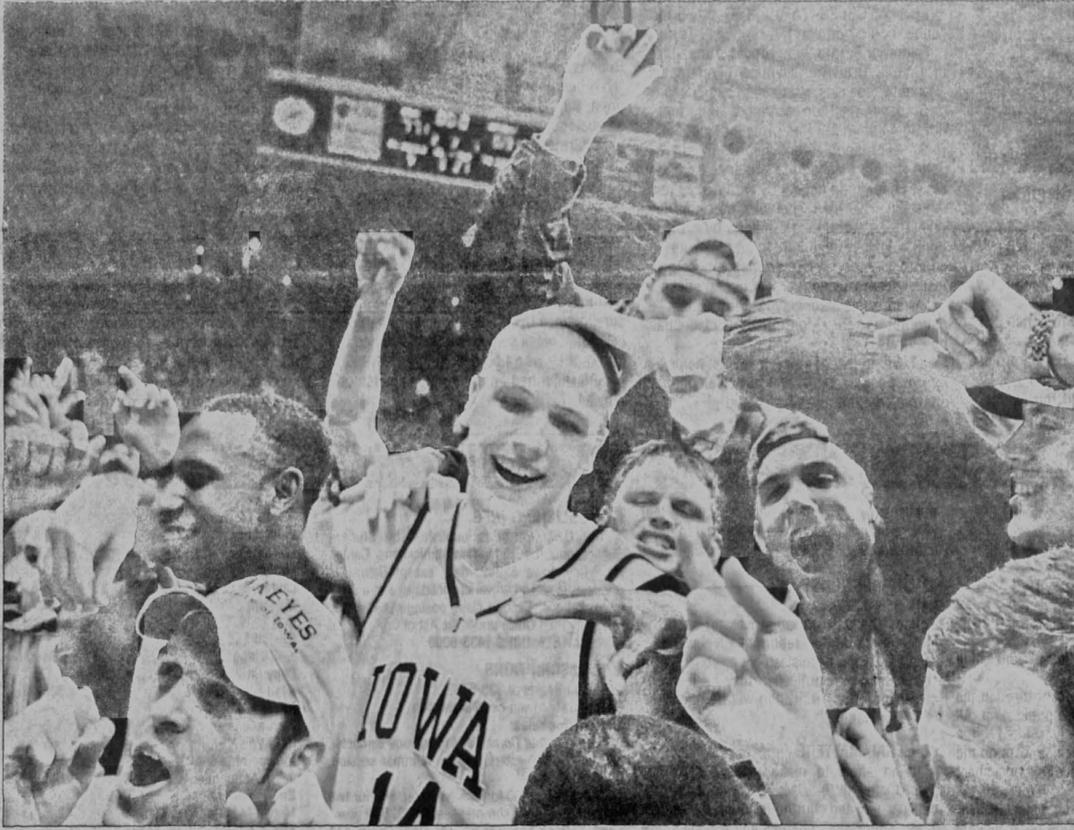

Students were not the only ones enjoying the win, as dozens of Iowa City residents and UI alumni packed into downtown establishments to watch the game.

For Iowa City resident Cathy Latch, who watched the game with friends at the Sports Column, 12 S. Dubuque St., the win confirmed her faith in Coach Steve Alford.

"I hate Kansas. This win just proves that Alford is for real," she said.

For some, the game, Iowa's second-straight win and Kansas' second straight loss, marked a reversal in the Hawks' fortune.

"This is really a turning point for the rest of the season. I don't think we'll have trouble getting

EU protests Austria's right-wing gov't

■ The European Union vows to isolate Austria politically; Israel recalls its ambassador.

By Robert H. Reid
Associated Press

VIENNA, Austria — Austria's president agreed Thursday to swear in a coalition government that includes a far-right party whose leader, Jörg Haider, has applauded aspects of the Nazi régime and who campaigned on an anti-immigrant platform.

Reaction was swift. Israel recalled its ambassador and banned Haider from visiting, even though the right-wing leader has repeatedly apologized for pro-Nazi remarks made years ago.

European Union nations started making good on threats to politically isolate Austria, something the United States has backed. The EU also warned it may suspend the Alpine nation's membership.

The prospect of Haider's Freedom Party in government prompted approximately 2,000 protesters to take to the streets of Vienna late Thursday for the second straight night.

A group of them pushed their way into the city's historic Burgtheater and stormed the stage in the middle of a performance, calling on the audience to join a protest rally today before fleeing the building.

Despite the outcry both at home and abroad, President Thomas Klestil said the results of the Oct. 3 parliamentary elections give him little choice but to go ahead with the swearing-in ceremony today.

Klestil did reject two Cabinet nominees from Haider's Freedom Party, including one who authorized distribution of campaign posters in Vienna warning of "over-foreignization," a term that harkened back to the Nazi era.

The president also demanded that Haider and his coalition partner, Wolfgang Schüssel of the centrist

Coatless in Iowa City

■ Most UI students would rather brave below-freezing temps than lose a coat at the bars.

By Bryce Fishman
The Daily Iowan

Slipping and sliding through the snow is a pretty common occurrence in Iowa on a January night. But diving into the snow in 3-inch open-toed heels or doing snow angels in a T-shirt without a coat are sure signs that college students are going out.

Despite this month's sometimes sub-zero temperatures, on any given night, some UI students can be found racing downtown dressed in clothing usually reserved for warmer weather.

Some bar-goers say they don't mind the uncomfortable trek downtown as much as they would the consequences and hassles of dragging coats along.

"It's too hot in the bars, and there is

Tallying the cost of underage tipping

■ A first-of-its-kind study shows the monetary impact of underage drinking on Iowa City.

By Chao Xiong
The Daily Iowan

Iowa City lived up to its reputation as a "party town" in 1999, with tickets for underage drinking draining an estimated $13,706 from the police budget of approximately $6.5 million.

The 2,107 citations made for possession of alcohol under the legal age by Iowa City police in 1999 tied up police officers for 526.75 hours, at an average officer cost of $26 per hour, according to police records.

"That seems so minuscule that it's hardly noticeable in the total budget," said Mayor Ernie Lehman. "That number doesn't seem even close to what I'd assumed it would be."

City Manager Steve Atkins echoed Lehman's remarks, saying it should not be a matter of concern.

The estimate is the first ever of its kind; there are no existing figures concerning other violations, he said.

Each underage-drinking ticket carries a $30 surcharge and $15 court charge; the remaining $100 is received by the city or state, depending on how

Harney said it is a "rule of thumb" that underage-drinking charges by themselves are a city charge, but when the charge is accompanied by another violation, such as public intoxication, it becomes a state charge.

Life is all a mirage

LAS VEGAS (AP) — It's been 10 years since Siegfried and Roy placed their biggest bet, spending $35 million of their own money to create a show unlike anything ever seen in Las Vegas.

The gamble has paid off handsomely. The German-born illusionists have raked in $1 billion at the Mirage, playing before some 10 million people since they opened their stage spectacular at the Strip resort on Feb. 1, 1990.

Steve Wynn, who signed the pair to a record $58 million contract in 1987 to headline at his hotel-casino, recalled their bold plans Tuesday at a party marking the start of the illusionists' 11th year at the Mirage.

He said the two enlisted some of Broadway's finest talent to design a show that would set a new standard. Then they pitched Wynn on putting up their own millions to produce it and sharing in the profits.

"We didn't think about the money. We just wanted to give the world the wonder-ment," Siegfried said. The illusionists have two years remaining on their current Mirage contract.

"We look back and appreciate what we've accomplished, but it's what's ahead that brings excitement, the unknown of year 11 and beyond," said Roy.

'Lucy' nabbed; circuses safe

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Good grief! "Lucy" could go to jail!

Pamelyn Ferdin, who provided the voice of Charlie Brown's playmate in animated "Peanuts" specials, was sentenced Tuesday to 30 days in jail for carrying a "bull hook" during an animal-rights protest at a circus. San Fernando Municipal Court Judge John C. Gunn stayed the sentence immediately, pending an appeal by Ferdin's lawyer.

Ferdin, 39, said she was carrying the object — a wooden rod topped by a metal hook, used by elephant trainers — as an educational tool. A city ordinance bars protesters from carrying large wooden sticks.

Ferdin, who also played Tony Randall's daughter on "The Odd Couple," said she has no regrets.

"I have no fear of going to jail if it helps to inform people about how cruel elephants are treated at circuses," she said.

Letterman plots return

NEW YORK (AP) — Is David Letterman planning a Valentine's Day surprise for his fans?

His representatives weren't commenting Thursday on reports that the "Late Show" host, who is recovering from heart surgery, will return to his show on Feb. 14.

"We suspect Dave will be back sooner rather than later," spokesman Steve Rubenstein said. "He's been doing great. But no date has been set."

Letterman paid a surprise visit to his office Monday for a couple of hours and talked with staff members about his first show back. He's since left the country on vacation, Rubenstein said.

Rumors of a Feb. 14 return apparently spread since CBS has not formally canceled that week's show or told expected guests they won't be needed.

Letterman had an emergency bypass on Jan. 14.

Don't go, Gov. urges law grads

In a speech Thursday, the governor stressed Iowa's "quality of life" and unique opportunities.

By Christy B. Logan
The Daily Iowan

Iowa Gov. Tom Vilsack Thursday proclaimed that the "American Dream" is more attainable in Iowa than in other states in a speech meant to encourage law students to remain in the state after graduation.

Vilsack's speech was the culmination of a two-day series of events put on by the UI College of Law and the Young Lawyers Division of the Iowa State Bar Association.

"In many other places, you will work hard and won't get far," he said. "But in this state, whatever it is you want to do... If you put your mind to it, you can accomplish that dream."

More than 100 students, attorneys, UI law faculty and Iowa City residents attended the event, held at the City Plaza Hotel, 210 S. Dubuque St.

"The great thing about practicing law in Iowa is that you not only meet great people and learn values about yourself and other people, but you practice with great people," Vilsack said. "If you have an opportunity to practice law in this state, you won't get a better place."

The focus of the program, and Vilsack's speech in particular, was to promote Iowa's greater "quality of life" when compared with other places.

Pat Bauer, the chairman of the law school's career services committee, said a freshman class at the school typically consists of approximately two-thirds Iowa natives and one-third non-Iowans. Three years later, when the students graduate, two-thirds seek jobs elsewhere, he said.

"Iowa is at the back of the pack compared with other states, such as Kansas and Minnesota," he said. "The starting salary is only in the mid-40s."

Tom Collins, a part-time attorney with the firm O'Conner & Thomas and a professor of business law at Loras College in Dubuque, said the decision to stay in Iowa was quite simple.

The UI law school graduate spent his entire educational career in the state, and although he worked in San Francisco for a couple of years, Collins missed Iowa.

"I'm definitely here to stay," he said. "I missed the change of seasons. It's a good quality of life and a great place to raise a family."

Although the pay might be less, Mike Cameron, a third-year law student and Tekamah, Neb., native, said practicing law in Iowa is more interesting.

"Because I grew up on a farm, and there are more agricultural-oriented issues than in other places, I have taken a job in Iowa and expect to start in August," he said.

Vilsack said key points law students should consider when looking for a job include the power of family and the power of land in the state. Working in Iowa not only provides an opportunity to learn values about yourself but also the chance to practice with other great people.

"We want you to be a part of our future," he said. "We will work hard to expand opportunities."

UI slapped with fine for sewage spill

The UI has been fined the maximum amount for the Mayflower spill; it may appeal.

By Michael Chapman
The Daily Iowan

The UI has been fined $10,000 by the Iowa Department of Natural Resources for a sewage-dumping incident that was discovered in September.

The fine was imposed upon the UI because it dumped an estimated 84,373 gallons of raw sewage into the Iowa River, which caused fecal coliform levels to jump to 1,000 times above normal levels. The spill occurred during the renovation of the Mayflower Residence Hall between June 1 and Sept. 14, 1999.

