UISG slate faces small fine

■ The elections board fines Brown/Bare $5 each, while the issue of unverifiable signatures arises.

By Ryan Foley
The Daily Iowan

The UI Student Government Student Elections Board has fined the Brown/Bare ticket for failing to gain approval for campaign materials, while the validity of some signatures on the petitions of all three presidential candidates is uncertain.

All eight members of the Brown/Bare slate were fined $5 late Wednesday after they failed to approve handouts with platform information before distribution.

All three of the slate's petitions have unverifiable names on their initial 500 mandatory student signatures: Marquez Brown had eight unverifiable names out of a total of 528, Andy Stoll had nine of 651, and Adam Tetzloff had nine of 547, according to the UI Registrar's Office.

The Registrar's Office checked every fifth name on the petitions to verify student enrollment, said Catherine Pietrzyk, the associate registrar for services.

Every year, the Registrar's Office finds a certain number of unverifiable signatures on the petitions.

However, this year the concern is that Brown may not have enough signatures after verification. The issue came up before the elections board, said Megan Bygnes, the elections board chairwoman and a UI senior. The board did not think it was necessary to review the names further, considering there are only three candidates running, she said.

"If you statistically extrapolated it, he would come up short," said Lawrence Houston, the chief justice of the Student Judicial court and a UI sophomore.

If someone files a complaint, the court would be obligated to review every name on the petitions, Houston said.

Brown said he thought 528 was more than enough signatures and was not worried about a further review.

Tetzloff said he got extra signatures just in case.

"Several people that I know signed the petition that weren't students," he said. "We got some extras just to be accountable."

Houston also said fining the Brown/Bare ticket $5 per member is "only a slap on the wrist" which sets a dangerous precedent for future campaigns. He added he may appeal the decision.

After a member of the Brown/Bare ticket gave a copy of the slate's platform to Houston, he turned it over to the elections board for review.

After reviewing the material, the board found it had not been approved, Bygnes said. All campaign materials that any slate distributes must be approved, she said, mainly to avoid the use of copyrighted logos or profanity.

The platform would have been approved, Bygnes said.

Elections board members voted 4-1 in favor of giving the $5 per person

Fire smokes out Sports Column

Matt Holst/The Daily Iowan

MidAmerican Energy Co. employees leave the Sports Column after investigating a fire that started in the basement early Thursday morning.

■ An early morning blaze caused $50,000 in damage at the downtown hot spot.

By Lisa Livermore
The Daily Iowan

An early morning fire Thursday has indefinitely closed the Sports Column, 12 S. Dubuque St., and temporarily displaced 20 Iowa City residents.

A discarded cigarette was the cause of the fire, which started shortly after 3:30 a.m. in the northwest corner of the basement of the bar, said Roger Jensen, the city fire marshal.

Thirteen firefighters took approximately 45 minutes to extinguish the fire, which caused approximately $50,000 in damage, he said.

The upstairs portion of the bar wasn't damaged, but the basement sustained extensive damage near the building's electrical service system.

Sports Column management does not know when the bar will reopen, said Sports Column manager Shawn Lewis.

"We will open it as soon as possible," he said.

The management will make further decisions after it completely assesses the damages, he said.

The building's owner, Don Stockfleet, was out of town and could not be reached for comment.

An employee of the Deadwood, 6 S. Dubuque St., notified the Fire Department about smoke early Thursday morning, Lewis said, but none of the Sports Column employees witnessed the fire.

The fire was partly squelched by water from a plastic pipe, which melted from heat and then sprayed water on the blaze.

A large amount of water needed to be pumped out of the basement Thursday, Jensen said.

Twenty occupants of apartments above the Sports Column were evacuated by firefighters shortly after they arrived on scene, said resident and UI senior Ellie Smith.

"It smelled like burning plastic," she said.

There were no visible flames from where she stood outside, but there was smoke inside the building, she said. Her apartment, which continues to smell of smoke, is located directly above the scene of the fire, Smith said.

Apartment residents were invited to the Deadwood, she said, and the owner offered them coffee and hot chocolate. She will stay at the Heartland Inn until March 5, because the building's electricity and water remain shut off.

Rally: End UI 'sweatshop connection'

Drums, masks and chants rallied approximately 15 protesters on the Pedestrian Mall Thursday afternoon as members of the UI Students Against Sweatshops voiced their anger over the university's connection with the Fair Labor Association.

During the protest, performers enacted a theatrical dramatization of abusive labor conditions and children working against their will while shackled to a ball and chain emblazoned with the UI Tiger Hawk logo. The protestor's message was clear: the UI should pull out of its contract with the Fair Labor Association and join the Workers Rights Consortium.

"We have to stand on the side of justice," Eric Brakken, a spokesman for the national SAS, told the rally.

Iowa City police observed the rally but stepped in only to stop the protesters from using bullhorns.

The protest was held prior to a meeting of the UI Ath-

Thomson gets 1 year in child-pornography case

■ The Lucas volunteer who possessed indecent photos of children was sentenced Thursday.

By Katie Bernard
The Daily Iowan

Roland Thomson, a former Iowa City teacher and volunteer at Lucas Elementary School, was sentenced in federal court Thursday to one year and one day in jail.

Federal authorities charged Thomson with possession of child pornography in August 1998, after he was found to possess 12 photographs and nine negatives of the genital regions of children exposing their undergarments.

The one day added to the 12-month sentence makes Thomson, 72, eligible for early release, said Jennifer Gill, an assistant to District Court Judge Mark Bennett.

"He could be released after 10 months," she said.

The sentence includes a $1,000 fine and a $100 special assessment fee.

Thomson was a volunteer in his wife's, Shirley Thomson, sixth-grade classroom. She will go to trial on state charges on April 24 for child endangerment.

"It is now time for the healing to start," said Sally Hartman, a Lucas Elementary School psychologist.

A pre-sentence report filed in early February recommended 21-27 months imprisonment with no probation because of a conviction in 1985 for taking similar photos.

At that time, Bill Kutmus, Thomson's attorney, said he would ask Bennett to allow home confinement because of Thomson's failing health.

Kutmus said his client suffers from a heart condition, diabetes, memory and hearing loss and requires medication four times a day.

Thomson, 72, pleaded guilty to taking sexually suggestive photographs of Lucas Elementary sixth-graders in December but said they were not

Pinochet 'unfit,' free and heading for Santiago

■ The British home secretary declares the former dictator mentally unfit to stand trial.

By Mara D. Bellaby
Associated Press

LONDON — Former Chilean dictator Gen. Augusto Pinochet departed Britain a free man Thursday, ending a 16-month legal saga heralded for establishing that former leaders accused of human-rights abuses are not immune from prosecution abroad.

"This has been an unprecedented case. Both I and the courts have had to navigate in uncharted territory," Home Secretary Jack Straw told the House of Commons after ruling that the 84-year-old general was mentally unfit to be extradited to Spain for trial on torture charges.

Straw also dismissed extradition requests from three other nations that contended their citizens were victims of Pinochet's régime — Belgium, France and Switzerland.

Pinochet, who doctors say suffered brain damage when he experienced two small strokes last fall, left Britain

Thursday afternoon. He was expected to arrive in Santiago today after an undisclosed stopover en route.

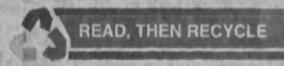

The former dictator issued no comment as his detention in Britain came to an end, but his eldest son, Augusto Marco Antonio, said in the Chilean capital that his father received the news of his freedom "very calmly, the way he usually is, without showing his feelings and emotions."

While human-rights groups expressed dismay at Straw's ruling,

THINGS A POOR STUDENT DOESN'T WANT TO SEE AT THE ATM

- You go to get a balance inquiry, and instead of printing out a receipt the screen says, "Not worth wasting paper," and ejects your card.
- You try to get a balance inquiry, and the screen says, "Account not found," and keeps your card.
- You insert your card and try to get some cash, and the ATM laughs and spits out your shredded card.
- You withdraw some money to pay some bills, count it, and the screen says, "What, you thought there was some EXTRA there? Ha!" and ejects your card clear across the room.
- You think you've got $100 in your account and go to take out $50, and the screen says, "Not in this lifetime," and laughs as you bang on the machine, trying desperately to get your card back.
- You go to the ATM, and there's a picture of you à la "Most Wanted" staring forlornly at the ATM camera with a caption that reads, "Wanted for trying to get water from a dry well." — or, "Wanted by the environmental police for creating unnecessary paper trash."

UI researcher receives $2.3 million grant to study Depo-Provera

M. Kathleen Clark, an associate professor in the UI College of Nursing, has received a four-year, $2.3 million grant from the National Institute for Child Health and Human Development to study the effects of Depo-Provera on bone-mineral density in women.

Clark, an epidemiologist and nurse practitioner, said evidence suggests that Depo-Provera, a popular contraceptive injection, may contribute to bone loss at a time when women are maintaining or building bone. This may set the stage for osteoporosis later in life.

"Right now, decisions regarding the use or non-use of Depo-Provera by clinicians and consumers are made based on inadequate information," she said. "We hope that the information gained from this study will provide the basis of an informed decision."

Depo-Provera is a highly effective method of contraception that is injected every 90 days, an advantage many women prefer, Clark said.

Out of the rut & into the laughter

■ Kappa Alpha Psi is bringing Def Comedy Jam to the UI Saturday as part of its founders' week celebration.

By Cassie Huisman
The Daily-Iowan

Students who may be used to sitting—or sleeping—through big lectures in Macbride Hall may find comic relief in the auditorium this weekend, courtesy of Def Comedy Jam 2000.

The event will be held Saturday at 8 p.m. The doors will open around 7:30 p.m.; admission is $10, which will include an after-party in the IMU Wheelroom.

Comedians such as Deon Cole and Marcus Combs, who have performed on BET, will appear, said Mike Salmon, a UI senior and the president of Kappa Alpha Psi fraternity. Salmon also said Michael Blaxton, who co-starred in the movie Next Friday, will attend the event.

UI senior Andy Peterson said he is considering going to the event because he enjoys comedy and thinks it will be good to be able to do something different.

"It is rare they have things like that here, at least at a professional level," he said. "It's a nice change of pace from the bars or parties."

Kappa Alpha Psi fraternity is hosting the event as part of a celebration for its founders' week, Salmon said.

"I just want everyone to have a good time," he said. "Something they'll remember for a long time."

The Def Comedy Jam will cost the fraternity approximately $5,000, Salmon said, which must be paid upfront. He said the money was partly raised from alumni donations and from the pockets of current members.

Celebrating 86 years, the Gamma chapter began at the UI in 1914 and was the first black fraternity at the UI, Salmon said.

"We really take pride in that, so we want to do something special for alumni," he said.

Some alumni will be coming from as far as Europe for this weekend's party, he said.

The event is open to everyone, Salmon said, and the fraternity hopes to fill Macbride Auditorium.

"I'm expecting close to 500 people," he said.

UI freshman Tiffany Bradley said she is looking forward to the event.

"I'm hoping to get a few laughs out of it," she said, "I'm sure it will be funny."

Confusion, disputes mark co-op meeting

A New Pioneer Co-op Board of Directors' meeting Thursday night was dominated by confusion and disagreement among its members, causing a frustrated Dennis McLearn, the co-op's general manager, to withdraw his motion to discuss matters without the public present.

Debate among board members and the audience regarding executive privacy in light of possibly relocating the grocery store, 22 S. Van Buren St., prolonged the meeting for an extra hour.

"We're really wasting a lot of people's time tonight," McLearn said. "I do not know how to do my job if I can't talk to my board when I need to."

After board members determined they needed further discussion of their executive powers, they scheduled an executive session for noon today.

The board meeting returned to the issue of relocation, which arose during Wednesday night's Van Buren Remodeling Committee meeting.

McLearn said he wanted to inform committee members that the subject of relocation had come up by having Board President Patrick Hughes announce Wednesday that relocating the grocery store was a possibility. However, he did not intend to give the impression that remodeling would not take place.

Board Vice President Janet Clements said there has not been adequate surveys of the building and expressed concern that the remodeling project was not moving forward because relocating had become an option with Madison Realty's purchase proposal.

"It seems we're dragging our feet constantly," she said. "How can we remodel Van Buren without competent analysis?"

Benefit to focus on stealing resources from Indian land

Resistance to strip mining and contamination of American Indian land will be the focus of a benefit and lecture at Old Brick, 26 E. Market St., at 5 p.m. today.

The event, sponsored by the Alliance for Indigenous Rights, will advocate for the end of government exploitation of resources in the Big Mountain, Black Mesa Hopi and Dinèh (Navajo) communities in Arizona, said Franz Kinupser, the events coordinator of the alliance.

"The reason behind the lecture is because of land rights and the robbing of coal and energy from the tribes in the Big Mountain area," he said. "We will have tribal members coming from Arizona to talk about their situation."

