Gore's missing e-mails spark investigation

Thousands of subpoenaed White House e-mails, most belonging to Al Gore, were not reviewed.

By Larry Margasak
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Justice Department announced Thursday it has opened a criminal investigation into how the White House failed to review thousands of e-mails that may have been under subpoena. Lawyers divulged that most of Vice President Al Gore's messages are among the missing. The White House failure to archive vice presidential e-mails before 1997 means that most of Gore's electronic correspondence was never reviewed to determine whether some pieces should be turned over to investigators looking at Democratic fund-raising abuses.

"It appears that much, if not all" of Gore's e-mails were not captured by the White House archive system, White House counsel Beth Nolan informed Congress in a letter.

Nolan told lawmakers they are reviewing backup tapes from the vice presidential e-mail system to see if any of the e-mails can be reconstructed.

The archive failure was "the sole result of human mistakes and entirely unintentional," Nolan said, explaining that Gore's office simply used a different e-mail system that until 1997 could not be archived by the normal White House system.

"We have found no indication that those people producing documents (under subpoena) were aware of this problem," Nolan wrote.

But the House Government Reform Committee, which is investigating the e-mails, disclosed that current White House Chief of Staff John Podesta may have known about the e-mail glitch in the summer of 1998 in the midst of the Lewinsky scandal.

The White House acknowledges that the glitches caused White House lawyers to fail to review thousands of messages to see if they were responsive to subpoenas and should have been turned over to Congress or criminal investigators from the many Clinton-era controversies. Some of the e-mails may be lost forever, aides said.

In a court filing, the Justice Department divulged it has opened a criminal investigation into the missing e-mails, and allegations by some White House contract workers that they were threatened by presidential aides never to disclose the problems to investigators.

The investigation will be conducted by the campaign fund-raising task force, which had subpoenaed the e-mails as part of its overall investigation into fund-raising abuses in the 1996 election.

The dual developments Thursday added fresh fuel to a controversy that already has spilled into the presidential campaign. Republican George W. Bush raised the issue anew.

"This is a White House that needs to

$$$ grease the wheels of education

In the second installment of a two-part series, the DI examines how the UI is adapting to the tide of financial and research competition. With the percentage of state appropriations decreasing — although the actual monetary contribution has been slightly increasing since 1992 — the UI is under pressure to find alternative funding for everything from buildings to academic studies.

By Chao Xiong
The Daily Iowan

The UI is adapting to the influence of outside players as its faculty members debate research and teaching needs, the Tippie College of Business hears the one-year mark of being renamed for a wealthy donor, and private funding becomes a key to survival. Facing a possibility of further budget constraints, the UI and other universities are looking for lucrative research contracts and successful alumni to keep up with the cost of running a university.

"To be scientifically competitive, you have to be more and more in the laboratory than teaching," said Lois Geist, a UI internal medicine associate professor and member of the Faculty Senate.

As a result of budget cuts in the National Institutes of Health approximately six years ago, more professors are seeking research funds from private entities, she said.

To aid professors, the UI health-science schools have requested a 10 percent increase — to the 20 percent maximum — in the number of clinical faculty allowed. Clinic faculty are hired specifically to teach and provide patient services so that tenure-track professors can focus on research and related fund raising.

A report on the clinical faculty's progress and the proposed increase in clinical faculty members by a committee, appointed by Provost Jon Whitmore, is expected to be handed down early next week.

Clinical faculty members in the health sciences are paid mostly through revenues from seeing patients at the UI Hospitals and Clinics, Geist said. In the event of budget cuts, the schools would still be able to hire clinical faculty members if profits from the UIHC were sufficient, she said.

An increase in the number of clinical faculty members, implemented in February 1995, may detract from the tenure track, which gives faculty members greater freedom in research and exercising one's judgment of academic standards, said Jonathan Carlson, a professor of law and the president of the Faculty Senate.

"The concern is to not have the numbers of such appointments grow," said Gregg Oden, a professor of psychology and computer science and the chairman of the College of Liberal Arts' faculty assembly. "It's

New logo has a Tiger (Hawk) by the tail

More than 150 e-mails have flooded into the DI, opposing the new Tiger Hawk logo.

By Marc Mettler
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa Athletics Department's new Tiger Hawk logo has UI students in an uproar, questioning the rationale behind the decision.

The new logo will not replace the original Tiger Hawk logo, but it will exist concurrently with its predecessor, which was commissioned in 1979, said Rick Klatt, the UI assistant director of men's athletics.

The Athletics Department has been discussing the logo for the past 14 or 15 months, he said.

"As we continued our discussions, we felt it was an appropriate time to introduce the new Tiger Hawk," he said.

The new logo has more of a streamlined, contemporary and aggressive look, Klatt said. The new Tiger Hawk still reflects the original but is slightly modified in order to carry the successes of its first 20 years, he said.

The new logo was designed by Matt Ellison, the men's athletics design artist, who said the design of the new logo was a long, continual process.

"The new Tiger Hawk was shown

Solon student charged after alleged death threats

The teen allegedly sent e-mail to four classmates, threatening to kill them.

By Christoph Trappe
The Daily Iowan

A 14-year-old Solon High School student was charged with terrorism after allegedly threatening to kill four of his classmates.

Using a computer and the Internet, Johnson County Sheriff's deputies say Reggy Matthes, 2506 Davey St., Iowa City, allegedly sent the threats to the four students' home computers.

Matthes, a freshman at Solon High School, was arrested Monday night after his classmates called the police; he is currently being held at the Linn County Detention Center in Cedar Rapids.

"I heard about it earlier today," said Tom Slade, a Solon resident. "But I don't think we have a crime situation in Solon."

Matthes could face up to 10 years in prison or a maximum fine of $10,000 if convicted of terrorism, which is a Class C felony.

"I don't think it's a big deal," Slade said. "He is not a criminal. He just went on the Internet and said something he probably shouldn't have said.

"They'll probably just slap his hands, and he'll be done," he said.

Several Solon High School students heard rumors about the case but were not exactly sure what had happened.

"Everything is possible, but I don't know anyone who would go on a killing spree in Solon," said Adam Blind, a Solon High School sophomore. "I think he just said something without thinking."

Myth and the origins of AIDS

■ Steven Minkin, who has spent 12 years researching AIDS, will speak on the genesis of the disease.

By Christy B. Logan
The Daily Iowan

A search for truth and a driving commitment to discovering the unknown have kept AIDS researcher and writer Steven Minkin working to inform the public of his theory that AIDS did not originate in Africa.

Minkin

Minkin, a Vermont native, will speak at the UI Friday on "The Myth of the African Origin" in a lecture presented by the African Association.

Minkin, who has spent 12 years studying the virus, says his concern about the issue stems from research that suggests the presence of a global trading system in blood.

He argues that contaminated blood from the West during the 1970s and '80s from intravenous-drug users widely contributed to the current AIDS epidemic in Africa. Minkin's

AIDS in the United States today would look like AIDS in Africa if we chose not to screen blood and blood products for HIV.

— Steven Minkin,
AIDS researcher and writer

research particularly points to the United States as a prominent actor in the spread of the virus and says it is one of the major exporters of blood products.

"AIDS in the United States today would look like AIDS in Africa if we chose not to screen blood and blood products for HIV," Minkin said.

People should keep an open mind on the issue, said Peter Nazareth, a professor of English and African American world studies.

"Nobody knows for sure where it started," he said. "There is a tendency to dump everything on Africa."

Minkin said his research indicates that unscreened transfusions primarily used for treating illnesses in Africa such as sickle-cell anemia, malaria and complications in pregnancy contribute to much of the continent's plague. He also said contaminated blood from HIV-positive mothers contribute to many children contracting the disease.

"Our approach to dealing with the origin of AIDS has to do with transmission," he said. "If people are really concerned with AIDS in Africa, they would make considerable investments in health care."

During the 1996-97 school year, Minkin was a distinguished visiting professional at the UI, teaching Fragile Ecologies: Humans and the Environment in the Developed World.

Minkin's point of view is very interesting, said Fred Woodard, an associate professor of English and African American world studies.

"A little bit of controversy should not be avoided," he said.

Other sponsors of the lecture include the UI Lecture Committee, UI Student Government, the Department of Public Health and International Programs.

No penalties in UISG election

■ Because of what was termed a lack of information, the Elections Board votes to take no action.

By Avian Carrasquillo
The Daily Iowan

The Student Elections Board ruled Thursday night that it would take no action against either the Andy Stoll/Chris Linn ticket or the Marquez Brown/Brad Bare ticket after allegations of misconduct during the recent UI Student Government election.

There was one allegation against Brown/Bare and two allegations against Stoll/Linn; the board voted unanimously to pursue no action, said Elections Board Chairwoman Megan Bygness.

The board cited a lack of information as the deciding factor in the decision, she said.

"There wasn't enough information in any of the cases, and we didn't feel that any of the things affected the outcome of the election," Bygness said. "It's very difficult for us to act on things if the proper information is not provided in a complaint."

Brown said he felt the decision was biased, and he believes he was not told of the meeting purposely so that he could not defend his case.

"I'm outraged by the board's decision, but I had a feeling this would be the result. Most of the board members were appointed by Stoll," he said.

Brown defended his case by saying that the Stoll/Linn ticket had admitted wrongdoing and should have been penalized for it.

"They admitted to the allegations. I know they ran a dirty campaign, my supporters know they ran a dirty campaign, and when I'm through, everyone will know they ran a dirty campaign. I will not be quiet about this decision," he said.

Bygness said Brown was not invited to the meeting for the same reason Stoll was not invited.

"It was a meeting of the Student Elections Board, and because Brown is not a member of the Student Elections Board, he was not invited," Bygness said.

The Stoll/Linn ticket responded to the board's decision with a feeling of vindication.

"We were confident from the beginning that we had run a clean campaign, and so it was not a big surprise that the board ruled in favor of no action," Stoll said.

Stoll and Linn said they were more interested in doing their jobs than in anything else.

"The day we were elected, we followed through on our promise

We were confident from the beginning that we had run a clean campaign, and so it was not a big surprise that the board ruled in favor of no action.

— Andy Stoll,
UISG president-elect to begin working for the students, and that's what we've done instead of worry about the outcome of the meeting," Linn said.

While the allegations have brought some negative publicity to Stoll and Linn, they are confident that they can move on and put the allegations behind them.

"I think many of the students I talked to considered many of the allegations as an emotional response to the loss of a campaign and that they knew Andy and I ran a clean campaign," Linn said.

CITY BRIEF

Police issue sex-offender alert

The Johnson County Sheriff's Office is informing the public that an Iowa City resident is registered with the Iowa Sex Offender Registry and is considered to be a risk to offend again.

Kenneth Carl Williams, 49, 4853 Oakcrest Hill Road, was convicted on two counts of third-degree sexual abuse in 1995. In 1989, he was convicted of indecent contact with a child. All incidents occurred in Johnson County and involved males under the age of 13.

Williams is a white male with brown hair and blue eyes. He has a scar on his stomach and is 6 feet, 2 inches tall, and weighs 170 pounds.

In a release, local law-enforcement officials stressed that the designation of Williams as a sex offender is meant only as a means for the public to protect itself.

Any action taken by anyone against Williams or his family could result in arrest and prosecution, the release said.

Actions liable for arrest include vandalism of property, oral or written threats of physical harm and physical assault, authorities said.

Law school reaches for diversity

Two conferences this weekend will attempt to recruit minority students and women.

By Leanna Brundrett
The Daily Iowan

The UI College of Law is making efforts this weekend to diversify its student body with two conferences aimed at attracting women and minorities.

Today's 23rd-annual "Bridging the Gap" conference and the Organization for Women Law Students and Staff conference Saturday are targeting potential students.

Women and minorities interested in the law will have the opportunity to hear from different UI law students and professors, as well as other legal professionals.

Camille de Jorna, the law school director of admissions, said the events have been scheduled to try to increase under-represented groups.

