Group claims it set dental lab fire

In response to the racist events of the past 10 days, the community will hold a rally on April 11.

By Ryan Foley
The Daily Iowan

The group that has recently targeted UI minority dental students claimed responsibility for intentionally setting a Thursday morning fire in a Dental Science Building laboratory, said UI officials.

A dental student received an e-mail in which the group said it caused the fire, said Ann Rhodes, the UI vice president for university relations.

The e-mail was under investigation by UI Public Safety, she said.

Rhodes said she did not know whether the student who received the e-mail was a member of a minority group or if the e-mail was threatening in tone.

The fire broke out just before 10 a.m., when a lab coat apparently was ignited by a Bunsen burner, said Steve Parrott, the director of university relations.

The fire was put out by a dental student who used a fire extinguisher, and nobody was injured, Parrott said. The Iowa City Fire Department responded to an alarm, but the fire had already been put out by the time firefighters got there, he said.

The group claiming responsibility for the fire goes by four names — Minortyrid (sic), Minoritygetout, the Committee of Minority Flight and Minorityout — none of which investigators have found to be recognized hate groups.

UI officials said the incident was under investigation and were not releasing any additional information on the matter Thursday evening. They also would not speculate whether the incident was the responsibility of someone within the College of Dentistry.

A fourth-year dental student, speaking on the condition of anonymity, said a lab coat catching on fire in a dental lab is not uncommon — in fact, it happens at least once a year. What's unusual, she said, is that nobody was wearing the coat.

The incident is the latest in a series of events targeting minorities in the dental school during the past 10 days.

Last week, two e-mails sent to faculty and students in the dental

Bluder to take up women's hoops reins

The UI is expected to announce its selection of the Drake coach at a press conference today.

By Lisa Colonna
The Daily Iowan

After a six-week search, Iowa will announce its hiring of Drake women's basketball coach Lisa Bluder today, according to Des Moines TV stations.

A press conference is scheduled for today to make a formal announcement and introduce Bluder as Angie Lee's replacement. The press conference will take place at 1 p.m. in the Big Ten-Iowa Room, Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

Bluder was unavailable for comment, and UI officials said they would not discuss the topic until today's press conference.

Lee left Iowa with an 84-60 record and two consecutive losing seasons. She resigned as coach on Feb. 28.

Bluder was a finalist for the Iowa position five years ago, when the university hired Lee. A native of Marion, she is expecting her second child on April 21.

Iowa offered Tulsa coach Lisa Stockton the position, but she instead accepted a six-year contract extension offer at Tulsa. Stockton said Iowa was a "great opportunity" but not the right match.

Bluder, despite not being Iowa's first choice, has established herself as one of the top coaches in the country.

She just concluded her 10th season at Drake with a record of 23-7. The Bulldogs also clinched their fourth Missouri Valley Conference championship in six years and made a first-round appearance in the NCAA Tournament, losing to Clemson, 64-50.

Bluder entered the 1999-00 season with 333 wins in her 15-year career and a .712 winning percentage, 27th among active NCAA Division I coaches. She ranked 50th in career victories among active coaches.

"I worry about my players," Bluder said about her coaching style in the Bulldogs' media guide. "They are the likelihood of what I do. I relate to them because I remember some of the things they are going through. They know they can come to me with anything."

"At the same time, I consider myself a strict disciplinarian. I don't have a lot of rules, but I do have a lot of expectations."

Bluder came to Drake in 1990. Since then, the Bulldogs have competed in nine MVC tournaments, reaching the semifinals six times. Drake won its first MVC tournament in 1994-95 under Bluder. In 1995,

SAS brings sweatshop action to Coleman's lawn

The anti-sweatshop group marches to President Coleman's house to invite her to a Jessup "sleep-over."

By Michael Chapman
The Daily Iowan

Members of UI Students Against Sweatshops decided to bring the issue of sweatshop labor closer to home for UI President Mary Sue Coleman Thursday afternoon.

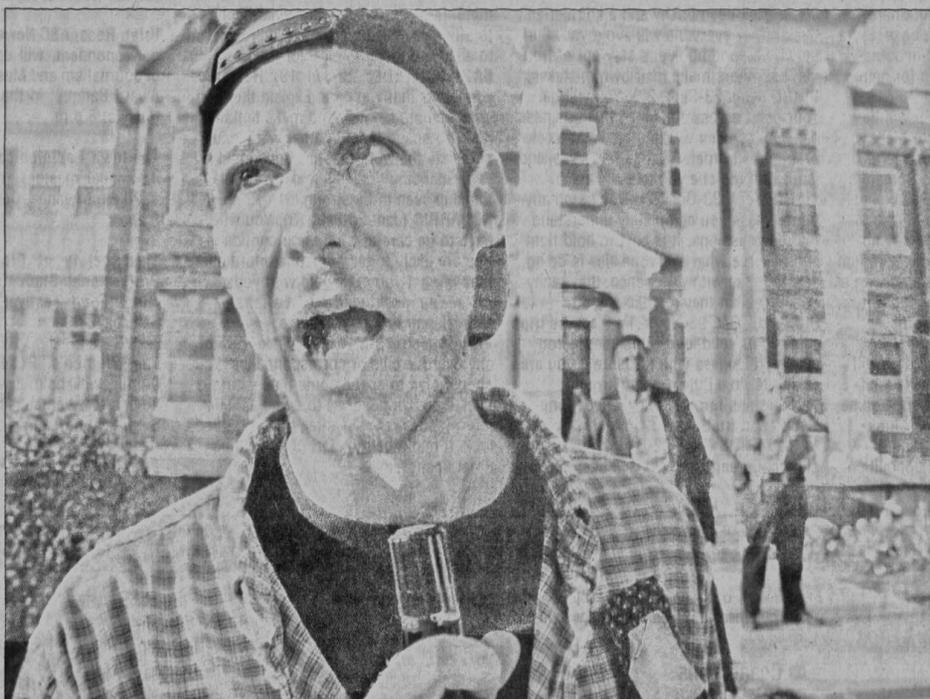

Approximately 250 protesters marched from Jessup Hall to Coleman's house on Church Street, where they were met by four UI Public Safety officers and Public Safety Director Chuck Green. Several members of SAS attempted to approach the residence but were stopped and threatened with arrest by the officers.

Members of the group said they are faced with the issue of sweatshop labor 24 hours a day by living in Jessup Hall, while Coleman is able to "leave the issue behind" when she goes home at night. This idea gave the group a desire "to take a stroll to Mary Sue's," said Ned Bertz, an SAS member and UI graduate student.

"We wait for her every night at 5 to come out and walk past us, and every night she goes out the back door," he said. "This isn't something you can forget when you leave your day job; this is a serious problem that is 24-7."

Coleman said she was not able to comment on the protest at her house because she was at a lecture when it occurred.

Bertz said Coleman could possibly be getting some new neighbors in the future as well. Several ideas being discussed by SAS include either a shantytown or a mock "Sweatshop City" in the area in front of Coleman's house, he said.

Parking cards not that easy

The UI has chosen a new parking-card manufacturer after a wave of faulty cards.

By Christoph Trappe
The Daily Iowan

Two months after the implementation of UI student parking debit cards, the university is still working out the glitches.

The parking cards, which give preferred rates to students during certain times and can be charged to the student's U-bill, don't work properly at all times, said Linda Noble, the manager of parking services in UI parking and transportation.

"The cards mostly work well," she said. "But there are still some problems, and we are trying a new company to make the cards now."

The UI is changing from the Toledo Ticket Co. to the Southland Printing Company, Noble said.

"This is definitely a costly move," said Dave Ricketts, the director of parking and transportation.

Originally, the UI paid 18 cents per card; this will increase to 56 cents per card, said Jeff Rahn, the manager of parking facilities operations. There are no plans to increase the cost of the cards for students because of the increased cost to the UI.

The original parking cards seem to have problems with the magnetic strip on the back, said Brad Grupe, a parking facilities mechanic.

More durable cards will replace the old ones within the next month, Rahn said; the old cards will be honored until they run out.

Despite occasional problems, there are still plenty of advantages for the parking card, Ricketts said, including the cheaper student rates and the ability to charge parking fees to a U-bill.

"There have been three times in the last two weeks when the card didn't work," said UI senior Chris Blunt, who has purchased two $50 cards since the end of February. "Usually, it's very convenient, especially because I can charge it to my U-bill, and my parents pay that."

Private firm leaps ahead in mapping of genome

Celera Genomics has completed the decoding of a single human's DNA.

By Paul Recer
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A private company mapping the human genetic blueprint said Thursday it has completed a major step: Decoding all of the DNA pieces that make up the genetic pattern of a single human being.

The milestone puts the company, Celera Genomics of Rockville, Md., far ahead of an international government effort to map the human genome using a different method.

"We've now completed the gene-sequence plan of one human being," said Craig Venter, the chief scientist for the company. He said the human being was an unidentified male, adding, "By the end of next week, we will have finished the gene sequence for a female."

There are approximately 3 billion DNA subunits in virtually every human cell, containing roughly 100,000 genes. The gene sequencing done thus far lines up small segments of the DNA. Assembly of the entire genome will involve putting these segments in proper order.

This process, Venter said, will take several weeks. But, he said, the Celera work is far ahead of a similar effort by the government-funded Human Genome Project.

"We don't want to declare absolute victory yet, but call me in three or four weeks, when it is all assembled," Venter said.

Francis Collins, the Human Genome Project's chief, said, "I'm happy to hear that Celera has completed this part of their business plan. We look forward to hearing how the assembly process goes and ultimately seeing the sequence made available" to the public.

Venter said the ordered sequence of the human genes will not be released to the public until it has been completely assembled.

"I don't believe a genome is done until there is an attempt to identify the genes and the linear sequence along all of the chromosomes," he said. "We will not have that completed until later this year."

The announcement by Celera

Ruling leaves city smoke-check free

■ The City Council ponders giving tobacco-regulation jurisdiction to local authorities.

By Chao Xiong
The Daily Iowan

Checks on local tobacco sales to minors have been temporarily suspended while Congress decides whether the Food and Drug Administration can regulate tobacco sales.

On March 21, the Supreme Court ruled 5-4 that Congress had not given the FDA authority to regulate tobacco as an addictive drug and could no longer do so until given the proper authority by the body.

"I think everyone's waiting to see what happens in Congress," said Robert Gass, an Iowa City police detective. "Congress could turn around and vote on it tomorrow, or it can vote on it in one year."

In reaction to the court's ruling, Iowa City City Councilor Ross Wilburn Tuesday asked the council to consider giving tobacco-regulation rights to local authorities.

"It's important to try to figure out if we can keep that authority and keep tobacco use as an adult decision," he said. "I wanted to get the wheels rolling now so when those decisions are made, we can decide whether we do want to take action or not."

The council is waiting for further reports from City Attorney Eleanor Dilkes, said Mayor Ernie Lehman, adding that he doesn't consider it a "tremendous urgency," although the council seems to support Wilburn's request.

"I think we should move forward as soon as possible," said Councilor Steven Kanner. "It's probably our No. 1 drug problem in the United States."

The city has participated in the FDA's tobacco-compliance program since April 1998, during which the agency reimbursed the city for expenses associated with tobacco checks, Gass said.

State and city ordinances give local authorities the right to continue carrying out checks and sting operations, he said, only without funding from the FDA.

Under the FDA's program, the city was required to check at least 14 establishments monthly, said Andrew Matthews, an assistant city attorney.

Sting operations will most likely continue, but to a lesser extent, he said.

