VALENTINE'S CARDS YOU WON'T SEE IN STORES

- Any connection between your reality and mine is purely coincidental.
- My tire was thumping. I thought it was flat. When I stopped to look ... I noticed your cat. Sorry.
- I saw a road sign that reminded me of you today ... Dead end.
- I don't know what I'd do without you. Why don't you leave so I can find out?
- We all heard you had a vasectomy and just wanted you to let you know we're sure that the world will be a better place now.
- As Valentine's Day approaches, remember: You are utterly alone! HAHAAAAHA! Loser!
- Sweetheart, it's been 25 years ... If I had killed you when we wed ... I'd be out by now.
- Don't get well soon ... In fact, take as long as you want.
- Heard your husband left you; how upset you must be. But don't you worry; he moved in with me!

UI seniors Ben Faga and Laurel Coffeen: They like to 'spoon'

It was movie night at Burge, the first Week of Welcome event for most freshmen in the fall of 1996. A friend and I decided to go ... there was free food, and nothing can top that. We knew no one but each other. The task at hand was to meet people, but first we had to get ice cream.

Unfortunately, there were not enough spoons. My friend suggested that we try to get a spoon from someone who was finished. I agreed, because it seemed like a pretty good way to meet women. Two women were standing together, and we decided to ask for their spoons. Fortunately, they were kind enough to give them to us.

After exchanging the information that we would later become so accustomed to exchanging (name, major, hometown, year), conversation ceased. I assumed they were not interested in speaking with us, and we went off to talk to some other people.

A few months later in chemistry discussion, I saw someone I recognized from church. After chemistry, it was time to eat, so I asked if I could join her and some of her friends for lunch at Burge. She agreed.

When we sat down, the red-headed girl on my right was not introduced. I turned to her and said, "Hello, my name is Ben." To which she replied, "I know, we shared a spoon."

And that is how I met my girlfriend, Laurel, whom I have been dating for more than three years.

Love in the fast lane

I met my girlfriend approximately a year ago, but we didn't go on our first date until three weeks ago. She goes to school in Ames, and I had agreed to pick her up around 6:30 for dinner. My car was in the shop getting worked on, and I couldn't get out of Iowa City until close to 5:30. Knowing I was going to be late, I decided to drive much faster than the acceptable speed limit and ended up with a ticket.

Now, at this point I was 20 minutes farther behind, $100 poorer, and in a much fouler mood. I finally arrived in Ames about 7:45, and after five minutes of being lost and 10 minutes of waiting for a train, I found her house. I was smart enough to have picked up flowers, so she wasn't too upset.

The date itself went very well. Dinner at the Olive Garden, music at Java Joe's. On the drive home my car started to emit an unpleasant odor — something along the lines of burning plastic. It sounded pretty awful, too. Because it was late, we were on the interstate, and it was starting to snow, we decided it would be best to drive to the nearest gas station and figure out where to go from there. Unfortunately, the car died on the exit ramp, and we had to hitchhike. We called a tow truck and took her roommate's car back to the ramp. As we approached my car, we noticed a semi was pulled over. "Oh, he probably stopped to help us," said my date. "Isn't that nice." And then we noticed the flames.

We spent the next 45 minutes watching my car burn. As pretty as those tall, white flames were, they did nothing to make the evening any more romantic. After all was said and done, we didn't get home until well after 3 a.m.

Love at first slice

My boyfriend, Matt, and I met two years ago on Valentine's Day. Actually, he saw me long before I saw him. At the time, he was working with a friend of mine at a pizza place downtown, and I stopped by to talk to my friend on the afternoon of Valentine's Day. My friend mentioned that a guy he worked with had asked about me, but I really didn't think too much of it. Just a few days later, I was celebrating my 21st birthday. We ordered a bunch of pizzas to be delivered, and when they arrived, he had written "Megan is Lovely ... From Matt" on every one of the address labels. I immediately jumped in the car and drove up there — any guy who would go to that length to get my attention I just had to meet.

It was love at first sight. We started dating soon afterward. He told me on one of our first dates that if we stayed together, I would know the true meaning of romance. He kept his word — to this day he still finds creative, romantic ways to surprise me.

Lapping up the miles for cancer-fighting charity

■ The eighth annual Relay for Life raises more than $152,000 to fight cancer.

By Christoph Trappe
The Daily Iowan

Both young and old walked, ran or jogged around the track at the UI Recreation Building Sunday during the eighth annual Lea Williams Hedges Relay For Life.

The 12-hour charity event began at 7 a.m. and featured more than 100 teams. It raised a record amount of more than $152,000 to fight cancer.

While area celebrities, students, UI administrators and cancer survivors attended the event, the survivors' lap drew the biggest audience of the day.

The track was cleared for the survivors at 1 p.m., and approximately 60 cancer survivors announced their names and then took one lap around the track.

"It's very touching and a neat way for people to get together and support each other and to raise money," said Laurie Constock, a cancer survivor.

The members of Team Brandon — Mid-Prairie Middle School students Brooke Kaalberg, Vicky Arieux, Amanda Peck and Erica Yoder — said they kept moving for most of the day to honor a lost friend.

The day's events particularly meant a lot to cancer survivors, said Bill Perry, a 69-year-old Cedar Rapids resident.

"I've had cancer three times, and I have survived three times," he said. "This is great. It feels so good."

At 4 p.m., the celebrity race began, featuring Iowa men's basketball Coach Steve Alford, baseball Coach Scott Broghamer and Assistant to the Athletics Director Bob Elliott.

"The people want to see the celebrities," said Al Lorenzen, a former Hawkeyes basketball player. "That's why we split up the survivors' lap from the celebrities race, so the survivors get more of a spot light."

Most people attended the event for the entire time and did not mind spending the whole day in the Rec Building, said Jo Jones, an administrative associate at the UI Museum of Art.

"It's worthwhile to spend a Sunday afternoon like this," she said.

Panelists work to expose hate literature

■ Spurred by a "newsletter" received by the UISG, a town meeting tries to counteract prejudice.

By Heather Pavnica
The Daily Iowan

Some may think Iowa City is a liberal town that accepts people with open arms, but discrimination is right under our noses, said a group of panelists at a Feb. 12 town meeting.

"I am not sure how much hate literature is circulating," said Phillip Jones, the UI vice president for student services. But "there is a significant movement out there ... to entice individual people into doing extremist acts."

Approximately 20 people attended the town meeting, which was held at the Boyd Law Building and sponsored by the UI Diversity Committee, to discuss and expose a hate group's "newsletter" that had been received by the UI Student Government last fall.

Jones revealed examples of discriminatory material from the National Alliance, a neo-Nazi hate organization based in West Virginia. The "newsletter" said blacks have a direct origin to the chimpanzee, which have an average IQ of 50; blacks have only a slightly higher IQ of approximately 76 because they have learned to speak, Jones said.

The "newsletter" also included a list of "facts to memorize" about homosexuals and Jewish people. Jones quoted the list of "facts" in the "newsletter," among them being, "The Holocaust did not happen" and "Jews are the children of Satan."

"This is very objectionable material," he said. "I ask you, what is it about this material that makes it believable?"

A panel of six people spoke about the discriminatory literature and the increasing number of recent hate-related incidents in Iowa City. Faith Wilmot of the Hate Acts Rapid Response Team, one of the panelists, said education about discrimination will prevent people from going public with their hate.

"We have to start with the very young," she said. "Our silence is like saying, 'It's O.K.'"

Jones said the UI cannot take any action against the alliance because it has not received any direct threats. Officials hope that the town meeting will raise awareness about discrimination on campus, he said.

UISG Vice President Andy Stoll said he would like to look at the UI's general-education requirements and possibly work to change the requirements to include more cultural-diversity classes.

"Ignorance brews hate," he said. "Everybody has an opportunity to utilize power ... to make a difference."

Education alone is not going to destroy racism, said panelist Marisa Cummings, a UI senior and member of the American Indian Student Association. Cummings said racism is a problem that is rooted in the power structure of the U.S. government.

Jones and the UISG sent a copy of the alliance's "newsletter," containing discriminatory material about blacks, Jews and homosexuals, to every Big Ten university. Almost every university has received similar hate literature, Jones said.

For these two Iowa women, it's heartfelt work

■ A UI employee is one of two women who campaigned to make today Congenital Heart Defect Awareness Day.

By Christy Logan
The Daily Iowan

Only matters of the heart can bring together two women miles apart, wanting to achieve similar goals.

For Iowa City resident Debra Johnson and Des Moines resident Lisa Abbot, their goal was realized when the state officially declared today as Congenital Heart Defect Awareness Day.

In November, the two women drafted letters to Iowa Gov. Tom Vilsack, Basically, we're a fairly new organization. Our objectives are to provide support to our parents. It's a wonderful group.