Poetry and music by Tek Winesberry, a Native American pianist, will be part of the event.

Jerel Fowler, an Iowa City resident from the Dinèh Nation, said coal mining has had a negative effect on the area.

"I used to live about 16 miles from where the coal mining is taking place. I still talk to my relatives, who say that the coal mining has gotten worse," he said.

Fowler said he sees the event as a good teaching tool for those who are not aware of the issues.

"I think that the lecture is a good idea that will inform others about the situation," he said.

UI graduate student Tracy Peterson, also from the Dinèh nation, said he condemns the coal mining.

"What they're doing is taking out all the resources, leaving the land bare, and I don't agree with that," he said. "The fear among the residents there is that, in time, no resources will be left. They call it taking the life out of the land."

Approximately 100 people attended the event last year, and Kinupser said he is expecting a similar turnout this year.

FBI seizes teen's computer in hack-attack probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal agents investigating last month's Internet attacks have seized a computer from a 17-year-old New England boy and are considering charging him with computer crimes unrelated to those disruptions, a federal law-enforcement official said Thursday.

The youth uses the screen name "coolio," one of the aliases the FBI suspects may have been involved in last month's sensational attacks against popular Web sites, the official said, requesting anonymity. But federal investigators believe he is only one of a number of people who have used "coolio" as a screen name.

The charges that federal prosecutors are weighing do not stem from the so-called denial-of-service attacks that shut down Yahoo!, eBay, Amazon.com and other Internet sites for hours at a time but rather from evidence of other, unrelated hacking found on the seized computer, this official said.

The 17-year-old, who lives in New Hampshire, claimed to FBI agents that he had hacked into 100 Web sites, including one based in Los Angeles, Officer Joe Buscaino of the Los Angeles Police Department said Thursday.

S.C. House strips MLK from holiday

■ Legislators vote to proclaim that the Confederate flag is not racist.

By Jim Davenport
Associated Press

COLUMBIA, S.C. — A bill that would create an official Martin Luther King Jr. holiday for state employees in South Carolina was amended in the state House Thursday to strip his name from it and to include a statement that Confederate flags are not racist symbols.

Divided along racial and party lines, legislators voted to name the holiday Civil Rights Day.

The Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. Center for Nonviolent Social Change in Atlanta said South Carolina is the only state that does not recognize a King holiday for all state employees. Under existing law, state employees can choose to take the King holiday off or one of three Confederate-related holidays.

"The prevailing sentiment here was that there would be no holiday honoring a black person in this state," said Rep. Joe Neal, House leader of the Legislative Black Caucus. To "link the issue to the Confederate flag obviously is an attempt at racial politics of the lowest kind and that's exactly what happened."

While Republicans want to acknowledge the civil-rights struggle, "there is also a need to acknowledge that the War Between the States is of ... significance to many South Carolinians as well," said Republican Rep. Al Robinson.

Neal countered that the House can't change people's minds on the Confederate flag. South Carolina is the only state that still flies the flag from its Statehouse dome.

"The Confederate flag is racist. It has been perceived as racist by millions of people across this country and around the world," he said.

Vandals at gates of Riverside Dr.

Windows of businesses in the South Riverside Drive area were hit by rock-tossers Thursday.

By Anne Huyck
The Daily Iowan

Businesses on Sturgis and South Riverside drives were damaged by vandals early Thursday morning.

Several windows were damaged or broken at Coldwell Banker Real Estate Professionals, 44 Sturgis Corner Drive; Wendy's, 840 S. Riverside Drive; McDonald's Restaurant, 804 S. Riverside Drive; the Ground Round Restaurant and Lounge, 830 S. Riverside Drive; and other businesses in the area. In addition, several windows of vehicles in the area were damaged, according to police reports.

Iowa City police responded to four different calls in the area after the vandalism occurred between 3:21 a.m. and 5:15 a.m., said Iowa City police Sgt. Brian Krei.

There are no suspects yet; the investigation is ongoing, Krei said. It may be difficult to find the vandals because they used rocks to damage the windows. Rocks are "nearly impossible" to obtain fingerprints from unless they are very smooth, he said.

Although the police have no total estimate of damages, replacing a double-paned Wendy's window alone will cost $1,500, Krei said.

Much of the damage at the Ground Round has already been repaired, said Brian Hills, a service and bar manager at the restaurant.

"There was one window broken here with a pretty good-sized rock," he said. "Coldwell Banker had five windows broken, so I guess we are on the good side in comparison."

The general manager at Wendy's, Saf Ibrik, said all of the rocks he saw that caused damage were big. He said he didn't believe that the vandals were thinking when they committed the crime.

Vandalism is an ongoing problem in Iowa City, but there have been no recent incidents as costly as Thursday's, Krei said.

"There's always little things, but nothing to this extent," he said.

Bush accuses McCain of smear

In their last debate before Super Tuesday, the Republican rivals had sharp words for each other.

By Glen Johnson
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — George W. Bush accused John McCain in debate Thursday night of smearing his reputation with campaign attacks over religion and said, "I don't appreciate it one bit." His GOP presidential rival denied the charge, saying he had merely served up "straight talk" about the Texas governor's visit to Bob Jones University.

In their 10th and final debate before next week's Super Tuesday primaries, the two leading rivals for the Republican nomination differed politely over which man could better lead the GOP to the White House this fall. Bush said he could attract the independents and Democrats whose votes have been going to McCain in the early primaries. And McCain said "Christian conservatives all over America" will support him despite his sharp and continuing criticism of Pat Robertson and Jerry Falwell.

McCain, at pains to underscore his party loyalty, also pledged not to walk out of the nominating convention this summer if he wins the popular vote in the California primary on March 7 but loses a separate winner-take-all contest for the state's 162 delegates.

The debate came five days before Bush, McCain and Keyes square off in California and 12 other states in GOP primaries and caucuses that will go a long way toward settling the nominating fight. In all, 613 delegates will be at stake, more than half the total needed to win the nomination. Bush won all three GOP contests earlier this week in Virginia, North Dakota and Washington, and by his own campaign's account, McCain needs a strong showing next Tuesday to have a serious shot at victory.

The debate format was unusual, with Bush and Keyes on stage in an auditorium in the Los Angeles Times building in California and McCain joining by satellite from a studio in St. Louis. Bush, Keyes and the audience watched and heard the Arizona senator on a large-screen TV positioned where a third podium would have been.

Education, foreign policy, death-row executions and gun control also came up in the wide-ranging debate.

Clinton renews push for gun control

The president hopes that the Michigan tragedy will help break the inertia on gun control.

By Terence Hunt
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Seeking momentum on gun control from this week's Michigan school shooting, President Clinton summoned leaders of Congress to the White House next week, hoping to break an impasse on mandatory gun safety locks and gun show background checks.

"Maybe this tragic death will help," the president said Thursday, referring to Tuesday's fatal shooting of a 6-year-old girl by a classmate using a stolen .32-caliber semiautomatic gun in Mount Morris Township, Mich.

On Capitol Hill, there was talk of compromise between Republicans and Democrats after months of inaction.

"We'll take whatever we can agree on — gun shows, clips, safety locks," said Senate Minority Leader Tom Daschle, D-S.D. "We're currently doing nothing."

Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill, the chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, said, "We have a reasonable gun bill. If the Democrats want a bill, we can do it. If they want the issue, we'll have the issue." He said he was open to compromise. "I think the country wants legislation."

Democrats failed on a 49-49 tie vote Thursday night to get the Senate to adopt a resolution calling for final congressional action on new gun-control measures by April 20. Had he been there, Vice President Al Gore could have broken the tie, as he did last year on a key vote before the Senate passed gun restrictions to Clinton's liking. The legislation has been stalled since then.

■ Maria Hsia, friend of Al Gore, convicted of a $100,000 in insurance fraud.

By Peter... ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Thursday convicted friend and political Vice President Al Gore more than $100,000 in insurance fraud during a donation drive for a presidential campaign.

The jury deliberated for two days before convicting Hsia, who started the Gore more than $100,000 in insurance fraud during a donation drive for a presidential campaign. She was sentenced to a five-year prison term. She is scheduled for sentencing next week.

Gore called Hsia a "political support" and said she had a hard day for her. Hsia's lawyer, Robert S. Palmer, said she had declined to comment when asked about the charges while campaigning.

Republicans are suggesting that the case has failed to raise a scandal.

"I don't know what she's been up to," said Sen. R-Tenn., who has been a campaign foe and has criticized al Janet Reno for independent court administration matter.

Reno defended her work, saying the case was a "series of unfortunate coincidences of a couple of people besides Hsia."

How is old enough to prosecute

■ The aftermath of the case of the boy who killed...

By Sharon... ASSOCIATED PRESS

A 6-year-old boy with a gun and first-grade class hours, he is calm, tures, and he doesn't know what age can be responsible for crime?

Tuesday's trial in Morris Township stirred new questions about how much children under 10 they kill and how they should deal with them.

Genesee County Judge Arthur Busch said the charge against the boy was an involuntary manslaughter charge against a 6-year-old boy who allegedly possessed a gun later used in the shooting.

But he has said the boy will be prosecuted for the crime of 6-year-old Kayla's death.

"He is a victim," Busch said this week. "I don't want to put our arms around him."

Police say they told the boy the shooting was an accident and he had to go to court to scare his classmates.

Legal experts say the case is the only one of its kind in the legal precedents that have guided law for hundreds of years. It is a case about children under 10 who are responsible for crimes.

"A 6-year-old child is not a criminal," said S. lawyer at Northw. Center in Chicago still believes in the Easter bunny and they don't make between their actions. They act on the permanence of the law.

But why is 7 the age? Studies have shown that children under 10 are in the hood, with a major change in brain chemistry between ages 5 and 7. A professor at Temple University, director of the MacArthur Research Network on Child Development and Justice.

Hsia guilty in fund-raising scam

■ Maria Hsia, a long-time friend of Al Gore's, is convicted of arranging $100,000 in illegal donations.

By Pete Yost
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A federal jury Thursday convicted a long-time friend and political supporter of Vice President Al Gore for arranging more than $100,000 in illegal donations during the 1996 presidential campaign.

The jury deliberated fewer than two days before finding Maria Hsia, who started raising money for Gore more than a decade ago, guilty of five felony counts, each carrying a five-year maximum prison term. No date has been scheduled for sentencing.

Gore called Hsia "a friend and political supporter" and said "it's a hard day for her," but the vice president declined further comment when asked about the verdict while campaigning in New York.

Republicans expressed surprise, suggesting that the Justice Department has failed to pursue the fund-raising scandal aggressively.

"I don't know who is more surprised — me or the Justice Department," said Sen. Fred Thompson, R-Tenn., who headed up the Senate campaign fund-raising probe and has criticized Attorney General Janet Reno for not seeking an independent counsel to investigate administration higher-ups in the matter.

Reno defended the department's work, saying there have been prosecutions of a corporation and 21 people besides Hsia.

Defense attorney Nancy Luque, who has motions pending before the judge seeking an acquittal in the Hsia case, said: "The thing's still alive. It's not dead yet."

Prosecutors alleged that Hsia tapped a Buddhist temple and some of her well-to-do business clients for money to reimburse straw donors who were listed as the contributors in campaign records. Hsia was charged with causing false statements to be filed with the Federal Election Commission. According to evidence presented in the case, $109,000 in reimbursed donations went to Clinton-Gore '96, the Democratic Party and the campaign of Rep. Patrick Kennedy, D-R.I.

Video footage was played at the trial showing the vice president attending the now-infamous donor event at a Buddhist temple in Hacienda Heights, Calif.

U.S. District Judge Paul Friedman, a Clinton appointee, ordered that the courtroom tape — likely attack fodder on the campaign trail — be kept out of the public domain until the trial's end.

When controversy erupted after the event, the vice president said he hadn't known he was attending a fund-raiser, that he thought it was community outreach. After documents turned up referring to the event in advance as a fund-raiser, Gore modified his characterization, saying he had thought it was finance-related.

Republican National Committee Chairman Jim Nicholson said it's time for the "Clinton-Gore Justice Department ... to get beyond the small-fry and take on the major players, such as Al Gore."

At the trial, former Democratic Party fund-raiser John Huang, the central figure in the campaign fund-raising scandal, testified that Hsia handed him an envelope containing $100,000 the day after he and Hsia discussed the fact that the event hadn't raised much money, despite Gore's appearance. Much of the money was illegally reimbursed from temple funds.

Police: Anti-white writings found in accused shooter's home

WILKINSBURG, Pa. (AP) — A black man accused of killing three whites and wounding two others in a shooting rampage was arraigned Thursday on hate-crime charges.

Ronald Taylor had "anti-white" writings in his apartment and singled out whites during the attack, reassuring a black woman in his path, "Not you, sister," authorities and witnesses said.