Regular checks keep employees "vigilant" and "aware," but fewer won't reduce their carding of customers, said Thomas Connolly, the manager of the Tobacco Bowl, 111 S. Dubuque St.

Ethan Fry/The Daily Iowan

City News employee Nick Jones sells cigarettes Thursday afternoon.

Store checks alone are not "very effective" and should be utilized with community-education programs, said Eileen Fisher, the chairwoman of the Johnson County Tobacco-Free Coalition.

Studies show that 37 percent of high school students nationwide smoke, she said.

Funding for local regulation could "theoretically" be drawn from revenues from the city's approximately 100 tobacco permits, which are renewed annually and bring in between $10,000 to $12,000 per year, Fisher said.

"It's not a big budget item," she said. "It's just a matter of the community having the will and wanting this enforced."

Powwow to wow thousands at Carver-Hawkeye

■ The event, which will include participants from the U.S. and Canada, is a cultural showcase.

By Kate McGeown
The Daily Iowan

This morning, UI graduate student Tracy Peterson will be hard at work transforming Carver-Hawkeye Arena into the setting for an American Indian extravaganza.

Traditional dancers from all over the United States and Canada will meet together in the arena this weekend for the largest-ever UI Powwow.

"We want to share our cultural ways, our dancing and our music," said Peterson, who is the coordinator for the 11th annual event. "It's a small aspect of American culture, but it's an important one."

Nicole Wynos, a UI sophomore, said American Indians from every state will be represented at the Powwow, including the Meskwaki tribe from Iowa.

"Last year, more than 7,000 people came to the event. This year we hope to get more than 9,000," Peterson said.

"It's one of the largest events on campus, yet it is run by one of the smallest minority organizations," he said, referring to the UI American Indian Student Association, the group behind the powwow.

Powwows are popular social events for American Indians across the country, giving people the chance to get together to socialize and participate in traditional dancing and music.

Peterson sees a highlight of the event as being the Grand Entry, when all the dancers come into the arena at once. This will occur today at 7 p.m. and at three other times during the weekend.

"You see an array of colors from all the costumes," he said.

The UI Powwow will also feature American Indian arts and crafts, as well as traditional foods such as fry bread, American Indian tacos and traditional stews. There are more native vendors this year than ever before, said UI junior Erin Diggins.

Participants say the purpose of the powwow is to promote their heritage for UI students.

"Powwow is part of our culture. A lot of us live far away from our homes. It's a time to be around things we grew up with," Diggins said.

She also said it was an important way in which American Indians could honor their elders and traditions.

"We don't often see many other Indians here in Iowa," Diggins said, welcoming the chance to meet others at the powwow. "My relatives often sing and dance, so I grew up with it."

Students not of American Indian origin have also helped organize the project, and Peterson welcomes their involvement, emphasizing that the event is open to everyone.

"We're encouraging diversity in Iowa City, at least for a weekend," he said.

The event is also hoped to encourage American Indians to apply to the university, Peterson said.

The powwow will be open this weekend from 5-11 p.m. today, 11 a.m.-11 p.m. Saturday and 11 a.m.-6 p.m. on April 9. Admission is free for UI students with their IDs, $6 for adults and $5 for students and senior citizens.

Senate OKs animal-abuse bill

■ The bill would make Iowa one of the toughest states in the nation on cruelty to animals.

By Rupa Shenoy
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa Senate Wednesday passed an animal-abuse bill, which, if approved by the House, would make the state one of the nation's most stringent on animal rights.

Sen. David Miller, R-Batavia, said Iowa would rank among the top 10 states with the strongest laws against the inhumane treatment of animals.

According to the bill, the torture of an animal would be a felony on the second offense, punishable by as much as five years in prison, in contrast with the two-year sentence given now, Miller said. To become law, the bill must be passed by the Iowa House and signed by the governor.

The bill stalled last year because supporters wanted the first offense to be a felony, and the opposition believed that the legislation should not carry a felony charge on the first offense because crimes such as domestic assault did not, Miller said. All similar crimes would have to be a felony on first offense, and there is only limited prison space, he said.

Any law against animal abuse is a good idea, but problems could arise in the future, said Misha Goodman, the director of Johnson County Animal Control.

"Sometimes, offenses are so severe on the first offense they deserve a felony," she said, in support of first-offense felonies in certain cases.

After weighing both sides, Miller proposed a compromise of a second-offense felony.

"Some people wanted everything in the bill or no bill at all, but you have to be strategic and practical," he said. "I couldn't get the support I needed to pass it with a first-offense felony, so I did this. I'd rather have something than nothing."

The bill would catch most offenders, Goodman said.

"The law would work for major violators because those who are cruel to animals aren't cruel only once," she said. "They will do it again."

The main opposition to the bill came from the agricultural community, Miller said.

"I don't see this bill as beginning a trend (against the agricultural community), but it is going to be in conflict at some point," he said. "Some people would see such practices as branding and castration as torture, but I don't see them changing soon."

The bill was not aimed at curbing the activities of farmers, said Tom Colvin, the director of the Animal Rescue League of Iowa.

"I recognize in an agricultural state these things have to take place," he said. "In this bill, we were really targeting torture in a depraved, sadistic manner, not farmers."

Colvin said he was disappointed the bill does not call for a first-offense felony, but he considers the passage of the bill a success, particularly the specific protection of all animals — not just some.

"We would expect this bill to be passed quickly by the House this year, and I would be greatly surprised if the governor doesn't support it," he said. "Animals don't have a voice of their own, and they're counting on us to do the right thing, especially after our history in Iowa."

I.C. rail - slow train a comin'

■ With potential Amtrak service at least five years away, officials look at other options.

By Marc Mettler
The Daily Iowan

With the proposed high-speed rail route between Chicago and Omaha at least five years from reality, rail officials are looking at a second rail option that could be implemented as early as next year.

The option involves adding passenger cars to freight trains between Chicago and Des Moines, said Doug Christy, the president of Iowa Interstate Railroad.

"A passenger train would be attached to trains carrying sensitive freight, such as mail or perishable foods," he said.

Iowa Interstate Railroad and Amtrak officials are beginning negotiations, though an exact plan will not be known for some time, Christy said.

Trains would likely leave each city at night and arrive in the other city the following morning, he said.

The second option would have limited attractiveness to Iowa City residents, in that it only takes three hours to drive to Chicago, said Jeff Davidson, an assistant planning director for Iowa City planning and community development.

"I think the marketing plan is that the service would save having to stay in a hotel by sleeping on the train," he said, adding that everything is still in the negotiation stages.

The Amtrak service will cost approximately $4.1 billion, but where the funding will come from remains unknown, Davidson said.

Another reason that it may be years for Iowa City to enjoy the train system is because of the city's small population.

"There are many stops that Amtrak would like to make, but ours (Iowa City) is the least populated and would probably be the last place added to the stops," he said.

The Midwest Regional High Speed Rail Initiative, which includes the Omaha to Chicago route, is part of a nine-state plan. The high speed service is not expected to be completed until at least 2005.

Although the proposals could give students a new way home, some are skeptical.

"I don't trust freight trains. They stop every few minutes and are noisy and uncomfortable," said UI freshman Debi Hulka, an Illinois resident.

UI freshman Joe Daniels, originally from the Chicago area, said taking the train would depend on "how desperate someone is to get home."

100s of Confederate flag opponents arrive at Statehouse

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — With the Confederate flag fluttering from the dome, hundreds of demonstrators demanding its removal converged on the Statehouse Thursday after a five-day, 120-mile march from Charleston.

"We must, as South Carolinians, move forward and get this issue resolved, and we must move the flag from the dome," Gov. Jim Hodges told a crowd of 2,000 people. On the Capitol's opposite side, flag supporters, who see the banner as a symbol of Southern heritage honoring the Confederate war dead, sang "Dixie" and demanded that it stay.

Led by Charleston Mayor Joseph P. Riley Jr. and under heavy security, flag opponents — who see the banner as a vestige of hatred and slavery — began their march Sunday with approximately 600 people. The group fell to just a few during the week, but swelled to more than 400 Thursday morning.

Hundreds more met the marchers at the Statehouse.

Riley told the crowd that an anonymous letter writer threatened that if he marched with blacks through Calhoun County, south of Columbia, "I will put you in my gun sights."

That was not about heritage, he said. "That is his hate."

Hodges, a first-term Democrat who proposes moving the flag to a monument on Statehouse grounds, said he is tired of hearing legislators argue.

The Senate has now set debate on a bill for April 12 — the first time this session the Legislature officially will take up the issue.

While he and Riley spoke on the south steps, roughly 300 flag supporters gathered on the north steps with signs that said "Let My People Go" and "God Save the South."

"They want a nice, multi-ethnic society, and they know they can't have it," said Lake High, the former chairman of the South Carolina League of the South.

Battle in Seattle to get dicey in D.C.

■ As the IMF/World Bank spring meeting nears, protesters are girding their strogans.

By Martin Crutsinger
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The signs are popping up all over town: "More World, Less Bank — Shut down the IMF and the World Bank."

The protest groups on the streets as the World Trade Organization meetings collapsed in a cloud of tear gas in Seattle are taking aim at an even bigger target: the April 16-17 meetings of the world's largest multinational lending agencies.

Organized under the umbrella name Mobilization for Global Justice, the protest groups, ranging from the AFL-CIO to Friends of the Earth and the Forum of Indian Leftists, are planning 10 days of teach-ins and street protests, starting Saturday.

All the activity will be aimed at a massive rally on the Ellipse, the park across the street from the White House, on April 16. That's when finance ministers from around the world will be in town for the start of the spring meetings of the 182-nation International Monetary Fund and World Bank.

"We think this will be the biggest thing to happen to the IMF in its history. It will serve like Seattle did for the WTO to put the IMF on the map for people to notice. The IMF is doing some very bad things," said Scott Nova, the director of Citizens Global Trade Watch, an anti-WTO group that helped organized the Seattle demonstrations.

Parading under an anti-globalization banner, the protesters believe that the operating rules of the WTO, IMF and World Bank are rigged in favor of wealthy multinational corporations at the expense of poor people, labor unions and the environment.

The groups are vague about just what they will be doing during their protests, but there have been training sessions in such activities as blocking traffic, hanging banners from tall buildings and being chained to immovable objects.

Group leaders insist the demonstrations will be nonviolent. District of Columbia police and federal authorities are taking no chances, given what happened in Seattle.

"The protesters are the ones who will decide if this is going to be peaceful or if it's not going to be peaceful," said Washington Police Chief Charles Ramsey.

Court: Lesbian has rights akin to parent's

■ The New Jersey Supreme Court rules that a former partner has visitation rights.

By Ralph Siegel
Associated Press

TRENTON, N.J. — The New Jersey Supreme Court ruled Thursday that a lesbian who helped raise her then-lover's twins has rights akin to a parent's and can have visitation now that they have split up.

The case involved a woman who became pregnant by artificial insemination and gave birth to twins in 1994 whom she and her lesbian partner, identified only as V.C., raised together for two years.

After their 1996 separation, a trial court denied V.C. joint custody and visitation. An appellate court gave her visitation rights but not joint custody.

In Thursday's unanimous ruling, the high court also turned down V.C.'s request for joint legal custody, which would have given her a say regarding decisions on the children's upbringing, because she has not been involved in their lives for four years.

"To interject her into the decisional realm at this point would be unnecessarily disruptive for all involved," the court said. "We will, therefore, not order joint legal custody in this case."