The UI was given the largest penalty possible by the DNR because of the contingency for an environmental disaster, said Jim Sievens, a DNR environmental specialist.

"There was no visible impact to the wildlife of the river," he said. "But the potential impact was the greatest because of the city water-treatment plant."

The DNR issued an administrative order with several decrees that the UI must comply with in order to prevent other incidents from occurring, Sievens said. Among these are a report on the training of its employees to address such issues and a plan to reduce the fecal coliform levels in the Iowa River by April 1.

The UI has 30 days to pay the penalty unless it decides to appeal, which the university is considering, said Ann Rhodes, the vice president for university relations.

"We're not sure yet, because we think it's unlikely anything would happen," she said. "But we might appeal the amount of the fine."

The possibility also remains that AAA Mechanical Contractors Inc., the Coralville plumbing contractor that was working on the residence hall, may be asked to help pay the fine, Rhodes said.

"We'll sit down with them, discuss options, the pros and cons, and make a decision," she said. Officials at AAA declined to comment.

The spill occurred after AAA mistakenly rerouted two sanitary lines to a storm line, according to the administrative order. UI officials did not report the incident to the DNR until Sept. 14, four days after the problem was discovered.

CITY BRIEF

Memmer trial pushed back to April 17

The burglary and forgery trials of Johnathon Lee Memmer, scheduled to begin on Feb. 14, have been pushed back until April 17.

Motions for continuance were filed by Memmer's attorney, Edward Leff, during a pre-trial conference Thursday afternoon.

Additional time was needed for the defense to prepare its case, according to court records.

"This is usually an indication that the applicant needs more time," said Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White. Leff was unavailable for comment.

The felony charges of third-degree burglary and forgery are unrelated and have been riding together, said Michael Brennan, an assistant county attorney. Separate trials can be expected, he said. The two cases have been delayed four times, according to court documents.

The third-degree burglary charge was filed on April 29, 1999, after police allegedly recovered items removed from an apartment at 427 S. Van Buren St., where two women were found slain March 19.

Memmer broke into the apartment and took two VCRs, stereo equipment and other items sometime after March 12, 1999, said court documents. The items were recovered from a pawn shop, where Memmer allegedly pawned them under his own name.

The bodies of Maria Therese Lehner and Laura Watson-Dalton were discovered after a fire in the apartment. No murder charges have been filed in the case; authorities say Memmer has not been ruled out as a suspect.

The two counts of forgery stem from allegedly authenticating checks from Iowa State Bank & Trust Co. Memmer is charged with third-degree theft for allegedly depositing the forged checks, totaling $715, into his Iowa State Bank account.

As she stumbled around the room, attempting to perform sobriety tests, Julie Phye, the director of the Stepping Up Project, exclaimed, "Oh my God, that's amazing."

Phye was not intoxicated but instead was wearing a pair of "Fatal Vision" goggles, which simulate the visual impairment of an intoxicated person.

The UI Department of Public Safety and the Stepping Up Project, a group that sponsors alcohol-free events in efforts to reduce binge-drinking on campus, purchased a $700 kit that includes four pairs of Fatal Vision goggles.

The goggles let you experience being drunk while remaining sober, said Brad Allison, a Public Safety crime prevention officer. The goggles can simulate different levels of blood alcohol and different times of day.

In addition, the kit includes two brief videos about alcohol and fact sheets.

"We want people to wear the goggles and say, 'Yeah, I've felt that way before,'" Phye said. "When they realize it while they still have judgment, hopefully, it'll make them think the next time they drink and especially the next time they think about driving (drunk)."

Allison said he will give a demonstration of the goggles "to everybody who contacts us and expresses interest." He can be reached at 335-5043.

"We want a percentage to realize how they get, so when they do drink, they do so in moderation and after they are 21," Allison said. "We would like to educate more and do less enforcing."

Although Public Safety has only had the goggles a week, the Student Hall Association of Rienow and Quad has already contacted Allison about a demonstration.

"We heard about the goggles and called so we could put on a program," said Dave Kafer, a UI junior and the president of the association. "I'm over 21 and don't drink, so I'd like to see what it's like."

Local authorities knock site of new jail

■ The proposed Melrose Avenue location may be inconvenient, say local officials

By Ryan Foley
The Daily Iowan

Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White told the county Board of Supervisors he may not agree with the recommended location for a new jail.

On Jan. 27, the Jail Overcrowding Study Committee recommended building a new jail on county-owned land at the intersection of Highway 218 and Melrose Avenue in order to solve overcrowding problems at the current jail.

The committee said the existing jail could be expanded by buying land from the UI, but the current site does not provide adequate space for jail expansion.

White suggested looking into expanding the current facility as well as looking at other locations.

"I was disappointed to hear that the existing facility won't work," he told the board at a meeting Thursday morning. "But just because that's not recommended doesn't mean we should automatically move out to Melrose."

White said he would prefer building a jail at a site closer to the Johnson County Courthouse, 417 S. Clinton St.

"The Melrose site would bring some indirect costs in transportation to the county," White said. "In any event, it is not impossible that a large facility could be built at a location closer to the courthouse."

Iowa City Police Chief R.J. Winkelhake also said he would prefer the jail to be located closer to the existing facility.

"My personal standpoint is that it is convenient now. A downside of the recommendation would be the extra travel time," he said. "But I can't argue against the recommendation because it is valid and well-thought out."

Committee Chairman Peter Hayek said the recommended location would provide easy access to Highway 218 for patrol officers responding to calls countywide and would be large enough to be expanded if the need should arise.

The Board of Supervisors decided to set up a joint meeting with the members of the jail committee and the space-needs committee to discuss the next step in planning for a new jail.

RVAP searches for UI students to volunteer

■ Students can earn credit by attending workshops and interning with the program.

By Kate Thayer
The Daily Iowan

Students participating in the Rape Victim Advocacy Program's volunteer workshops reach out to the community and receive academic credit in the process.

As a result of the program's recent loss in grant money, there has been a smaller staff, which creates a need for student interns, said Michael Shaw, the director of RVAP youth services.

"We need these volunteers to be able to staff the crisis line and to provide educational programs,"

Shaw said.

In recent years, RVAP has been home to a 24-hour crisis hotline for the entire state, requiring more workers than in the past, said Liz Fitzgerald, the RVAP education director.

"While the demand for staff has increased, the funds have decreased," she said. "Because of the increase in work, we need that many more volunteers and interns to help support the program."

Sara Baderstadt, the RVAP director of volunteers, said UI students in psychology, sociology, social work or women's studies programs may receive as many as four semester hours for internships with agencies such as RVAP.

"These internships are a great opportunity for students to get practical experience and build their résumés in the process," she said.

The 46-hour training program will start Saturday; it will involve role play and small-group activities to prepare students to be crisis-line operators and to be educated about sexual abuse, Baderstadt said.

Although it is too late for interested students to sign up for Saturday's training workshops, training in the future is a possibility. While the next session is not yet scheduled, it is expected to take place this June, Baderstadt said.

Bob Kirby, a UI psychology department academic coordinator, said students participating in RVAP's internship program must be juniors or seniors and need to meet certain criteria to receive academic credit.

In addition to the 10 hours of service a week, psychology students are required to keep a weekly journal and write a 10-page paper tying their experiences to a career in psychology, he said.

While similar criteria exist to earn credit for other participating departments, the School of Social Work requires students to volunteer at organizations such as RVAP. Social work students receive eight credit hours for working 450 hours at a service organization during the semester.

"RVAP has always been reliant on students as long as the program has been in existence," said Fitzgerald.

Other student efforts to raise funds and attract volunteers for RVAP include a Mardi Gras dance organized by the Iowa women's rowing team, which will be held in the IMU on Feb. 10 from 8 p.m. to 11 p.m.

CITY BRIEF

Memorial to be held for UI senior

A memorial service will be held for UI senior Robert Rapp at 4 p.m. Saturday at the Unitarian Church, 10 S. Gilbert St.

Rapp, 48, died of a brain aneurysm on Dec. 25 while visiting family in the Chicago area. He had lived in Iowa City for six years with his wife, Jenny Tyner, and two daughters, Janine and Eleanor.

A communications major, Rapp was scheduled to graduate in May.

Throughout his time at the UI, he also worked at the IMU and the Eckstein Medical Research Building.

"First and foremost, he was a dad, but getting his degree was so important to him," said Rapp's sister-in-law, Janet Rapp. "The university community meant a lot to him. He worked here, was a student, and participated in lots of other aspects of it."

Janet Rapp said the memorial service is being held for all the people Robert Rapp had gotten to know throughout his years in Iowa City.

GOP fears bushwhacking

■ The GOP establishment worries about Bush.

By Ron Fournier
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Republican strategists, elected officials, fundraisers and other early backers of George W. Bush are nervously sifting through the debris of his stunning defeat in New Hampshire and demanding a change in tactics from their troubled front-runner.

The GOP establishment, heavily invested in the Texas governor's success, has a case of the jitters.

"You've got to believe it is hard to get through to the '202' exchange today because the lines are buzzing about this in Washington," said Nelson Warfield, the former press secretary for 1996 nominee Bob Dole.

"I'm bleeding from the guy right now," said Rich Bond, who was an operative for the candidate's father, former President Bush. "Most professionals will tell you Bush will prevail," he said, but the shock of an 18-point loss "should give one who cares about politics and, in my case, George W. Bush, great pause."

With McCain passing up Delaware's primary next week, South Carolina's Feb. 19 contest has become critical for both men. Bush's formidable lead in state polls evaporated overnight with the news of his New Hampshire finish, according to two sets of South Carolina surveys released Thursday.

"The prop-wash of defeat is going to be around for a while," Bush told reporters Thursday, adding a thought for the second-guessers: "Tell them to hold their breath because they've got somebody who's about to win the Republican nomination."

Interviews with more than a dozen GOP leaders across the country, most of whom support Bush, underscored the party establishment's strong belief that the Texan eventually will win the nomination, given his formidable resources and the lead in most national and state polls.

Yet several troubling themes kept cropping up:

- The sense of inevitability that cloaked Bush's candidacy is in tatters. "I think if his odds were 20-1 before New Hampshire, they're probably 10-1 now," said Bush fundraiser Ted Welch. "He needs to pull things together, and he will."

- He must be more critical of McCain. "Bush is going to have to get up and fight," said Rep. John Kasich of Ohio, who dropped out of the presidential race in July and endorsed the Texas governor.

- He must persuade voters that he is prepared to be president. "I think that Gov. Bush has really got to bone up on a tremendous number of issues," said Sen. Arlen Specter of Pennsylvania, who has not endorsed a candidate but said the Bush team suffers from "an inevitable sense of complacency." Exit polls show that one-third of New Hampshire Republican voters did not think Bush had the knowledge needed to serve effectively.

Grad student remembered as advocate

■ Alexander Phillips devoted himself to working for better accessibility on campus.

By Anne Huyck
The Daily Iowan

Alexander Phillips, a UI graduate student in the School of Social Work, died suddenly on Jan. 31.

Phillips, 42, was found by a neighbor outside his home, 1112 St. Clements Alley, and was pronounced dead at the UI Hospitals and Clinics.

Those who knew Phillips remembered him for his commitment to disability rights.

Donna Chandler, an associate rehabilitation director and vocational rehabilitation specialist in the spine-treatment center, UIHC, worked with Phillips on various committees trying to improve accessibility on campus for those with disabilities.

"He was instrumental to creating accessibility for those with impaired mobility," she said.

During the 1980s, Phillips was involved in many student groups and committees that worked to make the UI campus more accessible.

"He was very strong in his belief that the campus needed to be more accessible," Chandler said. "He was a strong proponent of campus accessibility and even became able to suggest changes and how to go about them."

Even as the campus became more accessible, Phillips continued to work to change things.

"He was always a good advocate for that sort of thing," she said. "You didn't think about Alex as in a wheelchair; you just thought about Alex."

Trying to get rid of the gate between Burge and Currier Residence Halls had been one of Phillips' recent projects, said Bob VanderBeek, a UI assistant professor of social work.

