UI protesters join thousands in D.C. rally

■ Among the 10,000 demonstrators Sunday were 20 from Iowa City.

By Christoph Trappe
The Daily Iowan

Approximately 20 UI students joined the thousands in Washington, D.C., over the weekend protesting meetings of the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund.

UI sophomore Kit Agape and a number of his friends arrived in the nation's capital on the night of April 14, joining an attempt to cancel meetings between world finance leaders Sunday and today.

"The IMF bails out foreign governments that are in debt," Agape said. "But those countries have to agree to become Americanized."

After receiving help from the IMF, countries have to open American stores and American factories, he said.

The atmosphere Sunday was less tense than on April 15, when police raided and closed the protest headquarters during the day and arrested more than 600 people in the evening.

Fewer than 20 were arrested Sunday, said Terry Gainer, the D.C. executive assistant police chief. He said two police officers were hospitalized, one with back pain and another from heat exhaustion.

Although Sunday's march of about 30,000 protesters did not result in canceled meetings, Agape said, the UI group was happy with the outcome of the demonstrations.

"This is the next big step since Seattle to take on the whole globalization

Police bust 122; city mulls 21-bars

By Chao Xiong
The Daily Iowan

■ The City Council seems to be divided over whether to raise the age of admittance for bars.

The Iowa City City Council's discussion about underage drinking at tonight's informal work session follows a two-day operation by Iowa City police and the Iowa State Patrol that resulted in their issuing 122 tickets for possession of alcohol under the legal age.

Six officers from the two departments conducted checks of virtually all downtown bars on the nights of April 13 and 14. The operation was scheduled months in advance and was not in response to the council work session, said Iowa City police Lt. Matt Johnson.

As part of the Governor's Traffic Safety Bureau grant, the city must carry out operations related to alcohol in cooperation with other law-enforcement agencies.

Those in favor of raising the age limit in all Iowa City bars from 18 or 19 to 21 won't be deterred by the results of the operation, said Mayor Ernie Lehman.

"The population who would be most affected — the underage drinkers and bar owners — is doing nothing about it," Lehman said. "If those people chose to, they could eliminate the problem (of overindulgence) overnight."

Bars are already taking steps to stop underage drinking and can't solve the problem overnight, said Mike Porter, the owner of One Eyed Jakes, 18½ S. Clinton St.

"If the city goes 21, it's sweeping the problem under the carpet and pushing the problem to an unsafe environment," he said.

Porter said he plans to attend tonight's work session to see what direction the council will head before taking any further action.

"At the appropriate time, we (bar staffs) will all come together as one voice and try to express our concerns," said

Barak offers Jerusalem suburbs to Palestinians

By Jack Katzenell
Associated Press

■ The Israeli prime minister hints at a Palestinian state, drawing the ire of hard-liners.

JERUSALEM — Preparing Israelis for substantial land concessions, Prime Minister Ehud Barak Sunday all but offered the Palestinians an independent state and said he would give them suburbs around contested Jerusalem.

Israeli hard-liners criticized him, but the Palestinians said his proposals don't go far enough.

In statements made at Sunday's Cabinet meeting and released by his office, Barak outlined what he would — and wouldn't — concede in a blueprint of a final peace treaty, due next month.

Barak said he would turn over West Bank land that would give the Palestinians the territorial contiguity they need for statehood.

"No serious person believes that the entity that will be created will be a protectorate or autonomy made up of various noncontiguous patches on the map without its residents being able to leave its territory freely," Barak told ministers.

He assured his hard-line Israeli critics that Jerusalem would remain united under exclusive Israeli sovereignty but said Palestinian suburbs just outside the city, claimed by both sides as their capital, would be handed over.

"We always looked to Jerusalem when we prayed, but we never directed our prayers to el-Azariya or Abu-Dis," he said, naming Jerusalem suburbs that Israel has so far refused to concede as part of interim troop withdrawals. He said Israel had no interest in annexing the 50,000-60,000 Palestinians living around Jerusalem.

Barak said most Jewish settlements in the West Bank would be annexed to Israel in a permanent peace treaty.

He said Israel would consider giving the Palestinians an "advance" on the last interim troop withdrawal, due in June, by handing over land next month.

S. African kicks off celebration of African Renaissance

■ A lecture by a Mbulelo Mzamane will begin a week-long series of events.

By Rupa Shenoy
The Daily Iowan

Regeneration is an ancient concept that Mbulelo Mzamane, the keynote speaker for UI's Africa Week, seeks to apply to the new South Africa and foster at the UI through communication.

Mzamane will speak on the reconstruction of South Africa after the apartheid in Room 106, Gilmore Hall, today at 7:30 p.m. He said he expects to speak on the challenges facing South Africa, which include reconciling divisions and reconstructing the country after being "retarded" by colonization.

In 1960, Mzamane's parents left South Africa to provide him with a better education; he was not allowed to return until 1993. He wandered the world during those years, Mzamane said. During the last 10 years, he has lived in the United States and taught at Yale.

Mzamane

Nelson Mandela and current South African President Thabo Mbeki appointed Mzamane a member of the Arts, Culture and Heritage Commission of the African Renaissance, and he is rector at the University of Fort Hare in South Africa.

There are 13 commissions in the South African government focusing on subjects ranging from arts and culture to trade and commerce, Mzamane said. The idea is to cover all aspects of a nation in an effort to rebuild and develop while integrating culture, he said.

"You need to understand culture very well to encourage development," Mzamane said. "You take away the soul of a nation if you play down its culture."

The African Renaissance is about encouraging people to take ownership of their own lives and destinies, Mzamane said, but governments can only facilitate these efforts by creating conducive conditions through the maintenance of law and order. Everyone is part of a community, and progress can only be made through communal efforts, he said.

Wheels of justice grind slowly at DCI crime lab

■ A slow state crime lab affects investigations and the families of crime victims.

By Leanna Brundrett and Anne Huyck
The Daily Iowan

It's been a month since evidence from the arson and homicide crime scene at 845 Cross Park Ave. was sent to the Iowa Division of Criminal Investigations laboratory, and relatives of the victim are still waiting for answers.

Craig Goepel, who lost his son-in-law, Kurt Miller, 20, in the March 6 fire, said he and especially his daughter, Laura Miller, suffer everyday with questions about the crime that police have yet to charge anyone with.

"Going through something like this seems like forever," he said. "We just want justice to be done and a sense of closure as to who and why did this."

It is uncertain when any progress toward Goepel's desire for closure will be realized. The average turn around time for the state crime lab's DNA lab alone is around 70 days, said Mike Peterson, a DCI criminalist.

"It's hard to imagine someone did this and is walking free," Goepel said. "It eats at you."

The slowness aggravates everyone from police investigators, county attorneys, victims' families to the DCI employees themselves.

In the DNA lab, where Peterson works, eight employees do lab work for approximately 450 cases from around the state each year, he said. Once the work on a case starts, it may take only a week to do all of the lab work, but, because the lab is behind, new cases that come up are put on the back burner.

The lab tries to prioritize cases, but that can be difficult, Peterson said.

"People get excited about homicide," he said. "But sexual assaults are equally important. We do our best to do services we are capable of."

Another factor is how criminalists are utilized at crime scenes, said Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White. Criminalists take turns being on call, so if a crime occurs, the criminalist on call has to leave to go to the crime scene, leaving work behind.

Jeff Sullivan, whose cousin, Maria Terese Lehner, was killed in March 1999 in Iowa City, said he was "surprised" about the state crime lab's slow progress on the case. It took nearly a year for charges to be brought against Jonathan Memmer, 24.

"I understand the time it takes," Sullivan said. "They wanted to get all their ducks in a row — I understand that." Sullivan is a detective for the Monroe County Sheriff's Department in Wisconsin, so he realizes what is involved in investigating a case. However, he said, lab work for serious crimes in his state takes much less time to be completed.

"Normally, crimes of that stature (in Wisconsin) are expedited for obvious reasons," Sullivan said. "But the time (Lehner's murder) took was quite lengthy."

From a prosecutor's point of view, it is best to act as quickly as possible when violent crimes occur because peo-

MORE WAYS TO GET RID OF A BLIND DATE

- Order a bucket of lard.
- Ask for crayons to color the place mat. This works very well in fancier venues that use linen tablecloths.
- Howl and whistle at women's legs, especially if you are female.
- Recite your dating history. Improvise. Include pets.
- Pull out a harmonica and play blues songs when your date begins talking about herself or himself.
- Sacrifice French fries to the great deity, Pomme.
- When ordering, inquire whether the restaurant has any live food.
- Without asking, eat off your date's plate. Eat more from her or his plate than he or she does.
- Drool.
- Chew with your mouth open, talk with your mouth full, and spray crumbs.
- Eat everything on your plate within 30 seconds of it's being placed in front of you.

Oprah's beef with the 1st Amendment

CHICAGO (AP) — Oprah Winfrey may think free speech rocks, but the talk show host apparently isn't fond of her employees speaking their minds when she's the subject.

Employees of the parent company of the Winfrey's production studio, Harpo Inc., are barred from talking or writing about Winfrey's personal or business affairs and those of her company — for the rest of their lives.

A former producer, Elizabeth Coady, challenged the legality of the confidentiality agreement but the agreement was upheld by Illinois courts, the Chicago Tribune reported Sunday.

"There's no sense of justice inside, which is so ironic in light of the public image of someone who touts herself as an advocate for business ethics and spirituality," said Coady, who wanted to write a book about the four years she worked on Winfrey's show before quitting in March 1998.

Kiefer Sutherland joins healthy protest

CALGARY, Canada (AP) — Canadian actor Kiefer Sutherland joined thousands of protesters at a rally to denounce plans to privatize part of the country's health-care system.

Sutherland, whose grandfather, Tommy Douglas, was a pioneer in setting up Canada's health-care system, said a proposal to allow private operators to provide some health services will lead to direct competition with public health care and cause the public system to deteriorate.

The star of The Three Musketeers and The Lost Boys, accused "a few politicians" of working with private interest groups to slowly dismantle a Medicare system that works well.

Sutherland was asked to attend the April 15 rally by his mother, Shirley Douglas, who has taken six months off work to campaign across Canada against the privatization of health care.

Turning Long Beach into a short sprint

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Josh Brolin is following in his father's footsteps. The actor won the 24th annual Toyota Pro-

Celebrity Race on the streets of downtown Long Beach on April 15 — 22 years after his father, actor James Brolin, won the same race.

The younger Brolin outpaced a field of 16 other celebrity and professional drivers, including Ashley Judd, George Lucas, Melissa Joan Hart and John Elway.

The 10-lap celebrity race was held on the second day of the Toyota Grand Prix of Long Beach.

Big, bad John

DENVER (AP) — John Travolta is warning his fans not to expect him to be a hero in his newest movie.

"I play a pretty bad guy," Travolta told 10,000 people at a promotional gathering of science-fiction fans this weekend. "Today, I take you over in a good way. On May 12, I take Denver over in a bad way."

That's when Battlefield Earth opens. Travolta plays a 9-foot-1, 543-pound alien intent on destroying Earth.

The movie is based on a book by the late science fiction writer L. Ron Hubbard, founder of the Church of Scientology, of which Travolta is a member.

Researchers receive Air Force research grant

Two UI researchers have received a two-year, $301,000 grant from the U.S. Air Force Research Laboratories to study materials currently used in biomedical and air-pollution monitoring devices that may become the foundation of the next generation of electronic devices for high-speed information processing.

Thomas Boggess, a professor of physics and of electrical and computer engineering, and Michael Flatté, an assistant physics professor, received the award to investigate novel semiconductor materials.

Both researchers are members of the UI Optical Science and Technology Center; the studies will be performed in the Iowa Advanced Technology Laboratories Building. The research will be conducted in collaboration with Texas A&M University.

Getting down to the marrow

■ Project Marrow aims to add 600 names to the registry.

By Kate Thayer
The Daily Iowan

After eight years in remission, UI senior Daniel Nutter, 23, learned he had suffered a relapse of Hodgkin's lymphoma just after taking his finals in May 1998. His best option was a bone-marrow transplant, which he received at the UI Hospitals and Clinics.

At that time, Nutter started thinking about forming a student group that would help add names of willing donors to the National Bone Marrow Registry, he said.

As a result, Project Marrow, which was recently recognized as a student group by the UI Student Government, was developed. The group is running a bone-marrow drive Wednesday from 11 a.m. until 6:30 p.m. in the IMU Kirkwood Room. It hopes to gain more support during National Organ and Tissue Donor Awareness Week.

"About a year after my transplant, the idea about having a student group and a marrow drive started growing," Nutter said. "Not many universities have done a drive like this, but the ones that have were successful."

Those interested in registering for the donor list will have a small vial of blood drawn from their arms in order to type their marrow.

"Once people are entered on the registry, they are on it for most of their life, until they are about 60 years old," he said. "However, being a match with somebody's marrow is like winning the lottery."

In the case of a possible match, the donor would go to the hospital for the procedure and receive anesthesia while the marrow is taken. In most cases, the patient donates the marrow in the morning and is home later that day, Nutter said.

While everyone reacts to the procedure differently, most people experience a mild discomfort for a few days after donating, he said.

"When someone donates marrow, they are not losing anything," Nutter said. "The marrow is replenished in the body within one week."

UI junior Jonathan Titus, who donated bone marrow last October, said he was initially sore from the procedure but fully recovered within a week.

"I even went running about eight days later," he said. "When I was typed for the registry, I didn't think I would ever be called, but when I was, I wanted to do it to increase the chance for someone to live."

In one-third of the cases in which someone is in need of a bone-marrow transplant, a family member is the eligible donor, Nutter said. However, the remaining two-thirds of the time, the doctor must conduct a search on the National Registry of the Iowa Registry.

"To match bone marrow, everything is really precise because they are looking at DNA," he said. "It is not like matching organs, because no one's DNA is exactly the same. Everything is so specific."

Since the start of the National Registry database in 1986, there have been 9,335 transplants resulting from matches found on the list, said Laurie Robinson, the faculty adviser for Project Marrow and a representative of the Iowa Marrow Donor Program.