"There is still a low number of minorities in law, and in the state of Iowa, minorities make up approximately 3-4 percent of the population," she said, adding that the ideal percentage of minorities practicing law is around 15-20 percent.

The "Bridging the Gap" conference will begin today at 8:30 a.m. with a welcome speech by law Dean N. William Hines.

The event is for male and female minorities interested in a law career. It will feature such activities as a financial-aid seminar, a mock class, preparation for the Law School Admissions Test and a recruitment fair. Approximately 10 different law schools will be represented, de Jorna said.

The Organization for Women Law Students and Staff conference Saturday is scheduled to begin at 9 a.m. Members of Women in Law hope the conference will encourage women to enter law school and give them an opportunity to see all of the various fields one can pursue with a law degree, said Brandy Dulceak, a second-year law student.

"Many people have the misconception that you must work in a firm if you have a law degree," she said. "There are many things women can do with a law degree."

The conference will have such events as a mock class in which participants can experience learning the Socratic method, Dulceak said.

"The Socratic method is different from other teaching," she said. "There is less focus on lecture and more on learning and problem-solving in the class. Many people have to adjust to that style of learning."

There are two panels scheduled for Saturday's conference, one composed of law students and another of legal professionals, Dulceak said.

"It's important to hear a woman's perspective," she said. "Women can find a fulfilling career in law."

The two conferences are a good idea, said UI first-year law student Laura Flier, who believes that bringing in more diversity would help in the classroom. The law school is "a little homogenized," because a lot of people are from Iowa, she said.

Flier said she is planning on attending part of the conference Saturday but feels it doesn't exactly apply to her because it is targeted toward attracting new students.

Wild Bill's to turn 25 in April

The employees, patrons and the School of Social Work plan to celebrate the man behind the name.

By Katie Bernard
The Daily Iowan

Wild Bill's Cafe, the North Hall coffee shop named after Bill Fackter, will celebrate its 25th anniversary on April 20.

Fackter, who was institutionalized when he was 7 years old, spent 50 years of his life in a Minnesota mental hospital. He was released as part of the social-work movement in the 1960s to move people into the community, said Tom Gilsenan, a UI graduate student and the manager of the coffee shop.

Barry Morrow, a professor of social work at the University of Minnesota, met Fackter while he was washing dishes at a country club. The two became friends, and when Morrow accepted a position at the UI School of Social Work, Fackter accompanied him and his wife to Iowa City, Gilsenan said.

Morrow opened the coffee shop on the third floor of North Hall so that Bill and other mentally disabled people could work in the world, Gilsenan said.

"There is this idea in sociology about coffee shops. They are believed to be neutral places where distinctions among individuals are blurred, and everyone is equal," he said. "There was this resurgence of the coffee house in the 1960s for that purpose, and that is what Wild Bill's is all about."

Last year, UI officials were concerned with the coffee shop's role in the School of Social Work, but they have not pursued their original inquiries, said Thomas Walz, a professor emeritus in the School of Social Work.

"I believe they were concerned with what kind of responsibility and control the university could exercise over it," he said. "For the most part, the shop is self-sufficient. It's done nothing but remarkable things for 25 years."

Fackter made an impact on those around him, Gilsenan said. He was the inspiration for Morrow's 1981 movie, Bill, and its sequel, Bill On His Own.

Rabbi Jeff Portman was Fackter's legal guardian before Fackter's death in 1983.

"Bill attended synagogue regularly," he said. "He was always laughing and upbeat — a real optimist and thoughtful person. People used to mistake him for a rabbi."

People who knew Fackter referred to him as the Jewish equivalent of a saint, Gilsenan said. He was gentle and an inspiration to everyone, he said.

Wild Bill's recently merged with Extend-A-Dream, an organization that works with disabled people, making it able to receive donations and a non-profit status.

"Everyone is welcome here," said Pat Clemens, 59, a seven-year Wild Bill's employee. "The majority of our business is from students and people who work in the building."

A birthday party to celebrate the 25th anniversary of the shop and to honor Fackter will be held on April 20 at 4 p.m.

KKK form at prison sparks probe

A KKK membership application found at a Black History Month bulletin board raises concerns.

Associated Press

FORT DODGE, Iowa — Officials at the Fort Dodge state prison are investigating how a Ku Klux Klan membership application made its way to the bulletin board for Black History Month in a prison staff room.

Deputy Warden Jerry Burt said Wednesday that prison employees and contractors have access to the room, where correctional officers assemble before their shifts.

"All that I know is that anything that has anything to do with the Ku Klux Klan is absolutely contrary to the values and beliefs of this institution. We will certainly not tolerate any action of this sort," Burt said.

Burt said there is no evidence that Ku Klux Klan recruiting is under way among guards at the Fort Dodge prison. The prison has a nearly all-white staff, with seven of 360 employees being black. Approximately 30 percent of the 850 inmates are black.

The discovery of the Klan material on Feb. 26 follows a December incident that resulted in the firings of three white correctional officers at the Fort Dodge prison. Two of the officers allegedly handcuffed a black inmate to a staircase so he could be given a birthday spanking. Union leaders said the incident wasn't racially motivated, noting that black inmates participated in the spanking with white inmates.

Frances Colston of West Des Moines, a veteran member of the Iowa Board of Corrections, said Wednesday she was deeply concerned about the posting of the Ku Klux Klan application. The form was from the American Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, based in Butler, Ind.

"I would not take this as a joke. I do not joke about things like this," Colston said. "It is very, very serious. If you have something like this happen, what is the next step?"

Traevana Potter-Hall, the director of the Iowa Commission on the Status of African Americans, said she found the posting of the Klan application "absolutely troubling." She noted that Gov. Tom Vilsack has appointed a task force to examine the disproportionate number of black inmates in Iowa's prisons.

Community to live La Vida Gusto

Those with a craving for Latino culture can partake in Gusto Latino Saturday.

By Rupa Shenoy
The Daily Iowan

Since last year, the UI International Crossroads Community has been preparing for Saturday's annual Gusto Latino festival, where more than 400 students are expected to experience Latin culture.

Gusto Latino, a UI event for more than 10 years, provides a venue in which students can enjoy Latin food, dance and music. It will begin at 8 p.m. Saturday in the IMU second-floor ballroom.

The crossroads community, one of the event's sponsors, is composed of 53 residents on the main floor of Hillcrest Residence Hall, which provides a place for people interested in international culture, language and issues, said community floor RA Chris Matthews.

"These events are not only explorations of culture but opportunities for the floor to interact with the UI and Iowa City community in general," he said.

The Orquesta de Jazz y Salsa Alto Maíz is scheduled to perform at the event, and dance lessons will be given during the first hour, said Christina Powers, a UI senior. There will also be a dance contest and door prizes from various area businesses, she said.

"It's something the community really enjoys," Powers said. "And an opportunity to celebrate Latino culture." Sponsors of the event include the UI Student Government, the Stepping Up Project, the Latin American Dance Club and the crossroads community.

The community also sponsors Russian, German, Japanese and French festivals throughout the year, but Gusto Latino is definitely the most popular event, Powers said.

Community floor resident and UI sophomore Erik Swenson organized a group salsa dancing lesson Wednesday night to prepare for Gusto Latino.

"I'm excited just to dance," he said. "Gusto is a great opportunity to practice with a great band and an awesome atmosphere."

Business showcase hits Carver-Hawkeye

"Gold Rush 2000" will give community members the chance to win prizes.

By Sky Eilers
The Daily Iowan

As businesses showcase their services this weekend at the ninth annual Business Fair, Iowa City community members will have the opportunity to win prizes and receive free demonstrations.

There will be 120 businesses participating in the fair at Carver-Hawkeye Arena, which will run Saturday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Sunday from noon-4 p.m., said Karen Schemmel, the program coordinator.

"The purpose is to provide an opportunity for area businesses to let people know who they are and what they're about," she said.

Last year, approximately 6,200 people attended the fair; this year, Schemmel said she hopes the event will attract 7,000 people.

To promote the theme of "Gold Rush 2000," Mercy Iowa City will sponsor a treasure hunt in which the winner will receive a trip for two to any location in the world.

The Shiatsu Clinic & School, 1025 N. Summit St., will offer free demonstrations of its "Focus Touch Shiatsu," a form of acu-pressure thumb-and-finger treatments to relieve migraine, back, neck and muscular problems.

James Luth II, the owner of the shiatsu school, said the fair has been extremely helpful in informing people about home-based businesses.

"It's a great opportunity to network with the community, and we really like getting together with other entrepreneurs," he said.

Today, a Chamber Business PM event will be held from 4 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. at Carver-Hawkeye, allowing businesses to meet each other before the fair, Schemmel said.

The UI Small Business Development Center will co-sponsor the event with the Iowa City Chamber of Commerce and the Iowa City Gazette.

The development center has been involved with the fair from the start, said Paul Heath, the center's director.

"We work with small businesses and help them become prosperous," Heath said. "The Business Fair is an opportunity for small businesses to showcase products and services."

Plettenberg case runs into snag

A trial may not be held until the fall in the year-old case.

By Katie Bernard
The Daily Iowan

Johnson County District Court Judge Kristin Hibbs requested a second status conference in the murder trial of Marc Plettenberg after Thomas Diehl, Plettenberg's attorney, reported a delay during an initial conference Thursday.

Plettenberg, 30, was charged with first-degree murder on March 3, 1999.

Court reports say Benjamin Bailey died from blunt trauma to the head, face, neck and throat on Jan. 29, 1999. His body was found in a ravine on the west bank of the Iowa River, near 1960 S. Riverside Drive, on Feb. 3, 1999.

DNA testing confirmed that Bailey's blood found on Plettenberg's clothing after he told police he had never seen Bailey, court reports say.

Plettenberg's belongings were also found in the same ravine as Bailey's body, and some of those items were later identified as the victim's, court

Let me remind you that your guy is still sitting in jail. In roughly two weeks, I want to see that things have happened.

— Kristin Hibbs,

Johnson County District Court judge advising Marc Plettenberg's attorney, Thomas Diehl, during a status conference records state.

Hibbs ordered the second status conference because Diehl is conducting separate DNA testing outside the state, and the tests have not yet been completed.

Initially, the materials were sent to labs on the East Coast, Diehl said in court, but those materials are in the process of being turned over to labs in Chicago.

"I think it will be more advantageous to get this done closer to home (in Chicago)," Diehl said. "It's been requested twice. We're just waiting to locate expertise closer to home."

The exact date for the next conference has not been set, although, Hibbs said, it would be in approximately two weeks, when she hopes to see more progress.

"Let me remind you that your guy is still sitting in jail," Hibbs said to Diehl. "In roughly two weeks, I want to see that things have happened."

The trial was set to start on May 1 but is likely to be postponed to gather all evidence and witnesses.

"They have all of our physical evidence," said Anne Lahey, an assistant Johnson County attorney. "I anticipate setting a new trial date. Realistically, we're looking at the fall."

Plettenberg was not present, under advice from his attorney. He remains incarcerated in the Johnson County Jail under $500,000 bond.

As funds get scarce, UI looks to alumni

FUNDING

something to be vigilant about."

The increased amount of corporate-sponsored research and the lure of capitalizing monetarily from it have changed the way UI professors look at research and instruction, said Thomas Melchert, a professor of biology and botany at the UI from 1963 to 1997.

"When I came to the UI, people were interested in teaching, and now that balance has changed," he said. "But it's an inherent part of the system, and it can't be otherwise. Now, research is where the money is at."

The biotechnology and pharmaceutical industries have proven to be the dominant supporters of college research, Geist said, adding that with more funding, more time is likely to be spent on research as opposed to teaching.

"There are — certainly in the College of Medicine — professors that have connections to industry," she said. "From our perspective, funding is wherever you can get the money for your research is a good thing."

It's "pretty standard" that college professors often find a willing distributor for their research that will earn a profit, she said, adding that it hasn't affected the type of research conducted at the UI.

