Gas suits give Army indigestion

■ The U.S. has alerted units across the world that its chemical-warfare suits may be defective.

By John M. Donnelly
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Pentagon has alerted U.S. facilities around the world that hundreds of thousands of protective suits meant to shield GIs from gas and germ attacks may have holes and other critical defects, according to military officials and documents. The Pentagon learned about the flaws five years ago but did not consider the problems crucial; in addition, it needed the gear for U.S. peacekeeping troops in Bosnia, criminal investigators say. Not until late last year did a second study on the same suits judge identical flaws to be grave enough to warrant a warning, the investigators said in an interview.

On Feb. 9, the Pentagon cautioned commanders not to use any of the 778,000 suits except in training. The suits, not all of which are defective, cost the government almost $49 million.

The defects included "cuts, holes, embedded foreign matter and stitching irregularities," the Pentagon inspector general said in a report being released this week. The defects potentially could kill people wearing the trousers and jackets in a "chemical-biological contaminated environment," the report said.

A bankrupt New York City-based company, which the inspector general identified as Istratex, produced the charcoal-lined camouflage suits under two contracts dating from 1989. Soldiers wear the suits over their regular camouflage gear where chemical or biological weapons might be used. It was unclear whether any of the suits were worn by troops in the 1990-91 Desert Shield/Desert Storm operation, when a Iraqi chemical attack was considered likely.

Last September, Istratex's president and production manager pleaded guilty in U.S. District Court in New York to one count of making false statements. Other officials were charged

Slow lab blamed in Memmer charges

■ Nearly a year after a double homicide, Jonathon Memmer is charged with murder.

By Katie Bernard and Anne Huyck
The Daily Iowan

After taking more than eight months to process the evidence in a double homicide in an Iowa City apartment building, Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White demanded that state lawmakers put more emphasis on funding the state crime lab.

Police charged Jonathon Memmer, 24, of Marshalltown, Iowa, with two counts of first-degree murder on Feb. 25, just weeks before the one-year anniversary of the slayings.

In his announcement of the charges against Memmer, White said he "had issues with the lab," which he blamed as one of the three factors causing the time gap between the crimes and the filing of charges.

White called the state's criminalistics lab "understaffed and outdated" and urged residents to voice their opinions to lawmakers.

More than 150 pieces of physical evidence were collected from the scene and sent to the crime lab in Des Moines for analysis, though, White said, he was not confident prosecutors could persuade a jury to reach a guilty verdict until he received a Dec. 13 phone call from the lab indicating a new finding in the evidence.

White would not comment on what evidence had been discovered.

The bodies of Laura Watson-Dalton, 29, and Maria Therese Lehner, 27, were discovered on March 19, 1999, after Iowa City police and firefighters were called to a fire at 427 S. Van Buren Apt. 4. Arson was later ruled to be the cause of the blaze.

The fire forced investigators to comb the crime scene "on hands and knees" looking for evidence, White said.

Police say both victims were slain before the fire, suffering from blunt trauma to the head. Watson-Dalton was sexually assaulted, according to the state medical examiner's report.

Investigators said Lehner's blood found on Memmer's shoe and DNA evidence from a cigarette butt at the scene was the main evidence in the charges. A footprint on Watson-Dalton's coat was also found to be consistent with Memmer's shoe, according to the charges.

DNA analysis takes almost a week for one uncontaminated sample, said Mike Peterson, the criminalist supervisor for the lab. Additional time delays occur when samples aren't in good condition or when multiple types and numbers of exams need to be performed, he said.

The DNA lab is currently running about 60 days behind, Peterson said.

Emergency crews flush away Coralville oil spill

■ A 30,000-gallon diesel fuel spill in Coralville prompts a quick cleanup by officials.

By Jeremy Shapiro
The Daily Iowan

Five days ahead of schedule, crews finished a projected week-long cleanup of 30,000 gallons of diesel fuel that was spilled near a creek in southeast Coralville, officials said Sunday.

Crews worked 16- to 20-hour days since the Feb. 26 spill to make the creek and the surrounding area as clean as could be expected, said Tim Powers, the supervisor of operations for Williams Pipeline Co.

The quick work of the Coralville Fire Department, Johnson County Haz-Mat and cleanup crews ensured that the fuel was confined to Biscuit Creek near Fifth Street in Coralville, Powers said. Biscuit Creek is a tributary of Clear Creek, which drains into the Iowa River.

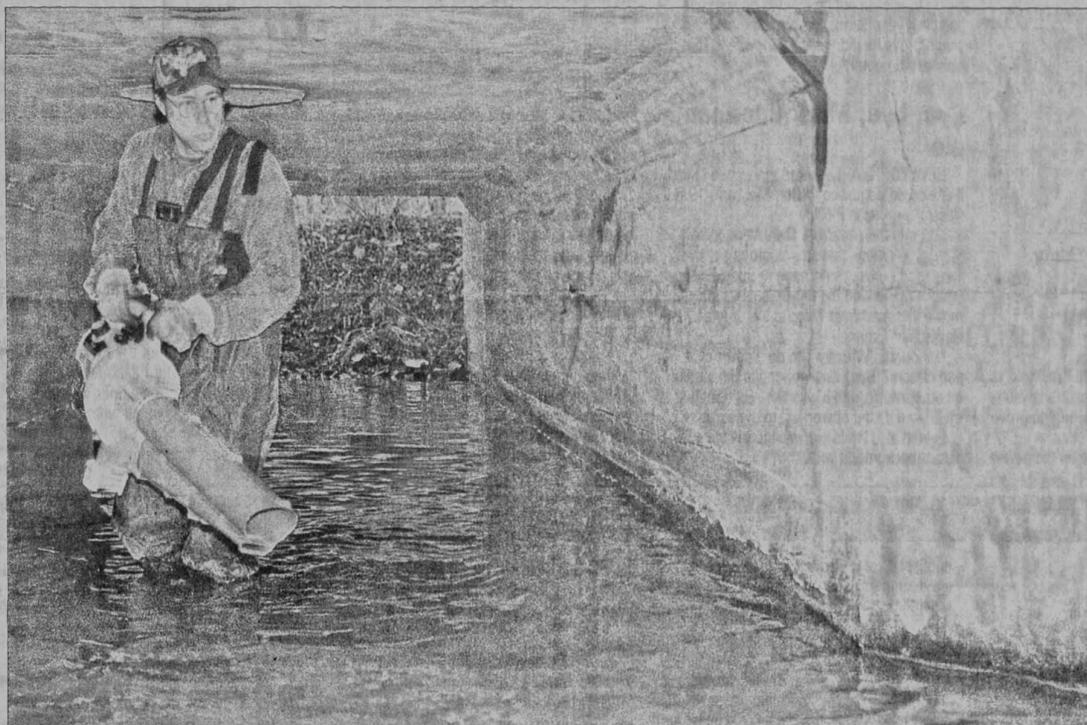

"We will continue to monitor it for a short period of time to make sure everything looks good," he said.

A leaking pipeline at Williams Pipeline Co., 902 First Ave., was responsible for the operation, which was conducted by Williams crews and the Iowa Department of Natural Resources.

The flushing process involved "swishing" fuel from the banks back into the river and using vacuums to suck it from absorbent booms, Powers said.

"We will continue to monitor the Library may force out local stores

■ Businesses in the Leno & Cilek building could be out of a home if the library expansion is approved.

By Chao Xiong
The Daily Iowan

At least one Iowa City business owner says relocating downtown because of library-expansion plans may not be a prudent business move.

Mind Matters co-owner Bart Elkin said he may have to leave downtown if he is unable to stay at his current location in the Leno & Cilek building, 130 S. Dubuque St., because of high rent and the lack of customers.

The library's proposed expansion, which may go to a referendum later this year, would also displace True Value Hardware, Subway, Freshens Premium Yogurt & Ice Cream and China Star, which are also in the building. If the referendum passes, those businesses would be forced to relocate or close.

Even if it means closing one of her four toy-store locations, Mind Matters co-owner Allyn Elkin said expanding the library was a good move for Iowa City.

"Frankly, I think downtown Iowa City is dying," she said. "We've been a lot better at the (Coral Ridge) mall than we've been downtown."

Not all businesses are looking to leave the downtown area. Subway owner Cindy Abraham said she has been looking for a new location downtown for some time, but she has been unable to find an appropriate space.

"We're kind of hidden," she said. "I think it's exciting to move. The

Acclaimed South African writer to speak at UI

■ Athol Fugard, whose plays were often banned under apartheid, will visit the UI.

By Rupa Shenoy
The Daily Iowan

Athol Fugard, a highly renowned playwright and writer who worked for freedom in South Africa, will speak tonight at the UI about his personal and professional experiences.

A free and public speech, which is sponsored by the UI Theatre Arts Department, is scheduled for 8 p.m. in the E.C. Mabie Theatre, UI Theatre Building. Fugard will also spend three days at the UI working with student actors, directors and playwrights in the theater department.

Time has called Fugard "one of the greatest living playwrights." He was central in the effort to end apartheid in South Africa, said Alan MacVey, the chairman of the UI theater department. The anti-oppression message in his plays often put him in conflict with the South African government, he said.

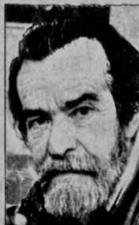

"Inside the theater community, he is accepted as one of the single best-known playwrights," MacVey said.

Fugard is one of the 10-12 Ida Beam distinguished visiting professors chosen annually at the UI.

He will visit two English classes that are studying his plays this week, as well as presenting tonight's lecture, titled "The Voice of Conscious: Antigone in Africa."

"I'm expecting a full house, and the theater seats 470," said Judith Keefe, director of the theater relations office.

Although Fugard is of both South African and Irish descent, he gave a voice to the plight of the black majority of South Africa, MacVey said. Fugard suffered ongoing offi-

Halle Berry investigated in hit-and-run

WEST HOLLYWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Los Angeles County sheriff's deputies are investigating a hit-and-run car accident that involved actress Halle Berry, a sheriff's spokeswoman said.

Berry was in a rented Chevrolet Blazer involved in a crash with another car early on Feb. 23, Deputy Elisabeth Sachs said on Feb. 26.

A woman in the other car had a broken arm and was treated at a hospital. The 31-year-old Berry sought medical treatment for undisclosed injuries.

Sachs said it was not clear if Berry was driving or was a passenger. She said no arrests had been made.

Desperately seeking phone records

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Nicole Brown Simpson's sister says O.J. Simpson's lawsuit against a phone company for records to prove his innocence is just a publicity stunt.