"They installed a gate this year so cars can't drive down there, but it made it hard for those in wheelchairs to get through," he said. "He was working to get easier access there."

The School of Social Work is still working on informing students, figuring out what to do for Phillips and thinking of possible memorials that could continue Phillips' cause, VanderBeek said.

Phillips received a degree from the UI in 1980, attended law school briefly, and was enrolled in the School of Social Work as of last fall.

Susan Dirks, a secretary at the School of Social Work, knew Phillips for approximately 20 years.

"We met through photography," she said. "We were both in art school and in the same classes. He was a fine photographer — one of the best."

Teaching classes on sexuality with the disabled was something else Phillips was involved with, along with speaking to classes in the UI medical school.

"He's been around Iowa City for a long time," Chandler said. "Lots of people know him. He spoke in classes, he helped the city set up a darkroom that was accessible, and he did a lot for disability accessibility on campus. It's not going to seem like the same place without him."

Funeral services will be held Saturday at 1 p.m. at the George L. Gay Funeral Home, 2720 Muscatine Ave.

After primary, Bauer waves white flag

■ An anonymous source claims Gary Bauer will officially drop out of the presidential race today.

By Ron Fournier
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Gary Bauer, a janitor's son who served in Ronald Reagan's White House and mounted a presidential bid of his own, has decided to drop out of the race, a source close to the conservative activist said Thursday.

The official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Bauer plans to announce the move at a news conference this morning.

Bauer is a well-established social conservative who fared well in presidential debates, needing front-runner George W. Bush on abortion and China policies. He also had some success raising money, primarily through a large network of small donors built during his work as a conservative activist in Washington.

However, Bauer had trouble carving out a constituency in a crowded field of GOP conservatives.

He could not climb above 1 percent in the critical New Hampshire primary. With his wife, Carol, at his side, he conceded that contest Tuesday night and said the voters of New Hampshire "have not endorsed me, but without hesitation I endorse them as being great citizens."

Bauer has struggled to even make a dent in national polls; he finished in fourth place in the Iowa caucuses, ahead of only Sen. Orrin Hatch of Utah, who has since dropped out of the race, and Sen. John McCain of Arizona, who did not campaign in Iowa at all.

"Gary is having a news conference on Friday. That's all we're saying about it," said spokesman Tim Goelein.

He would be the sixth Republican presidential candidate to drop out, leaving Bush, McCain, millionaire publisher Steve Forbes and former Ambassador Alan Keyes. Bush, Forbes and Keyes have had more success than Bauer drawing conservative votes.

CORRECTION

The Daily Iowan misquoted UI journalism professor Carolyn Dyer in the Feb. 2 article "Faculty group mixed on provost review." The article substituted the word "meritous" for "emeritus" in a quote. Dyer's objection to a professor emeritus serving on the provost review committee is that professors emeritus are repeatedly appointed to positions that should go to currently employed faculty.

Palestinians, Israelis deadlocked

Disputes over the terms for Israeli withdrawals in the West Bank send talks into "crisis."

By Ron Kampeas
Associated Press

EREZ CROSSING, Gaza Strip — Less than a month after one much-touted Israeli-Arab peace initiative crumbled, another dissolved Thursday into mutual recriminations — and the comprehensive Mideast peace Prime Minister Ehud Barak promised by year's end seems further away than ever.

Palestinians said peace talks were in "crisis" after Barak refused to budge on terms for an interim territory withdrawal during a tense two-hour summit with Yasser Arafat at this Israeli military outpost on the Israel-Gaza border.

It was the second peace blow for Barak in three weeks — talks with Syria went into deep freeze in mid-January — and he scrambled to deflect Palestinian talk of a dead end.

"I am convinced that this barrier will be overcome," Barak told senior officials of his Labor Party. "There is a deep interest by both sides."

The Palestinians want the pull-out from 6.1 percent of the West Bank outlined in an interim agreement signed in September to include populous Arab suburbs of Jerusalem. The Israelis refuse, at least for now.

"Once the confidence, credibility and integrity of the peace process become absent, the element of trust disappears, and both sides find themselves in a crisis situation. That's where we are now," lead Palestinian negotiator Saeb Erekat said in an interview.

Israel says it alone determines what land goes back in the withdrawals, although it will take Palestinian considerations into account.

Barak is concerned the Palestinians will use total control of the suburbs, currently under joint control, as the first stake in a claim to Jerusalem, which both sides claim as their capital.

Erekat said Arafat suggested using U.S. Mideast peace envoy Dennis Ross, who is in the region, as an arbitrator.

"We hope that through the good offices of the American administration ... we can restore the confidence and credibility," he said.

Barak's Foreign Minister David Levy rejected that idea, accusing the Palestinians of engineering the dispute in order to invite U.S. intervention.

"No outside force can do the work instead of us," he said, pledging that the pullout would go ahead next week as planned. "No one can do this instead of the sides."

Both the Israelis and Palestinians see President Clinton as eager for a legacy as his presidency winds down and thus likely to press Israel into concessions.

Erekat also accused Israel of wanting to delay a Feb. 13 deadline for an outline of a final status agreement, due to be in place by September.

Levy said Feb. 13 was "not sacred" but denied plans for a delay. Barak's office said marathon talks aimed at meeting the deadline would resume on Feb. 6.

A senior Palestinian official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the Palestinians are now operating under the assumption that Barak is shelving the talks to focus on reviving talks with Syria.

The U.S.-brokered talks with Syria broke down after Israel refused to meet a Syrian condition to withdraw to the border before the 1967 Mideast war, when Israel captured the strategic Golan Heights. Israel also balked at Syria's insistence on equivalent demilitarized zones.

Islamic militants in southern Lebanon have since stepped up their attacks on Israeli forces, killing three Israeli soldiers and a senior officer of an allied militia this week. Barak accused Syria, the main power broker in Lebanon, of allowing the violence to increase.

Britain may shut down Belfast Cabinet

The peace process stumbles as the IRA refuses to begin disarmament.

By Shawn Pogatchnik
Associated Press

BELFAST, Northern Ireland — Embarking on a risky strategy to save the peace process, Britain warned Thursday that it will strip power from Northern Ireland's new Protestant-Catholic administration unless the IRA quickly pledges to disarm.

Northern Ireland Secretary Peter Mandelson announced he would introduce a bill today that would allow London to reclaim the substantial authority it handed nine weeks ago to the province's four-party Cabinet. But the process could be stopped if the situation changes, he emphasized.

The crisis threatens the new administration that has given Northern Ireland a measure of local rule after years of direct rule by Britain.

Rendering the coalition powerless would increase the chances it could survive. Protestants have otherwise threatened to resign their posts over the IRA's refusal to disarm.

Mandelson appealed for the major Protestant party, the Ulster Unionists, to be patient as the British and Irish governments spend the next week trying to persuade the IRA to announce publicly that it will scrap its weapons.

Noting that Northern Ireland's 1998 peace accord made disarmament and the Cabinet's survival "interdependent," he declared: "We cannot partially implement the Good Friday agreement. It is all or it is nothing."

Mandelson emphasized he would be extremely reluctant to suspend the administration's powers, which would also mean suspending policy-coordinating committees between Northern Ireland and the Irish Republic, another important plank of the agreement. But he said that might be the only way "to preserve them from collapse."

As Mandelson spoke, Irish Prime Minister Bertie Ahern flew to Cornwall, in southwest England, to tell British Prime Minister Tony Blair about his daylong discussions in Dublin with officials of the IRA and its allied Sinn Fein Party.

In November, as part of an American-brokered deal, the Ulster Unionists dropped their demand for IRA disarmament before the Cabinet's formation and accepted Sinn Fein into two of the 12 posts — but in expectation that the IRA would finally start disarming.

WORLD BRIEF

Store floor collapses under bargain hunters

MADRID, Spain (AP) — The floor collapsed under a crush of bargain hunters Thursday in a store in southern Spain, sending dozens of shoppers and piles of debris plunging into the basement. At least 161 people were injured.

The collapse came as several hundred people jammed around a cash register to buy one of 36 armchairs on sale for $17.65, down from the regular price of $229.

The Muebles Peralta furniture store in the town of Dos Hermanas, on the outskirts of Seville, had opened at 10 a.m. for the sale. The floor collapsed approximately five minutes later.

At least 13 people were in serious condition, and 138 were hospitalized for less severe injuries, said Zacarias Cotan, a police spokesman in Seville. A 20-year-old woman had to have her crushed spleen and left kidney removed, while a pregnant woman suffered a broken pelvis.

Emergency workers said 32 square feet of floor gave way under excess weight and dropped shoppers and rubble 13 feet to the concrete basement.

"It felt as if you were standing and suddenly the floor disappeared," said Aureliano Garcia, 58, who went to the sale after hearing ads for it on the radio. "What I saw then was people screaming, old people with their legs fractured, bones twisted. It was a horrible spectacle."

UI campaign funds capped

Olsen complained that the elections board did not notify anyone, and it appeared to have made the decision in the last couple of weeks. She said the elections board should have acted on the decision to lower the cap after last year's election.

Brown said candidates who are able to raise $3,000 to fund their campaigns may be tempted to cheat by not filing with the Business Office.

But lowering the cap could also make the election board's job of tracking how much is spent a lot easier, too, Bygness said.

"We know how much it costs for ads and fliers," she said. "If someone has a blatant amount out there, it will be easier to see who is spending more."

Applications and petitions for candidates are currently available in the University Box Office; they are due on Feb. 10. The petition requires 500 UI student signatures, which will be verified by the Registrar's Office and the election board, Bygness said.

In addition to getting petitions signed, a slate must be formed with four undergraduates and two graduate students accompanying the candidates for president and vice president.

Candidates may begin campaigning on Feb. 15, after the first UISG candidate meeting, Bygness said.

into the post-season now," said Greg Doonan, a resident assistant of pediatrics at the UI Hospitals and Clinics.

The performance of some starting players was a big factor in the win, said UI junior Matt Nanninga.

"I think the play of Jaacks really sealed the win. He's definitely NBA material. I'd say things look good for us in the Big Ten tournament," he said.

But not everyone was enthusiastic about the Hawkeye win. UI junior and Kansas fan Joel Sanderson cringed at the sound of the buzzer finalizing the game.

"It sucks that Kansas lost. They just blew it in the last few minutes," he said.

The latest Hawkeye win now has some UI students optimistic about the rest of the season.

"The win is a big momentum builder for us and should get us into the playoffs," said UI junior Ryan Brune.

Austrian People's Party, sign a statement renouncing the nation's Nazi past and promising to respect European values.

Haider won international notoriety — and later apologized — for statements praising Adolf Hitler's "orderly employment" policies and lauding veterans of the Waffen SS as "decent people of good character."

Although Haider will remain governor of Carinthia state and hold no Cabinet post, he has a strong grip on the Freedom Party. Critics doubt whether Schüssel, whose hold on his own party is less firm, can control the mercurial Haider.

The declaration that the two leaders signed did not specifically refer to Haider's previous comments. However, Haider and Schüssel pledged to work for a democratic Austria where "xenophobia, anti-Semitism and racism have no place."

UI students prefer being cold to coat hassle

COATLESS

NIU junior Sara Miller said that once it was so cold that a friend wearing a tank top got frostbite.

"We were walking to a bar 15 minutes away ... It was 32 degrees, and I kept telling her to wear a coat," she said.

The sometimes-high temperatures in downtown establishments are also too much for UI junior Alonzo Cunningham, who said another reason he braves the cold without a coat is because he doesn't like paying the approximately $1 coat check fee. Cunningham prefers to wear vests or longsleeved shirts to fight the cold weather.

Vito's, 118 E. College St.; the Union Bar, 121 E. College St.; One-Eyed Jakes, 18 1/2 S. Clinton St.; and the Fieldhouse Restaurant & Bar, 111 E. College St., are the only large downtown bars that have coat checks.