But Associate Justice Virginia Long, writing for the full court, said V.C. carries the status of a "psychological parent" to the children and has a right to share parenting duties, despite the objections of the birth mother, identified only as M.J.B.

V.C. should have regular visitation with the children, as is typical for many divorced parents, the court said.

"Under the statute, V.C. and M.J.B. are essentially equal," Long wrote. "Each appears to be a fully capable, loving parent committed to the safety and welfare of the twins."

The New York-based Lambda Legal Defense & Education Fund, which litigates for the rights of gays and lesbians, joined in the New Jersey case.

Lambda legal director Beatrice Dohrn hailed the decision as among the first "to recognize this important need to recognize the importance of lesbian or gay parents when both parents are not directly related to the child."

The ruling is similar to a 1995 ruling by the Wisconsin Supreme Court, said Ruth Harlow, also with the Lambda group.

In that ruling, the Wisconsin court ordered a lower court to reconsider its decision to turn down a woman's request for visits with the son of her former lesbian lover. If a parent lets another adult establish a parent-like relationship with a child, the court said, it may not be in the child's best interest for the parent to later cut off that relationship.

The New Jersey court heard arguments in the current case last October. V.C.'s lawyers argued that she is like a mother to the twins, a boy and a girl, even though they have no biological bonds.

Father arrives to reclaim Elián

■ In Miami, the government's negotiations with Elián's relatives reach an impasse.

By George Gedda
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — On U.S. soil, Juan Miguel González said Thursday he was "truly impatient" to reclaim his son Elián, but his hopes for an orderly transfer of custody were dimmed when government negotiations with the 6-year-old Cuban boy's Miami relatives broke down.

The father declared his love for son Elián and chastised those who are trying "to obtain political advantage" from the custody battle over the shipwreck survivor.

He received immediate assurances that the U.S. government is eager to reunite him with his son. "It is simply the right thing to do," said Deputy Attorney General Eric Holder. "The father and his son need to be together."

But Jose Garcia-Pedrosa, the attorney for the relatives with whom Elián has been staying since November, said the negotiations with the government were over, primarily because the government refused to promise that they wouldn't "take Elián away in the middle of the night." He also said immigration officials refused to agree to a psychological evaluation determining whether Elián should be handed over to his father.

"He has not had his day in court," Garcia-Pedrosa said. "This is a very, very sad day."

In Miami, Robert Wallis, federal district immigration director, lamented the failure of the talks to produce "simple and reasonable assurances" from the Miami relatives that they would turn over Elián. Attorneys for Elián's great-uncle, Lazaro González, who has temporary custody, kept talking about whether, not how, a reunion of the boy with his father would take place, Wallis said.

"We still hope for an orderly process... The opportunity to ensure this orderly process rests squarely with the relatives in Miami," Wallis said. He added that immigration officials would provide the Miami relatives with a letter outlining the reuniting process.

Juan Miguel González planned to meet this morning at the Justice Department with Attorney General Janet Reno, Immigration and Naturalization Service Commissioner Doris Meissner and other officials.

Come back post-abortion, church says

■ The Catholic Church starts a campaign to counsel women after they have an abortion.

By Anne Thompson
Associated Press

BOSTON — The Roman Catholic Church has begun a nationwide campaign urging women who have had abortions — and now feel estranged from the faith — to undergo counseling and return to the fold.

Because the Vatican considers abortion the taking of a human life and a mortal sin, some women who have terminated a pregnancy feel unwelcome in church. The church's goal is to reassure these women and bring them back to Catholicism.

"Many people think that abortion is the unforgivable sin, and that they have severed their tie with the church forever. In fact, it is the complete opposite," said Barbara Thorp, a director of pro-life services for the Archdiocese of Boston. "We want people to understand that there is nothing that separates us from the love of God."

The campaign also is the church's first widespread effort to encourage all women, not just Catholics, to seek spiritual help after having abortions.

For that reason, the radio and billboard ads do not mention the Catholic Church but instead have the slogan "Something inside dies after an abortion." They also use the words of women who have had abortions: "Not one day goes by that I don't think of my baby boy," one woman says.

The ads include a toll-free number for Project Rachel, the church's post-abortion counseling service that began 15 years ago. It is named for a Biblical figure who mourns the death of her children.

Until now, Project Rachel was handled locally through church literature or radio ads. The wider campaign, organized by the National Conference of Bishops, is pegged to the church's Jubilee Year, or 2,000th birthday. Reconciliation is one of Pope John Paul II's themes for the celebration.

In an interview, one Boston-area woman said she felt she was "unforgivable" for 20 years after having an abortion. She was a lapsed Catholic and a supporter of the abortion-rights movement in 1997 when she heard a local Project Rachel ad on the radio. She sought counseling and wound up returning to the church.

"It gave me a way to make peace with God, my child and myself and to be able to move forward. I wanted a spiritual life," said the 46-year-old businesswoman, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

"I spoke with the most wonderful priest. He was so loving, so nonjudgmental. A few months later, I made confession."

The eight-week campaign began on Feb. 1 in the Washington area. It starts this month in Nebraska and next month in Boston. Ads are in the works for three more states and 10 more dioceses, depending on funding.

Church officials said the campaign is already having results.

When ads ran in the Washington-Baltimore area, Project Rachel counselors received approximately 150 calls for information during a two-week period, compared with the usual eight or so, said Helen Alvarez, a spokeswoman for conference's Secretariat for Pro-life Activities.

Of those new callers, approximately 40 percent were non-Catholics, she said. They were referred to rabbis, Protestant clergy or non-denominational social workers.

Uganda issues warrants for six cult leaders

■ Each of the six leaders faces 10 counts of murder in the deaths of 924 cult members.

By Andrew England
Associated Press

KAMPALA, Uganda — Ugandan authorities issued arrest warrants Thursday for leaders of the deadly doomsday cult, saying they assumed the six had survived the sect's fiery end and gone into hiding.

Meanwhile, documents obtained by the Associated Press show that national officials warned local police about the cult in January. The local police dismissed the reports of children's kidnappings and mass graves as "a little bit unfounded," according to the documents.

Thursday's arrest warrants were the first in Uganda's nearly three-week investigation, which started when the sect's chapel burst into a gasoline-fueled inferno, burning alive 530 people sealed inside. Subsequent searches turned up 394 more corpses stuffed in mass graves and a latrine pit.

The warrants name the most prominent sect figures: official sect leader Joseph Kibwetere, known as "The Prophet," and Credonia Mwerinde, an ex-banana beer vendor known as "The Programmer" and widely seen as the true mastermind of the sect.

Also charged is Dominic Kataribabo, a defrocked Roman Catholic priest who some locals believe perished in the March 17 fire.

The three others named — Joseph Kasapurari, John Kamagara and Ursula Komuhangi — were listed on registration papers and other documents of the Movement for the Restoration of the Ten Commandments of God.

All six are charged with 10 counts of murder. They face death by hanging if caught and convicted.

Police said the murder counts represent the first 10 victims to be positively identified. Many of the 924 corpses found so far were burned or rotted past recognition and hastily interred without study. The search for more bodies has been suspended indefinitely for lack of proper equipment, including rubber gloves for the inmates put to work exhuming the mass graves.

The cult leaders have not turned up among the confirmed dead.

"We believe they are alive and in hiding," said Erasmus Opi, the acting director of the Criminal Investigation Division in Kampala. "We have no evidence to the contrary."

Rent control bill holds hidden problems

Gov. Tom Vilsack currently has before him a bill (Senate File 428) that would prevent counties and cities from instituting any form of rent control on residential or commercial properties. This bill rests firmly on sound theoretical and empirical evidence that artificial controls on rental rates provide citizens with minimal benefits and terrible costs to the community.

The economics behind this issue are straightforward. Landlords don't rent property to be congenial; they do it to make a profit. If a city or county prevents the landlord from raising the rent to maintain the quality of the property, he or she will find other ways to make money. Typically, profits will be squeezed out through shortchanging the upkeep of the building.

In other words: hello, rent control — goodbye, smooth driveways, new carpeting, appliances and fresh paint.

Evidence of these trends is easy to find. In New York City, for example, housing units stand vacant and decrepit, having not seen a paintbrush or wrench in years. Even the poor that rent control was alleged to benefit know better than to inhabit these ruinous monuments to the shortsighted policies of yesteryear. Meanwhile, citizens scour obituaries daily in search of newly "vacated" homes of sufficient quality.

The best way to bring rents down without sacrificing quality is to encourage developers to build more apartments. This isn't likely under rental control, though. The prospect of a developer building to collect controlled rent is comparable with that of a student accepting a 20-year job contract with the salary capped at minimum wage. It just doesn't happen.

Rent control has its appeal to some: temporary residents and short-term politicians. Rent control's costs may not surface for a year or two; in the meantime, some renters will no doubt enjoy the ceiling on rental rates.

Likewise, politicians who benefited from their "benevolent" policies may be on to bigger and better things before the damages shows. The burden for these benefits will fall squarely on the backs of renters two or three years from now.

Gov. Vilsack, look past the short run and see the damage that rent control has wrought on New York, Los Angeles and elsewhere. Iowa's renters can't afford to live under unsafe roofs. Thirty-three states have been wise enough to sign no-rent-control legislation. Do the right thing: Make it 34.

Star Wars films must catch up with DVD era

If Star Wars: Episode One has "millions of fans" — as the media always reference its cult of followers — and if the world's population just topped 6 billion, then the overwhelming number of people living in this galaxy close, close to home must have absolutely been dreading April 4.

April 4 was the day Episode One was released on VHS. So perhaps those billions weren't dreading it, but they couldn't have been much more than apathetic.