"He just wants to be out there on the news because his ego can't handle the fact that everything's quiet — nobody's talking about him," Denise Brown said on Feb. 26 on KABC-AM.

Simpson was acquitted of the 1994 murders of his ex-wife and her friend, Ronald Goldman. But a jury in a civil suit ordered him to pay a $33.5 million judgment.

Simpson filed the lawsuit on Feb. 24 alleging that GTE Corp. violated his civil rights by failing to release phone records he subpoenaed last year. Simpson claims the records would prove he didn't kill his ex-wife. GTE officials had no comment.

Bye, bye, Miss American pie

NEW YORK (AP) — Madonna wasn't sure if she could do justice to Don McLean's 1971 classic "American Pie."

She told the New York Daily News in its Sunday's editions that she recorded her own version of McLean's homage to Buddy Holly, Ritchie Valens and the Big Bopper for her new movie The Next Best Thing at the urging of co-star Rupert Everett.

"I thought, 'Who am I to do a cover of a pop classic?' But I was working in the studio on other music, and it was like, 'OK, let's just try it.' And it kind of worked, to my surprise."

Everett also lends his voice to the song in distant background vocals.

"To me, it's a real millennium song," Madonna said. "We're going through a big change in terms of the way we view pop culture, because of the Internet. In a way, it's like saying goodbye to music as we know it — and to pop culture as we know it."

The end of hedonism

NEW YORK (AP) — Members of Dasis say they've abandoned their bad behavior to concentrate on making music.

The group's fourth album Standing on the Shoulder of Giants is scheduled to hit record stores Tuesday, and its world tour kicks off this week.

Singer-songwriter Noel Gallagher says the band has outgrown the excesses that fueled its wild ways in recent years. The group was banned from Cathay Pacific Airways in 1998 after getting rowdy on a flight from Hong Kong to Australia.

"I think it's a phase that every band goes through, where the hedonism just becomes all-consuming, and all of a sudden you realize that what you are in the band for — which is the actual music — has become a secondary issue," he told the New York Post.

McNally, Oness win short fiction awards from UI Press

The UI Press has named John McNally recipient of the 2000 John Simmons Short Fiction Award for his collection Troublemakers and selected Elizabeth Oness as the winner of the 2000 Iowa Short Fiction Award for Listeners at the Still Point.

McNally, a graduate of the Iowa Writers' Workshop and Southern Illinois University, is a previous winner of a James Michener fellowship. McNally and his wife, Amy Knox Brown, live in Iowa City. Oness directs marketing and development for the Sutton Hoo Press and lives in La Crosse, Wis. She is a graduate of James Madison University and the Universities of Maryland, College Park, and Missouri, Columbia.

Writer Elizabeth McCracken, who selected this year's winners, says McNally's short stories are "simultaneously laugh-out-loud funny and absolutely heartbreaking ... full of the kind of moral weight that reminds you what stories are for."

Oness has received many honors for her stories, including the O. Henry Prize and a Nelson Algren Award. She has recently completed her soon-to-be-published first novel, Twelve Rivers of the Body.

Both McNally's and Oness' titles will be published by the UI Press this fall.

Memmer charged in double homicide

While the number of workers — 50 — is too few for the amount of work, hiring more criminologists would not solve the problem of being behind, Peterson said — the lab is also in great need of new facilities.

"Facility-wise, we are space saturated," he said. "We are out of room."

The lab requests more money from the governor each year, but the request is not always granted, he said. The lab's workers also hope that the Legislature will allot funding for new facilities within the year.

The governor's budget proposal for fiscal year 2001 includes increasing the laboratory's funding by $437,000 so that nine new staff members can be hired, said Sen. Joe Bolckow, D-Iowa City.

"In my opinion, they will get support," he said. "It is a department with a huge workload, and, hopefully, we will help them with that."

Though it took a lengthy investigation, the Feb. 25 announcement of murder charges are a "bittersweet relief" for members of Watson-Dalton's family.

"We are very relieved and thankful towards the Iowa City Police Department and detective bureau for their good work," said Jim Watson, the father of Watson-Dalton. "It's time to let justice run its course. We are ready for some closure."

While authorities are confident of obtaining a guilty verdict in the case against Memmer, there are also feelings of dread, said Jeff Sullivan, Lehner's cousin and family spokesperson.

"It's like re-living everything all over again. We were a close family, and it's been a pretty long year," he said.

The Watson family has spent the last year praying and gaining support from each other. They have established a scholarship in Laura's name for students wishing to study paramedic training at Methodist College in Omaha.

"Laura was in the first graduating class of that program," Watson said. "She just moved down to Creston to start her new job. We felt that this is what she would have liked to be done."

The money given at Watson-Dalton's funeral was put into the scholarship fund. The family will hold the first fund-raiser for the scholarship, a volleyball tournament, in Omaha on June 10.

Members from both families hope to attend the trial. The two victim's families have kept in touch with one another throughout the year and established a supportive relationship.

"It's nice to know other people have the same kind of feelings and concerns as we do," Sullivan said.

Timeline in Iowa City Homicide case:

- March 17, 1999 — Laura Watson-Dalton, 29, of Creston, Iowa, arrives in Iowa City to visit a cousin and friends for St. Patrick's Day. Watson-Dalton is last seen by her cousin, Shawn Watson, at 12:30 a.m.
- March 18, 1999 — The second victim, Maria Therese Lehner, arrives at her hotel in Iowa City. Lehner is served by Zachary Kraus, a bartender at Chauncey's, who says he saw Jonathon Memmer sit with her.
- March 19, 1999 — Memmer comes to the door of a UI law student's apartment at 427 S. Van Buren at 2:30 a.m. Memmer asks for some cigarettes and about smoking marijuana, according to the student.
- March 20, 1999 — Police visit QuikTrip, 323 E. Burlington, and question an employee at the store. Store manager Matt Goodlaxson confirm a small gas sale was made just before noon.
- March 21, 1999 — Investigators determine that both victims were dead before the fire after suffering blunt trauma to the head.
- March 22, 1999 — The fire at 427 S. Van Buren is ruled to be arson. Authorities later reveal that gasoline was used to start it.
- March 25, 1999 — Investigators release a photo of Memmer. They do not call him a suspect but say he may have valuable information about the case. Memmer has past theft and forgery charges in Johnson County.
- March 26, 1999 — A phone tip leads UI Public Safety officers to the UI Field House, where Memmer is arrested and charged with probation violations stemming from a 1997 third-degree burglary charge.
- March 27, 1999 — Memmer is ordered held on $1 million bond in a Johnson County District Court arraignment for the probation violation. Police identify Lehner as the second victim.
- April 29, 1999 — Police charge Memmer with third-degree burglary, alleging that he stole items from the site of the slayings. Police say Memmer pawned the stolen items at a pawn shop under his own name.
- Sept. 20, 1999 — Iowa City Police Chief R.J. Winkelhake says an arrest in the case is likely but more evidence needs to surface so a guilty verdict can be obtained in court.
- Nov. 8, 1999 — County Attorney J. Patrick White releases the medical examiner's reports on the victims.
- Dec. 13, 1999 — White receives call from the DCI informing him of significant evidence in the case. While declining to elaborate, White says he knows he will be able to file murder charges in the case.
- Dec. 27, 1999 — Unsealed search warrants reveal that investigators found a barbell with hair on it and a stone axe head at the site of the slayings. According to one affidavit, police establish links between Memmer, the women, the gasoline used to start the fire and reports linking Memmer to the apartment in which the bodies were found.
- Feb. 25 — Memmer is charged with two counts of first-degree murder. Memmer will be transported from the Iowa State Penitentiary in Fort Madison to Johnson County Court for his March 1 initial appearance at 1 p.m.

Source/DI research

DI/SS

Memmer, who is currently serving a five-year sentence in the Iowa State Penitentiary in Fort Madison for parole violations, has been ordered to make an initial appearance on the charges Wednesday at 1 p.m. in Johnson County District Court.

The charges, both Class A Felonies, place Memmer "at risk for spending the rest of his life in prison," White said.

A date for the murder trial and verification of the charges will be completed during Wednesday's initial appearance, White said. Pre-trial information will be filed by the county attorney's office 10-45 days after the initial appearance, he said.

No further arrests in the double homicide are expected, said Iowa City Police Chief R.J. Winkelhake.

Although the investigation has taken 11 months, Memmer has been incarcerated since March 26, 1999, for probation violations stemming from a 1997 sentence — which included a two-year probationary period.

Police did not initially call Memmer a suspect in the slayings but said he had "information essential to solving the case." He was arrested at the UI Field House one day after his photo was released to media.

Since his arrest, Memmer has been charged with multiple charges, including third-degree burglary. Police claim that sometime after March 15, 1999, Memmer broke into the Van Buren apartment — which was rented to three UI students who were on Spring Break at the time of the slayings. They did not know the victims. Police say Memmer pawned several items from the apartment under his own name.

Memmer's trial on the burglary charges is scheduled to begin on April 17, but those charges may be dropped because of redundant information, White said.

Pentagon criminal investigators said they pointed out to the Defense Logistics Agency, which manages inventories, problems with some of the "battle-dress overgarments" in 1995.

In 1996, the agency's testers, at the investigators' request, studied 500 of the suits and found defects in 174, officials said.

The Defense Logistics Agency identified the problems as major but not "safety-of-life critical defects," said Mitchell Schlitt, the case agent for the inspector general's Defense Criminal Investigative Service in New York.

"So, because of a need for these suits for the Bosnia action, they stated a need to retain these in stock," he said.

cial harassment during apartheid, and the actors in his plays were occasionally arrested, he said.

Fugard is a role model for people beginning their careers, said Kristen Gandrow, a UI teaching assistant in theater and English whose students will work with Fugard.

"He says you can have serious meanings in theatrical works," she said. "A playwright can have a point and also entertain."

Among some of Fugard's best-known plays are Master Harold and the Boys, Blood Knot, and Sizwe Bansi is Dead. Master Harold was chosen as one of the top English-language plays by the National Theatre in London. In 1998, Fugard received the Vita Award for lifetime achievement by the South Africa Theatre Association.

"Fugard's plays speak to an audience beyond South Africans," MacVey said. "This is an incredible opportunity."

Toxic cleanup goes ahead of schedule booms for a couple of weeks because we are responsible to make sure it is sufficiently cleaned up," said A.L. Goldberg, a DNR field-office supervisor.

Some neighborhood residents were upset that Williams did not inform them sooner of the spill and cleanup procedures. Marie Geiger, 413 Fifth St., said she found out about the spill on the news, not from the company.