The Sports Column, 12 S. Dubuque St., had a coat check last year but has yet to organize one this year, said Chris Oldero, a UI senior and Sports Column bouncer.

"Most of the time, people put their coats in a booth with a friend or wrap it around their waists," he said.

Some patrons just don't want to spend time thinking about a jacket all night, said UI sophomore Briana Roadruck.

"I'd rather just walk to the bars and be cold than have to worry about a coat all night," she said. "I don't want to lose it, and someone might steal it."

UI sophomore Rachel Owens learned that lesson the hard way. One night out with friends, she tried to grab her coat from a pile, only to find it was the only one missing.

"I freaked out. I don't know, what do you do?" Owens said. "Now I'm more careful what I do with my coat. I try to find someone I know to hold onto it."

Iowa City adds up cost of underage drinking

Despite the police department's having received a grant from the governor's Traffic and Safety Bureau to pay officers overtime to enforce the drinking laws, Harney said, issuing underage-drinking charges is not of supreme concern.

"I wouldn't say it's a priority," he said. "The downtown area is a problem with alcohol-related issues. We have many instances where people are injured severely."

The money the city receives from tickets goes to the city's general fund, which is used for operational purposes, Harney said.

Lehman said the city is unable to do "a really good job" to control underage drinking because of a lack of police officers.

UI senior Teesta Roy said the findings show that the city is doing its job. The police are showing concern for students by enforcing the law, she said.

The city's actions are met with less approval by others.

"In my opinion, they spend too much on an utterly worthless task," said UI sophomore Kris Hull. "If people are going to drink, they're going to drink."

Drinking has been prominent in Iowa City both as an issue and a recreational activity. The crackdown on such activity seems understandable in the big picture, said UI junior Joe Stansbery.

"I'd expect it to be higher, considering the issue pops up all the time," he said. "For the town that Iowa City is, it seems pretty reasonable."

CITY BRIEF

Man hit by bus near UIHC

A man was hit by a Coralville Transit Bus near the intersection of Newton Road and Woolfe Avenue shortly before 8:30 p.m. Thursday, authorities said.

The man, whose name is being withheld by the UI Department of Public Safety at the family's request, was transported to the UI Hospitals and Clinics. His condition has not been released, but he sustained multiple injuries, said Public Safety Lt. Lucy Wiederholt.

He is not a UI student, Wiederholt said, and it was not known if the man was leaving the Iowa-Kansas men's basketball game.

The man was walking eastbound on

Newton Road in the westbound lane approximately two feet from the curb when he was struck by a westbound bus, she said.

Pat Burrier, the driver of the bus, said she was going approximately 5 miles per hour when the accident occurred. She has been driving a bus for 23 years, she said.

"I saw people walking on the side, and then the next thing I heard was a big thud on the side of the bus," Burrier said.

The man was on the ground about half-way between the front and back wheels of the bus, she said.

"His face was pretty bad and bloody," she said.

Burrier is a "very reliable" driver, said Coralville Transit Manager Roger Fisher, but he declined further comment on Burrier's driving record.

The accident remains under investigation by Public Safety.

Rebels continue to flee Grozny

While Russian leaders take credit for the exodus, Chechen leaders say they have the upper hand.

By Lyoma Turpalov
Associated Press

ALKHAN-KALA, Russia — Rebels fleeing the smoking ruins of Chechnya's capital pushed through snowy forests Thursday toward the breakaway republic's southern mountains, hoping to join comrades in a guerrilla war against Russian forces.

The rebels' exodus this week from Grozny — the biggest political prize in the 5-month-old Chechnya war — has boosted morale among Russian troops. But a rebel leader claimed that by fleeing Grozny, the rebels had strengthened their hand.

"It was much better for the Russians when we were concentrated in Grozny," said Khizir Khachukayev, a Chechen commander. "Now that we are going to be in the mountains, they will face more trouble."

Thousands of rebel fighters are believed to be based in the mountains.

Chechen fighters have been slipping out of Grozny since Monday, despite Russian claims to have prevented a major exodus. The latest big group of rebels fled overnight and arrived in nearby Alkhan-Kala early Thursday. They then slipped through Russian lines to head for rebel strongholds in the mountains, Alkhan-Kala residents said.

Almost all the rebels had left Alkhan-Kala by daylight. The Russians then took control of the village. It was unclear what happened to the hundreds of wounded rebels who reportedly took refuge there. Some were believed to be badly maimed or moved.

Approximately 2,000 fighters escaped Grozny Monday and Tuesday, and smaller groups left Wednesday. But hundreds were killed — including some top Chechen commanders — when they stumbled into a minefield Monday and were mowed down by Russian artillery, rebels said.

The military at first had sought to play down the story; it has now begun claiming that the rebels' flight and alleged annihilation were part of a Russian trap.

"What happened is the result of painstaking planning and brilliant operations," Sergei Yastrzhembsky, the Kremlin official in charge of Russia's information campaign on Chechnya, was quoted as saying by the ITAR-Tass news agency.

WORLD BRIEF

Pakistan sets up system to guide nuke policy

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Pakistan said Thursday it has established a control system for handling its nuclear-weapons program that puts the head of government — now Gen. Pervez Musharraf — in charge. Pakistan demonstrated its nuclear capability with a series of underground explosions in May 1998 in response to similar tests by India.

Critics worry that Pakistan and India don't have clear command-and-control systems for handling nuclear weapons. The military has maintained control of Pakistan's weapons program; previously, the authority of civilian political leaders was not spelled out.

Pakistan's new National Command Authority will be led by the head of government and will consist of top civilian and military leaders who make decisions about deployment and use of nuclear weapons, an official announcement said. This appears to indicate the overall authority for the country's nuclear weapons program would be in the hands of a civilian ruler should democracy be restored, as Musharraf has promised.

The two hostile South Asian neighbors have fought three wars since British rule of the subcontinent ended in 1947.

EDITOR WANTED

An aggressive, talented individual is sought as editor of The Daily Iowan, Iowa City's largest newspaper, with an editorial staff of more than 60 young professionals, an editorial budget exceeding $300,000 and circulation of 20,500. The Board of Student Publications incorporated and the publisher of The Daily Iowan will soon interview candidates for the position of editor for the term beginning June 1, 2000 and ending May 31, 2001.

The editor of The Daily Iowan must have strong journalistic abilities, skills in management and a clear sense of editorial responsibility. The board will weigh heavily scholarship, previous news writing and editing experience (including work at The Daily Iowan or another daily newspaper), and proven ability to lead, organize and inspire a staff.

Applicants must be enrolled in a UI undergraduate or graduate degree program. Candidates must submit completed applications and supporting materials by noon, Friday, February 25, 2000.

Tobacco money should fund teachers and schools

The Iowa Legislature faces two important decisions this year: what to do about attracting new teachers to the state, and how to spend the state's share of the national tobacco settlement. The best way to solve both of these issues is to follow an adage: Kill two birds with one stone.

According to a recent article in the Des Moines Register, the state will receive $1.9 billion from the settlement over the next 25 years. For the fiscal year beginning July 1, the state will receive $137 million. Many people, including a group called Tobacco Free Iowa, wish to see the money recycled into anti-smoking efforts, particularly aimed at teens. Indeed, education is where this money needs to go, but instead of focusing on one issue that plagues our schools, we should address them all.

Iowa is well regarded for its educational institutions. In a guest editorial for the Register, UNI President Robert D. Koop identified several positives about the state's educational system that are worth repeating for the sake of this argument. More than 90 percent of Iowa's students perform above the national average, and Iowa maintains one of the lowest drop-out rates in the nation. The average state ACT score is 22, third in the nation. These numbers are no doubt attributable to the fine teachers and faculty we have here in Iowa.

As more and more teachers near retirement age, however, and as Iowa faces competition from other states for its own graduates because of its salary woes, those numbers are in jeopardy. Gov. Tom Vilsack proposes a refundable tax credit for teachers new to an area such as math or science (especially hard hit by a lack of teachers).

This is laudable, but is not enough. The state should consider ways of putting the tobacco money into improving not only teacher's salaries but the schools themselves. One day, the tobacco money will stop rolling in, but 25 years should be enough for Iowa to solve its educational problems.

Teachers are our most valuable resource. Nurturing them will pay dividends for our students, our state and our future.

Date-rape drug legislation could promote awareness

Increasing the punishment for possessing or distributing GHB should increase awareness of "date-rape drugs" and help prosecute their users.

The U.S. House passed the bill against GHB, or gamma hydroxybutyrate, Monday. The Senate passed a similar proposal in November. President Clinton is expected to sign the legislation to increase the penalties for possessing and using the "date-rape drug."

There have been 58 deaths related to the use of GHB since 1990 and more than 5,700 overdoses. Five deaths related to the drug's abuse have been reported in Michigan. GHB is a colorless and odorless drug.

If slipped into a drink, it is undetectable and can take just 20 minutes to make a victim unconscious. Most people affected by the drug have no memory of the incident or events afterward. GHB can disappear from the body without a trace after 24 hours, making detection of the drug — and prosecution of criminals who use the drug on victims — difficult.

It is good that the House passed a law to regulate GHB. Rape and the drugs used to commit it have great relevance on college campuses and elsewhere. Eliminating a drug that contributes to crimes and death is a commendable congressional action. The only way the bill could have been improved is if it had been introduced sooner.

Michigan passed a bill in 1998 making GHB illegal. The Legislature should be congratulated for tackling an issue two years before the federal government. The use of these drugs is increasing and, by approaching the issue early, the Legislature made its commitment to preventing drug abuse known.

Still, passing legislation for GHB or other "date-rape drugs" cannot totally prevent the distribution, use and abuse of the drug.

Education is the key to stopping the use of GHB and other drugs, while laws can only allow prosecution of crimes that have been committed.

People should be aware that "date-rape drugs" are in circulation and know how to avoid falling victim to them. By promoting crisis centers and other resources for victims of these drugs, people might be more comfortable reporting cases of suspected abuse and the sexual assault that can come with it.

The bill places emphasis on the deaths related to the use of GHB, not the sexual assaults that often result from the drug. It is important for all the negative aspects of GHB to be publicized, not just deaths.

Congress can easily come to a decision about a drug with such obviously bad results — the bill passed in the House 339-2. More issues should be approached with the attitude of cooperation that allowed the passage of the GHB bill.

Ideally, this bill will help stop GHB use in its tracks, before it becomes more prevalent than it already has. In any case, the bill will help law enforcement take appropriate action against GHB abusers. For this reason Clinton should sign the bill into law.

Iowa City stricken with sign-stealing epidemic

There is no parking in the alley that runs behind the N200 wing of Hillcrest dorm. At least, that's what the sign says. The sign must once have been stolen so that it could now hang in one of your average dorm-room windows.

There's nothing wrong with a well-placed stolen sign, at least from an editorial standpoint, but Public Safety might disagree — and that's why perching a sign in plain view outside Hillcrest may not be the brightest brain-child your dorm has ever housed.

In this here city of Iowa City (that seems a little redundant, doesn't it? But I'm sure that's how the signs label this fair city of yours and mine), fines for possession of stolen signs can be as much as $1,500. Ouch! There's some beer money down the drain.

The problem of sign theft is definitely not a new one, and it's not by any means confined to the confines of the city of Iowa City. Bugs Bunny could probably tell us that they still have the problem in Toon Town, too.

Did you ever see those old Warner Brothers cartoons where good ole Bugs Bunny has just finished painting a bench? Bugs, always the consummate humanitarian, decides to inform any prospective bench-sitters that the bench is wet with paint, so he proceeds to paint a sign that reads "Wet Paint."

Always the consummate humanitarian, Bugs then decides to let everybody know that the "Wet Paint" sign is indeed wet with paint, so he paints another

"Wet Paint" sign in wet paint. Well, you get the idea.

Not to bore anybody, the humane illustrators of His Bunny-ness only force us to watch Bugs paint 10 more of these self-deprecating signs until there is a soft dissolve and we see the trail of wet "Wet Paint" signs now fading into the horizon.

