UI busts Jessup Hall 'camp in'; 5 arrested

After a six-day occupation in Jessup, Public Safety removes the protesters in a midnight raid.

By Michael Chapman
The Daily Iowan

After a six-day occupation in Jessup Hall, members of UI Students Against Sweatshops were removed by members of the UI administration and Public Safety officers, who said a number of safety violations outweighed the group's right to free speech.

Approximately 25 members were escorted from the building, and five arrests were made on April 8. None of those arrested spent the night in jail.

UI graduate student Ned Bertz, UI senior Heidi Sabers, UI senior Laura Crossett, UI freshman Alex Pickett and UI senior David Burnett were charged with criminal trespassing, a simple misdemeanor. Burnett was also charged with interference with official acts when he refused to stand up and exit the premises; he was released on $650 bond.

"They came in and told the security guard in the hall that he was being relieved," said Michael Rack, a UI graduate student and SAS member. "Then they got everybody together from all the floors and told us that it wasn't going to be like last time; nobody was going to be carried out and let go."

Around 11:30 p.m., approximately 20 Public Safety officers entered Jessup Hall, blocked all entrances to the building,

Jessup Code of Conduct

- Halls in Jessup are exit corridors and must be free of obstructions at all times.
- Student demonstrations are restricted to the first floor
- Students demonstrating in Jessup during the day may be along corridor walls one person deep and may not use any form of sitting device or reclining equipment.
- Paper signs and banners may not be affixed or taped to the interior of the building.
- Handheld signs that do not block others access to the space may be carried by individuals standing one deep along corridor walls.
- Corridors may not be occupied after the building closes.
- Sound levels must not interfere with the conduct of classes, faculty research and study, or the orderly process of doing business in offices /conference rooms from the opening to closing of the building.

Group in limbo after workers' rights meeting

UI delegates return from the Worker Rights Consortium with new hopes.

By Avian Carrasquillo

Despite the efforts of representatives from universities throughout the nation, including the UI, to form the Worker Rights Consortium, the recent founding conference failed to accomplish one of its main goals.

Attendees of the April 7 worker's consortium founding conference in New York City were unable to elect a governing board, thus leaving the sweatshop labor-monitoring organization in limbo, said Marc Beltrame,

In historic step, 2 Koreas agree to meet

Some UI students from Korea remain skeptical about the scheduled talks.

By Robin Wright
The Daily Iowan

After a lifetime of hearing promises that North and South Korea would forge a peace agreement, UI students who come from the feuding nations are skeptical of recent speculation about a resolution.

UI graduate student Eun-jung Youn has kept in touch with family members in North Korea who believe that the presidents of the two countries were self-serving when they announced their intent to form a peace agreement.

"There have been several attempts at conversation between North and South Korea in our history. I don't have much expectation of peace because, for 50 years, there have been lots of gestures," she said. "We feel that these things are political and used for the advantage of the leaders."

The leaders of North and South Korea announced earlier today that they have agreed to meet for the first time, marking a major step forward in relations between the two nations, which technically remain at war.

The simultaneous announcements were likely to boost the fortunes of South Korea's ruling Millennium Democratic Party in parliamentary elections Thursday.

South Korean President Kim Dae-jung will travel to the North Korean capital for a "historic meeting" with his counterpart, Kim Jong Il, said South Korean Unification Minister Park Jaekyu during a news conference.

The June 12-14 summit would be the first between the two rival Korean states since the division of their peninsula into the communist North and the capitalist

RiverFest 2000 hooks up with Ohio jam band

RiverFest names main attraction: Ekoostik Hookah.

By Rupa Shenoy
The Daily Iowan

Ekoostik Hookah, a jam band from Ohio, will be the main concert act at this year's RiverFest, scheduled for Hubbard Park on April 28.

The band, formed eight years ago, is known for its combination of rock, jazz, funk and soul, said RiverFest music director Ryan Barker, a UI senior. The opening band and other concerts on April 29 have not been determined at this time.

The Green Room, 509 S. Gilbert St., has hosted Ekoostik Hookah three times, and each time, it draws a consistent crowd, said Green Room employee Trevor Hopkins.

"It's probably one of the best jam-rock bands," he said. "It is in the realm of the Grateful Dead and Phish."

UI junior Quincy Hunt said he had not heard of Ekoostik Hookah and wondered why the UI could not get bands with bigger names.

"Smaller colleges seem to get a larger draw — why can't the UI?" he said, adding that he had attended the Run DMC concert at the 1997 RiverFest, which was the last big name to appear during the festival.

Barker said this year's band was chosen for its laid-back style that appeals to most people.

"I think it'll be a good outside show," he said. "The kids will dance. They should all come out for this show."

Despite Hunt's complaints about the RiverFest committee's choice, he said he would probably attend the free event at Hubbard Park because he has always had fun at RiverFest in the past.

"RiverFest is a good time, not just for the band, but for activities and attitude that goes along with it," he said.

Ekoostik Hookah was invited to play in the Rock 'n' Roll Hall of Fame in 1997; it has also played at the House of Blues

Hybrid plane crashes, killing 19 Marines

The plane, which can take off and land like a helicopter, has a spotty history.

By Michelle Rushlo
Associated Press

MARANA, Ariz. — A Marine Corps aircraft attempting to land during a nighttime training mission crashed and burst into flames, killing all 19 aboard and adding to a checkered history for a new breed of hybrid plane that can take off and land like a helicopter.

The MV-22 tiltrotor Osprey, which looks like a turboprop, is part of a new generation of aircraft scheduled to eventually replace all of the Marines' primary troop-transport helicopters. The military began flying the aircraft six months ago.

The four crew members in the April 8 crash were from a task force headquartered in Quantico, Va. The passengers were 14 Marines from 3rd Battalion, 5th Marines based at Camp Pendleton, Calif., and one from Marine Corps Air Station-Miramar in San Diego County, according to the Marine Corps.

On Sunday, investigators were reviewing the crash site at Marana Northwest Regional Airport northwest of Tucson. Few details were released.

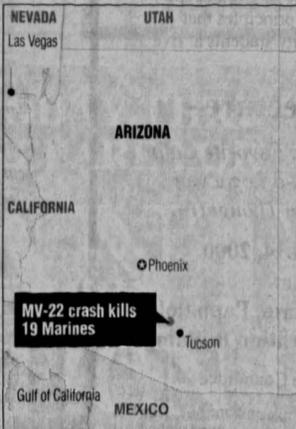

Carol Ward, who lives about five miles from the airport, said she watched the plane fly by from her porch. It disappeared behind a mountain, and a few seconds later, "I saw the smoke and this big old poof," she said.

The dust from the crash "just eliminated the sky," she said.

A heap of twisted, charred metal was visible at the scene, and aerial footage showed a large blackened patch on the airport grounds.

Military officials said the downed aircraft had been attempting to land at the airport when it crashed. It was one of two Ospreys simulating the evacuation

City rallies around dental students

Minority dental students who have been racially targeted get a show of support.

By Ryan Foley
The Daily Iowan

A mass e-mail to the UI community from President Mary Sue Coleman urged faculty and students to support recently targeted UI minority dental students — and some community members are responding.

The April 7 e-mail to the roughly 40,000 members of the UI community, the first Coleman has ever mass-mailed, was sent in an effort to inform the university community about what has been going on and to garner support for members of the dental college, she said.

"Please join me in extending support to our colleagues — the students, faculty and staff in the College of Dentistry," the e-mail read.

Some UI faculty and students are doing just that for the members of the school who received racist and threatening e-mails and, in one case, a note to an off-campus residence, in the past two weeks.

On April 7, Nancy Hauserman, the associate dean for the undergraduate programs in the Tippie College of Business, delivered a card of support to members of the dental school signed by hundreds of business students and faculty.

The signatures, which filled a full-size poster board, were offered to show that the dental students should not feel isolated from the community, Hauserman said.

"What we tried to tell them (in the card) is that they're not in this alone," she said. "We're all in this together — what happens over there affects the whole community. It will only stop if we raise a collective voice and take collective action."

The UI College of Engineering plans to take a similar measure. Jill Novosel, the chairwoman of the Engineering Student Council and a UI junior, is writing a letter of support on behalf of groups in the college. She will present the letter to dental students this week.

Novosel said she wanted to let the dental students know that the engineering school is very diverse, like the dental college, and that a similar situation could happen in it as well.

Hundreds are expected to take part in a rally on the Pentacrest Tuesday at 11:45 a.m. The group will walk from the Pentacrest to the dental building, where Iowa City Mayor Ernie Lehman and others will address the situation.

Organizers of the rally, which is being called the "Walk the Walk Rally," said it is time for the community to take action on the issue, rather than just talking about it.

"People say 'celebrate diversity' all the time, and now, with the rally, it's time for people to put their money where their mouth is," said UI junior Marquez Brown, a rally organizer who has been making several phone calls in an effort to get people involved.

Some community groups, such as the Iowa City Human Rights Commission and the Rape Victim Advocacy Program, also have publicly spoken out against the racism and plan to take part in the rally.

Coleman said the dental students she has spoken with have been grateful for the support the community has offered.

There have been no new developments in the matter since April 6, when dental students received an e-mail in which a person or persons claimed responsibility for intentionally starting a fire in a dental building laboratory.

Pot the best medicine, patients say

The UI holds the first national conference on the medicinal uses of marijuana.

By Cassie Huisman
The Daily Iowan

George McMahon, who has been in and out of hospitals for much of his life, explained how medicinal marijuana has drastically improved the quality of his life during the First National Clinical Conference on Cannabis Therapeutics.

The conference, held at the IMU over the weekend, gave 49-year-old McMahon a chance to address health-care professionals, lawyers and other patients on why medicinal marijuana should be more widely available.

"There is no good reason why marijuana should be illegal to anyone," said McMahon, a Bode, Iowa, resident and one of only eight people in the country who gets marijuana legally. The federal government quit taking applications for medicinal cannabis in 1992.

An estimated 75-80 people used the conference as an opportunity to discuss the uses and variations of marijuana, said Richard Schmitz, the director of state policies for the Marijuana Policy Project in Washington, D.C.