"The general tenor was that he wasn't shooting anybody but whites," Allegheny County homicide Lt. John Brennan said Thursday as authorities tried to put together a portrait of the suspect.

The third victim, Emil Sanieleveci, 20, died Thursday, a day after Taylor allegedly targeted whites during a rampage that ended after a hostage standoff at an office building in this suburban Pittsburgh community.

Taylor was to be arraigned today for the University of Pittsburgh student's death. Earlier Thursday, police charged him with ethnic intimidation, Pennsylvania's term for a hate crime, accusing him of setting fire to his apartment and shooting the men with malicious intent "toward white males," court documents said.

The FBI also said it has initiated a civil-rights investigation into the shootings.

District Justice Alberta Thompson asked Taylor if he had any criminal record or history of drug use, and he said no. When she asked if he had any history of mental illness, he said yes. The judge did not ask him to elaborate. Mental-health records in Pennsylvania are confidential.

How old is old enough to prosecute?

■ The aftershocks continue in the case of the 6-year-old boy who killed a classmate.

By Sharon Cohen
Associated Press

A 6-year-old boy comes to school with a gun and allegedly kills a first-grade classmate. Within hours, he is calmly drawing pictures, and the debate begins: At what age can a child be held responsible for committing a crime?

Tuesday's tragedy in Mount Morris Township, Mich., has stirred new questions about how much children understand when they kill and how authorities should deal with them.

Genesee County Prosecutor Arthur Busch Thursday brought an involuntary manslaughter charge against a 19-year-old man who allegedly possessed the stolen gun later used in the shooting.

But he has said it is unlikely the boy will be prosecuted in the death of 6-year-old Kayla Rolland.

"He is a victim in many ways," Busch said this week. "We need to put our arms around him and love him."

Police say the 6-year-old boy told them the shooting was an accident and he had only been trying to scare his classmate.

Legal experts say Busch's position is the only logical course and note that under common law — the legal precedents and traditions that have guided American law for hundreds of years — children under 7 are not held responsible for crimes.

"A 6-year-old can't form criminal intent," said Steve Drizin, a lawyer at Northwestern University's Children and Family Justice Center in Chicago. "A 6-year-old still believes in the tooth fairy, the Easter bunny and Santa Claus. They don't make the connection between their actions and the consequences. They have no sense of the permanence of death."

But why is 7 the dividing line? Studies have shown dramatic changes in thinking during childhood, with a major one occurring between ages 5 and 7, says Laurence Steinberg, a psychology professor at Temple University and director of the MacArthur Foundation Research Network on Adolescent Development and Juvenile Justice.

Course offerings show UI neglect of Middle East

Last week, the Association of American Muslims started teaching its own introductory class in Islam after the UI failed to start a new class for credit. Numerous requests have been made to the UI and the College of Liberal Arts for an introductory Islam course or a religion professor who specializes in Islam.

The requests have all been denied or put off with vague promises of future results. The UI's failure to satisfy demand for courses in Islam is only part of a larger problem. The UI completely ignores an entire culture by not offering adequate courses in Arabic, the Middle East or Islam.

A search through the online course catalogue reveals that it is difficult to find even one class related to this region of the world. Keyword searches for "Middle East," "Arabic," "Palestine," "Near East" and others failed to bring up even a single match. In the liberal arts catalogue, fewer than five courses were found in scattered departments such as political science and history. None of the classes were introductory-level courses appropriate for lower-level undergraduate students.

The UI's inadequacy is obvious when you peruse the course offerings from other Big Ten universities. Without exception, they offer courses in Arabic. They all offer introductory courses in Islam and Middle Eastern politics and history. Most of them offer degrees and departments that concentrate on Islamic or Arabic culture and language.

Arabic is the fourth most widely spoken language in the world. Islam is one of the world's major religions. The Middle East is very important to the United States and the world economy, and an understanding of the history and the politics of the region is important for a well-rounded liberal-arts education. The UI should be embarrassed to be at the bottom of the Big Ten in studying and teaching about this culture.

In its defense, UI administrators say that they can't fund everything. In the Feb. 25 Daily Iowan, Fred Antezak, the associate dean of academic programs for liberal arts, was quoted as saying, "It would be nice if we had the resources. But whenever you do something new, there is also something that you aren't going to do." This goes without saying. But the problem isn't a lack of resources, it's a lack of priorities. Having adequate courses on the Middle East, Islam, and Arabic should be at the top of the list for the UI.

The UI apparently doesn't care that the only exposure most grads have to Islam and the Middle East is stereotypical portrayals on TV and in films. Arab and Muslim students have to look to resources outside the university to learn about their own culture. This needs to be changed, and students and faculty should continue to protest loudly for as long as it takes.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Brown comments insulting to fellow UISG senators

I have to say that I was amazed at what I heard at the Wednesday night debate between the UISG presidential hopefuls. I went to the event with absolutely no prejudices. I personally know two of the three candidates — Marquez Brown and Andy Stoll. I have worked with both of them on projects to better life for UI students. What I was shocked to hear was a statement by UISG presidential hopeful Brown, who said something that greatly insulted me. He stated that the executive branch needed to empower the senators and make them active members of the student government. I took this personally because I am a senator.

With this statement, Brown made a horrible error. Not only does it imply that the senators do not do their job but that the senators need to be prodded like second-graders to be active. Most of the students involved in student government are there solely to improve the university for the student body, not to make a name for themselves or pad their résumés. Therefore, these senators do not actively seek out praise for their hard work.

It is because of these "silent soldiers" that students have many privileges that they can take for granted. Products of UISG work include (soon to begin) debit parking cards, extended study hours, online voting, online referendums, grants, scholarships, funding of many diversity programs and events, etc. There is also continual work by senators to improve health insurance for undergraduate students, to bring new student groups to campus, to remove sales tax from textbooks, to improve conditions of the library, and many more projects. The fact of the matter is that these senators spend their time to make these changes and ask for no thanks in return.

Too often these individuals are criticized when they should be given a pat on the back. This criticism has often come from The Daily Iowan or uninformed students, and the hard-working senators have taken it all with a grain of salt. However, criticism of the senators from a presidential candidate cannot be accepted — especially when it is used as a tool for campaigning.

Marquez, I have worked with you in student government. You have done a good job as a senator — you know the hard work that is involved. Don't make the mistake of insulting those of us who you have worked with and desire to continue to work with. Remember that we are here for the betterment of the student body and not for personal fame.

'Fourth Floor' deserves credit

I'm sorry, but I have to defend the cartoon "Fourth Floor." I think it's cute, and it appeals to most college students. The only thing I have to say to Courtney Usher (DI, March 1) is if you don't like the cartoon, then don't read it. I do the crossword every day also, and I enjoy reading the comic strip. So what if the grammar isn't accurate? Didn't you say you were in the Department of Chemistry? So who made you queen of correcting grammar? Lay off and read another comic strip if you don't like it. There are three others to choose from.

To Hollatz: Keep up the good work. I'm glad to see one of our own following and living his dream.

'0 to 1' event poorly labeled

Michael Chapman's article, "Multimedia event turns a little rave-like," (DI, Feb. 22), may well be the most ridiculous excuse for journalism I've read in a long, long time.

I was a volunteer at "From 0 to 1," and I think that as an event to showcase modern dance music and new digital art forms, it was an overwhelming success. Chapman doesn't mention anything that actually occurred at "From 0 to 1," only things that he imagines might have happened. He cites a "controversy" surrounding the event but presents no evidence that any such controversy exists. Every direct quote in the article suggests that the event was successful, orderly and peaceful. It complied fully both with the law and of UI policy concerning events of this nature.

Why did the DI have to print such a patently nonsensical piece of reportage? It insults the hard work of everyone involved in making "0 to 1" a successful event. There were no arrests and no damage to the facility. And for the nearly 900 techno fans who showed up to dance, it was a uniquely exciting and enjoyable event that will long be remembered.

Was it "rave-like"? Perhaps. Unlike Chapman, though, I've actually attended raves, and I think it represented everything positive about underground dance culture, without any of the negative attributes. To repeat the words of Phillip Jones, "The students operated with integrity and pulled it off, showing that they can have events that are stereotypically associated with drugs and alcohol without any problems." I only wish Mr. Chapman and the DI could show a similar level of integrity in their reportage.

Secret society to blame for students' insufferable midterm stress

It's time again for every student's favorite time of the semester besides finals week: midterms. Of course, an argument can be made that midterms are actually more stressful than finals.

In addition to cramming for a million tests, you also have to fret about reading next week's material for the class period following the dreaded midterm. After finals, that's it, the semester's over, you go home and get a job for a few months.

And then there's the straw that breaks that camel's back — the ultimate, undeniable evidence that midterms are 10 times more stressful than finals: Finals week is just that, a week. You have a million tests over five days.

But there's no week set aside for midterm examinations, no official schedule posted by the UI prescribing the specific time when each course must give its exam.

So with the lack of an official timetable, what inevitably happens semester after semester? You guessed it: Each and every one of your million classes has its midterm exam on the exact same day.

Coincidence? "Jimmy" thinks not. Jimmy, a self-described UI insider, suggests the existence of an Iowa City branch of the Stonecutters Society that holds secret meetings far beneath the UI, whose votes on UI policy override even the fearless Board of Regents.

According to Jimmy, the Stonecutters' secret meeting place in Iowa City is beneath the Pentacrest. He said evidence of the secret society can be seen by gazing down ventilation grates around the buildings in the Pentacrest

"It ain't Joe Pesci living down there, I guarantee you that," Jimmy said.

"The Stonecutters meet down there." Jimmy refused to explain the "Stonecutters" reference, mentioning that anyone who doesn't watch "The Simpsons" doesn't deserve to know what he's talking about. But he's a little less callous when it comes to explaining how Joe Pesci got connected with the stress of midterms day.

"There's this movie called With Honors, starring Brendan Fraser and Joe Pesci. Brendan plays a law student at Harvard who drops the only copy of his thesis paper down a ventilation grate. When he goes down to the boiler room to retrieve the paper, he meets Joe Pesci's character, who lives down there. But I'll tell you, nobody lives in our boiler rooms. That's where the Stonecutters meet."

Jimmy said the Stonecutters consist of representatives from each UI department and college. The secret society's main purpose is to create a schedule for midterms so intricate

Tom Tortorich

The secret society's main purpose is to create a schedule for midterms so intricate that no UI student can escape having all her or his midterm exams scheduled on the same day.

that no UI student can escape having all her or his midterm exams scheduled on the same day. And that day just happens to be the same day that your 10-page paper on William Faulkner is due, which just happens to be the same day that you had planned to finally make it down to Hertz to sign the papers to rent that Yugo for the road trip you've been planning to take over Spring Break.

Jimmy does not believe this is a coincidence, but I would be more inclined to believe a few bats live in Jimmy's belfry before I buy that the Stonecutters meet beneath Jessup Hall. In fact, Jimmy owns approximately two dozen copies of The Catcher in the Rye, just like Mel Gibson's character in Conspiracy Theory.

Jimmy is also the only student I've ever met who actually favors next year's tuition increase. Jimmy claims the Stonecutters' altar far beneath Jessup Hall isn't really sufficient for their needs and believes the additional money coming in to the UI through next year's separation of tuition and fees will be money well-spent, because the UI plans to use it to replace the Stonecutters' inadequate altar with a newer, state-of-the-art altar.

And then there's the straw that breaks the camel's back, the ultimate, undeniable evidence that Jimmy is slightly less than a credible source: He always refers to himself in the third person.

Instead of writing this inane column, one would be tempted to ask Jimmy, "Shouldn't you be studying for midterms?"

Paul Anka is still doing it his way

■ Paul Anka brings a half-century in showbiz to TV.

By John Rogers
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — If he'd been able to "squiggle" just a little bit better, popular music might never have had a teen idol known as Paul Anka.

Rather than finding Paul Anka: A Body of Work at the local record store today, we might be picking up the newspaper and reading the byline, "Paul Anka, Pop Music Critic."

"I had a knack for writing, and my dad always wanted me to be a journalist," Anka said. "But I got kicked out of shorthand class ... No way did I want to do those little squiggles."

So he turned his attention to music. Imagine if he hadn't:

There would be no Frank Sinatra signature song called "My Way." Anka wrote it for him. And there would have been no bouncy introduction for the band to play when Johnny Carson stepped on stage. Anka wrote the "Tonight Show" theme.

There would be no last great song from Buddy Holly, the title of which, "It Doesn't Matter Any More," came to frame his untimely death in a plane crash shortly after he recorded it.

Put together a soundtrack for the last 40 years, and it is hard to do it without Paul Anka. "You Are My Destiny," "Lonely Boy," "Put Your Head on My Shoulder" and many more.