— Lisa Abbot, founder of Heart Friends expressing their desire for increased public awareness on the illness.

As parents of children affected by the birth defect, they both met through an online support group that helps families cope with the emotional stress involved in caring for a child with this type illness. Currently, congenital heart defects affect approximately 1 out of every 100-125 births.

"I think the general public impression is that it is that it is very rare. It's very common. This can happen to anyone," said Johnson, a research scientist in the UI psychology department whose 3-year-old son was diagnosed only days after being born.

Since taking on the fight for awareness, Abbot has founded Heart Friends, an Iowa-based support group for families of children born with congenital heart defects.

The main objective of the grassroots organization, which currently consists of approximately 10-20 families, is to provide emotional and educational support as a method of mental preparedness for successive surgeries and constant medical treatment, Abbot said.

"Basically, we're a fairly new organization. Our objectives are to provide support to our parents. It's a wonderful group," Abbot said.

Iowa has approximately 250-300 cases, and roughly 160-170 surgeries are done per year, said Larry Mahoney, a UI pediatrics professor. Children with milder symptoms do not always have to have surgery, he said.

"We have certain medical care that is given to some, which is a smaller percentage than those who need surgery," he said.

No asylum for hijackers, Taliban says

■ Afghanistan's rulers tell Britain that granting asylum will encourage terrorism.

By Amir Shah
Associated Press

KANDAHAR, Afghanistan — Afghanistan's Taliban rulers warned Britain Sunday that granting asylum to former hostages in an Afghan airline hijacking would encourage terrorism.

After a standoff ended early on Feb. 10 at London's Stansted airport, 74 of the freed hostages from the Ariana Airlines Boeing 727 — almost half — requested asylum. Twenty-two others were arrested in connection with the hijacking.

Speaking at a news conference at the airport in Kandahar, Afghanistan, Taliban Foreign Minister Wakil Ahmed Muttawakil said that if Britain grants asylum, it will encourage others to use hijacking as a means of fleeing to the West.

The released captives who chose to return to Afghanistan were expected to arrive at the airport within the next 24 hours aboard a chartered flight.

"We have to differentiate between political and economic asylum seekers," Muttawakil said. "With the return of the passengers to Afghanistan, terrorism will be discouraged."

The plane was seized on Feb. 6 during what should have been a short domestic flight from the Afghan capital Kabul to the northern city of Mazar-e-Sharif. Instead, hijackers forced the plane to fly to Uzbekistan, Kazakhstan and Russia before finally landing outside London.

Muttawakil said the Taliban would welcome all the passengers home. Those who have asked for asylum would be welcomed, not punished, he said.

"Our borders are open, and there are no restrictions on traveling outside Afghanistan," he said. Britain should return all the passengers, he said.

In the wake of the hijacking, the Taliban has increased security at the country's airports and has deployed armed guards on all flights.

Because of U.N. sanctions imposed against the Taliban last November, Ariana Airlines is officially restricted from flying outside of the country. The sanctions were imposed to encourage the Taliban to hand over suspected terrorist Osama bin Laden for trial; the Taliban has refused.

Israelis, Palestinians miss deadline

■ Anger reigns on the day that was supposed to have seen the framework for a final-status agreement.

By Ron Kampeas
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — It was supposed to have been a day of clarity, the first time Israelis and Palestinians outlined the shape of a permanent, peaceful coexistence.

Instead, Sunday, the deadline for the framework of a final-status agreement on the conflict's toughest issues — Jerusalem, final borders and refugees — was a blur of recriminations and dire predictions for a peace process gone awry.

Palestinians accuse Israeli Prime Minister Ehud Barak of neglecting them to focus on talks with Syria; Israelis say Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat is asking for too much, too soon.

Talks broke down early this month, and neither side knows when they will resume. The delay could jeopardize the Sept. 13 deadline that Barak and Arafat have set for a full-fledged permanent agreement. Missing that date, both sides worry, could lead to a total peace breakdown.

Barak told his Cabinet Sunday that "our responsibility is to try to reach arrangements by the end of this year."

"The interest of terrorist groups to torpedo the process is very high," he said, according to an official in his office who spoke on condition of anonymity.

In an effort to get the Palestinians back to the table, Barak's chief negotiator said, Israel was ready to concede a key Palestinian demand: a contiguous block of land in the West Bank, seen by the Palestinians as a crucial underpinning to a future state.

Oded Eran also said explicitly for the first time that Israel will have to give up some Jewish settlements.

"I would have expected the Palestinian side to show the same good faith, to come with clear positions on issues to move forward the negotiations," he told the Associated Press.

Palestinians countered that Israel was wrapping offers that should have been part of an interim agreement into a permanent-status agreement — a ploy, they say, to make less seem like more.

"Now Mr. Barak wants to merge the third phase (of an interim agreement) with the permanent status," top Palestinian negotiator

Saab Erekat told the AP. "We won't allow him; we won't let him do that."

A similar disagreement broke up the talks on Feb. 3, when Arafat learned that Barak was not prepared to hand over Arab suburbs of Jerusalem as part of an interim withdrawal from 6.1 percent of the West Bank. Palestinians said that showed bad faith.

CITY BRIEFS

Local man charged with abuse, pot distribution

An Iowa City man has been charged with two counts of assault with intent to commit sexual abuse and distribution of a schedule I controlled substance to minors.

Craig A. Holmes, 41, was charged on Feb. 11 after he allegedly fondled two juvenile females and provided them with marijuana and alcohol on numerous occasions over a span of five months.

Johnson County District Court records say Holmes confronted the girls separately and touched their breasts and put his hands down their pants. All of the recorded instances allegedly occurred when the victims' mother was away at work, court records state.

The girls told police they did not want the contact but Holmes repeatedly "cornered" them.

One girl reported 10 to 20 incidents, and the other reported 15 to 20 different instances of inappropriate contact by Holmes, according to court records.

The girls also told police that Holmes provided them with marijuana more than 25 different times as well as alcohol on many of those occasions.

Distribution of a schedule I controlled substance is a felony, and assault with the intent to commit sexual abuse is an aggravated misdemeanor.

Holmes remains in the Johnson County Jail; bail has been set at $40,000. A preliminary hearing has been scheduled for Feb. 21 at 2 p.m.

Part of Madison St. to close for 3½ months

The western portion of Madison Street's southbound lane between Jefferson and Market streets will close for three months, beginning today.

The closing comes as construction crews begin work on the second phase of the UI's steam-tunnel construction project, said Richard Gibson, the associate vice president for UI Facilities Services Group. Construction began last summer; the project is expected to be completed on June 2.

The northbound lanes will remain open, Gibson said.

WORLD BRIEF

Timor-connected general dismissed

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — In a surprise reversal, President Abdurrahman Wahid suspended his powerful security minister, Gen. Wiranto, from the Cabinet over his alleged role in last year's bloodshed in East Timor, newspapers reported earlier today.

Upon his return home Sunday following a 16-day overseas tour, Wahid met with Wiranto and announced that the minister would remain part of the government while the attorney general's office conducted a new formal inquiry into the violence that followed East Timor's vote for independence.

But late Sunday night, the president — who has been known to frequently make strong statements on issues only to ignore them later or change his stance — told Indonesian reporters that Wiranto would be suspended from the Cabinet during the new probe.

Power outage hits parts of campus

OUTAGE

Evelena Ornelas was typing her five-page paper in the Main Library when her computer suddenly crashed.

"I had written an entire page, single-spaced, when my screen went blank," she said. "My paper is due at 10:30 a.m., so I have to finish this tonight. Maybe I should go to Kinko's."

The computers in the library were working after the power went out because they automatically switched to a back-up generator when the server noticed a problem, said Dan Edmonds, a UI senior and computer lab monitor.

"At about 7 p.m., the generators died, and most people lost what they were typing," he said. "The one person who is able to work on Microsoft Word is extremely limited, and no one is able to print anything."

While most students were frustrated over lost papers, UI freshman Sarah Arens said she feels lucky to be the only student with a saved paper.

"I can't spell-check or print, but I can still type my paper, and I am saving all the time," she said. "I am afraid to get off the computer because I'm afraid I'll lose things. But I feel really bad because my paper is not due until Wednesday."

The UI Department of Public Safety did not have normal power at its office but had a back-up generator that enabled it to operate normally, said Public Safety Sgt. Mike Hanks.

'Peanuts' creator dies as last strip runs

The famous strip — with its gentle humor spiked with a child's-eye view of human foibles — had one particularly endearing trait: constancy.

Year after year, the long-suffering Charlie Brown faced misfortune with a mild, "Good grief!" Tart-tongued Lucy handed out advice at a nickel a pop. And Snoopy, Charlie Brown's wise-but-weird beagle, still took the occasional flight of fancy back to the skies of World War I and his rivalry with the Red Baron.