NIH grants at the UI are currently "way above" corporate funding, Geist said.

Dependence on private money has been a result of the decreased percentage of state funding in the past 10 years in relation to the UI's budget, said Gary Fethke, the dean of the business school, who has been with the UI for 25 years.

Public-university operational costs such as salaries, courses and technology are increasingly being paid through private individual and corporate funds, although the state is not giving less money, he said.

"Statistics show that, now, only 22 percent of the UI's budget is from the state," said Anthony Arrington, the assistant director of annual giving programs at the UI Foundation. "Every college will tell you it relies heavily on private support."

The situation was similar at his former place of employment, the University of California, Los Angeles, he said.

"I know the UI does very well in corporate and foundation support," Arrington said.

What's in a name

As a result of a large private donation, in April 1999, the UI became the first Iowa public university to name a college after a private individual.

The Tippie College of Business received approximately $30 million from wealthy UI alumnus and businessman Henry B. Tippie, prompting the name change, Fethke said.

Four years prior to that, the college's new building was named after UI alumnus and contributor John Pappajohn.

"There aren't going to be buildings built without some significant amount of private money donated to that building," Fethke said. "The state is looking for a partnership with the private sector."

Although he believes that the state should completely fund the new journalism building, which is yet to be constructed, John Soloski, the director of the journalism school, said renaming the school or building after a wealthy contributor is always a possibility.

"We won't just let anyone name it," he said. "The 'Larry Flynt School of Journalism' just won't fly. It needs to represent what we stand for."

The tradition of naming buildings after prominent alumni or faculty has ended as the dollar's importance brings private contributors — dominated by wealthy alumni — into focus, Fethke said.

"I spend one-third of my time on external fund-raising activities," he said. "If we are not successful in raising private support, this and all universities are going to have a hard time operating."

"It's easier for us to contact and receive donations from those in the medical field," Arrington said. "Your professional areas are generally going to generate more income than your arts professions."

The "arts professions" jobs may be harder for alumni to obtain as the market focuses elsewhere.

"Hot jobs" for college graduates in the areas of technology, consulting, accounting and financial services are more in demand and offer greater pay and benefits, said Dee Hurst, the director of business and liberal-arts placement office.

Most on-campus job interviewing is with "larger, business-oriented" companies because the number of positions they need to fill justifies spending money traveling to the UI, she said.

According to the career services Web site, the number of liberal arts students estimated to graduate this May is 1,300 — four times greater than the 375 graduates expected from the business school.

"I may have a gallery in Minnesota call me and say it has one position open, but it doesn't have enough money to come," Hurst said.

A majority of the 1,200 to 1,400 students who have registered at the Business and Liberal Arts Placement Office are business students, she said.

"I always tend to equate the ease of finding a job after graduation not with the major, but with the focus of the student," she said, adding that a variety of skills is vital to adapting to the job market.

With the rapid change in technology, the thinking and learning skills derived from a liberal-arts education has become more important than ever, said Linda Maxson, the dean of liberal arts.

"We have to help people understand the role of the College of Liberal Arts," she said. "Its crucial role is educating students at the university."

With students leaving liberal arts for the professional colleges later in their academic careers, the college's alumni base is eroded, Maxson said.

"If the College of Liberal Arts had to rely on alumni donors for new buildings for classrooms and departments, we wouldn't be able to fund them," she said. "But that's not the responsibility of the donors — that's the responsibility of the state."

The "diverse enterprise" that makes up the liberal-arts school is housed in approximately 27 buildings on the UI campus, compared with the one building that houses the business school.

Private corporations are playing a "very, very large" role in public universities, said Regent Clarkson Kelly, who approves of the partnerships.

"In all the schools... they do this in reason — it's a good thing to promote research and investigation," he said.

Although Kelly admits some corporations may have ulterior motives, he said he has not heard any fears of corporate influence expressed by university administration.

Comparing two colleges

Every year the business school receives restricted money specified for certain uses, but it never takes direction in allocating private scholarship money, Fethke said.

"I'm not saying it's easy to draw these lines," he said. "You have to maintain your integrity."

The liberal arts school revamped its fund-raising campaign two years ago, yet financial strain has remained a familiar fixture.

The college received $3.6 million through the UI Foundation in 1999 and $6.1 million in 1998, said Rich Wretman, the vice president for constituent development programs at the UI Foundation.

"Our college has not had a tradition of a lot of fund raising over the past years," Maxson said. Financial impediments have kept the college from expanding its fund-raising activities until two years ago, she said, adding that the extent of support from the UI has been in the form of "encouragement" and "expertise."

The college has one part-time and two full-time employees at the UI Foundation focusing solely on fund raising — only the College of Medicine has as many development officers at the foundation, Wretman said. The business school has only one development officer but is in the process of adding another.

Very little private money was coming into the business school 20 years ago, Fethke said, but it now receives millions in private dollars each year that have become an "extremely important" part of the budget.

The business school, generally considered the production house of more "professional" careers, received approximately $2 million more than the liberal arts school through the UI Foundation in 1999.

"We have to manage hundreds of projects at the same time," said Alan Swanson, the senior vice president of development services at the UI Foundation. "As far as I know, we haven't neglected anyone."

Despite the difference in contributions that exist between schools at the UI, they are all given equal attention depending on the fund-raising activities each has requested, Arrington said.

The business school received $5,990,942 in donations in 1999 through the foundation, said Bill Windauer, the development officer for the school at the UI Foundation.

In comparison, it received $122,527 through the foundation in 1980, while the liberal arts school received $561,000.

The increase in funding for the business school is a result of the maturation of its development program, Windauer said.

"Donors decide if and when they will provide support, and also for what purpose and how much," he said. "It is always the donor's decision."

Most of that money is derived from alumni, Fethke said.

Although the liberal arts school has a much higher enrollment than the business school, its alumni base is less focused because of the variety of departments offered — leading to fewer donations, Maxson said.

"The College of Liberal Arts is kind of a large umbrella — many audiences are combined under it," Swanson said. "That makes it a little more difficult. I'm the first to admit we need to do a better job there as well as everywhere else."

Raising funds

Some of the private donations funding education at the UI are channeled through the UI Foundation located in the Levitt Center. In calendar year 1999, the foundation and UI received a combined record $147 million in private funds, a $23.4 million increase from 1998.

Of the $147 million, the foundation received $57.2 million in outright gifts. Almost half of that money, 44.9 percent, was specified by donors for use in collegiate, departmental, research and special projects funds.

Those contributions are gathered through personal contact with alumni, mail solicitations and tele-funding.

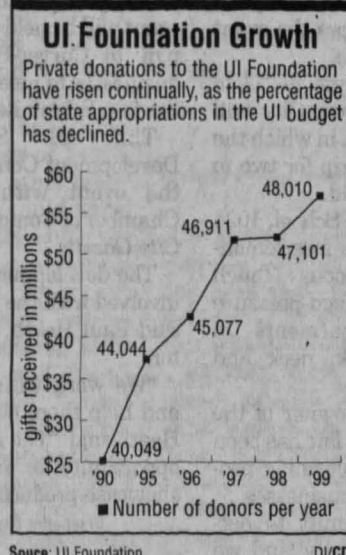

In 1999, the UI Foundation received a record $1.1 million in pledges through "tele-funding" alone.

"I think there's been a huge increase in the relationship we've built with the alumni," Arrington said. "We have the most contact with the most alumni."

Manning the call center Sunday through Thursday are up to 24 UI students hired specifically for tele-funding.

"We use students because people love to hear from them," Swanson said.

Spinning the image for a clear UI image

■ The UI's Communications and Outreach Office promotes the UI in national media.

By Zack Kucharski
The Daily Iowan

Although gaining direct financial support from alumni and corporations is not the main purpose of the UI Communications and Outreach Office, projecting a clear picture of UI programs in the national media helps.

With 45-50 employees and an annual operating budget of $3 million, the communications office operates a daily news service, oversees approximately 180-200 annual UI publications, and is responsible for a large portion of the UI Web page, said

Steve Parrott, the director of university relations.

"Our mission is to generate awareness and understanding of events," he said. "We don't directly say 'come here and donate here.'"

The office also provides advice for UI President Mary Sue Coleman and Ann Rhodes, the vice president for university relations, prepares media commercials, and arranges Coleman's travel agendas.

In addition to covering all of the colleges at the UI, the arts and health-science relations, part of the job of staff at the UI News Service is to cultivate contacts with the national media.

"Sometimes getting something about the university into a national publication just involves knowing whom to alert," Parrott said.

Getting the UI's name into the national media is closely monitored effort since tracking the citations became part of the UI's strategic plan. The plan is reviewed annually by the state of Iowa Board of Regents.

Regent Clarkson Kelly said citations in the national media are not much of an influence on drawing students to the UI but are much more important for alumni who may have left the area.

"We sometimes have people graduate, leave the state, and disappear for 30 years," he said. "In that time, they could become extremely successful and make a tremendous amount of money, which may somehow make its way back to the university because of what they see."

The average number of news

citations in the national media has surpassed the UI's 2000-01 goal of an average of 85 per month. The number jumped from 60 per month in 1996 to 118 in 1998.

"When you look at the number of citations in comparison with the goal, I think we're doing pretty darn well," Parrott said.

The role media citations play can be four-pronged, he said.

"It develops a sense of pride or memories for alumni; lets people know what we do here, acts as a recruiting tool for professors and students, and can persuade someone to donate or support the university in some other way," Parrott said.

Although there are countless positive things that occur every day at the UI, negative news is much quicker to grab attention, he said.

"When something goes wrong, that is Page 1 news," he said, citing the Mayflower Residence Hall asbestos scare and sewage spill earlier this year. "We do sometimes find ourselves doing damage control. This place is operated by human beings, and we sometimes do things wrong. We don't pretend that we are perfect."

In an effort to give communication strategies in several departments at the UI "more focus," the UI hired the Chicago-based Lipman Hearne communications firm last fall, Parrott said.

Members of the firm worked with various departments within the UI, gathering data that the UI will use to analyze the efficiency of communication with prospective students, alumni, faculty and donors, Rhodes said.

The outside audit will cost no more than $100,000 and will come from the current fiscal year's budget, Parrott said.

That the UI turned to an outside source does not mean the UI is not confident with its communications, Parrott said.

"We always need to re-evaluate how to most efficiently use resources," he said. "We needed someone who could take a very broad look at the university."

The number of ways in which information can be distributed has added an increased number of challenges to the outreach office, Parrott said.

"We have to do things on paper and on the Internet at the same time," he said.

Corp. programs, Corp. lingo sneak into UI departments

■ The UI is incorporating business methods and "lingua Fortune 500."

By Leanna Brundett
The Daily Iowan

As the UI increasingly turns to corporations for contracts and funding, corporate programs as well as corporate "lingo" have made their way into the university.

In an attempt to make things run more efficiently, different colleges and schools throughout the university have implemented a computerized schedule system called Corporate Time.

Corporate Time is a computer program that can schedule meetings, appointments and other tasks that professors need to be notified of, said Joyce Ruplinger, a Tippie College of Business computing consultant. The business school has been using the program for approximately two years, she said.

The business school chose to use the Information Technology Services-supported program as its main calendar source because most of the university is using it, Ruplinger said.

But Corporate Time is giving professors an assembly-line mentality, said Kenneth Starck, a professor of journalism, whose department has been using the program for a year and a half.

"The computer is the one that is communicating with you," he said. "It sends you a message saying you have a meeting, and even though it may be efficient, it gives me a feeling of an assembly line."

First, professors submit their schedules to their directors, including such things as class time, research time and writing time, Starck said. After the schedules are compiled, they are entered into the computer, which stores all of the faculty members' itineraries, he said.

The system is valuable because it is an efficient way to let everyone know when, where and at what time their meetings, appointments and special events are, said John Soloski, the director of the journalism school.

Even though it may be valuable and efficient, neither professors nor departments are required to use Corporate Time, he said.