Robinson said the matching process has been refined since the start of the registry, which means marrow matches made in the past may not be suitable matches now.

"As technology gets better, finding a match is harder," she said. "This may account for the relatively low number of matches over the years."

Nutter said a lot of matching donors have similar genetic backgrounds. Because minorities are highly under-represented on the registry, their chances for a match are not as good, he said.

It is important that people interested in participating in the bone-marrow drive are dedicated to donating, he said.

"We do not want people on the registry who wouldn't donate if they turn out to be a match," he said. "It is pretty tragic for the person in need of a transplant if the person doesn't follow through."

UI pharmacy student Erik Maki, a member of Project Marrow, said he plans to be added to the registry at the drive.

"I hope this drive gets information out to other college students," he said. "There doesn't seem to be a lot of knowledge about this on campus. If people don't know about it, they can't be a part of it."

There are many misconceptions attached to being a bone-marrow donor, Maki said. The pain associated with the procedure is the biggest part of student's misconceptions.

"There is an intimidation factor for many people," he said. "Once we educate the community, hopefully, people will be more interested, and there will be a good response."

Mid East peace the focus of lecture

■ An Israeli consul will discuss prospects for peace tonight in the IMU.

By Kate McGeown
The Daily Iowan

An influential Israeli consul will lecture on the Middle East Peace Process the IMU Minnesota Room today at 7:30 p.m.

Belaynesh Zevadia, the Israeli consul for academic and minority affairs in Chicago, will discuss the current political situation in Israel as part of an ongoing effort by the Aliber/Hillel Jewish Center to address Middle East issues.

"It will be a great opportunity for Jewish people in Iowa City to hear about what's going in Israel firsthand," said Carrie Barbakoff, a UI freshman and member of Hillel.

Having grown up in Ethiopia, Zevadia moved to Israel to serve as a counselor with the Jewish Agency. Appointed to the Israeli Consulate for the Midwest in 1996, she has an extensive knowledge of the Middle Eastern region and its political situation.

"She's one of the top consuls in the nation and a phenomenal speaker," said David Leventhal, a Jewish Campus Service Corps fellow and an organizer of the event.

The evening will be a chance for people to hear different perspectives on the tensions in the Middle East so they can become better informed, Barbakoff said.

This is especially important, she said, because the American media do not report the Israeli situation accurately.

Leventhal agreed. "Sometimes, the media show Israel in a different light from how it really is," he said.

Leventhal believes the unrest in Israel has been inflated by politicians and media that focus on religious differences rather than the real argument, which is mostly political.

"They emphasize how unsafe it is and how there are terrorist attacks all the time," he said.

"It's quite a safe place, but the way the media portray it, it's just a war zone," said David Hersch, a UI senior who went to Israel over Winter Break as part of a group from Hillel.

Hillel members hope that as many as 50 Jewish and non-Jewish students will come to the speech.

"The peace process is always in the news," Barbakoff said. It affects the city of Jerusalem and many other major religions have their base there, she said.

"Lots of people are interested in foreign policy, and one of the main issues is the Middle East," Leventhal said.

Decisions such as the extent of U.S. intervention and whether to send aid are important to everyone, not just Jewish people, he said.

Through events such as tonight's lecture and the recent Interfaith Conference, Hillel aims to extend people's knowledge of Judaism and Israel.

"When people want to find out more information, we want to give them the opportunity to do so," Leventhal said.

DI photographers take home awards

The Iowa Press Photographers Association gave awards to several photographers from The Daily Iowan and the UI in the 2000 College Division Contest on April 14.

Ray, whose high school interest in photography led him to join the DI four years ago, said it was nice to win.

UI senior Matt Holst, who joined the DI photography staff in October, took first place in the Multiple Pictures category, third in College Photographer of the Year and third in the News Photo category.

"It was a great feeling to win and get some validation from professionals," he said.

UI junior Brett Roseman, the DI assistant photo editor, who joined the staff his freshman year, won first place in the Photo Illustration category and an honorable mention in the Sports Photo category.

"I'm impressed by the results of the good showing from our staff," he said.

Other DI photographers recognized for their achievements were UI graduate student Kirk Murray, UI junior Ethan Fry and UI senior Denise Powell.

UI seniors Brad Causey and Rob Mellett were also presented awards at the ceremony. John Kimmich, a UI associate journalism professor, said he attended the awards ceremony to lend support to his current and former students.

"I was squirming in my chair just as they were. I'm very proud of them," he said.

Duplex fire forces resident out

■ There were no injuries, firefighters say, but damage could run as high as $2,500.

By Christoph Trappe
The Daily Iowan

Clothing left inside a dryer caught on fire in an East Jefferson Street duplex early Sunday afternoon, causing damages as high as $2,500.

The Iowa City Fire Department responded to a call at 2:57 p.m. from 1136 E. Jefferson St. The sole tenant of the apartment, Johnny Stillwell, called 911 after discovering smoke at his residence.

"I was gone for about an hour, and when I came back, I saw smoke in the basement," he said. "I am assuming the dryer started it."

No lives were in danger during the fire, and no structural damage was apparent in the basement of the apartment, said Elmer Brenneman, Iowa City fire battalion chief.

Four units of the fire department responded to fight the fire, he said.

"It took us about five minutes to get the fire out," Brenneman said. "The fire was put out with the hose from the engine."

The second apartment of the duplex did not seem to be damaged in any way, he said.

"We just checked it out and set up a smoke ejector (fan) in the other apartment because there was some smoke in the basement," Brenneman said.

Stillwell was not able to spend Sunday night at his apartment.

"I'm really happy that I have renter's insurance now," he said. "It would have been bad if I wouldn't have it."

Firefighters remained on the scene for an hour and 20 minutes to investigate the cause and to secure the scene.

Iowa City police officers blocked off traffic on East Jefferson Street for approximately 40 minutes because of the fire.

Russian culture brought home

■ The Slavic Bazaar attracts a large crowd with traditional music and dance.

By Andrew T. Dawson
The Daily Iowan

A springtime celebration of song and dance Sunday afternoon provided area residents with a slice of Slavic culture and for some, a taste of home.

More than 300 people attended the third annual Slavic Bazaar in the main lounge of the UI International Center, which was hosted by the UI Center for Russian, East European and Eurasian Studies.

Several members of the audience were of Slavic ancestry, including UI junior Inna Nikolenko, who came to the United States from Kazakhstan four years ago.

"A lot of what they did was very traditional," Nikolenko said. "A lot of older people that I could see were really into it — just sitting there and almost crying. It kind of makes you feel like you're home."

This year's theme, "Invitation to a Russian Tea Party," re-created the traditional informal gathering through regional tea tasting, informative programs, music and food, giving participants the opportunity to "exchange ideas and to share goodwill."

Highlights of the five-hour festival included performances by the Luther College Balaika Ensemble, the Iowa City Russian Children's Group and a two-part presentation by the Cultural Kaleidoscope, a Kansas City-based group.

Sergei Shapoval, artistic director of Cultural Kaleidoscope, said its performance was designed to inform and entertain. During the presentation, Shapoval played a variety of traditional Russian musical instruments and led the audience in singing the Russian alphabet.

"Music belongs to everyone who likes it," Shapoval told the audience.

Karen Myers, the outreach coordinator for the Russian/Eurasian center, said the group was pleased with the success of the event and was surprised by the turnout.

"There was a lot more people than we anticipated — that's a good surprise," Myers said. "There were families, students, seniors — we were able to produce a great cultural event that appeals to all ages."

Lecture to puncture myths about Islam

The UI Association of Muslims in America and the Women's Resource and Action Center will host a lecture examining the issues surrounding Islam and women's rights tonight.

Mary Ali of the Institute of Islamic Information and Education will present "Islam: The First Women's Right Movement" in the IMU Iowa Room at 7:30 p.m.

The event is intended to help enhance students' knowledge of the Islamic faith, said Linda Kroon, the WRAC administrative coordinator. Islam is a growing religion in the United States, and the information at the lecture will be helpful to students, she said.

"I only know about the stereotypes of Muslims," Kroon said. "Like the repression of women, which all comes from American media. I think students get their ideas about the religion from media, too, which may not be accurate."

Clarifying inaccurate stereotypes is one aspect Ali will be discussing, said Asmaa Baker, a UI senior and a lecture organizer. The stereotypes that Muslim women have no rights, that Muslims are terrorists and that men control women are false, she said.

"A lot of the oppression that occurs is not because of Islam but because of cultural practices," Baker said.

Ali will also address the stereotype that women are oppressed because they wear clothing, known as the hijab, which covers the head and body, she said.

"Wearing hijab is not repression, it's freedom," Baker said. "It protects Muslim women from male lust. Women who wear hijab are viewed as a person, not as a sexual object."

Tonight's event is free and open to the public.

Holy Week execution draws fire

■ Religious leaders are baffled that Tennessee's first execution in 40 years is scheduled for this week.

By Marta W. Aldrich
Associated Press

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — In the heart of the Bible Belt, some religious leaders are appalled that Tennessee's first execution in 40 years is scheduled to fall in the middle of the holiest week on the Christian calendar and at the beginning of the Jewish Passover.

Condemned child killer Robert Glen Coe is set to die by injection Wednesday, the first evening of Passover and four days before Easter.

"How ironic that during a week in which we celebrate the merciful nature of God and a God willing to die for his people, that a court extends no mercy and in fact chooses to take a life for a life," said David Buttrick, a professor at Vanderbilt University Divinity School in Nashville.

The justices of the Tennessee Supreme Court acted expeditiously, choosing a date one week from when a federal court lifted Coe's stay of execution, said court spokeswoman Sue Allison. But religious leaders say the timing shows insensitivity and even indifference to the state's people, culture and beliefs.

Gov. Don Sundquist, who has refused to grant clemency for Coe, would not comment on the timing.

For Christians, the week before Easter is traditionally a time of worship services, church-produced passion plays and Easter egg hunts for children — culminating in a Sunday celebration of Jesus Christ's resurrection from the dead.

For Jews, Passover begins at sundown Wednesday with Seder. Perhaps the most celebrated of Jewish holidays, it commemorates the deliverance of the ancient Hebrews from slavery in Egypt.

"The sadness and irony cannot be lost on anyone that the state should participate in the taking of a life as Christians prepare for the recognition and resurrection of their Messiah, and Jews around the world are commemorating religious freedom and God's lifting us out of slavery," said Rabbi Ken Kanter of Nashville's Congregation Micah.

Members of both faiths are expected to join protests this week, including ecumenical worship services sponsored by the Tennessee Coalition to Abolish State Killing and a prayer vigil Tuesday evening outside Nashville's Riverbend Maximum Security Prison.

After midnight, Coe is scheduled to go to the death chamber, where he will be strapped to a cross-shaped gurney and injected with lethal chemicals at 1 a.m.

Coe, 44, was sentenced to die for the 1979 murder and rape of 8-year-old Cary Ann Medlin in the small west Tennessee town of Greenfield. Prosecutors said he lured the girl into his car, raped her and killed her after she told him "Jesus loves you."

He originally was scheduled to die last October, but stays of execution were granted three times as part of Coe's appeals.

His lawyers argue that Coe is insane, and executing him would violate his constitutional rights. Last week, they asked the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals and the U.S. Supreme Court to reconsider Coe's competency and Tennessee's method for determining it.

While some death-penalty supporters regret the timing of the execution date, they say two decades of legal wrangling aren't fair to the girl's family and weaken the state's enforcement of capital punishment.

"We have separation of church and state in this country, and one particular religious belief doesn't affect the principle of the law," said state Rep. Frank Buck, who chairs the House Judiciary Committee.

Elián victim of child abuse, father says

■ Elián is suffering more with his Miami relatives than he did at sea, Juan Miguel González says.

By Mark Stevenson
Associated Press

MIAMI — Elián González's father lashed out at his Miami relatives Sunday, accusing them of "child abuse" for turning his son against him and insisting that the 6-year-old boy wants to return to Cuba.

With the boy's fate still before federal judges, Juan Miguel González said on CBS' "60 Minutes" that he didn't believe a video taped at the relatives' home in which his son said he didn't want to go.

"This is child abuse and mistreatment what they're doing to this boy," Juan Miguel González said. "The way they're abusing him, turning him against his father ... he's suffering more here amongst them than he suffered in the sea."

He also accused the relatives of manipulating his son to believe that his mother still may show up someday — in this country.

"He hasn't had time to mourn for and feel for the death of his mother," Juan Miguel González said. "Everything they've done with him has been abusive."

Since he arrived in the United States on April 6, Juan Miguel González has spoken with Elián three times — all by telephone. He insisted that his son has told him he wants to return to Cuba.

"He's told me so," Juan Miguel González told "60 Minutes." The Miami relatives are "putting a bunch of toys in front of a 6-year-old. He cannot decide for himself. The one that decides for him is me, his father."

At the home of Lazaro González, where Elián has lived for nearly five months, the family and the boy were outside during the time of the broadcast. They thought the interview was going to be broadcast later, said Donato Dalrymple, one of the fishermen who rescued the boy.

Family members did not make themselves available after the show. Protesters, however, dismissed Juan Miguel González's comments as either selfish or the manipulations of Fidel Castro.

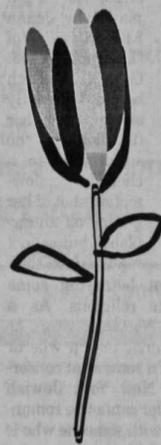

"This means he doesn't have any heart," said Sergio Perez, 49, a mechanic who lives a block away. "He doesn't have any feelings."

Keeping the Faith no more

FILM REVIEW

By John Mullin

Keeping the Faith is an ambitious sort of movie that attempts to tackle the tricky issues of religion, faith and doing what's in your heart by surrounding them with the elements of an old-style romantic comedy. Along the way, there's a lot of physical humor, thoughtful philosophizing and cheesy one-liners that have a definite hit-or-miss ratio. As a critic (and fan of those types of flicks), I can sort of admire what this movie tries to do. As an actual movie-goer, however, I have to admit the movie is somewhat spotty, incredibly uneven and, well, just kind of dull in places.