"Medical marijuana has not received the exposure it deserves," he said.

An 18-month study done by the Institute of Medicine was also discussed throughout the conference in an effort to provide information on research and to re-educate clinicians about the effects of medical marijuana, said Melanie Dreher, the dean of the nursing school, who helped to organize the conference.

Patients who take marijuana for medical reasons, whether legally or illegally, often use it to help with the effects of cancer, glaucoma, chronic pain and other problems.

"Politicians and drug warriors are saying a patient who uses marijuana is less than human ... they have no compassion," McMahon said.

He said he smokes approximately 10 marijuana cigarettes a day to alleviate such medical problems as pain, spasms and nausea. The government drug is grown in Mississippi and shipped to his pharmacy via Federal Express.

Conference Co-chairwoman Mary Lynn Mathre said she hopes people were able to see the issue of medical marijuana use from a different perspective after listening to the various presentations. "We're not trying to say it has no problems or that it works for everyone," she said. "We're trying to get information out to health-care officials."

The conference was broadcast live via satellite to sites in Arkansas, Colorado, Oregon, Virginia and Canada.

Overall, the conference was a success, Mathre said, although she had hoped to see more medical and nursing students there. She said she hopes some students will take the time to watch the conference, which will be available on video.

Dreher said attendance at the conference was fairly high, considering the subject.

"What can you expect for a very controversial topic?" Dreher said. "Marijuana use is a stigmatized issue." The conference was sponsored by the UI Colleges of Nursing and Medicine, along with Patients Out of Time.

"We've taught you; now go teach others," McMahon said at the conclusion of the conference.

Foreign-language tests irk international TAs

COGS began negotiations on the language-proficiency requirements for international TAs at the UI.

By Christy B. Logan
The Daily Iowan

UI international teaching assistants and members of the graduate-student union, COGS, met with UI officials on April 7 to address grievances against the UI's policy stating TAs must pass foreign-language requirements before teaching.

Some international TAs said the required exams are subjective and unfair, adding that they feel American TAs should undergo similar forms of testing. The required tests include Speaking Proficiency English Assessment Kit and Lecture to Evaluate Teacher Effectiveness.

UI administrators said the tests examine and measure foreign students' abilities to effectively articulate and deliver course materials to the students they lecture.

Currently, non-international TAs are judged for positions in an interview-type setting based on job qualifications.

"Testing a very limited group of people based on national origin is unfair," said COGS President Deborah Herman. "We're saying this is not an equally applied work rule and is only applied to this (international) group."

The UI implemented the current testing policy in 1988 following a state ruling that required classroom teachers to maintain a certain level of language competency.

"I think the problem is by implication that American citizens who are TAs don't have any difficulty standing in front of a classroom of students," said TA Steve Sharra of Malawi. "It would be wrong to assume that, based on just teaching capabilities alone. If it is for a certain teaching capability, then it should be applied to all TAs."

Although he said he found the tests grueling, Sharra said, he believes that they are necessary in order to monitor teacher effectiveness in the classroom.

"I thought they (the tests) were needed and justified, given the fact that the UI does need to have a way of certifying language and teaching capacity," he said.

Gary Althen, the director of the office of international students and scholars, said cases such as these help determine whether there is unequal treatment and a justifiable need to have test requirements.

He said some international TAs may find difficulty getting accustomed to American classroom settings, which involve more participation from the students.

Althen said the tests could determine how some students would respond to their instructor and perform in class.

"In an issue such as this, it must be talked over until everybody agrees on something that is fair," he said. "It's not just a matter of diction, but how personality comes across."

Stagehands return to work at Hancher, orally

The stagehands will work under an oral agreement reached a few weeks ago.

By Avian Carrasquillo
The Daily Iowan

Striking stagehands returned to Hancher Auditorium as a result of an unannounced oral agreement reached a few weeks ago between the UI and the International Alliance of Theatrical Stagehands Local 690.

The stagehands' union representatives said they will not jump to conclusions because an oral agreement does not guarantee a permanent solution.

"We are still working on an agreement. I don't feel comfortable saying that there's something there; there was some verbiage being discussed and worked on. We sent them some material, and we're waiting to here back from them," said Margaret Sump, a union representative.

The stagehands returned to work on The Music of Andrew Lloyd Webber on March 28-29 because of the oral agreement, said Wallace Chappell, the Hancher director.

Although nothing has been signed, Chappell said, progress has been made in the negotiations.

"We have an oral agreement that we hope to fine-tune. There's no real time frame for how long it could take to get it in writing, but we think we're in the final phase of it," he said.

Ann Rhodes, the vice president for university relations, said a final agreement has not been reached by the UI and the union but that the situation has improved.

"I think that we're close to an agreement that benefits both sides. The UI has not seen any major setbacks from the strike other than a canceled performance last month," she said.

Dancing and drumming up a crowd at Powwow

■ The 11th annual UI Powwow revives an ancient culture while entertaining thousands.

By Kate McGeown
The Daily Iowan

Paul Vara loves going to Powwows. He has been a regular vendor at the UI Powwow, held in Carver-Hawkeye Arena since it began 11 years ago, and this weekend was no exception.

He sees the occasion as an opportunity to meet old friends, listen to the rhythmic beating of the drums, watch the dancers perform in all their flamboyant finery, and, most importantly, to pass on the age-old customs of his ancestors.

Vara is the owner of the Little Bear arts-and-craft stall, which sold traditional handicrafts including wooden flutes, turquoise and silver jewelry, and hand-woven textiles, using techniques passed down from his father.

"It's very important to maintain our culture; otherwise, it will fade away," Vara said.

He also spoke of the problems facing contemporary American Indians.

"When I was a kid, my mother told me not to say I was Indian. I could say I was Mexican or Spanish, but not Indian," he said.

Vara recalled the many tribes that have been wiped out completely, and he said it was still difficult to maintain traditional tribal customs, even on reservations.

"It's amazing that these people are still here after all they've been through," said Penelope Conklin, an employee of the UI Facilities Services Group. "And yet they're still willing to share their culture with the white men, who did this to them."

Although some of her ancestors were American Indians, UI junior Christie Jonas has never known much about their customs and culture.

But as soon as she arrived at the Powwow, which attracted 7,000 people over the weekend, she was entranced by the iridescent costumes, traditional dancing and beating of the drums.

"I'm so excited this is here," she said. "I've never been to anything like it since I was in junior high."

Music and dance are an important part of the lives of American Indians, said Delaine Snowball, a dance-contest organizer.

"We use the strengths we get from dancing in our everyday lives," she said. "It's a spiritual thing — like church for some people."

While the dancers moved to the beat of the drums in the center of the arena, approximately 65 stallholders filled the edges, selling traditional foods and handicrafts.

"Every stall holder is from a different tribe and has a different story to tell," Jonas said.

Artist and writer Nakoma Volkman, a direct descendent of Chief Red Cloud of the Oglala Sioux tribe, is another regular on the Powwow circuit, exhibiting his art nearly every weekend all over the country.

As well as selling his wares, Volkman uses Powwows to change people's stereotypes of American Indians. Many movies have created false impressions of Indian traditions, he said.

"People think we are blood-thirsty savages, and some are actually afraid of us," Volkman said. "I try to give people the correct idea of who we are, what we do and why we do it."

UI fed up, removes sweatshop protesters from Jessup Hall

ARRESTS

locked doors, cleared all floors and herded the protesters onto the first floor, Bertz said. Additionally, the officers confiscated the group's cell phone and their cameras.

"They took the cell phone first so we couldn't call our lawyer," Sabers said.

Phillip Jones, the UI vice president for student services, defended the action, saying "the police were trying to keep the situation orderly," and it was "within their rights."

After an investigation of the building on the morning of April 8 found tents, sleeping bags and people blocking the exits in the building, the UI decided to remove the group, based on a number of safety and property concerns, said Ann Rhodes, the vice president for university relations.

The number of banners, papers and tents lining the hall had increased the potential for a fire, said David Hackbarth, a safety engineer in the health protection office, who conducted the investigation.

Although the SAS members had been camping in Jessup Hall since April 3, the violations overruled their freedom of expression, said UI General Counsel Mark Schantz.

"There's no free-speech right to eat and sleep in Jessup Hall, and we're not going to take that anymore," he said.

"You wore out your welcome," said Rhodes when she addressed group members at a Sunday morning press conference.

The reason the removal took place so late on April 8 was because the UI only learned of the violations that afternoon and Public Safety shifts were changing, so more officers could be available, Rhodes said.

Bertz disagreed, saying Public Safety "obviously chose a time where no media were present."

The SAS belongings confiscated by officers can be picked up beginning today in the IMU.

Changes in the rules for protesting in Jessup Hall have also been made, Rhodes said, so students will no longer be able to spend the night in the building.

Group members said they have gone home for the time being and will focus their efforts on a 6 p.m. Wednesday rally. At this gathering, the beginnings of a new SAS protest will begin, one that is not going to end, Bertz said. A press conference has also been scheduled by SAS members for this afternoon at 2:30.

In related news, Purdue Students Against Sweatshops ended an 11-day hunger strike on April 7, when administration promised to increase efforts to prevent sweatshop abuses.

Workers' group still up in the air after meeting

MEETING

a UI law student who was one of the UI representatives at the conference.

"Until the positions are filled, the workers' consortium is not an officially formed corporation," he said. "I think that because this was the first time together for the constituents, an agreement was not reached, but I'm confident that we will be well-represented."

The organization now has until summer to elect the board, Beltrame said.

Despite the failed elections, he said, the delegates' goal of establishing a network among schools has been achieved. The conference was also a good opportunity to learn about the workers' consortium and how it can be an effective vehicle for improving the re-evaluation of sweatshop-labor abuses, he said.

As a result of attending the conference, he said, he will tell UI President Mary Sue Coleman that there needs to be unity between the workers' consortium and the Fair Labor Association, "because separately they will fall."

Also representing the UI at the founding conference were law Professor Marcella David and Laraine Carnichael Nelson, the chairwoman of the UI Human Rights Committee and the director of the nursing school student services.