"They could have come around and let us know on Saturday," she said.

On Sunday, Williams Co. distributed a letter to the houses that border the creek, explaining the spill and cleanup strategies. Powers said the neighbors' response has been extremely positive, and there would be no future consequences from the spill.

A3-inch pipe on the Williams property that expanded due to cold weather caused the line to break on Feb. 25, Powers said. More than 30,000 gallons of fuel spilled, most of which remained on Williams' property, he said.

Part of the fuel seeped into Biscuit Creek, which runs south for approximately three-quarters of a mile under Fifth and Sixth streets in Coralville. The creek, located next to Coralville Central Elementary School, is not home to any wildlife, Goldberg said.

Someone in the area reported an oily smell at 7 a.m. on Feb. 26. Emergency crew members quickly put a number of absorbent booms in the contaminated areas of the creek to prevent the oil from flowing any farther.

Stores may feel library's growing pains library expansion is a necessity."

Both the Elkins and Abraham said they have encountered problems with high rents downtown.

"There are a lot of spaces empty right now, and it's because the landlords are asking for a lot of money," Allyn Elkin said.

If Iowa City residents approve a referendum to help fund the $18.4 million library expansion, construction could begin as soon as October 2001 and finish within 24 months.

Although Abraham does not have a new store location in mind, she said, she will most likely find a new downtown location before construction begins.

"They should rename the Pedestrian Mall the Foodcourt Mall," Bart Elkin said. "The only way I'm going to stay in the downtown area is if I can stay in that building. It's just another retail business being chased away never to come back again."

Downtown Iowa City has lost some of its vibrancy but not its hope, said Jerry Meis, who leases the Lenoch & Cilek building and sublets commercial space to the businesses.

Low foot traffic through the area has justified Lenoch & Cilek True Value Hardware to not resign its lease, which expires on Feb. 28, 2001, he said. The leases of the four other businesses will expire that day, too, Meis said.

"Anything should be done to keep those businesses downtown and alive," said UI freshman Emily Krall. "This just isn't a college town, it's a town for families and kids."

The Public Library Board has chosen Nov. 7 as a possible date for the referendum, which the Iowa City City Council must approve, said Elizabeth Nichols, the library's assistant director.

The owners of Freshens Premium Yogurt & Ice Cream, Lenoch & Cilek True Value Hardware and China Star could not be reached for comment.

Amtrak gets on expansion track

■ The rail service will expand in 21 states, including a stop in Iowa City.

By Laurence Arnold
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Amtrak, hoping to spur a rail renaissance that will solidify its shaky future, this week unveils a plan to add new passenger routes, expand into package delivery, and maintain unprofitable routes.

Two years in the making, the blueprint would expand or improve service in 21 states (including adding a stop in Iowa City), add 11 route segments and increase train frequency on three routes. It also would boost by 10 percent the number of station-to-station links and bring trains to the neighborhoods of 4 million potential new passengers.

"This is an effort to define, for the first time in our history, a national system that is underpinned by solid economic prospects," said Amtrak President George Warrington.

The railway expects that the changes, when fully implemented, will generate $229 million in new annual revenue and cause a net gain of $65 million in 2003. The timing is crucial for Amtrak. Under a reform act passed in 1997, Amtrak has until the end of fiscal year 2002 to wean itself from federal operating subsidies or face possible liquidation.

Amtrak currently operates a 22,000-mile passenger rail system that serves more than 500 communities in 45 states.

The changes do not require approval by Congress. But in order to implement them, Amtrak will have to strike deals with various freight railroads.

Under the plan, Amtrak trains will begin stopping in Des Moines and Iowa City, Rockford, Ill., Vicksburg, Miss., Monroe and Shreveport, La., Lake Geneva and Janesville, Wis., and destinations on the Atlantic Coast of Florida, including Daytona Beach, Cape Canaveral and Fort Pierce.

CITY BRIEF

Three IC teens charged with kidnapping

Two Iowa City teenagers were kidnapped at knife point and forced to drive a car to various places in Iowa City and Coralville Sunday, according to Coralville police.

Deshawn Myrick, 22, 2422 Lakeside Drive; Octavia Powell, 17, 1100 Arthur St.;

and Erica Evans, 18, 2224 10th Street, Coralville; were arrested and charged with kidnapping in the second degree.

Coralville police learned of the incident while responding to a fight in progress in the 700 block of 20th Ave., Coralville, according to a Coralville police report.

The incident began around 300 p.m. in the Broadway area of Iowa City as the two victims and three suspects were riding in a vehicle, the report said. One of the suspects allegedly pulled a knife and ordered the driver of the car to drive to various locations in Iowa City and Coralville, the report said. At times the knife was allegedly held to the neck of one of the victims and threats were made to both of them, the report said.

The victims were teenage brothers. One suffered a minor injury to his neck.

NATION BRIEFS

Talk stirs about Albright as next Czech president

WASHINGTON — Madeleine Albright, America's Czech-born secretary of State, will return next week to her homeland, where there is talk she might seek the presidency of the East European nation after her tour in Washington ends.

Some Czechs are speaking of her as a possible successor to President Vaclav Havel, who must retire in 2002. Havel, a playwright-turned-politician, helped lead the Velvet Revolution, which in 1989 persuaded communist rulers to resign.

He has openly talked about the possibility of Albright succeeding him.

Michael Zantovsky, the former Czech ambassador to Washington, said Sunday in Prague that he met last week with Havel and discussed, among other things, the possibility that Albright might run to succeed Havel.

"I never made it a secret that I think that Madeleine Albright could, one day in the future, play a big role in Czech politics," Zantovsky said.

He stressed that the idea is not new and that it would not dominate Albright's agenda in the Czech Republic next week.

In Prague, Havel's chief policy adviser, Pavel Fischer, told Time magazine: "It is not impossible that they will talk about this."

The secretary of State has not publicly discussed her future plans. In its new issue, Time quoted unidentified sources as saying she "has begun to consider the possibility of running."

Albright's spokesman, James Rubin, would not discuss the matter Sunday. "The secretary is completely happy serving the United States," he said.

Albright's March 5-8 visit coincides with the commemoration of the 150th anniversary of the birth of national hero Tomas Masaryk, who served as the first president of the Czechoslovak Republic after the collapse of Austria-Hungary in 1918.

Pro-government rally held outside expelled diplomat's home

HAVANA — Shouting, "Down with the lie," scores of teen-agers held a pro-government rally Sunday outside the family home of a Cuban diplomat expelled from the United States after he ignored a State Department demand to leave the country.

Jose Imperatori, 46, was taken into custody by U.S. authorities and flown aboard a U.S. government plane to Montreal on Feb. 26. He had been expected to leave Canada for Havana Sunday, but his plans were not clear. Even Imperatori's family said they weren't sure when he would arrive.

Watching the small demonstration of teen-agers waving Cuban flags outside her white, two-story home in Havana's Vedado neighborhood, Imperatori's mother, Matilde Garcia, said she looked forward to her son's arrival.

"We are absolutely fine, and we are confident that everything will turn out well," she said.

A statement read on government television Sunday indicated that Imperatori would likely be staying — at least for now — in Canada.

The Foreign Ministry late on Feb. 25 issued instructions to its diplomats in the Canadian capital of Ottawa to seek a visa for Imperatori "for the time needed to find an honorable solution to the problem that has been created," the statement said. In the meantime, Imperatori will continue a hunger strike in Ottawa, to which he traveled shortly after arriving in Montreal.

Canadian Foreign Affairs spokesman Patrick Hebert said Sunday night that Imperatori was still in Ottawa and would be leaving "shortly." He would not be more specific about when Imperatori would leave and where he would be going.

IRA puts N. Ireland peace plan in jeopardy

Somewhere out there in the world of Bush, McCain and just what to do with the Englert, the Northern Ireland peace process is falling apart. The Good Friday peace accord was historic when it was brokered in 1998 with the steadfast support of the Clinton administration. The accord presented war-weary Northern Ireland, which has been under British rule for centuries, with the opportunity for autonomous rule in the form of coalition government.

This government would be composed of Protestants, who do not exactly want to see the British go, and Catholics, particularly in the form of Sinn Fein, the political wing of the Irish Republican Army. The IRA has been responsible for numerous terrorist acts over the last two decades in an effort to drive out the British and to reunite Northern Ireland with the Republic of Ireland, itself only free since 1922.

A condition of the accord was that the IRA begin to disarm itself of its stockpiled weapons by the time the new government came into being. That deadline came and went two weeks ago without the IRA giving up its guns. The chances for true peace have become precarious since, with riots and protests resulting in more deaths. Now the IRA has tagged its disarmament to the complete withdrawal of all British forces from Northern Ireland. Unfortunately, the IRA has decided to play politics with the future of Northern Ireland rather than seek true progress.

Where is the United States in all of this? Some might ask why we should be involved in every foreign dispute, and they might be right, but President Clinton himself went to Ireland to foster peace. He made it as much a part of his agenda as the Middle East peace process. But now, as the peace falls apart in Ireland, there is no rush from him to bring together the parties as he has so many times in the Middle East. There are no front-page headlines that feature his condemnation of the breakdown.

Perhaps the Good Friday Peace was simply an addition to Clinton's oft-lamented "legacy" rather than a sincere effort to bring peace to our allies. How unfortunate for Northern Ireland, and how unfortunate for us, who appear to only go the distance for peace when it means something to our pocket books.

New needle programs needed to reduce AIDS spread

Think our government is doing all it can to stop HIV/AIDS? Think again. In the United States alone, more than half a million individuals suffer from HIV/AIDS. These blood-borne diseases continue to spread without regard to age, color, gender or ethnicity. But, mostly because of resistance from the Drug Enforcement Agency, a key weapon for containing them remains virtually untouched. Despite overwhelming scientific evidence, the United States continues to prohibit needle-exchange programs and greatly limit pharmacy syringe availability, thus contributing to the rampant spread of HIV/AIDS.

Laws throughout the United States regard possession of a syringe as possession of drug paraphernalia. Coupled with these laws are laws that require a prescription for the sale of syringes in pharmacies. Studies have shown that because of the resultant fear of arrest, injection drug users, regardless of their HIV status, often resort to high-risk behavior for contracting HIV/AIDS: sharing used needles. With at least 50 percent of new HIV infections traceable to injection drug use, finding ways to curb this behavior must be of the utmost priority in the fight against HIV/AIDS.

Changing prescription-requirement laws is an obvious way to reduce high-risk behavior and thus the spread of HIV/AIDS. The repeal of a prescription-requirement law in France was followed by decreases in syringe-sharing rates. A joint study conducted by Universities of California at San Francisco and Berkeley affirmed such reductions.