The premise sounds like the beginning of a bad joke. Life-long best friends (Edward Norton, a priest, and Ben Stiller, a rabbi) meet up with an old childhood pal played by Jenna Elfman (of "Dharma & Greg"). Both become instantly smitten with her (thanks in no small part to a clichéd slow-motion shot of her getting off an airplane), but cannot really act on their feelings without betraying some aspect of their religions. As a Catholic priest, Norton is sworn to celibacy and cannot take a wife or lover. As part of a somewhat conservative-minded New York Jewish community, Stiller cannot be romantically involved with someone who is not of the same faith.

A romantic triangle between the three friends quickly develops, and Stiller and Norton both begin to ask themselves questions about their beliefs. Fortunately, neither is really what you'd call a traditional man of God to begin with. They both believe that they need to, as they put it, "bring their religions into the 21st century." Their sermons are fun and uplifting, almost resembling stand-up comedy acts, and they have a bizarre dream of opening a non-denominational karaoke bar where Catholics and Jews can all get together and, um, do bad covers of Garth Brooks tunes.

If it already sounds like they're trying a little too hard to be hip and with it, brace yourself: They later refer to themselves as "The God Squad" and strut around New York City in sunglasses and leather jackets in between street games of two-on-two basketball.

The movie tries, often with the subtlety of a sledgehammer, to take some of the formality and rigid stodginess out of religion. Although much of it comes off as manipulative and unsuccessful, a few fine points do manage to shine through. Early in the film, Norton makes the distinction between faith and religion. Having faith means believing in something in the world that sort of looks out for us and binds everything together. Having religion is giving that faith a name and choosing to spend time with people who see it the same way that you do.

Like last year's Dogma, Keeping the Faith seems to be saying that it doesn't really matter what your beliefs are as long as you believe in something. The movie's big problem, however, is that it tries to say a lot of other things too, and in the end, winds up not really saying much at all. There are a few good laughs along the way and one or two interesting things to think about, but it all amounts to something that doesn't really survive as a comedy and can't really cut it as a religious allegory.

Celebrated filmmaker Milos Forman (who directed Norton in The People vs. Larry Flynt) has a small role as one of Norton's superiors, and at one point offers that part of making any decision is realizing that you'll have to continue making that decision for the rest of your life. Keeping the Faith is a movie that does a lot of things enthusiastically but ultimately has trouble deciding what, if anything, it's really trying to be.

And the beat will go on

In some cultures, everybody is a drummer. Tonight, the UI Percussion Ensemble and the Yahoo Drummers of Iowa City will help locals find their inner drummer at a multi-media concert event, "With These Hands."

During the first half of the concert, the drummers will put away their sticks and mallets and play only with their hands. This gives the sound of the pieces a different color, said Dan Moore, the director of the Percussion Ensemble.

"It's not your father's percussion concert. It's a unique sort of new approach to a concert," he said.

—into about 20 minutes," Moore said.

After the hand-drumming portion of the concert, the drummers will play with their sticks and mallets to provide musical accompaniment for a 1922 Buster Keaton film, Cops. Six members of the Percussion Ensemble will play period pieces and sound effects to match the mood of each scene in the 20-minute silent film.

At the end of the concert, the Yahoo Drummers will set up a drum circle in lobby of Clapp Recital Hall. Everyone is encouraged to join the circle and try her or his hand at drumming, Moore said. And for those who are more physically- than musically-inclined, the music will be perfect for dancing, he said.

The evening of drumming will begin at 8 p.m. at Clapp Recital Hall.

issue," said UI freshman Alex Pickett, who is traveling with Agape. "When workers in other countries are exploited, we are exploited, and we have to stop that."
The UI students traveled to Washington by bus; they plan to come back to Iowa City sometime today, Agape said.
"This is great," he said, of the protesters' attitudes. "I haven't seen so many smiling faces in one place for a long time."

Although Agape saw a positive atmosphere throughout the protests, not everything was peaceful Sunday. Many protesters were nonviolent — even lighthearted — but one angry confrontation occurred some blocks from IMF headquarters, near the White House.
With helicopters whirling overhead and police sirens blasting, a group of protesters ran toward officers. Some demonstrators carried pieces of chain link fence from a construction site.
Officers, some on motorcycles, charged into the crowd in a park, firing tear gas and pepper spray. Fellow protesters dragged their colleagues away, and demonstrator medic teams washed eyes out with jugs of water.
The confrontation lasted approximately five minutes.
No UI student was arrested or injured during the outbreaks of violence, Agape said.

Some of the group members said the protests definitely help to wake the public's knowledge of what is going on.
"Who would talk about this if there weren't a protest today?" said Daniel Murphy, a UI sophomore and protest participant. "Eventually, we can't be ignored."

City Council to grapple with 21-only bars; police bust 122

21-BARS

Ryan Rooney, the manager of Maloney's, 121 Iowa Ave.
According to a study released by the Stepping Up executive committee, 67.8 percent of underage drinkers at the UI drink to get drunk, and 86 percent drink while they are at a bar.
Councilors agree that overindulgence is a problem, but some say they are not certain raising the age requirement is the answer.

"I have seen 50- and 60-year-old people not be responsible, so age doesn't necessarily mean there is going to be responsibility," said Councilor Dee Vanderhoef. "I'm not going to put it on one age group."
Compliance with Iowa law, which sets the legal age for alcohol consumption at 21, is difficult to refuse, said Councilor Mike O'Donnell. Alternatives to the bars are few, and he would like to see a compromise that would allow minors into bars to dance or eat, O'Donnell said.
"If we are going to say in our society that when people are 18 they are adults, we need to give them adult responsibilities," said Councilor Steven Kanner, who opposes raising the age requirement.

Involvement by the UI and community is essential in finding a solution, he said, reflecting the views of other councilors.
The council's interest in pursuing the issue will be better gauged after tonight's work session and Tuesday night's formal meeting, Lehman said. This fall would be the earliest date action would be taken on the issue of raising the age requirement, he said, adding that it would probably take longer.

He would like the decision to be made when the majority of the student body is in town, rather than during the summer, Lehman said.
Concerns that raising the age requirement will result in more house parties, drunk driving and an increase in fake IDs will also be addressed at tonight's work session.
"You solve one problem, you create a different set," said Councilor Connie Champion. "None of it is going to be easy."

Slow state crime lab worries families of victims, I.C. residents

White's recollections of events are clear, White said. Because of the slow state crime lab, this is not always possible, he said.
"Iowans are not as safe as they need to be," White said.
Iowa's County Attorney Association has listed the state crime lab as one of its highest legislative priorities for funding.
There are currently two bills, one in the Iowa Senate and one in the House of Representatives. The bills both allot $437,000 to allow the hiring of nine additional criminalists for the DCI. However, both are currently in appropriations committees, which means they are not ready to be voted on by the whole House or Senate. Because of this, it is uncertain if either bill will come up for vote in the current legislative session.
DCI employees are skeptical about the chances of the bills being passed, because in the past, additional funding has been denied, Peterson said.
Even if there were more money allotted to the DCI, and more people were hired, there would be no room for them to work in, Peterson said. A new building would be needed in order to expedite crime-lab testing, he said.
Iowa City police Lt. Richard Wyss said there is evidence at the state crime lab in regard to the 845 Cross Park Ave. arson and homicide, but he would not comment on specifics.
Wyss said that although the evidence is not back from the state crime lab, the investigation has not been hindered.

Although it depends on circumstance, the safety of the public is potentially reduced when there is not enough evidence to arrest a suspect, Wyss said. Various measures, such as increasing patrol in the neighborhood where a suspected criminal lives, are often taken, he said.
Safety is one concern for UI senior Jennifer Smith, who is a resident of 845 Cross Park Ave. She said she does not feel safe in the apartment complex and now makes sure her door is locked; she also is more conscious of people who are coming and going in the building.
SouthGate property manager Sean McIntyre said there has been an increase in security. Extra police are patrolling the area, and the complex is looking into activating a security system, he said.
However, since the fire on March 6, Smith said she has not noticed an increase in security or patrolling police.
"It's tough to tell," McIntyre said, of the degree of heightened security that needs to be taken. "You don't know if it was isolated at one individual, the company, at me, or if it was just chance that it happened on the third floor."
No one lives on the third floor of the complex yet, he said, because SouthGate is re-building the floor where the fire started. Residents will be able to move back in when the renovations are complete, McIntyre said. So far, there has not been a decrease in the number of residents, he said.

The arson and homicide made Mark Schebel of 845 Cross Park Ave. re-think his decision to live in the apartment complex in the future, but, he said, moving is not going to change crime.
"It's frustrating on one hand," Schebel said. "On the other, DCI is pretty thorough, so the wait can be justified."

be made is in education, Mzamane said. Many South Africans are in dire need of education — fewer than 5 percent of school children will attend college, compared to a country such as the United States, in which the percentage is much higher, he said.
"When you are distributing resources, you must provide fairly for all people, which leaves little for education," Mzamane said. "Yet, in an institution like mine, we must look for progress now."
Mzamane, a member of the faculty at Fort Hare, which educated many of the most important leaders in South Africa after 1960, including Nelson Mandela, said he hopes to foster exchanges with the UI during his visit.

"Africa is pretty far away for almost all of our students," said Sandra Barkan, an assistant dean of the UI graduate school. "After elementary school, it disappears from our education. This is an opportunity to learn about this perspective."
Dean Makuluni, a visiting lecturer in UI African American world studies, said he hopes the university will learn a lesson on racial harmony from one of those who fought against apartheid.
"I hope the UI community learns that the new South Africa is a place of hope and the possibility of a future shared by all in racial harmony," he said. "In view of the recent threats against racial minorities, the UI public has something to learn."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

City Council should not raise bar admittance age

My name is John Craiger, and I am a law student in the College of Law. During my time as an undergraduate at this university, I was an executive member of student government and a member of the Stepping Up Program. We worked to provide alcohol-free alternatives for the students, as well as playing a role in encouraging/supporting the Greek system to remove alcohol from its structures.

Julie Phye, the director of Stepping Up, is a very smart and highly motivated woman who is doing an excellent job of bringing the problems of binge-drinking to light. The recent tactics of the committee as of late, however, have concerned me. When the committee was formed, the student members emphasized that the best way to attack the problem would be to educate the students about the risks of alcohol and create alternatives to binge-drinking.

Most committee members felt strongly that new prohibition laws would NOT solve the problem — they would only shift or create new problems. Obviously, the current committee has moved away from its founding ideals.

Do you know what the best alternative to alcohol is right now? It's the entertainment the Iowa City night life provides. MANY underage students enjoy attending the concerts, watching the comedians and dancing in downtown without drinking. If the council removes these alternatives to alcohol, all that will be left for underage students to do will be to find the biggest house party possible and drink their blues away. Then, because you've removed three-quarters of the bar population, the 21-year-olds will follow them.

In addition to ruining many businesses in Iowa City (not really what a City Council is supposed to do, is it?), the council will be forcing students to attend unsupervised, unregulated parties where the problems of binge drinking will only thrive. I strongly urge the City Council to keep the bar admittance age where it is. Instead, I recommend the council focus its efforts on enforcing the laws that are currently on the books and increase the penalties for breaking those laws. This will allow law-abiding students to still have a good time and encourage those whose choice to break the law to do otherwise. This decision is in the best interest of the town and the best interest of the students.

Lack of public outcry over rape is disturbing

Last week, as I attended the rally at the dental school, I was impressed to see so many people show up in an offering of community support for the minority students targeted in recent racist e-mails. It was reassuring to know that I was in a community quick to protect anyone whose safety was threatened.

Unfortunately, just a few days later, I was reminded that the UI is not so quick to support its female population when they are threatened. When a student is raped and subjected to sexual violence, do we hear public outcry? Do people concern themselves with her welfare, her physical and emotional well-being? No. They tell us how much she had been drinking and remind us that the accused rapist is a great guy. Let me make it simple for anyone who doesn't understand — great guys don't rape women.

The victim of this crime is not the first victim of sexual assault on our campus this year. She is one of many. Most are ignored. Where are the deans, the faculty and the students now? Where are the displays of support for her? Why is no one marching to demand that the safety of women on this campus be made a primary concern? Why am I opening The Daily Iowan and seeing not outrage that such a crime was committed but debate about whether the consumption of alcohol broke fraternity rules? Why am I having to ask these questions? This is not a simple alcohol-abuse case. This is a sexual-abuse case. This is a woman-abuse case. This is a rape case, and at least 50 percent of our university population is at risk.

Don't complain about protesters

The recent backlash against the work of Students Against Sweatshops is very telling about the true nature of many of the students, not to mention faculty, at this university. Some people's minds are so closed, and their hearts so selfish, that they actually spend time and energy bad-mouthing a group that has given hours of selfless time to attempt to help those in need. And some of you truly believe that the university is not at fault in any way and that President Mary Sue Coleman really wants to do the right thing.