Ann Rhodes, the vice president for university relations, said she thinks the UI representation was very worthwhile.

"I think especially with a faculty member on the task force, we have strong representation for the UI that will give us a presence," she said.

Ned Bertz, a UI graduate student and member of UI Students Against Sweatshops, who was also asked to represent the UI at the meeting but later declined, said he was motivated by the delegates' trip to New York.

"I was very encouraged that Iowa had a delegate committee to influence the workers' consortium," he said.

Some UI students skeptical about Korean talks

KOREAS

South in 1945.

The two countries fought a 1950-53 war and never signed a permanent peace treaty. Today, they share a heavily fortified border; 37,000 U.S. soldiers are based in the South to guard against any threat from the North.

Tensions, even after a half-century, may make peace negotiations tedious, said UI graduate student Bongin Yoo, who is originally from South Korea.

"Because of the Korean War, people in the North and South hate each other. I don't know about the North, but in South Korea they think future reunification is possible — but at the present time, the South is still suffering the pain too much," he said.

Despite the political implications of the peace talks, history serves as a role model for national reunification, some say.

"If leaders of both countries talk openly, then peace and reunification is possible. It worked when East and West Germany reunited after years of conflict," said Mose Lee, a UI graduate student from South Korea.

She said the band has six albums out, with approximately 75,000 copies sold.

Ekoostik Hookah is also known for the annual "Hookahville" in Hebron, Ohio, which takes place over Memorial Day weekend, Barker said. The band, with special guests, takes followers through "two nights of camping and music." This year's special guests include former member of the Grateful Dead, Bob Weir, and Arlo Guthrie, a son of Woody Guthrie.

The mission was conducted with night-vision goggles and infrared radar, officials said.

Firefighters said witnesses reported seeing the plane head straight down and become engulfed in flames after it crashed.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Coleman must take action

Even in the throes of financial crisis, the UI does not need to profit from child labor. However, via this administration's reluctance to quit the Fair Labor Association, it tacitly agrees to tolerate such exploitation. Why, countless students ask, won't President Mary Sue Coleman make a firm, principled commitment to human rights? In her April 6 guest opinion, Coleman wrote, "I appreciate all that students and others have done to focus attention on sweatshop abuses." It seems, however, the university's priority is not to focus on the sweatshop problem but rather to co-opt the victories of activists.

Coleman wrote, "It's time to move from talk to real action" and asked students to "join us and become part of the solution." I believe we should take this suggestion to heart. Students and community members should continue attending teach-ins in Jessup Hall and press the administration to withdraw from the labor association. It is a matter of common decency.

Civil negligence by SAS leads to a "mobocracy"

Regardless of whether or not you're a proponent of SAS, you must admit that we're witnessing something incredible — the birth of a full-fledged "mobocracy."

"No," SAS will scream, accompanied by the shouts of certain DI columnists and the ranting of tired middle-aged men and women perched in coffee houses the city over. "SAS is a people's movement, not a mobocracy."

Yours is not a people's movement. Your people, in my opinion, are uninformed. Your leadership is muddled. Your tactics are irrational. You are bringing about change through the use of brute force and seem to lack the strength of will to engage in a fruitful dialogue with other concerned parties. You continue to defy the very authority that has assumed your cause. These are not the actions of a civil movement, these are the actions of a mob.

You have the right to protest — that is your prerogative. You have the right to engage in civil disobedience. And as you've shown thus far, you have the right to do so irresponsibly. The university has met or is in the process of meeting your demands, yet you refuse to step down your aggression. You are no longer engaging in fruitful behavior, you are now playing at popular rebellion and losing credibility.

To Ned Bertz: you command mob power and the logic it entails. You are obstinate and ignorant. Your behavior is negligent and reprehensible. You lead through example. There is an aphorism among the Asante people in Africa: If you grasp an egg too tightly, it shatters. If you grasp it too loosely, it falls to the ground. You have misused your power. You have overstepped acceptable boundaries. You now command a mob, posturing as socially conscious activists. All things considered, I'm sure you'll now have something to wax eloquent about during your waning years.

The other day while walking from work, I watched the rain wash the word SAS, scrawled in angry and hard handwriting, from the sidewalk. Such is the fate of your movement unless you assume that which you decry the absence of in the university: accountability.

Jake Gale
UI sophomore

"Walk the Walk" against racism on Tuesday

The hate crimes committed against black students at the UI College of Dentistry in recent weeks have called attention to the hatred that is ever-present in our community. The Rape Victim Advocacy Program joins the other voices on campus that are calling for an end to this violence.

These crimes deserve much more attention than they have been given. Every time someone is hurt on this campus or in another part of our world, it is inexcusable.

Indeed, we acknowledge that for every act of hate that garners public attention, there are countless acts of racism, sexism, homophobia and other forms of oppression that go unaddressed.

This collective silence may be due to apathy, approval, confusion, feeling overwhelmed by so much violence — we cannot know for sure. We need to speak out consistently and insistently against violence.

Because of the public outrage against the recent attacks, we have a chance to find our voices and solutions. Participate in the "Walk the Walk" rally Tuesday, organized by several student organizations. The rally will begin at 11:45 a.m. on the west lawn of the Old Capitol.

Join us in renewing a personal commitment to ending violence through everyday actions.

Voice opposition to racism

As a native Iowa Citian and a U of I alumna, I am saddened and ashamed to hear of the recent manifestations of racism targeted towards students in the dental school. But I am not shocked, for this sort of hatred is always lurking — sometimes in the shadows, and sometimes in the light of day.

I urge all community members, students, professors and administrators to forcefully vocalize their opposition to such despicable behavior, not only now (when the racism is blatant), but always, so that all present and future students of color will feel welcome at the UI.

Clinton proposal is the latest waste of drug-war money

Each year, as April 15 nears, Americans wonder just exactly where their tax dollars are going. This year, if Congress approves President Clinton's recent proposal, 1.3 billion of those hard-earned dollars will find themselves in Colombia. What will they do down there? Not much. People who prefer that tax dollars are spent wisely should contact their congressional representatives and demand an alternative to Clinton's highly questionable proposal.

The aid package is worthy of review for myriad reasons. Colombia is a country of perpetual chaos; with poverty reigning and guerrilla forces controlling approximately half the land, many people have no choice but to work in cocaine production. It is these innocent civilians who bear the brunt of the fighting between the cocaine-financed rebels and the U.S. drug war-financed government. More U.S. money only makes the fighting bloodier, with no effect on the level of cocaine exports.

In addition, there are a number of domestic questions surrounding the proposal. First, there is the sheer size of the aid package. A year ago, the White House was unwilling to fund three Black Hawk helicopters for Colombia. Now, Clinton is calling for 63 U.S.-made helicopters and $68 million to upgrade radar planes used to track drug smugglers. Beside the fact more hardware has yet to result in less cocaine, administration officials have acknowledged that the Colombian Army doesn't even have enough hangars in which to store the helicopters or pilots to operate that many choppers.

Second, election-year politics seems to be rearing its ugly head. Despite government figures that indicate drug use has been static over the past five years, a poll presented to the White House in September showed that the public perceived that drug use was on the rise and tended to blame Democrats.

Some sort of action suddenly became imperative; Clinton's party simply couldn't afford to hand Republicans the drug issue on a silver platter. The poll, however, was commissioned by Lockheed Martin, a persistent pusher for heavy increases in drug interdiction, and the defense contractor that makes the radar planes facing upgrades — hardly the act of a disinterested party.

Third, a flurry of lobbying efforts and monetary contributions by companies with military contracts has many wondering just how influential such activities can be.

Lockheed Martin has given a total of $1.8 million to both parties but stands to gain $68 million to upgrade the radar planes. United Technologies and Textron, both makers of military helicopters to be given to Colombia should Clinton's proposal pass, stand to gain $454 million. Their price: $1.4 million and a few exciting helicopter rides for congressional members.

While the proposal is currently stalled in the Senate, it is expected to be picked up and passed later this week, despite the questions and controversy surrounding it.

That is, unless fed-up tax payers, those tired of powerful lobbies and political maneuvering and people who care about the welfare of individuals in other countries raise their voices and demand that Congress develop an alternative to Clinton's dubious and wasteful plan.

Recent protests continue the long tradition of student uprisings at the UI

For almost the entire past week, up to 30 UI students occupied — morning, noon and night — Jessup Hall. Several times during the week, fellow Students Against Sweatshops protesters and members rallied outside the building.

On April 6, they even gathered in front of UI President Mary Sue Coleman's house on Church Street. So far, one of their three demands have been met, and, as of Sunday night, five have been arrested.

Coleman, meanwhile, seems to have grown quite tired of the situation. Much of last week, she slipped out a secret back door of her office, sent a guest opinion to this paper, a letter to all university faculty, and put a statement on the UI Web page, trying to gather support for the administration's stance. Then, after the administration "learned" of safety code violations on April 8, it prompted the evacuation and arrest of protesters in Jessup, which happened around 11:30 at night.

The struggle involves unfamiliar acronyms, workers on the other side of the globe and the unstable Hawkeye logos. Students Against Sweatshops want the UI to get out of the Fair Labor Association and join the Worker Rights Consortium. It also wants the UI to sign a strong code of conduct. One demand, that the UI join the workers' consortium, has been met.

Some have commented that the actions and rhetoric of SAS are wrong and irrational, some even forming an opposition group, Students Against the Methods of Student Against Sweatshops. Some have said that the protest is a renewal, perhaps long-awaited, of student activism on college campuses. Some believe the cause is worthy, some not. Some — in fact many — have little to no opinion about the matter.

SAS has framed the issue around civil rights. It argues that the many workers who make UI apparel, some of whom are children, are exploited — receiving far below living wages and operating in horrible working conditions. It argues the labor association, run largely by corporate executives, has little to no interest in exposing the horrible conditions of these factories.

The workers' consortium, in contrast, is designed to be more independent and therefore more willing to recognize these type of factories, as well having experts in human rights. In addition, SAS believes a strong code of conduct must be written by the UI to ensure reasonable working conditions in the future.