Apparently, there is something of an epidemic of sign theft in the city of Iowa City, and if Bugs had done his benchmark in our lovely college town, all his signs would have been sign-lifted between the hours of 2 a.m. and dawn.

But judging by the very creative uses I've seen stolen signs put to, I remain confident that college students should be the rightful owners of the plethora of signs breaking up the scenery of the city. Signs make great decorations for bland dorm room walls, can be used as TV dinner tabletops, and yes, they can even be used as sleds on snowy days.

Meanwhile, other uncaptured signs still remain strewn haphazardly about the city of Iowa City. In a city where there is positively no parking, why do we seem to have more "No Parking" signs than any other metropolitan area in the continental United States?

And there's a sign on the south wall of Currier designating that fearless dorm as a nuclear fallout shelter. What a necessity that sign must have seemed to a society on the brink of turning its chronometers to the first day of a new millennium, a society frightened by the prospect of a universal computer virus that would instantly put an end to all life on earth.

Thankfully, in our present era, we have long since overcome such juvenile fears that necessitate the construction of subterranean shelters stockpiled with packs of Easy Mac and Ramen Noodles and, of course, completed by signs that read, "The End is Near."

But by far, the most practical sign I've ever seen outside of Toon Town reads, "Do not steal this sign" with a double-sided arrow pointing to the signs to either side of it. You can guess what the signs to either side would read.

Somewhere down that long line of identical signs, after a soft dissolve, one lone sign, standing in the center of all the others, would inform us "There is a $1,500 fine for sign theft in the city of Iowa City."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

We count very well, thank you

Democracy is best served when citizens participate actively. Official caucus reports indicate that 4,787 Democrats participated in Johnson County's 51 Democratic caucuses. Those Democrats not only expressed their support for presidential candidates, they discussed today's political issues with their friends and neighbors, and they chose party leaders from among themselves.

And contrary to hyperbolic wire-service headlines, we count very well, thank you.

Somebody's watching us

Big Brother is watching you. It may not be 1984, but hey, the government is a little slow. So, Mr. Meier and like-minded individuals, you don't think our government runs a "big brother campaign?" Have I got news for you, fellow sheep.

Should I begin with the new device the FBI and other law-enforcement officials recently acquired that gives the user the power to tap any phone line and pick it up on FM radio, just by pointing it at the phone line outside your home?

Did I forget to mention, unlike other wire-tapping laws, law-enforcement officials don't need a warrant to use this device? Or maybe I should let you know that the FBI pushed a bill requiring all communication services to make their systems (phone, computer, etc.) easier for the FBI to intercept.

Ludicrous? Am I giving our government too much credit?

Then, perhaps, you might want to look up some facts on ECHELON, the computerized system created by the National Security Agency, which intercepts and examines every phone call, fax and e-mail that is sent virtually anywhere in the world. Do you think I'm making this up? Tell that to Australia's government or several British Intelligence officials involved who have confirmed the existence of ECHELON in late 1999. Or look it up yourself.

So you don't think little cameras on our streets, monitoring red light runners, are a breach of our privacy? I'm sure Glasgow, Scotland, residents said the same thing before the government put 24-hour surveillance cameras on their streets.

Big Brother is watching you, but are you watching him?

From Africa to a bridge too far

The spring exhibitions at the Museum of Art will include a wide variety of works.

By Anne Kapler
 The Daily Iowan

Locals can escape the snowy Iowa winter with a journey to tropical Africa and Japan at a public reception at the UI Museum of Art Friday from 5:30-7:30 p.m.

The reception will give visitors an opportunity to enjoy refreshments and be among the first to see the spring-semester exhibitions.

The new exhibits — which include collections of traditional African art, prints and paper stencils from Japan, American prints from the last 50 years, and models of bridges built by the artist who designed the North Dubuque Street skywalk — will allow visitors to learn not only about art history but about different cultures, said Kathleen Edwards, the museum's curator of prints, drawings and photographs.

"Reading Meaning: Graphic Symbols in African Art" is a collection of masks, figures, textiles and pots adorned with abstract and figurative symbols known as ideograms, said Emily Vermillion, the museum's curator of education.

Continuing on the museum's journey around the world, two exhibitions bring artwork from different periods of Japanese history. "Carved Paper: The Art of the Japanese Stencil" is a collection of intricately cut paper stencils, called katagami, that have been used to dye fabrics for more than 900 years. Also on display are several kimonos dyed with this technique. This exhibition is a unique opportunity to see a traditional Japanese art, said Vermillion.

"I don't think a lot of people would have an opportunity to see this unless they traveled to Japan," she said. "This is something that's almost like a lost art."

The second exhibit from Japan, "Cultural Pleasures and the Natural World: Japanese Prints from the Edo Period," is a display of popular woodblock prints from the 17th century through the early 19th century. The prints were collected and shared by common people during the Edo period — similar to the way that people collect comic books today.

The prints were influential not only in Japan but around the world; in France, they spurred imitations called Japonism. This influence will be explored in a mini-course at 10 a.m. Saturday. The course, which is free to the public, will include a tour of the gallery, an explanation of the prints and a bagel breakfast.

In a nearby gallery, a timeline of American printmaking is on display in "From Hayter to Pettibon: American Workshop Prints." The works trace the development of the print workshop from the 1940s through today.

Finally, the museum will feature "Siah Armajani," an exhibition of drawings and models by the well-known artist and designer of the Dubuque Street skywalk. A scale model of the Iowa City bridge is on display, as well as models from other Armajani projects from around the world.

Dressing up Ireland with salsa and Cajun

The Mollys puts eclectic in capital letters, proving that Mexico borders Ireland.

By Akwi Nji
 The Daily Iowan

The Mollys, a five-member eclectic band, will salsa things up in Cedar Rapids Saturday with a mix of Mexican notes, a pinch of Celtic lyrics and a dash of Cajun beats. The Tucson, Ariz., group is scheduled to hit CSPA, 1103 Third St. S.E., for an 8 p.m. performance, totting instruments ranging from accordions, mandolins and acoustic guitars to tin whistles, harmonicas and bouzoukis.

After starting as a three-member female group, the band now consists of Nancy McCallion, Catherine Zavala, Kevin Schramm, Dan Sorenson and Gary Mackender.

Though stage time was limited to Irish gigs and St. Patrick's Day concerts in the early years of the group, a Tex-Mex influence has added "more folk-rock, country and Mexican sounding stuff," McCallion said.

DI: How has the music evolved since the group first started recording in 1990?

McCallion: We've added the bass, drums and accordion since then. That kind of made it more rowdy, more lively. Along with that, we do a lot more country and Mexican music now.

DI: Do you ever run into problems trying to maintain both the Mexican and Irish styles in the music?

McCallion: Not really, because I think that purists who are in a traditional form of music would listen to us and say, "That's not traditional." Some people would have a problem with that, so we don't really like to label ourselves as being "traditional" in the way that other bands are because we really don't try to be. We're just trying to bring all our influences together to create our own sound.

DI: What themes are predominant in the lyrics that you write?

McCallion: I write in the narrative folk-song style where characters tell stories about something that happened in their lives. A common theme would be an individual struggling within society — maybe a cultural problem.

DI: What kind of an audience is drawn to your music?

McCallion: It's really diverse. It depends on the venues. We play festivals in the summertime, where we play for a pretty young audience, the kind that dance in front of the stage. But then we'll also do the folk circuit, which is what CSPA is a part of, and then we tend to play for an older audience, which is more of a sit-down thing. Then our audience is from, like, late 20s to 50s.

DI: What kind of an audience are you anticipating in Cedar Rapids?

McCallion: It is more of a sit-down venue, but sometimes people dance on the sides, and that's always fun.

WRESTLING

Wrestlers look to maintain dominance

■ The top-ranked Hawkeyes will face No. 5 Oklahoma State in Carver-Hawkeye Arena tonight at 7.

By Jeremy Schnitker
The Daily Iowan

In his three-year tenure, Iowa wrestling coach Jim Zalesky has accomplished nearly everything a coach can accomplish, except for one thing.

He's never beaten Oklahoma State.

Considering all Zalesky has achieved as a coach, he's never been paid the dues he rightly deserves. But according to 133-pound Hawkeye Eric Juergens, that should all end tonight when the No. 5 Cowboys come to town.

"We want to prove that we're back and we want to wrestle hard," Juergens said. "Everybody's been saying that Iowa lost its dominance since Cable stepped down and that we can't be dominate anymore. I think Zalesky is going to take our team just as high if not higher."

Everybody's been saying that Iowa lost its dominance since Cable stepped down.

... I think Zalesky is going to take our team just as high, if not higher.

— Eric Juergens

The dual, scheduled to begin at 7 p.m. at Carver-Hawkeye Arena, will showcase two of the most prestigious wrestling programs in the history of college wrestling.

The two teams have won 49 titles between them since the NCAA began recording champions in 1928. No team other than Iowa or Oklahoma State has won a championship since 1988.

The Cowboys (9-3), led by coach John Smith, have rivaled Iowa in nearly every race for the national title since the 1970's. This year is no different.

Oklahoma State brings a strong lineup to Iowa City, and Zalesky said his Hawkeyes have reason to worry.

"Smith has done a good job down there," Zalesky said. "They've wrestled above everybody's expectations this year. They're a good team. We have to be ready for them."

The Cowboys bring a posse of No. 4-ranked wrestlers to Iowa City. They boast Dan Cormier at

Hawks KO Kansas for second year in a row

By Wayne Drehs
The Daily Iowan

This time, Iowa's fans got a chance to celebrate.

One year after ending Kansas' 62-game home winning streak, Iowa shocked the Jayhawks again, using pinpoint second-half shooting and stingy, balls-out defense to upset the 15th-ranked team in the country, 77-69 in sold-out Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

As the final buzzer sounded, The Hawks Nest, Iowa's student section, flocked to the court in a nationally-televised scene of complete mayhem. It was the first time fans had charged the court since March of 1996, following a 56-52 win over Purdue.

"It was special to have the fans on the floor," senior guard Ryan Luehrmann said. "That was the first time it happened since I've been here. It was great to give them that gift. Some of them might have been a little under the influence, but the rowdier they are, the better."

Iowa (10-10) hardly made it easy on itself in the game's final moments. A missed lay-up by Rod Thompson, a botched dunk by Rob Griffin, and five missed free-throws kept Kansas (16-5) within two possessions, but they wouldn't get closer.

A career-high 21 points by Kansas freshman Nick Collison, who grew up in Iowa Falls cheering for the Hawkeyes, went for naught. Collison and fellow Iowa prep star Kirk Hinrich were jostled and harassed by the Hawkeye faithful, greeted by chants of, "Sellout."

"Nick is a great player, he's going to be tremendous," Iowa senior Jacob Jaacks said. "He really stepped up and has quite a future ahead of him."

Iowa trailed by four at the break, but roared back in the second half thanks to a crisp half-court offense. The Hawkeyes' ability to penetrate and execute quick ball reversal left several wide-open shots, most of which fell. Three of Iowa's first four baskets in the second half were threes, which energized the crowd and eliminated Kansas' lead.

Later in the half, a pair of threes by Kyle Galloway and another three by Thompson keyed an 11-5 run that gave Iowa a lead it wouldn't lose. While the defense allowed nothing

READ, THEN RECYCLE

The best recruiting pitch yet

■ National television has been a valuable assistant coach for Iowa throughout the season.

Savor the feeling of rushing the court, Hawkeye fans. Iowa won't be underdogs much longer.

Maybe it was the outstanding defensive play. Maybe it was the ability to rise up against ranked teams.

Or maybe it was the guy in the Hawk's Nest decked out in a bright yellow leisure suit.

Whatever the case may be, Iowa's two-hour nationally televised recruiting commercial disguised as a basketball win against Kansas put Iowa officially on the college basketball map.

Connecticut? Television pundits could dismiss that game as an early season fluke.

Indiana? Critics could dismiss Iowa's tough play in that one as Steve Alford simply getting his troops up for a game with great personal implications.