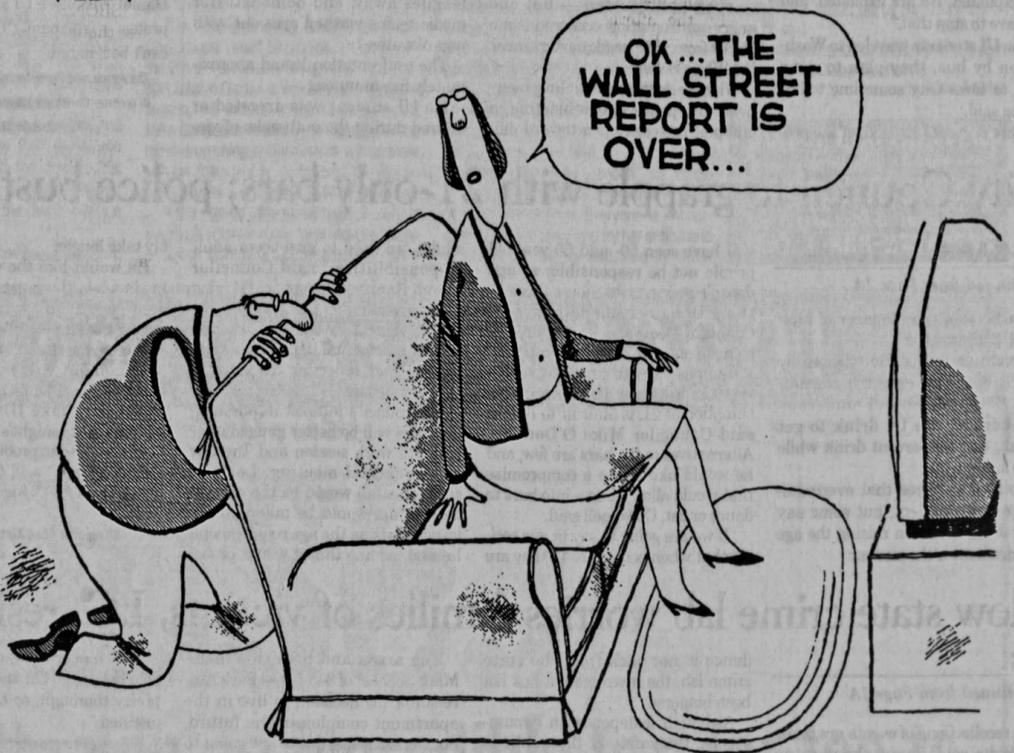

You may also believe that Santa brought the Nintendo 64 you got for Christmas, but I'll go with the truth. If you don't like the nonviolent methods SAS uses to protest the fact that our university whores itself out to corporate America, then try to remember how any major changes were enacted in this country's history. African Americans would be slaves in Whitey's fields, women wouldn't be able to vote this November, and our own children would be sewing Nike T-shirts for 10 cents an hour.

The Founding Fathers of this country would roll in their graves if they heard us complaining about our right to protest and peaceably assemble. If you want to walk around with blinders on, worrying only about whether you should go to Jakes or the Union on Saturday night, then that's fine. But stop complaining about those who can see past themselves and wish for universal human rights.

Supreme Court must end Boy Scouts' homophobic practices

The Boy Scouts of America has long been a symbol of that which makes America strong — an honorable, community-based organization that instructs its members to respect both the environment and other individuals. Yet, hypocritically, if an individual happens to be gay, it isn't allowed to teach that message.

Later this month, the Supreme Court will hear the case of Boy Scouts of America v. James Dale. Mr. Dale is the Eagle scout and former assistant scoutmaster whom the Scouts expelled after learning from a newspaper article that he was gay. While both sides feel they have a legal basis for their arguments, the Boy Scouts' reasoning is in fact flawed, and the Supreme Court should thus rule in favor of Mr. Dale.

The problem facing the Supreme Court is that it has established precedents in past rulings that in a sense fit both sides of the case. In three mid-1980s cases, the court held that exclusion from an organization based simply on someone's group status or identity is not constitutionally protected. It rejected claims by all-male organizations, including the Jaycees and the Rotary Club, to a First Amendment right to exclude women.

On the other hand, in 1995, it established the basis for the Boy Scouts' argument with a ruling that rejected efforts by government to limit what a private group can say, or to force a private group to yield control over its message. It decided that the organizers of the Boston St. Patrick's Day parade could not be required, despite a state anti-discrimination law, to accept the participation of a group whose members wanted to march under a banner of gay pride. Because the parade organizers did not agree with homosexuality, they could not be forced to include a pro-homosexual message in their event.

While Mr. Dale certainly has a strong basis for his argument, the Boy Scouts' side is much more slippery. Mr. Dale's brief asserts that the common interests that bring together the millions of Tiger, Boy and Eagle Scouts have nothing to do with sexual orientation. Indeed, part of the Scouts' purpose as an organization is to foster respect among its members.

The group, however, asserts that Mr. Dale would openly celebrate his homosexuality as a scout leader, thus instilling values that the group does not agree with into its members.

This assertion is based solely in homophobia. Mr. Dale has not once preached acceptance of his lifestyle, or indeed, even mentioned it in a Boy Scouts setting. Upon reinstatement, his brief says, "Dale is prepared to be bound by the same directives and limitations placed on all scoutmasters." Further, the group only discovered his homosexuality through an independent newspaper story regarding his affiliation with a gay students' group as an undergraduate student at Rutgers University.

Because there is no past record to base its claim on, and in fact, only fear, the Boy Scouts' argument is moot and does not fit the past court rulings in which it is trying to place its case. As such, the Supreme Court has no other option but to rule in favor of James Dale and allow both hetero- and homosexuals to lead this honorable, community-based organization into the 21st century.

Getting lost actually an important step to finding your way along in life

I should have been paying attention. But Kelly, who had arrived earlier that week, was telling me about her Buckingham Palace guard, Colin. Kelly described the places they had made love — in the palace barracks, against an iron gate, in St. James' Park near the palace. I was fascinated.

So I missed the directions from Beth, the resident assistant for our London program. I missed the turns we took — walking by the grocery store, the bank, the Museum of Natural History, the Yemeni embassy, the Royal Albert Hall — on our way to a reception in Imperial College.

Apparently, I wasn't alone in my distraction. We jet-lagged students, after a 12-hour, disaster-filled flight (they even ran out of Diet Coke), snacked on scones. We were surprised to find the pub located just below our classrooms but not as surprised as the end of the reception, when Beth said, "Now, you can all find your way back. I'll see you there."

Find our way back? We'd never been in London before! We didn't even know the name of the Tube stop nearest our flat! What was the address of the flat again? How did you pronounce the name of that street we lived on — Knaresborough? We muttered among ourselves, students from six different schools starting to bond over the perfidy of Beth, who was supposed to help us.

And we got lost. Oh, we wandered around South Kensington, we wandered up and down the Cromwell Road, we wandered right by all the places we'd discover later to be shortcuts to school. After an hour or so, our tall, bearded, Southern Baptist classmate Steve asked someone, "Can you tell me where Knaresborough Road is?"

The tweedy, brief-cased Brit muttered "no" and sped off, disgusted with American tourists.

Eventually, our group of grimy kids made it back — exhausted and furious. Beth came out of her room and flashed her enigmatic smile at us as we panted up the stairs. "So, you made it."

At first, we all grumbled about Beth. Some people wrote their parents to complain. She never helped us. She never led us. She just gave us a map of the Tube stops and told us when to meet her for official events. And when we took trips to Bath, Stratford, Dover — even Paris and Amsterdam — she abandoned us. She would simply state the time we had to be back on the bus for our return to London.

"If you miss the bus," she'd say, "the nearest train station is located nearby; we'll expect you back for your next class."

Beth's methods transformed us from dependent students into confident, humble young women and men. Confident, because we'd discovered parts of Europe for ourselves. Humble, because we were routinely humiliated by our ignorance.

By the middle of our semester, we'd come grudgingly to understand what was happening. We were fairly sheltered kids between 17 and 20 years old. And we were a little afraid of London, of getting lost in a country not our own. Beth's methods transformed us from dependent students into confident, humble young women and men. Confident, because we'd discovered parts of Europe for ourselves. Humble, because we were routinely humiliated by our ignorance.

For Spring Break, we took off in different directions. I went alone to Paris; my roommates tanned in the Canary Islands; my friends Heather and Jamie trained it all over Italy and Germany. Beth didn't go with any of us. And we all had a great time.

But Beth gave us more than the ability to travel. She showed us that we could find our way in the world of growing up. "Where is home?" she would ask us. "Where do you want it to be?" I was struggling through a rough patch with my family; she suggested, "It's time to move out of your parents' house and find your own home."

Beth was right. I asked my parents to stop supporting me financially. I found a place to live, snagged a couple of jobs, and began my life as an adult.

Oh sure, I've messed up a lot since then. My credit history is legendarily awful. I dropped out of a Ph.D. program. Sometimes I don't even return papers until two weeks after my students turn them in.

Right now, I don't know where I'm going to live next year, or what I'll be doing, and I'm a little scared. But thanks to Beth, I know I'll figure it out. I believe I'll land on my feet.

Because, as Beth taught us, getting lost is just fine; eventually, if you're paying attention, you'll find your way almost anywhere.

Congo airport blast kills 101

■ The number of injured at the Kinshasa airport rises to 216; many people are reported missing.

By Kamanga Mutond
Associated Press

KINSHASA, Congo — The death toll from a string of airport blasts rose to 101, the government said Sunday, as most rescuers ended the search for bodies in the wreckage of a hangar that collapsed in the explosions.

Kinshasa Gov. Theophile Bamba Fundu announced the new casualty figures, while religious dirges played on state radio, and the president called a period of national mourning after the April 14 blasts at Kinshasa's N'Djili international airport.

Hospital authorities said 216 people were injured. Approximately 80 of these remained in critical condition Sunday, Fundu said.

By the afternoon, all but a handful of Red Cross workers and other rescue volunteers were giving up the search through the collapsed hangar, used by customs and tax officials to handle incoming cargo from Europe. The rescue workers said they were hampered by lack of tools, water and food.

One man was rescued late on April 15 after being buried alive beneath the hangar for more than 30 hours, a Red Cross worker, Jean-Jacques Malutama said. The man had broken ribs and legs and could not speak, he said.

"I don't know if there is anyone else alive inside," Malutama said. "It is difficult work. We are pulling out rubble by hand, and we did not eat yesterday, so it would be difficult to continue this evening."

Rescue officials had said on April 15 that they feared 100 people were still trapped in the wreckage. It was not known how many people were still missing Sunday evening.

The reasons for the blast remained murky. Explanations ranged from a short circuit to a soldier dropping ammunition while unloading a plane full of weapons. The explosions of fuel and army munitions shattered windows, toppled buildings, and flung deadly debris several miles away into residential neighborhoods.

7 dead in pepper-gas attack in club

■ At least 60 were injured in a stampede at a Portuguese night club.

By Cristiana Pereira
Associated Press

LISBON, Portugal — Two canisters thought to have contained pepper gas were set off inside a crowded nightclub Sunday just as the lights were cut, causing a panicked stampede by hundreds of people that left seven dead.

Sixty others were treated at a hospital for breathing difficulties and minor injuries after the crush to escape the fumes.

The attack on the Luanda club came early Sunday morning. As gas billowed across the darkened dance floor, Joaquim Dias, 25, felt his eyes watering and his throat burning. He dipped his sweater in his drink and covered his mouth.

"People were running everywhere," he said at a police station. "The dance floor suddenly emptied. There were people on the floor, others were being carried out."

The club is named after the capital of Angola. At least 500 people, mostly Africans, were inside at the time of the attack, witnesses said.

No one claimed responsibility for what appeared to be a planned attack. The police have opened an investigation.

The Institute for Legal Medicine, where the bodies were taken for autopsies, said the victims appeared to have been crushed, according to state television RTP. The autopsy results are due today or Tuesday.

An employee at the club who asked that his name not be used told the Associated Press that the canisters were set off inside the club, not thrown in from outside.

Authorities did not immediately specify what sort of gas was used, but police sources speaking on the condition of anonymity said it appeared to be pepper gas. Authorities thought the power was deliberately cut.

The dead were a 20-year-old Spanish woman and six Angolans between 20 and 25 years old.

Arms sale heart of China dilemma

■ The Clinton administration is split over Taipei's weapons shopping list.

By Robert Burns
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — When U.S. and Taiwanese officials gather behind closed doors today to discuss which weapons the United States is willing to sell, the $4.4 billion question will be whether Taiwan gets the go-ahead to buy the Aegis destroyers it says it needs to counter a buildup of Chinese missiles.

The talks today and Tuesday in Washington are especially sensitive because of their profound political implications.

China has said it would be compelled to react harshly if Taiwan acquires Aegis warships. Taiwan views its request as a test of U.S. support in the face of China's continuing buildup of offensive missiles.

China regards Taiwan as Chinese territory, separated by civil war. The United States has a "one China" policy, but under the Taiwan Relations Act of 1979, it is obligated to ensure a "sufficient" defense for Taiwan.

The Clinton administration is divided over the weapons sales. The Pentagon believes they are justified for Taiwan's self-defense, but the White House and State Department worry more about provoking China.

NATION BRIEF

Kids' privacy act to change Web

NEW YORK (AP) — Several Web sites are starting to revamp the way they do business with youngsters as they prepare for a new federal privacy law aimed at protecting children online.

Under the law, which will take effect Friday, sites that attract children under 13 must get parental permission before collecting personal information from the kids. They also must disclose how they use the data.

Some sites are finding it easier to stop asking questions or to restrict minors from the sites altogether.

"Some businesses are responding out of panic and fear," said Dennis Lee, training director at IIFsec, a security firm in

New York. "They don't want to get caught doing the wrong thing."

A few sites, he said, even joked of moving offshore — "their way of expressing frustration that government is regulating another aspect of the Internet."

The new law is meant to protect e-mail addresses, school locations and other data that could expose kids to marketers and molesters.

Wheatley, Bowen drafted in late rounds

Iowa's Austin Wheatley was called in the fifth round Sunday, and Matt Bowen went in the sixth.

By Mike Kelly
The Daily Iowan

Just six months after playing his last game for 1-10 Iowa, Matt Bowen's chance at winning took a nearly 180-degree turn.

The defending Super Bowl champion St. Louis Rams took the former Iowa strong safety in the sixth round, the 198th overall pick in the 2000 NFL Draft.

Bowen, the Glen Ellyn, Ill., native, said he could not be happier to be picked up by the Rams.

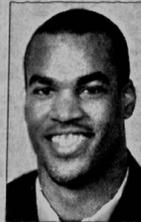

"It is just a perfect fit," Bowen said. "I'm happy to stay around the Midwest; I have lived my whole life here and don't want to leave. When I think of the Midwest, I think of St. Louis. It is close to Chicago and close to Iowa City, I think it will work out great."

NFL draft analyst Mel Kiper Jr. said Bowen's stock may have risen, simply because he picked a good year to complete his eligibility.

"The draft is not very deep in defensive backs that are big enough to play in the NFL," Kiper said. "That may have driven up the stock of guys like Iowa's Matt Bowen a little bit."