The administration says it is waiting to see the labor association in action, that the organization hasn't had the time to produce the desired results, whereas the workers' consortium just had its founding conference on April 7 and exists only on paper. The administration also says it is working, through a committee, on a code of conduct.

The sad truth is that probably every one of us is currently wearing clothing made from sweatshops. In fact, it's quite difficult to find clothing and footwear that's not. And while many economic gurus speak of abstract economic models and the long-run benefits for everyone, a line must be drawn when an institution such as the UI uses sweatshops to make clothing with the university name and Tiger Hawk logo.

Quite simply, the placement of the university name and Tiger Hawk logo on clothing by poorly compensated workers symbolizes support of sweatshops. The issue isn't about ending all sweatshop labor around the world — although that would be desirable — but rather about making sure the UI avoids supporting such awful practices.

Many people are aware of the student uprisings from the middle 1960s through much of the 1970s. Most notably, in early May 1970, after the Kent State shooting, approximately 230 student protesters were arrested under the recommendation of UI President Willard Boyd. Less than a week later, the UI closed prematurely, with students graded on a pass-withdrawal basis.

In the mid-1980s, students rose again. In a debate more similar to our current one, students across the country and at the UI said university investments in South Africa were a way of supporting the apartheid status-quo. They demanded that the universities divest this money from the country; eventually, most universities complied, including all three state schools in Iowa. In 1985, under UI President James O. Freedman, approximately 120 UI students were arrested in the protests. In 1993, apartheid collapsed. Many experts say the student movement and the eventual divestiture helped to speed up the process. The time has again arrived when students have enough heart and organization to stick with an important goal. And, despite the shady arrests of five students April 8, more protests lie ahead. And, if history is any indication of what may happen in the future, the UI administration and Coleman will have to respond with more leaps and fewer steps. And that, for sure, will be factory-fresh.

Joseph Plambeck is the DI assistant Viewpoints editor.

On the SPOT

Do you think that Students Against Sweatshops demonstrators deserved to be arrested at Jessup Hall on April 8?

"I think at a large university, people should be able to voice their opinions about matters such as that. I don't feel they should be arrested if they're demonstrating peacefully."

Christa Raszkowski
UI senior

"Probably not. They (SAS members) need to get their act together. They've crossed several lines."

Naftaly Stramer
Iowa City resident

"I think they knew it was coming, but the university went about it in an under-handed way. Arresting for a code violation is a cheap shot."

Lona Scott
UI senior

"If they (SAS members) were doing something they shouldn't be... I guess they should have been arrested... but if they're not doing anything wrong, it's all right."

Ryan Cheers
UI freshman

"I guess because the building's closed, it's trespassing, but because it's a sit-in, it's expected. It's a reasonable expectation that you'll be arrested."

Emily Burton
UI junior

CITY & WORLD

WORLD BRIEF

Peru elections appear headed to runoff

LIMA, Peru (AP) — President Alberto Fujimori led in early results Sunday in Peru's presidential election, but the race appeared to be headed for a runoff vote in his attempt to win an unprecedented third five-year term.

Unofficial results from 99 percent of precincts showed Fujimori pulling ahead of Alejandro Toledo, with 48 percent of the vote to his opponent's 41.6 percent, the independent polling firm Apoyo said.

Hours earlier, an exit poll by the same firm gave Toledo 45.2 percent to Fujimori's 43.6 percent.

The poll did not take into account isolated rural areas inaccessible by road, where support for Fujimori was expected to be strong. Those rural areas were likely to provide the margin of victory in the closely contested race.

But if the numbers hold up, a runoff will be necessary, because a candidate needs to obtain more than 50 percent of valid votes to win outright.

Fujimori, 61, popular for having crushed leftist insurgencies and ending economic chaos, was facing the most serious challenge of his career from 54-year-old Toledo, a U.S.-trained economist.

Toledo, wearing a red bandanna around his head, greeted tens of thousands of supporters outside a downtown hotel Sunday night.

As the crowd chanted "the dictatorship has fallen," and "Toledo president," he cautioned that it was premature to claim victory. But he said, "there is reason to celebrate the dawn of a new democracy in Peru."

Germany 'Nets looted art database

Germany turns to the Internet to reunite art looted in World War II with its pre-war owners.

By Paul Geitner
Associated Press

MAGDEBURG, Germany — Adolf Hitler, a failure as an art student, plundered cultural treasures from across occupied Europe for the grandiose Fuehrer Museum he wanted built in his hometown of Linz, Austria, as part of his legacy.

Those plans, like many of Hitler's Thousand Year Reich fantasies, were never realized. But much of the artwork survived.

Thousands of paintings and other looted objects ended up in a warehouse in Munich, where first the U.S. Army, then the West German government tried to reunite them with their rightful owners. In many cases, though, it proved impossible: Too many people were lost in the Holocaust or the chaos of postwar migration.

Now Germany is searching again for clues to crimes more than 50 years old and doing so using the most modern of tools: the Internet.

The Lost Art Internet Database, with searchable listings in German, English and eventually Russian, will go online today, allowing anyone to peruse items that may have belonged to their families.

"It's a worldwide medium, the best way to spread information," said Regine Dehnel, an art historian in charge of research on the government-sponsored database. "With today's technology, you can reach people you'd never be able to with a printed catalogue."

Included on the site is the remaining stock — 2,200 objects out of approximately 10,000 initially — from the postwar Central Collecting Point in Munich, with pictures and descriptions of each.

"They were very successful with a large part of the objects, but nevertheless there are a lot of objects that still are listed as ownerless today," said Michael Franz, the director of the database project.

The new effort to clear up outstanding ownership questions is "very positive and very gratifying," said Peter Heuss, a historian at the Jewish Claims Conference office in Frankfurt, which handles many Holocaust-related restitution claims against Germany.

But the chances of success "will probably be very bad," he added, because the list includes not only paintings but also a lot of smaller items such as coins and medallions.

"Those objects are not very easy to recognize again so clearly at times," Heuss said.

The Claims Conference plans to present a list on the Internet this year with the result of its own research into stolen art that ended up in communist East German museums, Heuss said.

The items listed on the site include pieces from Hitler's so-called Linz List: art collected — sometimes legally, more often not — for his mega-museum.

The Lost Art Internet Database can be reached starting today at www.lostart.de.

Berry pleads innocent to leaving the scene

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Through her lawyer, actress Halle Berry pleaded innocent on April 7 to a misdemeanor charge of leaving the scene of an accident.

The actress, free on her own recognizance, wasn't in court. She is due to appear at a pretrial hearing on April 21.

The prosecution claims that Berry, 31, was behind the wheel of a rented Chevrolet Blazer that ran a red light and struck another vehicle on Feb. 23 in West Hollywood. The Blazer then left the scene of the crash, authorities said.

The Golden Globe-winning star of the TV movie Introducing Dorothy Dandridge was cut on the forehead during the crash, and the driver of the other vehicle, which was a total loss, suffered a broken wrist and other injuries.

That motorist, Hetal Raythatha, has filed a lawsuit against Berry, accusing her of negligence and infliction of emotional distress. The lawsuit, claiming Raythatha was permanently disabled by the crash, seeks unspecified damages.

Raythatha, 27, also said in her lawsuit that she believes Berry was under the influence of alcohol or drugs when the crash occurred. The actress' spokesman, Allan Mayer, denied the allegation.

The charge of leaving the scene of an accident carries a penalty of one year in jail.

SINGH-SATION

Singh ends journey with Masters win

By Doug Ferguson
Associated Press

AUGUSTA, Ga. — Vijay Singh once found refuge in the remote rain forests of Borneo. On Sunday at the Masters, he took his place among the stars.

First came an early charge from Tiger Woods, then a relentless challenge from David Duval. In the end, Singh calmly held off Ernie Els to complete an improbable journey that brought him his second major championship in three years.

"This is something I think you can't beat," Singh said shortly after slipping a size 46 green jacket over his broad shoulders.

No one knows better than Singh. Banned from two tours, he started his comeback in 1985 by taking a club pro job at Keningau Club, where he toiled for $160 a month and pounded balls in every free moment. He lived in a one-bedroom apartment and had no idea how he was going to make his way back to big-time golf, let alone Augusta National.

"It was a struggle, but it was a peaceful struggle," said the 37-year-old Fiji native. "I wouldn't swap that for now."

Now, he has as many majors as Woods and Els. He carved out a place alongside Ben Hogan, Arnold Palmer and Jack Nicklaus, names he knew only from the videotapes he watched of past Masters.

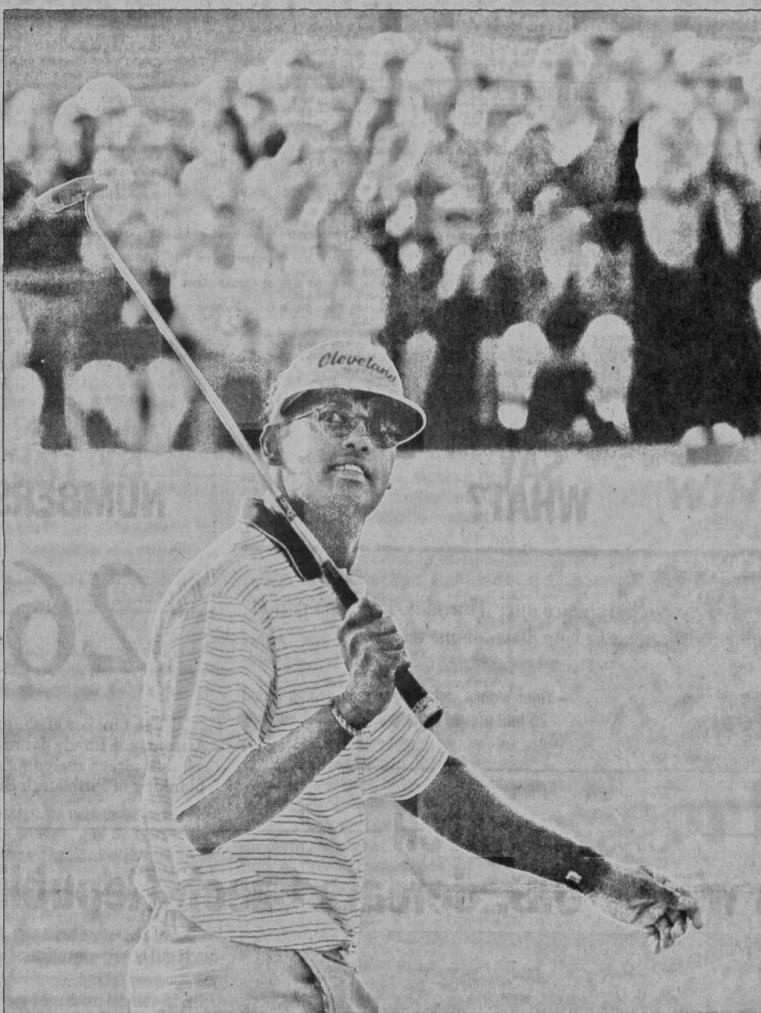

"We didn't have live TV in Fiji," he said.