The strip was an intensely personal effort for Schulz. He had had a clause in his contract dictating the strip had to end with his death — no one could imitate it.

While battling cancer, he opted to retire it, saying he wanted to focus on his health and family without the worry of a daily deadline.

His last daily comic ran in early January; the farewell strip appeared in newspapers Sunday. Old versions of the strip will continue to be published.

The last strip showed Snoopy at his typewriter and other Peanuts regulars along with a "Dear Friends" letter thanking his readers for their support.

"I have been grateful over the years for the loyalty of our editors and the wonderful support and love expressed to me by fans of the comic strip," Schulz wrote. "Charlie Brown, Snoopy, Linus, Lucy ... how can I ever forget them ..."

It ended with his signature. Fans of all ages mourned his passing.

In Santa Rosa, 8-year-old Trevor Jones offered a bouquet of flowers decorated with a drawing of the city's ice skating rink, which Schulz built. The drawing, delivered to the rink, read in a child's scrawl, "I like you."

What's love got to do with it? some students say

VALENTINE'S DAY

I might have two or three," he said.

Valentine's Day marks the anniversary of a Christian priest named Valentine, who was beheaded for marrying couples in the second century A.D. Since then, it has become a day for lovers to show their affection for one another with flowers, chocolates and cards.

It is now nothing but a "disgusting" commercial holiday, said UI junior Scott Nielsen.

Thankfully, there are plenty of escapes for those who harbor bitter feelings toward the holiday. The Internet offers sites with anti-Valentine's Day greeting cards, including some with the inscriptions "Valentine's Day Sucks" and "Screw Valentine's Day."

Some students prefer to celebrate in their own ways, Kirwan said.

"Last year, my friend Anne and I bought a case of Ice House and went out, because the rest of our friends had boyfriends," she said. "I don't have any plans this year — but it's my friend's 21st birthday, so I'm sure I'll be going out."

Most students said they plan on spending the day either in class, at work or just hanging out with friends. The Associated Residence Halls and the Stepping Up Project will sponsor a dance at the IMU that will feature the UI Johnson County Landmark jazz band and the Jazz Lab Band.

For those hoping to celebrate Valentine's Day in a traditional manner, be warned that some have pined away for this day. The Iowa River Power Company, 501 First Ave., Coralville, has been scheduling reservations since last year, and the Brown Bottle, 115 E. Washington St., is nearly booked.

Hawks squawk about Cambus service

thousands of riders per day.

"They're always so late getting to the other side of the river, and they're packed — so you have to miss buses, making you late for class," Buzzel said.

Staffing problems also plague the service, McClatchey said. A lack of staffing can cause peak routes to run slightly late.

"We're doing as much as we can with the resources we have. We end up with shifts that we can't get filled," said Chris Holl, a Cambus dispatcher and frequent driver. "It's better than it used to be, and it's not perfect."

The crowded buses have some students hoping that Cambus will increase the number of buses operating during peak riding times.

"I ride it between 9 and 5, and if it's in between classes, it's impossible to get a seat," said UI sophomore Cathy Diebold. "They need to run later at night during weekends and especially to the dorms."

Cambus would like to purchase additional new buses to increase services but the likelihood of obtaining additional funding makes it a slim possibility, McClatchey said. New buses cost about $270,000 each, with 80 percent funded by the Federal Transit Administration and 20 percent funded by the UI, he said.

Cambus has been looking into the purchase of at least three additional used buses from another transit system for about $50,000 each in order to expand services and increase efficiency, McClatchey said. The money will come from the UI, he said.

"It's an unknown situation from year to year. We got funding last year to replace our minibuses. This year, it's unlikely," he said.

However, even if the used buses are purchased, the problem with being short on staff remains, McClatchey said.

Corporate computers in class

Schools nationwide are faced with inadequate computer technology, and cash-strapped school boards are unable to alleviate the problem. As a result, many schools are turning to a new company, ZapMe! Corp., to help them provide students with the computer tools necessary for success. Schools get free computer equipment and service, and students get the training they need — what could possibly be wrong?

Nothing, if there weren't other key aspects worth mentioning. Being a corporation, ZapMe! must make money, and giving away $90,000 worth of equipment and services to more than 1,000 schools is not an easy way to do it. That is, unless the company sees the venture for what it creates economically: a captive audience.

It is on this basis that ZapMe! operates. Students and teachers are required to use ZapMe!'s pre-loaded software, which they cannot neither add to nor change. This includes an interface containing a permanent "sponsorship window," which allows students direct access to full-page advertisements and even commercials for the products of ZapMe!'s allies. The company offers an option without "sponsorship windows" but then requires schools to pay up to $1,400 a month in Internet-access fees (not exactly free, is it?).

ZapMe! also creates income by strategically aligning itself with other market entities, such as Yahoo, Amazon.com, and Microsoft. Thus, the company is supported by essentially selling its captive audience to retailers through joint pages and links in its interface and netspace. The company has even created an online "ZapMall," on which students can hone their shopping skills. Companies pay referral fees when a student uses the online mall to buy products. A press release from ZapMe!'s Web site asserts, "Now, ZapMe! users can shop for gifts or other items after school or at home, directly from the ZapMe! Net space. We ... are excited to bring even more innovative and useful features that make learning a fun and rewarding experience." While consumerism has always had a role in the American educational system, it appears explicit shopping is now on the lesson plan.

The introduction of the corporate presence into classrooms has come under fire from many groups because it allows some companies sole access to a captive audience and, through the school setting, can give children the impression of an advertised product's superiority.

Channel One, a comparable venture in the television medium, was criticized for its similar aspects. An early 1990s study of Channel One's effect found most students thought that because their exposure to the advertised products occurred in school, the products must be good for them.

Finally, while it currently does not collect and distribute directly identifiable personal information for marketing purposes, ZapMe!'s affiliates can freely do so, as ZapMe! does not contractually prohibit them from this practice. Of course, ZapMe! suggests that its affiliates follow its lead, but compliance of that sort in this day and age is highly unlikely.

This is in no way a call for disintegration of ZapMe! It is providing an invaluable service to future generations. However, it is also duping and exploiting them. While its service is worthy, its method of implementation needs reworking.

A plea for avoiding PDA today

I've never been in love before. And I'm currently unattached. I mean, single. Unmistakably single. Support-group single. Hanging out in the produce section of the grocery store single. So maybe all of this swinging singleness has only added fuel to the fire of my bitter resentment toward love-struck couples.

Those strolling side-by-side in the park, arms intertwined — her hand faithfully furnishing his back with a rubdown better reserved for a trained massage therapist. Yuck. Or twosomes crammed on the same escalator step in the middle of the shopping mall, shamelessly hunting and pecking in full view of wide-eyed, impressionable youngsters. Ugh. I suffer to watch them. It's painful and just a little nauseating.

But my problem really isn't with the existence of these partnerships — only the ways they are displayed. When I say I suffer to watch, I mean that literally. The whole of my wretched anguish can be summed up in three dreaded little letters: PDA.

No? Not familiar with PDA? For those not hip to the acronym, let me explain. That's "P" for Public, as in, "Hello! You're in public. I can see that!" "D" for Display, as in, "If you display that tongue one more time, I'm going to physically remove it from your body." And "A" for Affection, as in, "You really want to show some affection?"

Skip the lip-lock and take her to the mall." Public displays of affection: the life force behind Tylenol and Pepto production nationwide.

Just when did love become so public? I want to know. Why now do so many couples decide to make the experience of their love a communal thing? This certainly didn't happen in the 1950s. Would June Cleaver have slapped a big wet one on Ward right in front of Wally and the Beaver? I should think not.

Perhaps the '60s flower children spread more than just their message of peace. Well, what a debt of gratitude I owe them. They must have preconceived the supreme joy I'd feel in hearing two bumbling 14-year-olds make out in the back of a movie theater.

And why did high-ranking conservatives not put a stop to such nonsense during the height of the Reagan years? Did we not have as much to fear from the domino theory spread of PDA as we did from communism? Chalk up another domestic crisis tossed to the wayside in favor of international politics.

It's not that I begrudge people the happiness of heartfelt moments spent with their beloveds. Love's sentiment is not lost on me; I appreciate a sappy Hallmark or Christmastime Folger's commercial just as much as the next person. I just wish the sentiment wasn't so often expressed in hands setting up camp on rear ends (OK, we get the picture — that is NOT where nature intended that hand to rest) or in drawn-out kisses during excruciatingly long red lights (is it really my duty to lay on the horn to remind them that they are in the car to drive?)

Thankfully, I don't believe the problem is of epic proportions just yet. Grand scale, but not epic — a smidgen of hope remains. Thus, I call on every man, woman and child (please, let's save the children) who has ever experienced a PDA-induced stomach-turning to speak out and take action.