Bowen was not the highest drafted Hawkeye, though. Austin Wheatley, a said a lot of scouts were high on the 6-foot-4, 254-pound Wheatley because of his athleticism and body type.

"You look at a guy like Austin walking down the street and he looks like a freak athlete," Bowen said. "He is big and fast and plays tight end like wide receiver, and that is what people are looking for."

Wheatley is considered a bit of a project though. Pro Football Weekly, a magazine specializing in draft coverage, said he was unrefined as a blocker and "needed to catch about 500 balls per day" if he was going to

IOWA SPRING GAME

Allen adds another dimension to backfield

The track and field All-American is hoping to help Iowa's offense at fullback.

By Todd Brommelkamp
The Daily Iowan

The fullback may be one of the most under-appreciated players on a football team. Judging by Saturday's spring football game, sophomore Jeremy Allen might reverse that trend come September.

With running back Ladell Betts playing in a limited role, Allen was the star of the Iowa backfield. See more spring game coverage on Page 3B.

The Indianapolis, Ind., native rushed for 37 yards and caught five passes for another 26 yards on his way to opening the eyes of Hawkeye fans and coaches.

"He's improved immensely from last year," coach Kirk Ferentz said. "Each and every week we've seen better and better things from Jeremy."

Ferentz used the fullback position extensively during the game, bringing many people to wonder if Allen would be playing a larger role in a backfield that was out-rushed by 1,500 yards last season. Allen said he is pleased with the possibility seeing more playing time.

"I'm really glad how we're using the fullback in this offense," he said. "I think it's really going to help spread the offense out and confuse the defense."

Last season saw Allen carry the ball nine times, gaining 23 yards while backing up Rob Thein. Next fall, it will be Allen getting the nod at fullback with Henry Pollio coming off the bench.

While Ferentz says Allen is still a raw football player, he is one of the most athletic players on the team. This past season saw him earn All-American honors for the shot put during the indoor track season and he has already provisionally qualified for the outdoor NCAA meet this spring.

Allen said despite being unpolished, all he needs is a chance to show what he can do.

"I've always wanted to show everyone what I can do in football,"

he said. "I think just knowing I'm not going to be taken out really helps me feel comfortable."

Allen gives much of the credit to running backs coach Carl Jackson and strength and conditioning coach Chris Doyle for helping make him a better football player.

"Coach Jackson really emphasizes you have to go full speed every play

Hawks tame Finkbine for first time in 10 years

Despite poor weather conditions, the Iowa women's golf team took control of first place Sunday in the Hawkeye Invitational.

Victory is always sweeter at home, especially when it hasn't happened for a long time.

The Iowa women's golf team took first place in the Hawkeye Invitational for the first time since 1990. The tournament was played at Finkbine Golf Course (Par-73) Saturday and Sunday.

The Hawkeyes finished with a total team score of 922. According to coach Diane Thomason, the victory didn't come from incredible scores, but from consistent scores.

"We shot three consistent rounds this weekend," Thomason said. "We didn't make any mistakes. We let other people make Iowa senior M.C. Mullen hits a tee shot Sunday. She shot a team-low 76 on the final 18 holes, to help Iowa take the Hawkeye Invitational title at Finkbine.

The weather again proved to be a hinderance for some of the teams in the tournament. The second day of the tournament provided cold and rainy conditions that affected many individuals' second day scores.

After the first round the Hawkeyes trailed Michigan by five shots and Northwestern by four shots, but their ability to stick with the game brought them into first place on Sunday.

The Hawkeyes were particularly excited about their win over Northwestern, a team who they have been in contention with all year.

Hawks 'pull own weight' to win in home finale

April showers may bring May flowers, but they were not the ideal conditions for the UI women's tennis team.

Iowa (9-10, 6-2), ranked No. 49, weathered two rain delays and a change of venue to defeat No. 58 Michigan 5-2 on Sunday.

"What I liked about today is it's never the same group who wins the points," said coach Paul Wardlaw. "It's not like we're relying on one individual or one doubles team, everyone's pulling their own weight."

Beginning under a gray sky and chilly temperatures at Klotz Tennis Courts, a juggled Hawkeye doubles lineup swept Michigan in all three matches to quickly gain the doubles point.

The No. 24-ranked duo of Shera

Wiegler and Toni Neykova led the way for Iowa, winning 8-4. Erica Johnson and Megan Kearney moved up to No. 2 doubles to win 8-5. Natalya Dawaf, whose regular partner is Jen Sinclair, moved down to the No. 3 spot and teamed with Steffi Hoch to win 8-6.

Singles play then began before the rain halted action for 10 minutes. After resuming play, the skies opened up forcing a stop in the action and a move indoors to the UI Rec Building. Wardlaw said the move indoors did not effect the play of his squad. He also said he believed Iowa was helped by the move because the Hawkeyes were more accustomed to their facility and the doubles point. Shera Wiegler, Iowa senior

Ralph breaks school javelin record

The Iowa men's track and field team put together strong performances over the weekend.

By Jeremy Schnitker
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's track team likes the state of California and they have good reason. Nearly every time the team sends one of its runners out there to run, they come back NCAA qualifiers.

Almost a month ago, a guy by the name of Stetson Steele went out the California to compete in the Stanford Relays and came back an NCAA and Olympic Trials qualifier. Such was almost the case this weekend when Iowa junior Dan Ralph came back from the Mt. SAC Relays* in Walnut, Calif., a provisional NCAA qualifier in the javelin throw.

"Out there, you get the environment, and out of that you get the great performances," said coach Larry Wiecezorek.

Ralph took first in the event while breaking a school record and setting a personal best with his throw of 227-10.

Of the three other Hawkeyes that went to Mt. SAC, Arno van der Westhuizen made the provisional standard again in the hammer throw, Andy Morris took fourth in the 3,000-meter steeplechase, and Scott Williamson did not place in the 400 hurdles.

The rest of the Iowa squad competed at the Lee Calhoun Invitational and didn't fare too bad either. They placed second as a team behind Eastern Illinois and had a number of Hawkeyes place in the top three.

Adam Thomas took second in the 800 meters, Paul Sarris took third in the 3,000 meters, Jim Costello took third in the hammer throw and Chris Cassata took third in the shot put.

"We had some pretty exciting performances," Cassata said, of the Calhoun meet. "A lot of the younger guys had good meets."

The Hawkeyes hit the road to participate in the Illinois Invitational Saturday April 22 in Champaign, Ill.

Cleveland continues to win, Hawks fall

The Iowa men's tennis team struggled to pull out another close one Saturday.

By Lisa Colonno
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa mens tennis team came up just short once again. Sunday in East Lansing the Hawkeyes lost their dual with Michigan State, 4-3. The loss marks Iowas third, 4-3, defeat in Big Ten play this season.

The Hawkeyes (5-13, 1-7 Big Ten) suffered a loss Saturday to No. 20 University of Michigan, 6-1.

"We did not compete well at all in key games and points," coach Steve Houghton said. "In all three of our 4-3 matches we have won the doubles point and just need to split the singles matches. We haven't come through in key situations."

No. 1 singles player Tyler Cleveland came up big again for Iowa. The junior went 2-0 on the weekend to improve to 8-0 in the Big Ten. He is 17-1 in spring duals and 23-3 overall.

Against the Wolverines, No. 29 Cleveland defeated No. 55 Matt Wright, 6-4, 6-3, to claim Iowa's only victory of the day. The two players met earlier this season in the Big Ten Singles Championship where Cleveland walked away with the win, 7-5, 6-4.

Sunday in East Lansing, Cleveland downed Ken Kigongo, 7-5, 6-3. Tyler is 8-0 in Big Ten play and he has not lost a set yet, Houghton said. He has a phenomenal record.

Iowa started the Michigan State dual by winning the doubles point. At No. 1 doubles, Cleveland and Stuart Waters defeated Mark Findling and Kigongo, 8-5. Iowa's second doubles win came at No. 2. J.R. Chidley and Eric Kozlowski defeated Jimmy McGuire and Topalo, 9-8 (4). Michigan State won at No. 3 doubles, 8-2.

The key to winning the doubles point came at No. 2, Houghton said. Chidley and Kozlowski were down 6-2, but won, 9-8. They fought back and won in the last doubles match of the day, which gave us all kinds of momentum going into singles.

But Iowa could not get the job done. Chidley, at No. 5, got Iowas only other singles win against the Spartans. He defeated Goran Topalo, 6-2, 6-3.

Iowa now prepares to host Illinois and Northwestern in Iowa City April 22 and 23 respectively.

The Fighting Illini are a perfect 8-0 in conference play. Last season, Iowa lost to Illinois, 5-2.

"We need to remind the guys that we've played them close in the past," Houghton said. "We need to remind the guys that they are capable of doing that (again)."

Spring game tough act to judge

Iowa showed promise in the spring game, but its effects have yet to be determined.

By Jeremy Schnitker
The Daily Iowan

Brian Moore/Associated Press
Iowa's Kahlil Hill reaches for a pass during the 2000 spring game. Hill saw his first game action since last season's suspension.

Judging success at spring football games is like trying to pick a winner of a fight between two of your best friends — you're happy that one of your friends just won a fight, but you know that meant your other friend just got beat up.

Such is the case of this year's Iowa spring game. The offense looked pretty darn good at times and that can mean two things: Either the offense really is good, or Iowa's defense isn't a whole lot better than their last-place Big Ten finish last year.

For instance: Freshman Jon Beutjer hooked up with Kahlil Hill on a spectacular touchdown pass in the second half that gave fans reason to celebrate. But what fans didn't see on that play was that Hill burned co-No. 1 cornerback Tim Dodge to get open in the first place.

Success on the offensive side of the ball was encouraging, but what makes the success bitter-sweet is that it came at the expense of the defense.

Deciding whether or not Iowa got a lot accomplished in this game is difficult, but, considering the current state of Iowa football — the fact that either squad scored a touchdown was encouragement enough.

The Hawkeyes were at rock bottom, and now it looks like they are at least attempting to climb their way back up.

The game started off with junior quarterback Kyle McCann hitting Hill for a 31-yard gain, which was something that never happened last year. The offense moved the ball well most the game, with the first teamers racking up more than 300 yards of offense.

Ladell Betts, for the few carries he had, seems to be above where he was last year — and it looks like he has a nice supporting cast behind him. Fullback Jeremy Allen rushed for an average of about five yards per carry, and fellow tailbacks Robbie Crockett, Aaron Greiving, Siaka Massaquoi and Fred Russell all looked like able contributors.

Hill is still a stud, and the quarterback position looks deep. Both McCann and Beutjer had some beautiful passes, and Beutjer showed that he knows his way around the pocket and can avoid the rush. What makes that special is that they are supposedly the No. 1 and 2 guys behind injured Scott Mullen, according to coach Ferentz.

Even the defense looked improved. The front four got lots of good penetration — defensive tackle Jerry Montgomery could've pitched a tent behind the line of scrimmage he was in the backfield so much.

The linebackers made some hits, defensive back Cam Smith returned an interception for a touchdown and fellow defensive back Vincent Wilson showed he loves to hit when waylaid Hill on a crossing pattern.

Aaron Kampman played like it was the first time he'd played defensive end, but that will definitely change come August. According to the former linebacker, he's actually faster now at 265 pounds than he was last year when he was about 20 pounds lighter — and he only plans on getting bigger and faster until August.

Oh, and the offensive line — I made it this far without mentioning them — that's a good sign. See, unlike the rest of the team, it's good news when the offensive linemen don't make the presses — that means they didn't do anything catastrophic.

I'm not saying these guys are going to be world beaters, but they were a 1-10 team last year and they looked better than that Saturday. Iowa football isn't back yet, and those in attendance of the game know what I'm talking about. What they are though, is a team that is improving — and after the shambles that Hayden Fry left the team in two years ago, that is about all that can be asked.

UNI center goes higher than expected in draft

Brad Meester may be snapping the ball to Mark Brunell next season.

By Chuck Schoffner
Associated Press

DES MOINES — Northern Iowa's Brad Meester not only heard his name called in the NFL draft, it came even earlier than expected.

Meester, a four-year starter at center for the Panthers, was chosen by the Jacksonville Jaguars in the second round on Saturday. He was the first Iowa collegian taken, the first center and the 60th player selected overall.

Speculation before the draft had Meester going in the third to fifth rounds.

"They thought maybe late second was a possibility, but it's definitely a nice surprise," Meester said from his home in Parkersburg. "Now it's just a matter of heading out there and doing what I need to do."

Meester is joining a team that reached the AFC championship game last season, falling one game short of the Super Bowl. The Jaguars need a right guard, and Meester said that's where he'll probably start out, although he still could end up playing center.

"It will be a little different, but it's definitely something I'm ready for," Meester said. "It's something I want to try."

Meester has added 20 pounds since the end of the college season and now packs 300 pounds on his 6-foot-4 frame. He impressed scouts with his play in two post-season all-star games and scored the highest of any center on the Wonderlic Personnel Test during the NFL combine in February.

Now he has a chance to continue the parade of linemen from Aplington-Parkersburg High School into the NFL. Chicago Bears center Casey Wiegmann and Detroit Lions defensive tackle Jared DeVries also are from that area. They played collegiately at Iowa.

"It's just having a great coach, Ed Thomas, who does a tremendous job with the athletes," Meester said. "He gets everything possible out of every player. It's just unbelievable what he does. All the credit goes to him for the program and for the players coming out of there."

Meester watched the draft at home with family and friends. As the second round was nearing an end, the phone rang and his mother, Rhonda, looked at the number on the caller ID window.

"Mom said I better answer it," Meester said.

It was the Jaguars, telling Meester they had drafted him. A minute later, as he talked to Jacksonville coach Tom Coughlin, he heard a cheer from the other room. His selection had just flashed across the television screen.

"I knew then that it was official," Meester said.

Meester will leave Wednesday for the Jaguars' mini camp and will return next weekend.

"He gives us some flexibility," Coughlin said. "He's also an intelligent kid. He can relate right away to what we need him to do."

The Jaguars took wide receiver R. Jay Soward of Southern California in the first round.

Meester said the wait during the draft was nerve-wracking at times and it was nice to get the suspense out of the way.

What they say...