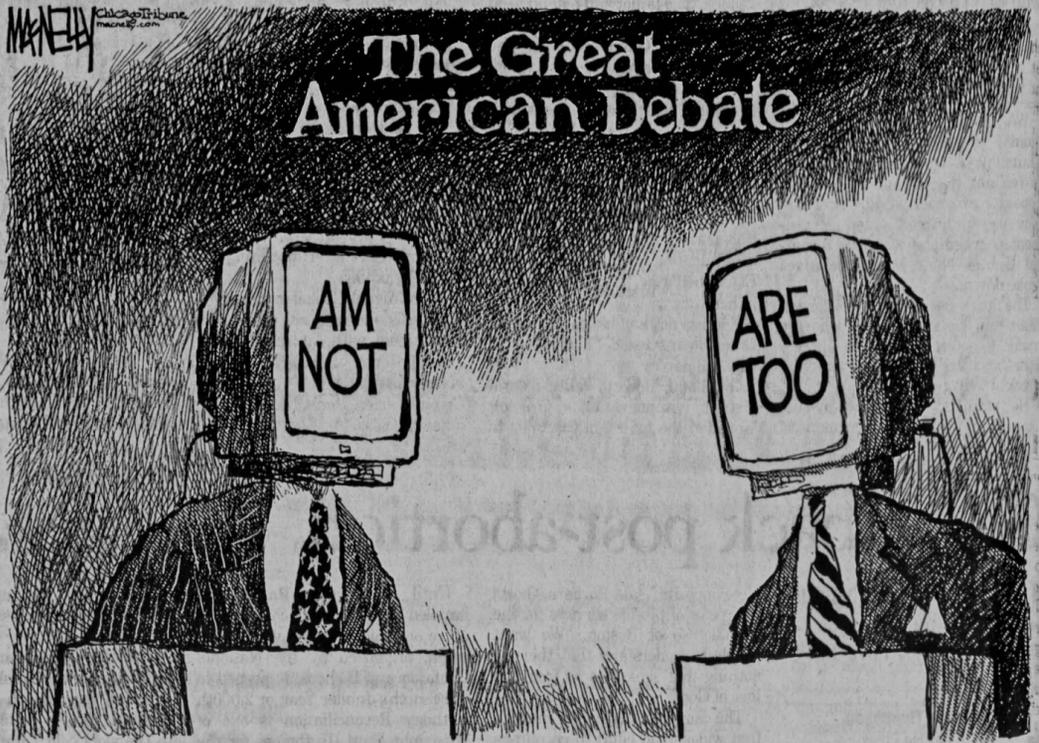

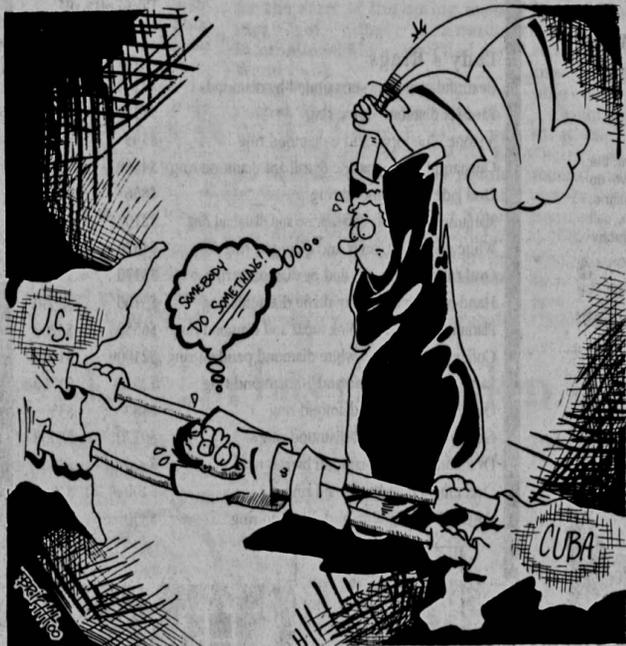

But with a Jan. 5 press release confirming that Lucasfilm Ltd. plans not to release Episode One in DVD format, the attitude of some die-hard fans of the film has recently surpassed apathy and dread and landed all the way down to disgust. George Lucas — the mastermind behind the whole Star Wars quadruply — has never released any of the Star Wars films in DVD format.

In the past few years, the popularity of DVDs has soared, leaving many fans that are loyal to the intrinsic artistry of film to refuse to buy videos in anything other than DVD format. Roger Ebert, the renowned national film critic, constantly touts the superiority of DVD sound and picture quality over its VHS counterpart.

The digital technology of DVDs allows for enhanced resolution. It follows that Episode One, shot on digital film, should be released in that digital format. In fact, a better argument can be made that Episode One should be released exclusively in DVD format than that it should not be released at all on DVD.

The high and lofty press release that contains the monopoly on wisdom regarding the VHS release of Episode One blatantly avoids offering any explanation as to why the film will not be released on DVD. It's interesting that a key bit of information like that would be left out, isn't it? Well, I suppose it's no more interesting than why the lead-in to the press release makes reference to Episode One's "millions of fans" instead of broadening the scope of the article to "the billions of apathetic residents of a galaxy close, close to home."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Coleman displays ignorance

I would like to thank Mary Sue Coleman for publicly confirming her own ignorance on sweatshop issues in her Daily Iowan "Guest Opinion" piece on April 6. Contrary to Coleman's claim that "we all support the termination of licensing agreements with companies that violate workers' rights," the Worker Rights Consortium code of conduct that Students Against Sweatshops members are advocating states as its sixth of eight key principles that "when abusive conditions at a particular work site are exposed to public view, the licensee company has an obligation to use its leverage to correct conditions — and not to 'cut and run' from that site." (The full code of conduct is readily available for perusal by Coleman and the public on the workers' consortium Web site, www.workersrights.org).

We support using our institution's leverage to force companies to respect human rights, but our goal is not to punish companies or endanger workers' jobs by boycotting, ending contract or withholding our business — it is to require companies who do business with us to disclose information and provide jobs with a living wage and a modicum of dignity.

This ignorance and inability to listen to knowledgeable informants is precisely the reason that, after a year of researching, attending committee meetings, mailing information packets, and opening dialogue with UI administrators and getting no results, SAS entered Mary Sue Coleman's office Monday and is still occupying Jessup Hall. Although Coleman has since locked her doors and refused to acknowledge any questions from students and has yet to attend any sessions of the ongoing teach-in being held outside her office, this week at the sit-in hundreds of other people have been taking the opportunity to experience education in a historic setting on an issue with potential to reform global labor standards.

I would like to apologize for any inconvenience Coleman's recalcitrance has caused to university officials, helpful Public Safety officers and Jessup Hall employees not directly involved in Coleman's decision-making this week. SAS appreciates the support that university staff, building employees and faculty have given the sit-in. Finally, I encourage all to stop by the sit-in and get the facts for themselves.

Another sweatshop group?

In light of the recent developments in the ongoing Students Against Sweatshops saga, freshman Alex Pickett was quite timely in his public announcement of the new student organization: Students Against Students Against the Methods of Students Against Sweatshops.

I commend Pickett's thoughtful response and ask one question: How do I sign up?

Julia Di Gangi
UI senior

An open letter to Ned Bertz of Students Against Sweatshops

Dear Mr. Bertz:

I request you and your followers to immediately stop the current uncivil acts on the governing body and the president of the university. You cannot impose your interpretations of the social ills on the university community by physically forcing President Mary Sue Coleman to take actions. The university is a leading element of a society that is run by reasoning and consensus-building, not by confrontation and coercion.

Do you think you have unlimited rights over the lives of people around the globe and over the conduct of people in the UI community? Is this because you have studied and know the issues better than anybody else? Or because it seems nobody cares about the issue more than you? Or because it is unethical and unjust to accept the terms of the Fair Labor Association?

First of all, your conduct is outrageously wrong and socially unacceptable. Only the coward does that. You should remember the fact that you are exploiting the weak and inherently benign structure of the university, which works by reasoning and consensus, to handle the protests and confrontations.

Have you ever fought an oppressive government? Have you ever had your friend shot in the head by government troops? Problems of your kind can only be seen and justified in situations where one is fighting the government, police, companies, etc. You see no other reasonable way of consensus-building other than changing the status quo by force. You have no rights to declare unilaterally that any party of the university can and should be a target of your confrontations whenever there is a conflict of opinion.

You should volunteer to spend at least a single day in the squalor where your choice each day is between another day of no food and few pennies or selling your body and stealing. Have you ever been hungry enough to think you could be a willing prostitute? Do you think the working people in the sweatshop don't care about their dignity and don't know about the conditions of the sweatshop he or she is about to be hired for?

Do you think the issues between the labor association and the Worker Rights Consortium are so important that you have to use whatever physical means or tactics you desire to push the president to say yes to your demands? Show me that the workers' consortium is better than the labor association. And prove it.

Both the labor association and the workers' consortium are just paper-thin organizations. No matter what you would like say to defend the workers' consortium and to degrade the labor association, they only exist on paper at best. And both are significantly flawed from the beginning. Anyone who takes a close look into the subject would know that right away. Your favorite workers' consortium is an uncertain entity at best and doomed to become a failure unless significant changes are made.

The president had asked the Human Rights Committee to come up with basic understandings and recommendations for the matter. We have held a couple of meetings and a public forum to reach a reasonable common ground, and you had a chance to voice your opinion. But instead of taking a responsible path of making your points clear to the UI, you decided to resort to one of the most primitive ways of talk — force.

What if I were to occupy your living room and chase you every time you move and demand on your acknowledgment that both the workers' consortium and the labor association have not been tested in a real world? What if I gather 20-100 people to come to you and initiate physical fights because we believe you are not following socially accepted methods? Neither you nor I have those rights.

Although I personally do not agree with the decision made by the president, I fully support her handling of the subject and her decision because policy-making affects all members of the UI community in both positive and negative ways. The decision can always be changed, if necessary. For that matter, the president has asked the UI to form an Advisory Committee to handle the issue's details, and will continue to monitor the issue on a regular basis. The UI is actively accruing interested and capable people for the committee.

What the president and the university have been through on the sweatshop issue is the consensus-building that can be accepted and later be modified, if necessary, by the majority of the university members.

You decided to become public once you initiated public confrontations. In a public place, you will be seriously scrutinized by your words and behavior. To the best of my understanding, you have failed on personal demeanor, leadership, deep understanding of social justice and, more importantly, respect for the silent majority. You are not and cannot be a responsible representative for the university. You are simply self-conscious, trying to savor your presumed intellectual luxury and vanity. You cannot feel the real pain of the people in the sweatshop, no matter how hard you would try.

You need to stop your unjustified acts now.

School demanded that the school get rid of its minority students and threatened a bomb or gun violence as possible forms of action if it did not. Tuesday morning, a minority dental student found a bowl of spaghetti with red food coloring outside his apartment door, along with a handwritten note that implied the spaghetti symbolized "dead black man's brains."

Some dental students say they have heard people speculating that the threats are coming from within the school.

"Some people do think it's coming from somebody on the inside — whether that's a student, a faculty member or a janitor," said a first-year dental student, also speaking on the condition of anonymity.

Another first-year dental student, who wished to remain anonymous, said there is a good chance the threats are coming from within the college because of the information the person or persons making the threats has gathered. For instance, the group has determined that some students are minorities — information that cannot be found in any UI publication.

Both first-year dental students were in a class in the building when the fire alarms went off. They and others evacuated the building and said the mood of the students was normal and that some were even joking around. Neither of their first reactions was that the fire was linked to the recent racism, though they believe that is a possibility.

They also said the recent racist threats were not an open topic of conversation at the college, and everyone is trying to go along — business as usual.

In response to the recent threats, UI students are organizing a community-wide rally to support the targeted students.

A walk/rally will be held on April 11 on the Pentacrest, starting at approximately 11:45 a.m. UI President Mary Sue Coleman is expected to speak, after which the group will walk across campus to the Dental Science Building.

At the building, dental students, a dental dean and Iowa City Mayor Ernie Lehman will give speeches, said UI graduate student Jackie Comito, a rally organizer.

"We've almost remained silent on this issue too long," she said. "One message we want to get across is (the people responsible for the racism) are really the minorities in this."

Lehman said he is more than happy to take part in the event.

"It's important to show that this community is a family," he said, commending the efforts of the rally organizers. "It is important that we let people know this type of behavior is unacceptable."

Iowa to select Drake's Bluder, reports say

NEW COACH

He was named the MVC Coach of the Year with her team ranked No. 24 in the final USA Today/CNN Top 25 coaches poll.

In 1996-97, the Bulldogs captured their first MVC title, finishing the season with a record of 14-4 and 23-7 overall. Bluder once again was named MVC Coach of the Year and the Women's Basketball Coaches Association District V Coach of the Year.

"Success is being the best you can be," she said. "It is the ability to strive to give 100 percent in all that you do. It is different for every person and every program. All must determine what success means to them. It is my hope to inspire my players to strive for excellence not only on the court but in the classroom and in their personal lives, as well."

Bluder compiled her best record in the 1997-98 season, finishing 25-5. The Bulldogs advanced to the NCAA tournament for the third time in four years, and she once again received MVC Coach of the Year honors. Her team held the No. 22 ranking in the final Associated Press Top 25 poll.

Before Drake, Bluder coached for six seasons at St. Ambrose University.