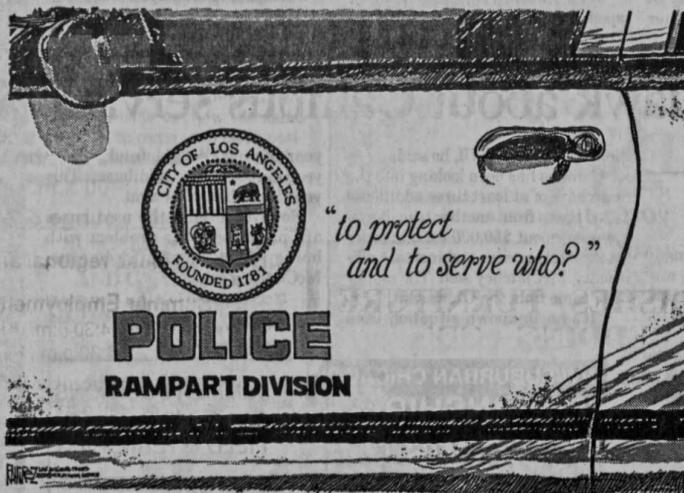

Pull hands apart, grab hold of ears and pry those heads away, yell, sneer — whatever it takes. I'm now actively recruiting PDA vigilantes for three-month tours of duty. If we work together, we can stop the madness.

I still believe there's no harm in displaying affection toward loved ones; it's a wonderful way to show how much you care. But please, harbor a certain amount of pity for those still searching for that one person who may change our minds on the whole issue (not likely), and whisper your sweet nothings behind closed doors. The public thanks you.

Guest Column

JAIME TANNER

King Henry played out in introductory rhetoric courses

So the other night, five or 10 graduate students were sitting around the dinner table at the Peking Buffet. We were having a great time, laughing and chowing on Mongolian barbecue. It happened to be the only rhetoric instructor there.

Suddenly an instructor from another department turned to me and said, "I'm sorry, but when students come out of rhetoric, they don't know anything."

Whoa, Bessie! Talk about your rising hackles. My red hair stood on end. I defended the department and my hard-working students with fiery abandon.

But now I've had time to reflect, and I'm wondering.

What the heck did she "mean?" I'm still not sure. I "think" she meant that her students — who had already completed the rhetoric requirement — weren't quite up-to-date on the details of the Chicago Manual of Style. Or that their thesis statements didn't follow the guidelines set by academic journals. Or maybe that their topic sentences lacked the "oomph" so often found in graduate student discourse. Hm.

I'm a graduate student, too, and I pay much homage to the written word. So I'm feeling the need to tie the Peking Buffet to William Shakespeare. (Bear with me here, folks.)

We rhetoric instructors remind me of the king in Henry V — one of my favorite plays. Henry walks around his English army camp in disguise, listening to what his fighters are saying the night before a battle with France. Many of the men expect to die and to go to hell for their sins. Some blame the king for their doleful state.

Henry muses about their belief. Is he responsible, not only for their lives, but also for their souls? Did his decision to go to war make him liable for his army's spiritual shortcomings?

King Henry objects. The responsibility for their souls, Henry decides, lies with the men themselves. Henry argues his cause: "Every subject's soul is his own."

Now, back to the Peking Buffet.

How does some medieval English guy, even if he's played charmingly by hot-tie Kenneth Branagh in the most recent film version, connect to rhetoric instructors?

It's like this: We rhetoric instructors have a responsibility to our students. Our responsibility involves a clear, consistent and calm attempt to help freshmen and transfer students understand the demands of UI-level reading, writing and speaking. We are charged, in the list of departmental goals, with teaching students to consider their audience, state central ideas, make clear arguments, support their claims, and understand the requirements of research.

Also, of course, it's our responsibility to talk about speeches, foster critical reading skills, and coach students through our assignments. We have help from our advisers and material support from the staff.

That's preparation, and it's like

King Henry's preparations for the war with France. He obtained advice from his council and the church and tried to ensure supply lines using his royal staff.

The students? Well, they're sort of like the soldiers. I can't really compare the importance of a high school education to the dramatic invention of Welsh longbows, but suffice it to say that the weapons brought by Henry's soldiers were as important in the outcome of the battle as are the skills students already possess to their grades in rhetoric. It's a heck of a lot easier to win a war if you have more advanced weaponry; it's a heck of a lot easier to do well in rhetoric if you have study skills and experience.

Let's move on to this soul business. If King Henry were a priest, the state of his subjects' souls "would" be his concern. Not his responsibility, perhaps, but his concern.

So, too, should the state of a student's post-rhetoric skills be the concern of other instructors. What does that mean? That means if you want your students to write great papers, show them examples. Help them draft. Help them revise. Remind them what a quotation is. Tell them where to find information on footnoting. And be available to them.

But after all the support staff, all the advisers, all the instructors have done their best, the final responsibility for a quality product rests with each student.

Every student's information received is the instructor's; but every student's skillful application is her or his own. That's what Shakespeare tells me. And when I hear the advice of my man Will, you can be assured I listen. Even when I'm at the Peking Buffet.

Happy Valentine's Day to Linda K. Smith
My wife of thirty years plus, a serious and talented student,
my best friend and passionate lover,
our daughters' wonderful mother.
DR Smith

Happy Valentine's Day most wonderful man!
I love you so very much for the remarkable man you are, and the extraordinary father you will soon be! Love, me.

Rob & Anita
They say the first time around is a charm, but the second time was a blessing sent from above.

Dear Hillary,
Thank you for being my special Valentine and my best friend.
Love, Paul

Patty-Roses are red,
hot tamales as well,
I'm so glad you look so much better than you smell.
I Love You!
Annie

Bil & Josh,
Have a wonderful Valentine's day together. I am very proud of you!

Rajni,
When parted, we feel the lack of the other half of ourselves. We are incomplete like a book in two volumes of which the first has been lost. Love: incompleteness is absence.
Raj

Erin & Dan
You're so special to me Sweetie. The time we spend together is priceless. I love the way you love me.

PET PORTER
To Juli,
Happy Valentines Day to the world's best mommy, even when you're in my space.
Love, Sammi

Carol, Bridget and Tedster,
Happy Valentine's Day!

Landry's legacy may not be matched

■ The legendary former Dallas Cowboys coach died Saturday after a bout with leukemia. He was 75.

By Jaime Aron
Associated Press

DALLAS — When Tom Landry was fired as coach of the Dallas Cowboys, many people said there would never be anyone like him again. Eleven years later, that seems truer than ever.

Landry's death Saturday night brought new reflection on his legacy. After dusting off the old stories and statistics, his accomplishments are even more impressive today.

It's difficult to imagine one person doing so much, so well for so long.

Landry was a winner. His 270 victories are third most in NFL history. His teams reached five Super Bowls, winning two. They had a winning record for 20 straight seasons.

It's also worth noting that two of his Super Bowl losses were to the Pittsburgh Steelers during their Iron Curtain dynasty. The other was on a field goal in the final seconds.

Landry was an innovator. He revolutionized defenses by creating the 4-3 formation in 1956, then in 1961 came up with the multiple offense to counter it. Both remain standards in all levels of football.

He continued tinkering with ideas and formations. He came up with things like the "Flex" defense and the chorus line routine that had the offensive line set, stand and reset.

He also borrowed from the business world. He took such notions as quality control and definition of goals and adapted them to football. Those, too, remain staples from high school through the NFL.

Hawkeyes avenge last year's loss to Illinois

■ Iowa jumped out 14-0 and cruised to a win against the No. 5 rated Fighting Illini.

By Jeremy Schnitker
The Daily Iowan

Payback was swift in Carver-Hawkeye Arena on Friday night.

The top-ranked, undefeated Iowa wrestling team (16-0, 6-0) scored early and often against No. 5-ranked Illinois and sent the Fighting Illini home early after a 27-9 bludgeoning.

The match avenged Iowa's 20-16 loss last year to Illinois.

The loss was the first for Illinois, who came into the match sporting a 12-0 record.

The meet started out at 125 pounds, which spelled trouble immediately for the Illini, as Iowa's "death row" got the ball rolling.

Jody Strittmatter opened the meet with a pin over Ryan Escobar, Eric Juergens followed with a major decision over Dave Stoltz and Doug Schwab came back strong after last week's defeat with a major decision over No. 6-ranked Carl Perry.

Before Illinois knew what hit them, Iowa was up 14-0.

"Those are our big horses right there, 125, '33 and '41," Mike Zadick said. "It's good to get that momentum going."

Fifth ranked Zadick kept things going with his 10-3 upset over second-ranked Adam Tirapelle, staking his claim as one of the best 149-pound wrestlers in the country.