"I saw some good things out there certainly. I think we're making strides. We certainly are not ready to play yet, we've got a lot of work to do this summer."
— Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz

"We played a lot of base defenses and still got good penetration. When we start moving, I think we can do more."
— Iowa defensive end Aaron Kampman

"I thought we could've maybe run the ball a little better, I thought we passed the ball well. The offensive line gave me and Kyle a great time to throw."

Raiders solidify special teams with kickers

Oakland picked up Shane Lechler and Sebastian Janikowski in the NFL Draft.

By Dave Goldberg
Associated Press

NEW YORK — The Oakland Raiders might not have much else. But they should have the NFL's best kicking game next season.

And certainly the youngest. After pulling the biggest surprise of the first round by choosing kicker Sebastian Janikowski with the 17th overall pick, the Raiders went for a punter in the fifth round Sunday when they took Shane Lechler of Texas A&M, who averaged nearly 47 yards per kick last season.

"This is something we needed to improve on," coach John Gruden said of his team's kicking game.

So he went out and took two kickers with his first four picks.

Believe it or not, the Raiders aren't the first team to spend relatively high picks on kickers. In 1976, its first year in the NFL, Seattle spent two third-round picks on kickers — punter Rick Engles and place kicker Don Bitterlich.

The other 30 teams spent the second day of this draft improving in more conventional ways.

While most of the sure things went on the first day, a lot of big-time players went on the second day.

Tea Martin, the Tennessee quarterback, went to Pittsburgh late in the fifth round, the 160th player chosen and the fourth quarterback. Two picks later, Minnesota chose Stanford's Troy Walters, who won the Biletnikoff Award as the nation's best wide receiver but who is only 5-foot-6 1/2 and 171 pounds.

Quarterback Joe Hamilton of Georgia Tech, runner-up for the Heisman Trophy, wasn't taken until the seventh and last round, with the 234th overall pick. Hamilton, who is just 5-10, joins Shaun King, the 6-footer who was taken in the second round by the Bucs last year and got them to the NFC title game as a rookie.

The likes of UCLA wide receiver Danny Farmer (to the Steelers); Penn State linebacker Brandon Short (Giants); and Minnesota safety Tyrone Carter (Vikings) went in the fourth round; and Virginia Tech safety Anthony Midget (Falcons); Nebraska cornerback Ralph Brown; Miami guard Richard Mercier (Baltimore); Miami running back Michael Wiley (Dallas, where he will be tried at wide receiver), and Kentucky tight end James Whalen (Tampa Bay) were chosen in the fifth.

Running back Frank Murphy of Kansas State went to Chicago in the sixth round, and Philadelphia used the next pick on Minnesota running back Thomas Hamner. Murphy, who has fumbling problems, also has a record of minor crimes going back seven years, when he was arrested for carjacking.

There was a milestone of sorts in the fourth round when linebacker Isiah Kacyvenski was chosen by Seattle, the highest any player from Harvard had ever been chosen.

One pick of interest came in the sixth round, when Denver chose Utah running back Mike Anderson, a former Marine who will turn 27 in September. But he has history in his favor. Terrell Davis, the league and Super Bowl MVP two years ago was a sixth-round pick in 1995 and Olandis Gary, who replaced Davis last year when he was injured and ran for more than 1,000 yards, was a fourth-rounder a year ago.

Later in the sixth, New England took Michigan quarterback Tom Brady and Washington took Stanford QB Todd Husak late in that round. San Francisco, which took quarterback Giovanni Carmazzi of Hofstra in the third round, took another QB, Louisiana Tech's Tim Rattay in the seventh.

Then Denver took Notre Dame quarterback Jarious Jackson, the first member of the Fighting Irish selected.

The last pick, by Chicago, was Michael Green of Northwestern State. He will be honored at the 25th Irrelevant week in June in Newport Beach, Calif.

PSU lays waste to Iowa pitching

■ The Nittany Lions pounded out 59 hits and scored 41 runs in the sweep of the Hawkeyes.

By Greg Wallace
The Daily Iowan

Iowa first baseman Brad Carlson is hardly the type to strike up a conversation with an opposing hitter parked at first base after a hit.

Chances are, though, after last weekend's four-game sweep at the hand of Penn State, Carlson was a close friend of many a Lion hitter. He didn't have a choice.

Penn State (28-9, 11-4 Big Ten) pounded out 59 hits and scored 41 runs to key a weekend sweep of the Hawkeyes (12-25, 6-10 Big Ten) at Iowa Field, giving Carlson and the rest of his infield mates plenty of chances to make acquaintances with opposing runners.

The Hawkeyes are now riding a six-game losing streak and searching for answers.

"We can't come out and play like we did this weekend. There's no excuses," said second baseman Brian Burks. "We didn't come out and do a good job mentally all weekend. A team like Penn State, a good-hitting team with solid pitching, they're going to come out and hand it to you if you aren't ready to play."

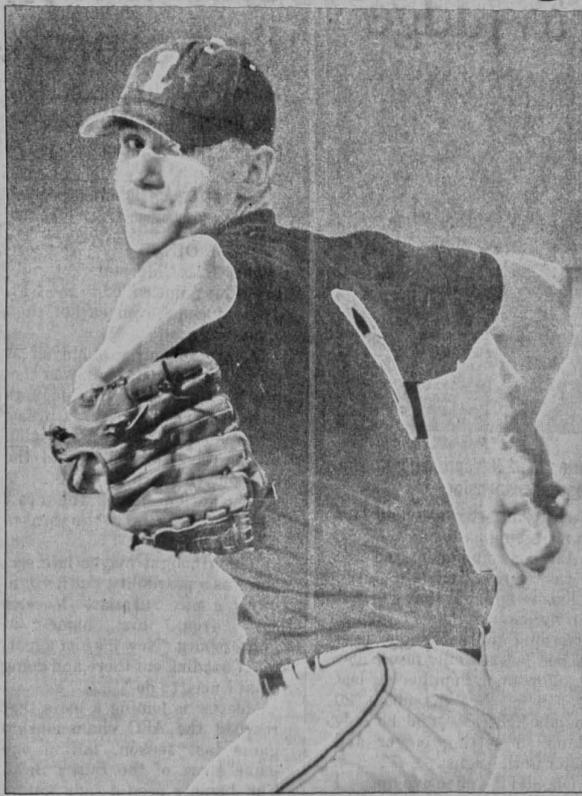

Sunday, the game was over almost before it began. Penn State showed no ill effects of a 30-minute rain delay preceding the game, stringing four straight hits off of Iowa starter Matt Hasz to open up a 3-0 lead.

After three innings, the Lion lead was 8-0, and any Iowa hopes of avoiding a sweep were finished. Hasz was rocked for seven runs, all earned, in 2.1 innings of work. Three Iowa relievers slowed Penn State bats, giving up one run over the final six frames, but the damage was done.

The Lions took over sole possession of first place in the Big Ten. Iowa coach Scott Broghamer isn't going to argue.

"They're the most complete team we've played," Broghamer said. "They have as solid of a hitting lineup as we've seen. You have to take your hat off to them. They played a heck of a weekend."

The Hawkeyes pounded out 20 hits and 11 runs in the series

Brian Moore/The Daily Iowan

Iowa's Chad Blackwell throws against Penn State Saturday. The Hawkeyes were swept by the Nittany Lions over the weekend.

opener on Friday, but Iowa relievers gave up 11 runs over the final five innings of a 15-11 loss.

The Lions must have taken their bats to bed with them Friday night, because they came out ready to swing again Saturday.

In game one of a doubleheader, Penn State tagged starter Nick Jensen for five runs in one inning of work, and things only got worse from there. Mercifully, the Lions' 15-2 win was only seven innings.

In the nightcap, Iowa got its only solid pitching performance of the weekend — and wasted it. Chad Blackwell allowed three runs over seven innings, but lefty Dan McCall pitched a complete game shutout, giving the Nittany Lions the sweep, 3-0. Iowa loaded the bases with one out in the seventh, but Kurt Vitense hit into a game-ending double play.

"Those little things, when you're not scoring a lot of runs, you have to be able to do,"

Broghamer said.

The weekend was a blow to Iowa's confidence, but it wasn't a killer. A rash of upsets at the top of the conference kept the Hawkeyes in a tie for sixth place heading into next weekend's series at Minnesota. The top six teams qualify for the Big Ten tournament, May 17-21.

Broghamer can't put a finger on his team's struggles. He's sending the same nine out that was white-hot only a week ago. He challenged his team to figure it out — before it's too late.

"It's the same group that shut out Purdue last week," Broghamer said. "Something happened in the course of the week, whether it's mental or physical. These guys can win, and they can do a good job. They just have to decide, that this is what it's going to take."

Offense sputters in loss to Purdue

■ The loss to Purdue ended Iowa's 18-game winning streak.

By Melinda Mawdsley
The Daily Iowan

It wasn't so much that Purdue beat Iowa. It was more like Iowa beat itself.

The 1-0 Sunday loss dropped Iowa's record to 31-8 overall, 7-1 in the conference, ending the second longest win streak in school history at 18 games.

The No. 13 Hawkeyes rolled into West Lafayette, Ind., Saturday and shutout Purdue. Sunday was a different story and a different team.

Purdue notched the game's only run in the first inning after an uncharacteristic sloppy Iowa start.

Kristi Hanks walked the lead-off hitter and ended up walking two more, one intentional, to eventually load the bases. With two out, Hanks threw a wild pitch bringing in Andrea Rousch.

After putting up impressive numbers all weekend, Iowa's offense sputtered against Meagan Dooley and her Big Ten leading 0.59 ERA.

"Unfortunately we let that set the tone," Iowa coach Gayle Blevins said on the first inning. "We could have made better adjustments offensively. We've got to come ready to play. We learned an important lesson today (Sunday)."

In Saturday's 4-0 win, Kelly Zeilstra struck out four to raise her career strikeout total to 199 and improve her mark to 17-3.

Kristin Johnson tripled to left field in the first inning to score Erin Doud, giving Iowa the only run it would need, but the Hawkeyes added more in the fourth. Alicia Gerlach continued her hot hitting, driving in her 18th and 19th RBI with a single to left center scoring two. Katy Jendrezewski later grounded to second to plate Gerlach.

The Hawkeyes swept Friday's doubleheader, outscoring Indiana 10-2.

Gerlach paced the Iowa offense in the first game going 3-for-3 with four RBI and a walk. Lisa Rasche and Johnson went 2-for-4 with an RBI.

The Hawkeyes got on the board first off Gerlach's third home run this year. Indiana countered with a home run in the bottom of the second, then Iowa put them away, adding three runs in the fourth and two more runs in the next two innings for the 6-1 win.

In the second contest, Iowa found themselves trailing Indiana early after a first inning Hoosier home run. Iowa then found power of its own in Megan Atkins with a solo shot in the third and Liz Dennis with her own in the fourth.

With the 2-1 lead, the Hawkeyes added two insurance runs in the fifth.

Hanks surrendered only two hits besides the home run and struck out nine Hoosiers en route to the win. Her record this year is 13-5.

Hawkeyes turn in two solid meets

■ Paula Ruen provisionally qualified for the NCAA track championships.

By Robert Yarborough
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's track and field team pulled double duty over the weekend with equal success.

Fifteen members attended the Sea Relays in Tennessee, while 11 members were sent to Western Illinois to compete at the Lee Calhoun Memorial competition. Coach James Grant was in Jamaica on a recruiting visit, so assistant coaches Sara Swails and Kim Bodey accompanied the teams.

"These two meets were good preparation for Drake which is coming up real soon now," Swails said. "We had solid performances this weekend and performed well with some really tough competition at Sea Relays."

In Tennessee, senior Paula Ruen continued her strong sprint with a fifth-place finish in the 100 meters with a time of 13.61. Freshman Sarah Arens performed a season-best in the 1,500 with a time of 4:34 and won her heat en route to a 15th place finish out of 51 competitors.

Ruen's time makes her a provisional qualifier for the NCAA Championships in May.

"The Sea Relays was not a team scoring event, but the team did a 180 (degree turn) compared to the performances last weekend at Eastern Illinois," Swails said. "I was very happy."

At Western Illinois, the Hawkeyes placed fourth out of seven teams with a score of 92 points. Western Illinois was the champion of the meet with 205 team points. Iowa did well to finish in fourth as the only team competing without a full squad.

Junior Jennifer Moon led the way for the Hawkeyes. Moon set a new season-best mark in the discus, throwing 150-8 to claim first place. Moon also took first place honors in the shot put with 43-10.

Freshman Erickas Roberts led Iowa in the distance events placing third in the 1,500 meters with a time of 4:42.35 and fourth in the 800-meter run with a time of 2:19.56.

"The fact that we placed that high with so few athletes indicated how strong we were," Bodey said. "We had mostly freshmen and sophomores at this meet, so this is very encouraging for us."

Hawks drop two of three

■ The Varsity 4+ boat turned in its best performance of the year at Michigan State.

By Molly Thomas
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's rowing team faced a tough match up in East Lansing, Mich., on Saturday.

The Hawkeyes went up against Michigan State, a team that qualified for the NCAA tournament last season. Iowa was defeated in two of the three races at Lake Ovid in Sleepy Hollow State Park. Coach Mandi Kowal said Michigan State has a long reputation as a strong rowing competitor.

Iowa's Varsity 4+ won its race by more than 10 seconds over the Spartans. Kowal said the race marked the Varsity 4+ boats best performance of the season.

"I was really happy for our (Varsity) 4+ boat," Kowal said. "It was the best that they have looked all season. I really hope that they will maintain that momentum going into the Big Tens."

The second-Varsity 8+ was defeated by Michigan State by less than one second in a race that went back and forth until the very end.

According to Kowal, the Spartans pulled out in the first 750 meters and were holding a 4-seat lead, but Iowa snuck up and pulled even with their opponent. Once again, Michigan State pulled away and in the final sprint Iowa began moving in on them but couldn't quite get the final edge.

"The second Varsity 8+ race was a great race to watch," Kowal said. "It was very exciting. I think if we could've gotten one more stroke in at the end we could've defeated them."