Even more potent in their ability to reduce the spread of HIV/AIDS are needle exchange programs. However, the greatest roadblock for the acceptance of such programs is the false belief that their implementation would increase injection drug use. Numerous studies from around the world have found that needle-exchange programs dramatically reduce high-risk behavior, as much as 73 percent, without increasing injection drug use.

It is important to note that an infamous study cited most often by opponents of the exchange programs does not conclude that they are useless; rather, it states that their greatest effectiveness is only reached when implemented with programs of counseling, support and education.

Such evidence is even acknowledged in the medical community. According to Nancy Dickey, president-elect of the American Medical Association, the AMA recognizes "that important advances to arrest the AIDS epidemic could be made through responsible needle-exchange and drug-treatment programs ... (S)cientific evidence clearly shows that needle exchange is effective in curtailing HIV transmission and that the availability of clean needles does not increase drug abuse."

Despite the desire for an end to HIV/AIDS, we as a nation continue to fight the spread of the diseases with one arm tied behind our back. Beyond drug war propaganda, there is no reason not to implement needle-exchange programs or non-prescription laws.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

A UISG senator who doesn't think that UISG 'sucks'

As a current senator in the UI Student Government, I was appalled by what Vice President Andy Stoll, Executive Chris Linn and the rest of the Stoll-Linn 2000 presidential ticket wrote in their letter to the editor that was published in the Feb. 23 Daily Iowan. The first three words of the letter were, and I quote, "Student government sucks," and it's these three words that I found most unsettling.

The UISG does many great things here at the UI, and as a member of the UISG, I feel it necessary to say that with all of the ways that the UISG is involved in here on campus, it certainly doesn't "suck," as the members of the Stoll-Linn team suggest. As many of you who are reading this already know, UISG Vice President Andy Stoll and Executive Chris Linn are running for UISG president and vice president, respectively. It seems a little confusing to me that two members of the UISG executive branch who believe that "student government sucks" decided to run for UISG president and vice president. Why would Andy Stoll and Chris Linn want to lead an organization that they themselves say "sucks"?

After getting over the initial shock of the first three words of the letter written by the Stoll-Linn team, I continued reading. After I finished reading their letter to the editor, I decided that when it comes time to vote for UISG president and vice president in early March, I will not cast my vote for the Stoll-Linn ticket. I have already turned in my petition for a second term as a UISG senator, and if I do become a senator for the 2000-2001 school year, the letter written by the Stoll-Linn staff made me realize that I don't want the pessimistic members of the Stoll-Linn ticket as the leaders of the UISG and as my superiors.

If the leaders of the UISG openly state that the organization "sucks," how can they expect the students, faculty and administration of the UI to take the UISG seriously?

Although I agree with parts of their platform, I don't agree with the way that the Stoll-Linn team plans on accomplishing its goals. The members of the Stoll-Linn ticket believe that they can achieve their goals through the UISG, without any mention of other student groups. I recently spoke with Marquez Brown, a fellow UISG senator who is also running for UISG president with Brad Bare as his Vice President.

The Brown-Bare ticket desires to bring about some of the same changes as the Stoll-Linn ticket. The difference between the two presidential hopefuls is that Marquez Brown, along with the other members of the Brown-Bare ticket, wishes to accomplish his goals by making the UISG stronger by working together with undergraduate student groups, such as ARH and the Greek system, as well as various graduate student groups to bring about change at the UI.

Although the UISG is a powerful group on campus, it can benefit from working together with the other student groups when addressing the UI administration, faculty and the Board of Regents.

Marquez Brown, Brad Bare and the rest of the Brown-Bare ticket possess a positive outlook on the future of the UISG. It is because of this optimistic view of the direction in which the UISG should go in, coupled with the fact that the members of the Brown-Bare ticket plan on working with other student groups to fight for the students of the UI, that I will be casting my vote for the Brown-Bare ticket in March, and I encourage each and every one of my fellow Hawkeyes to do the same.

The moments that define our relationships come in varying types

One day a couple of weeks ago, after weeks of heavy reading and preparation for speeches and papers, I decided my rhetoric students needed to watch a cinematic classic — Crocodile Dundee.

In case you missed it, Crocodile Dundee is that 1986 phenomenon in which the jaded city reporter goes to the outback, and the tanned outback dude travels to the City. It's a terrible movie, I admit, but what the heck, we needed a break. First-paper drafts were due, first speeches were fast approaching, we'd just finished a long and draining book — I could feel tension levels rising to record heights.

So we're in the middle of the flick. Some people are doing homework. Some people are getting a little sleepy. We're definitely not all focused on the small screen. Casually, Crocodile Dundee insults the New York woman until she walks away from him into the hot outback. Predictably, she gets overheated, sees a pond, goes for some water and ... AIEEEEEEEEEEE!

The scream ripping through the classroom wasn't from the movie — no, the bloodcurdling shriek emanated from a student, surprised by the croc attack on the reporter. Pens flew, papers rustled, and soda bottles teetered on the edge of desks.

The class gasped collectively — then we all laughed, rather loudly, in relief. Our tension dissipated into humor. We stretched and settled back into the movie.

I didn't realize it at the time, but the moment had arrived.

What's the moment? The moment enters into any relationship you have, whether you're relating to your family, an intimate partner, a pet — or a rhetoric class. The moment comes unplanned, enters quietly, and sometimes leaves before you notice it's there at all. And after the moment, life is different. Sometimes, it's easier. Sometimes, it's sweeter. But the relationship after the moment always opens to possibility.

Suzi Steffen

The moment comes unplanned, enters quietly, and sometimes leaves before you notice it's there at all. And after the moment, life is different.

You can try to set the ground for the moment. For instance, when my cat, Linus, arrived in my life, I'd bought food and a bowl, a collar, a litterbox. Since then, I've kept up his shots, let him drink water from the bathtub faucet, and set up blankets for cat-napping all over the apartment. But Linus responded with alley-cat distrust. Groundwork gives no guarantees.

In rhetoric, I attempt a lot of groundwork. My students will recognize some strategies: the first-day name game, the small-group scavenger hunt, the trips to various museums, the enunciation game. All of these serve academic purposes — learning research options and speech-giving tricks — but I'm also trying to get 22 people into the flow of the semester.

The moment, though, arrives at its will, not mine. Linus became sweet almost overnight after other cats left the household. I had no idea that I'd start coming home to a cat who liked to be held, who would curl up, lay his head on my shoulder, and purr as I checked my e-mail. But one day, there he was. And now it's natural.

Some classes never feel natural, never have a moment, never really work — though a few cliques might bond, larger class interactions are painful and difficult. And sometimes a class gels almost instantly. One class came together over the heat and stink of our classroom — a room whose windows were bolted and whose air conditioning was questionable, a room packed with bodies all day, which, by our class time of 3:30, was disgusting.

Our moment came after repeated calls to authorities, when we managed to unscrew some bolts, then united in cheers as the window opened an inch or two.

In my current class, the seventh week is about to start, first speeches are accomplished, a new book begun. I think I'm getting the hang of this group, as they adjust to me, as we face the mid-semester grind and long for spring break. One student commented that he felt more comfortable with rhetoric this semester than first semester; a comfort that, he said, began with The Scream.

I'm not saying everyone's having fun in rhetoric — or always has, or for that matter, always should. What I'm saying is, thanks to The Scream, the atmosphere has changed. Maybe when we discuss the next two books — with subject matter ranging from Italian soccer to U.S. racism — we'll have more trust. We might be able to look at difficult issues with more compassion.

But I can't plan for that. I can simply enjoy the possibilities — thanks to a bad movie, the moment, and The Scream.

The unbearable being of writeness

It's easy to sense how good the novel is that spawned the movie adaptation of Wonder Boys. The film, brimming with great characters, hilarious dialogue and a wonderfully nuts story, is a testament to the notion that cinematic adaptations aren't always a bad idea. I suggest this with one eye covered, having not read the novel, but sometimes, as both an avid reader and filmmaker, a fella just knows.

Michael Douglas plays a novelist turned teacher who is experiencing an ironic sort of writer's block — he can't stop writing. In the wake of enormous success and literary acclaim, he's failed to follow-up his big hit due to the varied woes of upper-middle age life — failed marriages, adulterous tendencies and the inability to shake old habits, such as pulling massive bong hits.

Enter his student Tobey McGuire, whose genius is apparent but significance is a mystery, until Douglas' life implodes in one snowballing bad day. Things keep going wrong after his wife leaves him, his mistress doubts his dedication, a dog attacks him, and his car gets stolen by a Little Richard wannabe named Vernon.

Odd to say the least, and it seems his strange tableau of compatriots, including his bisexual and wily publisher Robert Downey Jr., alongside McGuire are either the catalysts of or the remedy to his discontent. Hence, things get convoluted and crystalline at the same time.

Wonder Boys is exactly what its title suggests — a group of guys who can most simply be explained as being individualized semblances of wonder — a very versatile and open-ended adjective when examined. For example, these guys are geniuses — very smart, talented and weird. But, they also are a mystery, each of them in his own respective way. And, to force the issue, they each wear their hearts where it can be seen by the keen eye — Douglas bears his blood-recycler helplessly upon his buried and distressed brow, McGuire's youthful innocence and sweet madness is endearing, and Downey Jr. is such a blatantly unapologetic comball that one can't really blame him for his purely primal ventures.

The relationship between Douglas and McGuire is a wonder in itself. The naive McGuire doesn't seem to know what he is looking for, but, after reading Douglas' novel, he thinks this a man of his own flesh and wound. And Douglas only knows that this boy is like no other pupil he has encountered. McGuire is an untapped, completely entangled example of hope and artistic virtue — an image Douglas not only admires but covets, reflections of his own self that can only remind him that his spirit for the typewriter is fading with every other unneeded word he writes.

Wonder Boys really examines four relationships and does so well, but at the same time, in a too abbreviated manner. Douglas and McGuire, Douglas and Downey Jr., Douglas and his mistress, and McGuire and Downey Jr. make up the genetics of the film's familial study. Most significant is, indeed, the relationship between student and pupil. Each character is enlivened and changed by film's end because of each other. It isn't so simple, though.

Douglas' writing problem stems not from the boy, and the boy's personal isolation stems not from his hero. But the experiences they share over the course of 48 hours, such as the dog attack, both partaking in the doobage a bit too much and their sexual arrangements bring them closer together. Each is ready for whatever step is next — off the cliff, out of spiritual restraints, into the grand possibilities of today and tomorrow that are all the more promising, all talents and instincts considered.