Another college that has chosen to use Corporate Time for the past year and a half is the College of Nursing, said Pamela Michael-Milder, a nursing school computer consultant. The school chose to use the system because it is compatible with other departments and colleges on campus, she said.

A "big, handy tool" is how Fred Streicher, the director of external relations for the College of Engineering, described his use of Corporate Time. Streicher has been using the calendar for the past year and said it does a better job than paper calendars.

Corporation "lingo" has also made its way into the UI. Sometimes, UI President Mary Sue Coleman is referred to as the chief executive officer of the UI.

Some UI officials even refer to deans of departments as "department executive officers."

On the Hoover's Online Web site, the UI is referred to as a "company." The page lists the CEO as Coleman, the Chief Financial Officer as Douglas True, the UI vice president of finance, and the Human Resource Executive as Robert Foldesi, the associate vice president for human resources.

Using corporate lingo and programs can be efficient, but it also has its downsides, Starck said.

"It's handy from an administrative viewpoint, but it is very controlling," he said.

to college-aged students, and it was well-received," he said, though he did not know whether the students who saw the design were from the UI.

The new logo has been approved for use by all men's teams and will begin appearing gradually as uniforms — football helmets and basketball jerseys — and merchandise are replaced, Klatt said. The logo has not been approved for women's athletics, though that might happen, he said.

Many UI students and alumni are upset the old Tiger Hawk is being replaced, declaring it a symbol of Iowa's athletics history.

"I have been a Hawkeye fan for a very long time. I don't like the new look at all," said UI freshman Sarah Bappe. "The original Tiger Hawk carries with it a rich tradition in Iowa athletics. Why change that now?"

Bappe was one of more than 150 people who e-mailed The Daily Iowan Thursday, voicing opposition to the new logo.

The logo shouldn't be changed just for the sake of having a new look, said UI senior Kyle Harlow.

"The new logo is hideous," he said. "It makes Herky look too streamlined and frail, and his eye is now too big in comparison with the rest of his head."

UI graduate Melinda Nielson also e-mailed the DI to express her dissatisfaction with the new logo because it makes her Tiger Hawk tattoo "look out of date."

Several questions have surfaced surrounding the ownership of the old Tiger Hawk logo, which was commissioned by former Iowa football coach Hayden Fry.

"The university owns the logo and all the logos before the Tiger Hawk," said Mark Abbott, the director of the men's athletics licensing program. "Fry had it commissioned and then transferred ownership to the UI shortly afterwards."

Brent Crane, a UI graduate in 1992, thinks the new logo is an insult to Iowa's football tradition.

"When Coach Fry established the Tiger Hawk, there was scarcely a tradition to betray," he said. "That has changed. The Tiger Hawk is Iowa."

The original Tiger Hawk sparked controversy recently when high schools were forbidden to use the logo for sports teams, a policy the UI intends to maintain with the new logo.

"Because we are not eliminating the original, there will be no change in how we protect the use of the Tiger Hawk," Klatt said. "We are not foregoing our ownership of the logo."

Though UI students and alumni remain skeptical, Klatt and his staff seem enthusiastic about the new logo.

"We are confident of the successes we will be achieving," he said.

let the sunshine in when it comes to campaign-funding allegations," Bush said. "I look forward to seeing where those e-mails are and what was in those e-mails."

The committee released a June 19, 1998, memo from a presidential aide to then-Deputy Chief of Staff Podesta informing him of an "anomaly in the system involving the Mail2 server." They also released a handwritten note suggesting that Podesta asked an aide "to brief me on this."

Another internal White House memo on Sept. 4, 1998, showed that computer officials were aware of problems "regarding OVP (Office of the Vice President) e-mail and records management." The memo laid out the problem in technical terms.

Some private-sector contract employees, who were hired by the White House to work on the e-mail system, contended that they were threatened by White House officials with termination — and even prison — if they told anyone about the breakdown.

Investigators from independent counsels to congressional committees all might have an interest in the missing e-mails, which could have been covered by subpoenas and document requests.

And plaintiffs in the civil suit, brought by individuals contending the White House improperly obtained and misused their FBI background files, sought e-mails as part of their document request.

The Justice Department disclosed its investigation in a court filing in that lawsuit, asking the judge for more time to review the matter.

The delay was called a "ploy" by Larry Klayman of Judicial Watch, the conservative legal organization that filed the $90 million class-action suit.

In general, Matthes seemed like a competitive guy who could take jokes from others, said Blind. But people sometimes picked on him, Blind said.

Some students thought Matthes' alleged threats were just a joke, Blind said.

"I'm not afraid of anything happening at the school," Slade said. "I have a lot of guns, and my children are also trained."

The names of the four classmates were not released by the authorities, and even some students were not sure who was allegedly threatened by Matthes.

"There are a lot of rumors floating around school," said Adam Blind. "I don't even know which one I should believe."

Officials from the School District and sheriff's office were not available for comment Thursday night.

The sheriff's office is continuing its investigation into the case.

Coleman's corporate ties place UI in an ethical bind

The differences between Time-Warner-AOL-EMI, etc., and the UI are like those between the Democrats and Republicans — slight at best. If you still see significant differences, it is time you critically reflected and took stock. UI President Mary Sue Coleman certainly takes stock, in two different, yet related, ways.

In the sense of reflection or awareness, Coleman and the UI administration have taken stock of the declining commitment of the state to the UI. Their reaction is an increasing emulation of corporate models, lingo and practices.

A host of examples abound, such as the exclusive contract with Coca-Cola, privatization of vending services, contracting a union-busting firm and the speculative investments of the UI Foundation in the stock market.

Collectively, these well-known examples indicate a corporate ethos at the UI. In the sense of shares in corporate entities, Coleman likewise takes stock. Coleman serves on the boards of two publicly traded corporations: Gaylord Container Corp. and Meredith Corp. At Gaylord Container Corp. of Deerfield, Ill., Coleman has served since 1996. Her compensation in 1998 was $26,000 annually, $1,000 for quarterly meetings and 1,000 shares of stock upon retirement. The CEO of Gaylord is Marvin Pomerantz, the former president of the state of Iowa Board of Regents.

More recently, in 1997, Coleman joined the board of directors of the Meredith Corp. of Des Moines. In 1998, she received $35,000 annually, 1,200 shares of stock with an option to purchase 6,000 shares. Coleman's annual compensation from these boards was estimated at $80,000 in 1998, which, she says, she gives to university causes and charity. According to a 1995 survey by the American Council on Education, only 26.9 percent of college presidents sit on corporate boards. She is in an elite minority.

Given such ties, Coleman certainly has broad interests and connections. Gaylord Container Corp. is involved in manufacturing. Meredith Corp. is a media and integrated marketing corporation. It publishes Better Homes and Gardens and Ladie's Home Journal, a number of specialty magazines and more than 100 specialty publications, and owns 11 television stations reaching approximately 8 percent of the population.

Along with working with public corporations, Coleman also works part-time for a private, nonprofit organization. Coleman is one of the more visible fund-raisers for the UI Foundation, the main fund-raising arm of the UI.

Organized in 1956, "the University of Iowa Foundation is structurally separate from the UI and is governed by a board of directors that elects its officers and appoints its staff," says its Web site. The foundation's professed mission "is to maximize private gift support for the UI." In 1998, the foundation raised approximately $52 million and produced another $48 million in commitments.

While Coleman is not compensated for her fund-raising activities, she has a generous expense account. The so-called President's Development Fund is administered by the foundation — not the state of Iowa — and amounts to approximately $150,000 per year. This fund provides a car for Coleman, hotel accommodations, plane fare and other travel-related expenses. The $150,000 allotted to Coleman is "outside the school's regular budget and beyond the reach of Iowa's open-records law," according to the Des Moines Register. Thus, the public is kept ignorant about how the development fund is spent.

These practices are tangible proof of the president's close interrelationship with corporate America, and they raise serious questions about her leadership. As the president of the largest public employer in the state, Coleman's entanglements represent an ethical quandary — particularly in regard to labor relations. The time and effort that serving on two boards entails should concern all

MATTHEW KILLMEIER

UI constituents. The UI community expects the president to, above all, provide leadership. As she simultaneously serves other unrelated interests, is her focus on the problems and challenges of the UI unnecessarily diverted?

Indeed, as the UI faces yet another financial crisis, thanks in part to our neoliberal Legislature, the UI needs a hands-on president.

Furthermore, Coleman's outside compensation, which is equal to nearly one-third of her UI salary, raises questions about her accountability to the UI and the public. One wonders which piper she is following?

While I am not implying Coleman is inherently corrupted by her involvement with corporate interests, I am concerned about its possible impact on her priorities as UI president.

Similarly, I worry about how such relationships affect the structure and practices of the UI. As the UI becomes more like a corporation, education and research appear to be subsumed under the dictates of profit — and students suffer.

Matthew Killmeier is a DI columnist.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

What do you think of the new Hawkeye logo?

The new logo is terrible. It looks like some strung-out heroin addict who needs a haircut. Who designed this thing? Call me old-school, but I think the traditional Tiger Hawk is one of the most powerful logos in college sports. Maybe it is a metaphor for the school in general — getting a little rough around the edges?

Erik Brakke
UI freshman

I am a 1992 UI graduate and was born and raised in Marion. From the time I was 9 years old, all I ever wanted for my birthday was anything that had a Tiger Hawk logo. This year, I will turn 30, and all I want for my birthday is anything with a Tiger Hawk logo.

Mr. Bowlsby, coaches and players come and go. For a whole generation of Hawkeye fans, our Tiger Hawk is a symbol of pride and tradition. When Coach Hayden Fry established the Tiger Hawk, there was scarcely a tradition to betray. (I recall the old chants of "Go, clock, Go!" in the 1970s.) But that has changed. The Tiger Hawk is Iowa. I find this new logo an insult to Iowa's football tradition.

Brent Crane
UI alum

I must comment on the absurd new Tiger Hawk. It looks like a poor attempt to draw the old, good-looking Tiger Hawk. I must wonder why the Athletics Department feels it needs a change. Could it be that it no longer wishes to recognize the winning tradition of Hayden Fry? Perhaps by eliminating the symbol he created, it hopes to eliminate the winning tradition he brought to the UI. This move would be akin to the laughable football uniforms of the early '90s, which appeared to have banana peels on them. This may be merely an attempt to boost sales. The Tiger Hawk is not to blame for poor sales — rather, a 1-10 record is. If this did increase sales, it would be a short-term solution and would leave the university with a disgraceful symbol.

Josh Kraushaar
UI junior

I'm a UI alum and lived in Iowa all of my life until graduating. I didn't like the new Tiger Hawk at first simply because it was different. But after giving it a chance and evaluating the new design on its merits, I have to say that it definitely beats out the old design. The new design is a lot more ferocious, as everyone has pointed out. What really strikes me about the new design is how much it makes the old one look like a chicken instead of a hawk. Who wants a chicken for a logo?

Dan Schwickrath
UI graduate

As a lifelong Hawkeye fan and a current student at the UI, I feel that I am qualified to express my opinion on the issue. I was drawn to the Hawkeyes as a young kid in Central Iowa. My parents were fans and often brought me to football and basketball games. Through the years, I have grown to love the tradition, competitiveness and atmosphere of Iowa athletics. In fact, my devotion to the Hawkeyes is a big reason that I'm going to school here. However, the decision to change the logo goes against almost everything that the Hawkeyes stand for.

Why the change? Why now? I really can only think of a couple of reasons: money and as a symbol of the "new era."

First of all, let me note that I am not opposed to change. I eagerly support all of the new coaches and their respective programs in both the men's and women's Athletics Departments. As was the case in our past, the future of the Hawkeyes certainly looks bright! That said, there are some things that we should not try to change. The fan support and traditions of Iowa and its Athletics Department, as a whole, are some of the best in the entire nation, rivaling such schools as Michigan, Notre Dame, Penn State and North Carolina.