The tiny South Pacific country has a reason to celebrate now.

Singh rolled in an 18-foot birdie putt on the last hole for a 3-under 69, kissed the ball as he removed it from the cup and embraced his family. His 9-year-old son, Qass, had taped a message to his bag that said, "Papa, Trust Your Swing!"

He did, following those directions better than anyone else.

Singh finished with a three-stroke victory over Els, $828,000 for his eighth career victory and another major that validates him as one of the game's top players.

"Winning this one gives me confidence that I can win a lot more," Singh said.

Els, a two-time U.S. Open champion, couldn't get a birdie putt to fall on the last three holes and was at 281.

The biggest threat came from Duval, in contention on the back nine Sunday at Augusta for the third straight year. His dreams died with a risky shot that wound up in Rae's Creek for a bogey on the par-

5 13th, the easiest hole at Augusta. Duval had a 70 and finished third along with Loren Roberts.

Woods, trying to pull off the greatest 36-hole comeback in Masters history, got within three of the lead but played even-par on the back and finished fifth, six strokes back.

"I was so focused on what I was doing," Singh said. "It meant a lot."

And it showed when last year's winner, Jose Maria Olazabal, helped him slip into the coveted green jacket.

Bluder's contract worth up to $250,000

The women's basketball program is anxious for Lisa Bluder to begin her new job.

By Lisa Colunno
The Daily Iowan

Coach Lisa Bluder officially took over the reigns of the Iowa women's basketball program Friday, and she is being welcomed with open arms by both the administration and student-athletes.

The former Drake coach's resume is extensive, including an overall record of 356-142 (.715) during her 16 years as a coach at Drake University and St. Ambrose. In the last six years, Drake advanced into postseason play five of those seasons.

The Bulldogs also participated in eight Missouri Valley Conference tournaments, winning the tournament four times.

Bluder

A six-week, national search concluded with the official hiring of Bluder Friday. Dr. Christine Grant, director of women's athletics, said that the search was narrowed down to six final candidates and Bluder accepted the position.

"We concluded after our national search that Lisa Bluder is an excellent choice for the University of Iowa," Grant said. "I know that a few weeks ago I could have driven to Des Moines in two hours and offered the job, but I think that would have been a disservice to the program and a disservice to Lisa because Lisa now knows she is our choice after a very thorough national search."

Bluder will receive a five-year, $150,000 base salary, which will reach up to $250,000 after making I-Club, TV, radio and personal appearances. The money is nearly $100,000 more than Angie Lee earned last season, and matches the raise that Iowa State coach Bill Fennelly was given after the Cyclones returned home from the Sweet 16 this season.

Guard Cara Consuegra served on the seven-member committee in the coaching search. When Lee resigned,

Stutzman shines in golf meet

Iowa junior Matt Stutzman took the individual title amongst a strong field Sunday.

By Todd Brommelkamp
The Daily Iowan

With much of the golf world's focus on the Masters, Matt Stutzman and his Hawkeye teammates turned in their own masterful performance over the weekend.

The UI men's golf team rebounded from a poor showing two weeks ago to place fourth in the 20-team field of the Marshall Invitational on Saturday in Huntington, W. Va.

Stutzman, a junior, led the way by firing a tournament-leading 214 to claim the individual championship.

"I was very happy with the resilience of this team," said coach Terry Anderson. Just two weeks prior, the Hawkeyes finished in 17th place at the 18-team Dr. Pepper Intercollegiate.

Iowa notches 'big' wins

The Iowa baseball team captured three of four games against a strong Purdue squad over the weekend.

By Greg Wallace
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa baseball team had its coming-out party this weekend, and the reasons why were surprising.

Clutch pitching and stingy defense helped the Hawkeyes to win three of four games against Purdue Saturday and Sunday at Iowa Field. After losing the first half of a doubleheader Saturday 5-4, Iowa (12-19, 6-6 Big Ten) rebounded to take the day's second game, 2-0, and sweep Sunday's doubleheader, 5-4 and 1-0.

All four games were seven innings in length, as Friday's game was postponed due to two inches of snow which fell on Iowa City.

The series win was Iowa's first in Big Ten play since 1998, and the six conference wins match 1999's mark with over a month of conference play remaining.

"Right now, this is pretty big," said pitcher Nick Jensen, who pitched five innings of two-run ball and was the winner of Sunday's first game. "We've played a lot of close games all year, and to get over the hump and put teams away and win the series gives us a lot of momentum heading into this week."

All weekend, Iowa showed poise under pressure, bending but not breaking numerous times as the Boilermakers (18-12, 6-6 Big Ten), put runners on base against Hawkeye pitching.

No one held up better than junior Chad Blackwell, who bedeviled the Boilermakers with a four-hit, complete game shutout in Sunday's finale.

He got only a first-inning home

Hawks improve perfect record at Pearl Field

After removing snow from the field, the Iowa softball team got in one game with Detroit Mercy Saturday.

By Melinda Mawdsley
The Daily Iowan

It's a good thing Iowa's bats were hotter than the weather.

After plowing snow off the outfield and bleachers and preparing the infield, Iowa's scheduled doubleheader against Detroit Mercy on Saturday was changed to a single game.

Behind a season-high 11 runs and a season-high tying 16 hits, Iowa needed only five innings to shut out the Titans.

The No. 14 Hawkeyes (27-7) improved their win streak to 14 and remain undefeated at Pearl Field.

Iowa made good on their traditional game plan of putting early and constant pressure on the opposition. The Hawkeyes scored in every inning, beginning in the bottom of the first.

With two outs, three consecutive singles loaded the bases. When Megan Atkins hit a grounder to shortstop, the Titans made one of many mistakes and tried to get speedy Kristin Johnson at third. Everyone was safe and Jessica Bashor scored from third. Johnson later scored off a Jill Knopf bunt.

"It really helps us, especially on defense," Johnson said about scoring early. "Because you don't have the extra pressure, like if you make an error then, 'Uh-oh, they're gonna get up on us.' We have some insurance runs. It helps us all-around."

In the bottom of the second, Erin Doud reached on an error and, following a Johnson single, made a great slide around the Titan catcher to avoid the tag.

In the third, with Knopf and Rasche on the corners, Iowa executed a double steal. Doud later drove in Rasche for the final run of the inning. Blevins wanted her team to be more aggressive on the base paths and the Hawkeyes showed improvement in the lopsided victory.

"Obviously we were beating up on them pretty well," Blevins said. "So

Agassi, Sampras win as U.S. defeats Czech Republic

United States advances to the semifinals of the Davis Cup Sunday.

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Andre Agassi drew the United States from the brink of Davis Cup elimination Sunday, then Pete Sampras overcame a strained thigh to send the team to the semifinals.

Agassi beat Jiri Novak of the Czech Republic 6-3, 6-3, 6-1 to tie the quarterfinal 2-2. Sampras followed with 18 aces in a 6-4, 6-4, 7-6 (2) win over Slava Dosedel in the final match to clinch a 3-2 victory.

The United States will play Spain, a 4-1 winner over Russia, beginning July 21 in Spain.

Playing a fifth and decisive match for the first time in his seven-year Davis Cup career, Sampras hit a backhand winner off a 113-mph serve by Dosedel to win the tiebreaker 7-2 and set off a red, white and blue celebration among the 12,002 fans at the Forum.

After sharing hugs with teammates Agassi, Alex O'Brien, Jared Palmer and captain John McEnroe, Sampras jogged around the court holding an American flag overhead. He passed the flag to Agassi for a lap, then McEnroe did the same.

Bennett spent the past week considering retirement after Wisconsin lost 53-41 to national champion Michigan State in the NCAA tournament semifinals. But while taping his weekly television show, which aired Sunday on WISC-TV in Madison, Wis., Bennett confirmed his desire to return for a sixth season.

Martin steals one in winning Goody's 500

MARTINSVILLE, Va. — Mark Martin emerged almost unscathed from near-constant hazards brought by a track record-tying 17 caution flags Sunday and his late-race gamble on old tires won the Goody's 500 at Martinsville Speedway.

Martin, a non-factor as Rusty Wallace dominated the first 436 laps, went ahead for the first time when he stayed on the track during a caution with 64 laps to go. He never let teammate Jeff Burton get close during the run to the finish.

Yankees pitching coach has cancer

SEATTLE — New York Yankees pitching

coach Mel Stottlemyre has a form of blood cancer that he said was diagnosed about a year ago.

The 58-year-old coach will begin treatment in New York immediately but expects to keep working with the team.

The cancer attacks plasma, the fluid part of the blood, and is called multiple myeloma, a malignant disease of the bone marrow. Philadelphia Flyers coach Roger Neilson has the same cancer and underwent a stem cell transplant last month.

UConn's El-Amin headed to NBA

STORRS, Conn. — He was the first player to embrace his coach when Connecticut won its only men's basketball title.

With the 77-74 win over Duke in St. Petersburg, Fla., last year, Khalid El-Amin helped the Huskies make good on his prediction that they would "shock the world." And on Friday, to the surprise of almost no one, the stout 5-foot-10 point guard announced he will skip his senior year to enter the NBA draft.