But a third nationally televised

Athleticism, cynicism, and pierced body parts; let the X Games begin

■ Dangerous events and colorful competitors make the X-Games a hit on TV.

WEST DOVER, Vt. — Among the choices snowboarder Jason Evans had was going fakey, switch 900, switch McTwist, or big air.

The course, hewn from the snow-blown slopes of Mount Snow, involves big hits, rails and table tops. Because these are just practice runs for boardercross slopestyle, he chooses big air, which is just what it sounds like: air between the snowboarder and the ski slope. Lots of it.

"The hope here is to beat everybody," says Evans, who grew up 25 miles east of here. "I like the head-to-head competition. It's just an exciting feeling."

In conversation, Evans, who is past North American champion on the snowboard half-pipe, is soft-spoken and reflective. Not on the slopes. Like the snowmaking guns, the music of Rage Against The Machine blankets the slopes and provides a throbbing soundtrack for snowboarding with a swagger.

Loud, brash, hip and edgy is the rule of thumb. This is not the Olympics. This is the made-for-TV sport. This is the X Games.

"The money, the TV, the exposure, it's definitely more exciting," says Chris Davenport of Aspen, Colo. "This is alternative sport and it's hyped, exposed, and packaged in a dramatic way."

The hype, the exposure, and the package comes courtesy of ESPN. In fact, the entire concept of an Olympics for alternative sports comes courtesy of the Bristol, Conn.-based all-sports cable network. In June 1995, ESPN held the first "Extreme Games" involving windsurfing, bungee-jumping and mountain biking. Eighteen months later, a winter version of the games was held, showcasing snowboarding and snow mountain biking.

Hawkeyes look to upset No. 12 Minnesota

Women look to improve on balance beam during their competition with the Golden Gophers at home.

By Molly Thomas
The Daily Iowan

Herky's coming to the Fieldhouse Sunday, and he's bringing some friends.

"The Herky Invitational" is the theme for the Iowa women's gymnastics meet Sunday in the North Gym of the UI Field House at 2 p.m. Herky and seven of his mascot friends will be promoting and marketing the event, as well as cheering for the Hawkeyes.

Iowa will face the 12th-ranked Minnesota. According to coach Mike Lorenzen, Minnesota has enough depth and veteran competitors to force Iowa to step up and work hard.

"This is the strongest level of competition that we have seen since UCLA," Lorenzen said. "We are just going to try to stay focused on ourselves and compete our meet. That will definitely make a difference."

Last year, Minnesota dominated the teams' meetings. The Gophers, then ranked No. 8, swept the top four spots of the competition in Minneapolis. When the Gophers visited Iowa City, they competed by themselves. The entire Iowa team was withheld from competition against Minnesota, pending investigation into violations of the team alcohol policy.

The Hawkeyes have struggled during the last two meets on the balance beam rotation and the team will need to nail the beam on Sunday in order to stay in contention.

According to Lorenzen, the team is making some positive steps on each event, but does not have the level of consistency and execution that they need yet.

"We want to be able to go 24 out of 24 routines and we only hit 19 last weekend," said Lorenzen. "If we go 23 out of 24 routines in this meet but don't get the win, I am still going to be very happy."

Iowa has been working on staying focused and building confidence through a sports psychology program. Lorenzen said that if he can get the team to believe in themselves, then they can compete with anyone.

Senior Courtney Burke, who was the top scorer for Iowa against Minnesota last year, said her confidence has not been where it should be. She would really like to step it up and perform for the team.

"I have a good feeling about this meet," Burke said. "We are really prepared. If we just stick together, have confidence and believe in ourselves I think we can do it."

Cleveland falls at Rolex

Iowa's No. 1 player still has a chance to have a good finish in the national singles tournament.

By Lisa Colonna
The Daily Iowan

Iowa tennis player Tyler Cleveland lost in the first round of the National Rolex Tournament Thursday.

Cleveland, ranked No. 24 in the nation, lost in three sets to Virginia's Brian Vahaly 6-3, 2-6, 6-3. Vahaly is seeded third in the 32-player tournament.

"I'm fairly disappointed," Cleveland said. "I felt I should have won the match, but I had too many unforced errors. He was very consistent."

Cleveland said he got off to a slow start in the first set and had to fight back throughout the set. In the second, Cleveland got ahead early and stayed ahead. "The third set was close," Cleveland said. "He broke my serve at 2-3 and he beat me 6-3. He's a really solid baseline player and he's really quick."

Vahaly, who is in his third year with the Cavaliers, advanced to the finals of the Reebok/Intercollegiate Tennis Association Men's All-American Championships in the fall. He was the first ACC player to advance to the finals. Cleveland, a junior, entered the tournament as Big Ten Singles Champion and the No. 1-ranked player in Region IV.

Starting today, Cleveland begins play in the consolation round. Depending on how he fares, he may return for the Hawkeyes' dual against Western Michigan Sunday. "I still have a chance to make this a good tournament and beat some good guys," Cleveland said.

Hawkeyes may have to do without Cleveland

MEN'S TENNIS

The Hawkeyes may face Western Michigan without Tyler Cleveland, who's in the National Rolex Tournament.

By Molly Thomas
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's tennis team may have to compete without its best player when Western Michigan comes calling Sunday.

Iowa junior Tyler Cleveland, the team's No. 1 singles player, will be playing in the National Rolex Tournament. Cleveland lost in the first round of the tournament Thursday, but will start competition in the consolation round today. Depending on how well the junior does, he may not make it back for the meet, which begins in the Recreational Building at 11 a.m.

Western Michigan has already beaten two teams in the Big Ten lineup. The Broncos are particularly strong in doubles, an area Iowa has struggled with this year.

"With or without Tyler this is going to be a big test," Houghton said. "We are definitely going to have to take a big step up from the last meet."

Last week, the Hawkeyes swept Northern Illinois in their home opener. Iowa will use the same lineup this week and redshirt freshman Hunter Skogman will move up if Cleveland does not compete.

Since this is Skogman's first year of competition, he is eager to improve his skills. "In order for me to personally improve, I just need to get more match experience," Skogman said.

The Hawkeyes have been working hard on gaining consistency and maintaining it throughout the entire season. According to sophomore Petar Mandic, the team needs to have hard work throughout the season both on and off the court.

"I think we are a solid team this year," Mandic said. "We have lost to Western Michigan in the last two years, but I think we should just try to be as confident as we can no matter who we are playing."

As his team heads into a busy season, Houghton would like to see improved performances out of his players on Sunday.

"I need to have the guys play consistently well in back to back meets so that they can be really strong by the time we get to Big Ten's," said Houghton. "I really want them to step up and make some big changes."

Gymnasts anxiously await home opener

After several weeks on the road, the men's gymnastics team opens its home season tonight against UIC.

By Melinda Mawdsley
The Daily Iowan

Finally, the night the Iowa men's gymnastics team has been waiting for.

After competing on the road for the last several weeks, the Hawkeyes are ready to open the 2000 home season tonight at 7 p.m. in the North Gym of the UI Field House.

Iowa coach Tom Dunn and his gymnasts are excited to compete in front of their home fans. "We haven't come together as a team yet," said sophomore Andy Thornton. "I'm looking forward to this home meet. It can give us that spark."

The No. 4 Hawkeyes will be favored in tonight's meet against No. 13 Illinois-Chicago. Iowa finished ahead of the Flames earlier this season in the Windy City Invitational.

Senior Todd Strada said Iowa can't overestimate its competition.

"They are improving every year," Strada said. "We're an excellent home team. Hopefully we'll have a good meet, and it will carry over to Sunday."

The Hawkeyes (1-1, 1-1) will travel to the Windy City for a return match with the same Illinois-Chicago (0-2) team Sunday at 2 p.m. Dunn said both teams needed to schedule a home meet, thus the unusual arrangement. The back-to-back meets versus the Flames is something Thornton thinks Iowa can use to its benefit.

"Friday, we can focus on putting on a good show and getting good team scores," he said. "Sunday, we can play around with the lineup."

Iowa is fresh off its first team victory last weekend against Minnesota. The Hawkeyes won four events. Iowa freshman Cameron Schick was one of Iowa's champions, tying sophomore Shane de Freitas for top honors on the vault.

"I have a lot of confidence," said Schick. "I already have three meets under my belt. I think it will be fun to compete at home."

Strada took the all-around and horizontal bar titles, but he's not satisfied with where he or the team are at yet.

"I'm pleased with the progress both individually and as a team, but there's plenty of room for improvement," Strada said.

Both coaches and athletes said the Hawkeyes are gradually making improvements and are poised for a great performance.

"It's always a little easier to compete at home," Dunn said. "Everyone's looking forward to it. I think we'll have our best meet, translating into our best scores."

ROAD SPORTS REPORT

Women's Tennis

This weekend: The UI women's tennis team travels on Saturday to compete against Florida State. The Hawkeyes will also compete against Vanderbilt on Sunday. Both contests will be played in Nashville, Tenn.. Both matches begin at 11 a.m.

On the competition: The Vanderbilt team is ranked No. 15, while Florida State is ranked No. 19. This reflects Iowa's new bulked up schedule for the season. Coach Paul Wardlaw said the tougher competition will allow for quicker improvement.

Revenge factor: The match with FSU was scheduled before last season's NCAA appearance by the Hawkeyes, where Iowa upset FSU 5-4 in the first round of the tournament. Wardlaw looks for the Seminoles to be anxious to meet the Hawkeyes once again.

On Iowa: The Hawkeyes will have the same lineup as last week's match against DePaul. Senior Shera Wiegler will compete in the top spot for Iowa.

Coach's comment: "These matches will allow for us to identify our strengths and weaknesses pretty early in the season," said Wardlaw. "These are two

Men's Swimming

This weekend: The UI men's swimming team travels to Evanston, Ill., Saturday, to take on the Northwestern Wildcats. The meet begins at 2 p.m. It will be Iowa's last Big Ten meet of the season.

On Northwestern: The Wildcats and Hawkeyes are evenly matched in most areas. Coach John Davey said if the Wildcats have any advantage, it's the location of the meet. Other than that, the meet is up for grabs.

On Iowa: The Hawkeyes have swam fast times recently leading up to the Big Ten championships later this month. Iowa's motivation lies in picking up their elusive first conference win of the season.

Coach's comment: Davey said this will be one of the Hawkeyes' most competitive meets this season.

"We're pretty evenly matched up," Davey said. "I think our performance against Penn State will help us a lot against Northwestern. This team has confidence in itself and they know they can compete."

Lewis unaware of killings

ATLANTA — Ray Lewis was unaware two men had been stabbed when the Pro Bowl linebacker and others left a post-Super Bowl party in a limousine, according to his lawyer.

Lewis' lawyer, Ed Garland, said the player didn't know about the stabbing of Richard Lollar, 24, and Jacinth "Shorty"

Baker, 21, until he heard news reports hours later.

"When he left that scene, he did not know a stabbing had taken place," Garland said Thursday. "He did not have a knife, he did not use a knife, he did not engage in a fight, he did not promote in any way a fight."

Lewis, 24, is charged with two counts of murder in the slayings early Monday outside a lounge in Atlanta.

Vermont hazing inquiry flawed

■ The University of Vermont's hockey season was cancelled after hazing of a freshman occurred.

By Wilson Ring
Associated Press

MONTPELIER, Vt. — The University of Vermont failed to properly investigate allegations the men's hockey team hazed freshmen players by forcing them to drink alcohol and perform degrading acts, Attorney General William Sorrell said Thursday.

Virtually all of the allegations leveled against the team by a former goalie were true, Sorrell said at a news conference announcing the results of his office's six-week investigation into the episode.

"UVM's investigation of the alleged hazing was insufficiently thorough to ascertain the truth and, as designed or conducted, served primarily to buttress the university's position in the event of the filing of a civil lawsuit," Sorrell said.

UVM President Judith Ramaley said later: "I believe we acted in good faith, but our good-faith efforts failed."