Anka sings them all in a show airing on PBS stations beginning on March 6 (check local listings), coinciding with Public Television's latest fund-raising drive.

The fast-moving, hour-plus performance was captured in November 1999 at the Mirage in Las Vegas, a city where Anka has long been a fixture.

It's titled "Paul Anka: Night of a Lifetime," though it seems fair to assume the Canadian native has had a few others in his 42-year career. And at age 58, he's looking forward to many more.

"I've seen a lot of guys in different occupations that I know, they quit because they've got all the money they figure they need. And they get old really fast," he said by phone during a recent break between tour dates. "I could retire, but I don't know what I'd do. I'm a very young guy. I've got a lot of energy, and I wouldn't know how to direct that."

So Anka goes out on the road as many as 35 weeks a year, playing Las Vegas, Atlantic City, Australia, Europe, Asia, Latin America.

Having scored at least one hit record in every decade since the 1950s, Anka has a broad fan base and is booked solid well into 2001.

His most recent album, 1998's A Body of Work, featured duets with Celine Dion, Patti LaBelle and others. He still writes every week, and plans another album.

"You know, I'm really at a place now where I've never been this comfortable," Anka said. "I've never had so much fun. It's what you work for all your life."

Beauty in the eyes of Sela Ward

ARLINGTON, Va. (AP) — Sela Ward wants society to accept aging women as they are.

That's the goal of her documentary, "The Changing Face of Beauty," scheduled to air March 19 on Lifetime Television.

"We need to embrace whatever age we are and own it," Ward told USA Today. "We live inauthentically and do violence to ourselves when we lie about how old we are."

But the 43-year-old actress, who plays a divorced mother on ABC's "Once and Again," says she hasn't ruled out having cosmetic surgery to look younger.

"I don't know that I have the courage not to have plastic surgery," she said. "The thing for me is not deciding to have it or not. It's about how we feel inside — that strong center of knowing that I'm OK no matter how old or thin I am."

An Oregon Farmworker Shares Experiences, Struggles, and Victories in the Fields

OREGON'S FARMWORKERS:

150,000 Mexican farmworkers harvest crops in Oregon each year. They live in crowded labor camps, receive no paid breaks or overtime pay, are exposed to dangerous pesticides -- and are fired, evicted, and threatened with physical violence when they speak out. Despite these obstacles, farmworkers continue to struggle for justice.

PCUN is Oregon's union of farmworkers, nursery and reforestation workers, and is Oregon's largest Latino organization. The union represents 4,500 farmworkers.

Dear UI Colleagues:

Setting a new record, UI employees teamed up with UI retirees to support United Way of Johnson County for a total contribution of $326,963 this year. Congratulations and thanks to all who gave! Proceeds from the $1.7 million campaign drive help support 40 health and human service agencies in the area.

Thanks are also due to this year's Honorary United Way Campaign Chair, Coach Kirk Ferentz for his participation. Special thanks to Facilities Services Group, Office of Student Life, and Recreational Services for providing United Way thermometer space in Hubbard Park. Also, many "ambassadors" of the community presented information about United Way agencies, ran stories in their newsletters and posted signs about the campaign. Thumbs up to those units and departments that hosted a personal visit from Sherri Zastrow, United Way representative. Thanks to those students who assisted with fundraising through this year's first student-driven pop can recycling program for United Way.

Many thanks for giving incentives provided by Hancher Auditorium, Finkbine Pro Shop, Iowa House, IMU Bookstore, IMU Food Service, Women's & Men's Athletics, Hawk Shop, Recreational Services and UIHC Gift Shop. A very special thank you to President Coleman who sponsored lunch and a basketball game for four United Way givers.

We look forward to next year's campaign and invite those who did not participate this year to join us in the spirit of giving. Our health and human service agencies need your support!

Sincerely,

Ticket prices increase

Ticket prices for Iowa football and men's basketball tickets will increase next year. Season football tickets for the 2000 campaign will go from $144 to $150 for the general public. UI staff tickets go from $120 to $126. Student tickets will not increase and will remain at $60. The increase is a direct result of a $6 increase in the ticket price for the Iowa State game. A single game purchase of Iowa State tickets will be $35.

Iowa's home football schedule includes Western Michigan, Iowa State, Michigan State, Ohio State, Wisconsin and Northwestern.

There will be a $1 increase for each men's basketball game. Season basketball tickets (assuming 16 home games) will go from $240 to $256 for the public. Staff tickets will increase from $176 to $192. Student tickets for the entire home schedule will go from $112 to $128. A student ticket that excludes holiday and tournament games will cost $88, up from $77. Single game basketball tickets will be $20, up from $19.

Iowa ticket prices, even with the increase, remain in the lower half of ticket costs at other Big Ten schools.

Gatens was also a member of the City High track and field team that has won three state titles.

Hawks plan to return with Big Ten title

■ Last year, the Big Ten title eluded Iowa, but the Hawkeyes don't plan to make the same mistake twice.

By Greg Wallace
 The Daily Iowan

The build-up is over. Now, the real season begins for the Iowa wrestling team.

When Jody Strittmatter takes the mat to open the Big Ten wrestling tournament for Iowa Saturday morning, the mood will change.

Every mistake will hurt more, every takedown more important. That's because after four months of regular season action, the Hawkeyes will begin fighting for the only two titles that truly matter — the Big Ten and National titles.

"The coaches emphasize the Big Tens and Nationals all year long," Iowa 149-pound Mike Zadick, ranked No. 3 nationally, said. "It's our main goal. We realize we have ups and downs, and you learn from those. I think all of the guys on the team have prepared all of their lives for this and are ready to rise up for a big challenge."

The Hawkeyes will be the clear favorite, coming off of an undefeated dual meet season (18-0) which included defeats of No. 2 Minnesota and No. 5 Illinois.

Three Iowa wrestlers — Eric Juergens, T.J. Williams, and Wes Hand — will be No. 1 seeds, and Strittmatter, Doug Schwab, and Zadick will be seeded second.

Zalesky says the Hawkeyes, Gophers, and Illini are the only teams with the capability to take home the championship.

"In this race, you need 10 guys that can score big points," Zalesky said. "The three teams that can score big points are Iowa, Minnesota and Illinois. To me, in the Big Ten, you have to have all 10 guys scoring. It's not like the NCAAs, where you can win with five guys scoring for you. You need all 10 guys."

Iowa also has a bad taste from last year's tournament in its mouth.

Lee's era ends

■ The Hawkeyes were upset for the second year in a row by Northwestern in the first round of the Big Ten Tournament.

By Robert Yarborough
 The Daily Iowan

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. — Things were not supposed to end this way.

After a restless week of emotions and tears, the Hawkeyes looked flat in the first round of the Big Ten Tournament held in the Consecration Fieldhouse in Indianapolis, Ind., Thursday night. After jumping out to a 10-0 first half lead, Northwestern coasted to a 68-59 victory over the Hawkeyes in Angie Lee's finale.

Lee blew kisses to the crowd of 5,053 as she left the court in her final game as Iowa coach. The victory marks the second-consecutive season that the Wildcats have upset Iowa in the first round of the tournament.

"Northwestern beat us, just soundly beat us," Lee said. "The thing about it is, you really know how bad our players wanted it, but they are just exhausted."

Northwestern took the lead before the Hawkeyes scored their first bucket with 15 minutes left in the half. Iowa came back to tie the score at 18 with the help of two 3-pointers by Leah Magner, however the rest of the Hawkeyes remained cold as Iowa went into the locker room at halftime down 27-21.

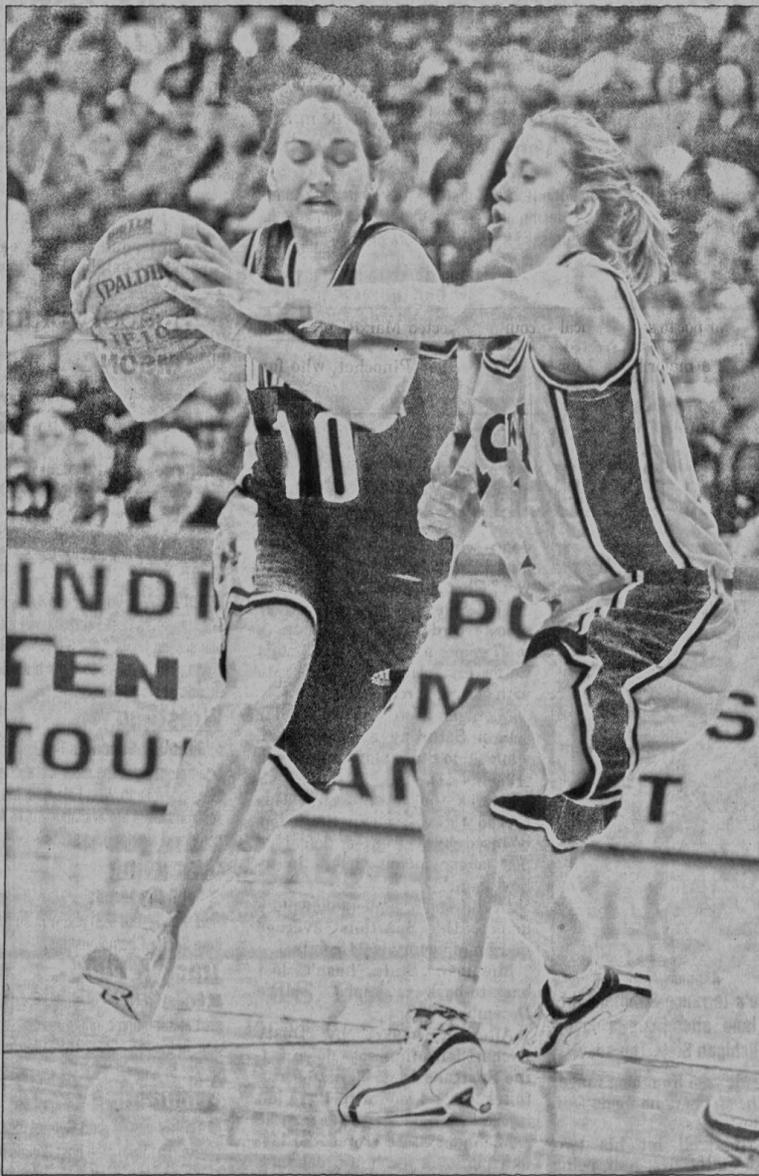

Magner scored 11 of Iowa's first half points, as the Hawkeyes shot just 23 percent from the field.

In the second half, Northwestern fought off a stingy Iowa defense to secure the victory. The Hawkeyes tied the game once again at 33 after Lindsey Meder scored on a 3-pointer with 16:09 left in the game. Immediately after the shot, the Wildcats went on a 13-2 run to take both the momentum and then the game away from Iowa.

Iowa shot 31 percent for the game which was not enough to counter the 47 percent the Wildcats had in the game.

Oregon, Drake coach possible candidates

■ Two Iowa natives say they will speak with Iowa officials about the Iowa women's basketball job if they are contacted.

By Melinda Mawdsley
 The Daily Iowan

Jody Runge and Lisa Bluder, two of the more successful women's college basketball coaches in the nation, are speculated to be the key choices to replace Angie Lee.

Runge, born and raised in Waukon, Iowa, is the current head coach at the University of Oregon. In her seven seasons at the helm, she has guided the Ducks to six-straight NCAA Tournament appearances plus back-to-back 20 win seasons the last two years.

Oregon was co-champion of the Pac-10 last season, tying with powerhouse Stanford. The shared title was the first time the Cardinal hadn't won the league's top honor outright in eight seasons.

Runge's overall record in Eugene is 115-54, including her team's 20-7 record this season. Her Ducks are in the hunt for their second-straight Pac-10 title, lurking one-half game behind Stanford.

Oregon Athletic Director Bob Moos said speculation surrounding Runge's possible move to Iowa has recently surfaced but that he has not yet been contacted by Iowa officials about talking to Runge.

"We have had no official contact with the University of Iowa," said Moos. "Jody's done an outstanding job here. She has helped develop a sound program."

Despite Runge's new four-year contract good for around $200,000 a year, Moos is aware of the possible attraction of the Iowa position.

"I know, what a great job it is," Moos said. "But she just signed a contract and I really think she's happy here."

Seniors hope to stop skid Saturday

By Mike Kelly

After losing four out of its last five games, the Iowa basketball team is looking for some inspiration heading into their season finale.

The skid has dashed Iowa's post-season hopes, only a four-game sweep of the Big Ten Tournament would keep the Hawkeyes' season alive.

When Iowa closes out the past season, which was filled with nearly every emotion on the spectrum, Iowa coach Steve Alford said he would like to see his team send the seniors out with a win — even if Saturday's 7 p.m. tip-off against Penn State has lost some of its luster.