Iowa fans can take pride in knowing that the Hawkeyes' black-and-gold colors and the Tiger Hawk logo have become among the most recognizable symbols in all of college athletics.

With several notable exceptions, most of the personal reactions I have received and Internet message boards posts I have read seem to classify the new logo somewhere between hideous and disgraceful. I take it a step further ... disloyal. I'm ashamed at the ugly replication of Hayden Fry's original creation, and even more ashamed that anyone would try to sell sports memorabilia with the new logo on it.

Some proponents of the change have suggested that the new logo just a sleeker, meaner version of the traditional Tiger Hawk. I concede that the physical appearances of the logos are not substantially different, and the Hawks likely won't lose any fans over the switch. But something fundamental has changed ... something that Hayden Fry, Nile Kinnick, Bump Elliott and many others have brought to the Hawkeyes and the UI, something that the old Tiger Hawk represents ... class. Go Hawks!

Oscar statuette heist hints at an Academy conspiracy theory

When the Oscar statuettes were reported missing last week, the first thought that came to my mind was that they were probably in the trash somewhere being hoarded by Oscar the Grouch. But apparently, it's not as original a pun as I thought it was. Craig Kilborn had the same thought on his "In The News" segment last Tuesday night. But someone beat even witty Craig to the punch line: the thieves who stole the 55 gold-plated statuettes. In the trash is exactly where the stolen Oscars were found Sunday.

Two employees of Roadway Express, the company hired to ship the Oscars to California, were arrested for allegedly stealing the Oscars.

Investigators suspected the theft was an inside job because the entire load of Oscars weighs 470 pounds, and that's not something you can just throw into the back seat of your Chevy.

So what were the motivations of the men who attempted the heist? Was it something so noble as protesting the absolute power of cinema or protesting the liberal agenda of Hollywood?

Although no motivation for stealing Oscar is a good one, at least something along those lines might have somewhat dignified the attempt. But investigators say the two men's motivation was simply to make a profit by stealing and then "recovering" the $18,000 shipment.

But the thieves seemed to have become disenchanted with their grand scheme, depositing the Oscars in a Dumpster in L.A., where they were found by a local area resident.

The Academy has commissioned a replacement set of Oscars, which are being flown in this time.

Either a big conspiracy is lurking in the dark alleys of L.A., secretly plotting the downfall of the Academy, or the Academy has just really been down on its luck as of late. In early March, the voting ballots were misplaced by the U.S. Postal Service when the gray sacks they were in were confused for third-class bulk mail.

At least the members of the Academy seem to have a sense of humor about the whole motley affair. Bruce Davis, executive director of the academy, said, "We will look at the ratings and possibly contrive to have the Oscars stolen again next year."

Meanwhile, to placate those of you who do believe the conspiracy theory, the Academy quipped that it is taking special precautions to make sure Oscar host Billy Crystal isn't "accidentally misplaced" before Sunday evening, when the gold-plated statuettes are finally handed out.

Oscars draw mixed reactions at UI

■ The Super Bowl of the entertainment biz nears.

By Anne Kapler
 The Daily Iowan

To some UI students, the Academy Awards are to the entertainment industry what the Super Bowl is to football — it's something all pay attention to, whether they keep up with the movie industry or not.

"Even if you don't follow entertainment, you still try to catch the Academy Awards," said UI sophomore Kanchan Iyer.

With the awards ceremony only a few days away, students have mixed feelings about the nominees and even the academy itself.

Some complain that the movies nominated for Oscars aren't the ones that people actually watch. Maggie Gaunt, a junior pre-communication studies major, thinks that the academy is out of touch with the movie-going public.

"It leaves out the fun movies. Just because a movie is serious, that doesn't mean that it's the best," she said. "It seems to me like they nominate the same movies over and over again." Gaunt said she hasn't seen any of the movies nominated for Best Picture, nor did she have any interest in seeing most of them.

Other students think the categories are outdated.

"They need to have an animation category," said UI freshman Sarah Hinds. "Toy Story II was great. It recaptured my childhood and made me laugh more than any movie I've seen in a long time. It shouldn't get Best Picture, but it should be recognized."

Some of the movies that have been nominated, including those in the Best Actor and Actress categories, haven't even been shown in this area. But sophomore theater major Phil Nohl doesn't see that as a problem.

"I'd never heard of Tumbleweeds (Janet McTeer for Best Actress) — I mean, who has, really?" he said. "A lot of people didn't see a lot of these movies. But I'm sure they deserved the nomination. It's better that they nominate movies based on talent, not on money."

"Sometimes that means nominating movies and actors and actresses from movies that most people didn't see."

Publicity Photo

"American Beauty had intense acting and a lot of themes that people think about, such as the chaos of suburban life and family relationships," said Hinds, who spent her summer working at the multiplex theater in her hometown.

"The 72nd Annual Academy Awards" will air on March 26 on KCRG at 7:30 p.m.

Ticking toward "The Clock"

Iowa City artist Dave Selden is set to launch "The Clock," an Internet installation that explores the relationship between analog and digital technologies.

The work will be made accessible through the Internet at <http://www.daveselden.com/theclock/> beginning on March 26 and continuing through April 1.

Selden's installation questions the concept of time as it relates to the Internet through the images of an analog clock. This clock is photographed every five minutes by a Web cam that uploads the digital photographs onto the project's Web site. Those who visit the site may purchase these five-minute segments at $5 each. Purchasers will receive the rights to the time configuration as well as a 3.5 inch diskette containing a photograph of the work.

Hillary's travels under GOP fire

■ The first lady has reimbursed only 18 percent of her traveling expenses, Republicans say.

By Shannon McCaffrey
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Congressional Republicans Thursday released White House data showing that Hillary Rodham Clinton reimbursed taxpayers for only approximately 18 percent of the cost of her New York Senate campaign trips on government aircraft.

A House Appropriations subcommittee charged with overseeing White House spending released the data as members prepared for an afternoon hearing on Rodham Clinton's travel. The documents showed that her trips to and from New York cost $182,471, but she only reimbursed taxpayers $32,878.

Still, the figure was far below the $905,406 that the Republican National Committee estimated as recently as Wednesday.

Rodham Clinton flies on government aircraft on the advice of Secret Service. She reimburses the government the same way presidential candidates do: at the rate of a first-class commercial ticket.

Clinton's Republican opponent, New York City Mayor Rudolph Giuliani, has criticized the first lady for not fully reimbursing taxpayers. Rodham Clinton's campaign spokesman, Howard Wolfson, said federal law does not require her to do so.

Wolfson said Thursday's hearing — announced Wednesday by the RNC — was an attempt by Republicans to deflect attention from Giuliani's response to last week's fatal shooting of an unarmed black man by New York police.

At the mayor's direction, police released the dead man's police record, showing a juvenile charge that was later dropped and two guilty pleas in the mid-1990s to disorderly conduct.

The Giuliani camp did not immediately return a phone call seeking comment.

The Republican study of Rodham Clinton's travel used data the White House supplied on 26 trips to New York between June 9 and Dec. 14, 1999. Thirteen trips were not accounted for. Costs were estimated based on the $3,705 per hour the Air Force says it costs to fly a C-20.

Republicans noted they estimated the travel costs based on the costs of the less expensive C-20, not the more expensive C-9 Rodham Clinton is believed to use on occasion.

The study also found that Rodham Clinton's campaign still owes $3,807 of the $36,685 billed by the White House Travel Office for political trips.

Study hints a link in long nails and baby deaths

■ Since instating a short-nails policy, no babies have died in an Oklahoma intensive care unit.

By Carol Cole
Associated Press

OKLAHOMA CITY — Bacteria found under the long fingernails of two nurses may have contributed to the deaths of 16 sickly babies in 1997 and 1998 in an Oklahoma City hospital, researchers say.

All of the babies were newborns in the neo-natal intensive care unit at Children's Hospital of Oklahoma, and all had infections caused by the same bacteria found under the nurses' nails.

However, researchers said they cannot be certain that the nurses transmitted the bacteria to the infants. And the hospital pointed out that the babies — most of whom were premature — had seriously deficient immune systems and said other problems played a larger role in their deaths.

Nevertheless, the hospital has changed its policy to require short fingernails on nurses, and no babies in the neo-natal ICU have died from the bacterial infection since then.

The findings were reported in the February issue of the Infection Control and Hospital Epidemiology Journal. The study was done by the state Health Department, the hospital and the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

"We felt like the connection was strong enough to report it," said state epidemiologist Michael Crutcher, who helped write the study. But, he said, "There was no way to definitively prove that this was the mechanism of transmission."

Dr. William Jarvis, the chief of the investigation and prevention branch of the CDC's hospital infection program, said the agency has investigated two or three outbreaks over the past 10 years in which fingernails were thought to have played a role.

But just as with the Oklahoma hospital, Jarvis suggested that other factors were at play. "In all of these with data to support that fingernails have been the critical element, they haven't been the only element," he said.

The bacteria, Pseudomonas aeruginosa, can be found in every hospital nursery in America, said Dr. Roger Sheldon, the medical director of the hospital.

The death rate in the hospital's neo-natal ICU is close to the national rate, but at one point, the staff noticed an increase of approximately one death per month. The hospital called the CDC, which studied the records of all the babies who had been in the unit in 1997 and the first three months of 1998.

Of 439 newborns admitted during that period, 46 acquired the bacterial infection and 16 died.

The study found evidence of an association between the bacteria and exposure to two nurses with long or artificial fingernails. The bacteria were also found on two sinks and fingernails of another nurse with short, natural nails, but that nurse was not linked to the infection in the infants.

The CDC suggested improved hand-washing and requiring nurses to have short, natural fingernails, which are considered less likely to harbor germs.

Iowa Senate chops health budget by $7.5 million

■ Democrats say the proposal cuts too much in substance-abuse treatment programs.

By Ken Thomas
Associated Press

DES MOINES — The Iowa Senate Thursday approved an $87.5 million health and human rights budget proposal that would reduce spending on substance-abuse treatment programs and bring total cuts of $7.5 million.

Republican leaders said the bill reflected the state's need to cut back due to declining tax revenues. The money would support agencies that focus on elder care, substance abuse, veterans affairs and civil rights.

The bill passed by a vote of 30-19, with Democrats dissenting.

Republicans said the budget would step-up funding for the state's elderly population and provide for an additional long-term-care ombudsman. The budget would also target money for an outreach program for immigrants from Southeast Asia and the Pacific Islands.

Democrats said the proposal would shortchange substance-abuse programs by $7.5 million and result in higher prison rates. They tried to amend the budget to restore funding from Gov. Tom Vilsack's proposal, but the spending increases were rejected along party-line votes.

"Treatment is cheaper than incarceration," said Senate Minority Leader Mike Gronstal, D-Council Bluffs. "What's going to happen? Where are those people going to go? They go to the streets. They become burglars. They rob your house. They end up in prison. It just doesn't make much sense."

Republicans have said much of the funding would be coming from the state's tobacco fund, expected to reap $55 million next year from a settlement with four tobacco corporations.

Democrats also tried to tack on additional spending for a prescription-drug benefit for the state's sizable elderly population. The plan would set up the framework for a program that would require funding in two years, subsidizing elderly couples earning up to $25,000 or individuals who make $16,000 a year.

But Sen. Jack Rife, R-Durant, who guided the bill on the floor, said the program would cost "mega-dollars," well beyond the state budget's means.

"Our governor didn't even propose it," he said. "It certainly wasn't on his radar screen — because maybe he's a little worried about this budget, too."

Beware the Minimum Payment Trap

If you're paying the minimum payment on your credit cards, the credit card companies love you! Here's why:

- If you charge $1000 worth of clothes, books, and pizza on your credit card . . .
- If your interest rate is 18% and your minimum payment is 2% of the balance due, or $20 . . .
- Then it will take you 7.8 years (93 months) to pay it off . . .
- And you'll pay over $860 in interest!
- Your total cost for the $1000 in purchases is $1,860, assuming you don't make any new purchases during those 7.8 years.