Board of Trustees Chairman Frank Bolden said university officials hoped to learn from the incident.

"Our intention is to examine fully and objectively what we did, what worked and what didn't, take responsibility for our actions and to learn from our mistakes," Bolden said. "The result will be constructive, effective initiatives that will better confront and eradicate hazing at our university."

Team captain Kevin Karlander, 23, is facing misdemeanor criminal charges of providing alcohol to a minor and more

Craig Line/Associated Press

Vermont Attorney General William Sorrell discusses the findings of his office's hazing investigation, at a news conference in Montpelier, Vt., Thursday.

alcohol-related charges are possible against other upperclassmen, Sorrell said.

The attorney general and the Chittenden County State's Attorney's office have agreed not to pursue more serious sex charges against those responsible for the Oct. 2 initiation party held in Burlington.

Hazing charges are not possible because the state has no laws prohibiting hazing, he said.

Sorrell said his investigation found that hazing is pervasive at many levels of competitive hockey. Since 1996, other UVM hockey hazing parties have been held that were "arguably more dangerous and more demeaning than the hazing that had taken place" in October, he said.

As a result Sorrell said his office would recommend that the Legislature enact a new law to deal specifically with hazing.

"We look upon hazing very differently than we did," Sorrell said. "What happened to Corey Latulippe is a crime."

Latulippe is the former freshman goalie who told university officials about the hazing party in September, before it took place. Despite specific warnings from athletic department officials, the hockey team went forward with the party.

Shortly afterwards, Latulippe was cut from the team. In December, he filed a federal lawsuit against the university.

In the lawsuit, he charged each freshman was forced to drink warm beer, parade naked while holding the genitals of the player in front of him and lay on the floor while strippers crawled over him.

UVM officials initially said Latulippe's allegations were exaggerated. Sorrell's report says university officials then determined hazing took place but said nothing publicly to indicate that.

Hawkeye women fall at Indiana

■ Cara Consuegra's triple-double, the second in Big Ten history, couldn't save the Hawkeyes at Indiana.

By Robert Yarborough
The Daily Iowan

Cara Consuegra provided the highlight in a rather disappointing game for the Iowa women's basketball team Thursday night.

For the second time in the history of the Big Ten, Consuegra finished with a triple-double (17 points, 10 assists, 10 rebounds) as Iowa (6-14, 3-7) lost to Indiana 70-67 in Bloomington, Ind. The loss leaves Iowa tied for eighth place in the conference with Northwestern.

Iowa defeated Indiana (9-12, 4-7) 81-68 in its previous meeting with the Hoosiers in Carver-Hawkeye.

"This year Iowa and Indiana are both young teams," Iowa coach Angie Lee said. "For some reason, Assembly Hall has always been a tough place for us to play because it is such a hostile environment."

Indiana jumped out to an early 7-2 lead before Hoosiers' leading scorer Jill Chapman picked up her third foul with 11:40 left in the game forcing her to sit out the rest of the first half. Iowa guard Lindsey Meder proved to be the biggest benefactor of Chapman's absence.

After being held scoreless for the first ten minutes of the game, Meder scored seven points in a minute and a half to give Iowa a 37-33 lead headed into the locker room.

The Hoosiers came back with a vengeance in the second half as Rainy Altman hit a three-pointer at 14 minutes to go, giving Indiana a 50-48 lead. The lead flipped for the next few minutes before Randi Peterson gave Iowa a 60-59 lead with just 4:27 left to play.

Indiana put the game away when Heather Cassidy converted a three-point play at 1:16 giving the Hoosiers the win.

Iowa shot an impressive 40.3-percent from the field, but went to the free-throw line just four times. Lindsey Meder finished with 22 points, while Altling finished with 17 points and rebounds to lead Indiana to victory.

Iowa continues its road trip Sunday in East Lansing, Mich where Iowa takes on Michigan State at 2 p.m.

Haslett comes marching into New Orleans

■ New Saints coach Jim Haslett says he's a man with a plan.

By Mary Foster
Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — Jim Haslett knows all about the New Orleans Saints' bleak history. He was once part of it as an assistant.

Now Haslett is back as coach armed with a plan to pull the losingest team in the NFL out of an eight-year slump.

"I don't want to talk about numbers," Haslett said Thursday. "But I'll promise this, we'll have a well-run program that plays hard and does all the right things that are conducive to winning."

Although there were reports on Wednesday that Haslett had taken the job, Saints general manager Randy Mueller said the deal wasn't struck until about 9 a.m. Thursday. Denver offensive coordinator Gary Kubiak was very much in the running until the last minute, Mueller said.

"We talked late last night Denver time," Mueller said. "I told him then where we were headed and he knew it might end up this way. But until that time, he was a very active candidate."

Kubiak couldn't be reached for comment on Thursday. He wasn't at the Broncos' facility and a team spokesman said his telephone had been disconnected.

Haslett received a three-year contract. Financial terms weren't disclosed but it was believed to be less than $1 million per year but more than $600,000.

Team owner Tom Benson is still paying off former coach Mike Ditka, who had a contract that ran through 2002 at $2 million a year; general manager Bill Kuharich, whose contract ran through 2003 at about $500,000 a year, and other staff members. Ditka and the others were fired Jan. 5 after the Saints finished 3-13, their third losing season under Ditka.

The Saints have not had a winning season since 1992, something that Mueller said Haslett is equipped to change.

"You're talking about an energetic, tireless worker who has a passion for the game," Mueller said. "I want to try to create the atmosphere around here of passion, people that will not accept losing."

Haslett and Mueller know each other well. When Mueller was vice president of football operations in Seattle, Haslett was a leading candidate to become coach of the Seahawks. Mike Holmgren left Green Bay to become Seattle's coach and general manager, displacing much of Mueller's authority.

Rodman finally signs contract with Dallas

■ Dennis Rodman decided the NBA was more important than partying at the Pro Bowl.

By Jaime Aron
Associated Press

DALLAS — Dennis Rodman signed with the Dallas Mavericks on Thursday and immediately made a sacrifice for his new team.

He's not going to the Pro Bowl. Instead of partying in Hawaii, Rodman will be sweating his way back into playing shape after nearly a year's absence from the NBA. He'll make his debut at home Wednesday against Seattle.

Incoming team owner Mark Cuban said he's not sure whether Rodman will travel with the team for road games Saturday against the Los Angeles Clippers or Sunday against the Vancouver Grizzlies.

"If anything, I might take him to LA just to get him with his trainer because he's getting that serious," said Cuban, who personally pursued the NBA's most eligible free agent since shortly after agreeing to buy the team in early January.

The 38-year-old forward has been out of the league since the Los Angeles Lakers got tired of his act and cut him after 23 games last April. He was holding out hope that new Lakers coach Phil Jackson might give him another chance.

But after no contenders were interested, Rodman let Cuban start wooing him.

Rodman soaked up some attention last week, then bolted for Super Bowl parties in Atlanta. While there, he floated the idea of delaying his return until after the Pro Bowl and maybe even the NBA all-star game Feb. 13.

Rodman was back Tuesday and by Wednesday he began settling into his new residence: the 4,000-square-foot guest house behind Cuban's mansion.

Rodman passed a physical Thursday and signed a contract, then went for his second workout of the day. He was not at Reunion Arena for Dallas' game against Charlotte.

"I'm not going to try to stop Dennis from being Dennis," Cuban said. "I'm not going to say, 'Ooh, Dennis, don't go out and party. Ooh, Dennis, you're talking to the wrong girls.' No. Dennis, go out and have fun — be Dennis."

"Dennis has managed to be Dennis and be very successful on the court for a long time."

Cuban also is allowing Rodman to ride a stationary bike instead of practicing and giving him permission to arrive at games later than his teammates.

"He didn't come to me and say 'I'm not going to do this or that,'" Cuban said. "It was the exact opposite. I said, 'Dennis, what is it going to take to make you successful? How do you prepare for a game.'"

Weather strikes again at Puddle Beach

■ Rainy conditions may shorten the Pebble Beach golf tournament for the fourth time in five years.

By Doug Ferguson
Associated Press

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. — The streak is alive, only this one has to do with Pebble Beach, not Tiger Woods.

Before Woods could get to the 11th tee Thursday in pursuit of his sixth straight PGA Tour victory, clouds gathered over the Monterey Peninsula, tree branches snapped in raging wind and the Pebble Beach National Pro-Am showed its true character.

It rained. With puddles forming on the greens early Thursday afternoon, inclement weather — also known as "Pebble" weather — promised to either cut short or cancel the tournament for the third straight year and fourth time in the past five years.

Play was suspended at 11:27 a.m. Nearly three hours later, the PGA Tour told players to return at 10 a.m. Friday to complete the first round, and the tournament would be extended to Monday in order to complete 72 holes.

That's if the weather cooperates over the weekend.

Bob Galbraith/Associated Press

Ermes Pavlin of Venice, Italy, left, and Kip Finn, right, of Walnut Creek, Calif., try to hang onto their umbrellas in the wind near the 17th tee of the Pebble Beach Golf Links after play was suspended Thursday.

"We're going to work on getting tomorrow in and then go from there," tour official Mark Russell said.

A year ago, the final round was washed out and the tour elected not to play Monday because of a storm system that stretched from Carmel Bay to Japan. In 1998, players returned in August to get in 54 holes.

That was prompted by the '96 tournament, which was canceled after 36 holes.

Is this Pebble Beach or Puddle Beach?

The rain started falling not long after caddie Steve Williams made a detour through the parking lot on his way to the 10th tee at Poppy Hills to get Woods' rain suit out of the trunk of his car. Never mind that it was sunny and breezy only three hours earlier, and simply spectacular the past two days.

Woods was even-par through 10 holes and four strokes out of the lead, so perhaps the delay will serve him well in his bid to become the first player since Ben Hogan in 1948 to win six in a row.

David Duval, who also got no further than the 11th tee at Poppy, was leading at 4-under and in no particular hurry to get off the course.

Vijay Singh was 3-under through five holes at Poppy and Mark Calcavecchia was among those at 2-under. Jack Nicklaus and Gary Nicklaus, playing in the same foursome, matched each other shot for shot. Of course, they only played one hole at Pebble Beach.

"We reached a point where everybody had problems keeping the ball on the green," Russell said.

He said several rulings involved balls that were marked on the green, but then started blowing away after being replaced.

"It's tough to look at it as a legitimate golf tournament when the conditions are like this," said Lee Janzen, who had stopped coming to Pebble after the '96 fiasco. "This really doesn't do anything to convince me to come back. This solidifies why I haven't come back."

Pebble Beach not just sentimental for Golden Bear

■ Jack Nicklaus isn't playing for jollies at Pebble Beach; he wants to tune his game.

By Rob Gloster
Associated Press

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. — Jack Nicklaus moans softly and stretches out on a wood bench alongside the 11th tee. His lower back is aching, and other parts of his 60-year-old body feel pretty sore as well.

"You're not going to get back up, Jack," chides a white-haired spectator.

"Maybe I'll just take a nap," Nicklaus shoots back.

He's up in a minute, hitting a long drive a bit to the left. Fans cheer and call out. "Way to go, Jack." The man who has won 18 major tournaments and earned $8.3 million in prize money simply sticks out his tongue in annoyance at his imperfect shot.

The AT&T Pebble Beach Pro-Am this weekend is a sentimental journey for Nicklaus, who says it will be his last appearance at an event he has won three times. It's also a family affair, since he's playing with two of his sons.

And it's also all about competition.

Nicklaus realizes he's no longer likely to win this tournament or any other PGA Tour event, and that he's not even one of the top players on the PGA Senior Tour these days.

But he's here to compete and to work on his game, looking ahead to the U.S. Open that will be held at Pebble Beach in mid-June. Nicklaus won the 1972 U.S. Open at Pebble Beach.

"You always hope to be a factor and you don't want to show up unless you can be a factor," Nick-laus said. "But, realistically, I haven't played enough golf in the past year to be able to contend."