Bluder started for three years at Northern Iowa, graduating in 1983. She and her husband, David, have one child, Hannah Marie.

Christine Grant, the director of Iowa women's athletics, had said Iowa would conduct a national search for the new women's basketball coach, starting on Feb. 28, and would consider individuals with head coaching experience at Division I schools. She had hoped to fill the position by the beginning of the late signing period, April 12; it appears that Iowa will accomplish its goal.

SAS mulls president's mansion 'shantytown'

Today marks the fifth day of the SAS occupation in Jessup Hall, a period during which the "live-in" protesters have not showered or changed clothes. While the group had previously not left the building, UI senior and SAS member Heidi Sabers said the protesters will now start taking shifts in order to keep jobs and attend classes.

The group has stayed occupied over the last four days with teach-ins, which more than 800 UI students and 40 classes have attended, Sabers said.

While the number of people sleeping in the building has reached as high as 30, Bertz said, the protesters would like a certain member of the university community to spend a night in Jessup.

"I invite Coleman to spend the night with us in Jessup Hall," he said. "I'd like her to camp out with us for an evening and listen to us and have an honest, open, clear dialogue about the direction of the sweatshop policy at the university."

Coleman said she would not be willing to sleep over and would rather participate in a serious seminar or dialogue with the group.

Bertz also dispelled rumors that had the group inviting homeless Iowa City residents to stay in Jessup Hall with the protesters. He said SAS members believe other groups are spreading such rumors to create situations in which protesters would be forced out.

Although Bertz said he thought the UI administration is trying to drive out the protesters by raising the temperature in the building, Ann Rhodes, the vice president for university relations, denied the accusation.

"If we were trying to raise the heat in the building, it would drive everybody out," she said.

Public Safety also began to monitor Jessup Hall and the protesters at night Thursday by stationing a guard at the building from 10 p.m. to 7 a.m., Bertz said.

Over the weekend, members of the group will rest and recover in order to be ready to continue next week, Sabers said. Bertz also said the group will attempt to hold a "picnic with SAS" over the weekend.

Glitches mar debut of UI parking cards

PARKING CARDS

The current card manufacturer is the main problem, Ricketts said. But sometimes, parking cashiers don't come across the card too often, so they are not used to processing them, he said.

"One time, I parked after hours in the library lot, and the guy didn't give me my discount rate," said Robin Beining, a UI sophomore. "And then he tried to make up a reason and lied to me why I shouldn't get the cheaper rate."

In a recent test of seven UI cashiers parking lots and ramps conducted by The Daily Iowan, two were not able to process the card.

The payment booth at UI Hospitals and Clinics Ramp 2 had a computer problem that was unable to accept the card to cover the fee. However, no alternative payment was requested. In Lot 13, located on the north side of Hillcrest Residence Hall, the cashier's booth did not have a computer to process the card.

If the computer can't read the parking card and the student has no cash to pay for the fee, he or she needs to fill out a parking-fee notice and mail the payment to the parking office at a later time, Ricketts said. Usually a $2.50 service charge is assessed, but the charge would be waived if it is the parking department's fault, he said.

"I think they should let you through for free," Beining said. "It's not your fault that it's not working; it's their fault."

Although five out of seven tested facilities were able to accept the card, the cashier at the North Campus Parking Ramp took almost three minutes to process the card.

"The cashier should be able to process the card, if it's working properly, in about 30 seconds," Ricketts said. "It seems that in this case, he just wasn't used to the card."

Maryland firm decodes a human's DNA

drew a quick response from Wall Street investors. Shares of PE Corp., Celera's parent company, rose 26 7/8 points to 139 7/8 by mid-afternoon.

White House Press Secretary Joe Lockhart said the Celera announcement "marks a ... significant point in what the president has talked about extensively as ... one of the most important scientific developments of our time."

The Human Genome Project is expected to complete a "rough draft" of the human gene sequence this spring, but this will not be assembled into a finished order for several more years.

The federal project is using a different method from that used by Celera, which is using a technique developed by Venter.

But, in contrast to Celera, the federal project is releasing to the public the genetic sequences as they are identified. The federal project thus far has put on the Internet the codes for approximately 2.3 billion subunits of the DNA.

Clinton recently announced that the United States and Britain have agreed to share data from their efforts to decode the human genetic pattern, and a U.S.-British statement urged private companies to follow the lead of government laboratories in sharing data. Some companies have shared data, others have not.

In testimony before Congress, Venter said Thursday that his company will make the entire genome available on the Internet but will provide special services for analyzing the massive amount of data to drug companies and to universities for a subscription price. Subscriptions for drug companies, he said, will cost millions, while the rate for universities will be in the thousands of dollars and not much more than what is now paid for some advanced software.

To decode the genetic sequence, Venter said his company drew specimens from 30 different people. One specimen was then used to draw up the completed sequence. A male was chosen because only males have at least one copy of all the chromosomes, including the X and Y sex chromosomes. Females have two X's.

"That one individual probably doesn't know who was selected for sequencing but probably knows about being a donor in the pool," said Venter. "All 6 billion of us on this planet differ enough from each other so that no one individual is significant. It is significant only as a reference source and because it is the first one."

The Blue Moon Boys will shed a little light on Iowa City.

By Kimberly Woody
 The Daily Iowan

The Blue Moon Boys crash into Iowa City Saturday night to promote its latest CD, Sticks and Stones. The band will appear at the Green Room, 509 S. Gilbert St., at 9 p.m. with Kelly Pardekooper and the Devil's House Band, the Diplomats, and Will Whitmore.

Originally formed in 1995, the Iridiana rockabilly quartet has released seven CDs, including the 1998 Rock and Roll Christmas Show, which sold out its first pressing in two weeks.

Roll Christmas Show, which sold out its first pressing in two weeks. Blue Moon Boys is lead vocalist Nic Roulette (whose style has been described as part Mojo Nixon and part Sun Records-era Elvis), bassist Jumpin' Jerry Sparkman, drummer Flava P. Coltrane and guitarist, producer and writer Kenny Taylor.

The Daily Iowan recently talked to Taylor about performance style and touring on the road.

DI: How do you guys keep up the intensity and velocity during shows?

Taylor: Coffee. Lots of coffee. Take strong black coffee and dump in some instant on top of that, use it to wash down some mini thins. This is the recipe for rock 'n' roll.

DI: Has anyone ever hurt himself on stage, such as from falling off rafters and such?

Taylor: Every member of the band plays injured. Usually from the abuse and anger they hurl at their instruments. Nic (the cute singer boy) has hurt himself and other people just by dancing and slinging sweat into people's eyes. He once picked up Beatle Bob and stuck his head into a ceiling fan. That's what happens when folks are foolish enough to tread upon our stage. We won't have it.

DI: Where's the strangest place you've crashed while touring?

Taylor: The weirdest places have given us all a nice bed and clean towels and sometimes even healthy food. This happens rarely. We love it when it does. Sleeping glass-covered, beer-stankin' in a litterbox flophouse is funny once. It has no romance for us, however, and long ago we decided to stay in the nicest hotels for the cheapest coin. We're funny that way.

DI: Would you guys ever consider trading in your white van with its one headlight for a luxury rock star tour bus with a toilet and stuff?

Taylor: If we could afford a luxury bus, we might as well buy a small aircraft. We could never trade in our van. It will go into the Nic Roulette Museum and Stud Ranch in a desert to be announced after the wealth we deserve comes tumbling out of the sky.

DI: Would you consider the Blue Moon Boys to be more rocka-, punka- or psychobilly? What's the strangest word using the suffix -billy that has been used to describe your music?

Taylor: We play rock 'n' roll. Usually if someone is into one of those prefixes, they apply it to us. That's cool with us. We've been accused of playing all three of those. Add to that surfa-, garagea-, swinga- and rapabilly.

DI: Have you or anyone else ever set anything on fire during a show?

Taylor: The drums and cymbals. Cigarettes are put out on the kick drum.

DI: Is there an unofficial dress code?

Taylor: Maybe an official undress code.

DI: What were your reasons for doing a Christmas album?

Taylor: To spread some X-mas cheer. To make the world's most subversive X-mas album ever.

NEW YORK (AP) — Imagine Jerry Seinfeld inside his Long Island mansion, baby bottle in one hand, burp cloth in the other, musing: Whyyyyy do they call it a burp cloth?

That's right. First came love (1998), then came marriage (last December) — and now Seinfeld and bride, Jessica Sklar, will soon be pushing a baby carriage.

The announcement was made Thursday by Regis Philbin on TV's "Live With Regis and Kathie Lee."

"Yes. It's true. There will be a new little Seinfeld sometime this fall," said Seinfeld's spokeswoman, Elizabeth Clarke.

It is the first child for both Sklar and Seinfeld, who made millions from a TV show that glorified single life and poked fun at commitment.

IOWA BASEBALL VS. PURDUE

Brett Roseman/The Daily Iowan

Iowa's first baseman Brad Carlson gets the tag on Iowa State's Ben Van Iderstine in the second inning Wednesday at Iowa Field.

Hawks hope for hot bats

■ Coming off a 16-3 slaughtering of Iowa State, the Hawkeyes are looking for the offensive burst to continue in their weekend series with Purdue.

By Greg Wallace
 The Daily Iowan

The atmosphere at Iowa Field Thursday afternoon could best be characterized as loose.

First baseman Brad Carlson tried his hand at the pitcher's mound.

Quips from Hawkeye baseball players flew hot and heavy. And freshman pitcher Nick Jensen's torso and arms wound up bound in athletic tape, the victim of a prank by his teammates.

Everyone was having a good time. No surprise, considering the team was one day removed from a 16-3 thumping of Iowa State, and one day away from its first Big Ten home series, a four-game set with Purdue.

"We're starting to swing the bats better," catcher Alex Dvorsky said. "The weather's nice, and we're playing at home. And it's fun. We're swinging the bats, playing good defense and getting good pitching. It makes it fun out there."

The weather might not be too nice, however. Today's highs are only supposed to hit the mid-40s, and rain is supposed to be mixed with snow.

Purdue (17-9, 5-3 Big Ten) and Iowa (9-18, 3-5 Big Ten) will play a single game today at 3 p.m., a doubleheader Saturday starting at 1 p.m., and finish off the series with a single game Sunday afternoon at 1 p.m. All games will be broadcast live on 800-AM.

Wednesday was the day that Iowa bats had been waiting for. The hits just kept coming, and coming, and coming — 18 in all, tying a season high.

"That's what we needed," Dvorsky said. "That's the type of lineup we have. Everyone, one through nine, can hit. That was evident Wednesday."

That 9-18 record doesn't look impressive at first glance. But the Hawkeyes began the season 0-8 after being swept by Belmont and Wichita State. Midway through the team's Spring Break trip, that mark was 1-10. Iowa has rebounded to play .500 ball since.

If the Hawkeyes can manage to take three games this weekend in front of their home crowd, they'll match 1999's conference win total of six. That gives the 9-18 mark a little shine.

"There were some games early that could have gone either way," Iowa coach Scott Broghamer said. "The record is deceptive. The kids realize that. Now, we have to keep putting our best foot forward."

Not to be forgotten in the team's improved play as of late is the pitching staff, those guys that normally rule the mound Carlson played on Thursday. At the midpoint of the season, the team's ERA is 5.00, down nearly 1.5 runs from

Iowa looks to protect home record

■ With Illinois backing out of the Big Ten matchup, the Hawkeyes will face Detroit Mercy Saturday at 10 a.m.

By Melinda Mawdsley
 The Daily Iowan

Pearl Field has been anything but a gem for opposing teams.