Spartans pummel Golden Gophers

Michigan State moved back into a tie for first place in the Big Ten with the win. EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Mike Chappell found his shooting touch in time to keep Michigan State in contention for the Big Ten title. Chappell scored 18 points, including a pair of 3-point baskets to cap a 16-0 first-half run, as No. 7 Michigan State beat Minnesota 79-43 on Thursday. "At times we don't shoot well from the perimeter," coach Tom Izzo said. "Maybe a game like this will be the start for Mike." Chappell, who sat out last season after transferring from Duke, is heating up in time for Michigan State (22-7, 12-3 Big Ten) the conference and NCAA tournaments. "It was just a relief to get out there and play the game," Chappell said. "It was unfortunate to have the injuries (to David Thomas and Aloysius Anagnonye) but I was glad to have the opportunity to help the team." Chappell led Duke in 3-point field goal percentage (.434) in 1997-98 but came into the Minnesota game dence when one of the best point guards in the country is coming to you," Chappell said. The Spartans extended their school-record home winning streak to 27 games and moved back into a tie for first place with Ohio State with one game remaining. Michigan State ends its regular season Saturday and Michigan, while Ohio State plays Minnesota (12-14, 4-11). It was the seventh time this season that Michigan State has bounced back from a defeat to post a convincing victory in its next game. In the seven games following a defeat, the Spartans' average margin of victory is 24 points. Michigan State hasn't lost back-to-back games since December 1998. After a basket by Dusty Rychart left Minnesota down 5-4, the Spartans went on a 16-0 run to take a 21-4 lead with 12:14 left in the first half. Michigan State scored the last four points of the half to lead 44-15 at the break. Mateen Cleaves and Morris Peterson each scored 11 points in the first half.

Wrestlers charged in attack of teammate

TRUMBULL, Conn. (AP) — High school wrestling is often about pain and endurance. The grueling practices, the struggle to meet a target body weight and the exhausting regimen of stair-climbing and weightlifting weed out the weak and the undisciplined. But a group of Trumbull High School wrestlers are accused of taking things much too far. A 15-year-old Trumbull wrestler was allegedly hogtied, pushed into a wall, stuffed inside a locker and held down while teammates forced the handle of a plastic knife into his rectum. Eight members of the 15-member team have been arrested — three of them as adults on assault and conspiracy charges that could bring them, in some cases, more than five years in prison. Hillary Burger, one of the prosecutors who is handling the cases against the wrestlers charged as juveniles, said "hazing" is an inadequate description of the attacks. "You should call it what it is, and that would be a pattern of assault and harassment," she said. "This is not cute. This is not 'boys will be boys.'" Prosecutors won't say what they believe the motive was. The boy told police that after joining the team in December, he and two other new wrestlers were repeatedly hazed. The names of the victims have not been released. The two other boys were allegedly hogtied with trainer's tape. One was thrown into the shower, while the other was covered in cobwebs, the 15-year-old told police. The 15-year-old boy's parents complained to school officials and police on Feb. 2, a day after his right knee was severely injured when he was allegedly thrown against a wall by his teammates. The allegations shocked students and parents. Several students said they thought hazing was limited to childish locker room pranks. "When I was there, I never heard about anything like this," said Tom Witkowski, a 1997 graduate who played on the football team his freshman year. "A lot of people are upset about it," said Dennis Mirochnik, a sophomore. "It's sad. It was something that should not have been done." Lawyers for the accused wrestlers say Trumbull High officials have known about hazing for years. In the 1999 yearbook, the departing captains of the wrestling team urged their teammates to carry on "the tradition" of "hogtying."

Hawkeyes look for vengeance against Iowa State

■ The women's gymnastics team looks to avenge an early season loss on Senior Night against the Cyclones.

By Molly Thomas
The Daily Iowan

An emotional high has hit the Iowa women's gymnastics team. Tonight's meet in the North Gym of the UI Field House will not lack intensity. Not only will the women be competing in their last home meet alongside the men, but they will be competing against their interstate rival No. 11 Iowa State in a meet which will honor Iowa's seniors.

As if a growing rivalry and the farewell of four seniors don't create enough emotion, the Hawkeyes also enter the meet with pressure to score high in order to stay in the race for post-season opportunities.

"This meet will determine whether or not we go to post-season," Lorenzen said. "Every meet from this point on counts, and we have to get a good score in each one of them."

Brian Ray/The Daily Iowan

Iowa senior Courtney Burke performs on the uneven bars against Illinois. Burke will try to go out a winner in her final home meet tonight.

Iowa has four meets left and Lorenzen said the Hawkeyes will have to score around 194.5 in every competition, which is a full point higher than their season's best highest score of the season.

Iowa competed against the Cyclones on Feb. 10 in Ames, but were defeated 196.95-193.175. Lorenzen said that Iowa was not in good condition when it made the trip to Iowa State.

"We didn't have a good meet against them the first time," Lorenzen said. "We weren't very sharp, and we looked a little tired. But so far this has been one of the best training weeks of the year, and I think we look better on every event."

Senior Courtney Burke said she doesn't want to give in to Iowa

State as easy as the last encounter. Burke knows the meet will be intense and even though the Cyclones may have a history of defeating Iowa, she said it will not be so easy this time.

"I think they need to be ready because we are definitely ready for them," Burke said. "There may not have been a real rivalry in the past, but we are setting one up."

The Hawkeyes will honor each of their seniors, Courtney Burke, Robyn Gamble, Betsy Lam, and Julie Matolo. Burke said the meet will be the beginning of the end for the upperclassmen, as it is the last home meet that the seniors will ever compete in.

"It will almost be a celebration for us," Burke said. "Looking back on everything that we've been through and then seeing the point we are at right now makes me feel thrilled to have had a chance to be part of something huge that is going to happen in Iowa women's gymnastics."

Iowa will also travel to Columbia, Mo., on Sunday to compete in the sixth-annual Corvette Cup.

Ohio State women advance in tournament

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Tomeka Brown scored 15 points and Ohio State limited Indiana to one field goal in more than 13 minutes of the first half Thursday as the Buckeyes beat the Hoosiers 58-44 in the opening round of the Big Ten women's tournament.

Ohio State (13-14) earned the right to take on regular-season champion and top-seeded Penn State in one of four quarterfinals scheduled Friday in Consecro Fieldhouse.

Indiana (10-18) had more turnovers (20) than field goals (18) and fell behind for good in the final minutes of the first half.

Indiana's final lead came when Heather Cassady, the only Hoosier in double figures with 12 points, hit a 3-pointer with 13:27 remaining in the first half. Indiana, which had defeated the Buckeyes 65-58 in Bloomington last week, led 16-13 after the basket.

Conference foes to challenge gymnasts in Field House

■ Michigan State, Illinois and Iowa will scramble for Big Ten supremacy tonight.

By Melinda Mawdsley
The Daily Iowan

The stage is set for a spectacular show.

The Iowa men's gymnastics team (6-2, 2-2) welcomes Illinois and Michigan State into town tonight for a Big Ten showdown in the Hawkeyes last regular season home meet.

After a dominating performance against a weak Nebraska team, Iowa will have to be at a top-level against teams with comproable skills.

"We are looking forward to a real exciting meet," Iowa coach Tom Dunn said. "Michigan State just pulled ahead of us in the rankings, and Illinois is just behind us. I think we're better than these teams. This triangular will be very competitive."

The meet is set to begin at 7 p.m. in the North Gym of the UI Field House and will also feature the women as they take on Iowa State.

The Hawkeyes will be hosting the NCAA Championships March 30-April 1, so tonight won't be the last home competition for five Iowa seniors, but the triangular this evening will represent the last chance for Todd Strada, Anthony Petrocelli, Barry Wilken, Brian Hamilton and Doug Jacobson to compete in the Field House.

"I'm excited our time has come. It's our night," Strada said. "This is our last home meet before NCAA's. On paper we are right where we want to be. The highlights are yet to come."

Illinois (3,4 2-4) and Michigan State (3-3, 1-3) are looking to provide their own highlights and establish some momentum before the Big Ten Championships.

The Fighting Illini scored a season-high 227.2 in last weekend's loss to Michigan. They are led by junior Linh Hoang, ranked in the top 20 in five events, senior Travis Romagnoli, third on the horizontal bar and junior Leo Oka, seventh in the all-around.

The Spartans scored their season-high, 229.075, last weekend as well. Michigan State is led by a corps of strong underclassmen. Sophomore Jonathan Plante, is tied for first on the pommel horse. Freshman Brad Golend is nationally ranked in the all-around and floor exercise with his teammate sophomore David Ruiz.

With five teams competing, including the women, the spectator who likes to see everything at once will enjoy this meet. This marks the first time since the pre-season intrasquad meet back in December that both Iowa teams will be competing together.

"We're looking forward to the co-ed meet," Dunn said. "It's a little hectic, but it's good for the spectators. For the general fan it's nice to see everything at once."

Two strong meets have the Hawkeyes feeling confident they are heading in the right direction as the most important part of the season comes closer.

"We definitely have a great chance to win this meet," said sophomore Andy Thornton. "We're on the way up, and we want to continue our momentum we've been building the last couple weeks."

IOWA ROAD BRIEFS

Softball

This Weekend: The No. 13 Iowa softball team (5-0) will look to continue its winning ways when they travel to the six-team Southern Classic in Carbondale, Ill. The Hawkeyes will play five games, three on Saturday and two on Sunday.

Last competition: Iowa opened the season in fashion going 5-0 in the Louisville Slugger/Arizona State Classic.

It marked the first time in school history the softball team opened 5-0. The weekend was highlighted by wins over then No. 9 Arizona State and then No. 17 Michigan State. Iowa coach Gayle Blevins also recorded her 500th win at Iowa in the Hawkeyes' 3-2 victory over Illinois State.

Blevins

Scouting Louisville and Loyola (Chicago): This weekend will mark Iowa's first ever meeting with Loyola (Chicago) and Louisville. This is Louisville's first year of varsity intercollegiate softball but heads into this weekend's tournament winners of five-of-its-last six games. Louisville pitcher Tara McClure (4-1) played for two years at Indian Hills Community College in Ottumwa, Iowa.

Scouting Southern and Eastern Illinois: Iowa is a combined 7-1-1 against these teams, including two five-inning shutouts on Eastern Illinois earlier this year. In fact, the Panthers have only scored one run through five games.

Southern Illinois is 3-3 on the year and is led by Marta Viehhaus' .353 batting average and pitcher Carisa Winters.

Scouting Northern Illinois: This will be the opening weekend for the Huskies, but they've had Iowa's number in the past, defeating the Hawkeyes three times last season. Northern Illinois is led by Jill Carpenter and tallied 16 RBI, three homeruns and 67 hits last year. Christy Dalton accumulated a 1.26 ERA and 145 strikeouts on the mound.

Quoting Blevins: "We've really struggled against Northern, and Southern always has a great team. This is a very good field. That's exciting as we look to get back outside."

—Melinda Mawdsley

Men's track

One last chance: That's what it will be for the individuals on the Iowa men's track team who are aspiring to qualify for the NCAA Indoor Track Championship. The men head to Ames to compete in the NCAA Indoor Qualifier meet today with field events scheduled to begin at noon and running events at 2 p.m.

Last weekend: Iowa earned an eighth-place finish in the Big Ten Indoor Championships in Bloomington, Ind., as junior Jeremy Allen won the shot put with a throw of 61-4. The eighth-place finish was a drop from last year's seventh-place spot in the meet.

Who's already made it: Iowa has two individuals and one relay team that have already provisionally qualified for the NCAA Indoor Championships. Allen has qualified in both the weight throw and the shot put and Stetson Steele in the 3,000-meters. Iowa's 4x400 relay, made up of Tim Dodge, Scott Williamson, Liam Card and Russ Peterson, have also provisionally qualified.

Guys that could make it: Card has been running well as of late. He finished sixth in the Big Ten last week in the 400 meters. Arno van der Westhuizen placed fifth in the weight throw last week, and senior Chris Cassata placed seventh in the shot put.

Coach's comment: "The 21 athletes we took to the meet last week gave a good effort," said Larry Wiecek. "We only had seven individuals score for us, though. Our job is to build on those seven guys and develop some others to get into that range. Jeremy Allen, Stetson Steele and Tim Dodge gave us good accounts of themselves and gave us some individual highlights last week."

—Jeremy Schnitker

Men's Tennis

This week: Iowa (3-2) will travel to Terre Haute, Ind., to play Indiana State (9-3) Saturday. The dual is scheduled to begin at 6 p.m.

The series: Iowa leads the series, 11-0, against the Sycamores but has not played them since 1996.