Cincinnati's Martin wins Wooden Award

LOS ANGELES — Even without an opportunity to shine in this spring's NCAA tournament, Cincinnati's Kenyon Martin continues to be acknowledged as the men's college basketball player of the year.

The 6-foot-9 senior, who broke his right leg in Cincinnati's first-round game of the Conference USA tournament four weeks ago, was a runaway winner of the 24th John R. Wooden Award, presented Friday.

19 athletes represent Iowa on academic team

The Big Ten announced its winter Academic All-Conference Team that included 19 UI women student-athletes from the sports of basketball, gymnastics and swimming and diving.

To be eligible for selection, a student-athlete must be a letterwinner in at least their second academic year at their school, and carry a career grade-point average of 3.0 or better.

Iowa basketball player Lindsey Meder was one of four Big Ten student-athletes to have maintained unblemished GPAs of 4.0 or better.

Iowa placed four from basketball, two from gymnastics and 13 swimmers on the winter list.

USA Gymnasts to appear in Field House

John Roethlisberger and John Macready, two of the six men who represented the United States in gymnastics at the 1996 Olympics, will compete in the North Gym of the UI Field House Saturday.

The duo will be competing during the USA Gymnastics Region IV Championship meet, which will run Friday through Sunday in the safety of the athletes.

"The river was rising and there was also added debris," Kowal said. "The temperature was dropping and the wind was expected to be 20-30 mph. We all just felt that the conditions were not safe."

Though the Hawkeyes didn't get a chance to compete this weekend, their success from their last meet is still ringing in their ears. Iowa became the first boat to be named the Big Ten Boat of the Week on Thursday. The Hawkeyes' Varsity 8+ received the award for their performance against Kansas and Kansas State last weekend.

"It is really exciting to be recognized for the first time it is ever awarded," Kowal said, "I think it will really bring more awareness to women's rowing."

Hawks get doubles, not pleasure

Iowa lost two Big Ten men's tennis matches over the weekend.

By Lisa Colonno
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's tennis team accomplished a two week-old goal last weekend, but it wasn't enough to push the Hawkeyes to Big Ten victories.

The Hawkeyes won the doubles point against No. 59 Wisconsin and No. 13 Minnesota over the weekend. Prior to the weekend's duals, Iowa's doubles teams had been swept in their previous three matches.

Despite jumping out to an early lead in both duals, Wisconsin defeated Iowa in Madison Friday, 4-3, and Minnesota downed the Hawkeyes, 4-3, in Iowa City Sunday.

"We needed to change the mix and give people a new outlook on things," Houghton said. "We had four freshmen playing in doubles (over the weekend). I'm pleased with our doubles."

Against the Badgers, Iowa came away with doubles wins at both No. 2 and 3. J.R. Chidley and Hunter Skogman won, 8-6, at No. 2, while Pete Rose and Eric Kozlowski won, 9-8 (4), at No. 3 doubles.

Big Ten Player of the Week Tyler Cleveland said that Iowa's doubles play received a much-needed boost with the changes, but it wasn't enough to get the Hawkeyes (5-11, 1-5 Big Ten) over the hump.

"(Houghton) has emphasized doubles," Cleveland said. "Winning the doubles point gave us a lot of momentum and confidence (going into singles). We had close matches against both teams. But it could have gone either way"

Against Minnesota Sunday, Cleveland and Stuart Waters won at No. 1 doubles, 8-5, and the No. 3 doubles team of Jake Wilson and Rose won, 8-3.

The Hawkeyes needed to win three singles matches in each dual to walk away with the team win, but managed to win only two in each. Cleveland and Wilson were each unbeaten on the weekend.

"I feel the best I've felt this year," Wilson said. "I feel like I did when I was a freshman (before sitting out due to injury). I'm glad I could tough it out and come away with the victory."

Cleveland also felt that he was at the top of his game against the Golden Gophers'

Harsh Mankad. He beat Mankad, 6-3, 6-0.

"(Sunday) I played the best I have all year," he said. "I hit the ball really clean. In both matches (this weekend) I was able to get out to an early lead. In the last couple of matches I could jump out on top. That gives me confidence and I can roll through the matches."

J. R. Chidley did not compete against Minnesota Sunday. Houghton said Chidley sat out due to undisclosed team disciplinary reasons.

"It's unfortunate that he couldn't play today," Cleveland said of Chidley. "J.R. and Hunter (Skogman) are one of the most-feared doubles teams in the Big Ten. They are very dominating."

Bluder will hit Iowa City running

New Iowa women's basketball coach Lisa Bluder will have her hands full immediately.

By Robert Yarborough
The Daily Iowan

Lisa Bluder will not have much time to celebrate her promotion into the Big Ten coaching ranks.

Bluder, who led Drake University to four consecutive 20-win seasons, was named Iowa women's basketball coach on Friday, after signing a five-year contract worth up to $250,000 a year.

"I felt like I had taken Drake about as far as I could take the team," Bluder said. "This is exciting because it is going to give us the opportunity to go after the best women's basketball players in the nation now. I always said it would take the perfect job, perfect opportunity for me to leave Drake. I have found that here."

Bluder had two recruiting classes ranked No. 13 in the nation during her stint at Drake and averaged more than 3,600 fans last season. The attendance number is particularly impressive considering Drake has an undergraduate enrollment of 3,164 students.

"Drake only has one marketing person for the entire athletic department, so Lisa had to do a lot of it herself to get that type of crowd," Grant said. "She must have done one heck of a job promoting and selling that program in order to do that."

Now, the hard work begins. The hiring of Bluder falls perfectly in line with Iowa's late signing period for recruits beginning on April 12. The new coach is expecting her second child on April 21 but plans to keep recruiting hard.

"I am on the phone, I am writing letters," Bluder said. "Getting someone here might be a challenge, but that is a short-term problem."

Grant and Bluder are expected to meet this week to begin filling the assistant coaching positions immediately. She has requested three assistants and one administrative assistant.

Recruiting is at the forefront of her responsibilities at the moment, however. The new coach had a recruit scheduled to visit Drake the day of the press conference.

Brian Moore/The Daily Iowan

New Iowa women's basketball coach Lisa Bluder faces the media with her family on Friday afternoon at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

"It is hard when you have been working with someone for four months to attend your university and then tell them to change schools within a week," Bluder said. "We will see what type of salesperson I can become."

For now, Bluder can relax knowing she is a definite in what has been a sequence of unknowns for the Iowa women's basketball team over the past five months. "I feel the university has a strong commitment to bringing the women's basketball team back to national prominence and it has helped me get excited about the wonderful vision about where this program can go," Bluder said.

UI ROAD SPORTS BRIEFS

Women's Golf

The Iowa women's golf team got a chance to see how they stand in the Big Ten Conference over the weekend.

Iowa finished sixth in a field of 15 at the Indiana Invitational, which included every Big Ten team except Penn State. The tournament was played on the par-74 IU Golf Course. It was shortened from 54 to 36 holes because of poor weather conditions.

"The first day of competition was absolutely freezing," coach Diane Thomason said. "I was disappointed because we actually played better the first day than we did the second day when the weather was more cooperative."

Leading the Hawkeyes was senior Kelli Carney, who finished in a tie for seventh place (77-82). Carney was in third place after the first day, but couldn't keep up with the pack.

Thomason said that she was disappointed in the team's failure to take advantage of their good position after the first day, when the team trailed Wisconsin, Northwestern and Michigan State by as few as three strokes.

Thomason said the sixth-place finish is not a terrible placement against Big Ten teams. Iowa finished ninth last year at the Big Ten championships.

"It was a pretty good finish against the Big Ten teams," Thomason said. "I just would like to see a good overall team performance, which will mean good scores from everyone."

—Molly Thomas

Men's Track

Despite leaving nearly all of its top runners at home, the Iowa men's track team turned in a solid performance Saturday at the Big Blue Classic in Charleston, Ill.

The Hawkeyes left all of their throwers and distance runner Stetson Steffe in Iowa City to "get more competition in and develop some younger guys," according to coach Larry Wiczorek.

One of the younger guys that did some developing over the weekend was freshman Tony Lieck. The Council Bluffs, Iowa, native placed second in the 400-meter hurdles in a time of 53.7.

"Tony's run was unbelievable," Wiczorek said. "He won his heat and came up to me and said, 'I want to win this thing.' Not everyone has that attitude in a meet like this — it was a really outstanding performance."

According to Wiczorek, the team "didn't do too well," but he accomplished his goal of seeing younger runners improve. He said his team won't be out in full force again until April 22, with the Hawkeyes on their home turf for the Iowa Open.

"These meets we use to prime things up," Wiczorek said. "We're going to have everyone competing at the Iowa Open, then we should piece everything together."

The team will split up next weekend, as some Hawkeyes will be heading to the Mt. SAC Relays in Walnut, Calif., on April 15-16, and others in the Lee Calhoun Relays in Macomb, Ill.

—Jeremy Schnitker

Women's Track

The Iowa women's track and field team ran into a little bit of trouble at the Big Blue Classic Saturday afternoon.

Iowa placed 10 athletes in the top five and finished fourth out of nine teams at the competition. However, Iowa coach James Grant was not pleased with the overall performance of the team.

"The weather was bad and we just did not really run close to our potential as a team," Grant said. "We even had to run some events indoors because of the weather. The whole team traveled, but we decided to rest some of the runners because the weather was so bad."

Freshman Sarah Arens was champion of the 3,000 meters finishing with a time of 9:52.17, a season-best. Senior Paula Ruen placed first in the 60-meter hurdles in 8.57 seconds, and junior Mandi Beck placed first in the javelin with a mark of 146-3.

"Since most of the competition was ran indoors, it really was not worth the trip for us," Grant said. "But it did provide some more experience for some of the younger runners."

The Hawkeyes hope to return outside this weekend when the team travels to Macomb, Ill., to compete in the Lee Calhoun Relays.