The No. 14 Iowa softball team (24-7) has gone 6-0 on its home field heading into Saturday's doubleheader against Detroit Mercy.

The first game is slated to begin at 10 a.m. and the Hawkeyes are looking to trounce on yet another non-conference opponent.

Judging by Iowa's dominating performance versus Illinois State Wednesday, Detroit Mercy better be at its best. Iowa collected 13 runs and 16 hits between the two games against the Red Birds, while only surrendering three runs.

Numerous Iowa players stepped it up at the plate, including Lisa Rasche. The junior went 2-for-3 with a double and a home run in the second game.

"We always talk about raising the bar," she said. "Everyone leads at one time. I took my turn and rose up for my teammates."

Detroit Mercy was a quick add to this weekend. Iowa was supposed to play Illinois, but the Fighting Illini backed out of their Big Ten schedule.

Blevins had to rush around to find another opponent.

This will be Iowa's first matchup ever against Detroit Mercy who went 10-35 last season under third-year coach Bob Wilkerson and finished seventh in the Midwestern Collegiate Conference.

No matter the opponent Iowa's focus is always on its game and what it must do to improve. Blevins said Iowa could do much better on the base paths.

"You can't coach base running," she said. "If they have to wait for a coach

Iowa player faces drug charges

Iowa sophomore Patrice Jennings, a member of the women's basketball team, was charged with possession of a schedule I controlled substance at the Green Room Wednesday night at 1:48 a.m.

Jennings could not be reached for comment about the situation Thursday.

"We really don't know a lot about the situation, so it is kind of hard to make a solid comment right now," teammate Randi Peterson said. "Obviously, we hope it is not true."

In limited action this season, Jennings averaged 3.6 points a game and 3.0 rebounds, while averaging only 10.7 minutes per game. Jennings was a three-year unanimous All-Conference selection coming out of Bremen High School in Midlothian, Ill. Jennings was also named to the Chicago Sun-Times All-State team her senior year.

Jennings was originally recruited by Wisconsin, Indiana and Minnesota before choosing to come to Iowa.

This season, Jennings struggled all season to trying to find her shot and ended the season shooting just 38.6 percent from the field.

A graceful exit for the legends? Not yet

By Jim Litke

AUGUSTA, Ga. — The Big Three of yesteryear were supposed to be marking time, not scores.

Arnold Palmer, 70, has aches and pains older than Tiger Woods.

Gary Player, 65, doesn't blush saying things like "memories are the cushion of life."

Jack Nicklaus is 60, trudging up and down Augusta National's hills on a ceramic hip. He was a candidate for laser eye surgery decades ago. It's been 14 years since his last lightning-in-a-bottle win against the youngsters on tour.

But when he walked off the 18th green late Thursday afternoon, you knew what was brewing in the back of Nicklaus' mind:

I can win this thing.
 For all the cruelties it inflicts, golf is that rare game that still allows for a graceful exit. Palmer, who won four times in 45 previous Masters starts, and Player, who claimed three green jackets from his 42 starts, were only too happy to comply.

Not Nicklaus. He beat his two rivals for the ages — or aged — then drew a bead on the rest of the field.

"Nostalgia?" he huffed. "I don't pay much attention to it. I'm a funny duck, I suppose. I come here to play golf."

MASTERS TOURNAMENT • ROUND TWO • TODAY, 3 P.M.

Ignorance is bliss for Paulson after first round

■ Tiger Woods struggled, as an eagle and five birdies lifted Dennis Paulson into the lead.

By Doug Ferguson
 Associated Press

AUGUSTA, Ga. — Somebody forgot to tell Dennis Paulson that Augusta National is tougher than ever.

Tiger Woods knew all too well.

On a day when Woods made his first triple bogey in 541 holes and finished behind two guys in their 60s, Paulson's maiden voyage in the Masters turned into a memorable 4-under 68 that gave him a one-stroke lead over Tom Lehman.

"Maybe lack of knowledge is better, not knowing how hard this course is supposed to be," said Paulson, a 37-year-old Californian whose biggest victory came on the Nike Tour.

Or maybe he just was too happy to be in the Masters to care.

Paulson
 Shot four-under

Paulson ran into the same kind of trouble that stalled everyone else on a blustery day at Augusta, making a double bogey on No. 11. But he also had an eagle and five birdies that gave him the lead after the first round of the first major championship of the year.

Lehman managed to avoid a train wreck until the end. Playing without a bogey for the first 17 holes, an amazing feat considering the tough new rough and always treacherous winds, he drove into the trees on the 18th and took double bogey to lose the lead.

"If you avoid hitting shots that cost you ... that was the whole key out there," said Lehman, the Masters runner-up in 1994. "But I feel good about the round. It's a tremendous score in these conditions. I'm not going to let one blip on the radar screen bother me."

Make that two blips for Woods, the prohibitive favorite to win his second green jacket. And he wasn't bothered, either.

Even-par at the turn, Woods three-putted for double bogey on No. 10 and then made his first triple bogey since November on the par-3 12th, hitting into the water and then three-putting from about 12 feet.

HAWKEYE ROAD BRIEFS

Women's Tennis

This Weekend: The UI women's tennis team travels north to Minneapolis to take on the No. 36 Minnesota Golden Gophers. The meet begins at 10 a.m. on Sunday.

On Iowa: The Hawkeyes are riding a four-match winning streak, including three over Big Ten foes in Penn State, Ohio State and Wisconsin. With the streak the Hawkeyes have improved their record to 7-9 overall and 4-1 in the conference.

On Minnesota: The Gophers are riding a winning streak of their own. The Gophers are winners of their last eight matches, including their most recent win over San Diego 7-2. On the season, the Gophers are 12-3 and 3-1 in the Big Ten.

Iowa's Key: Coach Paul Wardlaw said the key to victory is how well his team will perform on the road in the Big Ten. Last weekend's victory over Wisconsin proved Iowa could win away from Iowa City. Iowa battled the Badgers last week, but gained the advantage by winning first sets in several matches. Once again, the Hawkeyes will have to strike early.

Coach's Comment: "Minnesota is another good team in the Big Ten, and we're back on the road," said Wardlaw. "They are playing well right now but so are we so it should be another good test for us."

—Todd Brommelkamp

Men's Golf

This Weekend: The UI men's golf team travels to Huntington, Wv., to participate in the Marshall Invitational. The invitational begins with 36 holes on Saturday and finishes with a single round of 18 on Sunday.

On Iowa: The Hawkeyes finished 17th out of 18 teams competing at the Dr. Pepper/Tanglewood Invitational in Pottsville, Texas, two weeks ago. Iowa's lineup will be the same for Marshall. Matt Stutzman, Adam Turner, Jason Wombacher and freshmen Mike Tapper and Bo Anderson will shoot for the Hawkeyes this weekend.

Iowa's Key: Coach Terry Anderson has said all year that his team needs to learn to play par golf in order to succeed. Iowa's poor finish in Texas two weeks ago was due in part to inconsistent performances by only a few members of the team. If the team can all shoot consistently they are a threat to finish near the top of the field.

Coach's Comment: "Hopefully we've gotten our bad tournament out of the way for the season," said Anderson. "Our two young guys (Tapper and Anderson) did their jobs last time but the team needs to all be consistent."

—Todd Brommelkamp

Rowing

This Week: The Iowa women's rowing team will travel to Columbus, Ohio, Saturday to face Ohio State and Michigan in a double dual meet. The regatta will be held on the Griggs Reservoir and features a 2,000-meter race course.

Last Year: The Hawkeyes did not fair very well against either team. Iowa hosted Michigan and Ohio State on the Coralville Reservoir, but could not win a race against the Wolverines. Against the Buckeyes, Iowa took only one first in the second-novice 8+.

Last Week: The Hawkeyes hosted its final home meet on Lake Macbride. Iowa fared well against Kansas, Kansas State and Tennessee in a double dual meet by winning five of the nine races the team entered.

Coach's Comment: "This weekend, we will face the toughest competition yet this spring," Mandi Kowal said. "We come off a strong weekend motivated during our practices and striving for improvements each and everyday. I am confident we will create a very competitive experience for ourselves and our competitors."

Next Competition: The Hawkeyes will return to action Saturday, April 15, when they will travel to Madison, Wis., to take on the Badgers.

Women's Golf

This Week: The Iowa women's golf team will head to Bloomington, Ind., to compete in the Rolex Collegiate Tour Event on Saturday and Sunday. The meet is hosted by the University of Indiana and will be played on the Indiana Public Golf Course. The Hawkeyes will golf 36 holes on Saturday and 18 on Sunday.

Since the Last Competition: Iowa has used a two-week break from competition to improve short-game skills and develop consistency.

On the Competition: The event will include 15 teams with all but one of the Big Ten teams competing. The field includes: Iowa, Illinois, Illinois State, Indiana, Kent, Northern Illinois, Northwestern, Notre Dame, Michigan, Michigan State, Minnesota, Ohio State, Southern Illinois, Purdue and Wisconsin.

Coach's Comments: "This is going to be a tough meet," Diane Thomason said. "It will be a test for us since we haven't competed for two weeks. We're hoping for consistency from round-to-round by the whole team, and for a couple individuals to put up some good scores."

—Molly Thomas

Men's Track

This Week: The Iowa men's track team heads to Charleston, Ill., Saturday to take part in the Big Blue Classic on the campus of Eastern Illinois University.

Last Week: The Hawkeyes headed to California and placed fourth out of four teams at the UCLA Invitational in Los Angeles. Junior Nick Nordheim won the 3,000 meters at the meet and recorded a personal best time of 8:38.29.

Sophomore Adam Thomas also ran a season best, he placed third in the 1,500 meters. Jeremy Allen took some time off from spring football practice to compete in the meet, he placed third in the discus.

What to Watch: A lot of young guys. They made some steps last week towards being major contributors to the team. Hawkeyes like Liam Card (mid-distance), Russ Peterson (mid-distance) and Scott Faber (mid-distance) and Nordheim could continue to improve and have good meets.

Also look out for the regular contributors. Allen, Arno van der Westhuizen (thrower), Chris Cassata (thrower) and Stetson Steele (distance) will continue to turn in great performances. Three of those performers, Steele, Allen and van der Westhuizen, have already provisionally qualified for the NCAA Championships in their respective events.

Coach's Comment: "We had some good performances last weekend, highlighted by Scott Williamson's career best in the 400-meter hurdles," Larry Wiecek said. "Hopefully, the experience we gained at last week's meet will help set our program up for some good things in the future."

—Jeremy Schnitker

Women's Track

This Week: The Iowa women's track and field team will travel to Charleston, Ill., to compete in the Eastern Illinois Big Blue Classic today and Saturday. The meet will take place at O'Brien Stadium with competition beginning at 3:10 this afternoon.

On the Competition: There will be 15 teams competing in the Invitational, which includes Big Ten rival Illinois, Marquette, DePaul, Bradley and Eastern Illinois. This meet is the first team-scoring event of the season for the Hawkeyes.

Last Week: Iowa won all the relay events and set a new school record at the Missouri Relays last weekend. Freshman Jesse Strand set the record in the outdoor pole vault, clearing 11-6 to place second in the event.

Who to Watch: Iowa senior Stacey-Leigh Bynoe started the season off right with a terrific performance at the Missouri Relays last weekend. She took first place in the 400-meter dash and was a member of the champion 4x100 and 4x400 relay teams. Bynoe's emergence will be needed against tougher competition this weekend.