So Wonder Boys is a fun and honest examination of some dubious and lovable characters. The story plugs along at a clunky pace, unconsciously mimicking the progress of the characters. Some of the plot is a bit too thick, such as Marilyn Monroe's jacket being inserted into the plot, which doesn't do much for anything. But that is just nitpicking, because, for some reason, I felt this film was incomplete.

All in all, it is a fine strand of celluloid. It felt like a good novel — strong characters, constant narrative progress even when things weren't necessarily happening, and I didn't want it to end. I wanted more of these dynamic and comforting characters. Maybe I wanted some answers to be unraveled for me.

Whole Nine Yards racks up more yardage to remain No. 1 movie

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The hit man comedy The Whole Nine Yards held the top box office spot for a second weekend. The only new movie to debut in the top five was Reindeer Games, a casino-heist caper starring Ben Affleck, Gary Sinise and Charlize Theron.

The Whole Nine Yards benefited from the box-office draw of Bruce Willis and Matthew Perry of TV's "Friends," said Dan Fellman, head of distribution for Warner Bros., which released the movie. Another new movie, Wonder Boys starring Michael Douglas, debuted in seventh place, but it played in narrower release than the other top films and scored the best per-theater average. Estimated ticket sales for Feb. 25 through Sunday at North American theaters, according to Exhibitor Relations Co. Inc.:

1. The Whole Nine Yards, $9.6 million.
2. Snow Day, $8.5 million.

Bush 'deeply regrets' Catholic flap

■ The governor apologizes to a cardinal, while John McCain acknowledges campaign calls to Catholics.

By Glen Johnson
Associated Press

AUSTIN, Texas — In a letter to the leader of New York's Catholics, Gov. George W. Bush says his campaign appearance at a South Carolina school with anti-Catholic views was a "missed opportunity causing needless offense, which I deeply regret."

Bush has come under steady criticism for his Feb. 2 visit to Bob Jones University, a Christian school whose leaders have criticized the pope and labeled the Catholic church a "Satanic cult."

Opponents have assailed Bush for not using the appearance to denounce those views and the school's ban on interracial dating. Bush spoke about his conservatism.

In a Feb. 25 letter to Cardinal John O'Connor of New York, leader of the archdiocese's 2.4 million Roman Catholics, Bush stated his "profound respect" for the Catholic Church and said the criticism of him is unfair and unfounded.

"On reflection, I should have been more clear in disassociating myself from anti-Catholic sentiments and racial prejudice," Bush said in the letter, which his campaign released Sunday. "It was a missed opportunity causing needless offense, which I deeply regret."

The letter marked an abrupt reversal for Bush, who only last week said: "I don't make any apologies for what I do in the campaign."

At a news conference before departing for Seattle, Bush said he had a change of heart after thinking about impressions of himself as an anti-Catholic "that just are not true."

"I regret not using the opportunity to speak out against the policies," he said. "My job is to lead the nation. My job is to convince people to follow me. This was a missed opportunity and I regret it."

Bush faced questions about the speech almost as soon as he finished it. In response, he has repeatedly stated his opposition to the ban on interracial dating and the comments of the school's leaders. Bush also has noted that a brother and sister-in-law are Catholic.

Bush's appearance also was the subject of telephone calls that GOP presidential rival Sen. John McCain now acknowledges his campaign placed to Michigan voters before the primary there on Feb. 22. But McCain stood by past assertions that the calls did not say Bush was a bigot.

That didn't satisfy Bush, however, who contended that McCain did not speak the truth when he initially denied knowledge of the calls that informing voters about the university visit.

"This is a man who says he talks the straight talk. This is a man who talks the parsed talk," Bush said. "The campaign of pitting one religion against another has got to end. Sen. McCain, when given the chance to set the record straight on who did it, couldn't come to the truth."

In a television interview Sunday, McCain acknowledged approving the calls. He said he and members of his staff originally denied they were being made because the questions they were asked about them mischaracterized the calls as labeling Bush a bigot.

The calls "said exactly what is fact, and that is he went to this university," McCain said.

His campaign acknowledged the calls just before the polls closed.

"There was no charge in that transcript of those phone calls that said he was anti-Catholic or anything else," he said on CBS's "Face the Nation."

Bush disagreed. "It's clearly implied that I'm an anti-Catholic bigot. They can't hide what those calls meant," Bush said.

Karl Rove, Bush's chief strategist, said the back-and-forth over the visit to Bob Jones University had become "an ugly episode" in American politics.

"President Ronald Reagan went there, the governor of the state of South Carolina, a Democrat, went there, Jack Kemp went there, Dan Quayle went there, and none of them were criticized for supposedly harboring anti-Catholic views simply because they went there," Rove said on Fox News Sunday.

U.S. cities turning to youth curfews

■ Proponents say curfews help to deter youth violence and crime.

By Ron Powers
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A rising number of American cities — 110 in the past five years — are imposing curfews to deter youth violence, crime and gang activity, according to a new report.

The report, to be released today by the National League of Cities, said that compares with 122 curfews set up across the nation during a 15-year period between 1980 and 1995.

Nighttime youth curfews were reported by 337 of the 490 cities the league surveyed; 68 had daytime curfews, the report said. Officials in another 35 cities said they're considering implementing a curfew.

Bob Knight, the president of the league and mayor of Wichita, Kan., said curfews "continue to be a growing trend in the United States as city officials look for answers to ensure the safety of youth in their communities."

Officials in nearly three of four cities surveyed by the league said they believe a curfew can help curb gang activity but it does little to influence the behavior of hard-core gang members. The most positive effects were found in reducing assaults, burglaries and graffiti.

The league said that in most U.S. cities, children under 18 are expected to be off the streets by 11 p.m. during the week and by midnight on weekends.

In cities with daytime curfews, young people are expected to stay off the streets during school hours.

Some teens and their parents have challenged the constitutionality of curfews, but many cities avoid having their curfews struck down by modeling their laws after curfew statutes from other cities.

Last year, the Supreme Court rejected a challenge to a Charlottesville, Va., curfew, which is similar to those adopted by many U.S. cities. While the justices did not issue a decision, they let stand a lower court ruling that said the city's curfew is a valid means of "reducing juvenile violence and crime."

NATION BRIEF

Report: U.S. continues to lock up kids

WASHINGTON (AP) — The number of criminals under 18 serving time in adult prisons more than doubled between 1985 and 1997, as states steadily prosecuted more young people as adults.

By 1997, 7,400 youths 17 or younger were committed to adult prisons on convictions in either juvenile or adult courts. That's more than twice the 3,400 young people sent to the nation's state prisons in 1985, a new Justice Department report shows.

Seven in 10 young offenders who received adult punishment in 1997, the latest year state prison records were available, were convicted for violent offenses. Of that total, 37 percent were jailed for robbery, 13 percent for murder and 13 percent for aggravated assault, according to the report, which was released Sunday.

Researchers say the young inmates by no means are overrunning the prisons' adult population of 2 million and just 5 percent of all young offenders punished in this country serve sentences in adult facilities. But data suggest that today's violent young offenders are more likely to do prison time than in years past.

That's partly because of an increasing number of state laws that take away their legal status as minors and make them more accountable, researchers say. The crackdown, fueled in part by high-profile school violence, has placed children as young as 11 on trial in criminal courts.

"Many states have increased the number of provisions that allow juveniles to be handled in the adult system," said report author Kevin J. Strom, a researcher with the department's Bureau of Justice Statistics.

Based on state prison records reported annually to the Justice Department, the report notes that while 37 states and the District of Columbia consider people 18 adults for criminal purposes, most also allow "certain categories of offenders under 18 to be incarcerated in adult prisons and housed with older inmates."

The data do not specify whether young offenders are convicted in juvenile or adult courts, but, Strom said, it is known that a small percentage go from the juvenile courts to adult incarceration.

The Justice Department study comes amid debate over the merits of meting out adult time for crimes committed by youth. Californians will vote on March 7 on a ballot proposal that would make it easier to charge juveniles as young as 14 as adults for serious crimes.

"By virtue of their rarity, school shootings have helped create a distorted picture about who young people are and the dangers that they pose to the rest of us," said Eric Sterling, president of the Washington-based Criminal Justice Policy Foundation.

Historically, young offenders' fates were mostly decided by juvenile judges. But after a spate of drug-gang violence and school shootings in the last decade, state lawmakers decided adult prisons could more effectively deal with violent or chronic youth offenders.

Since 1992, 30 states and the District of Columbia have passed laws that in certain instances send kids directly to criminal court. Through 1998, despite a 50 percent drop in the juvenile murder arrest rate, states gave criminal prosecutors increased power to bypass the century-old juvenile system or chipped away at options juvenile judges had for trying youth cases.

Swimmers crown three champs

Iowa junior Ales Abersek was named Big Ten Swimmer of the Championship after winning two titles.

By Todd Brommelkamp
 The Daily Iowan

Going into the men's Big Ten Swimming Championships, Iowa coach John Davey predicted his team could move up one spot from last season, and have some outstanding individual performances. Davey couldn't have hit the nail on the head any better.

The Hawkeye tankers finished in eighth place following the last round of finals on Saturday, an improvement over last year's ninth-place showing, and had three individual champions.

After a slow start on the first day of competition and a disqualification in the 400-yard medley relay, Iowa found itself in last place going into the final two days of the meet.

Things changed dramatically for the Hawkeyes on Friday, thanks to Jay Glenn and Ales Abersek.

On the heels of a fifth-place finish in the 200 medley relay and Avi Mednick's 11th-place finish in the 400 individual medley, Abersek and Glenn took back-to-back championships to give Iowa a boost in confidence and a raise in the standings.

Abersek's time of 47.68 in the 100 butterfly picked up a much needed 20 points for the Iowa cause.