—Robert Yarborough

Women's Tennis

The No. 48 UI women's tennis team had its four match winning streak snapped by No. 33 Minnesota on Sunday in Minneapolis, suffering a 4-3 setback. With the loss, Iowa falls to 7-10 on the season and 4-2 in Big Ten play.

"It's always hard to win on the road in the Big Ten," said coach Paul Wardlaw. "You could have flipped a coin on this one."

As has been the case all season, Iowa jumped to an early lead by gaining the doubles point. The Hawkeyes used an 8-4 win from No. 18 Shera Wiegler and Toni Neykova and a 9-8 win from Erica Johnson and Megan Kearney to gain the 1-0 advantage. Johnson and Kearney were down 7-1 before battling back to an 8-7 advantage, finally winning the match on a tie-breaker.

However, Minnesota wrapped up the match by taking four of six singles matches from Iowa. The Hawkeyes won victories from Wiegler at No. 1 and Johnson at No. 5 singles.

Of Iowa's four losses, two came down to the third set with both Natalya Dawaf and Kearney coming up on the losing end. Neykova and Jen Sinclair also lost in singles for Iowa.

"We've got to do better closing out set points," said Wardlaw. "We are too loose with our big points."

The Hawkeyes return home to host Michigan State on Saturday and No. 53 Michigan on Sunday.

Knight supporters gather for rally

■ Bob Knight supporters gathered at a rally outside of Assembly Hall Sunday.

By Chris Sundheim
Associated Press

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. — Hundreds of Bob Knight's backers gathered Sunday on the steps of Assembly Hall to voice their support for the embattled Indiana University basketball coach.

Knight, who did not attend the rally, is under investigation by the university following charges by former Indiana player Neil Reed that the coach grabbed him by the throat.

Also, former player Ricky Calloway said Knight punched Steve Alford and slapped Darryl Thomas. Alford and Thomas said that never happened.

"(Knight) was like my father away from my real parents," said Landon Turner, a member of the Hoosiers' 1981 NCAA championship team who was later paralyzed.

Turner, who spoke to the crowd from his wheelchair, said he was often "in the coach's doghouse" for not working hard enough. But like other speakers, he told the crowd of students and fans that Knight deserves their support.

"As long as he's coach of Indiana basketball, we know our basketball program will be in great hands," Jerod Morris, another Knight supporter, told the crowd.

The rally was organized by a Columbus man, Mike Pegram,

Seth Rossman/Associated Press

Indiana fans yell during a rally on the IU campus Sunday, in support of basketball coach Bobby Knight and denouncing media coverage of the Indiana coach, who is accused of choking or hitting former players.

who operates a Web site devoted to Indiana University sports. Although organizers estimated 800-1,000 people showed up, police put the crowd size at about 500.

"Coach Knight is not an easy person to play for," former Indiana player Damon Bailey said. "He demands a lot out of you as an individual, and he demands a lot out of you as a team."

"Some guys can't handle that ... it's awful easy to point fingers at someone else instead of yourself," he said to the crowd's cheers.

A recent message in a discussion forum on the site spawned a group called Fans and Friends in Support of Coach Knight.

The group has run half-page advertisements backing Knight in The (Bloomington) Herald-Times, the Evansville Courier & Press and The Courier-Journal of Louisville, Ky.

The ads criticize the media as being unfair in the reporting of the accusations against Knight.

Speakers on Sunday struck a common theme of media bias, charging that newspapers and television stations paint one-sided, negative pictures of the man who has led Indiana to three national titles in 29 years at the school.

Many also were critical of Knight's detractors, calling them "crybabies" who had failed to achieve athletic success.

Singh escaped danger to win green jacket

MASTERS

"It feels great," a beaming Singh said.

Singh played tours on five continents and was banned from two of them, one because of allegations that he doctored his scorecard to miss the cut. He has long denied the charge, but it has haunted him throughout his career.

"I don't think anyone should be surprised that Vijay Singh won this golf tournament," Duval said. "He's a wonderful player."

He proved it on the back nine at Augusta, where so many Masters are decided. For Singh, Sunday morning was just as critical as Sunday afternoon.

With frost melting into dew, he returned to the course to complete his third round and made two critical par putts that enabled him to maintain his three-stroke cushion over Duval.

That paid dividends later in the day, when Singh managed to escape danger twice without losing his lead.

Clinging to a two-stroke lead over Duval, Singh hit his approach into the pond left of the 11th green. He was able to drop close to the green, hit a delicate chip to 4 feet and dropped only one shot by making the putt.

Then on the par-3 12th, he hit over the green into the most daunting bunker at Augusta. Faced with a shot that sloped down the green toward more trouble, he blasted out to 2 feet — the same shot Olazaball pulled off to win last year.

Duval, who lives near Singh in Ponte Vedra Beach, Fla., was still poised to win his first major championship until a mistake on the 13th.

"I played perfectly well enough to win the golf tournament," Duval said, but "the day did not turn out like I wanted."

Ditto for Els, the 30-year-old South African who got word Saturday that his buddy had won a $2 million lottery and thought it might be a good omen.

"I felt like I was going to win the tournament when I stepped on the first tee," Els said. "I was really trying to push too hard."

Woods, an overwhelming favorite at the start of the week, wound up missing key shots on the par 5s. He still needs five more green jackets to catch Jack Nicklaus.

"I knew going into this week that every time I play, this game is very fickle," Woods said. "Even though I didn't get off to a good start Thursday, I gave myself a chance. I got back into the tournament and had a chance on Sunday."

Sabres slip into Cup playoffs with tie

Buffalo tied Washington to clinch the Eastern Conference's final playoff spot.

WASHINGTON (AP) — On the last day of the regular season, the Buffalo Sabres did just enough to slip into the NHL playoffs. Coach Lindy Ruff gets to chew another day.

"I beat the heck out of a piece of gum all game long," Ruff said after Sunday's 1-1 tie with the Washington Capitals. "We said it probably was going to come down to the last game, but it turned out to be the last period — the last few minutes. But we got the job done."

The result gave the defending Eastern Conference champions the eighth and final seed in the conference and eliminated the Carolina Hurricanes. The Capitals will have the No. 2 seed.

Needing a win or a tie to clinch a playoff berth, Buffalo took the lead on Stu Barnes' goal 2:48 into the third period. Washington's Richard Zednik tied it with 14:24 to play.

Flyers 4, Rangers 1

NEW YORK — The Philadelphia Flyers, playing down the stretch without their coach and captain, won the top seed in the Eastern Conference.

Mark Recchi and Daymond Langkow scored second-period goals and rookie Brian Boucher made 15 saves Sunday as the Flyers captured the Atlantic Division title with a 4-1 victory over the New York Rangers.

Hurricanes 2, Thrashers 1

RALEIGH, N.C. — Paul Coffey scored two goals and Arturs Irbe had a shutout until the final minute as the Carolina Hurricanes beat the Atlanta Thrashers 2-1 Sunday, but missed the playoffs by one point.

The Hurricanes went into their regular-season finale needing to win and Buffalo to lose at Washington in order to slip into the eighth and final playoff spot in the Eastern Conference. But the Sabres tied 1-1 for 85 points, leaving the defending Southeast Division champions with 84 and out of the postseason.

Islanders 3, Panthers 2

UNIONDALE, N.Y. — Mariusz Czerkawski's hat trick and Roberto Luongo's 29 saves helped the New York Islanders end their season with a 3-2 victory over the playoff-bound Florida Panthers Sunday.

Buffalo's Stu Barnes (41) is surrounded by teammates after scoring the Sabres' only goal against the Washington Capitals in the second period at the MCI Center in Washington Sunday. Buffalo is the eighth seed in the Eastern Conference.

Pavel Bure just missed tying his career high of 60 goals by scoring twice for the Panthers, who finished the season in fifth place in the Eastern Conference.

Blackhawks 3, Blues 1

CHICAGO — The Chicago Blackhawks played well again when it didn't matter.

Josef Marha scored a go-ahead power play goal in the third period Sunday and the Blackhawks headed to vacation with a 3-1 victory over the NHL's best regular-season team, the St. Louis Blues.

While the Blues own a 51-20-11 record and home-ice advantage throughout into the playoffs, the Blackhawks go home having missed the postseason for a third straight year.

Avalanche 3, Red Wings 2

DENVER — Usually one of the NHL's most spirited rivalries, the Colorado Avalanche and Detroit Red Wings finished the regular season Sunday with a rare penalty-free game.

Milan Hejduk scored his 36th goal of the season, and Patrick Roy moved closer to the career victory record as the Avalanche beat the Red Wings 3-2.

It wasn't immediately clear when the last penalty-free game was played in the NHL, but preliminary reports said it last happened in 1980.

Rockets finally solve Jazz

Houston rookie Steve Francis scored 26 as the Rockets beat Utah Sunday, 99-90.

HOUSTON (AP) — Walt Williams had no idea that Utah had dominated Houston. So the Rockets' 99-90 victory over the Jazz on Sunday was less of a surprise to him than to some others.

Utah had won the last 12 regular-season games over Houston dating back to Nov. 9, 1996 and eight straight overall. But that was news to Williams, who is in his first season with the Rockets.

"I didn't know that until just now," said Williams, who had 21 points. "That makes this even better."

"It's just a good feeling right now. We obviously are disappointed with the season. But to beat a good team like this helps a lot."

Hornets 96, Pacers 80

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Eddie Jones, Derrick Coleman and Elden Campbell each scored 19 points as the Charlotte Hornets beat the Eastern Conference-leading Indiana Pacers 96-80 Sunday and clinched a playoff berth.

Anthony Mason added 18 points for the Hornets, who stopped a two-game losing streak. Campbell added 13 rebounds and Mason had 10.

Heat 95, Knicks 94, OT

MIAMI — It was a frantic finish and a vital victory for Tim Hardaway and the Miami Heat.

Hardaway sank a desperation 25-footer as time expired in overtime Sunday, allowing the Heat to close in on their fourth consecutive Atlantic Division title by beating the New York Knicks

Suns 102, Kings 97

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — Penny Hardaway had 25 points, 12 rebounds and six assists Sunday as the Phoenix Suns defeated the Sacramento Kings 102-97 to complete a season sweep.