Coach's Comment: "Originally we were going to be in Texas this weekend, but we decided to go to Eastern Illinois instead to work on a couple things," James Grant said. "Every competition, the goal is to improve and the competition should be good, so we hope to do well."

—Robert Yarborough

UEFA Cup match peaceful after fatal stabbings

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — A force of 10,000 armed police kept the peace at Thursday's UEFA Cup match, 24 hours after two English fans were stabbed to death in street fighting in Istanbul.

Galatasaray defeated Leeds United 2-0 in the first-leg semifinal made even more tense by the huge police presence in and around Ali Sami Yen stadium.

Leeds players wore black armbands. The Turkish side elected not to, but stadium flags were flown at half-staff. The Galatasaray club read an announcement expressing regret for Wednesday's violence, but there was no moment of silence.

Police held several hundred Leeds fans in the 28,000-seat stadium for an hour after the game to avoid run-ins with Turkish supporters.

English fans and players, with police providing a protective cordon, were escorted onto buses for an almost immediate departure for Istanbul's airport.

As they arrived for the game, a few English fans flashed obscene gestures, while others hid their heads and some were clearly drunk.

The governing body of European soccer, UEFA, police and club officials decided to go ahead with the game following the street clashes.

Postponing the match would have "led to heightened tensions," said Leeds chairman Peter Risdale. English Football Association executive director David Davies called it the "least worst option."

The British Foreign Office said Turkish police were holding five people in the stabbing deaths.

Identical twins win Sullivan Award

NEW YORK (AP) — Kelly and Coco Miller, the identical twins who led the Georgia Lady Bulldogs to the NCAA women's Final Four last season, won the Sullivan Award on Thursday night as the nation's top amateur athlete for 1999.

The Miller sisters, from Rochester, Minn., became the first athletes in the award's 70-year history to win as an entry, and gave women's basketball a second straight Sullivan Award winner. Tennessee's Chamique Holdscrow won for 1998.

"It's an honor for us to be selected as this year's recipient of the Sullivan Award," Kelly Miller said. "We were up against a quality group of individuals and to be recognized as the top U.S. amateur athletes is a humbling experience."

The junior guards helped Georgia to a 32-4 record this season — the most wins ever for a Lady Bulldogs team — and brought them as far as the final eight in this year's NCAA tournament before a loss to Rutgers.

Kelly, was the SEC player of the year and led the team in scoring at 15.4 points per game.

Agassi inspired to be part of Davis Cup team

Opponents say this year's U.S. squad could be one of the best in history.

By Beth Harris
Associated Press

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — For Andre Agassi and Pete Sampras, Davis Cup means something this year. And that means big trouble for Jiri Novak and Slava Dosedel.

"We are playing the best team ever," Czech captain Jan Kukul said.

Agassi has long answered the call to play for his country in Davis Cup, but some years, he hardly felt like part of a team.

The U.S. Tennis Association was making decisions on matters Agassi believed were best handled by the players, including the choice of captain and team doctor.

"I just had no desire to pour so much energy into something that was only yet again another match, another week, another time away from home, from resting and getting ready for your big events," said Agassi, who didn't play last year. "It didn't mean anything."

Sampras agreed, preferring to concentrate on maintaining his world No. 1 ranking for six consecutive years while playing Davis Cup about every other year.

"It was hard to stay No. 1 and

The fact that we're now working as a team is what's inspiring, it's what makes it so special, it's why you want to be a part of it

— Andre Agassi, on why the Davis Cup is different this year.

play Davis Cup," he said Thursday. "It was a big commitment, and the times I've played Davis Cup over the years, I felt it hurt me a little bit."

But the appointment of John McEnroe as captain last fall marked a turning point. Suddenly, the USTA was consulting the top American players about who they wanted and what was important to them. They all agreed on putting McEnroe in charge.

"The fact that we're now working as a team is what's inspiring, it's what makes it so special, it's why you want to be a part of it," Agassi said.

Agassi and Sampras, two of the world's top three players, are on the same Davis Cup team for the first time since 1995. They're joined by Jared Palmer and Alex O'Brien, who are among the world's best doubles teams.

The heavily favored Americans take on the Czech Republic in a best-of-5 quarter-final beginning today.

Enron Field home base for Home Run Central

Houston's new home has a 315-foot left field wall that should help sluggers like McGwire and Sosa.

By Michael A. Lutz
Associated Press

HOUSTON — Home Run Central might find Enron Field its favorite stop.

The NL Central got its nickname when Cincinnati acquired Ken Griffey Jr. to join Mark McGwire of St. Louis and Sammy Sosa of Chicago for an anticipated home run derby in pursuit of the three-time division champion Houston Astros.

Houston will play its first regular-season game in its new home today against the Philadelphia Phillies, which also played the first official game at the pitching-friendly Astrodome in 1965. If the exhibition season was any indication, however, Enron Field will be a slugger's sanctuary.

"I think it's going to be a hitter's park, no question," Texas Rangers shortstop Royce Clayton said. "The ball seems to carry really well here. It's just a comfortable feeling. I'd be surprised if you don't see a lot of balls going out of here."

Two exhibition games against the New York Yankees and one with the Rangers produced nine homers. Two went over the shortest left field in baseball — 315 feet down the line — and the other seven went to right.

No one has threatened the expansive center field, with a flagpole-topped 30-degree hill rising to the fence 436 feet away.

Clayton, a speedster with moderate pop, homered in consecutive at-bats last week. So what's going to happen when the big bashers come calling?

"It's going to be an exciting season here, a real challenge," Astros starting pitcher Jose Lima said. "It's like Wrigley Field, where the wind blows out. This will be a great place to play. I'm not afraid. I've got pretty much of an idea what I have to do. I just have to make some adjustments in my pitching style."

While the pitchers gird for the challenge, Astros hitters are looking for some hometown homers.

For instance, first baseman Jeff

Bagwell hit 30 of his 42 home runs away from the dead air of the Astrodome.

"I've said before if Bagwell played in Seattle, he'd have as many home runs as Junior," teammate Craig Biggio said.

The Astros already have arranged targets for the big guns. A 422-foot marker has been plastered just below owner Drayton McLane's office on the sixth floor of Union Station, the old train depot behind the left-field fence.

Drew's blasts power win

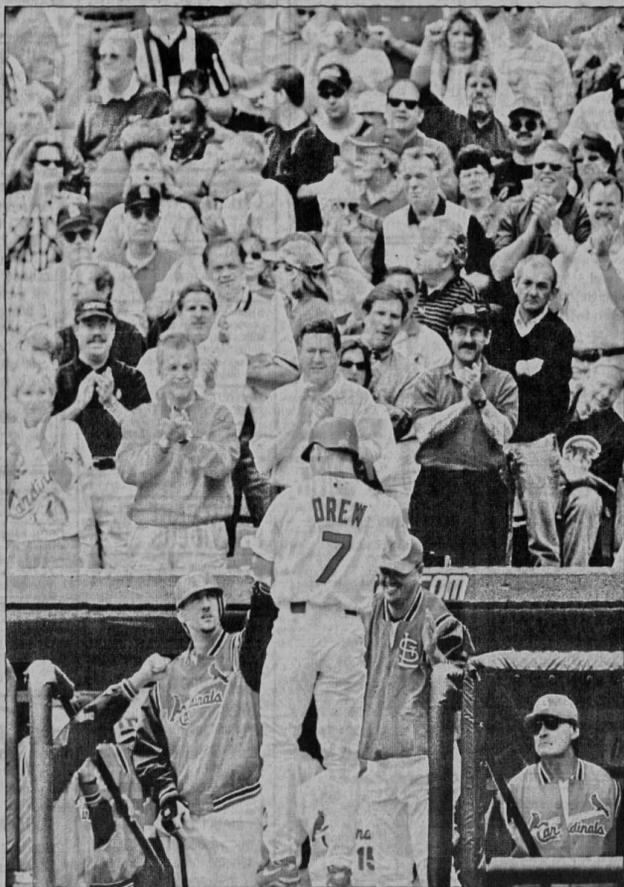

ST. LOUIS (AP) — J.D. Drew hit two home runs, including a grand slam, as the St. Louis Cardinals completed a dominating sweep of the Chicago Cubs with a 13-3 victory Thursday.

Fernando Tatis, Drew and Mike Matheny homered in consecutive at-bats in a seven-run third against Kyle Farnsworth (0-1), with Tatis' homer a three-run shot. Drew, who didn't start the first two games as Eric Davis played in right field, hit his first career grand slam in a five-run fourth that gave the Cardinals a 13-2 lead.

The only disappointment of the day for Cardinals fans came when Drew declined a curtain call despite sustained applause.

The Cubs, who opened last week in Tokyo with a split against the New York Mets, were outscored 30-8 in the three-game series while getting swept by the Cardinals for the first time since Aug. 7-9, 1998. Garrett Stephenson limited Chicago to three runs on four hits in seven innings, striking out five and walking one.

The Cardinals have homered nine times in their first three games, none by Mark McGwire. McGwire started for the first time after sitting out the first two games with a lower back strain and played five innings.

alone hit off Durbin. In his major league debut at Detroit last Sept. 26, Durbin allowed one hit in 2 1-3 scoreless innings.

Devil Rays 7, Twins 6

MINNEAPOLIS — Miguel Cairo had a career-best five RBIs, including the game-winning single off Hector Carrasco in the ninth that lifted the Tampa Bay Devil Rays past the Minnesota Twins 7-6 Thursday.

Cairo's ninth-inning single drove in pinch-runner Tony Graffanino from third. Graffanino had run for Herbert Perry, who reached on a two-base error by third baseman Dennis Hocking after Greg Vaughn's leadoff homer against Travis Miller tied the game at 6.

Orioles 6, Indians 2

BALTIMORE — Charles Johnson hit his third homer in two days, a three-run shot in the sixth inning that snapped a tie and lifted the Baltimore Orioles past the Cleveland Indians 6-2 Thursday night.

Mike Bordick also homered for the Orioles, who took two of three from the defending AL Central champions. Baltimore went 1-9 last year against the Indians.

With the score 2-2, Johnson connected off Charles Nagy (0-1) after Cal Ripken and Will Clark hit one-out singles. Bordick followed with his first home run of the season to chase Nagy, who allowed nine hits in 5 1-3 innings.

Reds 5, Brewers 1

CINCINNATI — Ken Griffey Jr. is no longer hitless in Cincinnati.

Junior got his first hit for his hometown team, a run-scoring single in the first inning Thursday night, and the Cincinnati Reds got their first win of the season, 5-1 over the Milwaukee Brewers.

Michael Tucker and Aaron Boone homered and Ron Villone (1-0) made two saving defensive plays, but the loudest and longest cheer was for a soft line drive.

Griffey got a standing ovation from the crowd of 20,909 when he slapped a 3-2 pitch from Jaime Navarro (0-1) toward left-center — the same area where Pete Rose's record-setting hit No. 4,192 landed 15 years ago.

The single scored Pokey Reese from third with the Reds' first run and ended Griffey's 0-for-10 introduction into the National League. Griffey motioned to the umpires to save the ball when he got to first.

White Sox 6, Rangers 2

ARLINGTON, Texas — Ray Durham homered on the first pitch of the game and Frank Thomas and Carlos Lee also connected as the Chicago White Sox beat Texas 6-2 on Thursday night.

James Baldwin (1-0) retired the first 13 batters and allowed two runs and six hits in eight innings.

Durham hit Esteban Loaiza's first pitch into the right-field seats to set a White Sox record with his 10th leadoff homer. Tim Lincecum had nine leadoff homers for Chicago.