You'll be through college and nearly through medical school . . . and still paying for this semester's books, clothes, and pizza.

WORLD BRIEF

Rwanda's president resigns, plunging country into crisis

KIGALI, Rwanda (AP) — Plunging Rwanda into its worst political crisis since the 1994 genocide, President Pasteur Bizimungu resigned Thursday after a month of emotional debate about the ethnic tensions and corruption many feel are rife in this central African nation.

Although largely ceremonial, Bizimungu's presidency was seen as crucial for reconciliation between majority Hutu and minority Tutsi after the 100-day slaughter that was orchestrated by an extremist Hutu government. More than half a million people were killed.

Bizimungu, a Hutu, was embroiled in conflict with the Tutsi-led Rwandan Patriotic Front, a rebel group-turned political movement that stopped the killings of Tutsis and moderate Hutus in July 1994. The two sides were at odds over the prosecution of some ministers suspected of graft and mismanagement.

Some members of the government accuse the 49-year-old Bizimungu of trying to amass power and of thwarting an anti-corruption campaign that was supposed to spare no one. He has been accused of using his office to protect political protégés and to expand his private business — a bad example for the impoverished country of 7.2 million hoping for a fresh start on the ruins of a decade of conflict.

Bizimungu, who has been president since 1994, resigned in a terse letter to the president of the Supreme Court and then made no further comment. His resignation was accepted unanimously by Parliament.

Political analysts said Bizimungu may have resigned to avoid a possibly embarrassing appearance in Parliament, which Thursday disputed a speech he made Monday accusing legislators of wrongly prosecuting ministers on allegations of graft.

Parliament has been a growing force in moving to oust allegedly corrupt officials, including the previous speaker of Parliament and former Prime Minister Pierre-Celestin Rwigiyema.

Cyclones cruise to win over Bruins

By Tom Coyne
 Associated Press

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Iowa State used its quickness and defense to ground UCLA's high-flying offense, then put the Bruins away with steady shooting and strong inside play.

Marcus Fizer, Stevie Johnson and Michael Nurse had 16 points each as the second-seeded Cyclones beat the sixth-seeded Bruins 80-56 on Thursday night in the Midwest Regional semifinals.

Jamaal Tinsley added 14 points to help the Cyclones (32-4) extend their winning streak to 10 games and advance to the final eight for the first time.

Iowa State will face top-seeded Michigan State on Saturday. The Spartans beat Syracuse 75-58.

UCLA's acrobatic offense, which produced 14 alley-oop baskets in a 35-point victory over Maryland in the second round, never got started against the Cyclones.

Every time the Bruins attempted an alley-oop, Fizer or Johnson or someone else was there to intercept it or at least knock it down. And every time the Cyclones missed a shot, they got at least two defenders back, stopping the Bruins from getting many fast-break points.

The Bruins (21-11) simply couldn't hit their shots. After shooting 62.5 percent against Maryland, the Bruins were held to 33.9 percent Thursday night.

Jaron Rush, who had directed UCLA's eight-game winning streak after returning from a 24-game-NCAA suspension, was held to a season-low six points, going 0-of-5 from 3-point range.

The Cyclones lost in their previous two games in the final 16, falling to North Carolina State in 1986 and losing in overtime to UCLA in 1997. The Cyclones were 0-6 against the Bruins before Thursday night.

This time, it was all Cyclones. With Iowa State leading 18-16 midway through the first half, the Cyclones used a 9-2 run to take control.

Fizer and Tinsley each had nine rebounds and the smaller Cyclones had a 43-34 rebounding edge. Tinsley added 11 assists.

Jerome Moiso was the only

Bruins player in double figures with 15 points and 10 rebounds.

The loss ends the roller-coaster season for UCLA, which saw the sixth-seeded Bruins go from an 8-2 start to being booed at home while losing six of seven, to winning game after game to keep their slim NCAA tournament bid hopes alive. It also knocks the final Pac-10 team out of the tourney.

The Iowa women's rowing team is focused on defeating Wisconsin.

The No. 16 Hawkeyes will host their first home meet of the spring season against the No. 9 Badgers and Creighton Sunday. The racing begins at 10:30 a.m. on Lake MacBride in Solon.

"Wisconsin has been a powerhouse forever," senior Lisa Deimerly said. "We were able to beat them in the fall. It'll be a huge race. If we beat them it will be the first time our varsity eight boat has ever beaten Wisconsin in the spring."

Iowa's varsity eight boat defeated the Badgers at the Head of the Rock Regatta in Rockford, Ill., during the fall season. The Hawkeyes downed Wisconsin by eight seconds with a time of 15:28.64 in the fall season.

That victory was just part of a successful fall season for the Hawkeyes hope to put on show for fans

The Iowa softball team looks to take the Hawkeye Classic title in its first games at home.

By Melinda Mawdsley
 The Daily Iowan

After five weeks and 21 games on the road, the Iowa softball is ready to showcase its team in front of home fans for the first time this season.

The second-annual Hawkeye Classic will open Saturday at Pearl Field. The four-team field consists of Iowa, University of Wisconsin-Green Bay, Creighton and Eastern Illinois.

The No. 16 Hawkeyes (14-7) opened the season strong, with a 13-1 record, but then dropped six straight before defeating Hawaii in a consolation game at the Kia Classic in Fullerton, Calif.

However, the Hawkeyes come home with the toughest part of their schedule behind them. Five of Iowa's losses in California came against ranked opponents, including the first, third and seventh-ranked teams in the nation.

The experience Iowa gained playing tough games early should work to its advantage as the team nears the Big Ten season.

■ During the first day of NCAA Championships, Simon Chrisander finished 17th in the 1-meter dive.

By Todd Brommelkamp
The Daily Iowan

The UI men's swimming team is on the final leg of its season this weekend with two swimmers and a diver attending the NCAA Championships at the University of Minnesota.

Jay Glenn and Ales Abersek, along with diver Simon Chrisander, qualified for the meet which showcases the best swimmers in the nation.

All-American Chrisander was the only Hawkeye in action Thursday. Chrisander, who also qualified for the championships last season, finished in 17th with a score of 466.95.

"Obviously it was a little disappointing for Simon to finish 17th," Iowa coach John Davey said. "But it was a good dive and he gave it his best effort." Abersek and Glenn will get their chance to represent the Hawkeys tonight. The two Big Ten champions will begin competition with Abersek swimming the 100 butterfly and Glenn the 200 freestyle. Abersek will also compete in the 200 butterfly during the final day of competition Saturday. Finals are at 7 p.m. both days.

Chrisander 17th place

While Abersek automatically qualified for the meet with his time at the Big Ten Championships, Chrisander and Glenn had to take different roads. Chrisander attended the NCAA diving qualifier and got his invite by placing third in the 1-meter dive. Glenn had to wait to see if his championship time at the Big Ten meet would get him in. "I was kind of nervous because I didn't know if my time was good enough," said Glenn, "but I was able to play off Coach Davey's confidence."

While Glenn said he is looking forward to the experience, Abersek will use his first time at the NCAA to attempt to impress the Slovenian Olympic committee. This is the first time the NCAA Championships will be swam in meters, the standard measurement of swimming in European countries.

Chrisander said while he was nervous last year, this time he knows what to expect. Davey said his two swimmers are ready to compete and are looking forward to the opportunity to swim against the top swimmers in the country.

"Our guys seem ready to go and I feel confident that they'll do well," said Davey.

NCAA gymnastics meet schedule set

The UI will host next weekend's 2000 men's gymnastics championships in Carver-Hawkeye Arena. The meet will begin Thursday, March 30, and will end on Saturday, April 1.

Competition Thursday will be held during two different sessions. During each session the top three team finishers will advance to the team finals Friday night.

At 1 p.m. Thursday, Michigan, Ohio State, Penn State, Illinois, Nebraska and Massachusetts will compete. At 7 p.m., Iowa will go against Oklahoma, California, Michigan State, Brigham Young and Stanford.

Friday at 7 p.m., the six teams that advance will compete in the team finals. Also during the session will be the individual finals and the individual preliminaries.

The meet will conclude on Saturday with the individual finals. Competition will begin at 2 p.m.

Tickets are still available for the meet. All-session tickets are $30 for adults and $15 for students. Tickets for both Thursday sessions are $6 for adults and $3 for students. Tickets for Friday and Saturday sessions are $12 for adults and $6 for students. Tickets are available from the UI ticket office at 319-335-9327.

Roddick earns first pro victory; Agassi next

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. (AP) — High school senior Andy Roddick will get to meet idol Andre Agassi this weekend in the Ericsson Open. The only hitch is that Roddick has to play him, too.

The 17-year-old Floridian earned his first victory as a tennis professional Thursday, beating Fernando Vicente 6-4, 6-0 before a small crowd on stadium court.

Roddick will likely be back on the same court when he faces Agassi in the second round Saturday.

"I think the stands will be a bit fuller," Roddick said. "He's been a hero of mine since I was small. Even when I pass him in the halls here, it's like seeing a superstar celebrity."

Pitchers picking up the slack for Iowa

■ The Hawkeyes open the Big Ten season at home against Illinois this weekend.

By Greg Wallace
The Daily Iowan

The roles have been reversed on the Iowa baseball team.

Last year, the Hawkeyes' hitters struggled any and all comers, but the pitching staff struggled to get opposing batters out. Now, the hitters are struggling — but the pitchers have picked up their slack.

Iowa (5-12) coach Scott Broghamer hopes his team can put all the pieces together this weekend for the Hawkeyes' Big Ten opener at Illinois (9-6). The teams will play a single game today at 4:05 p.m., a doubleheader Saturday, and a single game Sunday at 1:05 p.m.

Matt Holst/The Daily Iowan
Matt Gruber is one of the Hawkeye pitchers that has carried the squad early on this season.

"If we have some guys swing the bats, we can compete with a lot of people," Broghamer said. "What we have to do is get a consistent effort every day. We're trying not to get too excited about things or too down about things. If you get good pitching and defense, that'll keep you in games. The hitting will come and go."

The bats are showing signs of waking from their season-long slumber, which has seen Iowa hit only .251 as a team, thirty points lower than their opposition. Right fielder Alex Dvorsky hit a monster home run onto Hawkins Drive in Wednesday's 7-0 win over Mount Saint Claire.

He said that the team's booming bats made pitchers take notice and hinder the Hawkeyes' progress, but the team is close to solving the puzzle.

"There are two guys on the team who had a pretty good year," Dvorsky said. "It's tough, now that everyone knows who you are, and they start to pitch you different. It's just a matter of time before we get into our groove and start making our adjustments."

Oddly, the two teams have already met this season. The Illini beat Iowa, 6-2, March 13 in the Jacksonville Kennel Club Classic, in Jacksonville, Fla. The Hawkeyes said that their previous experience will come in handy this weekend.

"They're a lot like us," Dvorsky said. "They're known for their bats and have a few good pitchers. We know what to do defensively to pitch those guys, and what to expect as hitters."

Chad Blackwell, 1-3 with a 4.94 ERA, will start today's game for Iowa. He says that it's within reason to expect a solid performance from the team this weekend.

"They're beatable. They're definitely beatable," Blackwell said. "I think we should be able to at least split with them."

HAWKEYE ROAD BRIEFS

Men's Golf

This weekend: The UI men's golf team travels to Pottsboro, Texas, to compete in the Dr. Pepper Invitational. The event gets underway Saturday with 36 holes and concludes with a single round of 18 holes Sunday.

On Iowa: Coach Terry Anderson's squad has competed twice so far this spring, finishing fourth at the North Alabama Classic and seventh at the inaugural playing of the Kauai Collegiate Cup on the island of Kauai in Hawaii. Iowa will play the same five golfers from the Kauai event, Matt Stutzman, Adam Turner, Jason Wombacher, Mike Tapper and Bo Anderson.