Nicklaus is fully recovered from hip-replacement surgery that sidelined him for much of 1999. But he has the nagging aches and pains of most people his age.

"I wake up every morning with something new. The hip hasn't been a problem. It's been getting strength back after everything has been cut off," he said. "I've worked pretty hard to get myself in reasonable shape. I work out every day, but it gets more difficult when you get to my age."

Nicklaus is one of only four men to complete the Grand Slam, and has won all four majors at least three times. His first major title was a playoff victory over Arnold Palmer in the 1962 U.S. Open, and the most recent was a record sixth Masters crown in 1986 at the age of 46.

Eric Risberg/Associated Press

WWF unveils plans for WXL football league

■ The people who brought you Monday Night Raw and Smackdown! are planning a new pro football league.

By Larry McShane
Associated Press

NEW YORK — It will be real. And it will be real fun.

It's football as envisioned by World Wrestling Federation mastermind Vince McMahon, who took time out from peddling the endless line of WWF merchandise Thursday to unveil his latest creation: the XFL, a new pro football league set to open in February 2001.

No scripts. No sideshows. Just football.

No, really. "Why football?" asked McMahon, echoing a question no doubt pondered from coast to coast. "Some have suggested the NFL is the 'No Fun League.' The XFL will be the extremely fun league. This will be a blast."

It's a new world for McMahon, the "sports entertainment" impresario who converted professional wrestling from a lowbrow, oft-mocked multimillion dollar business.

But that was done with writers creating wild scenarios, and bigger-than-life characters such as Hulk Hogan and Mankind, and phony feuds and bogus friendships.

The football league, McMahon promised a crowded news conference, will be real.

No, really.

"The WWF is 100 percent entertainment," McMahon said. "But the XFL is 100 percent sports."

So the outcomes will not be scripted?

"Nooo," said McMahon, his eyes rolling skyward in the WWF's midtown Manhattan restaurant. "Nooo."

You want reality? McMahon said the startup costs for the eight-team league will run him "somewhere south of $100 million." There are already teams in New York, Miami, Orlando, Washington, Los Angeles and San Francisco, with two more teams to be announced.

HAWKEYE TRACK

Men's Track

This weekend: The Iowa men's track team travels to Illinois to participate in the Carle/Health Alliance Illini Classic Saturday in Champaign, Ill.

Last weekend: At the Wisconsin Invitational, Iowa's Stetson Steele and Jeremy Allen provisionally qualified for the NCAA Indoor Championship. Steele qualified in the 3,000-meters and Allen in the shot put.

The competition: Iowa State placed second as a team at the Mercantile Bank Invitational last weekend. They were led by Jamie Beyer, a six-time All-American, in both the shot put and weight throw. Indiana State was led by Rick Sluter in the 5,000-meters.

Coach's Comment: "One of the ways we measure the success of our program is by the number of NCAA qualifiers we have," Larry Wiczorek said. "Hopefully we can pick up some more of those Big Ten qualifiers and an NCAA qualifier. Illinois is one of the teams that will contend for the Big Ten title this season, so it will be a good test for us."

- Jeremy Schnitker

Women's Track

This weekend: South Bend, Ind., will be the destination of the Iowa women's track team as it gets set to participate in Notre Dame's Meyo Invitational today and Saturday.

Last weekend: Iowa placed fifth out of seven teams at the Minnesota Classic meet, where it crowned one champion. Junior Colleen Prendergast won the 60-meter high hurdles and set a meet record with a time of 8.59.

The competition: Notre Dame is led by All-American Jennifer Englehardt who is the meet's returning champion in the long jump. The meet will be highlighted by Michigan, which has won three consecutive collegiate meets. They are led by Maria Brown in the 60-meters and the 200-meters.

Coach's Comment: "We are training really hard this week, and I think we'll do fairly well at Notre Dame," James Grant said. "Even though it isn't a team scored event, we still need to push ourselves to get ready for the Cyclone Invitational next weekend."

- Jeremy Schnitker

Trio of sophomores shine

■ Duez Henderson, Rod Thompson and Kyle Galloway executed their roles in Iowa's win Thursday.

By Melinda Mawdsley
The Daily Iowan

The future for Iowa men's basketball is as golden as their uniforms.

On a night when senior leadership often carries teams through, the Hawkeyes' fire Thursday was ignited from the play of sophomores Duez Henderson, Rod Thompson and Kyle Galloway.

Iowa coach Steve Alford has labeled Thompson and Henderson redshirt freshmen because they had minimal Big Ten experience prior to this season. Galloway sat out last year with lingering back pain. They came from no where last year to be everywhere tonight.

Each has his role. Each understands his role.

"I bring a lot of energy to all aspects of the game," said

This win is huge. This is a great one-two knockout punch with UConn and Kansas

— Iowa sophomore Kyle Galloway

Henderson.

"I stick shots, that's my role," said Galloway.

"Defensively I went out there and got after it, grabbing loose balls," said Thompson.

All three finished above their offensive averages and all brought intensity to the defensive end of the court. All three helped Iowa defeat No. 14 Kansas.

Iowa's incoming recruiting class, tabbed by many experts as one of the Top 10 in the country, in addition to transfers Ryan Hogan and Luke Recker, has been labeled the future for the Hawkeyes. The sophomore class stepped up and made people believe in them now.

The Hawkeyes need their intensity and productive play as they continue with the rest of the season and their Hawkeye careers. Next year, they will be counted on for the upperclassmen leadership.

"I'm gonna try to help the young guys," said Thompson. "They've got a lot to learn. I don't know everything. I'm still learning."

But Galloway isn't quick to focus on next season. He wants to taste the victory of the night.

"This win is huge," he said. "This is a great one-two knockout punch with UConn and Kansas."

The new Alford era has begun and no one is more excited to be a part of it than the Iowa sophomore class.

Hawkeyes ready for Vitale

game ending with Iowa City looking like the nation's newest basketball hotbed? You bet. Ask Steve Alford.

"We came out right before that JV game and played pretty well," Alford said.

Of course, Alford was mostly kidding about the Duke-North Carolina game playing second fiddle. But as sure as Roy Williams' tie was ugly, the Hawkeyes stole the college basketball show Thursday night.

McDonald's All-Americans from high schools all over the country probably tuned in to see Iowa's sold-out arena standing up and cheering like it was the last 30 seconds of the game. Only thing is, there were 16 minutes left in the second half.

And the undiscovered high school recruit saw some pretty good basketball, too. Iowa's offense was fluid and cohesive in the second half. Williams said it felt like Iowa shot 70 percent from the field in the late-game barrage. He wasn't that far off.

The man-to-man defense was cocky and aggressive. It didn't appear to have the confinements of a zone. It looked athletic. It looked fun.

In a back-and-forth game that featured 92 combined second-half points, the game's energy rubbed off on the crowd. Or it could have been the other way around.

When ESPN came back from a television timeout, the only difference between Carver-Hawkeye and Phog Allen Fieldhouse was the black and gold adorned Iowa fans.

Alford said at the beginning of the season that he hoped the rest of the crowd would follow the lead of the new and improved student section.

The rest of Carver may not be wearing wigs or 70's gear, but they are helping to make Iowa one of the toughest places to play in the Big Ten.

Against Kansas, Iowa showed everyone a nice combination of strong fans and a young coach with an exciting game.

We even have Midnight Madness. Iowa is waiting for you, Dick Vitale.

Duke holds off Tar Heels in overtime

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Last season was one of blowouts for Duke. This time around the third-ranked Blue Devils are living on the edge.

Duke won their fourth overtime game this season, beating arch-rival North Carolina 90-86 Thursday night in one of the classic games in arguably college basketball's best rivalry.

"Our guys have done well in overtime, but I don't want them to take me there anymore," Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski said.

Duke (17-2, 8-0 Atlantic Coast Conference) blew a 19-point second-half lead, but got 25 points from Shane Battier, 23 from Chris Carrawell and seven from Carlos Boozer in the overtime to beat the Tar Heels (13-9, 4-4) as it extended its own record with its 30th straight ACC regular-season victory.

"The hype really didn't measure up to the performance of all the youngsters in that ball game," Krzyzewski said. "I thought there was sensational basketball out on the court by both teams."

The Blue Devils scored on their first six possessions in the overtime and never trailed after North Carolina's Joseph Forte sent the game into the extra period at 73-73 with a 3-pointer with 5.2 seconds left.

Martin leads No. 1 Cincinnati to win

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Rattled early and often, top-ranked Cincinnati relied on Kenyon Martin to hold it together for a 70-62 victory over North Carolina Charlotte on Thursday night.

Martin scored 10 of the Bearcats' first 14 points, helping them weather 10 turnovers in the opening nine minutes in a building that has become their least favorite in Conference USA.

Martin finished with 20 points, eight rebounds and three blocks, making the difference for the Bearcats (21-1, 9-0) on a night when their 18 turnovers nearly translated into a third straight loss at Halton Arena.

Harassed in deafening tones by a sellout crowd of 9,105, the Bearcats saw a 12-point second-half lead cut to two with 8:46 remaining before composing themselves for their 13th consecutive victory.

North Carolina Charlotte (12-9, 4-4) lost for the first time in eight home games this season.

The Bearcats shot 44 percent in the first game of a tough road trip. After ending the 49ers' perfect home mark, Cincinnati plays Saturday at Alabama-Birmingham, which is 10-0 at home this season.

easy, the offense shot 52-percent in the second half. Seven different players scored in that stretch, six of whom hit threes.

Included in that mix was Thompson, who tallied 14 points and five rebounds in 21 minutes. On defense, his inspired work led to a pair of Kansas turnovers and made no basket easy.

"He was terrific, all the way up until the lay-up," Iowa coach Steve Alford said. "I think that was the best of his career. He rebounded, he guarded and he took great shots, so I was happy for him."

Sophomore Kyle Galloway emerged from his month-long shooting slump to hit three threes for nine points. It was Galloway's best night since an 18-point effort against Minnesota Jan. 12. Since then, he was averaging 2.8 points per game.

Alford pulled Galloway aside in practice Wednesday in hopes of improving his shooting stance. Galloway said the coach told him he was catching the ball too upright.

"To tell you the truth, I lost confidence a little bit," Galloway said. "I had never had two games in a row before where I had shot poorly, so it was great to hit that first one and get my confidence back."

As exciting as the final 20 minutes was, the first half was a bore. Sloppy play plagued both squads, and at the eight-minute TV timeout, Iowa had just 12 points, Kansas 16. Iowa turned the ball over 15 times in the first half, compared to two in the second half.

The win was Iowa's second upset of a ranked team this season, both of which came on ESPN. In the season opener, the Hawkeyes defeated No. 1 Connecticut 70-68. The next night, though, Iowa fell flat in a lopsided loss to Stanford. Everyone stressed after Thursday's win that the game will mean nothing with a poor performance Saturday night against Purdue.

"Our goal was to get back to .500," said senior Jake Jaacks. "Now we can really focus and look to do some things."

Upper weights will decide meet's fate tonight

184 pounds, Mark Munoz at 197 pounds and Reggie White at 149 pounds in the four-slot nationally.

"We'll be favored in the first three weights," Zalesky said. "At 165 pounds and up there will be some pretty interesting matches."

One of the marquee matches will be the heavyweight match between No. 3-ranked Wes Hand and No. 14-ranked Dave Anderton from OSU. Anderton eliminated Hand from the NCAA tournament in 1999. The Hawkeye senior said he wants payback.

"He beat me last year so that's another match I'm going to be looking for revenge," said Hand.

Iowa will also compete against Big Ten rival Northwestern Sunday at 1 p.m. The Wildcats are 6-6-1 overall, and 1-1-1 in the Big Ten. Iowa won the teams' 1999 meeting in Evanston, Ill., 36-3.

Tickets are still available for both meets at the Iowa athletics ticket office for $7. The Oklahoma State meet will also be on shown tape-delayed on IPTV starting around 9 tonight.