"I thought the race would be a lot closer," Kowal said. "In the last few days, I have not really seen the speed that I want out of the Varsity 8+ boat."

Iowa digs deep hole in loss

■ Iowa coach Terry Anderson said his season is like a roller-coaster ride.

By Todd Brommelkamp
The Daily Iowan

If you dig a deep enough hole, no matter how hard you try, you eventually can't climb out. The UI men's golf team discovered that last weekend.

Iowa finished tied with Michigan State for 14th at the Kepler Invitational in Columbus, Ohio on Sunday.

The Hawkeyes, which finished in fourth place at the Marshall Invitational last week, could not overcome a poor first round score to place higher.

"We didn't make up any ground because we were so far out of it after the first round," said coach

Terry Anderson.

Despite ideal golfing conditions, Iowa fired an opening day score of 620 to finish Saturday in 15th place. The Hawkeyes shot a 316 on the first round of 18 to set the course for the remainder of the tournament.

Plagued by several rounds in the 80s, the Hawkeyes could not rebound during the final day of the tournament. Iowa shot a 309 to end the tournament with a score of 929.

Jason Wombacher turned in Iowa's lowest score for the tournament, shooting rounds of 81, 76 and 74 for a 231.

"This is a roller coaster ride," said Anderson, "we have a bad tournament, a good tournament and another bad one. If things stay like this we should be in pretty good shape for Big Ten's."

Thomason said. "We have been struggling with bad weather all season. I just try to encourage the team to stick with it and maintain consistency. Northwestern is an excellent team and it felt great to beat them."

The Hawkeyes were led by freshman Heather Suhr who finished tied for eighth place (76, 75, 79), senior Kelli Carney who finished 10th (74, 78, 79), and junior Meghan Spero who tied for 11th place (73, 76, 83). Spero who has been struggling during the spring season said she felt like everything came together for her in this tournament.

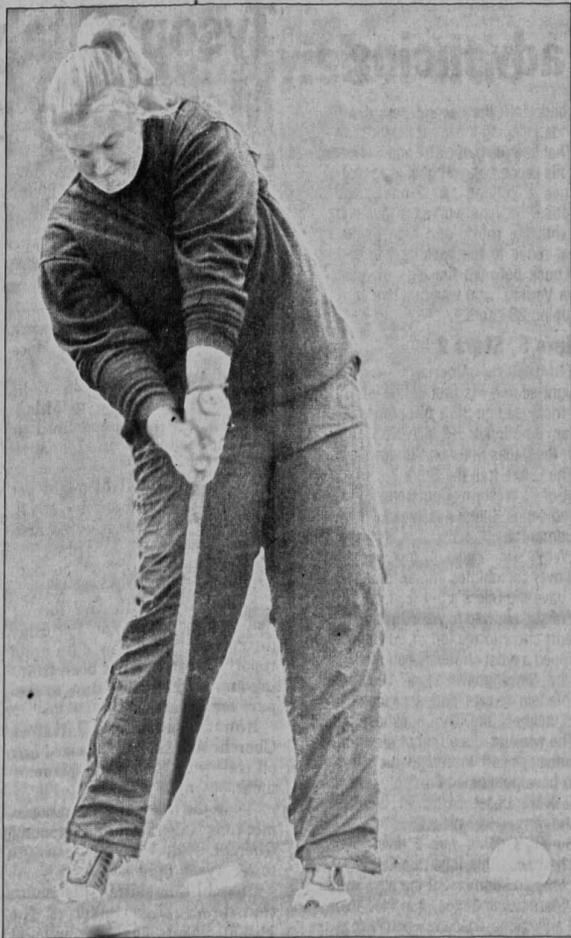

"I just finally started playing better this weekend," Spero said. "I hit some greens and my drives were better. I played pretty decent all the way around."

For Carney and fellow senior M.C. Mullen, the Hawkeye Invitational marked their last tournament at Finkbine Golf Course. Carney said that the victory was a great ending for her and Mullen.

Mullen, who has also been struggling during the spring season, agreed that the tournament was a success.

"I am very happy about the way that I went out today," Mullen said. "It was a lot better than I have been shooting."

The Hawkeyes opened up with a score of 303 after the first 18 holes, which Thomason said was one of the biggest highlights of the tournament. On Sunday, when most teams were shooting higher scores, Mullen and freshman Leslie Gumm came through for the Hawkeyes with scores of 76 and 78 which allowed the Hawkeyes to count four scores under 80.

Thomason said that the tournament is also a good preparation for the Big Ten Conference Championships April 28-29. The Big Tens will be held in Madison, Wis.

"I think this victory will help a lot going into Big Tens," Thomason said. "I think they will understand what it takes now and stick together as a team to do it."

many players favor playing indoors rather than outside.

The two teams split a pair of matches, with Hoch and Dawaf winning 6-2, 6-2, and 6-3, 6-1, respectively. Wiegler was defeated 6-4 in both sets and Johnson fell 7-6, 6-2.

Following the split, the match essentially came down to Neykova and Kearney. Kearney dropped her first set 3-6, but fought back to claim the next two and the match, 6-4, 6-3. Her win also sealed the Iowa victory.

"Megan came up big for us at the end," said Wardlaw. "She was under a lot of pressure but performed well."

With Iowa's victory assured, Neykova won Iowa's final point after dropping her first set 6-7, by taking the next two 6-4, 6-3.

Much of the day was focused on Dawaf and Wiegler, both of whom played their final home matches as Hawkeyes. In front of friends, family and flowers, the two walked off the court together to a standing ovation following the final match.

When the duo arrived at Iowa the Hawkeyes finished 1-9 in the Big Ten. As they leave, the Hawkeyes are poised near the top of the conference.

"It's really sad to leave here," said Wiegler. "It's a great place and it's been a great four years."

Flemister, Yamini, Holman await NFL fates

compete for a job in the Big Easy.

The two former Hawkeyes who were drafted have a long road to go to get playing time this fall.

Bowen is going into a deep Rams secondary, especially at strong safety. Coming into the season, Bowen will have to compete with starter Billy Jenkins, Devin Bush and Ron Carpenter.

Jenkins led the Rams in tackles last season with 93, and Bush was high on the list as well with 44.

Wheatley has to battle incumbent Cameron Cleeland, a 265-pound punishing end, who caught 26 passes for 325 yards and one touchdown. Back-up Scott Slutsker caught just 11 passes in a limited role for the Saints last year.

The pair's role may be redesigned a bit in the pros.

Bowen said he expects to primarily be used as a special teamer at first, while Wheatley could be used in an H-back role.

"As a rookie, you have to find a way to get on the field," Bowen said. "It may be that special teams is the best way to do that and I have to make some plays and learn the defensive schemes in my first year."

Bowen said the waiting for the call to come was quite stressful as the hours ticked away Sunday afternoon. He said around 2 p.m., he started to get nervous because a lot of teams were calling him, but none of them made it official.

"When the call came, I was pretty excited," Bowen said.

Tight end Zeron Flemister did not get picked up in the draft. Some draft experts had Flemister going as high as the fourth round, but the call never came for the 6-foot-4 240 lb. former Hawkeye.

All hope is not lost for Flemister and other Hawkeyes like Bashir Yamini and Tarig Holman. They still have a chance to sign on as a free-agent with any NFL team that will take them.

Picking up free agents is a common practice ever since the draft has been limited to seven rounds instead of 12.

Buffalo loses again, Philly one win from advancing

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Here's two things Buffalo can no longer dispute: the Philadelphia Flyers are for real, and the Sabres are in deep trouble after Sunday's 2-0 loss.

John LeClair, the center of Friday's controversial phantom goal, scored the game-winner and rookie goalie Brian Boucher stopped 17 shots as the Flyers grabbed a 3-0 series lead. Mark Recchi sealed the win scoring into an empty net with 37.9 seconds left.

Only two teams — the 1975 New York Islanders and the 1942 Toronto Maple Leafs — have rallied from a 3-0 deficit in NHL playoff history. Game 4 will be played at Buffalo on Tuesday.

The Sabres, who've managed just three goals in the series, had trouble generating any offense, outshot 27-17.

Buffalo's best opportunity came with eight minutes left in the second period when Curtis Brown pounced on a turnover in front. His first shot was stopped by Boucher and Brown fanned on a second opportunity.

Otherwise Boucher — registering his first playoff shutout and fifth of his career — and the Flyers' stifling defense did the rest.

There was nothing to match the controversy of the Flyers' 2-1 win on Friday when video replays showed LeClair's game-tying goal entered the net through a hole in the net. The goal was allowed to stand because video replay officials didn't see the decisive replay before play resumed.

Devils 2, Panthers 1

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Scott Niedermayer returned from a 10-game suspension and tied the game and Scott Stevens got the game winner as the New Jersey Devils beat the Florida Panthers 2-1 Sunday night to take a two-game lead in their playoff series.

Rookie John Madden set up both odd-man rush goals and Martin Brodeur stopped 22 shots as the Devils took a commanding 2-0 advantage in the best-of-7 first-round

Eastern Conference series by winning the first two at home.

Mike Sillinger scored for Florida, which will play host for the next two games, on Tuesday and Thursday.

The game was the first for Niedermayer since an ugly incident on March 19, when he whacked Florida's Peter Worrell over the head with his stick after being elbowed.

There were some chants of "Scotty, Scotty" when he stepped on the ice the first time.

The Panthers tried to hit Niedermayer every chance they had, but no one was around him when he whacked home a Madden rebound 56 seconds into the second period with Florida enjoying a 5-on-3 power play.

That tied the game at 1 and Stevens got his second playoff goal in as many games, capping a 2-on-1 with Madden. Stevens worked a give-and-go with the rookie and then made a great move to his backhand to slide the puck between the legs of goalie Mike Vernon, who was outstanding in stopping 28 shots.

Oilers 5, Stars 2

EDMONTON, Alberta — Doug Weight scored his first career playoff hat trick, leading the Edmonton Oilers to an emotional 5-2 playoff victory over the Dallas Stars on Sunday night.

The Oilers trail the Stars 2-1 in the best-of-7 Western Conference first-round series. Game 4 is Tuesday night at Edmonton.

Weight's third goal, on a power play just over six minutes into second period, gave the Oilers a 5-1 lead.

Weight, allowed to walk through the faceoff circle to the left of Ed Belfour, snapped a wrist shot between the legs of the Stars goalie as 17,100 fans erupted in cheers and a cascade of hats, helmets and foam puckheads.

The win ended a string of nine consecutive playoff losses to the Stars, who have dominated Edmonton since the Oilers upset Dallas in the first round of the 1997 playoffs.

Sunday's game was a reversal of the first two. This time, the Oilers set the tone and dominated the play, with the Stars running around in their own end and taking retaliatory penalties.

Edmonton outshot Dallas 38-28. The Oilers had 22 shots in the first period, setting a club playoff record for shots in a period (previous record 21).

Tyson's Italy fight in May to be postponed

■ Reports say that Mike Tyson has not been training for his fight.

By Tim Dahlberg
Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — Mike Tyson's European tour is on hold once again.

His planned May 20 fight against Lou Savarese in Milan, Italy, will be postponed until at least June, said Tyson's manager, Shelly Finkel.

Finkel said the fight might not be held in the Italian city at all, depending on when it is rescheduled.

"They may not have the date available," Finkel said Sunday.

Finkel met with the former heavyweight champion Saturday to try and find a new date amid reports Tyson had not been training and wanted more time to prepare for Savarese.

Italian promoter Salvatore Cherchi said he hadn't heard any official word about a postponement.

"It would be a big disappointment for Italy if it didn't happen," Cherchi said. "Everybody wants to see Tyson fight here."

Cherchi said earlier this month that fewer than 3,000 of the 11,000 tickets for the fight at Milan's Filaforum arena remained after only a few days on sale. Tickets ranged from $1,639 at ringside to $55 for an upper section seat.

The bout was originally planned for April 8, but pushed back to May 20 to give Tyson more time to train.

Executives at the Showtime network, which will televise the fight, said earlier that a June 3 date would also be available. Cherchi said he had also heard the June 3 date.

"The maximum would be a postponement to June 3, but I'm still thinking it will be May 20," Cherchi said.

Finkel said a decision would be made this week on a new date for the fight.

"We have a lot of things we have to work out," Finkel said.

Tyson was on hand Saturday night to watch another of Finkel's fighters, Fernando Vargas, beat Ike Quartey to retain his IBF junior middleweight title at the Mandalay Bay hotel-casino.

He gave Vargas some advice in the dressing room before the bout.

"He told me, good luck, go kill this guy," Vargas said.

Tyson, who will turn 34 on June 30, last fought Jan. 29 when he knocked out Julian Francis in the second round at Manchester, England. The fight in England was the first stop on a European tour that was to include three or four fights before Tyson fought Lennox Lewis or Evander Holyfield.

The 34-year-old Savarese (39-3) is on the downside of his career, but he figured to be a tougher opponent for Tyson than was Francis.

Heat collect Atlantic Division title

MIAMI (AP) — The Miami Heat clinched their fourth consecutive Atlantic Division title Sunday, overcoming a power outage, 21 turnovers and Tim Hardaway's latest injury to beat the Orlando Magic 95-84.

Anthony Carter scored 15 points to lead a strong effort by the bench and help the Heat snap a three-game losing streak, their longest since December. But the victory was overshadowed by the sight of Hardaway being carried to the locker room late in the first period.

Hardaway, who had missed the past two games because of inflammation in his left foot, returned to the lineup but played only eight minutes. He pulled up in obvious pain late in the first quarter and didn't play again, although the Heat said the injury was only a slight sprain in his left foot.

The game started 2 hours, 6 minutes late because of a power outage that affected AmericanAirlines Arena and the surrounding area downtown. The arena was only half-full when the game finally began at 2:46 p.m. EDT.