Last week: Against DePaul, three players remained out of Iowa's lineup due to injury and four freshmen stepped in to fill their shoes. No. 1 player Tyler Cleveland lost for the first time in spring duals, while Stuart Waters, Jake Wilson and Hunter Skogman notched wins for the Hawkeyes. Iowa fell 4-3.

Standout statistic: Although Iowa has not lost to the Sycamores, Indiana State is currently ranked No. 36 in the nation and recently upset No. 16 Georgia, 5-4, and lost to No. 1 LSU, 4-3. Iowa is ranked in the upper 60s.

Iowa's key: To get an early jump on the Sycamores and win the doubles point. The Hawkeyes will then need to split the singles matches with Indiana State for the victory.

Coach's comment: "They are very good; the best in the MVC," coach Steve Houghton said. "We have a decent chance to beat them, regardless of injuries. They are at the level of a good, quality Big Ten team and will be one of the best teams we've played to date."

Next week: Iowa heads out on its spring break trip. The Hawkeyes will play University of Texas at Arlington March 14, and will compete in the Rice Invitational March 17-19 in Houston.

—Lisa Colonno

Baseball

This weekend: The Hawkeyes (0-6) travel to Evansville, Ind., to compete in the Aces' Diamond Classic at Carson Center Field. Iowa will meet Big Ten foe Northwestern at 11 a.m. today then play host Evansville on Saturday at 2 p.m. before wrapping up with a single game against Butler at 11 a.m. Sunday.

Broghamer

On Northwestern: The Wildcats are 4-3 and have rebounded from an 0-3 start with wins over Washington, UNC-Washington, Richmond and Connecticut. The Wildcats finished ninth in the Big Ten last season.

On Evansville: The host Purple Aces enter their tournament undefeated, sporting a perfect 4-0 mark.

On Butler: The Bulldogs were 29-27 overall last season and finished first in the Midwestern Collegiate Conference by going 14-6.

Iowa's key: The Hawkeyes will have to get strong performances from their bullpen. With starting hurlers on a strict pitch count, relievers were unable to keep games close against Wichita State last week.

Coach's comment: "We used our week to improve and prepare ourselves for this weekend's competition," said Scott Broghamer. "It was good to play outstanding competition like Wichita State."

Women's Tennis

This weekend: The No. 30 Iowa women's tennis team (3-5) travels to South Bend, Ind., to take on the No. 15 Fighting Irish of Notre Dame on Saturday. Play begins at 1 p.m.

On Notre Dame: The Irish are No. 15 for a reason. Like Iowa they play top-notch competition. Last weekend, the Irish split matches against ranked opponents, defeating No. 28 North Carolina but falling to No. 5 Wake Forest.

Last season: The Irish were one of two upset victims along the Hawkeyes' march to the Sweet 16, falling 5-4. However, during the regular season Notre Dame won 7-2. The Irish hold a 4-1 advantage in the series.

Iowa's key: Iowa will have to look at Notre Dame as just another match and forget the Irish are out for revenge. By staying focused on their match play, the Hawkeyes will fare well.

Coach's comment: "It won't be a pretty one," said Paul Wardlaw. "Notre Dame will be waiting for us."

Swimmers host Senior Championships

By Todd Brommelkamp
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's and women's swimming team will get one last chance to cut through the waters of the UI Field House pool when they host the United States Swimming Association's Iowa Senior Championships.

Iowa will be the only college team competing during the weekend with the rest of the competition being club teams from across the state.

Men's coach John Davey said the state had been looking for a place to host a championship meet for some time before settling in Iowa City.

"The main reason we host the meet is to help out the state," said Davey. "It also gives the younger swimmers a chance to swim against better competition and see what fast swimming is all about."

The meet will be very similar to the October Shootout earlier in the year where both the men and women cruised to victory. While the competition level may not be as high as the Big Ten, swimmers still gain valuable lessons from their time in the pool and can concentrate more on their team.

"This is where we train," said senior Alisha Stitts. "It means a lot to swim your last race where you spend all your time."

The meet begins tonight at 6 p.m. with time finals events and continues with finals on Saturday at 6 p.m. and Sunday at 5 p.m.

SPORTS

Some key battles at the Big Ten wrestling championships:

This weekend the Iowa wrestling team heads to West Lafayette, Ind., to participate in the Big Ten Tournament. DI sports writer Jeremy Schnitker takes a look at some of the key matches in this weekend's meet.

125 — Iowa's No. 2 Jody Strittmatter vs. Penn State's No. 1 Jeremy Hunter.

Why Strittmatter will win: Both being Pennsylvania boys, these two have wrestled since high school. Hunter has won every matchup, including a 8-5 decision earlier this season. But that doesn't mean Strittmatter can't turn things around this time. Coming into Big Ten's, Strittmatter has had a full dual season of Division I wrestling under his belt, as opposed to just a few duals before his first encounter with Hunter. That experience in an Iowa singlet could be just what Strittmatter needs to reverse his fortunes.

Strittmatter

Why Hunter will win: Because he's done it so many times. Hunter has made a habit of beating Strittmatter, so the mental edge goes to him. All Hunter has to do is wrestle his match and not let Strittmatter get into the match early.

141 — Iowa's No. 2 Doug Schwab vs. Northwestern's No. 1 Scott Schatzman.

Why Schwab will win: The loss to Schatzman was a wake-up call for Schwab, who won the 1999 national championship at 141-pounds. Since the loss, he's wrestled like a new man. His matches, most against ranked opponents, haven't even been close since. If Schwab was going through the motions before that match, he's not anymore. Schwab needs to be aggressive and not allow Schatzman to ride him.

Note: Some 15 minutes after Schatzman defeated Schwab in Iowa City on Feb. 2, Schatzman's father, Joel, suffered a heart attack in the stands of Carver-Hawkeye Arena. He has since recovered, but look for Schatzman to come out with a little extra emotion as the senior tries to bring a title home to his family.

149 — Minnesota's No. 3 Jared Lawrence vs. Iowa's No. 4 Mike Zadick.

Why Lawrence will win: Two weeks ago in Minnesota, Lawrence won their match-up by a score of 8-5 by being aggressive and attacking Zadick in the first two periods. In order to win, he'll have to continue taking shots on Zadick and match his intensity through all three periods.

Why Zadick will win: Zadick said he didn't even remember the first two periods of his match with Lawrence. He fell on his head in the early seconds of the match and looked out of character until the third period, when he began to snap out of his funk. In that third period, Zadick picked up the intensity, scoring two take-downs and an escape on Lawrence. Look for a mentally stable Zadick to attack Lawrence early, and try to wear him down by the third period.

Zadick

Why Becker will win: He's got nothing to lose. That was apparent when he nearly beat Williams earlier this year. Becker is young and may not boast the best record in the country, so Williams may overlook him. Becker is aggressive and won't back down just because he's wrestling the No. 1 guy. If he can wrestle the type of match he did in Minnesota this weekend, he could be the first guy that hands Williams his first loss in an Iowa uniform.

Williams

that much when he beat then No. 1-ranked Lesnar 5-3 two weeks ago, though. Hand wrestled smart, played good defense and never let Lesnar's strength be a factor. When it comes to pure wrestling, Hand is quicker and has better technique so look for him to use that again.

Hand

Heavyweight — Iowa's No. 2 Wes Hand vs. Minnesota's No. 3 Brock Lesnar

Why Hand will win: Wes Hand is a big guy, but compared to 265-pound Lesnar he's a small fry. That didn't seem to bother Wes all

Why Lesnar will win: When a reporter asked Lesnar how much he could bench press last year, Lesnar replied by saying "however much I want." He really is that strong, folks. He's much, much bigger than Hand and he knows it. So look for Lesnar to wrestle a much more aggressive match, enabling him to tap into his power. If he can do that, there are very few people that can beat Brock Lesnar.

Iowa aims to bring championship back home

Minnesota outpointed the Hawkeyes, 139-121, to snap Iowa's 25-year reign over the conference.

Although Iowa won its fifth-straight NCAA title over the Gophers two weeks later, no one has forgotten the loss.

"We want (the title) back in our room," Zadick said. "It's been an Iowa tradition to always have it here. Especially against a team like Minnesota who does all that talking. We'd like to shut them up again."

The Gophers have revenge on their minds too. Iowa went into a sold-out Williams Arena, with fans roaring and music blaring, and silenced the crowd with a 20-13 victory Feb. 20.

"They are (excited)," Zalesky said. "They put a lot of importance on this tournament, same as us. It's a pride thing. It's pretty prestigious to win the Big Ten."

This year's Iowa's lineup is different from last year's string-breaker. Zalesky replaced last year's only non-NCAA qualifier, 125-pound Ben Kritsonis, with two-time Div. II champion Jody Strittmatter. Strittmatter is ranked No. 2 nationally and has a 24-1 record, losing only to Penn State's Jeremy Hunter.

In addition, the re-emergence of Wes Hand has solidified the upper half of the Hawkeyes' lineup, leaving no true weakness from top to bottom.

Strittmatter will likely get another shot at Hunter this weekend. Zalesky said that adding Strittmatter was key to building momentum in his lineup.

"This year, having Strittmatter start us out is a big spark," Zalesky said. "Then you go up the lineup and you have Juergens and Schwab. You can get momentum in a tournament like in a dual meet. If you keep winning, it helps the other guys."

Schwab faces a surprising position as the No. 2 seed at 141 pounds, behind Northwestern's Scott Schatzman. Schatzman defeated Schwab, 3-2, when the Wildcats visited Iowa City Feb. 6.

Schwab said Schatzman may notice a few differences from the pair's last encounter.

"I've picked things up another notch," Schwab said. "I've been concentrating on keeping my elbows in, not getting tied up. I know guys are going to try to slow me down, so I've been working on things so guys can't slow me down. I want to score points no matter what the guy does."

A double dose of titles for Iowa State

■ 2000 is the first season both the men's and women's ISU teams have won the Big 12 in the same season.

By Chuck Schoffner
Associated Press

DES MOINES — This has been a basketball season like no other at Iowa State. A season filled with excitement and wonder. A season that has produced not one, but two Big 12 championships.

Iowa State fans Thursday celebrated the Cyclones' dual titles in men's and women's basketball, the first conference championship for the men in 55 years, the first ever for the women.

The men secured at least a tie for the Big 12 crown with an 87-79 victory at Texas Tech on Wednesday night and would win it outright if they beat Baylor in Waco on Saturday. The women pulled into a tie for the championship with a 79-66 victory at Texas in their regular-season finale.

For the women, who tied with Oklahoma and Texas Tech, the championship came after they had been picked to win the conference. The men, on the other hand, were a complete surprise, even to coach Larry Eustachy.

The Cyclones had been picked to finish sixth in the league after going 6-10 in conference and 15-15 overall a year ago.

"In all honesty, I didn't think our program was quite there yet," Eustachy said. "But I did have a lot of confidence in this team. I told our team before the conference started that I thought they could win this conference championship. "I'm not sure they did or not. But as we showed them ways to win, as we got closer, they started to believe more and more."

Iowa State (25-4, 13-2 Big 12) put itself in position to win the league by beating the two second-place teams, Texas and Oklahoma State, at home last week. Then, the 10th-ranked Cyclones rallied from five points down in the second half at Texas Tech to pull out the victory behind Marcus Fizer, who matched his career high with 35 points.

With it came the No. 1 seed in the conference tournament at Kansas City next week because Texas and Oklahoma State are the only teams that could tie Iowa State and the Cyclones beat both.

But there was little celebration afterwards. The Cyclones walked off the floor almost as if it were just another game, which is what Eustachy likes to see, even if it is the school's first basketball championship since winning the Big Six in 1945.

"We've talked a lot about acting like you've been there," he said. "Early in the year, I thought we overcelebrated and really, it was justified. You've got to understand, we've been through a tough year and a half here."

"When we did have that first amount of success, we hadn't been there, so we acted like we hadn't been there. Now ... we've been there. We won on Kansas' floor, we won on Missouri's floor. This was a nice win, our biggest game of the year to date, but we know it's not over. We have to go over to Baylor and get our best game out on the floor."

The women played their best at

In all honesty, I didn't think our program was quite there yet, But I did have a lot of confidence in this team.

— Larry Eustachy
Iowa State coach

the end against Texas, outscoring the Longhorns 26-4 over the last six minutes to erase a nine-point deficit.

The 11th-ranked Cyclones (22-5, 13-3) will be the top-seeded team in the Big 12 tournament because of their victories over Texas Tech and Oklahoma.

"It's hard to win when you're picked number one. Everybody is shooting at you all year," coach Bill Fennelly said. "The fact we tied doesn't make any difference to me. A lot of people say that's like kissing your sister. Hey, I love my sister. That's OK. I'll kiss her."

Iowa State got its share of the title with a strong stretch drive. The Cyclones won four straight after suffering back-to-back losses to Kansas State and Kansas in mid-February. Those losses left the Cyclones no margin for error.