With No. 1-ranked Tony Davis of UNI falling on Friday, Zadick could rise as high as second when the next set of rankings are released.

T.J. Williams joined in the bonus point action, picking up a major decision over Griff Powell.

The Hawkeyes came out in dominating fashion, picking up as many extra points as they could. According to coach Jim Zalesky, finishing matches strong

Home floor hex helps Iowa

■ The Iowa women's basketball team upset No. 25 Illinois, who has never won at Carver.

By Robert Yarborough
The Daily Iowan

The curse of Carver-Hawkeye haunted No. 25 Illinois once again Sunday.

The Fighting Illini are winless at Carver all-time, a stat that didn't change Sunday.

Illinois (18-9, 8-5) committed 21 turnovers as Iowa (7-15, 4-8) cruised to an 80-73 upset victory in front of 3,706 at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

With less than two minutes to go and an eight point lead in hand, the Hawkeyes sensed the upset was imminent. Iowa players congratulated each other and hit their necessary free throws. Coach Angie Lee said the victory had been a long time coming.

"We are not going to win the Big Ten championship, so the next best thing we can do is play spoiler," Lee said. "Cara Consuegra is the most underrated guard in the Big Ten and I am about ready to start a campaign for her after watching her excel in this game. She is unbelievable."

Consuegra was a step ahead of Illinois sophomore Allison Curtin throughout the game, which led to a number of layups and free-throw opportunities. The junior finished with 23 points and six assists, including an 11-12 performance from the free-throw line.

The three-point shot made the difference for Iowa in the second half. Iowa trailed 39-33 at halftime, but after cutting the deficit to one point with 12:20 left in the second half, the Hawkeyes exploded from the perimeter to take over the game.

Lindsey Meder, Leah Magner and Mary Berdo hit consecutive three point field goals to give Iowa a 59-52 lead with 10:38 left in the second half. After that point, Consuegra went six for six from the free-throw line to help seal the victory.

Iowa hit in the clutch with a 82% free-throw percentage for the game, including a 90% (17-19) performance in the second half.

Consuegra said that desire separated the Hawkeyes from the Illini.

"We simply wanted this win more than Illinois," Consuegra said. "All of us hit when we needed to and it established a very good flow for our team."

Meder scored 13 points, while junior Randi Peterson

Up and down year makes Hawkeyes seasick

■ Three days after winning at No. 5 Ohio State, the Hawkeyes shot 30 percent from the floor in a loss to Illinois.

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — Center Jacob Jaacks gets ill just thinking about Iowa's up and down basketball season.

The Hawkeyes continued their frustrating pattern of following a good game with a bad one at Illinois on Saturday. Three days after winning at No. 5 Ohio State, the Hawkeyes looked helpless on offense in a 78-50 loss to the Illini.

The Ohio State victory had been preceded by a 26-point loss at home to Purdue, which had followed an upset of Kansas.

"The roller coaster of the season is definitely making me seasick," Jaacks said. "Every time we have a big win and it seems like we're on a big roll, we tend to have a letdown. This is definitely a letdown."

Iowa coach Steve Alford, while as frustrated as anyone, dislikes the use of the term roller coaster to describe the Hawkeyes' season, even though it has been exactly that.

"I wouldn't say it's a roller coaster because I like this team," Alford said. "They've worked hard. They do a good job of listening. I just think our backs are in the corner in a lot of areas."

Illinois backed Iowa (11-12 overall, 4-7 Big Ten) into a corner all day with its harassing, physical defense. The Illini cut off paths to the basket and rarely gave the Hawkeyes a good shot.

Iowa shot 26.3 percent in falling behind 30-17 at halftime and made just 31.5 percent of its shots in the game. The 50 points were the Hawkeyes' fewest since a 49-48 loss to Wisconsin on Feb. 26, 1997. It was

Marquette no match for inspired Iowa tennis team

■ Iowa's women's tennis team lost just one match in its win over the Eagles Saturday.

By Todd Brommelkamp
The Daily Iowan

Iowa women's tennis Paul Wardlaw thought Saturday's match between his team and the Marquette Golden Eagles would be a tough contest.

The teams were ranked closely in both national and regional polls, and had traded 5-4 losses the last two times they played each other.

Needless to say, he was not disappointed at the outcome of their most recent showdown.

Iowa cruised past Marquette, 8-1, at the Recreation Building to even its season record at 2-2.

"I'm just real pleased in the way we played from top to bottom," Wardlaw said.

Iowa's only loss came from Shera Wiegler at the No. 1 singles position. She fell in straight sets to Elisa Penalvo, 3-6, 4-6. It was the only blemish on the day for the Hawkeyes.

Iowa made short work of the rest of the field, rolling to straight-set victories over the remaining competitors.

Natalya Dawaf had to work for her first set victory 7-5, then cruised past Sara Fernandez 6-1 to take the match.

Toni Neykova added a 6-1, 6-1 victory over Laura Garcia.

The bottom of the Hawkeye lineup had little trouble disposing of their competition. Megan Kearney defeated Julia Sapozhnikova 6-4, 6-1. Erica Johnson made short work of Anna Pavlovic, winning 6-0, 6-0. Jen Sinclair finished the Golden Eagles off with a 6-1, 6-1 victory over Christine Dimasi.

With its dominating showing in singles action, Iowa had already wrapped up the match before doubles competition began. That did not slow the Hawkeyes down as they swept to victory in all three matches.

Wiegler recovered from her loss to team with Neykova and defeat Penalvo and Fernandez 8-3.

Dawaf and Sinclair held off a late rally from Garcia and Pavlovic to win

In its third dual of the season, the Iowa men's tennis team (2-1) lost on the road Sunday to No. 44 Kansas (2-3), 4-3.

Kansas won two of three doubles matches to win the doubles point and, therefore, entered singles competition up 1-0. The Hawkeyes and Jayhawks split the six singles matches.

"Overall it was a tough loss," coach Steve Houghton said. "The doubles point is obviously crucial."

It was a disappointment, but we're almost as good as Kansas. We've played them in the past and we haven't played them as close as this."

Last season in Lawrence, Kan. Iowa lost, 6-1. No. 1 singles player Tyler Cleveland had Iowa's lone win.

Sunday, Cleveland was one of three Iowa players to come away victorious in singles competition. Cleveland defeated Rodrigo Echagaray, 6-2, 6-3, at No. 1; Jake Wilson downed Pete Stroer, 6-2, 3-6, 6-1 at No. 4 and at No. 6 Hunter Skogman beat Bryan Maier, 7-5, 6-4.

Peter Mandic and Pete Rose came away with Iowa's only doubles win, 8-6, at No. 3 doubles.

Rose made his debut as a Hawkeye Sunday, as did Hunter Skogman. Rose, a freshman sat out Iowa's first duals due to injury and Skogman saw his first action after redshirting last season.

"Pete Rose played very good doubles," Houghton said. "This was Hunter Skogman's first dual and he won."

Mandic, Stuart Waters and J.R. Chidley lost their matches in straight sets.

"The doubles point was key," Houghton said. "It swung the match. We split the singles matches with them. It is difficult against a good team to win four of six singles matches."

Zone defense too much for Maryland

After upsetting Duke on Wednesday, Maryland fell to Temple 73-65 Sunday.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Temple got what it usually gets from its zone defenses. The Owls also got some impressive performances from a couple of players who have been struggling.

All that meant the 19th-ranked Owls beat No. 23 Maryland 73-65 Sunday in a February non-conference game played with the intensity of a March tournament matchup.

Lamont Barnes, who had scored in double figures only twice in the last nine games, had 23 points and Lynn Greer, who was 2-for-11 from the field in his last game and 0-for-5 in the first half of this one, scored all 14 of his points in the second half as the Owls (18-4) won their ninth straight game overall and 20th in a row at home.

The defense provided its usual numbers, holding Maryland to 38 percent shooting (24-for-63) while forcing 27 turnovers.

"It was good to play a team like this," Temple coach John Chaney said. "You have to face a team like that to play good defense."

The Terrapins (17-7), who were coming off their upset win at No. 3 Duke, had no answer down the stretch as Temple started pulling away.

"It wasn't our defense that lost this game it was the way we executed our offense against the zone," Maryland coach Gary Williams said. "Twenty-seven turnovers, you don't have to look any farther."

Greer scored 10 straight points for Temple as it took the lead for good. His consecutive 3-pointers made it 53-49 with 7:23 left.

Consecutive jumpers by Mark Karcher, who finished with 18 points, gave the Owls a 59-54 lead with 4:33 left. Maryland got within 64-60 on a rebound basket by Terence Morris with 59 seconds left, but the Owls went 9-for-10 from the free throw line over the final 52 seconds.

"We got some good looks in the first half but maybe we were rushing too much," Greer said. "In the second half we took our time a lot more. That was a good test for us. It's a big change from Atlantic 10 teams."