The Suns, 4-0 against the Kings, made sure they would stay in front of San Antonio for fourth position in the Western Conference playoff picture.

Magic 92, 76ers 80

ORLANDO, Fla. — The Orlando Magic continued their push for a playoff berth Sunday, containing Allen Iverson and beating the Philadelphia 76ers 92-80 for their eighth win in nine games.

Ron Mercer scored 17 points and Darrell Armstrong added 14 as the Magic moved two games ahead of Milwaukee in the race for the eighth playoff position in the Eastern Conference. Orlando visits the Bucks on Monday night.

Iverson was limited to six points in the first half. He finished with 18 on 7-of-22 shooting.

Cubs watch Junior hit a high note

Ken Griffey Jr.'s first home run in a Cincinnati uniform helped the Reds over the Cubs 8-7 in 11 innings Sunday.

CINCINNATI (AP) — First homer, first run, first big moment for his hometown team. Ken Griffey Jr. ended a rough week the right way.

Junior got that long-awaited first homer in Cincinnati, starting the Reds' comeback from a six-run deficit to an 8-7, 11-inning victory Sunday over the worn-out Chicago Cubs.

In addition to his two-run homer in the sixth, he also walked leading off the 11th with the Reds down by a run. Griffey came around on third baseman Shane Andrews' errant throw to first base on Hal Morris' bunt.

Moments later, Alex Ochoa singled to left off Matt Karchner (0-1), giving the Reds their second 11-inning win in two days and an upbeat ending to a dreary opening week for Junior.

"It was nice to see him break out of that drought, get that first homer out of the way, that first run out of the way," manager Jack McKeon said. "Maybe he'll relax a little bit. It's just a matter of time before he catches on fire."

Griffey had pretty good timing Sunday. Before the homer, he was only 2-for-24 with three balls out of the infield.

"It was bound to come," he said, shrugging when the homer was mentioned. "You guys were acting like 20 at-bats and I was over the hill or something. I turn on TV and that's all I'd hear."

Phillies 3, Astros 2

HOUSTON — Mickey Morandini's two-out RBI single in the eighth inning rallied the Philadelphia Phillies to a 3-2 victory over the Houston Astros on Sunday.

Jay Powell (0-1) walked Bobby Abreu to start the eighth but got the next two batters before walking Mike Lieberthal. Morandini followed with a single to center field and Abreu beat center fielder Roger Cedeno's throw to the plate.

Cardinals 11, Brewers 2

ST. LOUIS — Rookie Rick Ankiel had 10 strikeouts in six innings and Mark McGwire led a six-homer attack with his second long ball in as many days in the St. Louis Cardinals' 11-2 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers on Sunday.

McGwire's three-run homer off Valerio de los Santos (0-1) in the first was the 1,500th hit of his career. More than one third (524) are home runs. McGwire, who had 135 homers the past two seasons, hit his first of the season on Saturday.

David Kohl/Associated Press

Cincinnati's Ken Griffey Jr. watches his first home run of the season leave Sunday in the sixth inning against the Chicago Cubs in Cincinnati. It was the 399th of his career. The Reds won, 8-7, in eleven innings.

Braves 9, Giants 3

ATLANTA — Bobby Bonilla hit his first three-RBI game in nearly two years, leading the Atlanta Braves over the San Francisco Giants 9-3 Sunday.

Bonilla hit a solo homer in the fifth inning for a 3-2 lead and added a two-run single in the sixth that chased starter Russ Ortiz.

Bonilla, signed after the Mets released him from a guaranteed contract, is 6-for-14 (.429) with two homers and five RBIs. It was his first three-RBI game since May 6, 1998, when he did it for Florida, also against the Giants.

Twins 13, Royals 7

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — The first 20 Kansas City batters failed to reach base. Then it looked like the next 20 would.

Eric Milton didn't allow a runner until Carlos Beltran's two-out double in the seventh, and the Minnesota Twins hit six homers in a game for the first time since 1993, then hung on to beat the Royals 13-7

Orioles 11, Tigers 6

BALTIMORE — Will Clark drove in three runs and the Baltimore Orioles used a 16-hit attack to beat the Detroit Tigers 11-6 Sunday, completing a three-game sweep.

Rich Amaral, Albert Belle and Jeff Conine had three hits apiece for the Orioles, who led 11-3 after four innings before coasting to their fifth straight victory. Delino DeShields had two hits, two stolen bases and two RBIs.

Athletics 14, White Sox 2

OAKLAND, Calif. — Jason Giambi hit a grand slam and also scored on his younger brother's sacrifice fly as the Oakland Athletics broke out of their offensive slump Sunday with a 14-2 victory over the Chicago White Sox.

Making his first start for the A's, Jeremy Giambi hit an RBI triple to start a five-run sixth inning. Jason Giambi's slam highlighted a six-run seventh as Oakland stopped Chicago's four-game winning streak.

Stutzman tames weather conditions to win

the tournament. The Hawkeyes finished in third place on Friday following rounds of 294 and 291, with Stutzman one stroke behind Illinois' Geoff Lound. Following Friday's near-80 degree temps, Iowa found themselves facing rain, sleet and a wind chill in the teens for the final 18 holes on Saturday.

While the weather turned chilly, Iowa remained hot to shoot a 303 to claim fourth place with a final score of 888, its lowest of the spring season. Conference foe Michigan won the tournament, besting Iowa by 11 shots with an 877 score.

Stutzman posted a final day 74 to go along with two season-low rounds of 70 to easily claim the title by three strokes.

"Lots of guys give up because of the weather," he said. "You just have to know you are going to make bad shots because everyone is going to."

Anderson praised Stutzman's performance, pointing out the Marshall Invitational is a prestigious tournament and that several PGA Tour players had won the meet during their college careers.

While Stutzman led the way, the fourth-place showing was very much a team effort, according to Anderson.

"We slugged it out and hung in there," he said. "Nobody quit for us."

Adam Turner finished with a 225 while Jason Wombacher and Bo Anderson both turned in 226 scores. Mike Tapper rounded out the Iowa field by shooting a 239.

Bluder's credentials impress interview committee

BLUDER

the team insisted on participating as much as possible in the hiring of their new coach. Consuegra said that they got what they wanted.

"I spoke with Coach Bluder on Monday over the phone and I also got the chance to interview a couple of other coaches in person," Consuegra said. "I was pleased that they allowed me to do that."

Although the team had not yet had the opportunity to meet Bluder in person, Consuegra was impressed with what she saw of Bluder at Friday's press conference. "(Bluder) sounds like a good coach," she said. "She has the credentials to back that up. She's been very successful. I think she'll be great."

Bluder said that she knows the Hawkeyes have been through a tough season and hopes she will be accepted by her new team.

"I know that they've been through a lot with this whole process and I can't replace somebody that is dear to their heart," Bluder said. "But I hope through time that they will get to know me; we'll get to know each other."

Drake University will now be left with a coaching vacancy, and although she is disappointed with Bluder's decision to leave, Drake interim athletic director Jean Berger said she is happy for Bluder.

"Lisa's record and accomplishments at Drake speak for themselves," Berger said. "It is obvious to all of us who have worked with her the impact her efforts have made in our department and the University. She will be missed and while I am disappointed for Drake, I understand her decision. I wish her only the best."

Confidence builds in Hawkeyes

Blackwell induced grounder after grounder, as Iowa turned three double plays. Purdue threatened in the second, when two walks and a single loaded the sacks for dangerous Daryl Hallada. Blackwell forced a comebacker to the mound, and started an inning-ending double play.

"You always try to get ground balls," Blackwell said. "They hurt you less than fly balls or line drives."

In Sunday's first game, Iowa built a 5-1 lead before Purdue rallied for two runs in the sixth to cut the lead to 5-3. The Boilers pieced together a walk, single and sacrifice fly to cut the lead to 5-4 against closer Reed Pawelk, but Blackwell struck out catcher Erik Frei to get his sixth save with the tying run at second base.

Iowa coach Scott Broghamer said that his team is coming into its own.

"We made good pitches, we had good help from the defense, and that's maturity, too," he said.

For the weekend, Iowa held Purdue to nine runs over 28 innings. This from the same team that had trouble holding teams to nine runs in nine innings in 1999. Jensen said the staff's improvement can be attributed to new pitching coach Travis Wyckoff.

"Coach Wyckoff has taught us to be consistent, and keep the ball down," Jensen said. "Now, it's really coming through for us."

Saturday, Iowa rebounded from stranding the tying run at third and the winning run at second in a 5-4 loss by riding Ryan Prahm's arm to a 2-0 victory. Prahm pitched 6.2 innings of shutout ball, and Pawelk got the final out, leaving Boilers at first and second base.

"We're a team with a short memory," Prahm said of carrying his team to a split Saturday. "We're able to put (the losses) behind us, which is good, when you can expect to win those rather than expecting to lose."

what we did was make our kids continue to work on base running but listen to the coaches, and we held a lot of runners."

Iowa emptied the bench in its half of the fourth. With Johnson aboard, pinch-hitter Alicia Gerlach took the first offering out into center field for a double, scoring Johnson.

"I'm getting better at it," Gerlach said on pinch-hitting. "It's kind of hard because you haven't seen the pitcher at all. You have to make an adjustment right away. I knew that she was throwing that first pitch in there for a strike, so I was looking for that first pitch to hit."

Next up was Brooke Cross. She reached on an error and Gerlach crossed home. With no outs, Kelly Zeilstra stepped in and singled to the right side, plating Cross. Iowa's six-run inning ended with a Bashor RBI single.

"Our offense has definitely come on as of late," Gerlach said. "We've just been making better adjustments to the pitchers and hitting the ball hard too."

Hanks (12-4) went four strong innings, allowing only three hits. Zeilstra took the mound in the fifth and sent the Titans down in order.

Hawkeyes a full head of steam heading into two intrastate challenges this week. Iowa plays at Iowa State Tuesday, then returns home to face Northern Iowa Wednesday.

"It's an attitude, a belief they can get the job done," Broghamer said. "I've believed in them all along, and now they're starting to play like it, too."