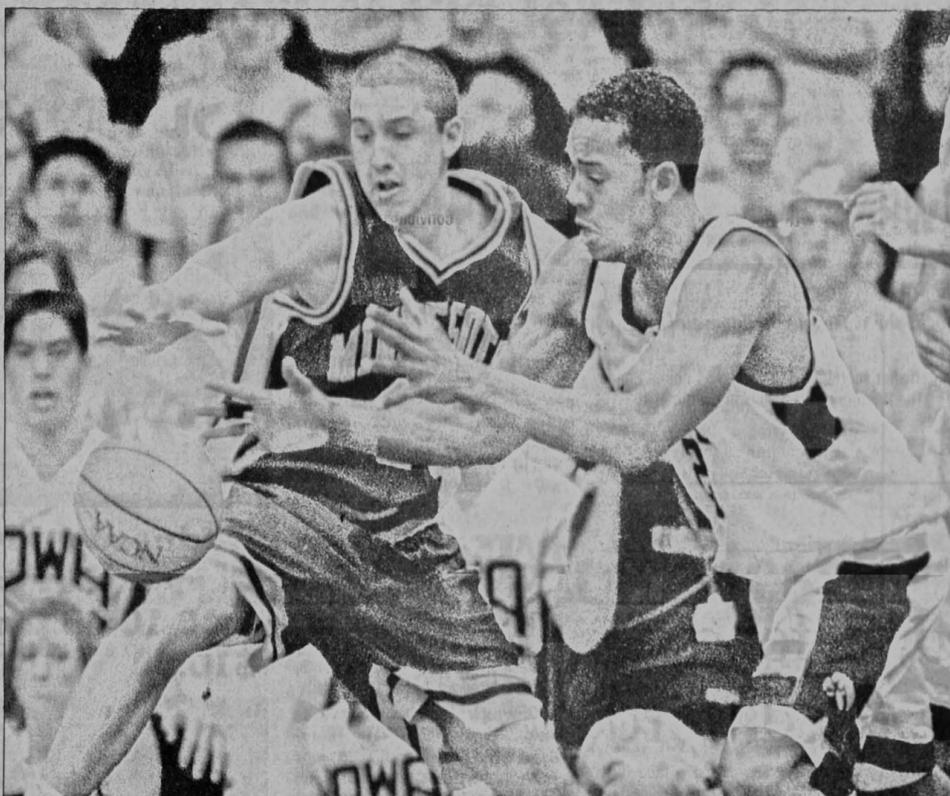

Glenn then followed with a 1:36.84 showing in the 200 freestyle for another Iowa championship and 20 more team points for Iowa.

The 800 freestyle relay team of Thad Hackney, John Loneragan, Ian Renner-Arjes and Glenn finished in sixth-place with a time of 6:37.40 to close out the day for Iowa.

Following the strong team effort on Friday, Iowa pulled up to eighth in the overall score with 139 points.

Hawks pummel Gophers at home

Without Joel Pryzbilla, the Hawkeyes were able to dominate Minnesota in Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

By Mike Kelly
 The Daily Iowan

What a difference one month and one suspension makes.

Iowa avenged a January loss to Minnesota Sunday on the strength of its inside play and offensive execution, defeating the Gophers 71-59 in Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

Six weeks ago, Gopher center Joel Pryzbilla dominated the Hawkeyes inside, scoring 28 points and grabbing 18 boards to lead his team to an 85-82 victory. Two weeks ago, the 7-foot sophomore was suspended from the team for academic reasons. Pryzbilla quit the team and declared himself eligible for the NBA Draft.

His absence showed.

The Hawkeyes (12-14, 5-9) pounded the ball inside and consistently drove past a depleted Minnesota lineup, drawing foul after foul.

Iowa shot 40 free throws to Minnesota's 14.

"This was one of the few times all year our offense has looked like it was supposed to," Iowa coach Steve Alford said. "Two keys to our offense is how well we move the ball and how many times we get to the line. I think we did both of those things today."

Dean Oliver led the Hawkeyes with 20 points. Alford started Jason Price at the point guard, moving Oliver to shooting guard in place of the injured Ryan Luehrmann, who is lost for the season with a broken hand suffered in practice Friday.

Alford said one of the reasons for the lineup switch was to get Oliver moving more without the ball to create more open looks for him to shoot.

The coach also started Joe Fermio in place of Jacob Jaacks. Alford said he was disappointed with Jaacks' actions during the second half of the Wisconsin game. The senior center picked up three quick fouls down the stretch in Iowa's 55-45 loss.

Jaacks responded to his bench role by playing one of his better games of the season, notching 12 points and 13 rebounds.

Carter scores 51 in Raptors victory

TORONTO (AP) — Given a stage to showcase his sky-walking talent, Vince Carter delivered his best performance yet.

Carter scored 51 points — the most in the NBA this season and the most in his career — in leading the Toronto Raptors to a 103-102 win over the Phoenix Suns on Sunday.

Last week, NBC changed its schedule, adding the Raptors game so it could show one of the league's most luminous players for the first time in the regular season.

"The young legend grows," Raptors coach Butch Carter said. "No one's more surprised today than me."

Carter made 17-of-32 shots and was 13-of-13 from the foul line. He hit four 3-pointers, grabbed nine rebounds, had three steals and also provided the crowd with a number of high-flying moves.

Clarke soars to stunning victory over Woods

Darren Clarke won the $1 million prize after handily defeating David Duval and Tiger Woods over the weekend.

By Doug Ferguson
 Associated Press

CARLSBAD, Calif. — Darren Clarke beat Tiger Woods at his favorite game Sunday in the Match Play Championship. And he didn't need any tips from Woods' coach.

As the sun rose over La Costa Resort about an hour before the 36-hole final, Clarke lit the first of many cigars, glanced at the other end of the practice range and found Butch Harmon quietly observing the No. 1 player in the world.

"Hey Butch," Clarke playfully called out to the swing coach of both finalists. "I don't need you. I'm hitting it perfect."

Woods found that out the hard way.

Before Woods could even dream about a sweep of the World Golf Championships, Clarke buried him with a barrage of birdies in the afternoon round for a 4 and 3 victory and a $1 million payoff, nearly four times greater than he had ever won in a single tournament.

This was about much more than money, though.

"Any time you win a tournament it's fantastic," Clarke said. "But to play against Tiger, the No. 1 player in the world, and to come out on top ... it's a great feeling."

It capped an incredible weekend for the 31-year-old from Northern Ireland, who took down in succession Ryder Cup star Hal Sutton, second-ranked David Duval and then the biggest gun of them all with near flawless play.

Clarke made 12 birdies to just one bogey over 33 holes, hit all but one fairway and didn't miss a green over his final 17 holes. The only time he trailed in the match was the third hole of the morning, and he got that right back with a birdie on the next hole.

"Darren just flat outplayed me,"

Revenge falls short for Iowa

The Iowa men's tennis team fell short of avenging last year's loss to DePaul Sunday.

By Lisa Colonno
 The Daily Iowan

Despite numerous injuries to their lineup, the Hawkeyes got within one point of revenge.

The Iowa men's tennis team (3-2) fell, 4-3, to DePaul at the UI Recreation Building Sunday. The match marked the first meeting between these two teams since 1998, when DePaul pummeled Iowa, 6-1, in Chicago.

Eric Kozlowski, Petar Mandic and Tom Buetikofer remained out of the Iowa lineup due to injuries, leaving the Hawkeyes with four freshmen playing at various times throughout the dual. The freshmen and other Hawkeyes had to move up positions due to the absences.

"I'm not at all disappointed with today's effort," coach Steve Houghton said. "It is tough overcoming two or three guys not in the lineup. Considering that, I thought we played well."

It didn't help that Iowa's best player was upset, either.

At No. 1, Blue Demon John Cheregi got his revenge on Tyler Cleveland. Cleveland defeated Cheregi, 6-4, 6-4 in the Rolex Regional Tournament in the fall, but Cheregi turned the tables and beat Cleveland the second time around, 6-4, 6-4. The loss moved Cleveland to 4-1 in dual competition.

"Tyler wasn't himself out there," Houghton said. "We get spoiled with him usually performing at such a high level."

DePaul (4-3) took an early lead in the dual by claiming the No. 1 and 2 doubles matches, 9-7 and 8-5, respectively. Iowa claimed No. 3 doubles, with junior Jake Wilson and freshman Pete Rose winning, 8-6.

"In doubles, Tyler and I didn't play well together," freshman Stuart Waters, who paired up with Cleveland at No. 1 doubles, said.

Gymnasts take a step backward

■ Questionable scoring and a poor beam routine killed any chances of a gymnastics upset at Minnesota.

By Molly Thomas
The Daily Iowan

For the Iowa women's gymnastics team, the road to the postseason just got a lot tougher.

The Hawkeyes took a step in the wrong direction Saturday, when they lost to No. 18 Minnesota 193.450-191.400 at Minnesota's Sports Pavilion.

Lorenzen

Coach Mike Lorenzen said that though the team suffered from what he called "Gopher-friendly scoring," Iowa still did not compete to its full potential.

"I was pretty frustrated by some blatantly partisan scoring, but ultimately we did not do the job we are capable of," said Lorenzen. "A 191.4 at this point in the season will clearly have an impact on our post-season opportunities if we can't erase it with great efforts in our last four meets."

After a rough training session and a slow start in warm-ups, the Hawkeyes started the meet off on uneven bars. Iowa finished the event with its lowest score of the season, a 48.35.

Stephanie Benson, a native of Minnesota, became the first freshman to compete on the bars for Iowa this year. Benson competed in exhibition on the bars, scoring a 9.5. Lorenzen said the freshman succeeded in showing her home crowd that she will be an all-around threat in the future.

"It was really exciting to be competing in front of so many people that I know," Benson said. "I didn't have a very good warm-up, but I ended up hitting my bar routine, and I think my floor routine was the best performance I've had all year."

Lorenzen believed that vault and floor exercise were where the tight scoring came into play. The Hawkeyes suffered three small mistakes on floor, the event where the team was most enthusiastic. The mistakes were enough to give the team only a 48.25 on the floor exercise, again their lowest score

I was pretty frustrated by some blatantly partisan scoring, but ultimately, we did not do the job that we are capable of.

— Mike Lorenzen,
Iowa gymnastics coach of the season on that event.

Iowa got a glimpse of optimism going into the final event, as the Gophers lowered the gap between the two teams after being forced to count three falls on the balance beam. Minnesota scored a 47.125 on the beam, leaving the Hawks only .05 points behind.

Lorenzen said the team knew going in that it would have to perform a rock solid beam routine, but the results were not what the Hawkeyes hoped for.

"I was disappointed with the failure of the team to take advantage of some rare Minnesota misses in the final rotation," Lorenzen said. "We've been one of the most consistent teams in the country this year in terms of a gradual rise in our scores. It's very disappointing to watch the team take a step backwards."

Women's golf falls short down South

■ The team faltered on Sunday to finish 10th in a 16-team field in Dallas.

By Molly Thomas
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's golf team is not playing up to par.

The Hawkeyes finished tenth in a 16-team field this past weekend at the Midwest Classic in Dallas, Texas. Coach Diane Thomason said that Iowa is not scoring anywhere close to its capability.