It was also quite a change for Maryland from what it is used to seeing in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

"We never see zones in the ACC and they play a good one," Williams said.

Morris finished with 17 points — 11 over final six minutes — and 12 rebounds for the Terrapins, who had won four straight games and six of seven. Juan Dixon had 21 points for Maryland, which finished with a 48-30 rebound advantage, while Lonny Baxter had 11.

The 27 turnovers were one off Maryland's season high.

"They played good defense but a lot of our turnovers were careless," Dixon said. "We played well in the first half and had a little run in the second half but they had the last run."

Schwab gets revenge after loss to Schatzman

Iowa's Doug Schwab got redemption for last Sunday's loss, beating Illinois' Carl Perry 18-9 Friday night.

By Greg Wallace
The Daily Iowan

This time, Doug Schwab ran up the tunnel of Carver-Hawkeye Arena a winner.

Five days after suffering his first defeat of the season, 3-2 to Northwestern's Scott Schatzman, Iowa's No. 2-ranked 141 pound junior turned up the juice in the third period to scorch Illinois' Carl Perry, 18-9 Friday night.

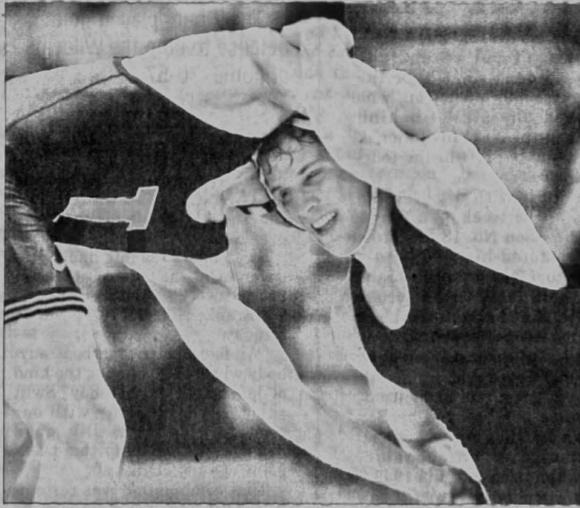

After losing to Schatzman, Schwab stormed out of the arena, in full sulk mode. The loss, Schwab's first since a 1999 defeat to Oklahoma State's Reggie Kelly, clearly had its effects.

"As much hard work and effort I put into the sport, if it didn't hurt there'd be something wrong," he said. "It really cut deep, but they said that you've gotta recover. You can't dwell on those things. You've gotta keep building."

As the match began, it appeared that Schwab had a post-loss hangover.

He had a typical slow start, trailing 2-0 after the first period as Perry rode him out to end the opening three minutes.

"I don't feel like (Perry) controlled me," Schwab said. "I was in on a few shots early. He just caught me on a good shot and got me in a good position, where I had to fight out of it."

The second period was dominated by Schwab. He escaped off of the period whistle to cut the lead to 2-1. Then, finally, Schwab got the crowd into the match, taking Perry down to roaring approval from the 4,844 in attendance. He added another takedown, and led 5-3 after two periods.

The momentum was swinging toward the Iowa star. And Schwab left no doubt in the third period that he was fully recovered from his early-week slip-up. Schwab broke Perry, physically and mentally. After Perry escaped from the down position to make the score 5-4, Schwab took him down. And let him up. And then took him down again. Perry was shaken, drawing a stalling call.

Schwab wasn't finished. He burst into Perry, building a 12-5 lead. Take him down, let him up, rinse, wash, repeat. Perry was toast.

When Schwab scored his final takedown, Perry was so exhausted that for all one knew, he could have been a rag doll stolen from the Iowa wrestling room.

Cue the standing ovation, please.

"That's the ultimate," Schwab said. "You get a guy where he won't get up, it pretty much says, 'That's it. I don't want to wrestle any more.' That's a great feeling. I love being able to do that."

Iowa coach Jim Zalesky said that Schwab simply took his intensity to another level.

"The difference was, (Schwab) came out harder tonight," Zalesky said. "He was getting in some scrambles, even if he didn't score. He just picked up his intensity a notch."

Schwab said he worked harder than ever in practice during the week. His teammates noticed.

"He's always working really hard, but there was a little extra fire in his eyes this week," 125-pound Jody Strittmatter said.

With the late burst, Schwab may have saved himself from falling into third-place in his own conference. If he had been beaten by Perry, the former No. 1 Schwab would have fallen to third in his own conference.

"It was big for seedings," Zalesky said. "Coming back from a match like Sunday, that's going to help Schwab get his confidence back."

Doug Schwab has his confidence back? Look out, Schatzman.

Steele, 4x400 relay team pace Hawks

Iowa's 4x400 relay team qualified for the NCAA Championships at the Cyclone Classic.

By Jeremy Schnitker
The Daily Iowan

It was an outstanding weekend for the Iowa men's track team, according to Iowa track coach Larry Wiczorek, whose team competed in the Cyclone Classic Friday and Saturday.

He saw his Hawkeyes perform well against some of the best competition in the country and said he was encouraged how his team competed with the Big Ten Indoor Meet looming.

"We had lots of great performances," Wiczorek said. "I was really pleased with the whole team, this was a good last tune-up before the Big Ten meet."

Iowa was paced by Stetson Steele, who placed second in the 5,000-meters with a school indoor record time of 14:00.52. Wiczorek called the performance "one of the best runs by an Iowa athlete."

Other notable performances included Iowa's 4x400 relay team placing fifth and provisionally qualifying for the NCAA Indoor Championships, Jeremy Allen's third place toss in the weight throw and Tim Dodge's seventh place finish in the 200-meters.

Wiczorek was exuberant of Iowa's progress in the 4x400.

"We have a great tradition at Iowa in the 4x4," Wiczorek said. "The only star we have back on that relay is Dodge, so for the younger guys to make the NCAA qualifying standard was nice."

The Hawkeyes face off in a dual with Wisconsin next week, then gear up for the Big Ten meet on Feb. 26-27.

According to Wiczorek, his Hawkeyes could improve on last year's seventh place finish.

"It's going to be a real dog fight," Wiczorek said of the meet. "I would like our positioning to be consistent in the top five every meet."

DI sportswriter Jeremy Schnitker can be reached at jschnitk@blue.weeg.uiowa.edu.

Women's track team keeps up positive trend

Although the Hawkeyes didn't win an event at the Cyclone Classic, they continued to progress.

By Jeremy Schnitker
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's track team finished its final indoor track meet before the Big Ten indoor championships this weekend as they participated in the Cyclone Classic in Ames.

The meet, which was a non-team scoring event, saw no Hawkeyes win events. But coach James Grant said he rejoiced by seeing his team continue their trend of weekly improvement.

"We had a number of people improving again," Grant said. "I say this time and time again, but it's a coach's dream to see your athletes improve every week."

According to Grant, nearly everyone improved on their personal times at the meet. He said the high point of the meet was freshman Jessie Strand's fifth place finish in the pole vault. Her mark of 3.45-meters was also an indoor school record.

"This was only my second time performing," said Strand, who sat out much of the first half of the season with an injury. "It felt good to be at that level already."

Other Hawkeyes who performed well were Julie Gallery, who placed third in the high jump, Nicole Charles, who placed third in the 600-meter dash, and Sarah Arens who placed sixth in both the mile run and the 3,000-meter run. Colleen Prendergast also placed fifth in the 60-meter hurdles.

Prendergast, who normally also competes in the 200-meter dash, was forced to sit the race out with a slight injury.

Iowa gets two weeks off from competition to train for the Big Ten meet on Feb. 26-27. According to Grant, the team will use that time to get healthy again.

"The two weeks off will definitely help us," Grant said. "We have some small injuries on this team so this will help us get healthy."

DI sportswriter Jeremy Schnitker can be reached at jschnitk@blue.weeg.uiowa.edu.

UNI freshman draws two game suspension

CEDAR FALLS, Iowa — Northern Iowa forward Derek Paben was suspended for two games for failing to return from a game after being excused to attend a friend's funeral.

Paben, a 6-foot-6 freshman from Pickrell, Neb., did not come back for Northern Iowa's game with Indiana State last Wednesday. He was suspended for Saturday's 74-64 loss to Southwest Missouri State and for Thursday's game at Southern Illinois. Paben averages 3.4 points per game.

Mickelson ends Tiger's hot streak at six

■ Tiger Woods faltered over the final nine holes of the Buick Classic, halting his winning streak.

By Doug Ferguson
Associated Press

SAN DIEGO — The only thing more amazing than The Streak was the way it ended — another spectacular comeback, another stunning collapse.