Hornets 105, Celtics 102

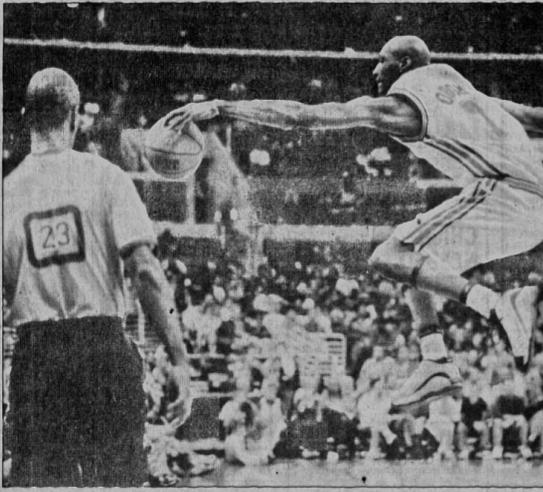

BOSTON — The streaking Charlotte Hornets moved within a game of gaining homecourt advantage in the playoffs as they held off a late Boston Celtics charge for a 105-102 win Sunday.

With Eddie Jones scoring 25 points, the Hornets (47-33) moved closer to Philadelphia (48-32) for the fourth playoff spot in the Eastern Conference. Each has two games left.

Charlotte, 12-2 in its last 14 games, started slowly, missing its first six shots and trailing 10-0. But it led 56-46 at halftime and 83-73 after three quarters.

Blazers 102, Kings 95

PORTLAND, Ore. — Rasheed Wallace picked up yet another technical foul before teaming with Bonzi Wells to power a dominant fourth-quarter run as the Portland Trail Blazers defeated the Sacramento Kings for the 11th straight time, 102-95 Sunday.

Wallace scored 18 points and Scottie Pippen added 15 points and nine assists for the Blazers, who held the Kings to two field goals — a dunk by Scot Pollard and a 20-foot jumper by Jason Williams — in the first 10:39 of the fourth.

Lakers 101, T'wolves 95

LOS ANGELES — Kobe Bryant was the wrong player for the Minnesota Timberwolves to foul.

Bryant made 11 free throws without a miss Sunday, including four in the final 43.6 seconds, as the Los Angeles Lakers nipped the Timberwolves 101-95.

Bryant, who had 25 points and 10 assists, snapped a 95-all tie by making a pair of foul shots after rookie Wally Szczerbiak was called for a blocking foul with seven seconds remaining.

Raptors 85, Bulls 84

TORONTO — Dee Brown hit a 3-pointer with 11.5 seconds left as the Toronto Raptors came back from a 15-point deficit in the fourth quarter to defeat the Chicago Bulls 85-84 Sunday.

The Raptors, who have already qualified for the playoffs for the first time in the franchise's five-year history, ended with a 26-15 home record. Their previous high for wins was 18 in 1996-97.

Down 84-82 with 21.2 seconds left, Vince Carter picked off an inbound pass from Fred Hoiberg. Carter missed a jumper, but Tracy McGrady got the rebound and kicked it out to Brown, who hit nothing but net.

Hawks 104, Cavaliers 101

ATLANTA — Alan Henderson scored 19 points, including eight in a row when the Hawks went ahead to stay in the third quarter, as Atlanta snapped a nine-game losing streak with a 104-101 victory over the Cleveland Cavaliers on Sunday night.

The Hawks almost blew a 10-point lead in the final two minutes. Cleveland had a chance to tie it with 8.4 seconds remaining, but Bob Sura missed the first of two free throws, then made the second to cut the lead to 102-101.

Cink pulls off surprise victory at MCI Classic

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Stewart Cink, four shots behind when the round began, shot a 6-under 65 on Sunday to win the MCI Classic as Ernie Els and Davis Love III faltered.

Cink, playing Harbour Town for the first time, was still down four shots after Els' tap-in birdie on the sixth hole, but the South African had five bogeys the rest of the way to scuttle a tournament he appeared to have wrapped up.

"Yeah, I played terrible," said Els, who closed with a 74 to finish five shots behind Cink. "I don't know what to say." Cink had birdies on three of the final four holes to overtake Tom Lehman, whose also shot a 65 to jump from 12th to second.

Cink earned $540,000 for the victory. Masters winner Vijay Singh shot a 64 to tie for third with Els, Love, Larry Mize, Edward Fryatt and first-round leader Dan Forsman.

Quigley one back in rain-shortened major

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. — Dana Quigley made 10 birdies and a quadruple bogey Sunday in the second round of the PGA Seniors' Championship to move within one stroke of Doug Tewell.

Quigley was 9 under through one hole in the third round before play was suspended for the seventh time in four days. Tom Kite and Larry Nelson are 7 under, and Gibby Gilbert 6 under.

More than 9 inches of rain has drenched the Champion Course at the PGA National Resort & Spa.

PGA of America officials reduced the championship to 54 holes following Sunday's delay, marking the first time the event has been shortened since its expansion to 72 holes in 1958.

Two homers in last at-bat propel Indians

CLEVELAND — Jim Thome's one-out homer into the Indians' bullpen followed Manny Ramirez's shot in the ninth inning as Cleveland rallied Sunday to beat the Texas Rangers 2-1.

The two drives — the 201st career homers for both players — came off John Wetteland (0-1) and helped Chuck Finley win his home debut for the Indians, who were held to two hits through eight innings.

Despite striking out 13 and pitching a five-hitter, Finley (1-0) looked like he was going to be a hard-luck loser when he walked off the mound to a standing ovation in the ninth.

But Ramirez and Thome took care of things, giving Finley his first win with Cleveland and giving Indians rookie manager Charlie Manuel his first home win.

Ramirez, who had struck out in his first three at-bats, drove a 3-2 pitch from Wetteland over the wall in deep center for his third homer.

Red Sox 5, Athletics 4

BOSTON — Carl Everett hit a lead-off home run in the bottom of the ninth inning Sunday, lifting the Boston Red Sox over the Oakland Athletics 5-4.

Everett, acquired in an offseason trade with Houston, hit his team-leading fifth homer. He sent a 3-1 pitch from T.J. Mathews (0-1) into the center-field bleachers.

Yankees 8, Royals 4

NEW YORK — Jim Leyritz's first hit of the season, a tiebreaking solo homer in the seventh inning, gave the New York Yankees an 8-4 win over the Kansas City Royals on Sunday.

Ricky Ledee had two doubles and three RBIs for the Yankees, who were 5-0 on the homestand and swept the three-game series.

Orioles 5, Twins 0

MINNEAPOLIS — While Cal Ripken took a much-deserved rest Sunday, his teammates kept the hit parade going and Sidney Ponson took care of the rest.

A day after Ripken got his 3,000th hit, Brady Anderson and Jeff Conine homered in a five-run first inning as the Baltimore Orioles beat the Minnesota Twins 5-0.

Devil Rays 7, Tigers 6

DETROIT — Mike DiFelice hit a go-ahead single in a three-run ninth inning as the Tampa Bay Devil Rays rallied

Marlin Levison/Associated Press

Baltimore's Cal Ripken drives the 3000th hit of his career Saturday against the Minnesota. Ripken singled three times Saturday in Baltimore's 6-4 victory over the Twins.

from a five-run deficit Sunday to beat the Detroit Tigers 7-6.

Mariners 19, Blue Jays 7

TORONTO — Alex Rodriguez hit three homers and drove in seven runs — both career highs — and the Seattle Mariners routed the Toronto Blue Jays 19-7 Sunday for a convincing three-game sweep.

Rodriguez scored five times, going 4-for-5. He hit a solo homer in the first inning and a two-run shot in the fourth.

Angels 3, White Sox 1

CHICAGO — Scott Schoeneweis showed again why he's in the Anaheim rotation.

The left-hander won his third straight start Sunday, allowing three hits in eight innings to lead the Angels over the Chicago White Sox 3-1.

Braves 2, Brewers 1

MILWAUKEE — Terry Mulholland threw eight strong innings and got his first victory of the season as the Atlanta Braves beat the Milwaukee Brewers 2-1 Sunday.

In their final game before John Rocker returns from his two-week suspension, the Braves scored two unearned runs and got an unusually solid performance from both Mulholland and their bullpen on another cold and drizzly day at County Stadium.

Mets 12, Pirates 9

PITTSBURGH — Robin Ventura homered and drove in six runs and the New York Mets withstood first-inning injuries to pitcher Bobby J. Jones and Rickey Henderson to hold off the Pittsburgh Pirates 12-9 Sunday.

Two days after getting 20 hits in an 8-5, 12-inning victory over the Pirates, the Mets had 15 hits — nine for extra bases — while scoring in all but three innings.

Marlins 6, Cubs 5

CHICAGO — Cliff Floyd hit a home run that barely curved around the right-field foul pole in the 10th inning Sunday, giving the Florida Marlins a 6-5 win over the Chicago Cubs.

The Marlins trailed 5-0 early before coming back. With one out in the 10th, Floyd hit a 2-1 pitch from Ruben Quevedo (0-1) for a home run that brought an argument from the Cubs.

Cardinals 9, Rockies 3

DENVER — J.D. Drew had a three-run double and Pat Hentgen kept his record with St. Louis perfect as the Cardinals beat the Colorado Rockies 9-3 Sunday in the opener of a day-night doubleheader.

Placido Polanco and Thomas Howard added solo homers for the Cardinals, whose power has not dropped off in the absence of ailing Mark McGwire. St. Louis has homered in eight straight games — four without McGwire.

Hentgen (3-0), acquired in an off-season trade with Toronto, gave up three runs and seven hits in 5 2-3 innings.

Hit No. 3,000 lifts a weight off Cal Ripken's shoulders

■ Baltimore's legend celebrated the landmark event with his family.

By Arnie Stapleton
Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — Cal Ripken wanted to reach 3,000 hits at home. At least he got it in front of family and friends.

"I don't know the secrets of life," Ripken said. "But it sure means a lot more when you have a family to share it with."

Ripken's teammates were long gone by the time the Baltimore Orioles star finished countless autographs and answering numerous postgame questions at the Metrodome Saturday night.

The two cases of iced champagne sat untouched in the empty clubhouse.

Ripken celebrated instead with his wife, Kelly, and their two children, Rachel, 10, and Ryan, 6, who traveled to Minnesota for the weekend series.

"It was a nice, private moment with my small family," Ripken said Sunday. "We went out to eat. One of my kids fell asleep at the restaurant. I guess they were drained, too."

Ripken was still weary on Sunday, so manager Mike Hargrove gave him the day off.

"I felt exhausted this morning, mentally," Ripken said after signing autographs for more than an hour. "I felt good, I felt relieved, all those things."

"I haven't really reflected on the 3,000 hits. I never played the game for the big, round numbers. They've seemed to accumulate by showing up every day."

Ripken, already renowned for playing a record 2,632 straight games, singled three times in Baltimore's 6-4 victory over the Twins on Saturday night. His historic hit came in the seventh, when he lined a high fastball up the middle off reliever Hector Carrasco.

"I was hoping it would just be a clean hit," Ripken said. "No matter where it was."

When Ripken rounded the bag, the weight of the chase off his shoulders at long last, the first one to greet him was Orioles first-base coach and former teammate Eddie Murray, who got his 3,000th hit at the same stadium in 1995 while playing for Cleveland.

"To meet Eddie at first base, that was a special moment," Ripken said. "He said, 'Way to go. Welcome to the club.'"

The 39-year-old Ripken is the 24th member.

Ripken said his father, Cal Sr., who died last year, and Murray were the most influential men in his career, which has included 17 All-Star games, two MVP awards and a World Series title.

"My dad told me the words," Ripken said. "Eddie showed me the way."

Another member of the 3,000-hit club, Twins coach Paul Molitor, congratulated him after a postgame news conference where Ripken's son playfully tussled his father's graying crew cut.

Molitor said he was secretly rooting for Ripken.

"Certain players, because of the way they handle themselves, seem to transcend whatever uniform they happen to be wearing," Molitor said.

Twins manager Tom Kelly thought so, too.

"I didn't like seeing it against us, especially in a crucial part of the game," Kelly said. "But you've got to admire his career. It's an honor to be able to say that I witnessed the hit."

Ripken started the season in a 6-for-35 slump, stoked by a bad back and butterflies, and it was beginning to look as though he wouldn't reach the milestone until the Orioles returned to Camden Yards on Monday for a three-game series against Tampa Bay.

He entered the series four hits shy of the mark, so he flew his wife and two children to Minneapolis just in case.

"So, I guess the trip was worth it, huh?" his wife said as she hugged him Saturday night.

Ripken, who grew up near Baltimore, said that while he was disappointed he didn't get to reach the milestone back home, he was glad that his kids got to see it.

"It's great. Just the mere fact that you share something with them goes a long way," he said. "Hopefully, they'll grow up and love something as much."

Ripken's son rooted wildly after his father's every hit Saturday night before hanging around his father's neck at the postgame news conference and playfully sticking rabbit ears behind his head, oblivious to the cameras.

Roba goes for four in a row

■ The Ethiopian runner is trying to win her fourth-straight Boston Marathon.

BOSTON (AP) — On the huge stadium scoreboard in the Ethiopian capital of Addis Ababa, five of the country's great runners are depicted in an Olympic layout of five rings.

All are Olympic champions, all distance runners: Abebe Bikila, Miruts Yifter, Haile Gebrselassie, Derartu Tulu and Fatuma Roba.

Roba earned her place by winning the women's Olympic marathon in 1996, when she was a little-known runner. She has since become not only one of Ethiopia's best but one of the world's best.

On Monday, she will try to win the Boston Marathon for a fourth consecutive time. No man or woman in the race's 104-year history has done that.

"I think she's going to win four," said Bill Rodgers, a four-time Boston champion, who won in 1975 and 1978-80. "She has the best chance of anyone in the history of the race who has won the race three times in a row."

"Her timing is right. She's young (26). She's focused. She doesn't travel around the world running a lot of races. She doesn't chase money, she chases honor."

"She's the female Bikila."

Bikila won the Olympic marathon in 1960, running barefoot, and won again in 1964. Roba will try and match that double in September at Sydney, hoping to bookend gold medals around four Boston victories.

"I'm aware that no one has won four straight Boston Marathons," Roba said through a translator. "That's why I'm trying to make history."

"I don't see any strange faces (among her competitors). I know them all. I have been training to win a fourth straight. I hope my intense training will help me do well."