"It was a battle the whole way," Fennelly said. "After we lost to Kansas, a lot of people kind of wrote us off. But we just dug in and I just kept telling them if you want to be champions, there's a certain way you've got to act, a certain way you've got to play and certain things you've got to overcome."

"They did that. After 16 games, we're on top. It's just an amazing accomplishment."

The scramble begins for the next America's Cup

AUCKLAND, New Zealand — Now that New Zealanders have swigged champagne from the America's Cup for the second time, everyone else has to figure how to wrest away the oldest trophy in sports.

Russell Coutts, skipper of the victorious Black Magic, thinks the Kiwis can hold onto the America's Cup for 25 years.

New Zealand already has held the Cup for five years, and it got a great jump on the quarter-century mark with a 5-0 sweep of Italy's Luna Rossa, becoming the first country other than the United States to defend the Cup.

Even though the Kiwis had a second straight finals sweep, the challengers have gotten closer in boat speed. What really hurt the Italians were tactical mistakes either at the start or early in the races that turned close contests into runaways for the black boat.

"I think the gap closed a little," Coutts said Friday, looking weary after a night of celebrating. "There's probably still a little more than what I thought it probably would be."

Tactician Brad Butterworth agreed that the boat speed was closer than in 1995, when the Kiwis were so far ahead of the design curve that the closest race in their sweep of Dennis Conner off San Diego was 1 minute, 51 seconds. This time, the closest the Italians got was 48 seconds, in the clincher.

"I think we have to be a lot better next time if we hope to win," Butterworth said.

There will be changes within Team New Zealand, but it'll probably be just as formidable.

A humbled Rocker rejoins Braves

■ Some of Rocker's teammates say he has a long road ahead of him in the majors this season.

By Paul Newberry
Associated Press

KISSIMMEE, Fla. — John Rocker stood alone in the middle of the Atlanta Braves clubhouse, his eyes revealing a hint of tears.

It's one thing to be heckled by 55,000 fans in New York, it's quite another to face the harsh scrutiny of your teammates and coaches. Especially when you've called one of them a "fat monkey" in a magazine interview, and disparaged gays, foreigners and minorities, too.

Third-base coach Ned Yost angrily asked Rocker to explain how he could offend so many people.

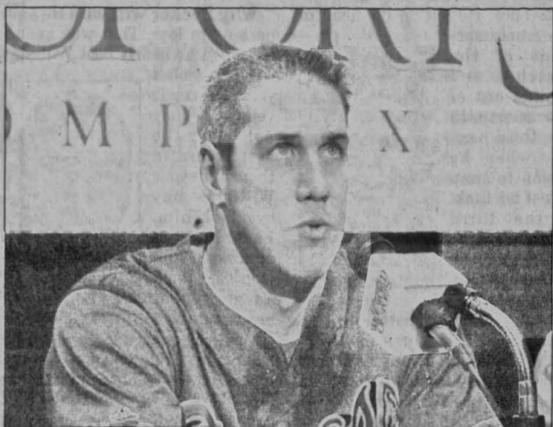

Outfielder Reggie Sanders demanded remorse and accountability.

Reserve first baseman Randall Simon wanted to know Rocker's true feelings about his Latin teammates.

When it was over, Rocker was hardly the cocky reliever who saved 38 games for the Atlanta Braves a year ago. Instead, he pleaded with his teammates, "Please, guys, let me play."

Rocker put on a Braves uniform for the first time since the World Series on Thursday after an independent arbitrator cut his suspension in half, reduced his fine and allowed him to report to spring training.

Commissioner Bud Selig originally suspended Rocker for all of spring training and the first 28 days of the regular season, fined him $20,000 and ordered him to get sensitivity training after the divisive comments appeared in December's Sports Illustrated.

Peter Cosgrove/Associated Press

Atlanta pitcher John Rocker reads from a prepared statement at a news conference in Lake Buena Vista, Fla. Thursday.

The fine was cut to $500.

Shortly after arriving at the ballpark, Rocker addressed Manager Bobby Cox, the coaching staff and his teammates in a private meeting. According to some players, Rocker started out speaking in front of his locker, but slowly moved toward the middle of the room.

He spoke for about 10 minutes, expressing regret for his comments and trying to explain his motivation.

Then, he took questions from those in the room. Cox spoke first. Pitchers Terry Mulholland, Tom Glavine and John Smoltz all took turns, along with Yost, Simon, Sanders and outfielder Brian Jordan.

"Everybody was tense," catcher Eddie Perez said. "There were no jokes."

Rocker was grilled especially hard by Yost, who grew noticeably angry as he recalled the lurid details of the magazine article, even bringing up the part about Rocker spitting at a toll booth. "Ned asked him how it felt to say all that stuff," Perez said. "Rocker said, 'Please guys, let me play. I want to play for the Braves.' I think he wanted to cry."

Rocker met privately with Simon, whom Rocker referred to as a "fat monkey" in the story. He asked for forgiveness and invited Simon and his wife to dinner this week.

"I looked at him in the face and he showed me he really regrets what he said," Simon said. "I saw in his eyes that he was kind of sad."

"We wanted him to own up to what he said," Sanders said. "You could tell he felt very regretful. I think he's learned something from the whole ordeal."

But Jordan noted the worst is yet to come.

"He has a long road ahead of him," he said. "He's got to deal with every city, every fan. The hard part is just beginning for John Rocker."

Freedom, baseball suiting Baez

■ The Indians' Danys Baez is having a crash course in American culture this spring.

By Tom Withers
Associated Press

A few feet away, some of his Indians teammates are picking turkey and roast beef off deli trays for sandwiches. Others are stuffing fresh pineapple and bananas into blenders for their protein shakes.

America, as Baez is learning everyday, is a wonderful place.

"Coming from Cuba, this is like Disneyland," Baez says, looking around the room. "It's beautiful. People never could have imagined all of this back there."

Baez, trying to win a spot on the Indians' major league roster, defected last July for freedom and a chance to play major league baseball.

The Indians outbid several other teams, including the Atlanta Braves, to sign the 22-year-old right-hander to a $14.5 million, four-year contract last November.

Although they spent big bucks on a pitcher whom they had mostly scouted on videotape, the Indians are expecting big things from Baez. He's already shown he has a powerful arm and is willing to learn.

"He's a little rigid," pitching coach Dick Pole said. "But the arm is there, which means you have something to work with."

The Indians are convinced they have something special.

Cleveland has gone to great lengths to help Baez adjust to his new life in the United States. The team brought him to Ohio for a few weeks this winter for a crash course on America.

Remember, this is someone who had never experienced a super market before or the simplicity of driving to the corner to put gas in the car.

"He's been a little overwhelmed at times, but he has unbelievable aptitude," Indians assistant general manager Mark Shapiro said.

On the field, the Indians are letting Baez be himself, making minor tweaks where necessary.

"We're kind of learning about Danny as we go," Indians manager John Hart said. "We'll tailor a plan for him just like we did with all our top pitchers. But right now we're kind of feeling our way along with him."

Another important game for Ohio State

■ Ohio State can clinch a share of the Big Ten championship with a win against Minnesota Saturday.

By Rusty Miller
Associated Press

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Sixth-ranked Ohio State has a lot riding on its final regular-season game Saturday at Minnesota: at least a share of the Big Ten title, the top seed in the conference tournament and a high seeding in the NCAA tournament.

Yet there's no question what draws the highest priority.

"Guys go through careers and they never get the opportunity to be the champ of anything," coach Jim O'Brien said Thursday. "We have the opportunity to be the champs of the Big Ten. This is arguably the best conference in the country. If you can at some point in your career and say, 'I was on a team that won a Big Ten championship,' I don't think that's a small thing. That's something that will be with us for a long, long time."

Ohio State (21-5, 12-3) is on a roll these days, having won four in a row. If they make it five by beating

Minnesota, the Buckeyes will at least tie for their first conference crown since Jimmy Jackson was running the show in 1992.

That win, coupled with the Buckeyes' advantage in tie-breakers with Michigan State, would give Ohio State the top seed in next week's Big Ten tournament. And winning the tournament likely would give the Buckeyes a lofty seed in the NCAA tournament.

But the first step is the closest one.

"We don't want what happened to Purdue to happen to us," point guard Scoonie Penn said, referring to the Boilermakers' loss at Indiana Tuesday night that all but knocked them out of the title chase. "We don't want to get to the last game of the season and blow the Big Ten championship."

Minnesota has fallen on hard times since losing center Joel Przybilla to grade problems. But that doesn't mean Ohio State can start making tournament travel plans.

"We can't overlook anybody," forward George Reese said. "Right now it's Minnesota. We have one more game to achieve our goal."

With so much at stake, it's easy for a coach to push his already tired players. O'Brien, who has been through quite a few stretch runs in his 17 years as a head coach, is trying to moderate in his approach. He knows that pushing 20-year-olds too hard can waste a season, turning a successful season into a death march.

"How many times can you keep asking kids to go to the well?" he asked rhetorically.

It is easy for coaches — not to mention players and fans — to get caught up in the emotion of winning another game and then another in the series of steps that greets an elite college team in March.

O'Brien is trying not to push. He gave the Buckeyes the day off Thursday after their 79-73 victory at Penn State the night before. He also kept them away from media. He believes that the many forces tugging at players at this time of year — family, friends, academics, coaches, reporters — all apply more pressure and make them mentally and physically fatigued.

Mimicking a pushy coach, he said, "Hey, fellas, we have to win these last three or four games in the regular season if we want to win the league."

'Monster' shows a soft side at Doral

Four players are tied for the lead at the redesigned Doral-Ryder Open.

By Doug Ferguson
Associated Press

MIAMI — The Blue Monster is no longer the beast it was. Toned down from a controversial redesign that kept top players from coming back, the Doral-Ryder Open had a familiar look to it Thursday — low scores on a day of virtually no wind, and some familiar faces at the top of the leaderboard.

Bruce Lietzke, playing his last tournament before his annual seven-week hiatus, had eight birdies in a round of 7-under 65 that left him tied after the first round with Vijay Singh, Jim Furyk and Harrison Frazar.

Phil Mickelson, Nick Price and Bernhard Langer were among the six players another stroke back, while three-time champion Greg Norman showed signs of life with a 4-under 68.

"A real friendly day," said Lietzke, who plays about as often as he practices — not much — but has been coming to Doral for 22 years. "It's back to playing like it did," he said. "On a day like this, we're always going to shoot low rounds."

Then again, it was calm in the first round a year ago and only 23 players managed to break 70. Now that Doral has refilled or reshaped 70 of the cavernous bunkers put in by Raymond Floyd, the number of rounds in the 60s was nearly doubled Thursday.

Not everyone took advantage. David Duval, who decided to play Doral because he felt his game rounding into form, didn't give himself many makeable birdies and walked off with a 71, tied with defending champion Steve Elkington.

Erik Compton, the first heart-transplant recipient to play the PGA Tour, had a 72.

"The golf course doesn't look quite as intimidating anymore," Frazar said. "You can actually see some land where you are trying to hit it. In the past couple of years, all you saw was the wall of a bunker, or you tried to hit it over one trap and leave it short of the others."

"It's a little more reassuring when you can see some grass."

The only thing that broke the stillness of morning on a warm, sunny day in south Florida was the rat-a-tat of automatic weapons from the FBI shooting range adjacent to Doral.

And that only brought back fond memories to Frazar.

Monica Seles wins another tight match

The former No. 1 beat eighth-seeded Barbara Schett at the State Farm Classic Thursday.

By Mel Reiser
Associated Press

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. — If nothing else, Monica Seles' nerves are as strong as ever.

The former top-ranked player weathered her second straight high-intensity set to beat eighth-seeded Barbara Schett 7-6 (9), 6-1 Thursday and advance to the quarterfinals of the State Farm Women's Tennis Classic.

"At the end, it comes down to who's better and who performs better under a tight bit of pressure, but still there's an awful lot of luck involved," said Seles who, after a six-month layoff because of a stress fracture in her foot, won her 45th career singles title last week.

In other second-round matches, sixth-seeded Anna Kournikova of Russia beat Austrian qualifier Sylvia Plischke 6-1, 6-1, and Nathalie Dechy of France outlasted wild card Meghann Shaughnessy 6-3, 4-6, 6-1.

Seles is unseeded in a WTA event for the first time since 1989 because her victory Sunday in Oklahoma City, which lifted her to No. 9 in the world, was too late to affect the seeding in Scottsdale.

She battled through four set points Wednesday before winning the second set 7-6 (7) and knocking Siljiva Talaja out of the first round. The next day, she led 5-2 in the first set before Schett won four of the next five games to force a tiebreaker.

This time, Seles twice had

Schett, Austria's highest-ranked player (No. 13), within a point of elimination only to have Austria's highest-ranked player (No. 13) tie it at 7 and 8.