In the three-day tournament where heavy rainfall and high winds prevailed, the Hawkeyes finished behind four Big Ten Conference teams. Despite leading Minnesota and Wisconsin through the first two days of competition, Iowa fell behind both teams after the final 18 holes Sunday.

"We are all very frustrated," Thomason said. "Minnesota and Wisconsin were very close to us in the final day, but we just didn't play well enough to pass them."

Iowa did score better than three Big Ten teams, Michigan, Penn State, and Illinois, and also beat intrastate rival Iowa State.

The Hawkeyes were led by senior Kelli Carney (77-80-83) who placed 16th in competition. Freshman Leslie Gumm provided a key round, shooting a 77 in the final day of competition and finishing in 49th place with earlier rounds of 84-86.

"I knew I didn't play well in the first two days," Gumm said. "Going into the final day I knew I really had to focus. I just tried to keep my composure and my game going strong."

Iowa's top two players struggled in the tournament. Senior M.C. Mullen tied for 37th place, while junior Meghan Spero finished 61st. Thomason said Mullen had trouble maintaining her focus throughout the tournament, while Spero was adjusting to some changes in her swing patterns.

Freshman Heather Suhr continued in her consistent patterns, shooting 83-84-84 and finishing in 49th place. Thomason said she was pleased with the performances of the two freshmen competing for Iowa.

"I hope that both Leslie and Heather will be major contributors," Thomason said. "We need them in order to be successful."

Iowa tennis halves Hoosier State

■ The Iowa women's tennis team split a pair of matches in Indiana last weekend.

By Todd Brommelkamp
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's tennis team opened up the Big Ten season with a swing through the Hoosier State, splitting a pair of matches with Purdue and Indiana.

The No. 30 Hawkeyes (3-5, 1-1 Big Ten) defeated the Boilermakers 4-3 on Saturday in West Lafayette, but fell in a mild upset to the No. 43 Hoosiers 5-2 in Bloomington, Sunday.

"It was hard to get back in the Big Ten saddle," said coach Paul Wardlaw. "The intensity of matches is at a different level."

Purdue had no intentions of letting Iowa slide back into the saddle easily. Iowa picked up the doubles point early, then had to rely on the clutch play of Natalya Dawaf and Erica Johnson to gain the victory.

With losses at No. 1, 2 and 6 singles and a straight sets win from Iowa's Megan Kearney, the match came down to Dawaf and Johnson. Dawaf finished her match by knocking off Erika Quebe, 6-2, 3-6, 6-4. That left things up to Johnson, who finished the Boilermakers off with a 6-1, 3-6, 7-5 win over Fick.

"We had a little bit of a rude awakening on Saturday," Wardlaw said. "But we were fortunate to win."

After surviving the challenge of Purdue, Iowa took on a much more difficult Hoosier team. Playing a very defense-oriented game, Indiana kept Iowa off balance to pick up the upset victory.

Iowa's two victories came from Toni Neykova and Dawaf in singles play. Neykova went three sets on her way to dismissing No. 97 Kelly Blanch, 6-4, 4-6, 6-4.

Dawaf won in straight sets over Zahra Ahamed, 6-2, 6-3.

"They make you execute," said Wardlaw of the Hoosiers. "And we just didn't get the job done."

Though the team split its matches this weekend, Wardlaw was none too pleased with Iowa's play collectively.

"We still have a way to go," he said. "We're not playing like a top 30 team." "We're not playing well from top to bottom like we should be."

The Hawkeyes will be back in action Saturday as they take a break from conference play to travel back to Indiana to face Notre Dame in South Bend.

"It certainly won't be a friendly match," said Wardlaw.

The Irish will be waiting for Iowa following the Hawkeyes' 5-4 upset of the then-No. 12 Irish in the second round of last season's NCAA Championships.

Shockers feast on Hawk pitching

■ The Iowa baseball team failed to put together a consistent effort, suffering a sweep at Wichita State.

By Greg Wallace
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa baseball team got a taste of the big time over the weekend against No. 14 Wichita State.

It's one they'd probably prefer to wash from their mouths as quickly as possible.

The Shockers feasted on Iowa pitching, scoring 10, 13, and 16 runs en route to a 3-game sweep of the Hawkeyes at Lawrence-Dumont Stadium in Wichita, Kan.

Iowa fell to 0-6 on the season, and coach Scott Broghamer said some self-examination may be needed by his team.

"They're going to have to look at themselves, and say, 'What do we need to do to get the job done?'" he said. "They have to look each other in the eyes and say, 'We have to play with more heart and intensity if we expect to win.'"

Sunday, the Shockers triumphed 16-6. Broghamer said the Hawkeyes just gave Wichita State too many chances, all of which were capitalized on.

"We gave them a lot of opportunities," Broghamer said. "Putting people on base with walks, errors. We gave 22 baserunners in eight innings. When you have a good team like Wichita State, they're going to take advantage of that."

Big innings were Iowa's downfall all three days.

On Friday, Iowa trailed, 2-1, when starter Chad Blackwell, on a pitch count, was relieved. Steve Sharpe held the Shockers for an inning, but WSU burned him for five in the seventh frame, keying a 10-2 Shocker victory.

On Saturday, the teams were tied 1-1 after four innings. But the Shockers again punished the Iowa bullpen, scoring six runs in the fifth and cruising to a 13-4 win.

"We've gotta have 12 guys pitch well, starters, middle relief, and closers," Broghamer said. "The bullpen has to be able to come in and shut the door on people."

We gave them a lot of opportunities. When you have a good team like WSU, they're going to take advantage of that.

— Scott Broghamer,
Iowa baseball coach

Iowa's bats, a key for victory in any game with the young pitching staff, weren't able to solve Shocker pitching. Only Andy Jansen and Brad Carlson had more than one hit during the first two games.

"Brad played better (Sunday), and Andy had a good weekend, but you can't expect one or two guys to carry your team," Broghamer said. "We have to have a whole team effort, all nine guys contributing."

Iowa will attempt to right its ship next weekend in Evansville, Ind. The Hawkeyes will take on Big Ten rival Northwestern on Friday, Evansville on Saturday, and Butler on Sunday.

Auburn loses Porter

■ With Tiger star Chris Porter withheld pending investigation into agent contact, Auburn lost Sunday.

By Eddie Pells
Associated Press

GAINESVILLE, Fla. — Cliff Ellis had his face buried in his hands. Billy Donovan had his arms around Ellis.

Two coaches who have done a model job of rebuilding their programs in a short time stopped just long enough to embrace — and talk about the opposite directions their teams seem to be headed, especially after what happened Sunday.

With an 88-59 victory over Auburn, No. 9 Florida (22-5, 11-3 Southeastern Conference) took a big step forward in its quest for the SEC title.

The Tigers (21-6, 9-5) can't think much about titles after suspending their best player, Chris Porter, while the school investigates his possible dealings with a sports agent.

Porter was the team's leading scorer and the glue that helped Ellis revive the program. For at least one game — maybe more — the glue was stuck at home, his future unclear.

Abersek automatically advances to NCAA's

SWIMMING

Iowa got more solid performances on the final day of competition to hold on to eighth-place overall. And it was Abersek who stole the show.

The junior picked up his second victory in as many days with a 1:44.93 showing in the 200 butterfly. Not only did Abersek win the event, his time automatically qualified him for the NCAA Championships. It will be the first time the Hawkeyes have had a swimmer in the NCAA's since 1998.

Abersek is Iowa's first competitor since 1994 to win two titles in the championship meet.

"Ales' time in the 200 was fast," said Davey. "In fact, it was one of the fastest in Iowa history."

Davey wasn't the only one who recognized the accomplishment.

Abersek was named Swimmer of the Championship for his showing, the first time an Iowa swimmer has received the honor in six years.

Iowa also received an eighth-place finish from Glenn in the 100 free, a seventh-place finish in the 400 free relay and a third-place showing from Simon Chrisander in the 3-meter dive to finish with 216 team points.

Davey was especially pleased at the gutsy performance of Chrisander, who had suffered from an infected ingrown toe nail.

"That was an amazing feat," said Davey. "You just don't see a performance like that very often. He overcame a lot to do what he did."

Iowa finished the tournament with a champion for the first time since 1995 and with three champions since 1994. In addition to Abersek's automatic NCAA qualifying time, Davey anticipates Glenn's time in the 200 free will make the cut. Glenn must wait at least a week to find out for sure.

"Moving up one spot was a goal of ours and we managed to accomplish it," Davey said. "We had some really good individual swims as well. It was a good team effort."

back to within two points twice in the half, but the Hawkeyes could not cut into the Boilermaker defense, committing 22 turnovers and giving up 15 steals in the game.

"Douglas goes 12-of-12 from the line, and they double our free throws in the half. That will make the difference in any close game," Perry said.

Iowa shot 40.3 percent from the field, including a 17-of-21 shooting effort from the line. Cara Consuegra scored a team-high 20 points, while Meder finished with 16 for the game. Big Ten leading scorer Katie Douglas of Purdue finished with 24 points in the victory.

The Hawkeyes will now prepare to face Northwestern in the first round of the Big Ten Tournament. The Hawkeyes will be pitted against the Wildcats, who upset Iowa in the first round of the tour-namment last season.

Perry knows that revenge will be on the minds of the team.

"We wanted to play them after what happened to us last year," Perry said. "Minnesota upset Michigan State (on Sunday) and we thought we might be playing them, but we really wanted Northwestern."

Iowa will begin tournament play at 5 p.m. in the Consecro Fieldhouse in Indianapolis.

MEN'S HOOPS

"I was not doing the things coach wanted me to be doing," Jaacks said. "He had a message sent to me and really taught me a lesson today."

Iowa jumped out to a fast start on Minnesota (12-13, 4-10) Iowa took a 20-8 lead in the first 10 minutes of the ball game and never looked back.

Minnesota never got closer than eight in the second half. After Minnesota got within eight points, Oliver squelched the Gopher's 5-0 run with a 3-pointer that sealed the game for the Hawkeyes.

"We have such a small margin for error now that we can't afford to spot someone 12 points like that and win the game," Minnesota coach Dan Monson said. "We need to play 40 minutes and Iowa did a better job of sustaining the type of game they wanted to play."

Nine players scored for the Hawkeyes. Duez Henderson chipped in 11 rebounds and Kyle Galloway netted 10 points to lead the Hawkeyes' effort.

Iowa has two games left before the Big Ten Tournament. Iowa travels to Ann Arbor, Mich., Wednesday to take on the Wolverines and finishes up the regular season with Penn State Saturday at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

"One player played well and the other played poor at different times."