On the field: The competition at the Dr. Pepper will be a good preview for the Big Ten Championships later this season. The field will include the entire Big Ten with the exception of Ohio State and conference favorite Northwestern. Regional rivals Kent State and Toledo round out the teams competing.

Iowa's key: Anderson has made it a team goal to play consistently at all levels during tourney play. In the team's first two competitions poor rounds by only a few members kept the team from finishing higher. All five golfers will have to start well and maintain their levels of play in order the Iowa to finish well.

Coach's comment: "Our top three players need to play up to expectations if we're going to be successful this season," said Anderson. "This is a major tournament and we need to finish well to make a name for ourselves this season."

—Todd Brommelkamp

Men's Track

This week: The team is going to split up in competition this weekend. Steele will be the lone Hawkeye heading to Stanford Friday and Saturday to compete in the 10,000-meter run. According to coach Larry Wiczorek, that meet will showcase some of the best 10,000-meter runners in the country. The rest of the team will be heading to the Purdue Invitational to compete Thursday and Friday.

Catching up: The track team have been busy bees that last two weeks. Jeremy Allen and Stetson Steele competed in the NCAA Indoor meet two weeks ago, both placed in the top eight earning All-American honors. Last week, the team competed in the Willie Williams Classic and saw Arno van der Westhuizen pick up the only first place finish for the Hawkeyes. He won the hammer throw and provisionally qualified for the NCAA outdoor meet in the event.

Who to watch: Steele could get a provisional qualifying time down at Stanford. He always seems to step up against tough competition so look for him to make some noise in the 10,000. Iowa's throwers have been making great strides this season. The trio of Allen, van der Westhuizen and Chris Cassata all had solid performances last week, so look for them to keep up the good work.

Coach's comment: "We're going to be taking a lot of guys up to Purdue so we hope it will be a productive meet," Wiczorek said. "We had really excellent weather there last year, it's a good meet. Hopefully we can get Steele back into the NCAA meet in the 10,000."

Note: Star sprinter Tim Dodge will be redshirting this year's outdoor competition to concentrate on spring football. Dodge, who returned punts last year, will be making the move from receiver to cornerback this spring.

—Jeremy Schnitker

Men's tennis

This week: Iowa (4-6, 0-0 Big Ten) travels to Penn State (8-4, 0-2 Big Ten) and Ohio State (6-5, 1-1 Big Ten) to open Big Ten competition. The Hawkeyes compete in Pennsylvania Saturday at noon and in Ohio at 1 p.m. Sunday.

Last year: Iowa defeated both teams in Iowa City. Iowa downed the Nittany Lions, 5-2, and the Buckeyes, 4-3.

Last week: Over spring break, Iowa lost to the University of Texas Arlington, 4-3, and won one of three dual matches in the Rice Invitational in Texas. Iowa lost to Rice, 5-2, beat West Virginia, 6-1, and lost to Columbia, 4-3. Coach Steve Houghton said Iowa's competitors over break are comparable to mid-range Big Ten teams.

Standout statistic: Tyler Cleveland went 4-0 on the spring break trip to improve his individual record to 9-1 on the spring season. Cleveland, ranked No. 26 in the country, plays in Iowa's No. 1 position.

Iowa's key: To come out strong and take the doubles point in both duals. Iowa also needs to continue to fill in for injured starters. Eric Kozlowski is expected to reenter Iowa's lineup within the next couple of weeks. He has sat out due to a stress fracture in his foot.

Coach's comment: "They are both good, solid teams," Houghton said. "It will be a long, hard, exhausting trip with a lot of travel. But we should be well prepared to play Big Ten teams."

Orangemen see red, late rally sparks MSU

Michigan State went on a 17-0 run to end the game against Syracuse.

By Harry Atkins
Associated Press

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. (AP) — A halftime tirade by Mateen Cleaves got Michigan State turned around and kept the Spartans on track for a second straight trip to the Final Four.

The top-seeded Spartans, trailing by as many as 14, roared back to beat Syracuse 75-58 on Thursday night in the Midwest Regional semifinals, scoring 17 straight points over the last 5:54.

"I had to pick up the pieces at halftime when I got to the locker room," Michigan State coach Tom Izzo said. "Mateen did most of the challenging. He did a heck of a job in talking to them. He helps do my job when I'm not there."

Cleaves, who returned for his senior year with the express hope of winning a national championship, felt the Spartans were rushing their shots, not sticking with what they had done in practice. "At halftime, I didn't think we were playing hard," Cleaves said. "I don't mind guys missing shots. I don't mind if things aren't going right. But if you're not playing hard, then I'm going to get in your face."

The Spartans (29-7) will play the UCLA-Iowa State winner on Saturday night for a trip to the Final Four in Indianapolis.

Syracuse (26-6) looked ready to run the Spartans right out of The Palace, to the dismay of a highly partisan Michigan State crowd. But Cleaves backed up his halftime talk with some championship style play early in the second half.

"They came out in the second half and made some big 3s," said Syracuse point guard Jason Hart, who had 11 points and 10 assists. "We held them off as long as we could."

Cleaves, scoreless in the first half, had 10 points — most of them early in the second half — to get the Spartans rolling. Morris Peterson had 16 of his 21 points in the second half.

Then Charlie Bell — who scored nine of his 12 points in the second half — put the Orangemen away.

Allen Griffin led Syracuse with 14 points. Etan Thomas, the shot-blocker the Spartans feared most, had seven points, six rebounds — and just two blocks.

The Spartans, who have won the Big Ten championship three straight years, trailed by 10 at halftime and were behind 40-26 after just 1:04 gone in the second half.

But the Spartans had been behind before. They needed a second-half comeback to beat Utah on Saturday in the second round.

SMU suspends two basketball players

All-conference guard Jeryl Sasser is one of the players who may be kicked out of school for "inappropriate behavior" at a hotel party.

By Alex Lyda
Associated Press

DALLAS — Two SMU basketball players face possible expulsion from school for their alleged shenanigans during a hotel party two weeks ago, hours after the team was ousted from the Western Athletic Conference tournament.

Citing student privacy laws, SMU athletic director Jim Copeland refused to identify the two players, but a police report identified them as Jeryl Sasser, a 6-6 first-team all-conference guard, and Renaldo Bratton, a 6-foot reserve guard. Neither returned telephone messages left by The Associated Press.

Sasser was SMU's leading scorer this season. Both players are juniors.

SMU described what it called "inappropriate and disruptive behavior involving a few students" in the early morning of March 10. Two members of the SMU Spirit Squad also were suspended.

An SMU cheerleader told police in Fresno, Calif., site of the WAC tournament, that the two players

"touched her through her clothes with their hands." She did not want to file charges, the police report says.

The cheerleader, who wasn't identified, appeared intoxicated when police talked to her, the report said.

The university is investigating possible violations of SMU's code of conduct, including documentation of under-age drinking. The Fresno report said a 21-year-old player gave vodka to a 20-year-old squad member.

The incident occurred hours after the Mustangs were eliminated from the WAC tournament by Hawaii 87-82. A Fresno Police Department report said Sasser and Bratton were questioned about incidents that took place at a party in their hotel room.

Several players and cheerleaders spent the hours after the loss drinking at the Radisson Hotel in downtown Fresno, according to the police report.

"I don't know anything right now. ... I just know they're doing an investigation right now. My situation is in the hands of the Lord," Sasser told The Dallas Morning News on Wednesday.

SMU spokesman Bob Wright confirmed Thursday that three investigations are under way — one by Fresno police, one by the team and one by SMU's office of student affairs.

Boilermakers make clock strike midnight

Purdue is one win away from the Final Four after its win over upstart Gonzaga.

By Bob Baum
Associated Press

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — The NCAA tournament has a new sentimental favorite — scowling old Gene Keady.

The 64-year-old Purdue coach is one victory from his first trip to the Final Four after his Purdue Boilermakers ended the tournament run of those darlings of college basketball, the Gonzaga Bulldogs, 75-66 Thursday night in the semifinals of the West Regional.

Keady said that, obviously, the Final Four is the goal, but for his team, not for any personal reasons.

"I don't care if I fill my resume out," he said. "I've had a great career. I'd rather make a 20-foot putt against my buddies."

Still, one more victory and the Boilermakers will be headed to Indianapolis, and a shot at the national championship just a short drive from the Purdue campus.

"It's just amazing to know that we have one more game — 40 minutes — and we'll be going home to Indianapolis," Purdue's Brian Cardinal said.

The Zags were done in by basketball basics — defense and rebounding.

Purdue slowed the game to a half-court pace and pestered Gonzaga's guards into a miserable shooting night.

Jaraan Cornell, whose season-long shooting slump came to an end when the NCAA tournament began, scored 18 points for the sixth-seeded Boilermakers (24-9), who play the LSU-Wisconsin winner in Saturday's regional final.

In Keady's 20 seasons at Purdue, the Boilermakers have been to the round of 16 five times, including the last three years. But this will be just their second appearance in a regional final in that span. Purdue lost to Duke in the Southeast final in 1994.

Carson Cunningham added 14 points, Greg McQuay scored 11 and Cardinal had 10 for Purdue. Cardinal had eight rebounds, and Cornell and McQuay grabbed seven apiece as Purdue dominated the boards 44-33, 20-13 on the offensive end, and the margin was a lot bigger most of the night.

"That's been one of our strengths all year — offensive rebounding," Cardinal said. "And we decided to go out every game and go to the boards as hard as we can, because we know we have an edge on most teams."

Casey Calvary scored 20 and Axel Dench 14 for No. 10 seed Gonzaga (26-9). The Bulldogs' Richie Frahm scored 14 but nearly all came late in the game. He was 1-for-5 from 3-point range. Matt Santangelo, like Frahm in his final collegiate game, was 4-for-18 from the field, 1-for-7 on 3-pointers.

"Our game plan was just to make it as hard as possible for Frahm and Santangelo to get looks," Cornell said. "They are a great 3-point shooting ball team. Our main thing was to just meet them at the 3-point line and try to push them out and make them work as hard as we could."

Santangelo's cold shooting night mirrored the one he had in Gonzaga's West regional final loss to eventual champion Connecticut last year.

"Everything was just a little bit short," he said. "That's just the way it goes."

Gonzaga, a small Jesuit college in Spokane, Wash., captured the heart of basketball fans across the country last season with its run to the West finals. This year, the Bulldogs were at it again, until they were shut down by the Boilermakers.

"Well, it's one heck of a ride once again," Gonzaga coach Mark Few said.

With four seniors on the team, the end was a severe jolt to the "Zags."

"After we gave our little tribute to the crowd at the end of the game and we ran off the floor and up the ramp, it hit me — this is the last time I'd feel any of this," Santangelo said. "It's very emotional. It's been a wonderful run for all of us."

Gonzaga made several runs at Purdue.

Down 61-45 with six minutes to play, the Bulldogs scored eight in a row, the last six by Calvary, to cut it to 61-53 with 3:35 remaining.

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — Wisconsin is still winning ugly, with the plodding but productive Badgers beating LSU 61-48 on Thursday night to make it an all Big-Ten final in the West Regional.

The Badgers (21-13) will meet Purdue (24-9) on Saturday for a spot in the Final Four. The Boilermakers beat Gonzaga 75-66 in the other semifinal.

Coupled with Michigan State's win over Syracuse in the Midwest, the Big Ten has three teams in the final eight.

Jon Bryant led Wisconsin with 16 points. Stromile Swift and Jabari Smith each scored 12 for LSU (28-6).

LSU, which used its speed and frontline duo of Swift and Smith to beat Southeast Missouri State and Texas in the first two rounds, hit a wall against a Wisconsin team that forced its deliberate, halfcourt offense and man defense on the frustrated Tigers.

The 48 points were the fewest scored by LSU this season. The previous low was 57 in a loss to Florida in January.

Wisconsin scored the final 11 points of the first half to take a 22-14 lead. LSU went scoreless over the final 5:03.