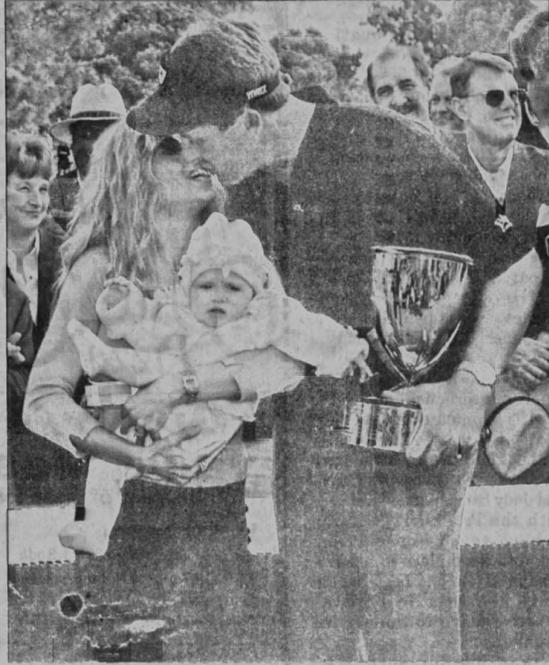

Only this time, both belonged to Tiger Woods.

Woods erased a seven-shot deficit in a matter of seven holes, only to see his hopes of a seventh straight PGA Tour victory disappear in the cool Pacific air when he became a victim of his own mistakes and a gutsy revival by Phil Mickelson.

The longest PGA Tour winning streak in 52 years ended Sunday in the Buick Invitational, where Mickelson won for the first time in 18 months and left Byron Nelson's record run of 11 straight victories as the standard.

"I didn't back off. I didn't dog it out there," Woods said. "I just hung in there. For some reason I didn't hit the ball as crisp today as I needed to."

In a final round packed with as much drama as a major championship, Mickelson recovered from two double bogeys with back-to-back birdies, and went on to a four-stroke victory over Woods and Shigeki

Maruyama.

He closed with a 70 and finished at 18-under 270 for the 14th victory of his career, worth a career-high $540,000.

Fighting his swing all day,

Woods clawed his way into a tie with a birdie on the par-5 13th, only to follow with bogeys on the next two holes. The result was his first loss in a PGA Tour event since late August at the hands of his first victim.

"I wasn't out to end the streak. I don't want to be the bad guy," said Mickelson, who finished one stroke behind Woods in the NEC Invitational. "I just wanted to win the tournament."

He did it with his best two shots of the week — a 9-iron into 2 feet on No. 13 for birdie that restored his lead, and a wedge to 6 feet for birdie on the next hole for a three-stroke margin that became too large even for Woods to overcome.

"At least I made it interesting for Phil," Woods said.

Woods' great run ends at six, the same number won by Ben Hogan in 1948 but still well short of the "untouchable" record that Nelson set in 1945.

It was only fitting that it was Mickelson who kept Nelson's record safe. Down on his luck after shooting a 78 in the third round of the 1998 PGA Championship, he called Lord Byron for some help with his game, and won at rain-delayed Pebble Beach two days later.

What a way to return the favor. "To go against the best player in the world and come out on top means a lot," Mickelson said. "I know I can play against the best and win."

It took everything he could muster, in a town where he grew up, on a Torrey Pines course where he used to play three times a week in high school.

LSU downs Kentucky

■ The Tigers played great defense to stop the Wildcats at home, 70-57.

By Mary Foster
Associated Press

BATON ROUGE, La. — Stormie Swift provided the scoring for LSU, but even Swift credited the Tigers' defense for their win over Kentucky.

Swift had 26 points and LSU's defense harassed No. 11 Kentucky into 23 turnovers in the 25th-ranked Tigers' 70-57 win on Sunday.

"We feel like we can beat anybody when we're playing the kind of defense we played today," Swift said. "If we just stay with our game and play really good defense, we can keep this thing going against anybody."

That combination was certainly effective against Kentucky, as the Tigers had 17 steals.

"We go into every game knowing we have to play good defense to win," said freshman point guard Torris Bright, who had five steals and seven assists. "That's the key, a good game by our big men and playing defense."

LSU (19-4, 6-4 Southeastern Conference) got 21 points from Brian Beshara, and Jabari Smith added 10 and eight rebounds. Swift also had eight rebounds.

"I don't know if I have ever had a team play defensively as well or play as hard as this team has played over this last stretch of games," LSU coach John Brady said. "I haven't ever been on, or been a coach on a team that has put together five or six games where the effort and rebounding and commitment or guarding has been like this team."

Kentucky (17-7, 7-3) rallied from 20 points down with 10:53 to play to get within five points. The Tigers then closed the game with an 11-3 run.

West wins offensive-minded All-Star Game

■ Tim Duncan and Kevin Garnett led the West past slam-dunk champion Vince Carter and the East.

By Chris Sheridan
Associated Press

OAKLAND, Calif. — Vince Carter started things off with a dunk worthy of a contest, Tim Duncan and Shaquille O'Neal played like MVPs and Karl Malone got involved as little as possible.

In an All-Star game that was almost a microcosm of the first half of the season, each star had a chance to show his specialty — and most of them did.

Behind 24 points apiece from Duncan and Kevin Garnett, 22 from O'Neal and 14 assists from Jason Kidd, the West defeated the East 137-126 Sunday in the 49th version of the league's showcase event.

This was the first All-Star game since 1998 because last year's was canceled by the lockout, but the players hadn't forgotten how to play one of these games. Heavy on the fancy stuff and short on fundamentals, the players put on as much of a show as they could — and Carter's portion of it happened right off the bat.

The first basket for the East was an alley-oop dunk by Carter off a pass from Allen Iverson, while the second bucket was a breakaway slam by Carter that closely resembled one of his best from the dunk contest Saturday night.

Carter did a 360-degree spin to his right, rather than doing it the easy way by spinning left, and dunked the ball with two hands.

The East tried to give Carter another spectacular dunk in the first minute, but Grant Hill's alley-oop pass off the backboard was too hard. Later in the quarter when Eddie Jones tried to zip a pass to Carter and Iverson deflected it out of bounds, Jones grimaced at Iverson as if to say "It's him, not you."

Iverson led the East with 26 points and nine assists, while Ray Allen had 14 and Carter 12.

O'Neal and Duncan were named co-MVPs, the first time the award has been shared since 1993.

O'Neal also had nine rebounds and three blocks, while Duncan had 14 rebounds and four assists. Kobe Bryant added 15 for the West, while Michael Finley and Kidd had 11 apiece.

Malone, who wasn't happy that the NBA threatened him with a five-game suspension if he failed to show up, played just three minutes — all in the first half — and missed his only shot.

East leads the series 31-18 but had its three-game winning streak snapped.

After the breakneck start keyed by Carter's dunks, the pace slowed early in the second quarter as the reserves got their minutes. Allen and O'Neal injected some life back into the game — Allen with a Carteresque drive and dunk; O'Neal by dribbling coast to coast for a layup and then following with a fast-break slam and an alley-oop dunk off a pass from Kidd complete with a chin-up on the rim.

Carter, who won the slam-dunk contest with a dominant performance Saturday night, had a pedestrian dunk for the final basket of the first half, cutting the East's deficit to 64-59.

The third quarter was showtime again, at least while the starters were in. Kidd threw an alley-oop pass that banked in (he did not call glass), O'Neal did a 360-degree slam of his own, cheating on the first 180 degrees (NBC microphones caught him saying "it wasn't a 360, it was a 257"), and Bryant made a sky hook reminiscent of something out of Kareem Abdul-Jabbar's repertoire.

The West started the fourth quarter with a 10-2 run, led by five points from Finley, to go ahead 109-99, and the East never made a run the rest of the way.

Kidd came up with the final highlight play of the night with 2:48 left, tossing an underhanded pass 18 feet up in the air that Bryant converted into an alley-oop dunk.

Carter had a chance to close the game with a flourish, but a full-court pass to him was thrown too far and he ended up trying to shoot the ball from behind the backboard.

Notes: Among the courtside spectators were Magic Johnson, Evander Holyfield and Bill Russell. Michael Jordan sat eight rows up from the floor — three rows in front of commissioner David Stern ... Jerry Stackhouse was the last player to check in after sitting out the first 15:57. ... Hill sat out the second half after losing a contact lens. He did not bring a replacement.

8-6. With the win, Dawaf became Iowa's all-time leader in doubles wins with 71. She surpassed Andrea Calvert, who set the old mark in 1993.

Johnson and Kearney finished off the Golden Eagles, routing Dimasi and Sapozhnikova 8-0.

Wardlaw was happy to see his doubles combos do so well.

"We've just gotten better and better our last two weeks," he said. "We're really beginning to look like doubles teams out there."

For Johnson, the key to victory was concentrating on the match at hand.

"We were just really focused today," she said. "We played with lots of intensity out there."