Schett had a 9-8 lead the only time Seles faced set point, and Seles tied it for the last time with a forehand winner. Two points later, she ended the set with a service winner to Schett's forehand.

"I have big trouble with her serve," said Schett, winless in five matches with Seles. "I don't really like her serve. I just don't like left-hand serves. It's good that there's not too many left-handers on the tour."

The second set lasted only 21 minutes as Seles broke the frustrated Schett in the first, third and seventh games.

Don King expects a tough fight

David Reid and Felix Trinidad went toe-to-toe at the pre-fight weigh-in.

By Ed Schuyler Jr.
Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — Don King says David Reid's WBA super welterweight title defense against Felix Trinidad will be "a great exchange of devastating bombs."

The promoter has been known to overstate his case, but the bout tonight at Caesars Palace figures to be a good one.

Both fighters can punch, and both have been knocked down and gotten up to win.

Trinidad, moving up from 147 pounds to the 154 after his victory over Oscar De La Hoya in the IBF-WBC welterweight title match, said a knockout would make his victory sweeter.

Reid also wants to make it a quick fight.

"I would like to get Trinidad in three or four rounds," the Philadelphian said. "I want to show my skill first and then knock him out."

The 26-year-old Reid, 14-0 with seven knockouts, would seem to have an edge in speed — quick feet and fast hands.

"He's very quick," acknowledged the 27-year-old Trinidad, 36-0 with 30 knockouts. "But I've also beaten others who have been very quick. He won't be the exception to the rule."

Reid has a plan of his own.

"What I learned is that Trinidad takes to plant his feet to throw the power shots, and I am too fast on my feet for that," he said. "I am planning on being more aggressive and use my feet and power. I plan on making Trinidad miss a lot and outclass him early in the fight."

But Trinidad showed in the early going of the De La Hoya fight that he isn't easily discouraged.

"I have an edge in experience and strength," said the Puerto Rican, who should be stronger at 154 pounds after having had trouble making the 147-pound welterweight limits.

He and Reid each weighed in Thursday at 153 pounds.

Trinidad's experience is the reason he is a 3-1 favorite.

Trinidad will be hitting a man who is strong and comfortable as a super welterweight. Reid won the 147-pound title in the 1995 Pan American Games, then moved up and won the 156-pound title in the 1996 Olympics.

Reid has knockout power, especially in his right hand, but all three of his 154-pound title matches, two of them title defenses, have gone the distance.

Trinidad handled De La Hoya's right-hand power, but he has been down four times. The knockdowns all came in second rounds, and he has not been down in his last 12 fights.

Reid has been down three times, twice against James Coker and on a flash knockdown on Aug. 28 against Kevin Kelly, when he was looking at his corner and got tagged. It's the kind of mistake that could cost him the fight against someone of Trinidad's class.

The pay-per-view show (SET), beginning at 8 p.m. CST, will be the first of two championship cards in Las Vegas this weekend. It also will include a match for the vacant IBF junior bantamweight title between Julio Gamboa of Nicaragua and Felix Machado of Venezuela.

Douglas, Darling share top player honor

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Penn State point guard Helen Darling and Purdue guard-forward Katie Douglas are the Big Ten women's basketball players of the year, the league announced Thursday.

Darling, who led the Lady Lions to their first-ever outright Big Ten championship and the top seed in this weekend's conference tournament, was selected for the honor by the conference's coaches. Douglas, who led the conference in scoring with a 21.2 average, was selected in media voting.

The coaches and media also differed in selecting the coach of the year. Penn State coach Rene Portland was the choice of the coaches, while Michigan coach Sue Guevara was the media's choice. It was the second such honor for each. Portland led Penn State, ranked fifth in the latest Associated Press poll, to a 24-3 record, while Guevara guided the Wolverines to a women's school-record 21 wins, a No. 22 ranking, and a second-place finish — the school's best-ever in women's play.

Ohio State's LaToya Turner was named the conference's freshman of the year by coaches and media after averaging 11.2 points and 6.0 rebounds for the Buckeyes.

Douglas and Darling were both unanimous selections of the coaches and media to the All-Big Ten first team.

Olkowski said the performance was the Wildcats' best of the season.

"My thoughts go out to Coach Lee and her staff and players. It was a very hard, emotional week for them, but they came out and played hard," Olkowski said. "We played our best basketball of the year. This performance does not surprise me at all."

In the midst of the loss, the second-team Big Ten honors garnered by Meder and Cara Consuegra seemed trivial to the loss. Meder finished with 23 points, while Consuegra scored just eight points.

Team leader Randi Peterson went 0-of-7 from the floor and had just three points and four rebounds. Magnier's 16 points were the sole highlight, but the Iowa guard said her season-high game did not matter at this point.

"We did not want to go out like that," Magnier said. "We came back, but we could not get within three or four. It seemed like we just stopped."

After the game, Lee commented on the chances of Iowa's return to excellence next season.

"They are going to be good next year," Lee said. "Our kids never gave up. I think that is what I've watched all year long. They have never given up."

Iowa plans to name coach in April

COACHES

Guard out of Eugene, Ore., Runge talked about the job.

"My dad's an Iowa alum," she said. "I grew up in Iowa, and they have great fan support."

She continued by saying, "I would listen if they called, but listening doesn't necessarily mean anything. I enjoy Oregon as a place to live, and I have my whole family who has moved to Oregon from Iowa."

Runge knows how to win. In her 16-year basketball career as a player and coach, she has been on a winning team 13 of those years, including her first year at Oregon. She took a 9-18 Ducks team to a 20-9 record and its first NCAA berth in seven years.

Her ability to win and style of play has attracted top recruits to her program and put fans in the stands.

Lisa Bluder, another top prospect for the position is the head coach at Drake.

Bluder also calls Iowa her home state. A graduate of Linn-Mar in Marion, she took her basketball talents to Northern Iowa where she started for three years.

Rebuilding the Bulldog program was Bluder's mission. She has brought success to the state capital in her 10-year tenure, guiding Drake to eight-straight NCAA Tournament appearances beginning in 1990. The highlight season was 1994-95, when her team narrowly missed the Sweet 16.

A fan favorite in Des Moines, Bluder has notched 351-career wins and is currently tied as the fifth-youngest coach to ever reach the 300 victory plateau.

She was a finalist for the Iowa position in 1995, when Lee was hired to succeed C. Vivian Stringer.

When asked last week about the Iowa vacancy, Bluder said she would be interested in talking to officials if they contacted her.

Bluder's .712 winning percentage ranks 27th among active Division-I coaches. She also ranks 50th in career victories among active coaches. For her efforts she has been named Missouri Valley Coach of the Year three times, winning the MVC title twice.

Bluder likes to play up-tempo offense and full-court pressure defense. Her style has led Drake to an 18-7 record this year and a shot at another MVC crown. Drake defeated No. 11 Iowa State earlier this year, 90-86 and Iowa, 84-59.

Ann Rhodes, vice president of University relations, said there are many names being tossed around and no one has been contacted yet. However, she said she was aware of the speculation surrounding Runge and Bluder, and added that Iowa is out to look for the best coach possible.

The Hawkeyes are hoping to have a coach in place in April. While Iowa plans to contact some perspective replacements about the position, they are holding a national search.

Other possible coaching candidates include Bonnie Henrickson, head coach at Virginia Tech, who coached under Lee from 1995-97. Terri Mitchell, Marquette's head coach, led the Golden Eagles to a tie for first-place in Conference USA with a 12-4 record last year.

Former Iowa player Katie Abrahamson, currently an assistant coach under Cyclone coach Bill Fennelly, could also be a strong contender.

GAME ANALYSIS

Hawks get ready to move on

■ The future of women's basketball looks good for the young Hawkeyes.

By Lisa Colonno
The Daily Iowan

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. — Angie Lee and the Hawkeyes are all cried out. It's time to move on.

Emotions ran high Thursday at Conoco Fieldhouse in Indianapolis. Not only was Iowa fighting to extend its season, the players wanted to prolong their coach's career — at least another day.

However, Iowa simply didn't show up for the game. Northwestern took it to the Hawkeyes the entire 40 minutes, shooting 88 percent from beyond 3-point range. Iowa managed to shoot only 32 percent for the game.

Lee said that it had been a long week and she didn't know if her players had slept, due to all of the events of the past week. She didn't think her team was ready mentally or emotionally to play Thursday.

"I could tell right away," Lee said. "I've been around Randi (Peterson) and Cara (Consuegra) too long. I knew they wanted to be (ready). It's just been a long week. I don't know if they've slept in four days. They're beat.

They're tired. I could just tell. You could see it."

At Wednesday's weekly press conference, Lee said that she wanted to end her Iowa career with her players walking off the floor with smiles, satisfied with how they played; neither happened.

Lindsey Meder and Consuegra entered the post-game press conference teary-eyed, not only because it was their last game with their coach, but because they knew their level of play was no where near their best.

"We thought that we would play better," Consuegra said. "I don't know why we came out that way, but we can't do anything about it now. We were flat and Northwestern took it to us."

Meder had similar sentiments. "Obviously everyone was upset," Meder said. "I don't know why we didn't play from the get go. We've got to learn that we have to play 40 minutes in order to win."

And the learning process begins now. The Hawkeyes need to put the Lee era and their mediocre season behind themselves and focus on the future of Iowa women's basketball. The game must go on.

The Hawkeyes will start the 2000-2001 season under a new coach, but its entire roster will remain intact. Iowa will not lose a single player, so realistically the only place the Hawkeyes can move is up.

Jerica Watson, who tore a ligament in her right knee against Indiana in January, will return to the lineup. Watson, arguably the team's most athletic player, averaged 6.8 rebounds, 8.5 points and 18.9 minutes in the 11 games she played this season.

"They're going to be good next year," Lee said. "They needed this time to grow and get better. They'll all come back next year and they'll all be together. Jerica Watson will be healthy. They're going to be alright."

Iowa also returns its entire starting lineup, which consists of the conference's second-leading scorer, Lindsey Meder, the conference's third-leading rebounder Randi Peterson and Cara Consuegra who is second in the Big Ten in assists.

The Hawkeyes will add two new recruits to their lineup. Jennie Lillis, a center from West Des Moines Dowling, and Becca McCann, a forward from Frehold, Mich. The two will add some more depth to Iowa's post play.

The future begins now and the future looks bright for Iowa women's basketball.

Cincinnati beats DePaul at buzzer

By Rick Gano
Associated Press

ROSEMONT, Ill. — Get the ball to Kenyon. That's what Cincinnati did Thursday night as the No. 2 Bearcats pulled off a miracle comeback to stun DePaul 64-62.

"You never think you are out of it," Martin said. "If you quit, why show up?"

The Bearcats trailed by 17 early in the second half. Still down 10 with less than four minutes left, they went to Martin. Again and again. It's what coach Bob Huggins told them to do.

Martin, as he has all season, responded. He scored eight of his 33 points in the final 3:31 and also blocked a DePaul layup. The Bearcats finally pulled out the win on DerMarr Johnson's jumper with two seconds left.

"Kenyon just took over the game," Johnson said. "We stepped up and made the big plays."

After Martin's fourth basket of the final stretch tied the game at 62 with 22 seconds left, DePaul called time and then tried to hold the ball for a final shot. But Jermaine Tate stole a pass, got the ball to Martin and he fed Johnson for his game-winning 17-footer.

Hawkeyes, Nittany Lions tied at eighth

MEN'S HOOPS

for the Big Ten Tournament next week in Chicago. The Hawkeyes can finish no better than seventh in the Big Ten and no worse 10th.

Penn State (13-13, 5-10) comes into the game tied for eighth with the Hawkeyes. The two teams could very well face each other next Thursday in the first round of the Big Ten Tournament in Chicago.

Last time against the Nittany Lions, Iowa held guard Jarrett Stephens in check, but the brothers Joe and Jon Crispin combined for 38 points inside.

Stephens and Joe Crispin are Penn State's big guns. Both are averaging more than 18 points a game.

"These guys have big bodies and good guards," Jaacks said. "It will be another good test, and we are ready for the challenge. We want to go out and play as hard as we can, and things will work themselves out."

Iowa is coming off an 87-78 loss to Michigan. The Hawkeyes shot just 30 percent from the field for the game and held Michigan without a field goal for the final 11:03. The down side is the Wolverines made a 29-of-39 free throws during that stretch.

"Both our Achilles' heels (shooting and inside play) showed up tonight," Alford said. "You aren't going to beat many people shooting 30 percent."

Jaacks said despite his team's slide down the stretch, he is thankful he has the opportunity to play two years at Iowa and finish his career on a positive note.

"Playing at Iowa has been a dream come true," said the Cedar Rapids native. "I still have a little bit of my career left and would still like to finish with some good memories."