Wisconsin took twice as many shots as LSU in the first half and the Tigers had as many turnovers as points. LSU finished with 23 turnovers to Wisconsin's 9.

It got uglier in the second half. An offensive rebound basket by Lamont Roland got LSU within 26-18, but the Badgers used a 10-0 run to take a 36-18 lead with 13:44 left. Bryant's 3-pointer got the run going and Duany Duany's 3-pointer ended it. Bryant also scored on a layup and Maurice Linton added a jumper from just inside the arc.

Wisconsin advanced despite missing 18 of its first 23 shots and shooting 38 percent. But while the Badgers were having trouble scoring in the game's first 15 minutes, LSU was having a difficult time holding onto the ball.

The turnovers also kept the ball away from Swift and Smith, the Tigers' leading scorers. The pair got off just three shots between them in the first half and Swift finished with just five shots.

Swift's only attempt in the first half was a 3-pointer for the game's opening basket at the 17:36 mark.

The eighth-seeded Badgers beat Fresno State 66-56 in the first round and upset top-seeded Arizona 66-59 in the second.

Controversial 'Fastskin' bodysuit to get competitive debut

LONDON (AP) — A controversial neck-to-ankle swimsuit promising faster times is expected to be worn for the first time in official competition this weekend in Australia. Speedo International, maker of the "Fastskin" suit, gave the go-ahead

Thursday for Australian swimmers Michael Klim and Grant Hackett to unveil the new swimwear Sunday.

Klim will swim in Sydney and Hackett will compete in Queensland.

Speedo spokeswoman Gina Curry said the company decided to launch the suit Sunday "rather than hold off closer to the Olympics" partly because of the publicity — and controversy — generated over the past 10 days.

The Australian Olympic Committee has asked for a hearing in the Court of Arbitration for Sports prior to Australia's Olympic trials in May.

The bodysuits have been sanctioned by FINA, the world governing body of swimming. But the AOC wants a ruling to ensure swimmers who wear the suits in the Olympics are not subject to legal challenges from swimmers who don't have them available because of sponsorship deals.

Edmonds gone, Beltre staying

The Dodgers personnel relaxed after signing Adrian Beltre to a three-year deal.

The Associated Press

Jim Edmonds finally is leaving Anaheim, Adrian Beltre is staying in Los Angeles, and Al Martin made a difficult return to the San Diego Padres clubhouse.

After months of speculation, the Angels sent their two-time Gold Glove outfielder Edmonds to the St. Louis Cardinals on Thursday for 18-game winner Kent Bottenfield and second baseman Adam Kennedy.

"When it started to become apparent that we might be able to fill two of our needs, it was such an attractive deal that it just made a lot of sense to us," Angels GM Bill Stoneman said.

Starting pitching has been a major question mark for the Angels, who lost ace Chuck Finley to the Cleveland Indians via free agency during the offseason. Bottenfield gives them a proven starter.

Bottenfield went 18-7 with a 3.97 ERA last season, and made the NL All-Star team. He entered last year having won just 18 big-league games.

Edmonds hit .250 with five homers and 23 RBIs in just 55 games last season after being sidelined until August while recovering from surgery on his right shoulder.

"When you get an opportunity to get a guy of Edmond's stature, you can't pass it up," Cardinals GM Walt Jocketty said.

Beltre agreed to a $5.05 million, three-year contract with the Dodgers, ending a three-month dispute and assuring he'll remain as the team's third baseman.

"It was my first choice to be here, and I appreciate that I'm going to stay here," Beltre said.

The agreement calls for the players' association to dismiss the grievance filed against baseball seeking free agency for Beltre.

Commissioner Bud Selig ruled in December that the Dodgers signed Beltre before his 16th birthday in 1994, and fraudulently altered documents to make the signing appear legal under baseball rules.

"I feel as if a major cloud has been lifted," Dodgers chairman Bob Daly said.

At Peoria, Ariz., Martin returned to the Padres for the first time since being jailed Monday night and went 2-for-2 as San Diego beat Arizona 5-4.

Martin, charged with assault in a domestic violence case, singled to right in the first inning and hit a ground-rule double to right-center in the third, both off Armando Reynoso, before leaving the game.

ROWING

stronger (than the teams in Texas) because they have been around."

Due to the higher level of competition Iowa face on the water Sunday, the races should serve as a good evaluating marker of where the team stands for the spring season.

"It will be a great test to see where we're at," senior Amy Stout said. "Michigan (No. 6), Michigan State (No. 8), Wisconsin and us were all close in the fall. We're really looking forward to (this weekend). We are confident we can beat Wisconsin again and we have high hopes of making nationals and beating Michigan and Michigan State (in the future)."

The competition will not only be the first of the Hawkeyes' home meets this season, but it also marks Iowa's return to racing on Lake MacBride.

Iowa competed on the Coralville Reservoir last season.

"It is a much better race site," Kowal said of Lake MacBride. "No one can be on motorboats there. It is a good rowing venue."

the adjustments you have to make," Iowa coach Gayle Blevins said. "That's where we've already had such a broad range. That helps us in getting ahead. We have a good feel of what we need to do to get better."

The tough, long road schedule also allowed the team to come together and learn more about each other and what they will have to do to win.

"I definitely think you can't play in that type of atmosphere alone," freshman Jessica Bashor said. "Every time we travel we learn and get closer."

Iowa will be looking to earn its first championship in its own tournament this weekend, after falling to Northern Illinois in last year's inaugural title game, 6-2.

But three other hungry and hot teams will be vying for the championship as well.

Eastern Illinois started the season 1-13 with three of those losses coming against Iowa, but the Panthers have won seven of their last eight games.

UW-Green Bay will make its second appearance in the Hawkeye Classic. The Phoenix fell to Iowa, 5-1, last year. This time they come into Iowa City off to their best start in school history at 12-0. UW-Green Bay's success has been attributed largely to Debbie Kind. The senior pitcher has surrendered just four runs in seven games.

While Iowa is undefeated lifetime against its first two opponents, the Hawkeyes are 3-19 against Creighton. The Jaybirds' top pitcher Shelli Mellegaard is 6-3 and posts a 2.63 ERA. Offensively, Marie Gieron leads the Creighton attack with 20 hits, two homeruns and 10 RBI.

Iowa is scheduled to play UW-Green Bay at 1 p.m. and Creighton at 3 p.m. on Saturday. Sunday, Iowa and Creighton will play a noon contest. Following this game will be the championship game at 2 p.m. The consolation game is at 4 p.m.

played well and learned from the level of competition it played.

The losses not only affected Iowa's win-loss record but also caused the teams' ranking to fall 20 points. However, unlike the NCAA seeding process, the rankings do not take into account the level of competition teams play.

"It looks like we're back to being the underdogs," said Wardlaw. Wardlaw said he looks for this weekend's matches to be a toss up depending on how well the Hawkeyes play.

Despite a 10-1 record* against the Nittany Lions, they remain a mystery this season. The Lions have finished low in the conference standings in recent years, but Penn State's No. 1 and 2 players were redshirted last season with injuries and also feature a very talented young group of players.

Ohio State will be a different story. Wardlaw said he believes Ohio State to be the second best team in the Big Ten behind perennial favorite Northwestern.

"Ohio State is very strong at the top of their lineup and solid at the bottom," said Wardlaw, "but we'll compete with both teams just fine."

Wardlaw said that relative to past seasons the Hawkeyes are in good position at this point in the season. Singles play has been strong for the Hawkeyes, with Erica Johnson stepping up her level of play lately and Shera Wiegler, Toni Neykova and Natalya Dawaf continuing to anchor the top portion of the Iowa lineup.

Wardlaw also was pleased with the performance of his doubles teams, sweeping a very good Tar Heel team, 3-0.

"The hardest part about this season is getting a bearing on where we're at," said Wardlaw. "Our competition has just been flat out good."

Sutton survives Sawgrass, takes lead

■ Hal Sutton was the only player to shoot under 70 at the Players Championship.

By Doug Ferguson
Associated Press

PONTE VEDRA BEACH, Fla. — Pants whipping, eyes weary, Hal Sutton trudged off the 18th green with a one-stroke lead in the Players Championship.

His 3-under 69 was the worst score to lead after the first round since the tournament moved to the diabolical TPC at Sawgrass 19 years ago.

Only 13 players broke par Thursday. Twenty-two players signed for an 80 or worse.

Not many smiled. "This is what I think makes this a major," said Sutton, his face etched with exhaustion after spending nearly five hours on a course that chewed up the best players in the world.

As for that talk from Colin Montgomerie that everyone is playing for second if Tiger Woods gets off to a good start? Well, Woods was only two strokes back after his first double bogey in 223 holes, but no one conceded him anything.

"This golf course has got all the challenges in the world," Sutton said. "I find it difficult just to manage my own game, much less worry about what somebody else's game is doing."

Sutton figured out when to attack and when to take his lumps on a cool, blustery day in which the players averaged 4.28 strokes over par. Two-time U.S. Open champion Lee Janzen, no stranger to demanding conditions, was among seven players at 70. Woods, tied for the lead after 16 holes, hit into the water on the island-green 17th for double bogey and had a 71.

Omar Uresti was at 2 under through 16 holes when play was suspended by darkness with 21 players still on the course.

The Players Championship isn't a major, despite its $6 million purse and all-world field. Still, most players consider it similar to one, and it wasn't hard to see why.

"Major championships ... you've got to be patient when conditions get difficult on a great golf course," Sutton said.

And like a major, there were plenty of horror stories.

—Craig Stadler had a double-hit out of the rough on No. 12 that led to a triple bogey. He made another one on the 16th when he chunked a wedge about 4 feet, then got so fed up that he swatted his ball over the green and into the water.

At least it wasn't moving, like what John Daly did in the U.S. Open last year.

"I did a few things I've never done," Stadler said.

—Chris Perry had a chance to tie for the lead with an eagle putt on No. 11. Four putts later, he walked off with a bogey.

—Defending champion David Duval bogeyed five of eight holes and had a 75.

"It's not that great of a score," he said. "I'm not particularly pleased. But at the same time, it's not terrible on a day like this. It's a long race."

It could be a short week for Sergio Garcia (82) and Phil Mickelson (83), among the nearly two dozen players who couldn't break 80.

"I'm very happy to get off the course," Billy Mayfair said after his 70. He was the only player to reach 4 under in the first round.

Woods, meanwhile, kept one streak alive. He still hasn't broken 70 in 13 rounds on the Stadium Course, although he had few complaints.

Jordan says NBA trying to create superstars

CHICAGO (AP) — Michael Jordan says the NBA is trying to create stars who haven't earned that status.

"When I was playing it was never done," Jordan, now part owner of the Washington Wizards, told the Chicago Sun-Times. "You didn't create Magic Johnson or Larry Bird. They created themselves."

Although Jordan led North Carolina to the 1982 NCAA title and then won a gold medal at the 1984 Olympics, he said he still surprised people when he came into the league.

"When I came out, no one knew. I had to prove myself," he told the newspaper for Thursday's editions. "Kobe Bryant came out of high school and everybody had already projected him as such a great player."

Players like Bryant, one of the stars of the Los Angeles Lakers, are given success before they surprise anybody, making the risk of failure far greater, Jordan said.

He is impressed by some players in the league, including the Detroit Pistons' Grant Hill, but said the NBA is making a mistake by pushing Hill and others as the next Michael Jordan.

"Endorsement-wise, financially, that's fine and good," said Jordan, who plans to stop endorsing products when his current contracts expire. "But they need to portray him in his individuality."

Jordan said players such as Bryant and Vince Carter of the Toronto Raptors still have much work to do on the court.

"Kobe, he's got to continue to grow," Jordan said.

He said that Bryant is fortunate that he's being coached by Phil Jackson, Jordan's mentor with the Chicago Bulls.

"He'll listen to Phil," Jordan said. Jordan said Bryant should ignore Carter's offensive moves, which he said are dazzling.