Wardlaw credited the team's focus, but pointed to the overall play of experienced players.

"Our success is really based on our upperclassmen," Wardlaw said. "They are the rock of the team."

He was happiest with the play of his junior class. 1999's junior class was a big reason behind the team's NCAA tournament appearance. He hopes for the same thing from this season's class.

"Our junior class is really rising to the occasion," he said. "Megan played the best match of her career and Erica played well at No. 5 for us."

Iowa hits the road next weekend, heading to Mobile, Ala., where they will take on South Alabama and Fresno State.

Iowa's widest margin of defeat since a 110-79 loss at Indiana on March 12, 1995.

"I can't explain it," said Rob Griffin, who led Iowa with 20 points but needed 18 shots to make seven baskets. "We go in ready to play, but it doesn't go our way. Their defense was mangling us, but our offense wasn't there."

At the other end, Iowa again had no answer for freshman forward Brian Cook. He scored 19 points in Illinois' victory in Iowa City on Jan. 26 and came up with 21 Saturday on 7-for-11 shooting. Lucas Johnson added 16 points for the Illini (15-7, 7-4), who are just 1 1/2 games out of first place in the Big Ten.

"We did a nice job setting the tone defensively," Illinois coach Lon Kruger said.

That defense held Dean Oliver to two points on 1-6 shooting after he had scored 21 at Ohio State. Oliver committed five turnovers, as did Ryan Luhrmann. Jaacks had 12 points and 13 rebounds but had problems on defense against Illinois' taller front line.

"Dean turned an ankle early in the game," Alford said. "I don't know if that had anything to do with it, but Dean did not play well. I didn't think Louie played well. Jake had no answer for Cook.

"Two veterans didn't give us a whole lot and the other one couldn't stop anybody. When they don't play well, it's pretty hard for us to stay in games."

Iowa finishes its three-game road swing Wednesday night at Purdue, which shellacked the Hawkeyes 84-58 in Iowa City on Feb. 5. But if the pattern continues, Iowa is due for a good game.

"I can't wait until the next game," Oliver said.

finished with 12 points before fouling out of the game with 7:51 remaining. Sophomore Beatrice Bullock also chipped in 10 points and six rebounds, but more importantly, the sophomore went a perfect six for six from the free-throw line.

Lee was impressed with the sophomore's performance.

"There are some days where I look at Beatrice at the line and just shake my head wondering if she will even make one shot," Lee said. "She simply took advantage of the opportunity to make a difference and did the job."

Iowa held Curtin, Illinois' leading scorer, to just two points, while senior Tauja Catchings did most of the damage with 28 points and 12 rebounds. Illinois has now lost 16 straight games in Iowa City and has not defeated the Hawkeyes in Iowa City since 1983. The Illini defeated Iowa 86-60 earlier this season in Champaign, Ill.

"Obviously there is something in the water here that does not make us execute," Illinois coach Theresa Grentz said. "This was a bizarre game for us."

Iowa preparing for 'real season' and picking up bonus points is key at this point in the season.

"We say this year in and year out that in tournament time, it could come down to bonus points," Zalesky said. "It could come down to who gets a pin here or who gets a major decision there."

Schwab dubs this time of year "the real season" — that is, the last few matches before the Big Ten's and NCAA's. It looks like Iowa is hitting full stride at just the right time.

"We're definitely on the upswing right now," said Schwab.

"This is the time of year that's most important. This is when we've got to start turning it up and that's what we're doing."

While Zalesky was impressed with the way his Hawkeyes wrestled as a team, he said he would much rather save the team's peak for tournament time.

"We're just picking up the intensity," Zalesky said. "Like I told these guys, we don't have much competition left so you better be wrestling like we're capable. We're starting to get towards our peak."

Iowa travels to Wisconsin on Friday then heads to Minneapolis for the grand finale on Sunday as they are set to take on the No. 3-

The Beach got a little too much sunshine

The most ironic aspect of The Beach is the ineptitude of the story to live up to its atmosphere. The setting is some notion of paradise

FILM REVIEW By VAN GRIFFIN

— a desolate, pristine and perennially sunny beach nestled against a crystalline ocean reservoir in the center of a secret island. But for all the distance traveled to get to this surreal landscape, the actual story goes nowhere.

Leonardo DiCaprio is Richard, a young and experimental traveler who goes to Bangkok in search of a change. There he meets Daffy (Robert Carlisle), a loud and crazy man who gives him a map to the mysterious beach. He also encounters Françoise (Virginie Ledoyen), whom he desperately falls for with one swift turn of a hotel key. But she is already hooked up with Étienne (Guillaume Canet), thus making his infatuation problematic. The three of them set off for the beach, which they find with relative ease. But, immediately upon arrival, the beach becomes something less than paradise, and their adventure supposedly is only beginning.

The conflicts in The Beach are too easily fixed to generate any type of drama or excitement. Firstly, the fact that Étienne just gives up Françoise with very little resistance is completely unbelievable. One day she just decides to be with Richard, and Étienne is like, "Shucks! But, oh well, life goes on. Let's go make some fig leaf undergarments." Just as lame is Richard's relationship with Françoise, which is propounded as being some perfect love, but then it collapses and is forgotten after Richard has sex with another, much less nice and terribly less attractive older woman. It is never explained why he did it, either — he just does it, and the film goes on. Hence, who cares.

Other weak story lines ruin this little vacation. The community they find on the beach is maybe the goofiest, most nonsensical thing I've seen since The Matrix. A bunch of good-looking, open-minded, mostly American and English soul-searchers who fish with spears, swim with sharks, and create their own language is just way too much. I kept waiting for Carson Daly to enter the screen and announce the winners of some Spring Break karaoke contest. And the island the beach is on is essentially owned and maintained by weed-growing and machine-gun toting farmers. This is rather silly because it is never explained how they arrived at this place. And what about fisherman or pilots or anybody who has some form of transportation and eyeballs? How come they've never seen this beach? Again, who cares.

Director Danny Boyle (Trainspotting) just couldn't bring The Beach to life. The film is based on the novel, which, although I haven't read it (surprise), is supposedly at least mildly intriguing and sensible. But the movie simply ain't mildly intriguing and sensible. It's full of boring, typical characters and the "easiest way out" solutions. Too much happens, too much change and metamorphosis for the movie to pull off in two hours' time. For instance, the ever-quick and extremely harsh dilapidation of Richard's mind is not even remotely explained or realistic. He turns from introspective backpacker boy into Colonel Kurtz in a matter of days.

Now, to get the real point of the movie, DiCaprio's performance was a big, smelly shipwreck. He sank once again, this time not on a boat, but as an actor. I would blame this more on the script he was spitting forth as opposed to his lack of talent. (I could never blame Leo). His character is not a good one, and he did nothing extraordinary with it. But, you know, he is topless most of the movie. Hey ladies!

The best part of The Beach is the actual beach and accompanying environment. It's a truly beautiful place and makes me want to stop hanging out at the mall so much. The cinematography is naturally gorgeous, and Boyle's more enlivened directing touches are the film's highlight. A couple of sequences feature some marveled trickery, such as when Richard begins to lose his noodles and starts envisioning himself in a video game. But, again, who really cares about all that funky jazz because it's got so little to do with the story itself.

Once the movie ended, I tried to gather some semblance of a message, and I think I found one — life's a beach, and so is this movie.

And the nominees are ... kooky

LOS ANGELES — Oscar, the Academy Awards statue that resembles a man in a straitjacket with arms tucked tightly to his torso, is having one of his most neurotic years since One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest.

With nominations coming down Tuesday, the wildly eccentric list of contenders includes films about a social-climbing killer, a magical Death Row inmate, chatty ghosts, tobacco-industry nasties, identity snatchers and, seriously, insanely dysfunctional families.

With no arguably great and lasting picture on the order of Schindler's List or The Silence of the Lambs in 1999, Academy voters were handed a remarkably diverse slate of Oscar potentials.

"The films in so many ways are so unexpected — they're such unpredictable stories," said Tony Angellotti, a publicist who works on studio Oscar campaigns and is a member of the Academy that chooses nominees and winners.

Choices this year are as varied as some years of the 1970s, a prime era for character-driven films. In 1975, Cuckoo's Nest, a disturbing comic drama about mayhem in a mental ward, won five Oscars, including best picture, actor for Jack Nicholson, actress for Louise Fletcher and director for Milos Forman. Other films such as Dog Day Afternoon and Nashville also had best-picture nominations that year.

This year's similarly varied slate "makes it more interesting, certainly, and opens the playing field for all of us to consider everything," Angellotti said.

"Other years, you have films where you can say, 'It looks like an Oscar picture, it tastes like an Oscar picture. It must be an Oscar picture.' When you have to consider everything, like this year, it confuses everyone."