The Blue Demons entered singles competition up 1-0, with the doubles point under their belt. Iowa needed to claim four of six singles matches to pull out the dual victory, but only managed to split, winning three.

Waters, Wilson and redshirt freshman Hunter Skogman all notched wins for the Hawkeyes.

"I was pretty excited to be playing No. 2," Waters, who normally plays No. 3, said. "It was one of the best all-around matches I've played this year. I played with a lot of confidence."

Waters downed DePaul's Maciek Jozwiak, 7-6, 6-3.

Iowa will now hit the road for the entire month of March with its next home meet scheduled for April 1 against Indiana. The Hawkeyes travel to Terre Haute, Ind., Saturday to take on Indiana State.

Duval plays solid, one round too late

MATCH PLAY

Woods said after perhaps his worst loss ever in match play, dropping his professional record to 12-4. "Darren has played like this all week. All you have to do is look at the stats to see how beautifully he's played."

All anyone really had to do was look on the range.

After they finished the morning round even, Clarke went to the dining room for lunch, then to the putting green for another cigar and a few laughs.

Woods, despite matching Clarke's six birdies in the morning, grabbed a quick bite and went straight to the range. Harmon stood behind him and held out his hand, catching Woods' elbow whenever his swing plane drifted too far inside.

Why wasn't Clarke at the range?

"He didn't want to go to the range because he would have had to walk back up that hill again," Harmon said.

Clarke saved his strength to walk all over Woods.

He never trailed since the fourth hole in the morning, then birdied four out of five holes on the front nine in afternoon to go 4-up with 10 holes to play, a deficit not even Woods was able to overcome.

"He was fantastic today," Harmon said. "He looked Tiger right in the eye and said, 'I'm going to kick your butt.' And he kicked it."

Clarke became the first international player to win a WGC event and kept Woods, who earned $500,000, from adding the Walter Hagen Cup to his other two WGC titles won at Firestone and Valderrama.

Michael Caulfield/Associated Press

And it also thrust Clarke, who won for the sixth time worldwide, into the spotlight as another European star with a bright future. While Colin Montgomerie has won seven straight money titles in Europe, he still hasn't won on American soil against the best fields in golf.

Clarke and Lee Westwood, who won in New Orleans two years ago, are known as the "Spice Boys" in the British press because of their penchant for fast cars and good times.

For Clarke, the best thrill of all was beating a field of the top 64 players in the world - even though he didn't realize the final round was 36 holes until he left the course Saturday night.

"To play as well as that under the circumstances, against the best player in the world, is certainly very gratifying," he said.

Duval waited one round too many to play solid golf, having missed out on his anticipated showdown with Woods by losing to Clarke in the semifinals. In the consolation match, he birdied six of his last seven holes for a 5 and 4 victory over Davis Love III.

Duval won $400,000, while Love earned $300,000.

Woods had lost only 13 out of his first 100 holes in the Match Play, sponsored by Andersen Consulting. That changed with shocking swiftness as Clarke birdied Nos. 4, 5, 7 and 8 to build a 4-up lead.

Clarke, however, didn't start thinking of ways to spend his $1 million. Woods had come back from six holes down to beat Trip Kuehne in the 1994 U.S. Amateur, five holes down to beat Steve Scott in the 1996 Amateur, and seven strokes down with seven holes to play to beat Matt Gogel at Pebble Beach three weeks ago.

"He doesn't get to this level without good reason," Clarke said. "I was expecting Tiger to do a couple of special things."

But Woods was running out of holes, and he ran out of comebacks.

After a winning the par-5 ninth with a two-putt birdie, he three-putted from 30 feet to lose the 10th. After hitting his tee shot to 2 feet on No. 11 for another birdie, all momentum came to a stop on the par-5 12th.

Luehrsmann's career ends early

By Mike Kelly
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa basketball team will have to finish the season without one of its most important leaders.

Senior guard Ryan Luehrsmann will miss the remainder of the season with a broken hand he suffered in practice last Thursday. Luehrsmann got his hand tangled up in Jason Price's jersey during a drill and knew right away that something was wrong.

"I just couldn't believe it," Luehrsmann said. "The year's been rough. It's been up and down and this definitely biggest downer for me not being able to finish up my career. That's life; and life is gonna throw you some breaks some times. You've just got to look at the positives, and all I'm gonna try and do is encourage the guys."

Before the injury, Luehrsmann had been averaging seven points a game and was shooting 41 percent from the field in a shooting guard role.

The 6-foot-1 guard from Cedar Rapids was held scoreless against Wisconsin, a game that proved to be his last in a Hawkeye uniform.

He said he would have liked his career to end with a run in the NCAA Tournament, but will have to settle for a locker room leadership role now.

Brett Roseman/The Daily Iowan

Iowa guard Ryan Luehrsmann was averaging 7.3 points, 2.8 rebounds and shooting 41 percent from the field before his season-ending injury.

"That game against Wisconsin is not how I wanted to go out in Carver Hawkeye Arena," Luehrsmann said. "That's the hand I got dealt out, no pun intended, but you got to move on."

Several Iowa players showed their support for their injured teammate. "Lue" was taped to several players' shoes, and guard Jason Smith even had Luehrsmann's name written on his chest.

Luehrsmann had been one of the more vocal leaders on the team all season, and the injured hand did not stop him from being a presence in the locker room. Alford praised him for his role in getting the team ready before the Minnesota game.

"He did not give a 'Win One for the Gipper' speech or anything like that, but he was just really positive," guard Kyle Galloway said. "I don't know how I would handle something like that, but he is doing very well with it."

Tatis anchors St. Louis infield

By The Associated Press

Fernando Tatis was a question mark in the St. Louis Cardinals' infield a year ago. Now, he's part of the team's strength.

"The ball just jumps off his bat," hitting coach Mike Easler said Saturday in Jupiter, Fla. "He has one of those live bats, one of those special sounds. He had the gift of the pop. We just had to get him under control."

Encouraged by Easler, Tatis hit .298 with 34 homers and 107 RBIs in his first full season in St. Louis and second overall. Tatis became only the fourth St. Louis player to hit 20 home runs and steal 20 bases in one season.

"We went to work, working every day," Tatis said. "He just put it in my mind and we just focused on 30 home runs and 100 RBI and boom, it happened."

Tatis was acquired at the trading deadline during the 1998 season along with pitcher Darren Oliver and outfielder Mark Little from the Texas Rangers for pitcher Todd Stottlemyre and shortstop Royce Clayton. Oliver and Little have left the Cardinals, but they still have the most important piece of the trade.

"He's a young player so what he has accomplished is even more impressive," manager Tony La Russa said. "If he's stays healthy there's no reason why he can't play 162 games. And with his power, he can hit in one of the RBI spots."

Tatis, who turned 25 on Jan. 1, hit three home runs in the first three games of the 1999 season and then on April 23, he became the first major leaguer to hit two grand slams in the same inning, against the Dodgers.

Tatis anchors an infield which could become one of baseball's best both offensively and defensively with Mark McGwire at the other corner and shortstop Edgar Renteria and second baseman Fernando Vina up the middle.

Elsewhere, Darryl Strawberry is still awaiting word on his likely suspension, Orlando Hernandez was sidelined by a sore back, Bill Pulsipher got tested by more doctors, and Jose Guillen and Miguel Tejada finally made it to camp.

Strawberry, who failed a drug test Jan. 19, will likely receive a one-year suspension from commissioner Bud Selig with possible time off for good behavior.

'Miss me, baby?' Sosa reports to Cubs camp

■ An energetic Sammy Sosa reported to Cubs spring training two days late.

By Rick Gano
Associated Press

MESA, Ariz. — Sammy Sosa bounced into the Chicago Cubs' spring training complex Sunday with an energetic "Miss me, baby?" to anyone within earshot, smiling for cameras and hugging and slapping teammates.

More than a week later than most of the regulars, Sosa pronounced himself healthy after a bout with the flu, offered assurances he's "still hungry" after two straight years of 60-plus homers and said he's ready to steal more bases if that's what new manager Don Baylor wants.

"This is a new millennium and a new year and I can't sit down and relax because I had two great years," said Sosa, who has 129 homers the last two seasons and an NL MVP award.

"I feel like a rookie. I'm never satisfied and I always want to go to the next level. This is the year I to go out and put everything together. We have new coaches, new faces and a new manager."

Sunday was sort of a personal Sammy photo shoot. After a pop-up slide, Sosa looked at photographers and asked: "You get that?"

He laughed and joked throughout most of the day, at one point yelling across the field to general manager Ed Lynch, "Hey Ed, how are you?"

Sosa, given permission to arrive two days past the mandatory Feb. 25 reporting deadline after getting the flu two weeks ago, joined right in from the outset. At least he tried to.

In batting practice against regular pitchers Matt Karchner and Rodney Myers, Sosa faced 20 pitches. He hit just one ball fair and broke three bats, one of which he took to the fence and handed to 3-year-old Lucas Miller as cameras clicked.

Later during regular batting practice against minor league pitching coordinator Lester Strode, Sosa gave a large sunsplashed gathering of fans what they came to see, hitting 13 homers in 31 swings.

Then during closing wind sprints, Sosa had to take off one of the 10 dashes to catch his breath.

"I was a little tired on the first day. I'm not going to lie to you," Sosa said.

Fizer shines in possible home finale

■ Marcus Fizer scored 29 points to lead Iowa State in what could be his last Cyclone home game.

By Chuck Schoffner
Associated Press

AMES — Michael Nurse played well in his final home game for Iowa State. So did Stevie Johnson.

And Marcus Fizer? Well, if it was his last game at Hilton Coliseum, he certainly gave the sellout crowd of 14,092 something to remember.

Fizer, a 6-foot-8 junior who might declare for the NBA draft after the season, scored 29 points against an outstanding defensive team Saturday as No. 17 Iowa State claimed sole possession of first place in the Big 12 with a 72-61 victory over No. 10 Oklahoma State.

That effort followed his career-high 35 points in a victory over No. 14 Texas, which came after he scored 30 in an overtime loss at Colorado. Three games, 94 points.

"I don't think there's anybody in the country playing better than Marcus Fizer right now," Iowa State coach Larry Eustachy said. "That's why we find ourselves where we do in the standings."

On Saturday, with scouts from six NBA teams and Bulls general manager Jerry Krause watching, Fizer showed his versatility while making 13-of-19 shots. He sank two 3-pointers, made a jump shot with his toe on the 3-point arc and pulled up for a 17-footer. He also had four dunks, including a two-hand reverse that gave the Cyclones a 67-51 lead.