Lee hit a three-run shot in the fourth to give Chicago a 4-0 lead, and Thomas made it 5-0 in the fifth with his first homer of the year. Thomas was 3-for-4.

Padres 8, Mets 5

NEW YORK — Matt Clement picked up where he left off last season for San Diego. The New York Mets are still waiting for Mike Hampton and their big bats to get started.

Clement kept New York's offense in a slumber, allowing one run in 6 2-3 effective innings, as the Padres beat the Mets 8-5 on Thursday night to spoil Hampton's home debut.

Hampton, the Mets' first legitimate ace since David Cone took over the title from Dwight Gooden in the early '90s, lost his second straight start.

After walking a career-high nine batters in an opening-day defeat to Chicago in Japan, Hampton (0-2) allowed four runs — two earned — five hits and three walks in 5 2-3 innings.

Flyers 3, Thrashers 1

PHILADELPHIA — John Vanbiesbrouck held off Atlanta's furious third-period rally as the Philadelphia Flyers escaped with a 3-1 victory over the expansion Thrashers on Thursday night.

Mark Recchi notched his NHL-leading 61st and 62nd assists as Philadelphia kept its quest for the best record in the Eastern Conference very much alive.

Cheers erupted every time conference-leading New Jersey was shown to be trailing Buffalo. The Devils' loss to Buffalo meant the Flyers could win the Atlantic Division and clinch the top spot in the East by winning their final two games — Saturday against Boston and Sunday against the New York Rangers.

Despite having to squeak past the team with by far the worst record in the league, the Flyers virtually assured themselves home-ice advantage in the first round of the playoffs. Although Eric Lindros has been out with a concussion since March 13, Philadelphia also has a chance to post its best record in 15 years.

Islanders 2, Senators 1

KANATA, Ontario — Rookie goaltender Stephen Valiquette stopped 45 shots, while Mariusz Czerkawski and Brad Isbister scored Thursday night as the New York

Islanders beat the Ottawa Senators 2-1.

Isbister broke a 1-1 tie with just more than eight minutes remaining and the Islanders hung on despite being outshot 46-13. New York won for the first time in its last six games (1-4-1).

Ottawa, which has won only one of its last five, remained sixth in the Eastern Conference with 91 points. The Senators have two regular-season games remaining.

Canadiens 5, Lightning 1

MONTREAL — Patrice Brisebois scored twice and the Montreal Canadiens remained tied for the final Eastern Conference playoff spot with a 5-1 win over the Tampa Bay Lightning on Thursday night.

The Canadiens (35-37-9-4) kept pace with Buffalo, which won 5-0 in New Jersey. Each team has 83 points, but the Sabres have two games remaining, while Montreal has only one — Saturday night at home against Ottawa.

If the Canadiens and Sabres end the season tied in points and wins, the playoff spot will be decided by goal differential, because the other tiebreaker is head-to-head play and it was tied.

Sheldon Souray, Turner Stevenson and Dainius Zubrus also scored for Montreal, which chased Lightning starter Dieter Kochen at 11:13 of the second period in favor of Zac Bierk.

Police accuse man of trying to sell Tyson's belts on eBay

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — A school hall monitor is accused of trying to sell two of Mike Tyson's championship belts in an Internet auction. Tyson's 1986 WBC and 1986 WBA heavyweight title belts, which police value at $50,000 each, were listed for sale several weeks ago on eBay, a California-based online auction site. Police say Tyson reported the belts were stolen from a Las Vegas storage locker.

William Eaddy, 33, a hall monitor at an Albany, N.Y., elementary school, was arrested late Tuesday and charged with second-degree criminal possession of stolen property, a felony. A warrant charging Eaddy with burglary is pending in Nevada, authorities said. Police said Eaddy once worked for the former heavyweight champion's manager.

Detectives were negotiating with Eaddy's lawyer to recover the belts, police said.

"Tyson's lawyers got wind that his championship belts were being posted on eBay for auction, and they contacted the Las Vegas Metro Police," said Albany Detective James Miller.

NHL RUNDUP

Streaking Sabres close to NHL playoffs

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Dominik Hasek had 24 saves and the streaking Buffalo Sabres moved a little closer to a playoff berth by beating the struggling New Jersey Devils 5-0 on Thursday night.

Doug Gilmour had three assists and Curtis Brown scored twice as the Sabres won their third straight and seventh in eight games to remain tied with Montreal for the eighth and final playoff berth in the Eastern Conference.

Both teams have 83 points, although the Sabres have two games left, one more than Montreal. The Canadiens beat Tampa Bay 5-1 on Thursday night.

Carolina also has an outside shot at a playoff spot. The Hurricanes have 80 points with two games left in the regular season against expansion Atlanta, and so will need help.

The loss was the second straight and fourth in six games for the Devils. They are not only in danger of losing the lead in both the Eastern Conference and the Atlantic Division, but there is a chance they could slip to fifth in the conference and lose the home-ice advantage for the first round of the playoffs.

Purdue series 'almost a must'

last season's mark of 6.35.

Saturday starter Ryan Prahm said that the difference is all in the aura.

"All the pitchers took it personally when people said (pitching) was our major weakness," Prahm said. "It's just attitude. There wasn't a whole lot of confidence in a lot of pitchers."

Freshman Matt Hasz, coming off a complete-game loss at Ohio State last Friday, will start today for Iowa. Jensen will join Prahm on Saturday, and either Chad Blackwell or Matt Gruber will go on Sunday for the series finale.

Carlson called the series with the Boilermakers "almost a must," and his teammates echoed his thoughts, talking of positioning themselves for a run at the conference tournament, which Iowa hasn't qualified for since 1993.

"It's been a long time since I've heard that we've swept a team in a series," Dvorsky said. "So any time we could sweep a team in the Big Ten, it's going to be huge. Really huge."

Course causes top players troubles

He managed two birdies the rest of the way for a 3-over 75, his worst score since the final round of the Masters last year. The last time Woods opened with a 75 at Augusta, he missed the cut. He was also a 20-year-old amateur.

"I think it's fine," said Woods, who now has gone nine straight rounds in the Masters without breaking 70. "It's not easy out there. Look at the scores. Look how many guys aren't under par."

Look at Jack Nicklaus. Somebody also forgot to tell Nicklaus that a 60-year-old has no business trying to contend for a seventh green jacket. He made 15 straight pars in the more difficult, crusty afternoon conditions until he stumbled with a couple of bogeys and finished with a 74.

Look at 63-year-old Tommy Aaron, who won the Masters two years before Woods was born. Aaron was 1 under with four holes to play and finished with a 72.

"The best I've done the past several years is miss the cut by a stroke," Aaron said.

Paulson and Lehman were the only players to break 70 on a day in which the new, expansive rough was far less a problem than old, devilish winds that change direction on a moment's notice.

Sergio Garcia, playing his first Masters as a professional, recovered from a double bogey on the par-3 sixth hole to finish at 70, tied with Steve Stricker.

The group at 71 included Phil Mickelson, who two-putted for all three of his birdies, and former U.S. Open champion Steve Jones, who was at 5 under until he ran into huge problems in Amen Corner.

Several others could have joined them.

Former Masters champion Craig Stadler was at 3 under until hitting two balls in the water on No. 15 and taking a quadruple-bogey 9.

"I was lucky to hit the green the third time," he said.

Two-time U.S. Open champion Ernie Els was at 3 under until his group was put on the clock on the 15th. He rushed a sand wedge into the 15th green, went in the water for double bogey, and let it gnaw at him the rest of the way.

"You're in the lead in the Masters and you've got some idiot official telling you you're out of position," Els said. "It's ridiculous."

It could have been worse.

Greg Norman, looking to erase 20 years of bad memories in the Masters, had a 43 on the back nine and shot an 80, his highest score ever at Augusta.

Former champions Seve Ballesteros (81) and Fuzzy Zoeller (82) were also among those who had an 80 or worse. Doug Ford, playing in his 48th Masters, had a 94. At least he shaved two strokes off last year's opening round.

None of this fazed Paulson.

The former winner of the National Long Driving Championship isn't as long as he used to be, but he already figured out one secret to Augusta. He played the par 5s in 5 under, including a 15-foot eagle putt on the second hole.

He also picked up a few breaks along the way, such as a nice kick around the bumpy hills guarding the eighth green.

"Every guy who played today got good breaks if he had a good score," Paulson said.

on say, a double steal, they're too late. They've got to get better at recognizing when we can run. It's hard to simulate that in practice. We need to work on it in games."

Iowa will take its 13-game win streak and its 24-3 scoring advantage at home into Saturday's contest.

"Every team you have to play with heart," sophomore pitcher Kristi Hanks said. "Coach always says, 'Fear no one. Respect everyone.' It's nice not to have to go back-to-back in conference games. It gives us a chance to see other teams."

Nicklaus still a believer

That much was apparent from the 2-over-par 74 Nicklaus turned in on a windswept day when the heavily favored Woods shot 75, and the average score was almost a full stroke higher than that.

Palmer and Player came to play some, too, since they shot 78 and 76, respectively. But just like all those years when they battled one another for golf's biggest prizes, only Jack really believed he couldn't be beat.

And still does. Not by Palmer or Player or by Woods or anyone else. His old foes don't agree. But given all the times he produced miracles to beat them, both had trouble closing the door.

"I don't think so," Player said.

"It would be very tough," Palmer said. "It would be great, but there's something about a few years going by that make a helluva difference."

Nobody in their right mind would buy a ticket today to see Johnny Unitas plunked down one more time in front of the Tennessee Titans' pass rush. Or Willie Mays standing in the batter's box one last time against Red Sox ace Pedro Martinez. Or even to see Bill Russell try to stop Shaq from dunking a basketball.

But judging by the size of the gallery for Nicklaus, Palmer and Player, the hottest ticket for the opening round was to see three golfing legends for the price of one.

Mothers hoisted children on their shoulders to see above the heads of a crowd that had swelled to six deep alongside the first tee. Blue-haired matrons parked in canvas chairs felt comfortable to call out advice as the trio rolled past on the fairways. They got a standing ovation at every hole where a grandstand was in place.

"I think they enjoyed it," Palmer said. "And I think they agonized with us a little bit when we didn't hit the shots they thought we should hit."

At one point, Woods hit his tee shot to within 10 feet at the par-3 16th and, hearing a roar, doffed his cap. If he'd been paying attention, Woods would have realized that the ovation actually was for the game's triumvirate, making its way down an adjacent hill toward the No. 6 green.

Not that Woods would have objected.

"I'd love to watch them on TV, too," he said, "but I'm not walking this course again."

Too bad.

The kid could have picked up a trick or two.

What he would have seen were three men with thinner hair and thicker middles, making swings that are abbreviated versions of what they used to be. But Nicklaus, Palmer and Player have lost very little of the desire that made them champions, and none of the grace. They still take this business about being ambassadors for the game seriously.

On the first tee, they played the crowd like politicians, telling jokes, posing for photographs, making eye contact with as many people as time allowed. Palmer got off a funny line just before Nicklaus teed off and made everybody within earshot roar. When asked afterward to repeat it, he paused.

"I don't remember," Palmer said.

"Well of course you don't," Player kidded.

But for all the laughing, the most important lesson Woods can learn is simply to observe Nicklaus. Anyone who expected him to be content with Thursday's effort was in for a surprise.

"It was the best round of golf I've played here in quite a few years," Nicklaus said, before adding, "and I got absolutely not very much out of it."
